fear of God, not a seruile feare, which will make every slave watchfull ouer his wayes, for feare of the whip; but a filiall and child-like feare, which will cause vs to keepe ouer our selues, in all things, a diligent watch, that we may doe nothing displeasing in his sight, who so loueth vs, and whom we so loue; and contrariwise, that wee may so carry our selues in the performing of all good duties, as that God may be well pleased in vs, and we in him; he delighting to doe vs good, and wee delighting to praise his goodnesse. Of which filiall feare the Psalmist speaketh; There is mercy with thee that thou maist be feared. And this is the feare which the Lord promisseth in the covenant of grace, that he will put it into the hearts of his children and seruants, that they may not depart from him. This is it which (as the Wise man telleth vs) causeth men to depart from euill; as wee see in the example of Iob, who is said to be a man, fearing God, and eschewing euill. And therefore Dauid desiring to restraine men from sinne, putteth (as it were) into their mouthes the bridle of Gods feare; Stand in awe (saith he) and sinne not. And contrariwise, if this feare be not in vs, and our hearts be taken vp with carnall security, wee presently neglect to keepe any watch, (like a City which feareth not the approach of any enemies) and rush, without care, into all wickednesse. And this the old Serpent knew well, who having no hope to preuaile against our first Parents, so long as being afraid of Gods threatening, they kept their watch; hee perswaded them first to cast out this feare by vnbelieve, whereby becoming secure, they were easily drawne into transgression. This made Abraham thinke that the Egyptians were ready for all wickednesse, because the feare of God was not in the Land. And the Psalmist telleth vs, that the transgression of the wicked perswaded him to conclude, that there was no feare of God before their eyes. And finally, the Apostle hauing repeated a whole bead-roll of many finnes, which had defiled every seuerall part of wicked men; maketh the same conclusion with the Psalmist, that because they were destitute of Gods feare, this was the cause which made way for all the rest.

The third meanes is, often to call vnto our remembrance Gods fearfull Iudgements executed vpon all sinners, but especially vpon such as haue continued in their wickednesse with carelesse security, and wholly neglected to keepe this watch; as of the old world, who liued in all rechelesse security, eating and drinking, buying and selling, marrying, and giuing in marriage, so doing these things, as that they neglected all things else which were necessary for their safety and saluation, vntill Noah entering into the Arke, they were all swept away with an vniuersall deluge. Thus also Sodom and Gomorrhah liuing in their finnes with all security, were reached with Gods fearfull Iudgements when they least thought of them, and were wholly destroyed with fire and brimstone. Thus Babylon exceeding in security, as much as in all other finnes, had those punishments which she least feared, inflicted vpon her. Thus the Lord threatened the Church of Sardis, that if they would not watch, he would come as a thief against them; that is, bring vpon them suddenly unexpected iudgements, with which, when they neglected this warning, they were afterwards fearfully surprized. But of this point I haue spoken at large in another Treatise; onely let it suffice here to shew, that as neglect of Gods Iudgements ments maketh vs secure and carelesse; so the often calling of them to mind, is a notable meanes to make vs watchfull, that wee may not haue the like, or greater inflicted vpon vs. The which is the principall vse that our Sauour intended in propounding the former examples of the old world, and of Sodom and Gomorrah, fearefully punished, because they securely went on in their sinnes, that wee might not be ouertaken with the like, but that continually watching and praying, wee might bee thought worthy to escape them, when God commeth in his visitation to take notice of our wayes. And thus also the Apostle hauing called to remembrance Gods heauie Iudgements inflicted vpon the Israelites, saith, that all these things were written for our learning, vpon whom the ends of the world are come, that by flying their sinnes, wee might escape their punishments, and thereupon inferreth this vse, that wee should not presume on our owne strength, but that he who thinketh hee standeth, should take heed of falling.

The fourth meanes is, that wee continually remember the day of our death, not as though it were farre off, but neere approaching, and euen knocking at our doores. For our liues are short and momentany, and this short time so vncertaine, that we haue no assurance that we shall liue another day, no not so much as the next minute. When wee goe abroad, wee know not whether we shall returne home; nor when we are at home, whether wee shall liue to goe abroad; when wee goe to bed, wee cannot tell whether we shall euer rise; and when we rise, whether we shall againe goe to bed. For many haue been thus suddenly taken away, going well out of doores, and neuer returning; lying downe securely to take their rest, haue been found dead the next morning. Now seeing that which befallerth one, may happen to any, and that which hath been the case of many, may probably betide any one; let it be our wisdome to stand continually vpon our watch, that we may be found in readinesse, seeing it is a matter that concernes vs no lesse, then the euermourning saluation or damnation of our soules. And seeing we are not sure of liuing another day, let vs thinke that euery day may be the last, and so take occasion to watch carefully ouer our wayes, that we may, when God pleaseth to call, be prepared to goe vnto him with cheerfulness and ioy: and when wee are inticed to commit any sinne; as to loue the world immoderately, to increase our riches by fraud and deceit, or violence and oppression, to sweare, lye, and profane the Lords Day, to drinke drunken, commit filthinesse, or any other sinne; let vs say vnto our owne soules, Would I commit this or that sinne, if I were sure that this day were my last? Farre would it be from me, if I were thus perswaded. And therefore let mee bee now as farre from giuing way willingly vnto any of these, or the like sinnes, seeing, for ought I know, it may be the last minute. And thus when wee finde our selues slacke and backward vnto any duties of Gods seruice, let vs examine our owne hearts, whether we would not shake off all sluggishnesse, and goe about them with all care and diligence, if we were perswaded that wee should not liue another day; and then if wee be wise, we will bee as circumspect and carefull that wee neglect no good duty which may bring comfort to our hearts, peace to our consciences, and assurance of saluation

Mat. 24. 37, 42.
Luk. 21. 34,
35, 36.

1. Cor. 10. 5.
10 12.

§. Sect. 3.
Of the fourth meanes, which is, to remember the day of death.

§. Sect. 4.

The last means is, to meditate often on the day of Iudge-ment.

2. Cor. 5. 10.

Mar. 13. 32, 33.

1. Pet. 4. 7.

Mat. 24. 45, 46.

Psal. 121. 2.

Pf. 127. 1, 2, 3, 4.

Psal. 141. 3.

to our soules; seeing many as lusty as we, being well in the morning, haue beene dead before night.

The last meanes, which I will heere touch, is, that we often meditate vpon that great and terrible Day of the Lord, which hee shall come with thousands of his holy Saints and Angels to iudge both the quicke and the dead; when as we must all appeare before the Iudgement seate of Christ, that euery man may receiue the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad. Of which Day, because we are vncertaine when it will be, we should alwayes keepe our spirituall watch, that we may, when soeuer Christ commeth, be found ready. And this vse our Saviour himselfe maketh of his assured and yet vncertaine comming: Of that day and houre (saith he) knoweth no man, no not the Angels which are in heauen, neither the sonne, but the Father onely: Take yee heed therefore; watch and pray, for yee know not when the time is; lest comming suddenly, he finde you sleeping. So likewise the Apostle Peter; The end of all things is at hand, be yee therefore sober, and watch vnto prayer. And surely, if wee would but seriously consider with what rauishing ioy at that Day the hearts of all those shall be possessed, who, like wise and faithfull seruants, shall be found watching and waiting for the comming of their Lord, when as hee who hath pronounced them blessed already, shall then enter them into the full fruition of blessednesse, and make them ioynt-owners of all that hee hath, the vn-speakable ioyes, inestimable riches, and triumphant glory of his Kingdome; and on the other side, with what shame and confusion of face, vexation of spirit, and horreur of conscience, they shall bee plagued and tormented, who with the euill seruant haue securely gone on in their sinnes, and haue vtterly neglected the spirituall watch, hoping that the Masters comming was farre off; wee would be moued heereby to shake off all carnall security, and thinke no care and diligence too great in keeping this watch, that wee may not bee taken vnprovided and vnprepared at the comming of our Lord. And these are the meanes, which if we carefully vse, will much helpe vs in keeping this watch. But let vs take heed that wee doe not rest wholly or chiefly vpon our owne watchfulnesse; seeing when we haue done all we can, wee shall with the wise Virgins bee overtaken sometimes with drowzinesse, and intermit our watch; but seeing if the Lord, the great Watchman of Israel, who never slumbreth nor sleepeth, doe not watch ouer the house of our earthly Tabernacle and City of our soules, all our watching is but in vaine, let vs often and instantly pray vnto him, that hee will continually watch ouer vs, and inable vs with his grace and holy Spirit, to watch ouer our selues and waite vpon him; knowing assuredly, that if hee giue ouer his watch, and leaue vs to our owne, we shall soone be overtaken of carnall security, and fall into the dangerous Lethargy of sinne and death.

CAP. XIII

of Meditation, which is the second priuate meanes of a godly life, what it is, and the causes thereof, with the reasons which may mooue vs to this holy exercise.

THe second priuate meanes whereby we are inabled vnto the duties of a godly life, is Meditation. For howsoever reading of the Word, and of other holy writings, doth goe before it in order of nature, because it inlighteneth the minde, and teacheth vs how to meditate, and also prepareth and minstreth vnto vs matter of Meditation, the which must be first knowne, before we can thinke and meditate vpon it, or make vse of it, by working it vpon our hearts, wills, and affections: yet seeing it is an action done by our selues alone, and the other is a duty, which may and ought to be performed both by our selues, and others with vs; I will reserue the handling heereof, till I come to intreate of the rest, which are in this respect of like nature. Concerning Meditation, it is so much beaten vpon, and thorowly handled already, both by more ancient Writers, and also moderne, who of later times haue spent much study and paines about it, and whose workes are extant, both in our owne and other languages, that it might well haue sau'd me a labour, this Treatise now beginning to swell aboue the bounds and bankes, which in my first intentions I had prefixed vnto it. Yea so exactly, sweetly, and fauourly is it handled, in a compleate Treatise purposely written of this Argument, by One, who in his kind leaueth all others farre behind him, being such a skilfull Physician for the soule, that he is able by his Art to ioyne pleasure with profit, eloquence with holinesse, wit with spirituall wisdom, and to make wholesome Physicke, and euen purging Medicines as pleasing to his Patients taste as banketting dishes; that I should haue beene ashamed, and euen quite discouraged to haue written (as it were an Iliads after Homers) any thing of this Argument, did not the necessity of perfecting this Treatise impose it vpon me, in which, being an essentiall member, it could not haue beene wanting without a maim. In which regard, rather then I would leaue the Reader in his studious course to a new disquisition, I haue made bold with this learned Authour, to borrow some materials for my building, of him who is so rich to lend, and to enrich my Cabinet with some of his Jewels, (though set out after an homely manner in mine owne foyles) seeing these spirituall treasures are of such a nature, that community hindreth not propriety, and he that lendeth, hath neuer the lesse.

But that we may proceed to our purpose; Meditation in a generall signification, is nothing else, but to thinke and consider of any thing often and seriously. And as we heere more strictly take it, restraining it to a speciall subiect, Meditation is a religious exercise of a Christian, wherein he purposely applyeth his minde to discourse diuersly vpon some diuine subiect, spirituall or heavenly, that heereby hee may glorifie God, and further his owne saluation, by improouing the light of his vnderstanding, increasing the sanctity of his heart and affections, and the better inabling him vnto

6. Sect. 1.
The reason why it is heere handled.

Mr. Rogers
Practice of Christianity herein excellently enlarged in the abridging.
Art of Meditation by D. Hall.

6. Sect. 2.
What Meditation is, & how it differeth from other exercises of the mind.
Meditari nil aliud est, quam multities rem aliquam considerare. Tb. Aquin.

all duties of a godly life. The which description, in some sort both sheweth the nature of Meditation, and also distinguisheth it from other acts and exercises of the mind which may seeme somewhat like vnto it. For it differeth from cogitation, which is but a simple act of the minde, thinking of its obiekt slightly and ouerly, and so leauing it; whereas Meditation is more aduised and serious, and reflecteth its light vpon the heart, will and affection, to direct them in their choyce, both in chusing and imbracing that which is good, and the refusing and abhorring of that which is euill. It differeth also from consideration, which is exercised in deliberating about some thing doubtfull, true or false, good or euill, that discerning it aright, we may know whether to take or leaue it: but Meditation is conuersant about things in some measure knowne in the vnderstanding, that by this further discourse of reason, they may not onely bee better knowne, but also that this knowledge may reflect vpon the will and affections, and be made more effectuell for our vse in the well ording of our liues. It differeth also from Prayer, in that howsoever both are the speech of the minde; yet in that, we speake to our owne soules, but in this, we speake directly to God himselfe. Notwithstanding, there is such affinity betweene them, that in the Scriptures they are both signified by the same word, and often taken the one for the other. For they haue both for the most part one subiect-matter, and both alike effectuell for the obtaining of all things needfull; seeing whether we confesse our sinnes vnto God, or acknowledge our wants, or craue supply in a Meditation directed to our owne soules, or in a prayer to him, he alike heareth both, and is alikeready to satisfie our desires in what forme soeuer they are presented vnto him. Neither doe wee confesse our sinnes, or lay open our wants for his better information, to whom they are knowne already, but that wee our selues may take notice of them, and comming to a more thorow sense and feeling of them, may haue our hearts inflamed with feruent desires to haue our sinnes pardoned, and our wants supplied, which are no other then prayers in his estimate, in what forme soeuer they are expressed. Finally, howsoever in nature there is small difference betweene Meditation and Contemplation, yet as the Schooles define it, there is some in degree; Meditation being an exercise of a lower and meaner nature, within the reach of all Christians which will put out their hand vnto it; Contemplation more high and heauenly, fit only for such as by long exercise haue attained to much perfection: That, exercised about any spirituall obiekt, not onely originally in the vnderstanding, but also imaginary, and brought vnto it by the Ministry of the senses, as the creation of the world, the death and passion of Christ, and such like; but this about things chiefly intellectuall, sublime, and heauenly; as the nature and attributes of God, the Trinity of persons in Vnity of essence, the ioyes of heauen, and others of like nature. Finally, it is an exercise, which of the most is performed with much difficulty, because of their weakenesses and want of vse, being hindred in their spirituall flight, by hauing the waight of earthly cares and distractions (as it were) hanging at their heeles, and the wings of their soules somewhat besmeared with the lime of worldly vanities; but this, of great Proficients, who by much practice haue brought their Art into into an habit, and are able with ease, yea with much pleasure and delight, to soare (with the Eagle) an high pitch in their heavenly thoughts, and to spend heerein great part of their time, not stooping towards the earth, but when they are forced by naturall necessity; which being satisfied, and their bodies and mindes somewhat refreshed, they doe, as weary of the earth, raise vp their soules, and renew their wonted flight.

The efficient cause, or person who is to performe this exercise, is the Christian onely, and the man regenerate; for holy things must not be touched with prophane hands, seeing they doe not sanctifie them, but are polluted with their vncleanenesse. Neither can they that are dead in sinne, doe the actions of the liuing, and are so farre from performing this holy duty in any acceptable manner, that they are not able so much as to thinke a good thought. Neither is it enough that we be once purged from their guilt and punishment in our iustification, by the death and bloodshed of Christ applied by faith, or that we be freed from the corruption of sinne, in the first acts of our sanctification; but seeing wee doe daily renew our sinnes, and thereby defile our soules and bodies, we must daily cleanse them by renewing our repentance, and not presume to vndertake this holy worke, liuing and lying in our spirituall defilements, but we must wash our soules (as sometimes the Israelites their clothes) before we presume to approach vnto this mount of Meditation, wherein God hath promised to be seene; and to cleanse the Tables of our hearts with the teares of true contrition, before we goe about to haue any holy impressions written in them. And seeing sinne, like a thicke cloud, doth dimme and dazle the eyes of our mindes, so as we cannot see holy and heavenly things, wee must first dispell them by vnfained repentance, before we can receiue any comfort of diuine and heavenly light. And being to entertaine our Bridegroom Christ, in his spirituall presence, into our hearts, (as it were) into our houses, and to solace our soules in a more neere communion and familiarity with him, we are first to purge them from all noysome defilements, which will make our company lothsome vnto him; and though wee cannot so sufficiently purifie them, that they may be worthy to entertaine so pure and holy a ghest, yet at least, in a sincere affection let vs labour to doe the best we can, that it may not appeare to be a fault of negligence, but of our spirituall pouerty and impotency, which disableth vs to giue him any better welcome. The formall cause of this exercise, is a serious cogitation, or intentiue deliberation; Neither is this worke of the Lord to be done negligently and slightly, letting the reines loose to our cogitations, that they may wander whither they list, but wee are to intend the whole powers of our mind vnto it, and to set them strictly to this holy taske, not suffering them to wander abroad whither they please, but to apply themselues to that which they haue vndertaken, vntill they haue brought their worke vnto some good perfection. The subiect-matter of our Meditation is something diuine, spirituall, and heavenly: vnto which our thoughts, for the time it lasteth, are to be restrained; and not suffered to wander after, or to intermingle with them any worldly things. The finall causes or ends of it, are the glory of God, and our owne saluation; both which are advanced, when as wee handle after an holy manner in our Meditations, some

§. Sect. 3.
Of the efficient cause or person who is to meditate.
Hag. 2. 13.

§. Self. 4.
That Meditation is an exercise which becometh to all Christians.

Jer. 31. 34.

Deut. 6. 6, 8.
& 11. 18.

Pro. 6. 21.

Iosb. 1. 8.

Phil. 1. 30.

Col. 3. 2, 3.

Psal. 119. 17,
48, 72.

Psal. 119. 10.

Ver. 103.

Ver. 148.

such holy and spirituall matter, as may tend to the bettering of our iudgements, and increase of our inward sanctity, by working in our hearts the loue and feare of God, zeale and deuotion in his seruice, an vtter hatred of sinne, and a sincere purpose to please him in all things, and to glorifie his Name, by performing more carefully and conscionably all the duties of a godly life.

And thus we see generally what Christian Meditation is, and the causes of it; the which being a singular and effectuall meanes of working in our hearts a great increase of all sauing graces, and of strengthening vs to the duties of a godly life, is not to be appropriated vnto any one profession or sort of men (which were a dangerous Monopolie, tending to the inestimable preiudice of the Christian Common-wealth, when such a singular commodity as is profitable for all, is ingrossed into the hands of some few) but is to be laid out in common to all the faithfull, who are any way interestted in grace or godlinesse. Neither ought any sort or sexe to thinke that they are exempted from this exercise, vnlesse they thinke themselves so strong in grace, that all meanes of spirituall growth are needlesse, or so weake and impotent, that they hold them bootlesse; seeing such exemption is no prerogatiue, but a disfranchisement, at least, in part of their spirituall freedome, and a losse of a singular priuiledge, which the Lord, in that great Charter of his Couenant made in Christ, hath granted vnto them. For he hath not onely allowed all the faithfull to haue the Booke of his Law in their hands to reade it, or in their mouthes to talke of it, but with the finger of his Spirit hath written and ingrauen it in their hearts, that they may continually thinke and meditate vpon it: Yea, hee hath not onely left it vnto vs as a gracious liberty, which we may take and leaue at our pleasure, but hath strictly imposed it vpon all his people as a necessary duty. These words which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart, and in thy soule, and thou shalt bind them for a signe vpon thine hand, and they shall bee as frontlets betwene thine eyes. Binde them continually vpon thine heart, and tye them about thy necke. So the Lord inioyneth Iosua, though a Captaine and chiefe Magistrate, that hee should not suffer the Law of God to depart out of his mouth, but that hee should meditate therein day and night, that he might obserue to doe according to all that was written therein. And thus we are, as the Apostle exhorteth, to haue our conuersation in heauen, which is chiefly done, when as we chiefly mind heauenly and spirituall things, and set our affections (as he speaketh elsewhere) on things aboue, and not on things vpon the earth. For where our chiefe life is, there our heart and soule should be: but we are dead to the world and flesh, and our life is hid with Christ in God; being then to appeare, when as Christ shall appeare in glory. Of which duty and Christian exercise, wee haue an example in holy David, who in many places professeth, that hee meditated in Gods Law day and night, that is, had his thoughts fixe vpon holy things at all times, and vpon all good occasions: and that they were sweeter to his soule and spirituall taste, then honey to his mouth, and that hee esteemed them in his iudgement, and answerably affected them in his heart, aboue gold, yea much fine gold; which made him not to put it off, as a worke to be done at his best leasure, but rather then hee would want time to doe it; his eyes prevented presented the night watches, that he might meditate in Gods Word. And thus the blessed Virgin hauing heard the words of our Sauour Christ, is said to haue pondred them in her heart; that is, by meditating vpon them in her mind, she had wrought them into her heart and affections.

Which examples, that wee may imitate, let vs consider the reasons which may perswade vs vnto it. The first whereof, is the excellency of this holy exercise, which aduanceth vs vnto high and heauenly priuiledges. For it increaseth our sweet communion with God, the chiefe Goodnesse, in whose fruition consisteth all our happinesse, and giueth vs admittance into his presence, and liberty to talke and conferre with him, as with our friend, about all things which concerne his glory and our owne saluation. It exalteth our mindes and soules about the highest pitch of worldly things, and causeth vs, euen whilest we are vpon earth, to haue our conuersation in heauen. It causeth vs, whilest we carry about with vs this body of flesh, to be heauenly minded, and partakers of the Diuine nature, whilst by this neere society and familiarity, it maketh vs like vnto God, with whom wee conuerse in holinesse and happinesse. It entreteth vs into the first degrees of the heauenly ioyes, and as our state of mortality will beare, it imparteth vnto vs some first beginnings of the vision and fruition of God, and inableth vs (with Moses) to discern, as we are capeable, some small glimpses of his glory. And as his face did shine, when hee had conuersed with God in his bodily presence; so our soules doe shine in purity, brightness, and glory, by comming neere vnto him, and entertaining with him this spirituall communion. And as the waxe, which is yellow in its owne nature, by lying long in the beames of the Sunne, changeth the colour, and attaineth vnto a Virgin-like whitenesse and purity; so wee, who with the Spouse in the Canticles, are browne and blacke through naturall infirmities, doe become more bright and beautifull, whilest conuersing with our Bridegroom Christ in this neere familiarity, the beames of his loue and fauour doe shine vpon vs.

The second reason, is the profit of Meditation, which is inestimable; seeing it is fit and vsfull to all purposes. For if we bind Gods will and Word continually vpon our heart, and tye it about our necks; when we goe, it shall leade vs; when we sleepe, it shall keepe vs; and when we are awake, it shall talke with vs. By the helpe of it, we make vse of all other helps, it seruing to the soule, as the stomacke to the body, for the well digesting of all spirituall nourishment. In which respect, one holdeth it for no better then presumption, for any to take vpon them to teach any other Arts, vnlesse himselfe haue first learned, and made it his owne by intentiue Meditation. By it we come to the sight and sense of our corruptions, which lye lurking and hidden in vs, impossible to be purged and reformed, because they are not so much as discovered. By it we finde out our wants, that we may vse meanes whereby they may bee supplied; and discover our weakenesses, that wee may labour to get more strength. By it we discover the subtile stratagems of our spirituall enemies, that wee may auoyd them; and are fore-armed against their tentations, and strengthened to ouercome them. By it wee spie out the wiles of our owne deceitfull hearts, their shifts and cunning deuices, their windings and turnings, rouings and wandrings; and bringing

Luk. 2. 19.

§. Sect. 5.

The first reason taken from the excellency of this exercise.

§. Sect. 6.

The second reason, taken from the profit of it.

Pro. 6. 22, 23.

Nulla ars doceri presumitur, nisi intentus prius meditatione discatur. Greg. in pastor. lib. 1. c. 1.

ing them in subiection to the spirituall part, doe reduce them into some order. By it we banish vaine cogitations and lusts of the flesh, and cause our minds and hearts to be taken vp with such thoughts and desires as are holy and religious. It is the best preteruatiue against all sinne, and a most soueraigne antidote against carnall security, whilest it discouereth our spirituall danger, and mooueth vs to preuent it by timely repentance. It singularly improoueth our spirituall estate, by increasing sauing and fruitfull knowledge, inward sanctity in our affections, and the outward practice of it in our liues. It enricheth our soules with all spirituall and sauing graces, faith, hope, charity, affiance, and the true feare of God. It is the spur of our deuotion, the fuell of our zeale, and the common incentiue to all vertue. It is the food of our soules, by which they are spiritually nourished, and euen the life of our life, as an Heathen could see by the light of nature. It weaneth our hearts and mindes from the world, and listeth them vp to heauen. It maketh vs to walke with God as Enoch, and (like Elias his body in the fiery Chariot) it carryeth our soules into heauen. By it, in our solitarinesse, wee inioy God and our selues, and by conuersing with him, we are fitted and made profitable for all good company. In a word, as one saith, all spirituall profit and progresse in godlinesse, proceedeth from reading and meditation; for what wee know not, we learne by reading, and by meditation hold it when we haue it. And as it is the meanes of all grace and goodnesse in this life, so also it assureth vs of all glory and happinesse in the life to come. For, Blessed is the man who so delighteth in the Law of the Lord, that hee doth meditate in it day and night.

The third and last reason is taken from the necessity of this holy exercise, the neglect whereof depriueth vs of all the former benefits and privileges. For thereby we lose the comfort and ioy which wee haue in this sweet communion with God; we become insensible of our sinnes and spirituall wants, and so grow carelesse in vsing those good meanes for the mortifying of the one, and supplying of the other. Wee take the ready way to continue in carnall security, and to liue in our sinnes without repentance. We lye open to the tentations of our spirituall enemies, and easily fall into their secret ambushments at vnawares, by reason wee neuer thinke of them, nor of the meanes whereby we may escape them. We are soone deceiued with our owne false hearts, when as wee neuer found their deceits vnto the bottome, and giue Satan leaue to fill them with worldly and wicked thoughts, and with sensuall and carnall desires and lusts, when as he findeth them like empty houses, swept cleane, and cleared of all good meditations, and garnished with sloth, vanity & security, the chiefe ornaments wherein he delighteth. We lose piece-meale all our spirituall armour, and not repairing the breaches which haue been made by the enemies of our saluation, we lye open to their assaults, & are easily vanquished in the next incounter, whilest wee neuer thinke of any approaching danger. We defraud our soules of a chiefe part of their food, whereby they should be nourished in all sauing grace, and strengthened vnto all Christian duties: we lose the heat and seruor of our zeale and deuotion, which being no naturall qualities residing in their proper elements,

*Est animorum, ingeniorumque nostrorum naturale quoddam pabulum, consideratio, contem-platioque natura: doctoque homini & erudito, cogitare est vivere, Cicer.
lib. 4. Acad.
quest.
Omnis profectus ex lectione & meditatione præcedit: quæ enim nescimus, ex lectione dis-cimus, meditatione conseruamus, J. Sidor. de summo bono.
Psal. 1. 1. 2.*

§. Sect. 7.

The third reason taken from the necessity of this exercise.

Math. 13. 45.

ments, coole and decline when we withdraw from the the fuel by which they are nourished. Wee lose the comfort of our heavenly freedome, when as we neuer haue our conuersation there, and suffer our hearts to lye groweling vpon the earth without any spirituall motions, which like the peyces & plummetts of a clock, do naturally descend & sinke down, vnlesse they be often pulled vp with spirituall and heavenly meditations. Finally, we put out, or cloze vp the eyes of our soules, so as they cannot looke into our selues, nor into our spirituall estate, to see our miseries, that we may be humbled, nor the meanes of our freedome and deliuerance, that wee may be comforted; our pouerty and defects, nor Christs riches and full payment, our naturall defects, and spirituall abilities in him that strengtheneth vs, our gifts and graces, our wants and weakneses; our finnes committed, our duties neglected or performed, our dangers, and meanes to escape them; our way to happinesse, and what progresse wee haue made in it. And as we cannot, through this neglect of meditation, take notice of our selues, so are we thereby estranged from God, neither seeing nor obseruing his nature or attributes, his mercy to loue him, his iustice to feare him, his power and truth in his promises, that we may beleue and trust in him; the administration both of his benefits conferred vpon those that loue and obey him, nor of his Iudgements and punishments, threatened and inflicted vpon those who continue in their finnes, that by this experience of others good and harmes, wee may become wise in chusing such a course as may gaine the one, and auoyd the other.

CAP. XV.

Of extraordinary Meditation.

And thus much of meditation in generall: The which, howsoeuer it doth not easily admit of any formall distribution according to the strict rules of art, yet it may, like prayer, be distinguished into two kinds. For as prayers are either extraordinary and at large, the which are continually to be made, and at any time whatsoever, when any fit occasion or opportunity is offered either of petition, or thanksgiving, the which we call Eiaculations; or else ordinary and at set times, when as with due preparation wee purposely compose our selues to performe this duty in a solemne manner: So our meditations may be distinguished into such as are extraordinary and at large; or else ordinary and at set times, when as with due deliberation and preparation, setting all other things apart, we settle our selues to spend some time in this religious exercise. The former sort of meditations are sudden, and continually in vse, when any occasion or opportunity is offered and obserued, by outward objects presented to our senses, especially the sight and hearing, or by some inward conceit in our imagination or discourse of our minds: whereof we may make some spirituall vse, and raise vp our minds from the earth towards heauen, in some holy meditation. The which may be done at all times, and in all employments, as in the workes of our callings, or in our honest recreations, when wee are in company,

§. Sect. 1.

What extraordinary meditation is, and the subiect of it.

1. Thef. 5. 17.

Pfal. 19. 1.
and 69. 34.
and 89. 5.

Pfal. 8. 3, 4.

Prou. 6. 6.
Esa. 1. 1.

Ier. 8. 7.

Matth. 6. 26, 28.

Iob. 4. 14.

Iob. 6. 27, 32.

Heb. 6. 4, 5.

company, or solitary and by our selues. But especially the large booke of the creatures affordeth vnto vs most plentifull matter of this kind of meditation, when either they put vs in mind of their and our Creator, or of some of his attributes shining cleerly in them. In the former respect, Dauid saith, that the heauens declare the glory of God, and the firmament sheweth his handy worke, that is, offer vnto vs fit occasion of glorifying God, when as we see their excellency and order, and of admiring and magnifying his wisdom and power, who was able of nothing to make so goodly a frame and excellent workmanship. And in regard of the latter, hee telleth vs in another place, that they did occasionally, as good Schoole-masters, teach him another lesſon, namely, to see and admire the infinite loue and vnderſerued goodnesse of God towards mankind. When I consider (saith he) the heauens, the worke of thy fingers, the Moone and the starres which thou hast ordained; What is man that thou art mindfull of him, and the sonne of man that thou viſiteſt him? And thus Salomon sendeth the sluggard to the Ant, to learne of her diligence; and Eſay a refractory people, to the Oxe and Asse to learne duty and obedience; and Ieremy the negligent and secure lewes, to the Storke, Turtle, Crane and Swallow, to learne of them to obserue Gods appoynted times, that they might not let his iudgments passe vnguarded, but seasonably turne vnto him by true repentance. And our Sauour Christ sendeth such as vex themselues with distrustfull and carking cares, to the Fowles of the ayre, and to the Lillies of the field, which without their care onely by Gods blessing and good prouidence liue, grow and flourish. And thus he himſelfe, from the water of Iacobs well, taketh occasion to thinke and discourse of the Water of Life; and from the meat that perisheth, and the Manna in the Wildernesſe, to meditate and speake of the Bread of Life which came downe from heauen. And after the same manner may we take occasion of some holy meditation by the view and consideration of any action or occurrent, especially where wee may in a liuely manner behold the administration of Gods mercies or iudgements, in rewards or punishments, or when we seriously behold any of Gods creatures. As when vve see the beauty of the heauens, and the brightnesse of the Sunne, vvee may take occasion thereby to thinke of his infinite glory, beauty and brightnesse that made them; vwhen vvee behold their goodly and constant order, to thinke of his immutability. So their durablenesse may put vs in mind of his eternity, their vast greatnesse, of his immensity. The earths barrennesse, of our fall and sinne; her fruitfulnessse, of Gods blessing reneued in Christ, and how vvee ought to answer this mercy, in bringing forth the fruits of obedience, lest being often vwatered and remaining fruitlesse, vvee bee the second time accursed. Neither hath the Lord created his mighty host of innumerable creatures, adorned them vvith such beauty, distinguished them in such varieties, furnished them vvith such excellent properties, that vve should onely haue a sensuall vse of them, vvherein the brutish creatures may exceed vs, but that vve should take occasion by them, to glorifie him in his excellent workmanship, and learne something from them for our better instruction, that vve may imitate them in that vvwhich is good, or shunne and auoyd that vvwhich is euill in them. Which vvho so neglect, depriue themselues, in their

their vse, of the best part, vyhereby they might receiue as much profit for their soules, as they doe for their bodles in that vse which is common and ordinary. And thus we are to furnish our selues vvith fit matter for these extraordinary and sudden meditations. But here (as our learned Artist hath well obserued) some cautions are to be vsed: as first, that there bee some similitude betweene the matter, and the meditation which is raised from it; that it may not be strained and far-fetched, but kindly and familiar. For want of which resemblance, our meditations will prooue loose and wandring, and leaue behind them no impression: whereas similitude and likenesse in the matter to the meditation, will recall the one to our remembrance, as oft as we see or obserue the other. Secondly, wee must auoyd such matter of meditation as God hath expressly forbidden, as namely, Images, to put vs in mind of him, or any essentiall part of his worship; seeing they leade vs vnto idolatry, will-worship and superstition, and teach vs nothing but vanity and lyes, namely, to conceiue of him as visible and corporall, who is incorporeall and inuisible; and as circumscribable and finite, who is immense and infinite. Thirdly, seeing God hath giuen vs such plentifull variety of matter in this kind, wee must not dwell too long vpon, or follow too much one thing in our meditations, which will cause satiety & wearines, but take our liberty of choyce in this great plenty, provided that this liberty turne not to licentiousnesse, and giue occasion to our minds of idle rousing and wandring from one thing to another, without serious thinking of any thing, that wee may fit it for some good vse. And finally, these meditations must not bee long and tedious, which is not agreeable to their nature, nor will conueniently suit with our company and occasions, but rather distract vs from our businesse, and duties of our callings, which ordinarily we must tend; but they must, like ejaculations in prayer, be short, as they are sudden, vnlesse time, leisure and solitude affoord vs more liberty.

The other kind of meditation which is ordinary, set, solemne and deliberate, is, when as purposely setting apart all other businesse, and sequestering our selues from all company, we doe bend our mind, with all studious intention, to discourse deliberately vpon some spirituall subiect or part of Gods Word, which we know in some measure, that by diligent insisting, serious debating, and deepe musing vpon it, till wee haue brought it to some spirituall vse and good issue, we may apply it to our particular vse for the further enlightening of our vnderstandings, and the confirming of our iudgments, and also for the purging and sanctifying of our hearts and affections, the stirring vp of our zeale and deuotion, and the bettering and amending of our liues and conuersation; making choyce of such place, time, gesture, and other circumstances, as may best fit and further vs in this holy exercise. And this is that kind of meditation which is chiefly intended and commended vnto vs in the holy Scriptures, both by the precepts before quoted, and also by the examples of Gods Saints and seruants, as of Isaac, who is said, towards euening, to haue gone out into the fields to meditate, of which that Scripture speaketh in such a manner, as though it had been his daily exercise. So Dauid professeth, that Gods Law and Word was his daily meditation, as wee may see in the hundred and

A a a

Ier. 10. 8, 19.
Zach. 10. 2.
Habak. 2. 18.

§. Set. 2.
What ordinary meditation is, and the subiect of it.

Gen. 24. 63.

*Psal. 1. and 15.
Psal. 37. and 73.
Psal. 22.
Psal. 10. 5.
and 106.*

*§. Sect. 3.
The difficulty of this religious exercise.*

and nineteenth Psalme, wherein he not onely testifieth his doing of it, but also, as by an example, proueth it, seeing that Psalme is nothing else but an heauenly meditation, the subiect matter whereof is the holy Law of God. Euen as in many other Psalmes he meditaterh vpon diuers other subiects. As who are to be esteemed truly happy, and heires of eternall blessednesse; the temporary prosperity of the wicked; the passion and sufferings of Christ; the benefits of God conferred vpon his vnworthy people, and many others: all which doe plainly proue, that which he professeth, namely, that this meditation in Gods Law was his daily exercise.

Which examples that we may imitate, I will first consider the reasons which may moue vs, and remove the impediments which might hinder and discourage vs from the vndertaking of this exercise, and then set downe the doctrine and practice of it in a forme of meditation, that so we may be instructed in the right vse of it; and haue a plaine example to leade vs as it were by the hand, and to inable vs to frame the like vpon other occasions. The reasons may be reduced to the same heads which I propounded in the generall consideration of this duty; all which doe specially and chiefly belong to this kind of meditation, as being above the other much more excellent, profitable and necessary. For if it be a priuiledge of excellency to come into Gods sight, then much more for some good time to continue and conuerse with him; if wee may thinke our selues highly aduanced, if we may for the least moment be admitted into his presence, and suffered to salute him: then how much rather, when we may be permitted to haue free conference with him, and our soules in his presence? But as it is truly said of all things excellent, that they are also hard and difficult; so may both these be truly verified of this exercise, then the which, as no other is more excellent, (prayer and contemplation excepted, which exceed in some degrees in the same kind) so there is none besides them of greater difficulty. First, in that our corrupt nature is not more auerse vnto any other duty; both because we take our whole delight in things that are connaturall and subiect to the senses, and our mindes are soone tired with meditating seriously vpon those things which are meerly intellectuall and abstracted from the senses; and also because our carnall hearts, which take their chiefe pleasure and contentment, in thinking vpon, and affecting worldly things, are ready to murmure and repine when they are restrained of their liberty, and kept hard to this spirituall taske; and to breake loose and fly out euery hand-while, that they may roue and wander after their wonted delights. Secondly, because in other spirituall exercises, as hearing the Word, reading and conferring with others, we haue but to deale with men (as we conceiue it) at least in respect of immediate actions, objects and intercourse, which wee performe with greater alacrity, because the senses are exercised in them about outward things: But in this exercise of meditation wee are soone wearied (as the senses exercised about excellling objects) both because the subiect matter about which we discourse in our minds, is spirituall and heauenly, and also because vve cast vp our accounts, lay open our sinnes, search out our vvants and vvweaknesse, seriously examine our hearts how vvee haue be-

haued

haue our selues in the doing or neglecting of our duty, and laying them naked before God without all hypocrisie, confessing our sins of which we finde our selues guilty, accusing our selues where wee are faulty, discovering our wants and weakneses wherein we are defective; all which are not done before our equals, but before the glorious King of heauen and earth (as malefactors before their Iudge) whose might and Maiesty, souerainty and power of life and death may iustly ouer-awe vs. The which difficulties notwithstanding must not so much discourage vs from this exercise, as the excellency must incourage vs to vndertake it with so much the more strong resolution and earnest indeuour.

To which purpose let vs further consider, that as this kind of meditation is aboue all other most excellent, so also it exceedeth in vse and profit. For it is the spirituall food of the soules, by which they liue and thrive in all sauing graces, and are strengthened vnto the performance of all Christian duties. It weaneth our soules from the world and worldly vanities, and sequestereth and appropriateth them to religious vses. More especially, it inlighteneth our vnderstanding, and maketh vs in discoursing of spirituall things, to see them much more cleerly and perfectly; for as wee are wont to say of our bodily parts and members, Vse them and haue them, because their exercise is the meanes to continue their health, and increase their strength; so may it also be truly said of the inward faculties of the soule, the vnderstanding and discourse of reason, which if they be vsed, grow more strong and vigorous; but if we accustome them to sloth and idlenesse, they will soone languish, and waxe faint and weake in their functions and operations. Now by this inlightening of the mind, wee come to a more cleere knowledge of God and Iesus Christ, whom to know is life eternall. By it we vnderstand more perfectly his Word and will, (in which respect meditation may be fitly called the hearts commentary) and are thereby guided in the way of his Commandements. For if by meditation we bind them continually vpon our hearts, when wee goe, they shall leade vs, as the Wife man speaketh. By it also we attaine vnto the true knowledge of our selues, and of our owne hearts, which are so deceitfull, that they cannot otherwise be well discerned. For as our Sauour hath taught vs, such as the thoughts are, such also is the heart; such as the streames are, such likewise is the fountaine from which they spring. And therefore euill thoughts doe argue an euill heart; euen as contrariwise, good thoughts, and holy meditations, doe shew that the heart is good also. For howsoeuer our words and workes are liable to much hypocrisie, because in them we may often aime at worldly respects, and to approoue our selues vnto men, rather then vnto God; yet it is not so with our thoughts, which are onely knowne to God and our owne consciences, and not subiect to the view and censure of any other. By it wee come to the knowledge of our manifold corruptions, and the malignity of our natures, and to discern the blindnesse and worldlineesse of our mindes, the perverseness of our willes, the security and hardnesse of our hearts, and innumerable other vices and corruptions which otherwise would be vnknowne vnto our selues, euen as they are now vnknowne to others. Yea, by this disquisition we doe not onely finde out this noysome filth and

§. Sect. 4.

The singular profit of ordinary meditation.

Job. 17. 3.

Prov. 6. 22, 23.

Mat. 12. 34, 35.

heapes of vncleannesse (as it were) in secret corners; but also are set aworke, to vrge out of our hearts and mindes, these wicked thoughts, and filthy lusts, which would otherwise, like pernicious humours in the body, lye lurking in them, and bee the causes of our soules sicknesse, and innumerable euils; and being emptied of these wicked thoughts and noysome lusts, wee are heereby mooued, and stirred vp to replenish our mindes and hearts with heauenly cogitations and holy desires, and when wee haue admitted them, to hold them fast, that the other may not returne and recouer their possession. Moreouer, by this Meditation our memories are exceedingly strengthened, and made faithfull Registers of good things. Our consciences are preserved pure, when as heereby wee are kept from falling into any knowne sinne, or if wee haue falne through infirmity, doe not lye in it, but purge away these spirituall defilements by faith, applying vnto them the blood of Christ, and by rising out of sinne through vsained repentance. Our iudgements likewise heereby are much improoued, quickned, and confirmed, whilest as one saith; It distinguisheth things confused, and collecteth them being scattered, searcheth out secrets, and seeketh after truth; examineth things probable, and findeth out such as are fained and coloured; disposeth of things to bee done, and thinketh and considereth of that which wee haue done. Our wills likewise heereby are purged from their stubbornnesse and rebellion, and by conuersing with God, learne to frame and fashion themselues in obedience to his most iust and holy will, and to chuse and refuse good and euill, according to the direction of holy reason.

Bernard. de
consid. lib. 1.

§. Sect. 5.

That this Meditation effectually worketh vpon the heart and affections for the sanctifying of them.

And as it thus powerfully worketh vpon the superiour faculties of our soules, so with much more efficacie vpon our hearts and affections. For it not onely purgeth our hearts from vncleane and noysome lusts, and replenisheth them with holy and heauenly desires; but also mollifieth their hardnesse, and maketh them soft and tender; and as the waxe, when it lieth in cold places, groweth so hard and stiffe, that it will breake, rather then bow; but being laid in the Sunne, becommeth soft, ready to melt, and fit to take any impression; so when wee neglect this duty, our hearts being estranged from God, become hard and obdurate; but when by Meditation we draw neere vnto him, the beames of his fauour shining vpon our hearts, doe make them soft and flexible; and so fit for any holy impression which hee is pleased to make in them. And thus when our hearts are dead and dull, this holy exercise will quicken and reuiue them, and when they begin to bee drowzie, through carnall security, it awakeneth and rowzeth them vp, that they doe not lye snorting in the sleepe of sinne. It doth as much as any other Christian exercise, worke vpon our affections, purging them from worldlinesse and sensuality, and sanctifying and fitting them for Gods seruice. It inflameth our loue towards God and all spirituall and heauenly things: for as in worldly matters of looking, commeth louing; so heere by meditating vpon these greater excellencies, and taking (as it were) a full view with the eyes of our minde, of their beauty and perfection, wee come to haue our hearts inflamed with their loue, and long after nothing more then their fruition. It kindleth also our zeale and deuotion in Gods seruice, when as thereby we come to see, that it is the maine end of our comming into the world, that all other labour is vterly lost, and all our strength is spent in vaine, which is imployed in the pursuite of worldly vanities that profit not, and finally, that whatsoever paines we take in Gods seruice, is to good purpose, being richly rewarded in this world and the World to come. It worketh in our hearts affiance in God, when as we consider of his truth in his promises, and all-sufficiencie in performance; and a true and sonne-like feare of him, when as we thinke seriously of his infinite loue, his soueraignty, power, and glorious Maiesty. It draweth vs on to performe sincere obedience, not onely passive, in suffering what God inflicteth, when we consider that it proceedeth from loue, and tendeth to our good, and the furthering of our saluation; but also active: for who will not willingly serue such a Master, that duely meditateth on his goodnesse in himselfe, and bounty towards vs? Besides, by meditating vpon Gods Law, we are drawne on to keepe it, when as wee consider the excellencie of it, and the benefits and fruits of our obedience; and as euill thoughts are a strong inducement to bring vs to euill workes; so also it is in those that are good. For as the Apostle James seemeth to make it, the thoughts are the first seeds which are suggested into our minds and hearts, the which being entertained with delight, doe cause (as it were) the first conception of our actions; and this is done, when the affections are tickled and allured with the things, that by the thoughts are propounded vnto them; which are as ready to imbrace what the iudgement approoueth, as the hungry stomake such meate as is commended vnto it by the taste. And the affections moouing and inclining the will, doe nourish the conception, as the child in the wombe, till it come to perfect shape, whereupon consent following, it is brought to the birth, and produced into act, opportunity seruing as the Midwife, the will, as Vice-roy to reason, hauing command ouer all the inferiour powers and parts, and inioyning them to execute that which the mind first suggested, the affections imbraced, and it selfe liketh and approoueth. Finally, as it draweth vs on to obedience, so it maketh vs constant in it; because it is not grounded vpon Booke-knowledge, or that which entering by the eare, goeth not much further, but stoth in the braine, and neuer descendeth into the heart, the which faileth & vaniseth vpon many occasions; as the scorching heate of persecution, the tentations of the deuill, the sophisticall wiles of cunning heretikes, which ouerturning such a speculatiue knowledge (as it were) the foundation, doe bring all to ruine that is built vpon it; but it is settled vpon such a knowledge, as is wrought into the heart and affections by Meditation, which will not lose their hold of those good things and sweet comforts, of which they haue tasted and thorowly fed vpon, to the nourishing of the soule in all grace and goodnesse, and strengthening of it vnto all holy duties; although the knowledge of the braine, being too weake to withstand such opposites, doth vterly faile, both in offensive arguments, and defensive answers. In a Word, this Meditation is most profitable for all parts and purposes. For as one saith, It purifieth the minde, that is, the first fountaine from which it springeth; it governeth the affections, it directeth the

our

Iam. 1. 12, 13, 14

*Primum ipsum fontem suum id est, mentem de que oritur partifical consideratio, deinde regis affectus, dirigit actus, corrigit excessus, &c.
Bern. de considerat. lib. 2.*

§. Sect. 6.

That the exercise of Meditation is very necessary.

actions, correcteth excess, composeth our manners, orderly amendeth and graceth our lives, and finally, conferreth experimentall and feeling knowvledge, both of things diuine and humane.

Finally, this exercise of Meditation is no lesse necessary then profitable; for it is the food of our soules, or if you will, the stomake and naturall heart whereby it is digested, which preserveth our spirituall life; without which we can no more continue in good liking and well-being, then our bodies without meate. For as they may live for a good time in a weak estate and poore plight, if they cast vp their food soone after they haue eaten it, by vertue of some small reliques that remaine behind, but can neuer be far, healthy, and strong, if the meate bee not retained, concocted, and applied to the seuerall parts; so our soules may live the spirituall life of grace, by hearing and reading the Word, though for want of Meditation and thinking vpon it afterwards, they retaine little of their spirituall food, but cast vp all againe, sauing some reliques, which vpon occasions will come into their mindes; but they cannot be in good plight, and increase much in spirituall growth and strength, vnlesse they digest what they heare and read by Meditation, and make it truely their owne, by applying it to themselves. And as those beasts that haue that property of chewing the cud, are neuer in good health, but when they are either feeding or chewing; so is it to be thought of vs, though we seeme to feed neuer so eagerly (seeing it may as well be a disease, as the goodnesse of our stomakes) if we take no care afterwards, to ruminare and meditate vpon it. Neither hath it onely the necessity of food, but also of Physicke, for the preserving and well ordering of our spirituall liues. And if we would but duly consider, how full our hearts and inward parts are of noysome lusts, and the corrupt and glutinous humours, of vice and sinne; how false and fickle, how slippery and wandring, how soone weary of good things, and how ready and prone to all euill; we would easily conclude that it were more then necessary, that besides our ordinary diet, we should sometimes vse this wholesome Physicke, which is most effectuall to purge out all these corruptions, and to prevent and cure these spirituall diseases; and to set purposely some time apart for this holy exercise, that we may keepe our hearts in good order, and auoyd the mischiefes which these corrupt humours of sinne will bring vpon our soules, if we suffer them to lye still lurking in vs, and take no care to be purged of them. Finally, this exercise of Meditation hath in it the necessity, not onely of sustentation, but also of defence; as it is a notable meanes to spie out the wiles and subtilties of our spirituall enemies, to discover their might, and our wants and weakenesses, and to fit vs to vs the spirituall armour, without which wee cannot stand in the day of battell; and consequently, the neglect thereof, a ready way to lay vs open to all danger, by denying one of our best helpes, and giuing opportunity to our enemies of all aduantages.

C A P. XVI.

Containing answeres vnto diuers objections made against this exercise of Meditation.

And thus I haue spoken more largely of the profit & necessary of this holy exercise, then some, perhaps, will thinke either necessary or profitable, because I well knew how averse & backward our corrupt nature is vnto it. In which regard, we no more need to be instructed in the knowledge of it, how we may doe it aright, then strong motives & inducements to inforce the practice of that we know. For when our iudgments are enlightened in the right vse of this exercise, we are still ready to frame excuses, to blind and delude our reason, and to stop the cry of our consciences, when they accuse vs for the neglect of so necessary a duty; and euen when wee are ready to goe about it, our sloth and security pretenderth such necessary impediments, and casteth such stumbling blockes in our way, that wee are discouraged from proceeding in it. As first, we are ready to alleadge, that it is a matter of great difficulty for vs that are in the world, to sequester our mindes wholly from worldly things, that they may be wholly taken vp with those which are spirituall and heavenly, and are so farre out of the reach of our naturall abilities. And surely it cannot be denied, but that this duty, as all other things excellent, is hardly archieued; for being but children in knowledge, and weakelings in grace, it is no more easie to attend any serious exercises, profitable for our soules health, then it is for boyes to banish out of their mindes childish vanities, and to apply themselves wholly to their studies, that they may get learning, and become good schollers. But this must not make vs to neglect this exercise, but considering how excellent, profitable, and necessary it is, we must be so much the more earnest in our resolutions, and diligent in our indeuours, to set our selues seriously about it, by how much it appeareth to be of greater difficulty. To which purpose, let vs know, that as children finde most discouragements, and greatest difficultie in attaining to learning in their first entrance, but afterwards, when they are come to some proficiency, finde it more easie, and tasting the sweetnesse of it, goe on in their studies with cheerefulnesse and delight: so the greatest difficulty is in the first beginnings of this holy exercise; seeing vse and practice will make it easie and familiar; and the sweetnesse which we shall find in it to our spirituall taste, and the fruit and benefit which we shall reape by it, richly recompencing all our labour, will take away all tediousnesse, and make vs to performe it with all cheerefulnesse. And as those which haue beene trained vp in the delightfull studies of Poetry, Philosophy, and History, in the Vniuersities, can hardly apply themselves to the study of the Law, yet doe at the first bend, and euen inforce their minds to it, being encouraged with golden hopes, and afterwards comming to practice, proceed with delight, when they become sensible of the gaine; so our mindes, hauing beene inured to wander about earthly things, which are most pleasing to our carnall appetite, can hardly apply themselves to spirituall and heavenly Meditations, which are

6. Sect. 1.

The objection of difficulty, acknowledged and answered.

§. Sect. 2.

The obiection of naturall want and weaknesse in performing this exercise
answered.

harsh and vnpleasant to our corrupt nature; but euen then we must with an holy violence bend our minds vnto them; being encouraged with our more then golden hopes; and then without doubt, when we haue made some good proceedings in our spirituall practice, the sensible sweetnesse which we shall relish in it, and the manifold benefits, and plentifull fruits which wee shall reape by this exercise, will incourage vs to proceed in it with much comfort and delight.

Secondly, we are apt to pretend our naturall weaknesse and imbecillity to performe so high and hard a dury, as the ignorance of our mindes, the auersenesse of our hearts, the coldnesse of our zeale, deuotion, and such like. But these wants and inabilities should not discourage vs from this exercise, but mooue vs to vse it so much the rather, because it is a chiefe meanes ordained of God to increase our strength, and to bring vs to more perfection. We doe not, because we are weake and sickly in our bodies, abstaine altogether from food and Physicke, but the rather vse them, that we may recouer our health and strength. Yea, when our appetite is small, we force our selues, that by eating a little at once, we may get a stomake. We doe not shut the windowes, because the house is darke, and wee dim-sighted; but are ready the sooner to open them, to let in the light, of which we stand in need more then others, in respect of our naturall defects, that we may the better dispatch our businesse; and the colder wee feelee our selues, the more necessary we thinke it to come vnto the fire, or to vse some exercise, that we may recouer our naturall heate. And so in like manner, the sight of these defects should not hinder vs from this exercise; seeing it is the meanes to inlighen our mindes with more knowledge, to get spirituall health and strength, whereby wee may be inabled to performe this and all other good duties daily in more perfection; and to warme our cold and frozen hearts, that we may performe seruice vnto God, with more heate of godly zeale and seruour of deuotion. Besides, though we be not able of our selues, so much as to thinke a good thought, yet if in obedience to God we vse this his holy Ordinance, he will inable vs vnto it, being all-sufficient to make vs both to thinke and do whatsoeuer he requireth at our hands.

§. Sect. 3.

Their obiection answered, who pretend want of matter to meditate vpon.

Thirdly, we are ready to obiect want of matter to meditate vpon, and that we are so barren in our inuention, that the fire of our deuotion is ready to goe out as soone as it is kindled, for want of this fuell to nourish and preferue it. But this is to excuse one negligence with another, seeing the Lord hath set before vs, and euen put into our hands the large Volume of his Creatures, and the Booke of holy Scriptures, in both which, there is abundant matter of Meditation, if we had but the hearts to view and reade them; besides, the consideration of our owne misery, our manifold finnes and corruptions, wants and imperfections, Gods manifold mercies, and innumerable blessings vouchsafed vnto vs, the administration of his iudgements, and such like, of which I shall haue occasion to speake more hereafter. And therefore there being no want of good seed, we haue no cause to complaine of any thing but the barrennesse of our hearts, and their auersenesse to good things, if they bring not forth, in this kind, plentifull fruits. The which, as it is to be bewailed with true sorrow, that wee who haue hane matter enough to thinke and meditate vpon in vworldly things, for a whole yeere together, though none be prepared to our hands, being heere in such quick Workemen, that wee can both gather our straw, and burne our bricke in full tale, should bee so barren of matter, when wee come to thinke of things spirituall and heauenly, so it must moue vs with so much the more diligence and earnestnesse to reade and study the Scriptures, and to obserue the workes of God, and finding our emptinesse, to resort to Gods store-houses (like the Egyptians to Iosephs) that wee may be filled with such prouision as hee hath made for vs, and haue no more cause to complaine of want.

Fourthly, wee are hindred from performing this duty by manifold distractions both inward and outward. Of the former kinde is the indisposition of our hearts to spirituall and heauenly things, and their readinesse to be carried away from them (when they take them into their consideration) after worldly vanities. The which so much discourageth many, that they neglect this duty altogether, because they finde themselves so vnfit to performe it. But our vvants and vweakenesse should not driue vs further from God, but make vs rather drayv neerer vnto him, and by earnest prayer to craue the gracious assistance of his holy Spirit, that we may be inabled thereby to serue him better. Neither must our imperfections and distractions in performing Christian duties, mooue vs to neglect them altogether, for this is that which the deuill would haue: and if wee thus farre yeeld vnto him, wee shall be sure to performe nothing that is good, seeing he will neuer let distractions and discouragements to bee wanting vnto vs; but being thorowly humbled in the sight of our infirmities, and bewailing our wants, let vs labour daily after more perfection. And to this end let vs vse due preparation before wee undertake this exercise, of which I shall speake afterwards. Secondly, let vs keepe the Christian watch, before spoken of, ouer our hearts, and repell these distractions at their first entrance. Thirdly, let vs pray against them, and desire the Lord to strengthen vs, that they may not preuaile to pull away our hearts from him. Fourthly, wee must at other times restraine our hearts and minds, that they may not wander whither they list, and keepe them vnder some command, that they may not be to seeke when wee would imploy them about holy duties. Fifthly, we must fit the length of our Meditations to the strength of our deuotion, and let them be enlarged as it increaseth. Which meanes, when we haue vsed, let vs set vpon this exercise; and if our distractions are so great and many, that they would giue vs leaue to thinke vpon nothing else, let vs make them the matter of our Meditation, accusing our hearts for their loosenesse and worldlinesse, their deadnesse and backwardnesse to all good duties, that so we may bring them to vnfeined repentance.

The outward distractions, which are alleadged as necessary impediments of this holy exercise, are the company of friends, who comming to visit vs, take vp that time which should bee spent about it, the multitude of businesse, which affordeth vs no leasure, and want of convenient place, wherein we might be priuately by our selues, to performe this duty which cannot bee done in the company of others. But for the first, no company should be so deare vnto vs, as that it should cause vs to breake off our communion

§. Sect. 4.
Other hinder-ances remoo-ued.

§. Sect. 5.
That company and worldly busines should not hinder vs
from this exercise of Meditation.

Luk. 10. 42.

Matth. 6. 33.

Iosh. 1. 8.

munion and society with God. Or if to auoyd inciuility and giuing of fence, we doe intermit this exercise, and put it off to another time: this must not make vs to neglect it altogether, but wee must set our selues about it when our company is gone, and redeeme this losse by doubling our diligence in this holy exercise. And for our businesse and employments, we are, according to our Saviours counsell, to thinke this one thing necessary, and to be preferred before all other, and first to seeke the Kingdome of God, and his righteousness, esteeming no businesse so necessary, as the enriching of our soules with spirituall grace, and vsing the means which may further and assure vs of our saluation; accounting those employments worldly, carnall, and not worthy our paines, which shoulde and thrust out spirituall exercises. And yet if our important businesse should wholly take vs vp, and that the necessity of our estate and calling should so strictly at all times bind vs vnto them, that wee had no leisure for religious duties, there were some colour (and but a colour) of excuse: but the fault is not in the multitude of our employments, but either in our want of wisdom and prouidence, that wee doe not rightly dispose of them, and allot to all sorts of duties their seasonable times; or in our worldlinesse and immoderate loue of earthly things, which maketh vs thinke all time lost that is not spent about them, and that we are quite vndone, if but a little while we intermit our diligence in seeking of them. For God by one Commandement doth not crosse another, nor bringeth vs into such straits, but that we may (if it be not our owne fault) haue seasonable time of yeelding our obedience to them all. Hee would haue vs looke to our state, and prouide for our families, but he would not haue vs so immoderate in our care and labour, that we should mind nothing else, and haue no leisure for religious duties, seeing hee is both able and willing to prouide all necessities for vs and them, if casting our care vpon him, and relying vpon his prouidence, wee set apart seasonable time for both. And therefore he would not exempt Ioshua (though as a man would thinke, wholly taken vp in the warres, and in the gouernment of a mighty people) from spending some good part of his time in this duty of meditation. And we see that Dauid himselfe, though wonderfully employed in warre and peace; the gouernment of a whole Kingdome, and the care of his owne family, did yet much exercise himselfe in this religious duty. Yet say (which we ought not to doe) that our worldly businesse must haue the precedence; if wee would not haue it appeare to be a false, friuolous and camall pretence, deuised of purpose to hide our vtter neglect and contempt of religious duties; let vs at least allot vnto them some of that time which we can spare from our worldly and necessary employments, and set our selues about this exercise when our businesse is ouer. Or suppose they will take vp the whole day, let vs allot to this vse some small part of the night, and make bold to borrow some little time from our sleepe, that we may not by the vtter neglect of this duty sleep in sin, and so much intend the refreshing of our bodies, as that we suffer our soules to droope and languish, by withholding from them their spirituall food, and the comfort of their communion and secret conferences with God. For if wicked men are so vigilant and diligent in plotting and performing ming euill towards others and themselves, that they are content to allot the time of their rest, to labour in these workes of darknesse, and as David saith of them, deuise mischief vpon their bed. Yea, if their minds bee so in-centiuie, and their hearts so wholly set vpon it, that vnlesse they haue de-uised or executed some mischicuous designe, their sleepe departeth from them, as Salomon speaketh: how much rather should wee bee willing to spare some time from our sleepe, that we may spend it in some such holy and heauenly meditations, as may enrich vs with spirituall grace, inable vs to Gods seruice, and helpe vs forward in the way of saluation. Finally, suppose that we are so wholly diuided betwene businesse and sleepe, that neither night nor day we can finde any time for this holy exercise; yet we haue no colour of excuse, if wee doe not set apart some time vpon the Lords Day, which may be spared from publike duties in the Congregation, and priuate with our families; to be spent in meditations, seeing then in what state soeuer we be, whether bound or free, Masters or seruants, rich or poore, we cannot reasonably pretend any such excuses of distraction by our worldly businesse, all which we are bound to set apart, and to consecrate our selues wholly, our actions, words, and secret thoughts to the seruice of God, and to vse all good meanes which may enrich vs with grace and further our saluation; and this especially among the rest, for though our case and state may be such, that wee are necessarily restrained from Gods publike seruice in his holy assemblies, as we see in the example of David, and of captiues and prisoners, the sicke, and seafaring men, and some seruants; yet all men, and in all conditions, may on this day spend some time in holy meditations, vpon some things which they haue observed out of Gods Word, or workes. As for that last pretence of wanting a fit and priuate place for meditation, by reason that we are straitened in our dwellings, and haue alwayes some with vs in the same roome, who would hinder vs in this exercise; it is of so small waight, that it is scarce worth the answering. For there is no man that earnestly desireth to performe this duty, who may not at one time or other, find some conuenient place for the doing of it. For if hee haue no roome in the house, he may with Isaac, walke abroad into the fields; or if dwelling in the City he be debarred of this priuiledge, hee may as David exhorteth, commune with his owne heart vpon his bed, and be still; of which his precept hee propoundeth himselfe for an example in diuers places of the Psalmes, wherein, as thinking the day too short, or too much taken vp with other imployments, he professeth that he spent also some part of the night in diuine meditations. And so much concerning the reasons which may mooue vs to this exercise, and the impediments which hinder vs from vndertaking and performing it.

Psal. 36. 4.

Psal. 4. 16.

Psal. 4. 2. 1, 2.
and 84. 1, 2, 3.

Psal. 4. 4.

CAP. XVII.

Of the circumstances of Meditation, as the place, time, and gesture of the body.

6. Sect. 1.
Of the place
of meditation.

*Psal. 4. 4.
Dan. 8. 2.
Act. 10.*

IN the doctrine of meditation (which is the next point to be handled according to that order which I before propounded) I will intreat first of the circumstances of this duty, and then of the substantiall parts of it. The circumstances are either the subiect place, or the adiuncts, which either respect the time of it, or the disposition and gesture of him that meditath. The place ought to be priuate, that being solitary and alone, wee may be free from outward distractions, which would hinder vs in this exercise, and that being wholly sequestred both in mind and body from all worldly impediments, we may intirely and seriously deuote our selues to the service of God in the performing of this duty. And thus Isaac when hee would meditate, walked solitarily in the field; our Saviour retired himselfe sometime to the Desert, sometime to the Mount of Oliues. David meditated vpon his bed, Daniel in his chamber, and by the riuer of Vlai; Peter vpon the house top. So that there is no place limited to this exercise, seeing God is present euery where, and will be found in all places alike, if we seek him with deuout and holy hearts. And therefore it is not much materiall whether we meditate either vpon our bed in the morning, euening, or in the night watches, or in our secret closers, or in the fields, and in our retired walks. Onely these two things are to be obserued in our choyce of the place; first, that it be free from company and noyse; for our meditation must be a soliloquie with God and our owne soules; and secondly, this priuate place must be such, as in our experience we find freest from distraction, and fittest to further vs in our deuotion. In which regard (as I take it) those places are most convenient, wherein there are fewest obiects to draw away the senses with vnusuall delights, seeing they are ready to carry to the imagination, what they obserue with pleasure, and that being distracted, withdraweth also the mind and heart from this exercise. And consequently our closet and chamber, or our ordinary and vsuall walke abroad, where nothing is to be obserued but that which is common and often scene, are to be preferred before such places, wherein there is variety of new and pleasing obiects, and one ordinary place better then diuers and many, because we can there soonest, and with most ease recollect our thoughts, and being gathered, keepe them together without distraction.

6. Sect. 2.
Of the time,
that it must not be continually, but as we get fittest opportunity.

Concerning the time of this set and solemne meditation, diuers things are to be obserued. First, it must not be perpetuall and continuall; for howsoeuer the other kind of meditation, which is sudden, short and occasionall, may be at times performed when we haue any opportunity; yet this serious and solemne kind cannot be so, in regard of our weaknes which cannot beare it and indure the labour, and in respect of other duties which wee are bound to performe as well as this, both religious and ciuill, ciuill, and must be all done in their due and seasonable time. In which regard it is to be esteemed so farre off from a state of Angelical perfection, which is wholly taken vp with contemplation, that it cannot bee excused nor wiped from the blemish of deserued blame, because many other duties as necessary in their due time and place, are vntoerly omitted and neglected. Besides, the object of this exercise being spirituall, diuine and supernaturall, is farre too excellent for the weakie sight of our minds to be alwayes gazing on, or if it should, it would soone bee dazeled and dalled, yea distracted and quite lost, like the bodily eyes with beholding the Sunne in his full brightnesse. Yea, as this exercise must not bee continual, so neither should it be ouer-common: the which as it causeth wearinesse and satiety, they loathing, and this remissenesse and slacke performance, which faileth as much in the manner, zeale and deuotion, as it exceedeth in time and number, so doth it by assiduity lose in vnto iudgement that esteeme, and in our hearts that awfull reuerence, and feruor of affection which is due vnto it, and so becommeth cold and formall, heartlesse, and vselesse, like physicke, which being ordinarily taken, becommeth familiar to nature, and so worketh not any extraordinary effect. Neither can the most men be often exercised in this duty in a set and solemne manner, vnlesse they cause other necessary duties of Christianity, and of their callings, to giue way vnto it with great losse and inconuenience. In which respect, great difference is to be made between the rich and wealthy who haue much spare time, and poore men who liue by their daily labour, and haue little time to spare for the performance of many religious duties no lesse necessary. And amongst those who haue worldly necessities without bodily toyle, mee thinkes there should bee some difference in the frequency of this exercise, betweene ordinary Christians, and vs of the Ministry, and that we should more often apply our selues vnto it, then any other sort of men, both because spirituall and heavenly things are the chiefe objects about which our minds should bee exercised; and because these holy meditations doe more directly and immediately fit vs for the duties of our callings, then they doe other men in theirs. In which regard it were to be wished, that wee would let few or no dayes passe, without some time spent in this holy duty, which will make vs much more profitable both to our selues and others. The which I speake, not to spurre on any to outrunne his deuotion, which being left behind, will make this exercise cold, formall, and not worth the while, and much lesse to bridle and restraîne the zeale of other men, who haue will, and time to performe daily this holy duty, but onely because I would not inflame weakie consciences with doubts and difficulties, by laying vpon them this taske as a necessary burthen, which the Lord hath left free and at their deuotion.

The second thing required in respect of the time, is, that it be not left at randome and at large, without any certaine limits bounding it to one part of the day more then another, but then doing it, when we are best at leisure, or when some good mood or pang of deuotion driueth vs to it; for then we shall neuer be constant in this exercise, but thrust it off from one time to another, at the first, rarely performing it, and at the last, neglecting it.

B b b

it

§. Sect. 3.
Of the fittest
time for meditation.

it altogether. But when with good aduice we haue made choyce of that time of the day which is fittest, both in respect of our abilities and occasions; it is our best way (not for conscience but conueniency) to keepe strictly to it, if some important cause and v unexpected and waighy businesse doe not presse vpon vs and change our course; obseruing constantly (as neere as we can) the same dayes of the week, and the same houre of the day, for the ordinary performing of this exercise. For as order in all good duties is a cause of constancy, so an orderly constancy, or constant order is a notable meanes of continuance and perseuerance: whereas if wee intermit them and doe them onely by fits, our false and deceitfull hearts, vnder pretence of putting them off to a more conuenient time, will make vs at last wholly to omit them. For if we bee vnfit to day, wee shall bee more vnfit to morrow; and indisposition, if wee yeeld vnto it without resistance, not labouring with our hearts to bring them into better frame, and to recouer the heate of our cooled deuotion, will quickly bring vs to a loathing auersenesse and vtter neglect. But though it bee concluded that some certaine dayes and houres must be wisely chosen, and constantly deuoted to this exercise, yet what speciall time this should be, as what dayes of the weeke, or what houte in the day, should be set apart for it, is not so easily determined; onely the Lords Day so challengeth this duty as most proper vnto it, that it cannot then be neglected in some kind or other, without sinne. For the choyce of other dayes, and set houres in them, it must be left to Christian prudence, ayded by euery mans owne experience, which will teach vs what time we can best spare from our other waighy and ordinary imployments, and when wee are best disposed and fitted for the deuout performance of this religious duty, yet (sauiug other mens better iudgement) ordinarily, and for the most part, the first houre of the morning (as I suppose) is fittest for it: first, because generally the morning is fittest for all studies and exercises of the minde, when the decayed strength is repaired, and the spent spirits refreshed and renewed by our rest, and all the faculties of our soules more strong and vigorous. Secondly, because if by our waighy imployments, wee are scant of time in the rest of the day, wee may, to performe so good a duty, borrow an houre from our ordinary time of sleepe, without any hindrance to our other businesse. Thirdly, because hauing not as yet intermeddled with worldly affaires, we may performe it with lesse distraction. And lastly, because meditation is a good preparatiue to our morning sacrifice of prayer. Yet if any man, vpon other reasons, or his owne experience teaching him that he is best fitted, both in respect of his deuotion, and other occasions, doe chuse rather to meditate in the euening, I leaue it as a thing indifferent to his free choyce: onely I would aduize, that wee make choyce of such a time, wherein we are fresh and vigorous in our spirits and minds, and not when they, or our bodies are spent and wearied, either with bodily labour, or studies of the mind.

The third thing respecting the time is, that as we must be constant in setting apart, & obseruing of some certaine time of the day for the vnder-taking and beginning of this exercise; so much more in continuing our meditations the time appoynted. Neither must it bee performed by fits

and

§. Sect. 4.
Constancy in this exercise.

and snatches, intermingling with them our worldly thoughts, or other businesse, sometime intermitting, and then againe afresh setting vpon them: For when the mind is thus distracted betweene things so opposite in nature, the one is an hindrance to the other, and like the dog that runneth or hunteth after two Hares at once, it catcheth neither. Besides, when our minde is let loose to wander after earthly things, it is not easily againe composed and reduced into order; but we shall stand in need of a new preparation; and so be still beginning, and neuer bring any thing to perfection. And therefore when wee haue begun this exercise, wee must constantly proceed (as neere as we can) without distraction or intermission, for that whole space of time which we haue allotted vnto it; not breaking off our meditation, vntill wee haue brought it to some issue, and receiued by it some spirituall refection. Now what proportion of time is to be allotted to this exercise, we cannot prescribe any certaine stint or limits, but must leaue it to be measured out vnto euery one by his owne deuotion, which is not alike in all, nor in the same man at all times. Besides, there is great difference betweene one & another mans leisure in respect of variety of important occasions, pressing some, more then others, and euery man more or lesse, at sundry times. Neither are wee alwayes alike fitted, but sometimes are more dull and dead to spirituall exercises, and sooner weary of them; sometimes more cheerefull and heavenly-minded, and able to hold out in this spirituall race without breathing or intermission; at one time sooner prepared, and better able to performe, and at another, longer in working our backward hearts to this duty. Onely this in general may be said, that our outward exercise must not in time exceed our inward abilities, nor the burthen which wee impose, our spirituall strength: Both because the Lord is onely delighted with cheerefull seruice, and cannot brooke that which is dead and forced; and also because if we ouer-weary our selues, it will coole and quench, and not inflame and increase our deuotion, and make vs the more loth to come the next time to take our spirituall repast, when as wee did not leaue with an appetite, but departed away glutted with lothing satiety.

The last circumstance to be obserued is, the disposition and gesture of the body, which doe not a little further the deuotion of the soule. In which there is required, first, that the body be composed to rest and quiet, that it doe not by much agitation and violent motion disturbe and distract the mind, nor by spending the spirits, and wearying of the outward parts, make the exercise tedious and toyle some. Secondly, here is required silence, that the mind may more freely discourse with it selfe, without any interruption of outward noyse; vnlesse it be in case that the heart be surcharged with the heat and vehemency of our passions, and feruour of deuotion, and doe need some vent to giue it ease. As for the gesture of the body, no certaine rules can be giuen; but it must be left to be ordered and disposed by Christian prudence and experience. Onely in generall wee may obserue these things: First, that our gesture and carriage of our bodies be reuerent, in respect of that glorious presence before which we present our soules and bodies, and the waightinesse of the duty about which we are employed, seeing this may somewhat further the inward reuerence

§. Sect. 5.
Of the disposition and gesture of the body.

of the heart. Secondly, that wee vse that gesture which in our experience we find most auailable to stirre vp our deuotion; for these outward gestures of the body, are but the hand-maids of the mind and heart; which must giue their attendance, that they may bee ready to yeeld vnto them that seasonable seruice, which they shall appoint as most fit and profitable. To which purpose, diuers gestures are diuersly commended. Some in their Meditations preferre quiet resting of their bodies vpon their bed or pallet, whereby they find their minds and soules best fitted for spirituall motion and discourse, and most free from the distraction of all outward objects. Some sitting and inclining their bodies to one side, their table or cheere supporting their elbow, and their hand their head. Some standing still, with their eyes lifted vp towards heauen, the Hauen of their hopes, and visible place of Gods inuisible presence, but yet closed to auoid distractions. Some walking, which being a healthfull exercise, refresheth the body, and maketh it a more fit instrument of the soule, to performe this duty without wearinesse. But which of these we vse, it is not much materiall, seeing in themselves one is not better then another, though in respect of vs, they may be more or lesse conuenient, in regard of the variety of seuerall mens dispositions. Thirdly and lastly, it is not vnprofitable to frame the gesture of the seuerall parts, according to the matter in hand, vpon which we meditate, and our inward affection in thinking of it. As when wee are humbled in the sight and sense of our sinnes, and are ashamed and grieved, because we haue by them dishonoured and displeased our gracious God and louing Father, we may with the Publicane cast downe our eyes vpon the earth, as not worthy to looke vp vnto heauen; and smite our brest, as lamenting the corruptions that are therein contained. When we offer vnto God the sacrifice of praise and thanksgiuing, humble hearts, and holy desires, and beg in the name of Christ with confidence, the benefits which he hath commanded vs to aske, and hath promised to giue, we may lift vp together with our hearts, our eyes and hands towards heauen, from whence we expect to receiue the things we aske, with the hand of faith. When our hearts are rauished with the apprehension of Gods gracious promises, and the sweet and delightfull feelings of his loue, and assured hopes of those inestimable ioyes which he reserueth for vs in heauen, we may hold vp our heads with comfort and reioicing, as our Sauour speaketh, eleuate our hearts towards that place, whither our bodies and soules shall one day triumphantly ascend, and with Abraham, testifie vnto our owne soules, and God, the Author of them, these rauishing comforts, with secret smiles, and outward cheerefulnesse of our face and countenance; seeing these inward feelings of Gods loue, are better then wine, to glad the heart, and this vnction of the Spirit with these diuine consolations, do make the countenance more cheerefull then the choiest oyle.

Luk. 31. 28.

Gen. 17. 17.

Cant. 1. 1.

Psal. 104. 15.

C A P. XVIII.

Of our entrance into Meditation by due preparation.

ANd so I come from the circumstances, to intreate of the exercise it selfe: In which I will consider, first, the ingresse and entrance into it; then the progresse, and manner of proceeding in it; and finally, the egresse and conclusion of it. The ingresse or entrance, consisteth in a due preparation, which the gloriousnesse and Maiesty of Gods presence, before whom this action is to bee performed, the important waight of the duty to bee done, the profit and necessity of doing it well, and our owne frailty and imbecillity, wants and weakenesse, auersenesse and great indisposition to this high and holy exercise, doe necessarily require. For if wee dare not, without due preparation, approach into the presence of an earthly king, to deale with him about such waightry businesse, as importeth vs no lesse then our whole estates, yea our liues themselues; how much lesse should wee presume to come into the presence of the Soueraigne Monarch of heauen and earth, about such important affaires as concerne our spirituall estates, and the euerlasting saluation of our soules, vnlesse before-hand wee be duely prepared? And if we cannot hope to make any good musicke, vnlesse we first string our Instruments, and put them in good tune: so neither shall wee euer be able to make any harmonious melody in Gods hearing, vnlesse we duely prepare all our powers and parts, and put our minds and hearts, our wills and affections in good tune, and provide spirituall Songs and diuine Dirties, as the subiect matter of our Musicke, about which we are to exercise our Art and skill. In which two points our preparation chiefly consisteth; For either it is taken vp, in preparing and fitting our persons for this exercise; or in prouision of profitable matter, as the subiect of our Meditation. In the former respect, besides that generall preparation before spoken of, by renewing of our repentance, that we may not come polluted with our sinnes into so holy a presence, nor touch such pure things with vnwashed hands, wee are with all care and diligence to prepare all and euery of our speciall faculties and parts both of soule and body. And first, we must come with prepared minds and vnderstandings, both in respect of their illumination and intention. For before wee can meditate aright, our minds must be inlightened by Gods Word and holy Spirit, that we may vnderstand in some measure the matter on which we are to meditate, with the causes, effects, properties, and circumstances of it, without which wee cannot at all performe it. Neither must this knowledge bee onely in speculation and theorie, but also a fruitfull sauing knowledge, which sanctifieth the heart, and worketh it and all other parts to an holy practice, without which, this exercise cannot be done profitably, and as it ought. In the intention of our mindes wee must not chiefly and principally propound vnto our selues our owne profit and benefit, but performe it in obedience to God, as a dutie which he requireth, and whereby we are made more fit to doe him seruice; aiming therein chiefly at the setting forth of his glory. And then as subordinate heereunto, we may, and

§. Sect. I.

That this preparation is necessary, and wherein it consisteth.

§. Sect. 2.
That we must chiefly prepare our hearts and affections.

Nunquam commotioni contemplatio iungitur, nec praualet mens perturbata conspiciere, ad quod vix tranquilla valet inbiare. Gregor. Moral. lib. 5.

ought to ayme at the enriching of our soules with all spirituall graces, the cheering and comforting of our hearts with diuine consolations, the increase of our holinesse, and the strengthening of vs vnto all Christian duties of a godly life.

Secondly, before we vndertake this holy exercise, we must prepare our hearts and affections, by laying aside all worldly cares and earthly desires, which if they bee retained, will interrupt and distract vs in our spirituall Meditations. And as Moses was to put off his shooes before he could be admitted to heare God speaking vnto him, or so much as to stand vpon that ground, which was sanctified by Gods presence; so must we cast off the worldlinesse of our wills and desires, before there can be any profitable conference betweene him and vs. For there is such dissimilitude, yea contrariety betweene God and the world, spirituall and earthly things, that when we turne vs to speake vnto the one, wee turne away from the other; and when our minds and hearts are fixed vpon the cares of this life and transitory trifles, by reason of the great distance betweene them, they are quite deuided and distracted from those which are heauenly and spirituall: so that it is more possible to mixe together gold and clay, oyle and water, then the gold of diuine Meditations, and the oyle of spirituall thoughts, with the clay of our earthly affaires, and water of worldly vanities. The fountaine of our hearts must be cleere and well settled, the mud of earthly cares being sunke to the bottome, if wee would behold in them any diuine Contemplations; for if they be stirred and troubled, nothing will appeare through this muddy thickenesse. And as before wee can see the brightnesse of the Sunne, the clouds must be dispelled; so before our minds and hearts can be illuminated and cheered with any heauenly light, or the beames of Gods loue in our spirituall Meditations, the foggie vapours and mists which rise from the earth and sea of the world, must first be blowne away and scattered. Neuer (saith one) can heauenly contemplation ioyne with earthly commotion: neuer is the troubled minde possibly able to behold those diuine things, which without much difficulty it cannot see when it is most quiet. And therefore if wee will meditate with any fruit and profit, wee must not be more carefull to sequester our selues outwardly from company, then our hearts inwardly from worldly cares; nor (according to our Saviours counsell) to shut our Closet dores, then to shut the doore of our hearts against earthly distractions, and to keepe a narrow watch ouer them, that none may enter at vnawares and distract vs in this holy exercise. Neither must we onely take care to exclude at this time such wicked thoughts, and such carking and carnall cares, as are alwayes vnlawfull, but euen those which are at other times honest and necessary, about our ordinary employments and duties of our callings; yea, those likewise which are religious and spirituall, if they be vnseasonable, and nothing pertinent to the present purpose, nor any way sureable to the matter we haue in hand; seeing, though in respect of their matter, they be good and holy, yet they are cunningly thrust into our hearts and minds by the tempter, who can transforme himselfe into an Angell of light, in an ill manner, vnseasonably and vnprofitably, and to a worse end, namely, to distract our present Meditations, and that by thinking on two things at at once of a diuers nature, we should receiue benefit by neither, nor bringe our thoughts vnto any good issue. In which regard, we are not vtterly to banish such things out of our hearts; but onely to shut them out for the time, and to let them stand at the doore, like suiters, till we haue dispatched with those, vnto whom for the present we haue giuen hearing; lest rushing in vncalled, and speaking altogether after a tumultuous manner, nothing be dispatched through this disorder, whereas by reasonable admittance in due course, and conferring with one after another, all may be brought to good effect. Secondly, as we must cleanse our hearts from these incumbrances, so we must decke and adorne them with the ornaments of vertue, that they may be fit to entertaine so high and holy a Guest; but especially we must decke them with humiliry, in which he so chiefly delighteth, that he will not onely be content to conferre with vs for a litle while, but will euen dwell and keepe residence with vs if wee be of an humble spirit. And therefore when we approach into Gods presence to performe this duty, let vs thinke and consider of his glorious greatnesse, and awfull Maiestie, and of our owne basenesse and vilenesse, weakenesse and vnworthinesse, saying in our soules with Abraham, Behold, I haue taken vpon mee to speake vnto the Lord, which am but dust and ashes. O let not the Lord be angry, and I will speake. And without this humiliry we cannot profitably performe this duty; for as one saith; None can contemplate the wisdom of God, who are wise in their owne conceits; because they are by so much distant from his light, by how much they come short of humiliry in themselves. For whilest the swelling of pride increaseth in their minds, it closeth the sight of contemplation, and thinking themselves inlightened aboue all others, they are deprived of the light of vertue. Finally, wee must prepare our hearts for Meditation, by sharpening our appetites, and whetting our stomackes after this spirituall repast and food of our soules, by considering seriously of those arguments, by which formerly it hath beene commended vnto vs. For as it is a singular helpe to our bodily nourishment, when wee come to our meate with an hungry appetite, and that food doth vs but litle good which wee feed vpon with lothing satiety: so also is it in the nourishment of our soules; for if wee receiue our food with a good stomacke, we shall the better feed vpon it, retaine and digest it; whereas, if we come vnto it with a cloyed appetite, wee shall soone cast it vp againe, and neuer digest nor conuert it to any spirituall nourishment. Lastly, there is some preparation also required in respect of our bodies; for as we must take heed that they bee not too much pampered with excessive diet, seeing this fulnesse and fatnesse of body, causeth emptinesse and leanness in the soule, dullereth the minde, drowneth the spirits, and oppresseth the heart; so must we on the other side beware, that the body and minde bee not wearied, and the spirits spent with former studies and labours, so as they are wholly disabled, that they cannot, as fit instruments, performe any good seruice to the soule in this spirituall exercise, as being rather disposed to rest and sleepe, then to take any profitable paines in this laborious employment.

And thus hauing prepared our persons; the next thing to bee done, is to prouide fit matter whereupon wee may meditate, without which, our

Esa. 57. 15.

Gen. 18. 27.

Contemplari Dei sapientiam non possunt, qui sibi videntur esse sapientes, &c. Greg. in Moral. lib. 18.

§. Sect. 3.
Of the subject matter of our Meditations.

Meditations are alwayes vnprofitable, and oftentimes hurtfull and pernicious. In which respect, the greatest part of men doe pittifully faile; for though all are willing to meditate, the mind delighting in its owne motion, and in discoursing vpon those subiects which it most esteemeth, and vpon which the heart is wholly fixed; yet few make choice of such matter, as may besit for their soules nourishment; but some meditate mischief in their hearts, thinking vpon the readiest meanes, how they may archieue it with least danger; some how they may satisfie their carnall desires with worldly riches, pleasures and preferments, and raise themselues by other mens ruines; some meditate vpon naturall things with naturall mindes, neuer drawing them to spirituall vse; some on domesticall matters, how they may best contriue their businesse; or on ciuill affaires, and high points of state; yea, many men spend a great part of their Meditations, about matters meerey concerning other men, and nothing at all appertaining vnto them. Vpon which, and a thousand such like subiects, we may spend our spirits, weare out our bodies, and weary our minds, and yet bee neuer the holier in this life, nor happier in the life to come. But the matter of these Christian Meditations whereof we intreate, ought to be wholly spirituall and diuine, either in respect of the things themselues, or at least the vse which we are to make of them. And thus the whole Scriptures, and euery part and parcell of them may be the subiect matter of our Meditations, when wee seriously consider of the right and naturall sense and meaning of them, and draw them vnto vse, either for instruction, admonition, reproofe, consolation, or the reformation and amendment of our sinfull liues. In which kind of Meditations, whose exercise themselues, they are by the Psalmist pronounced blessed. But besides the text of holy Scriptures, any point of the doctrine of diuinity contained in them, may be fit matter for vs to meditate on; of which, I will heere set downe some of the chiefe and principall, that those who are weake in knowledge, and yong beginners in this exercise, may be so sufficiently furnished, that they need not to neglect it for want of matter.

Psalm. 1. 1, 2.

§. Sect. 4.
That the Scriptures themselves, and the things reuealed in them, are fit matter for Meditation:
As the nature of God, his actions and decree.

And that we may proceed in some order, we may make the matter of our Meditations, either the Scriptures themselues, or else the things reuealed in them. The Scriptures themselues are a fit subiect for our Meditation, by considering that they are the Word, not of man, but of God, and so to be heard and read, loued and obeyed of vs; that in this regard they are most excellent, and to be preferred aboue all other writings, most certaine and infallible, most perfect and all-sufficient, most ancient and durable, and finally, that they are plaine and easie, giuing light to the simple, most profitable and necessary to saluation, and therefore to bee read and studied of all men. The things reuealed in the Scriptures, are either those which respect faith, and are to be beleueed, or else manners, and are to bee practised. The things to be beleueed, are either those which concerne God or the Church. The former respect God himselfe, or his actions and workes. From God himselfe we may haue plentifull matter of diuine Meditation, as first, that there is a God, and the uses that wee are to make of it; what this God is, and how he hath reuealed himselfe vnto vs in his essence and persons, his attributes and names. Of which I haue spoken in the

the beginning of this Treatise, and haue briefly described Gods nature and attributes, as his simplicity, infinitenesse, eternity, immutability, omnipresence, all-sufficiency, which being rightly vnderstood and remembered, will afford excellent matter of holy Meditations. The actions of God, are either his decree, or the execution of it. In the decree it selfe, we are principally to meditate vpon our election to saluation, the causes, and effects and properties of it, especially the infallibility and certainty; and how, and by what reasons and signes, being sure in it selfe, we may come to be assured, that our names particularly are written in the Booke of life. In the execution of the decree, which is either generall or speciall, we haue plentifull matter of Meditation. In respect of the generall execution, we may meditate first of the workes of creation, which were not made all at one instant, as they might as easily, if God had so pleased; but in sixe dayes; that by this orderly proceeding, we might the better be enabled to meditate vpon them. And heere we may meditate on the heauens, their glory and beauty, their greatnesse and durablenesse, their motions and constant orders: How they are adorned with the glorious brightnesse of the Starres, Moone, and Sunne, be-spangling this vaulty roofof Gods great building, every one exceeding another in beauty and brauery. Thus wee may meditate vpon the diuers regions of the ayre, and the creatures contained in them, the presaging Commets & fiery exhalations, the Meteors of the middle region, clouds and winds, thunder and lightning, raine, snow, haile, and frosts, whose hidden treasures and true causes none can pry into, but he that made them; the disagreeing elements ioyning in an excellent harmony, for the perfecting of all compound bodies. Neither doth the earth, and creatures therein contained, afford vnto vs lesse matter of Meditation, as trees, plants, and flowers of excellent beauty, and almost infinite variety, growing from silly seeds in outward shew, not differing (many of them) one from another. The excellent workmanship of the brute creatures, the endlessse variety of their inward formes and outward shapes, their qualities and properties, their life, sense, and motions, with the exquisite organs and instruments, every small particle hauing for these purposes their speciall and necessary vse. Their generation, whereby being corruptible in themselves, they become, after a sort, incorruptible in their kinds, after their death liuing in their posterity. Secondly, wee may meditate vpon the prouidence of God, whereby he preserueth all things which he hath created, gouerning and directing them to those ends for which he hath made them, especially that mayne end of setting forth his glory. And that he doth thus rule and dispose, not onely in a generall manner, of all things, but of euery particular, euen such as seeme to bee of least moment, and most casuall and contingent.

Againe, the particular execution of Gods decree, in the creation and gouernment of Angels and men, affordeth vnto vs plentifull matter of Meditation. As the felicity and glory of the blessed Spirits, the Image of God in them; their alacrity and cheerefulness; their speed and diligence in doing Gods will, and in ministring vnto the elect for their preseruatiō, and the furthering of their saluation. The fall and misery of the euill angels, their malice towards God and his elect, and their policy and power in §. Sect. 5.

Of the execution of the Decree in the creation and gouernment.

in seeking their destruction, by drawing them to sinne, which should double our diligence in arming our selues against all their tentations. So also we may haue abundant matter of meditation ministred vnto vs from that which is reuealed in the Scriptures concerning man. As his Creation, whereby God made mans body of the dust of the earth; the Image of God in man consisting in wisdom, righteousness, and true holiness; his felicity in the state of innocency, the immortality and excellency of his soule, the beauty, health and vigour of his body, his dominion over the creatures, the ioyes of Paradise. Likewise in our meditations we may consider, that man continued not in this blessed estate, but fell from it; and that the cause hereof was sinne. Where we take occasion generally to meditate of sinne, what it is, how horrible, grievous, and contrary to Gods pure nature, and how much in this regard hee hateth and detesteth it: the fearefull properties of it, both in respect of the guilt and punishment; temporall, as all the calamities and miseries of this life, and our spirituall seruitude to Satan; and eternall, as the losse of heavenly happinesse, and euerlasting condemnation both of body and soule. More especially, wee may meditate on the fall of our first Parents, what it was, and wherein it consisted, the causes of it outward and inward, and the lamentable effects which followed vpon it. As Gods fearefull curse vpon themselves, and vpon the creatures for their sake, the defacing of his glorious Image in them, the sense of their nakednesse, and terror of conscience accompanying it, the losse of their dominion over the creatures, their thrusting out of Paradise, the visible place of Gods presence, their separation from him, and all other euils both of sinne and punishment. The wretchednesse of all mankind in the state of disobedience and vnbeliefe, by reason of that corruption which followed the fall; as the participation of Adams sinne, guilt and punishment. The propagation of their sinne and misery to all their posterity. Their originall sinne and corruption of nature, both in respect of their soules and bodies. The ignorance and vanity of our mindes, the error of our iudgements, the wickednesse and worldlinesse of all our imaginations; the impurity, stupidity and horreur of our consciences; the losse of our freedome of will in chusing that which is good; their auersenesse and rebellion against the will of God; and pronenesse to all euill; the blockishnesse of our memories to receiue into their keeping any good motions, and their slippery feeblenesse to retaine them; the infidelity, security and hardnesse of our hearts; the corruption and disorder of our affections and passions; the pollution of our bodies, their feeblenesse and lumpish heauinesse vnto any good action. From which root of originall corruption haue sprung all kinds of actuall transgressions, we being made thereby vtterly vnable so much as to thinke a good thought, or to will that which is good. Whereof it commeth to passe, that our best actions in this state of corruption and vnbeliefe, are no better then sinne, how glorious soeuer they seeme to the world. And heere wee may meditate of the seuerall kinds of actuall sinnes; those that are internall, as wicked thoughts, errors in iudgement, forgetfulnesse in our memories, vncleane and carnall lusts: and those which are externall, secret or manifest, raigning or not raigning, of omission or commission, in our words words or deeds, which we haue committed as principals or accessaries. Sinnes of ignorance, or of knowledge, of infirmity and frailty, or of contumacy and rebellion, which wee haue wilfully and presumptuously committed against God. The like matter of meditation the punishment of our sinnes doth minister vnto vs: As namely, that by our sinnes wee haue made our selues subiect to the fearfull wrath of God, the curse of the Law, all the plagues and punishments of this life: As all external miseries which are innumerable; respecting our estate, as pouerty, penury, losses and crosses, or our bodies, as heat, cold, hunger, thirst, sicknesses, and diseases, shortnesse and vncertainty of life and death it selfe. So also the internal miseries of the soule, as terrors of conscience, and griefes of minde; or contrariwise, to be giuen vp of God to our security and hardnesse of hart, infidelity, small impenitency and to a reprobate mind. And finally, the eternall and euerlasting punishments of body and soule in their separation from God, and the vnspcakable torments of hell fire. And finally, we may meditate of the remedilessness of this our miserable condition, in respect of any created helpe of men, Angels, or any creature, as the top and consummation of all our misery, seeing the infinite Iustice of God being offended by our sinnes, would not admit of any finite satisfaction. The which kind of meditations vpon sinne and punishment, serue not only to humble vs before God, by bringing vs vnto a true sense of our sinne and misery, to make vs to deny our selues in the worke of our Redemption, and to fly vnto Christ, but also cause vs to admire and praise Gods mercy and goodnesse, patience and long-suffering, who hath so long borne with vs in the state of infidelity, and hath not inflicted vpon vs all these fearfull punishments which our sinnes haue deserued; yea, to inflame our hearts with most seruent loue towards God, and his Christ, and holy Spirit, who seeing vs in this wretched plight, loaded and defiled with the filth of sinne, and guilty and liable to all punishments and miseries, did pittie vs in this miserable estate, and when there was no other meanes of saluation and deliuerance from all these euils, wrought our freedome and redemption by the death and obedience of the Lord of life.

The which great worke of our Redemption by Christ, doth aboue all other parts of Diuinity, minister vnto vs most plentiful and fit matter for our meditations, as seruing notably to worke in our hearts a true hatred of sinne, to inflame them with Gods loue, to worke them to his feare, to kindle in them the zeale of his glory, to confirme our faith, strengthen our affiance and hope, renew our repentance, and to stirre vs vp to performe with all cheerfulness the duties of a godly life, that by walking before him in holiness and righteousness, we may glorifie him who hath redeemed and made vs his owne at so high a price. Now the poynts which heere affoord vnto vs matter of meditation, are manifold. As first, that it was necessary wee should haue a Sauour and Mediatour betweene God and vs; seeing in his Decree of Election he hath ordained the meanes, as well as the end, and that none but Christ could saue vs, who is the foundation of our Election. In Christ wee may meditate both vpon his person and offices. And in his person, consider both his natures and states, both of humiliation and exaltation. Heere wee haue plentiful and profitable

§. Sect. 6.
Of the great worke of Redemption by our Sauour Christ.

table matter of meditation concerning the Incarnation of Christ, his Conception by the holy Ghost in the wombe of the blessed Virgin, the framing and sanctifying of his humane nature, the assuming and uniting of it to the Diuine nature, by a substantiall vnion, without confusion, separation, or alteration of either nature in their properties. His Birth and Circumcision; and that this Christ borne of the Virgin Mary, is the true Messias. So likewise we may meditate on his Office of Mediatorship; as that he is the alone Mediator betwene God and man. How he was called to his office, and the testimonies of it; of his Baptisme, fasting in the Wildernesse, and Diuine vnction with the Spirit aboue measure. Of the eternity of his Office, and parts of it, being anoynted of God to bee our Prophet, Priest, and King. Of his Prophetick Office, whereby hee hath both outwardly reuealed vnto vs the knowledge of God and his will, and inwardly inlighteneth our minds to conceiue it, by his grace and holy Spirit; and of the confirmation of this doctrine by miracles. Of his Priestly Office, and of his All-sufficient satisfaction for our sinnes. Of his perfect obedience, both active, whereby he hath fulfilled the Law for vs; and passive, whereby he hath suffered all those punishments which were due vnto vs for our sinnes. And this yeeldeth vnto vs most excellent and profitable matter of meditation in all the parts thereof; as his tentations in the Wildernesse by the diuell, the manifold miseries which hee endured, as poverty, hunger, wearinesse, contempt, disgraces, scoffes and bitter taunts, reproches, slanders, reuilings, and such like, which he suffered in the whole course of his life; and those his passions and sufferings a little before his death; as his internall and bitter agony in the Garden, where his wrastring with Gods wrath, and the burthen of his Fathers heauie displeasure for our sinnes, which he had taken vpon him, forced out of his most blessed Body a bloody sweat. And his externall sufferings, as his betraying by his owne Apostle, his apprehension by his cruell enemies, who haled him before the Iudgement seat as a malefactor, who was the Lord our righteousness; falsely accused him, who had committed no sinne, and in whose mouth there was no guile, vniustly condemned him, who was iust and innocent, mocked and scorned him, blindfolded and buffeted him, reuiled and spit vpon him, clothed him with purple, and crowned him with thornes, whipped and tormented him, crucified and killed him. And here we may meditate of this kind of death, which was most bitter and painfull, ignominious and shamefull, accursed and vncomfortable, seeing he suffered not only a bodily death, but the wrath of God, which is the death of the soule, and was vtterly empyred (as the Apostle speaketh) of all diuine comfort, and was as a man forlorne and forsaken of God in his owne sense and apprehension, which made him to cry out vpon the Crosse, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? Thus also wee haue matter of meditation from those things which followed his death; as from his triumph vpon the Crosse ouer the wrath of God, the curse of the Law, Satan, death, hell, and all the enemies of our saluation, in respect of the vertue of his merits. From his descension and buriall, whereby he was held for a time vnder the arrest of death. From those things likewise which were done by him in his state of exaltation; as his Resurrection, rection, mansion vpon the earth for the space of forty dayes, teaching and instructing his Disciples in those things which appertained to his Kingdome. His Ascension, sitting at the right hand of God, and there making intercession for vs. And that which followeth of all these, as the generall effect and fruit of them all, the great worke of our Redemption. So haue we matter of meditation from Christs Kingly Office, by which, sitting at the right hand of his Father, in all glory, maiesty and power, hee reigneth ouer all the world, and more peculiarly, ouer his Church. And heere we may meditate vpon the parts of his Kingly Office, which are his speciall administration, and generall and last Iudgement. In the former, wee may consider the gouernment of his Church, and the abolition of the kingdome of darknesse. In that we may meditate on his calling and gathering of it out of the world, and the consecration of it being gathered by his presence and protection, prouiding for it all necessities, and preserving it from all dangers: where we may take occasion to meditate vpon all Gods blessings and benefits, both temporall, spirituall and eternall, which he hath, and will bestow generally vpon his whole Church, and also vpon those which he hath particularly and in speciall manner vouchsafed vnto vs, both in our preservation from euill, and fruition of good. The abolition of the kingdome of darknes is the ouerthrow and destruction of all his enemies, and especially that grand aduersary, Antichrist, the whore of Babylon.

Morcouer, we may haue plentifull matter of meditation, from the externall meanes of executing the Decree of our Election: As from the Covenant of grace made with vs in Christ, wherein the Lord hath promised that he will be our God, and wee shall be his people; the remission of our sinnes and saluation of our soules, grace and all good things in this life, and euerlasting happinesse in the life to come, vpon the alone condition of faith, which being liuely and effectually, bringeth forth the fruits of vsfained repentance. So also from the meanes whereby this Covenant is administred, namely, the ministry of the Word, and administration of the Sacraments, Baptisme, and the Lords Supper; both which affoord vnto vs plentifull matter of meditation. From the degrees likewise of the executing Gods Decree of Election and Reprobation. As the loue and free grace of God in Christ: and the degrees of the declaration of this loue both in this life, and afterwards. The first degree in this life is our effectually calling, the parts whereof are, our election and separation from the world, Gods donation, giuing Christ vnto vs to be our Saviour, and vs to Christ to be saued by him; and finally, our insition into Christ, and vnion with him. From the meanes of executing this our calling, which is the sauing hearing of the Word, the softening of our hard hearts, making them humble, contrite, penitent and sorrowfull for sinne; which are all preparatiues to our sound conuersion and regeneration, whereby wee who were dead in sinne, are quickened and reuiued by the Spirit of God, effectually applying vnto vs the vertue of Christs death and Resurrection. From the worke of grace thus begun in vs, we may haue much profitable matter of meditation. As of the illumination of our minds with sauing knowledge, of iustifying faith, with the causes, effects, degrees, properties and

6. Sect. 7.
Of the externall
meanes
of executing Gods Decree
of Election.

and signes of it, our iustification by faith in Christ, our reconciliation, and adoption; and manifold other priuiledges of the faithfull, of which I shall haue occasion to speak hereafter. The speciall fruits of faith respecting our Iustification, as our entrance into grace by which wee stand, the loue of God shed abroad in our hearts, confidence, free accessse to the Throne of grace, peace of conscience, ioy in the holy Ghost, and an holy glorying in Gods benefits. The fruits of faith respecting our adoption, as the Spirit of adoption, hope, Christian liberty. So also we haue excellent matter of meditation from our sanctification; the causes, effects, degrees, properties, meanes and signes of it, and from the speciall parts of it, our mortification vnto sinne, and viuification to newnesse of life. From the imperfection of our sanctification, which is but begun in this life, and to be perfected in the life to come, and that by reason hereof the reliques of all sorts of sinne doe still remaine in vs, blindnesse in our mindes, error in our iudgments, impurity in our consciences, forgetfulnesse in our memories, rebellion in our willes, security, impenitency, infidelity and hardness in our hearts, corruption and disorder in our affections, and by reason of all these many sinnes breaking out into our actions. And heere we may meditate of those speciall sinnes and corruptions whereunto our natures are most prone; and wherewith wee are most often ouertaken, and of the meanes whereby we may mortifie and subdue them, that they may no longer beare this sway in vs as in former times. So also wee haue heere occasion to meditate of our begun sanctity in all our parts and actions: of the internall holinesse of our natures, and the change that is wrought in vs by repentance from euill to good, from corruption to grace, the which is to be obserued in all our inward faculties; as the holinesse of our minds and vnderstandings in their spirituall illumination, whereby they become wise and prudent in the things appertaining to God and our saluation; the purging of our consciences from dead works, and their naturall impurity; the sanctity of our memories, whereby they become faithfull Registers of good things; the freedome of our willes in chusing good, and refusing of euill; the suppling, softening, and sanctifying of our hearts; the rectifying, right ordering, purging and renewing of our affections; as loue, hatred, confidence, hope, feare, despaire, ioy, sorrow, anger, zeale, and the rest. The sanctity of our bodies and outward actions, appearing in our new obedience and good workes. The integrity, sincerity, alacrity and constancy of them; the parts of this obedience, which are, the denying of our selues, and the profession of Christ. How we are to deny our selues, namely, by resigning vp our selues wholly vnto God, to be not onely his seruants, but also his souldiers in the Christian warfare; where we may take occasion to meditate of that due preparation which is required to this warfare, and of the Christian armour, and of the conflict it selfe, consisting in the manifold tentations of our spirituall enemies, and our resistance, and of our standing and falling in it. How we are also to deny our selues in taking vp our crosse and following of Christ, bearing with patience whatsoever afflictions hee imposeth; and of the meanes whereby we may attaine vnto it. In respect of our profession of Christ, we are to meditate how we are to carry our selues towards Christ himselfe, himselfe, and how towards his members. How wee are to professe Christ at all times, by inuocation and calling vpon God in his name and meditation. And here we have much profitable matter of meditation concerning prayer, both in respect of the doctrine and vse of it, of which I haue before spoken, and the particular practice of it in the Lords Prayer, of which we may profitably meditate, proceeding from one petition to another. The profession of Christ in time of danger, which is either the profession of the mouth by Christian apologie, or of the fact, by suffering persecution and martyrdome, of which we may meditate, and the meanes whereby we may be prepared and strengthened vnto them. The profession of Christ respecting his members, is our edifying them, by instruction, admonition, exhortation, consolation and good example, or our helping and relieuing them by the workes of mercy and almes-deedes, whereon we may profitably meditate, and of the motiues and meanes whereby we may be stirred vp and inabled to performe them. And finally, our perseuerance in grace, and in all these Christian duties, euen to the very end of our liues, which is the consummation of all the rest, is necessary to be thought vpon, our certainty of it, and by what meanes wee may come to this assurance. And thus wee must meditate on the degrees of Gods executing the Decree of our election in this life. In respect of the life to come, hee executeth it by our glorification, of which we may meditate, as it is begun or perfected. It is begun at the death of the Elect, whereby their soules being separated from their bodies, are receiued into the ioyes of heauen. The which our death is an excellent subiect of meditation; as of the nature of it to the elect, the certainty of it, and vncertainty of the time, of our preparation to it, and meanes whereby we may be armed against the feare of it.

Contrariwise, there is much matter of meditation afforded from the proper meanes of Gods executing the Decree of reprobation in the wicked; as both from the foundation of it, the fall of Adam, and the hatred and wrath of God following vpon it, and also from the degrees of executing this Decree in the wicked and vnfaithfull, which are proper to those which are either called or not called, or common to them both. The former are either hypocrites, or openly prophane. The degrees proper to these are an vneffectuall calling, and their relapse from it into their former wickednesse. Here we may meditate of the degrees of this calling, which are inward illumination of the minde in the knowledge of the truth, worldly and carnall penitence, and sorrow arising from terror and feare, or sense and feeling of punishment; temporary faith, taste of heauenly gifts, and externall reformation of life. Where wee may consider how farre a reprobate may goe in Christianity, and what reall and substantiall differences we can obserue betweene those shewes of graces which are in them, and the truth of them in our selues, that wee may be the better assured of our sincerity and vprightnesse before God. The degrees of relapse in those which are thus vneffectually called, are, first, that they are deceived with sin, and the fraud of their owne deceitfull hearts, from whence their hearts become hardened, and from thence stubbornly peruerse, and so through incredulity not assenting to the truth of Gods

§. Sect. 8.

Of the meanes
of executing
the Decree of reprobation.

Heb. 3. 12, 13.

Rom. 1. 20, 21,
&c.

§. Sect. 9.
Of the eternall execution of Gods Decree
at the end of the world, &c.
2. Pet. 3. 11, 12, 13, 14.

Christ. Warfare 2. part.

Word, they breake out to open prophanenesse, which is in the end accompanied with despaire and finall Apostacie. Vpon all which wee may meditate, that wee may make our owne calling and election sure, by withstanding the first degrees of Apostacie, warching ouer our selues (as the Apostle warneth vs) that we be not hardned and drawne away by the deceitfulnesse of sinne, that there be not found in vs an euill heart of unbelief, in departing from the liuing God. The degrees of executing this Decree in those which are not called, who for the most part are ignorantly superstitious, Idolaters, Pagans, and Atheists, are the holding and detayning of the truth in iniustice, naturall ignorance and vanity of mind, hardnesse of heart, a reprobate minde, and committing of sinne with greedinesse: And the degrees common to both, are their pollution with all sinne and wickednesse in their liues, and their entrance into condemnation at their death, when as their soules being separated from their bodies, are cast in the torments of hell, and pursued with the wrath of God. On all which we may meditate, that we may take occasion to magnifie Gods Iustice towards them in their deserued punishments; and his free grace and vnderferued loue towards vs, who being in the same masse and lump of corruption, are separated from them, and made vessels of honour, that Gods grace and mercy might be magnified in our saluation.

Of the eternall execution of Gods Decree, wee may likewise meditate, which shall be at the end of the world, and is either generall, respecting the whole world, as the destruction of it with flaming fire, which consideration the Apostle Peter maketh a strong motiue vnto godlinesse; that we may be found of God in peace, without spot, and blamelesse; and the renouation and perpetuall conseruation of it; or else the speciall execution of it in the inhabitants of the world, which shall be at the generall Iudgement, and the eternall retribution which followeth it. And heere we may profitably meditate on this Day of Iudgement, when Christ shall come in glory, to iudge both the quicke and the dead, and of the signes of his coming; of the resurrection of the dead, and change of the liuing; of the citation of all before Christs Iudgement seate; and of the diuers sentence which he shall pronounce for the elect, and against the reprobate; and of the blessed estate of the one, and the cursed and miserable condition of the other; of the eternall retribution which shall then bee of rewards to the faithfull, in the full fruition of eternall life and blessednesse, heavenly ioy and perfect glory; of all the parts whereof I haue spoken in another place; and of the retribution of punishment to the wicked in hell torments, both in their soules and bodies. And these are the things whereupon wee may meditate, respecting the actions of God. Now concerning the things which we are to beleue concerning the Church, there is all profitable matter of Meditation. As that there is a Church, called and gathered out of the rest of the world, as Gods owne peculiar people, to worship and serue him according to his will. That there is in this company an holy Communion of Saints, vnited vnto our Head Christ, by his Spirit and a liuely faith, and with one another, as members of the same body, with the bond of faith and loue. That this Church is Catholike, part whereof is Militant on earth, and part of it Triumphant in heauen. That the properties of the Militant Church are to bee either inuisible, which consisteth onely of the elect, or visible, consisting partly of them, and partly of hypocrites; that there are certaine infallible notes of the true visible Church, by which we may discernie it from all others, as the sound preaching of the Word, and the right administration of the Sacraments, in all the essentiall parts of them, according to Christs holy institution; and finally, that there are also infallible notes of the true members, both of this and the inuisible Church of Christ, on which wee may profitably meditate, and by examination apply particularly vnto our selues, that we may know whether we be or no in this number. And these are the things to be beleueed, which we may chuse for the matter of our Meditation. The things which are to be done, are all contained in the Law of God or ten Commandments, vpon which we may meditate seuerally, and on all and euery of the vertues and vices contained in any of them, but especially on those vertues in which we are most defectiue, and on those vices, vnto which our corrupt natures are most inclined; as also on the meanes and helpes whereby wee may be inabled to imbrace and practise the one, and shunne and auoyd the other; and on the signes, whereby wee may vpon due examination know whether or no we be indued with those vertues, and purged from those vices. Of all which, I haue spoken in the former part of this Treatise, vnto which I referre the Reader; or if hee desireth a more full and perfect discourse, vnto that exact and learned abstract of the duties commanded, and sinnes forbidden in the Law of God, written by my right reuerend and deare Brother, to whose labours I acknowledge my selfe most beholding for all the former heads of diuinity, which I haue set downe, as the matter about which our Meditations may be profitably exercised.

ties

And thus haue I shewed what great and abundant matter there is fit for our Meditations; seeing any one of the former generall heads or points being thorowly discoursed on in our minds, and wrought vpon and applied to our affections, according to that forme which I shall afterwards prescribe, is sufficient for one dayes exercise; and many of them will afford plentifull matter for much longer time. And therefore, lest any should now bee as much troubled with plenty, as they were before with want, not knowing what theame or subiect to chuse out of such great variety, and therefore being thus distracted in their thoughts, should let all alone; I will for the direction of such in their choice, propound these rules following. First, that wee ordinarily and most often make choice of such matter, as we finde to be most fit to stirre vp our deuotion, to strengthen our faith, to worke vpon our hearts and affections, to inflame our loue towards God, and kindle our zeale, to confirme our affiance, increase our hope, feare of God, humility and patience, and finally, to inable vs with all cheerefulnesse to performe all the duties of a godly life. To which purpose, wee must rarely chuse such matter as is meereley intellectuall, and fit rather for speculation then for vse and practice (though in truth, there bee few points of sound Diuinity, and scarce any of those before expressed, which being rightly handled in our Meditations, will not afford some fit matter, as well for the sanctifying of our hearts and affections, as for the inlightning of our mindes, and increasing of our knowledge) but such as

§. Sect. 10.

Rules directing vs in the choice of the fittest matter for our Meditations.

hath beene matter of fact, and brought to the vnderstanding by the imagination, and to it by the ministry of the senses; which will more easily and kindly afford matter of Meditation to the most simple, fit to worke vpon their hearts, to inflame their loue, stirre vp their deuotion, and enable them vnto all Christian duties, the which are the mayne ends of this exercise, and not the inlightning of the mind with curious speculations and fruitlesse knowledge. In which regard, when we finde the matter on which we meditate, vnfit for those vses, and relish in it little sweetnesse of spirituall refreshing, or feeble small warmth for the heating of our hearts with loue, zeale, and true deuotion, we need not to insist vpon it, but may passe to some other point, which is more effectually to the atchieving of these ends. Secondly, wee must make choyce of such matter as in our discretion we thinke, not only in it owne nature most excellent, and generally most profitable and necessary, but also such as is fittest for our persons and present state, place, time, and other circumstances. For as those who are inuited to a great and bountifull feast, doe not feed on euery dish, nor alwayes on such as are most costly, and generally esteemed best, but (at least, if they keepe a good diet) make choyce of one or two amongst the rest, which they thinke fittest for their stomakes, and in respect of the present state of their bodies, most likely to bring with delight to their taste, wholesome nourishment for the preserving of their health and strength: so in that great plenty of prouision which I haue made to entertaine my ghests at this spirituall feast, they must not run ouer many things at once, nor alwayes preferre in their choyce, such points as in their owne nature exceed others; but picke out one, or some few which are most fit for their present state and condition, and most likely to yeeld vnto them the best nourishment for the strengthening and preserving of their soules in their spirituall good liking, and better enabling them to all good duties. Lastly, seeing our soules as well as our bodies haue their satiety, by feeding often or much at the same time vpon the same dish, therefore hauing such great plenty set before vs, it shall bee our wisdome to take the benefit of this variety, not feeding ouer often vpon the same dish, which made the Israelites loath Manna it selfe, though a heauenly food, nor too much of any thing at one time, which made their dainty Quailles, through satiety, to come out of their nostrils; but whetting on our appetite by change of diet euery meale; and euen at the same time helping the weakenesse of our stomakes with some little variety, when as we finde them glutted; let vs, when we are weary of meditating ouer-long on one point, insist no longer vpon it, but passe vnto another. Provided alwayes, that wee doe not heerein giue place to fickle inconstancie, nor liberty to our rousing hearts, passing loosely from one thing to another, and not bringing any point to a good issue.

§. Sect. 11.
That we must conclude our preparation vnto Meditation with Prayer.
Iam. 1. 17.

And thus hauing prepared both our persons and matter, the last thing required in our preparation, is, that we conclude it, and make entrance into our Meditation by effectual prayer, for Gods direction and blessing vpon our intended exercise. For seeing of our selues wee are not able so much as to thinke a good thought, but all our grace and goodnesse cometh from God the Father of lights, from whom euery good and perfect gift descendeth;

descendeth; therefore let vs not fondly presume vpon our owne strength, as though we were able to archieue so waightry and difficult a businesse without his ayde; but acknowledging our owne weaknesse and auersenesse to this holy duty, let vs craue the assistance of his holy Spirit, which only can inable vs vnto it. Besides, Prayer and Meditation being of like nature, and fruits of the same regenerating Spirit, are mutuall helpers one to another, Meditation preparing matter for our Prayers, and bringing vnto them seruencie of zeale and heate of deuotion, and Prayer returning againe to our Meditations this borrowed seruour and vigour, when ascending into heaven, it hath fetched it from God. And as the naturall heate and moysture preserue one another, and both faile when one is defectiue, the one perishing for want of heate, and the other for want of nourishment: Or as there is betweene the stomacke and heart, such intercourse, as preserueth them both in their well-being, the stomacke preparing matter and nourishment, for preseruing in the heart the vitall spirits; and the heart returning these spirits againe to the stomacke, which giue it naturall heate and warmth, whereby it is fitted and inabled to make good concoction; so is it betweene Meditation and Prayer, which are mutuall helpers one to another, and neither of both retaine long their vertue and vigour, if either of them doe faile the other. But this Prayer which is to prepare vs for Meditation, is rather to bee pithy and seruent, then long and in many words, seeing it is not the mayne duty which is heere intended, but onely a preparatiue making way vnto it, wherein acknowledging our owne debility and insufficiency, wee are to craue the assistance of Gods holy Spirit, in some such forme as this which followeth. O Lord, my God, who art infinitely good and gracious in thy selfe, and the chiefe Author of whatsoeuer goodnesse there is in me, both as thou mouest me thereunto by thy commandement, and enablest me vnto it by thy holy Spirit, I most humbly beseech thee to pardon my manifold and grievous sinnes, whereby I haue made my selfe vnworthy to approach into thy glorious and holy presence, and vnable to performe any dutie of thy seruice, and purge mee thoroughly from the guilt, punishment and corruption of them all, in the precious blood of Christ, that they may not be as a wall of separation betweene thee and me, to hide thy face, and to stop the sweet influences of thy fauour from me. And seeing thou requirest this dutie which I am now about to performe, and hast inclined my heart to yeld obedience, O thou, who art onely able to bring it to good effect, vouchsafe vnto me the gracious assistance of thine holy Spirit, and thereby inable me to atchieue it in some such manner, as may be acceptable vnto thee, and profitable for mine owne saluation. Inlighten my darkened vnderstanding, that I may rightly conceiue of thy Truth; sharpen mine inuention, strengthen my memory, incline my auerse will to this holy duty, sanctifie, supple, and soften my hard and rebellious heart, and inlarge it with holy and heavenly desires, inflame it with the loue of thee and spirituall things, with seruent deuotion, and with an ardent zeale of thy glory. Rectifie the disorder of my corrupt affections and tumultuous passions; curbe and keepe in my wandring thoughts and rousing heart, and knit them fast vnto thee in the bonds of thy loue and feare, that they may not range after worldly vanities, and distract me in this duty; but grant that they may be so wholly intent to this present exercise, that I may bring it to some profitable and good issue: And so blesse me therein; that I may finde the fruit and benefit of it in mine owne soule, by hauing the point on which I am now to meditate, better cleered to my vnderstanding, for the increasing of sauing knowledge, more thorowly imprinted in my weake memory, that it may bee alwayes ready for vse, and more effectually wrought into my heart and affections, that I may heereby finde my corruptions more subdued and abated, the sauing graces of thy Spirit increased, and my whole man more and more inabled to performe vnto thee with cheerefulnesse and diligence all the duties of a godly life, to the glory of thine holy Name, and the comfort and saluation of mine owne soule, through Iesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

CAP. XIX.

Of our progresse and proceeding in the exercise of Meditation, and what is required therein.

Sect. I.
That we must proceed orderly in this exercise, laying downe the grounds in our vnderstandings and building vpon them in our hearts and affections.

And thus much of our ingresse & preparation to Meditation; the second point propounded, is our progresse & proceeding in the exercise it selfe; wherein we must auoyd disorder and preposterous handling of the point propounded to our Meditation, which is the author of tumultuous confusion, by which being tired, we either breake off the exercise, or continue it without fruit; and contrariwise, proceed in an orderly course, first laying the grounds of this exercise, and then building vpon them. To which purpose we are to know, that there are diuers ends of this exercise, as the enlightning of our minds with sauing knowledge, and the imprinting of it in our memories, which are not the mayne things intended in it, but as helpees and meanes conduce vnto them. For the principall ends at which wee are to ayme, is, that wee may heereby more and more incline our wills, and worke our hearts and affections to the chusing, imbracing, and louing of that good, and the refusing, shunning, and abhorring of that euill, which they come to know more cleerely by this discourse of the vnderstanding, and that we may make good vse of all we know in the whole course of our liues. Notwithstanding, because our wills and affections are but blind faculties; which of themselves cannot tell rightly what to chuse or refuse, affect or dislike; therefore the vnderstanding faculty, which is the eye of the soule, and the chiefe Captaine and Leader of all her forces, must alwayes accompany them for their direction in this exercise of Meditation. So one saith, that there is a two-fold accessse or progresse of contemplation; the one in the vnderstanding, the other in the affection; the one yeelding light, the other heate; the one in acquisition of matter, the other in deuotion. Of which two, the vnderstanding is to haue the precedencie in this exercise, that the will, heart, and affections, may worke by it light, being led and guided, mooued and excited by it, to chuse or refuse, loue or loath, that which it propoundeth vnto them, either good or euill. But yet yet the chief part of our time & strength is not to be spent in the discourse of the vnderstanding, theory, and speculation, but hauing attained hereby to some knowledge of the point in hand, we are chiefly to labour, that wee may work it vpon our hearts & affections, for the increasing of their holines, the inflaming of our loue, stirring vp of our deuotion, and the strengthening and inabling of vs to make vse of that we know, in the practice of it in our liues. In which regard, we are to stint & shorten the discourse of our vnderstanding, that our wills, hearts, and affections may haue more liberty & conueniencie to attaine vnto their maine ends. To which purpose, we must consider, that in this exercise wee principally seeke after goodnesse, which is the object of the will, rather then truth, which is the object of the vnderstanding; and to be made more holy, rather then more learned; vnto which we cannot attaine by the bare discourse of the vnderstanding, seeing simple knowledge of good and euill, doth not make a man better or worse, but the willing and affecting good things, and the nilling and hating of the contrary. Secondly, if wee doe not limit and abridge the discourse of our reason, it will carry vs too farre in our curious disquisition after knowledge, wherein we naturally delight, as the lamentable experience of our first parents hath too plainly taught vs, and the more of that time destinated to this exercise, is spent and taken vp by intellectuall discourse, the lesse remaineth for our chiefeft businesse, which is to be effected by our will and affections. Thirdly, seeing both our Spirits, and also all the powers of our soules are but finite and feeble, therefore the more we spend them in theory and speculation, the lesse ability they will haue in the exercise of our loue and deuotion; euen as the water which issueth from a fountaine, must needs run with lesse force, when as it is diuided into diuers streames. Finally, ieiune and barren contemplation, doth little or nothing nourish the soule, seeing it is not the food it selfe whereby it is cheered, but onely a meanes whereby it is prepared; and as the preparation it selfe of our food doth not nourish the body, but the feeding vpon, digestion, and application of it vnto euery seuerall part; so neither doth the discourse of the vnderstanding and inuention of matter, nourish the soule in any sauing graces, seeing it is not the proper nourishment it selfe, but onely the meanes to prepare it, which being receiued by the will, and digested and applyed by the heart and affections, doth turne to our spirituall nourishment, inflaming vs inwardly with the loue of God, zeale and deuotion, and working in vs the true feare of God, affiance, hope, patience, humility, hatred of sinne, contempt of the world, and all other vertues and sauing graces. And therefore contenting our selues with the simple and plaine vnderstanding of the matter whereon we meditate, and not spending our time in any nice & curious disquisition, let vs imploy the most part of our time and paines, in working thereby our wills, hearts, and affections, to more purity and holinesse, which is the mayne end of this exercise, vnto which, if we attaine not, all our labour is spent in vaine, and will bring vnto vs no spirituall profit. For as those Artificers and Ingeniers, who spend the most of their time in new inuentions and curious deuices, and when they haue found them out, there leaue them, and betake themselves to a new search, no further vsing the old, for the rayfing thereby some profit of their §. Self. 2.

That we must finde out a fit theame, and then discoure vpon it according to the rules of reason.

their inuention; are ranked in the number of noted beggers; and being richest in skill, are about all others poorest in estate: whereas others, who draw all they know into vse, and exercise their skil, though but plaine and small, in their painfull and diligent labours, that thereby they may daily adde something to their state, doe proue rich men, and of farre more worth and credit, then those exquisite and curious Artisans: so is it in this case; those who are most intent vnto curious speculations, and exceed all others in scholasticall knowledge and ieiune contemplations, prouing for the most part meere beggers in the sanctity of the heart and affections, and in the power and practice of deuotion and godlinesse.

Now the right course of proceeding in our meditations in respect of our vnderstandings, is, first, that being assisted with iudgement, they doe by some disquisition and discoure, finde and picke out of the generall stocke, some fit and profitable theame, wherupon we may spend our paines and time allotted to this present exercise. And when they haue pitched vpon it, they are in the next place to distinguish and cleere it from all other things that are of like name, but of a different nature, or hold some similitude and agreement in the generall matter, but are diuers and distinct in their speciall formes. The which distinction in our knowledge, or betweene things knowne, is the mother of cleere vnderstanding and sound iudgement, and inableth vs with much perspicuity to proceed in our discoure. And when we haue gone thus farre, wee must then employ our vnderstanding to finde out some fit definition or description of the theame or matter whereon we meditate; about which wee need not to be curious, struiuing to reach vnto the strict rules of art, but onely to make our conceit in some sort capable of it, and to bring the poynt in hand within the compasse and reach of our vnderstandings. Which when wee haue done, we must further amplifie and enlarge our matter, that yet our minds may more cleerly and distinctly conceiue and comprehend it, and our willes, hearts and affections may afterwards worke vpon, and apply it for better and more plentifull vse, in the inflaming of our loue, and stirring vp our deuotion; by bringing it through the common places of inuention, according to the rules of art, which being but the polishing and perfecting of naturall reason, it will not seeme hard or strange vnto vs, if we haue but the helpe of some good directions and fit examples for our imitation. Now these places of which I speake, are the causes of all kinds, as the efficient cause, procreant or conseruant, principall or instrumentall, the matter of which, and the forme by which it existeth, the finall cause for which it is, and whereunto it tendeth; the effects and fruits of it, the subiect place wherein it is, or the obiect about which it is exercised; the adiuncts, properties, and (as we call them) the apurtenances belonging to it; what things are diuers from it, or opposite or contrary vnto it, either in relation or nature: The things whereunto it may bee compared, either in quantity or quality, and by what similitudes it may be illustrated and made thereby both more easie and familiar, and more fit to make in the memory a deeper impression, and to worke with greater efficacy vpon the heart and affections. The names and titles of it, which being rightly giuen, doe shew the nature of the thing which is called by them.

The

The which are best considered when wee define the thing whereof wee meditate, where beginning with the name of the thing defined, wee may proceed to the parts of the definition. But about all other places, we are to preferre the diuine testimonies of holy Scriptures, which are most effectually for the inlightening of the vnderstanding, the conuincing of the iudgement, the perswading and inclining of the will, and the working of the poynt in hand vpon the heart and affections. In which respect, it is most profitable that we call to our remembrance those places which are fittest for our purpose, to prooue or illustrate the matter in hand, and to apply them for the strengthening and confirming of all the other places of inuention, as proofes of them, orderly proceeding from one to another, in that method and manner before expressed. To all which purposes the testimonies of holy Scriptures are most pregnant, powerfull, and profitable; for howsoeuer humane testimonies are about all other arguments of least authority and efficacy in any art, because their whole strength resteth vpon the credit of men, who are all liars and subiect to erreurs; yet in matters of Diuinity, testimonies of holy Scripture are of greatest validity and authority, and farre about all other arguments and proofes produced by humane reason, seeing they are the Oracles of God, who being truth it selfe, can neither deceive, nor be deceived; and being sufficient to all spirituall vses, will yeeld vnto vs plentiful matter to furnish our meditations, though we were vnable to make vse of the other. Notwithstanding those other helps, by bringing the poynt in hand through all the common places of inuention, especially these testimonies of Scripture being ioyned with all and euery of them, to confirme and strengthen them, are not to be neglected, because they will much further vs in our orderly proceeding, and for the amplifying and enlarging, clearing and prouing the poynt whereon we meditate, and furnishing vs with variety of matter: Yet heere too much curiosity is to be auoyded, in bringing euery poynt through euery head or common place of inuention, because euery theame whereon we meditate will not admit such considerations. As God, infinite in all perfection, and farre about the reach of humane reason, cannot in our meditations of him be brought through the most of those common places, seeing he hath no causes, being sehonah, the cause of causes, and hauing his being in himselfe, giueth being to all things. Neither hath he (if we speake properly) any place, seeing hee containeth all things, and is contained of nothing, nor any accidents or qualities, seeing all his attributes and properties are his Essence; nor any contraries, seeing there cannot be the like reason of things finite, and him that is infinite, and nothing can truly oppose his omnipotent nature, although they doe it in shew and in our weak apprehension; neither can hee be compared in quantity, or quality, seeing he is about all comparison, and nothing is equall or like vnto him: And finally, he is not subiect to any distribution, being a most simple nature and indiuisible, who hath neither Genus, nor species, parts nor members; nor vnto any definition, seeing his infinite nature is vnsearchable; howsoeuer, he may be described by that which he is not, rather then by that he is, though he be the chiefe being, that wee may in some darke manner conceiue of him in our shallow capacity. Besides, there there are other theames which we cannot bring through diuers of these heads without much difficulty, especially the specificall matter and formes, which in most things are vnknowne vnto vs. And therefore our course must be, among many places of inuention, to take those which be- ing most pregnant and profitable, doe with some ease offer themselves to our meditations, as the causes efficient and effects, properties and quali- ties, and not tye our selues too strictly to finde out all, which would ra- ther distract then helpe vs in this exercise. But chiefly aiming in all this discourse of our vnderstanding, at the right vse and maine end of it: which is not curiously to play the Artists, but to spend our time in a reli- gious exercise, for the increase of our deuotion, our enriching with spiri- tuall grace, and for the strengthening of vs vnto all duties of a godly life; when we finde any difficulty in our inuention, or stop in our way, we must passe by it, and thinke of that which is next, and more easie to be found.

§. Sect. 3.

That we are in our medita- tions chiefly to respect our will, harts and affections, our liues and actions.

And thus we are to proceed in the first part of meditation, which re- specteth the discourse of our mind and vnderstanding: The second part respecteth the practique faculties, the will, heart, and affections, the life and actions, vnto which in this exercise we are to haue chiefe regard, that they may thereby be sanctified and nourished in all spirituall graces, and strengthened to the performance of all holy duties, with cheerfulness and delight. Neither is it sufficient, that we do by the former meanes pro- uide plenty of spirituall food, fit for the nourishment of our soules, vn- lesse we also feed vpon it, and apply it vnto them for their speciall vse. It is not enough that wee prepare abundant meanes and matter for our spi- rituall good, vnlesse wee fit and apply them to those ends and vses for which we did prepare them, whereof if wee faile, all our former labour will be vaine and fruitlesse. For as it doth not auaille a man, for the preser- uation and comfort of his life, that his granaries and store-houses are full of all good prouision, no not to haue his table thoroughly furnished with all variety of meats, if he doe not feed vpon them; nor to haue his chests and wardrobe full of apparell, if he doe not put them on, nor (miser-like) to hoord vp treasures in abundance, and neuer conuert them to vse, nor imploy them for the reliefe of his necessity, and comfort of his life: so it will not profit vs at all for the nourishing, strengthening and refreshing of our soules, to make prouision in all kinds, and to lay it vp in the store- house of our minds and memories, if it be not applied to our hearts and affections, which are the most essentiall and vitall parts of a true Christi- an, that they may nourish and comfort them, and make them actiue and able to performe with cheerfulness, all holy duties of a Christian life. To which purpose there is further required, after we haue by the discourse of our vnderstandings, cleared and enlarged the matter whereon wee medi- tate, with much variety, that we now labour to bring all which wee haue thought vpon, by speciall application to our owne particular vse, and to worke and inforce it vpon our hearts and consciences, that they may haue a liuely taste, and thorow sense and feeling of it, stirring vp our affec- tions, according to the nature and quality of the matter, either to holy loue or hatred, to admiration or contempt, joy or sorrow, hope or feare, desire or abhorring, confidence or shame, and so in the rest. Thus if the subject matter of our meditation be good, both in it owne nature, and vnto vs, we are by considering the Authour and end of it, the beauty and excellency, the profit and benefit, the necessity of hauing it, and the misery of wanting it, to worke it into our hearts, by inflaming them with the loue and desire of it, by stirring them vp with admiration in their pursuit, and ioy in their fruition, by affecting them with hope of obtaining them, either in respect of matter or degree, and with care and feare of losing or lessening them. But if it be euill and wicked, wee are, by considering the causes and fountaine from which it springeth, the pernicious ends whereto it tendeth, the mischieuous effects which it produceth, the deformity and baseness, the losse and misery, vnprofitableness and maliciousnesse of it, to worke our hearts to a further detestation and lothing, to a contempt, auersion and abhorring of it, if by the tentations of our spirituall enemies it be pressed vpon vs, or to shame and sorrow, if they bee tainted with it, and haue giuen it admission. Neither must we content our selues with weake motions in this kind, but wee must labour to worke in our hearts seruent affections, and such as discouer much zeale and deuotion; not thinking it enough to taste of these spirituall meates which the discourse of our vnderstandings hath set before vs, and so to leaue them (as it were) standing vpon the table, without receiuing by them any further benefit; but we must hunger and thirst after them with longing and earnest desires, we must labour to haue a thorow sense and feeling of their comfortable sweetness, yea wee must swallow them downe and digest them, not so much in our stomackes, as in the ventricles of our hearts, to increase the vitall spirits of our soules, which may inable vs to liue the life of grace, and make vs fit and vigorous for spirituall motion. And the more we finde our selues affected with these spirituall delicacies; and the more sweetness and benefit we relish in them, the more earnestly must we still stirre vp our affections to goe on in this spirituall pursuit, setting vp (as it were) all our sailes, when wee haue got a prosperous gale; and when we are come to a good veyne in this golden mine, we must not bee satisfied when wee haue made an entrance, but dig into it further with more diligence, incouraging and comforting our selues in this delightful labour with these first good beginnings.

But what if we cannot, after some good indeuour, feele the sweetness of this exercise? yet we must not be discouraged and giue it ouer, but vse all good meanes to recouer our taste and spirituall appetite; seeing the cause of the defect is in their indisposition, and not because this spirituall food wanteth sweetness. And seeing it is not a matter intellectuall and subject to the discourse of the mind, but rather of sense and practice, caused by a secret fitting and application of it to the object, which is principally done by the Spirit of God, working in our hearts, and instrumentally by a liuely faith; therefore we are not to labour so much to stirre vp our affections, that we may relish this sweetness by discourse of reason, which worketh little vpon the sense and appetite, and much lesse by vehement agitation of the body and outward parts to draw on passion, like Actours vpon a Stage, as some haue foolishly prescribed, but applying the

§. Sect. 4.
That we must not be discouraged, though we cannot at the first feele the fruit of our meditations.

Lam. 3. 26.

Habak. 2. 3.

§. Sect. 5.

Of the meanes whereby we may feele our hearts affected with a liuely taste and sense of the things whereon we meditate.

the poynts whereon we haue discoursed by faith, let vs labour to gaine the relish and taste of sweetnesse in them, rather by prayer then by arguments. Neither let this discourage vs and interrupt our exercise, but let vs, submitting our selues to the good will and pleasure of God, wait his leisure with meeknesse and patience, expecting when he will be pleased to descend into our hearts by his holy Spirit, to moue and excite our affections, as sometime the Angell into the Poole, that hee might trouble the waters. According to that in the Lamentations; It is good that a man should both hope, and quietly waite for the saluation of the Lord. Which if wee doe, we shall assuredly finde the fruit of our labour. For as the Prophet speaketh of vision, so may I of this spirituall visitation; It stayeth but for the appointed time, but at the end it shall speake comfort to our hearts and not lye. Though it seeme to tarry, wait for it, because it will surely come, it will not tarry. Yea, if we be not discouraged with this delay, but continue our exercise in obedience to God, labouring to performe it as we are able, when we cannot doe it in such perfection as we would, the Lord when hee cometh to visit our hearts, will bring in his hand double wages, rewarding both our obedience and duty, and also our faith and patience, by filling our hearts with spirituall comforts, quickening their appetite, and replenishing them with holy affections. So that though (like greene wood) they are not presently inflamed, but need much blowing before they can be thorowly kindled, yet if wee continue, they will, through Gods blessing, recompence our labour, seeing at the last their heate will exceed and bring vnto vs more lasting comfort, then if they had (like wood that is seare) been quickly kindled with much lesse labour.

And thus we see how we are to haue our hearts affected with a liuely taste, sense and feeling of the things whereon wee meditate: now the meanes whereby we may haue it wrought in vs are diuers. First, we must examine our selues in the court of conscience, according to the rule of Gods Word, how we haue profited and thriuen in those graces, and in the practice of those duties, or how we haue been tainted with those corruptions, and how farre forth we haue been guilty of those sinnes whereon we haue meditated; what defects in those graces and duties doe still remaine in vs, or in the full and perfect mortification of our vices, and reformation of our liues, by leauing and forsaking of those sinnes which in our meditations we haue thought vpon. By which examination (as wee shall afterwards shew more at large) we shall come both to a true sight of our graces and holy duties in which wee haue profited, and of the progresse which wee haue made in the mortification of our corruptions, which will affect our hearts with vnfeined thankfulness vnto God, by whose grace and assistance we haue been inabled hereunto, and with the feruent loue of him who hath been so gracious vnto vs, and with a liuely sense and feeling of our spirituall wants, and of those corruptions and sins which yet adhere vnto vs, that we may be truly humbled in the sight and feeling of our wants and imperfections, and labour to come out of them by hearty repentance. Secondly, when by this examination wee haue come to a true sight of our wants and weaknesses, and haue affected our hearts with a true sense of them, wee must make an humble acknowledgement ment of them vnto God and our owne soules, laying open our wants like distressed suiters, before him who is only able to supply the, & our spiritual wounds of sinne, and putrified sores of corruption, before the Physician of our soules, who is All-sufficient, and willing to heale and cure them. With which humble confession our hearts will bee affected with a more thorow hatred of all our sinfull corruptions, and with longing desires to haue all our wants supplied, and also with true comfort, and inward ioy in the assurance of their remission, and the satisfying of our desires, seeing if we acknowledge our sinnes, he is faithfull and righteous to forgie them, if we humble our selues, he will exalt vs; and if seeing our owne emptinesse, we hunger and thirst after grace and righteousness, he will fill and replenish vs. Thirdly, there must follow vpon this a lamentable complaint in respect of the grace wherein we are defective, and the corruption and sin which doth yet adhere and cleaue vnto vs, not so much in regard of any euill of punishment accompanying them, from which we are deliuered through Gods mercy, and Christs merits, as because we haue by them offended and dishonoured our great and glorious God, who hath been so gracious to forgie them. The consideration whereof must affect our hearts not onely with mournfull sorrow, which must breake out into these bitter complaints, but also with an holy anger against our selues, which must shew it selfe by expostulating the matter with our soules, by aggravating our sinnes and wants, and by rebuking their sloth and sluggishnes in neglecting the meanes which the Lord hath plentifully afforded vs for the mortifying of the one, and supplying of the other. Fourthly, vpon this sight and sense of our wants and sinnes, and complaint of our distresse and misery in regard of them, there must follow a vehement and passionate wish, whereby we are to expresse the seruency and earnest longing of our desires, to haue that grace supplied or increased wherein wee finde our defect, and that vice and sinne pardoned and mortified which wee feele still cleauing vnto vs; crying out with Dauid in a patheticall manner, O that my wayes were so directed, that I might keepe thy statutes! And againe, My soule breaketh, for the longing that it hath to thy iudgements at all times. And with the Apostle Paul, O wretched man that I am, who shall deliuer me from the body of this death? The which wishes and longing desires will affect our hearts with much comfort in assurance of fruition, seeing the Lord hath promised to satisfie the desires of those that feare and serue him. Fifthly, vpon this must follow an vtter deniall of our selues and our owne strength, and an humble acknowledgement of our impotency and insufficiency, either to supply the defect of that good thing which wee desire, or to remoue that euill, and subdue that corruption, which though we hate, doth notwithstanding stil adhere and cleaue vnto vs, confessing with the Apostle, that we are not sufficient as of our selues so much as to think a good thought, and that whatsoever sufficiency there is in vs, wee haue receiued from the Lord, who alone worketh in vs both to will and to doe. The which acknowledgement, being made with humble hearts and broken spirits, is most necessary and profitable; for to whom should we acknowledge our impotency and weaknesse, rather then vnto him who is able to manifest his power in our infirmities, and to giue vs such spirituall abilities, that we

1. Iob. 1. 7.
1. Pet. 5. 6.
Luk. 1. 53.

Psal. 119. 5. 20.

Rom. 7. 24.

Psal. 145. 19.

2. Cor. 3. 5.

1. Cor. 4. 7.
Phil.

2. Cor. 12. 9.

Phil. 4. 13.

shall bee inabled to doe all things which hee requireth, through the power of him that strengtheneth vs. Sixthly, after this humble confession must follow earnest Petition, whereby we must craue with all seruency at the hands of God, that he wil so assist vs with his grace and holy Spirit, and blesse vnto vs all good meanes which wee vse for the increasing of that vertue in which we are defectiue, and for the strengthening of vs to that good duty, vnto which in our selues we finde an ytter disability, or for the mortifying of that vice and corruption, which in our owne strength wee are not able to subdue and ouercome; attributing vnto him the glory and praise of his owne power and all-sufficiency, whereby he is able; and of his goodnesse, loue, and truth, wherby he is ready & willing to supply by himselfe whatsoeuer is wanting and defectiue in our abilities. The which seruency of our suits, we must in sincerity of heart inforce with all importunity, vrging and aggrauating our owne impotency and need of Gods helpe, and his sufficiency to doe what we desire, and truth, wherby he hath bound himselfe to performe it. Lastly, out of the consideration of this all-sufficiency and truth of God, we must raise vp our soules which were humbled in the sight and sense of our wants, and impotency to supply them, with firme confidence, & breaking thorow all doubts and difficulties, assure our selues that God, who is so able and true of his Word, will graciously grant these things which he hath commanded vs to aske; and that as he hath enlarged our hearts with hearty loue and seruent desires, after the more full fruition of that good, or freedom from that euill whereon we haue meditated, so he will perfect his owne good worke, replenish that roome which himselfe hath prepared, and satisfie those holy desires, vvhich by his good Spirit he hath wrought in vs. Which confidence may mooue vs to reioyce in the Lord, and to glory after an holy manner in the assurance of our victory ouer our corruptions, and of our fruition of those graces, wherein as yet we are defectiue and imperfect.

§. Sett. 6.
Of the egressse and conclusion of our Meditation.

The last point to be considered in this exercise of Meditation, is our egressse and conclusion, which must not be sudden and abrupt, seeing this were neither comely nor profitable, but deliberate and by degrees. And as Oratours prescribe in the Art of Rhetoricke and elocution, that wee should begin with a low voyce, quiet affections, and action, and so rising by degrees till we come to our highest pitch of extension and earnestnesse, both of inward and outward motion, not to breake off abruptly in this height, but remitting both voyce, affection, and action, by degrees: so must we doe in this case; for hauing begun our Meditation in intellectuall discourse, with quiet mindes and calme affections, and raised them to that height of seruencie and deuotion, whilest we haue laboured to attaine vnto a liuely sense and feeling of spirituall taste, in the matter whereon wee haue meditated, we must not make an abrupt conclusion, but with some remission of our former seruour, compose our minds and hearts to their former quietnesse and calmnesse. And first, we must cast backe the eye of our minds to reuiue our former exercise, and to examine how wee haue performed it, and what fruit and benefit our hearts and soules haue felt and tasted in it. And if we find that it hath well succeeded, we are to congratulate with our owne soules, in the ioyfull fruition of so great a blessing, and to giue the whole glory to God, by whose helpe onely we haue so well prospered in this exercise; rendring vnto him with cheerefull hearts, all praise and thanksgiuing, for the gracious assistance of his holy Spirit, whereby he hath directed vs in our course, inlightned our mindes, confirmed our memories, inflamed our hearts and affections with his loue and true deuotion, giuing vnto them a liuely taste and feeling of spirituall comfort, in the things whereon wee haue meditated. The which our thanksgiuing we may enlarge from the subiect matter of our Meditation, as if it be some point of doctrine, for inlightning our minds in the knowledge of that truth, and inflaming our hearts with the loue of it; if it bee some grace and vertue, for reuealing the beauty, excellency, profit, and necessity of it to our vnderstandings, for causing vs to imbrace and loue it with our hearts and affections, and for working it in some measure in vs by his Spirit; if it be a duty, for teaching vs his wayes, and inabling vs to walke in them; or if it be a vice and sinne, for discouering to our mindes, the deformity, haynousnesse, and danger, and working our hearts to a true loathing and detestation of it. But if we haue found many wants and weaknesses in the performing of it, as dulnesse, and blindnesse of minde, wandering thoughts, and worldly distractions, coldnesse of deuotion, deadnesse of affection, and by reason heereof, little taste of sweetnesse, and of the fruit of all our labour, wee are to craue pardon at Gods hands, and to bee humbled in the sight and sense of our owne weaknesse and corruption. And then labouring to finde out the causes of this vntowardnesse, let vs resolute to vse our best meanes to remooue them against the next time, that wee may performe this exercise with more fruit and benefit. Finally, we may conclude this whole exercise, by recommending our selues, our soules and bodies into the hands of God, which some Writers on this Argument doe call oblation or offering, whereby wee consecrate and deuote our selues wholly vnto God, desiring no longer to liue vnto the world or our owne flesh, but vnto him, that we may doe him seruice, and in all things please him; denying our owne wills, that they may bee submitted vnto his, and craving his protection against all enemies who would hinder vs in this our resolution, and direction and assistance in the whole course of our liues, that all our thoughts, words, and actions, may bee suteable and answerable, both to our generall profession of Christianity, and to those conceits, desires, and resolutions which wee haue expressed in our last Meditations. And so reposing our selues with holy and quiet security, vpon the care and prouidence of our gracious Father, wee may profitably conclude this exercise, by singing to Gods praise some part or verse of Dauids Psalms, suteable to our present disposition, or the subiect matter of our former Meditation.
and

CAP. XX.

An example and patterne of Meditation, the subiect matter whereof is true and vnfained repentance.

6. Sect. 1.
The reason of this choice:
what repentance is, and the causes thereof.

Luk. 24. 37.

HAuing thus set downe the doctrine of Meditation, it now followeth, that I propound an example of it, according to the former rules and directions. Where first we are to make choyce of the subiect matter whereon wee purpose to meditate, and then to discourse of it with our vnderstanding, and to feele the vertue and efficacie of it in our hearts, the which must be done in a Soliloquie between vs and our soules, or rather of the soule to it selfe, after this manner: Now that thou hast (O my soule) sequestred thy selfe from all society, that thou mayest haue some secret conference betweene thee and thy selfe, in the alone presence of God and thine owne conscience; make choyce of some fit subiect whereon thou mayest spend thy paines and time with most profit for thy spirituall good, that laying a good foundation, thou mayest erect thy building with more ease and fruit. And what fitter matter, vpon this present occasion canst thou chuse to thinke vpon, then vpon that excellent grace and duty of repentance, which is the first beginning of a godly life, and after it is begun, accompanieth it vnto the end, as a chiefe agent in all this worke? Vpon what better argument canst thou meditate then vpon this, which the Prophets and Apostles haue so much beate vpon? yea, which our Sauour Christ himselfe thought so necessary and profitable, that he did not onely make it the subiect of his owne Sermons, but being to ascend, commended it at his last farewell to his Apostles, as the chiefeest theame, next vnto faith, vpon which hee would haue them to preach in his Name. A duty that belongs vnto all, and is neuer vnseasonable; alwayes necessary: An Euangelicall grace and chiefe fruit of faith, in which it liueth, without which it is dead. So that as faith is the life of our soules, by applying Christ vnto vs, in whom we liue, so repentance, in respect of our sense and feeling, which can no otherwise iudge of the hidden roote, but by the outward fruit, is the life of this life. As faith is the onely condition of the Couenant of grace, which assureth vs of all good things temporall and eternall; so repentance as a counter-bond, assureth vnto vs this assurance, &c by a sensible infallibility & outward euidence, perswadeth vs that we performe this condition of beleeuing in Christ, and apprehending all the promises by faith vnfained. Now that thou mayest (O my soule) proceed in some order, what is this repentance, but an Euangelicall and sauing grace of God, wrought in thine heart by his holy Spirit, applying by faith (as by his instrument) Christ and all his benefits, which inflaming thine heart with seruent loue, doth make thee looke vpon him whom thou hast peared, to bewaile thy sinnes, as the chiefe causes of his death, to hate and forsake them, and to turne vnto God, offering vnto thee grace and pardon, by amendment of life, and bringing forth the fruits of new obedience. So that it is a grace and free gift, and no naturall endowment which commeth by inheritance, or else procured by thine owne purchase. It is the gift of God, who giueth vnto vnto thee all good things. It is a gift of his free grace, preventing thee when thou didst neuer so much as thinke of it, by putting into thy mind the profit and necessity of it, and into thy heart some desire of receiuing it, preparing and fitting thee for it, by the preaching of the Law, working humiliation, contrition, and legall sorrow, and fitting thy mind and will, that they might consent and obey the motions of the Spirit, outward in the Word, and inward in the heart and conscience; working it first in thee, by changing the mind and heart, and turning them from sinne, vnto holinesse and righteousnesse, co-working with thee, that thou mayest continue, renew, and increase in the practice of it, and perfecting thy repentance, in the parts and degrees of it which himselfe begun. It is hee that calleth vs to repentance, and inableth vs to repent. He striketh our stony hearts, and maketh them to relent by sound contrition, before these rocks will yeeld any waters of true repentance. It is he that powreth the Spirit of grace vpon the house of Iudah, before they can lament for their wickednesse, and that giveth repentance to the house of Israel, and with it remission of sinnes. Thou canst not turne vnto him (O my soule) before hee first turne vnto thee, nor weepe bitterly with Peter, till hee thaw thy frozen heart, by reflecting vpon thee the beames of his gracious countenance. Yea, when he turneth, thou canst not turne, till hee turning his face, turne also thine heart, as it is running away with feare, and neuer looking backe, that thou mayest behold his gracious countenance, promising nothing but good, and his stretched out Arme, to receiue thee vnto grace and fauour. Surely (saith the Church) after I was turned, I repented, and after that I was instructed, I smote vpon my thigh. No man can sorrow for his sinnes, nor resolute to forsake them, but hee that hateth them, nor any hate them, but they who loue God, nor any loue him, whose hearts hee first inflameth not, by shewing abroad his loue in them by the holy Ghost, which hee giveth vnto vs. Neither doth he worke alone, but together with his Sonne and holy Spirit. For it is the blood of this Lambe of God, which worketh our adamantine hearts to this relenting softnesse, and the water which issued out of his pierced side, which being beheld with the eye of faith, doth draw out of our eyes, the brinish waters of repentant teares. And therefore because he is the Author of our repentance, both as hee procured it by the meritorious vertue of his death, and worketh it by his blood-shed applied by faith, he inioyneth his Apostles to preach repentance in his Name. Finally, it is the oyle of the holy Spirit, which suppleth and softneth our hard and stony hearts; It is this diuine fire, which warming our cold hearts with the flame of Gods loue, and the hot blood that issued from our Saviour, causeth them to send vp into our heads these salt, yet sweet waters of vsained repentance, which distill by our eyes, and in trickling teares drop from our cheekes. This winde of the Spirit must blow vpon vs, yea must blow into vs, before wee can returne vnto God one sigh to expresse our sorrow for our sinnes. And therefore (O my soule) seeing God is the principall cause of thy repentance, rob him of no part of his due, but ascribe vnto him the whole glory of his owne worke. Which though hee could effect by his sole immediate power, yet hee is pleased to vie in it many subordinate causes, meanes, and instruments, by which he worketh

Ezek. 11. 39.
 & 36. 26.
 Zach. 12. 10.
 Acts. 5. 31.
 & 11. 18.
 2. Tim. 3. 35.

Ier. 31. 19.
 Lam. 3. 21.

Rom. 5. 5.
 1. Iob. 4. 19.

Luk. 24. 47.

AII. 26. 18.

1. Cor. 4. 15.

AII. 17. 30.

Esa. 55. 7.

Psal. 119. 71.
Luk. 13. 1, 2, 3.
Rom. 2. 4.

§. Sect. 7.
Of the matter,
forme, & parts
of repentance,
and first, of humiliation.

2. Cbro. 7. 14.

Joel 2. 11, 12.
AII. 26. 20.

Esa. 58.

2. Cor. 7. 10, 11.

this grace in thee: As ministeriall and helping causes, namely, the Ministers of the Word, who in this worke are co-labourers with Christ, sent by him to open mens eyes; and to turne them from darkenesse to light, and from the power of Satan vnto God, that they may receiue forgiveness of sinnes, and inheritance, among them that are sanctified by faith in Christ, in which respect, they are called spirituall fathers, begetting them to God by the seed of the Word. So likewise instrumentall causes, which are inward, precedent, and immediate, as sauing knowledge, shewing the way to repentance, a liuely faith, vnfaigned loue, and true feare of God, both in respect of his mercies and iudgements, especially the last and generall iudgement at the end of the world; or else outward, which either lead and draw, or else mooue and perswade vs to repentance. Of the former sort are many instruments and meanes to bring vs to it. As the Ministry of the Word; and first, the preaching of the Law, which prepareth vs for it, and of the Gospel which worketh it in vs, by assuring vs, that if wee will turne to the Lord, he will haue mercy vpon vs, and forgie vs our sinnes. So also crosses and afflictions, either vpon our selues or others; Gods blessings and benefits, either promised or bestowed. The moouing and perswading causes are innumerable; as the loue of God towards vs, his patience and long suffering, his truth in his promises, and all sufficiency in performance, the profit of it in this life, seeing it bringeth with it peace of conscience, and ioy in the holy Ghost, and maketh way for our eternall saluation in the life to come; the necessity of it, seeing without it nothing can saue vs, with it no sinne can condemne vs, being an inseparable fruit of faith, which is the alone condition of all promised happinesse, &c. And these with many other, are the causes (O my soule) which all concurre together to worke thy heart vnto vnfaigned repentance, which being in themselves so powerfull and preualent to produce this effect, will leaue thee quite without excuse, if they be not effectuell to this end.

And now (my soule) that thou seest the efficient causes of repentance, consider also the matter and forme of it, as they meet together in the parts thereof, which are humiliation, and godly sorrow for thy sinnes, and turning vnto God by reformation and amendment, the former part more directly expressing the matter, the latter, the forme of thy repentance. And both these the Scriptures conioyne in this one worke. For thus Salomon speaketh of it, when they shall humble themselves, and turne from their euill wayes; and Joel exhorteth the people to turne vnto the Lord with weeping, to rend their hearts and not their garments, and to turne vnto the Lord. Howsoever in many places they name but one of them, and thereby vnderstand the other. And therefore (O my soule) see that thou disioyne not those things which thy God hath ioyned together: content not thy selfe with such a sorrow, as bringeth forth no amendment, which was reiected in Abab, Iudas, Cain, and the people of the Iewes; for these teares, like filthy waters, doe but the more pollute thee, and this worldly sorrow, proceeding not from hatred of sinne or loue of God, but from selfe-loue and feare of punishment, causeth death, and is a sorrow which must be sorrowed for: nor yet vwith such an amendment, vvhich ariseth not from sense of sinne and godly remorse and sorrow for it, vvhich vvas the repentance of Herod,

vwho

who is said to haue done many things according to the Baptists doctrine and direction; but not to haue sorrowed for sinne past, as hee obeyed for the present; of Iudas, who was outwardly reformed as the other Apostles, but neuer truely and thorowly humbled; and so of Demas, and many ciuill worldlings and temporaries, who in many things change their course from euill to good, but haue no change of their hearts grounded vpon vnfained contrition and humiliation. But what is this, but to build without a foundation, and to dismember and destroy this perfect body, by pulling one part from another? And therefore (my soule) ioine these parts in thy repentance; lay first the foundation, and then build vpon it; bewaile thy sinnes with bitter griefe, and then forsake them in heart and action, and turne to thy God in amendment of life. Now vnto this humiliation, thou must first be prepared by the Law, which like a Schoole-master whippeth thee, and maketh thee to cry out in the sense of thy sinnes, and the curse due vnto them, and vtterly to deny thy selfe and thine owne righteousness, as altogether insufficient to satisfie Gods Iustice; and then it must be wrought in thee by the Gospell, which reuealeth vnto thee the perfect righteousness and obedience of thy Sauour Christ, by which his Iustice being fully satisfied, his wrath also is appeased, the pardon of thy sinnes, if thou bathe thy selfe in the blood of Christ, by the hand of faith, and assureth thee that thou art reconciled vnto God, and become his child by grace and adoption. The which will make thee to melt and resolute into teares of vnfained sorrow for thy sinnes, whereby thou hast displeased so gracious a Father, which godly griefe will cause repentance not to bee repented of. And this is that sound humiliation which the Scriptures doe so often call for; which thou mayest discerne, if it be truely in thee, by diuers signes that alwayes accompany it; For the object of it is not punishment chiefly, but thy sinne, and not sinne as it stingeth and tormenteth thy conscience, but as it is an offence which hath displeased thy God, causing thee to say vnto him with Dauid, Take away my sinne, and purge me from my guilt; and not with Pharaoh, Let my sinne alone, but take away this plague. It alwayes causeth thee to draw neerer vnto God, that thou mayest begge and obtaine pardon, and not to flee from him to escape his punishing hand. It worketh repentance and reformation of those sins which we bewaile, and not (like children) to lye still and cry; It is a willing and free-will offering of thine heart, in which, as God is delighted, so is it pleasing and sweet vnto thee, causing thee to lift vp thine head with hope and comfort, when thou art thus humbled, and to reioyce in such sorrow; and is not pressed out of thee by the waight of Gods wrath, the curse of the Law, or smart of punishment. The effects of this thy humiliation, is, that it driueth thee to God by prayer, wherein thou humbly acknowledgest thy sinnes, accusing thy selfe for them, as liable to the curse, by reason of their guilt, aggravating them by many circumstances, condemning thy selfe as worthy of all punishments temporall and eternall, iustifying Gods righteous iudgement, if he should impose them, magnifying his mercy with the repentant Church, if hee spare thee in any, and doe not vtterly consume thee. After which confession, there followeth an humble and earnest suite for pardon and remission, wherein thou must with Dauid cry out vnto thy God;

Hos. 6. 1.

Psal. 51. 17.

Lamen. 3. 22.

Psal. 51. 1, 2.

§. Sect. 3.

Of the second part of repentance, which consisteth in conversion and amendment.

God; Have mercy vpon me, O Lord, according to thy louing kindnesse; according to the multitude of thy tender mercies, blot out my transgressions; wash mee thorowly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sinne.

The second part of thy repentance (O my soule) is thy conuersion and amendment, whereby thou turnest from thy sinnes vnto God, desiring and endeavouring to serue and please him in newnesse of life; the things from which thou must turne (O my soule) are thy sinnes, yea from all thy sinnes, great and small, none being so great that they need to discourage thee, seeing they are incomparably exceeded by Gods infinite mercies, and the All-sufficient merits of thy Sauour; nor any so small, that thou shouldest neglect amendment, seeing the least bring euerlasting death, if they be not washed away with the blood of Christ, who also dyed for them as well as for the greatest. Or if there bee any difference in thy conuersion from thy sinnes (O my soule) it must be in leauing those sinnes with greatest hatred and detestation, which thou hast formerly embraced with greatest loue, seeing by them thou hast most dishonoured and displeased thy God, and wounded thine owne conscience. The other part of thy conuersion is, that thou turne vnto the Lord, that thou maist serue and please him in newnesse of life; according to that of the Prophet, O Israel, if ye returne, returne vnto me, saith the Lord: for it is not enough that thou cease to be the seruant of sinne, vnlesse thou become a seruant of righteousness; nor to be vnblameable before men, vnlesse thou be holy before God; nor to abstaine from euill, vnlesse thou doest good; nor to keepe thy selfe from mis-spending thy Lords Talent, vnlesse thou doest by vie increase it to thy Masters aduantage. And as in thy returning there is a change in the object, from (not some, but) all euill; not to some onely, but all good; so if it be sound and sincere, it is also to bee plainly discerned in the subiect or person that returneth, and in the change of all his faculties and actions. And therefore if thou truly repentest (O my soule) there is a change in thy mind, from the darknesse of ignorance, to the light of knowledge; from error, to truth; in thy conscience, from dead workes, to purity; in thy will, refusing that euill which formerly it embraced, and embracing that good which in time past it reiected; in thy heart, from hardnesse to tendernes; from security and impenitency, to true repentance; from the loue of sinne, to the loue of God and all goodnesse for Gods sake; from lothing of spirituall things, to hating of carnall; and so in the rest of thy affections and passions. If thy repentance be sincere, it beginneth inwardly in thee (my soule) and proceedeth to the outward parts; it beginneth in feruent desires, proceedeth in good resolutions and earnest endeouours, and sheweth both in our holy and righteous actions, throughout the whole course of our liues and conuersations. And howsoeuer it is imperfect in respect of degrees, seeing we can neuer sufficiently, whilest we liue heere, bewaile and forsake our sinnes, nor serue the Lord in holinesse and righteousness, in any such perfection as the Law requireth; yet if thou doest truly repent (O my soule) there is a perfection of integrity, whereby thou labourest to serue and please thy God in renouncing all sinne, and embracing all righteousness, and in the purifying of all thy powers and faculties, outward and inward, from corruption to holinesse.

Ephes. 4. 23, 24.

lineſſe. And theſe are the parts of thy repentance (O my ſoule) containing in them the matter and forme.

The finall cauſes and ends of it, are firſt, that God may be glorified in the acknowledgement of thy finnes, and may be iuſtified in his righteouſneſſe when he iudgeth, and magnified in his mercies, when being guilty of ſinne, and condemned in thy ſelfe, yea by thy ſelfe, hee pardoneth all thy finnes, and iuſtifieth thee in the righteouſneſſe and obedience of Ieſus Chriſt. Secondly, when out of the ſame grace and goodneſſe hee freeth thee from, not onely the guilt, but alſo from the puniſhment of all thy finnes, his iuſtice being ſatiſfied by Chriſts ſufferings and obedience. Thirdly, that being freed from ſinne, and become the ſeruant of righteouſneſſe, thou ſhouldeſt glorifie and pleaſe God in the whole courſe of thy life, by mortifying thy finnes, and ſtudying to ſerue him in thy new obedience. Finally, that thou maiſt hereby be aſſured of Gods ſauour in this life, and of euerlaſting happineſſe in the life to come, and haue the peace and comfort of both in thine owne conſcience. The effects and fruites of thy repentance are the inward purity and ſanctity of thee (my ſoule) from the pollution of ſinne in all thy powers and faculties, and thy exerciſe of theſe inward graces, in the duties of piety towards God, of righteouſneſſe and charity towards thy neighbours, and of temperance & ſobriety towards thy ſelfe; and an hearty deſire and earneſt indeuor to pleaſe thy God in all things, both in thought, word and deed, by conforming them in obedience vnto all his Commandements. The ſubiect or perſon to whom it onely belongeth, is the elect and faithfull, the repentance of all others, being like that of Cain, Eſau, Ahab, Judas, and all hypocrites, falſe and counterfeit. The ſubiect in which this grace is exerciſed, is the whole man, and all the powers and parts both of his ſoule and body; but principally it keepeth its court of reſidence, and ſheweth it chiefe vertue and power in thee (my ſoule) and aboue all other thy faculties in the change of thy mind and will, thine heart and affections. The obiect of thy repentance is ſinne, and that compleat righteouſneſſe required in Gods Law, that being the thing from which thou fleeſt; this, that vnto which thou aſpireſt; that it which thou laboureſt to mortifie and kill; this, that vnto which thou indeuouereſt to bee more and more quickened and reuiued. The properties and qualities of it, thou haſt before ſcene in the ſeueral parts. The contraries vnto it generally conſidered, are impenitency, carnall ſecurity, hardneſſe of heart, worldlineſſe and prophaneſſe. In the parts of it, the contraries to humiliation and ſorrow for ſinne, are pride, out of an opinion of our owne righteouſneſſe; for Chriſt came not to call ſuch Phariſaical Iuſticiaries, but ſinners to repentance, and an hard heart and ſeared conſcience which cannot repent; and on the other hand, worldly ſorrow for carnall reſpects, which cauſeth death, and hopeleſſe ſorrow, which being voyd of faith, endeth in deſpaire, and ſo plungeth thoſe which ſo repent, with Cain, and Judas, into helliſh condemnation. Now to what wilt thou compare this grace of God, O my ſoule? It exceedeth all legall vertues in profit and neceſſity, eſpecially to vs who are imperfekt in them, and is exceeded of none, but of faith and loue, the fountaine of this ſtreame, and roots from which it ſpringeth;

§. Sect. 4.

The final cauſes, ſubiect, and properties of repentance, the contraries vnto it, and comparifons which illuſtrate it.

springeth, which if thou ioynest together, and entertainest them like loving friends to live and lodge in thee, no misery (my soule) can make thee miserable, no curse of the Law can hinder thy blessednesse, no imperfection of other vertues or duties, can keepe thee from the fruition of eternall happinesse; whereas without these, all other blessings are accursed vnto thee, all shewes of other graces false, counterfeit, and vterly vnprofitable. To what then mayest thou compare this excellent grace and gift of the Spirit? It is like the waters of Iordan, which will purge thee from the filthy leprosie of all thy sinnes, not by it owne inherent vertue, but by the power of Gods Word and promise, who hath assured all that truly repent, of the remission of their sinnes; and as it is a fruit and infallible signe of faith, which assureth thee that thou truly beleeuest, and art therefore purged from all thy sinnes, in the precious blood of Christ. It is like the precious balme of Gilead which is fit to cure all the sores of sinne, though the head be sicke, and the whole heart faint; and though from the sole of the foot, to the crowne of the head, there is no soundnesse in thee, but wounds, and bruises, and putrifying sores, yet if thou wilt apply vnto them this soueraigne salve, they shall be all healed, so that euen thy crimson and scarlet sinnes shall become white as snow and wooll.

Esai. 1. 5, 6, 16,
17.

§. Sect. 5.
Of the kinds
of repentance,
ordinary and extraordinary.

And thus thou seest (O my soule) the nature of true repentance, which admitteth of no distribution into kinds, but yet thou maist distinguish it into some degrees. For either thou maist consider it in the first acts of thy conuersion, when as thou diddest breake from thy sinnes, by bewailing and forsaking them, and turning vnto thy God in new obedience; or else it is the continuing of it, throughout the whole course of this life. For as thou art neuer in this world perfectly cured of the sores of sin, but that they will breake out againe, the inward corruption not thoroughly drawne out, still seeking vent in some outward issue; so this plaister of repentance must continually be applyed and renewed, and be neuer quite neglected and throwne away, vntill by death the cure be perfected. Now this repentance which thou must continue (O my soule) euen till by thy separation from thy beloued body, thou be freed from that hated body of sinfull corruption, is either ordinary, or extraordinary. Thy ordinary repentance is that which thou must daily performe; for as thou daily sinnest against thy good God, so thou must daily sorrow for thy sinnes, bee humbled in the sight and sense of them, hate and abhorre them as conquered rebels, who hauing gotten new strength, haue giuen thee these foyles, subdue and mortifie them, and indeuour to please thy God in the contrary duties of his seruice. Thy extraordinary repentance is either when by reason of thy sloth and security thou hast discontinued this exercise, and afterwards doest vndertake it afresh, being excited and moued hereunto by outward helpes, the preaching of the Word, afflictions, danger of being ouertaken with some approaching euill, extraordinary blessings, and such like; or by the inward motions of Gods holy Spirit: or else when thou art ouertaken for want of keeping the spirituall watch of some grievous and vnusuall sinne, whereby thou hast made deepe wounds and fearefull gashes into thy conscience. In both which respects thou must double thy zeale and diligence, that thou maist rise from whence thou art false, false, redeeme the lost time wherein thou hast negligently intermitted this holy exercise: bewaile thine extraordinary finnes, with extraordinary sorrow and bitter griefe, both in greater measure suitable to these greater finnes, and in a more vehement and powerfull manner; hating these finnes with more then mortall hatred; driving out these cursed enemies which haue giuen thee such shamefull soyles with all despite, and redoubling thy watch, that they may for ever be kept out of thy coast, and neuer be able to surprize and ouercome thee. Finally, thy repentance (my soule) must be extraordinary, when thy God moueth thee vnto it by any extraordinary occasion; as when thou art to performe some duty of his seruice of great moment and importance; as the receiuing of the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, which requireth extraordinary preparation and examination; when thou humblest thy selfe in some solemne fast; publike or priuate, for the auerting of some imminent iudgement, or de-liuerance from some present euill; or when thou art to vndertake some businesse for thy selfe, the Church, or Common-wealth, no lesse waighy and necessary, then full of difficulty and danger; then (my soule) is it high time for thee to renew and redouble thy repentance, that thy finnes which separate betweene thy God and thee, may be remooued, and not stop and hinder thee from receiuing the assistance of his grace and holy Spirit in these waighy imployments. So also when thou addrest thy selfe to thy God, to make suit for some blessings, which thou much desi-rest, from which thy finnes might hinder thee, and stop the streame of his grace, that though it overflow to all others, yet thou shalt remaine dry and barren: or for the remouall of some great afflictions, which if thou continuest in thy finnes, thou maist iustly feare will bee continued vpon them, till thy God, by redoubling thy stripes and smart, haue made thee to renew thy repentance and redouble thy sorrow. Finally, it is fit time thus to repent, when thy God summoneth thee by sicknesse to ap-peare before him, and threateneth thee to bring thee before his Tribu-nall vnder the arrest of death; then is there no more need (O my soule):

 to set thy house and state in order, then thy selfe, and then is it fit time that thou shouldest renew thy repentance, with Ezechias, in an extraordinary manner, that thou maist make thine accounts ready, before thou art to render them vnto thy Iudge; and seeing thou art much indebted, and hast nothing to pay, thou must, whilest thou art heere, by renewing faith and repentance, sue out thy pardon, and get a generall acquittance for all thy debt, sealed with thy Sauours blood, that so thou maist goe with ioy and comfort, when thy Iudge calleth thee to make thine appearance.

Ecc

CAP.

CAP. XXI.

Shewing how we must worke the former points vpon our hearts and affections.

6. Sect. I.
How our harts are to be affected with feruent desires to practice this duty of repentance.

And now (my soule) that thou hast in thy vnderstanding discouered of the chiefe poynts obseruable in this excellent grace of repentance, labour to worke what thou knowest, into thine heart and affections, and to bring it all to some holy vse, that thou maist prepare these spirituall meates, not onely to looke vpon, for so thou maist in this great plenty depart an hungred, and be neuer the better in thy health, strength and good liking; but indeuour to apply them, to taste their sweetnesse, to feed vpon and digest them for thy nourishment. Thou hast discouered (my soule) excellent waters, which though they be bitter in their owne nature, yet the wood of thy Sauours Crosse being cast into them by the hand of faith, will make them to become sweet: Drinke deepely of them (O my soule) that thou maist neuer againe thirst after the pleasures of sinne, which may well glut thee, but will neuer satisfie thee, but the more thou drinkest, the more thou thirstest, whereas these waters (my soule) will cure this dropsie, and make thee thirst onely after spirituall things, in which there is great delight, seeing thou maist heere drinke thy fill without impeachment, yea with much Improvement of thy health; or rather, because thou canst neuer be filled in this life, thou maist euer thirst, and euer drinke, thirst without distemper, without griefe; and drinke with all spirituall delight, seeing these waters satisfie without satiety. And as they are good for thine inward thirst, so also for thy both outward and inward defilements of sinne. Wash thy selfe therefore, yea bathe and diue thy selfe in them, whereby as thou shalt bee certainly assured that thou art washed and purged from the guilt and punishment of all thy finnes, in the precious Lauer and Fountaine of thy Sauours blood; so shalt thou find these waters of repentance, notable helpes and meanes to cleanse thee from the corruption and filth of sinne. Drench but thy selfe in them (O my soule) and thou shalt drowne them; for though to thee they are liuing waters, and helpe to preserue thee, yet they will stifle and choke thy sinfull corruptions, though (like the waters appoynted for the triall of iacaloufie) they will make thee fruitfull, yet they will cause thy finnes to rot and perish, working diuersly vpon diuers subiects. Worldly sorrow indeed causeth death, because it doth not conioyne, but seuer thee from Christ thy life. It is a fruit of the flesh, the ioy whereof is mortall, and therefore much more must its griefe needs be mortall. It looketh not to heaven, but to the earth, not drawing to God, but driuing thee from him. It respecteth punishment, and not finnes, and lamenteth more the losse of earthly trifles, then of Gods loue and heavenly excellencies. And therefore when this bitterness is thrust vpon thee by thy corrupt flesh; thou hast iust cause to cry out with the children of the Prophets, that there is death in the pot, and sinne in such sorrow, for which griefe thou hast iust cause of further grieuing. Mistake not this worldly sorrow (O my soule) for for true repentance.. Let not these muddy teares come into thine eyes, which will but dimme and dazle the sight of faith, so as it shall not be able to discern thy Sauour. But labour after that godly sorrow which will cause repentance not to be repented of; which though it may seeme vnpleasant to thy carnall taste, yet thou shalt finde it wholesome, though not so roothsome. If not delightfull meate, yet at least profitable physick, which by purging away the corrupt humours of sinne, will helpe to preserve thy spirituall health and life. Yea in truth (my soule) thou shalt, vpon good experience, finde this repentance not onely good and profitable, but also sweet and comfortable, causing thee to possesse and inioy thy selfe with much peace and patience.

Num. 3. 27, 28.

For who is the Authour of it, but God himselfe, who with his sweetnesse sweetens all things which he giueth to his children? and though they bee bitter in themselues, yet tempering them with his loue, hee maketh them to become pleasant, turning our mourning into reioycing, and raising out of the subiect of sorrow, matter of ioy. It is a cup of Gods tempering, and therefore refuse not to drink it; it must needs be good, comming from him, who being the chiefe Goodnesse, is Authour of all good. It is Gods gift (O my soule) and no naturall act in thine owne power; and therefore when thou wantest it, sue vnto him that giueth liberally to all that aske of him; & when thou hast it, ascribe nothing to thy selfe, but let him haue the glory of his owne gift. It is his gift, and not in thine owne power; take it then thankfully at his hand, whilst in his acceptable time he offereth it, lest pulling it back for thine vngrateful neglect, thou seek it too late and neuer findest it. It is a gift of the Spirit, which (like the wind) bloweth when and where it listeth, and not at thine appoyntment; spread thy sailes (my soule) whilst this gale lasteth, and open the dore of thine hart whilst the Spirit knocketh. It is the gift of grace, and not of merit; towards which thou hast brought nothing as the cause, but thy sinnes onely as the occasion; and therefore as it is giuen freely, so freely take it. It is the grace of God, which like the Sunne with kindly heate, doth with the beames of his fauour dissolue the clouds of griefe, and causeth them to distill in repentant teares; and not the strong and cold winds of his rigorous iustice and terrible threats, which either blow them quite away, or congeale them vnto an Icy hardnesse (making thy teares whilst they are dropping, like haile-stones, which will destroy thy fruits of obedience, rather then cause them to grow and multiply. It is not a common, but a sauing grace, seeing to whomsoever God giues it, he giueth them also saluation with it; and therefore (my soule) if thou wouldest haue the one, refuse not the other, for these gifts of grace must goe together. It is an Euangelicall gift, and not a legall, which haue such hard conditions, that they can seldome be obtained: whereas the Gospell not onely offereth to giue, but also enableth thee to receiue what it offereth, and to performe what it requireth. The strong winde, thunder and earthquake of legall threatenings, doe onely prepare a way, but it is the still voyce of the Gospell which assuring thee by faith of Gods loue worketh it in thee. And therefore (my soule) despise not this Word of grace; but whilst thy God speaketh and alloveth thee by his sweet promises to repentance, hearken vnto him, and harden

§. Self. 2.

Motives to repent, taken from the Authour and efficient causes of this grace.

den not thine heart. It is a gift of God, which thou returnest vnto him againe, and thy selfe with it. Feare not, lest it shall bee reiected, and thou with it, because it is small and worthlesse, for thy God requireth not perfection, but truth, and that his gifts bee not imbased by the mixture of thy hypocrisie. Hee looketh not to receiue much where hee giueth but little, nor will reiect any of his owne graces, as small and worthlesse, seeing though they bee but of small value as they are thine, yet from the Author and giuer they haue sufficient worth and excellency, for which hee will accept them. It is a gift which thy God hath freely given thee, but by and for his Sonne thy Sauour. It came to thee of free grace from God by Christ, but to him by purchase. Thou hast it for nothing saue gratefull acceptance, but thy Sauour bought it at a deare rate, euen with the inestimable price of his precious Blood; nothing else could procure thy pardon, without which there was no place to repentance; for neuer wouldest thou haue returned to God, whom thou hadst incensed to wrath by thy sinnes, had not Christ by that propitiatory Sacrifice reconciled thee and wrought thy peace. Besides, so was thy rebellious heart hardened through the deceitfulnesse of sinne, vnto more then an adamantine hardnesse, that nothing but the Blood of the slaine Goate, or innocent Lambe, could mollifie and soften it, that it might bee fit to receiue the impression of this sauing grace, and to melt and resolue in repentant teares. And therefore seeing thy Sauour hath bought it at so deare a purchase, doe not now vngratefully refuse it, when hee so graciously offereth it vnto thee of free gift. Especially, seeing hee vseth such manifold and plentifull meanes to presse it vpon thee for thine owne inestimable benefit. For hee sendeth daily his Ambassadors vnto thee, to call and inuite thee to repentance, by preaching vnto thee the glad tidings of reconciliation. Hee by them instructeth thee in the right way wherein thou must returne, admonisheth thee of thy errorrs, reprocueth thy transgressions and wilfull wandrings, comforteth and encourageth thee against all difficulties and oppositions, perswadeth thee by his gracious promises, terrifieth thee in thy course of sinning with his seuerer threatnings, allureth thee by his manifold blessings, discourageth thee in the way of sinne, by his chastizements and gentle corrections; all which outward meanes he presseth vpon thee, that they may become effectually by the inward motions of his Spirit, drawing thee from thy sins, and driving thee to God. O thrice vngratefull soule, if thou sufferest so great grace to be spent in vaine! O more then miserable, if thou, like the barren earth, drinkest so many gracious showres of heauenly blessings, and bringest forth no other fruits vnto him by whom thou art dressed; but thornes and briers, seeing then thou shouldest be reiected of God, and neere vnto his fearefull curse! But I am perswaded better things of thee (my soule) and things that accompany saluation, though I haue thus spoken. For though this and all other thy graces are but weak and imperfect, yet are they in sincerity & truth. Acknowledge with thankfulness Gods graces in thee, and thine owne wants. Behold with sorrow thy imperfections, & labour without discouragement after more perfection. He that could begin this worke of grace when it was wanting, can increase it now it is begun. Hee that could raise thee who wast dead in thy sinnes,

Heb. 6. 6, 7, 8.

1 Pet. 9.

Phil. 1. 6.

sinnes,

finnes, can quicken thee more and more; seeing it is a farre greater worke to giue life to the dead, then health to the liuing.

Rest not then thy selfe (O my soule) in some first beginnings of this worke, but goe vnto him that is both able and willing to finish it. Content not thy selfe in some small degrees, seeing that is no true grace which standeth at a stay, and rendeth not towards perfection. Thou hast already repented, but let not that suffice thee. He seemeth to repent of his repentance, that doth not renew it againe and againe. Doe not cease to sorrow, till thou ceaseest to sinne. Neuer leaue striking at this many-headed monster, whilest any one remaineth. If thou willingly suffer any one to liue, they will multiply, and such mortall enemies they are vnto thee, that their life will be thy death. God begun this worke, and inioyned thee to continue it; giue it not ouer, till hee call thee from it to pay thee thy wages. Mourne for thy sinnes, till hee come and wipe away the teares from thine eyes, and with thy sinnes take away thy sorrowes: and thinke not that it is time to cease amending, till thou comcest to perfection, and art made compleate both in holinesse and in happinesse. Practise repentance (O my soule) not by patches and pieces, but in both the parts ioyntly together. Repent and amend. Sorrow for thy sinnes, and withall forsake them. For he that lamenteth his sinnes, and indeuoureth not to leaue them, doth it not out of hatred, but of loue, which maketh him to grieue, because feare of Gods Iudgements make him thinke of their parting. But first, humble thy selfe (my soule) in the sight and sence of thy sinnes, that God may exalt thee in his due time. Humble thy selfe thorowly with vnfaigned sorrow and bitter grieve; for the deeper thou layest the foundation of thy repentance, the more substantiall shalt thou finde thy building. Thy sinnes are many and grieuous; and great sinnes would haue great sorrow. Thy God, whom thou hast offended and dishonoured, is not onely glorious and full of Maiessty; but infinitely gracious, and of abundant mercy. Yea, thou (my soule) hast not onely scene and tasted how good thy God is, but hast drunke deepe draughts out of the fountaine of his bounty. Hee hath giuen thee thy being, and preserued thee in it; he hath multiplied his blessings vpon thee temporall and spirituall, and is the Author and giuer of all the good which thou inioyest or expectest. And which is first of all and aboue all, he hath loued thee, vnworthy, sinfull, rebellious soule, before thou couldest loue him, yea, so loued thee, that he hath giuen his onely begotten and best beloued Sonne, that by his death thou mightest liue. Admire this infinite loue (O my soule) and loue thy God againe as much as thou canst, and be sorry thou canst loue him no better. Loue him who is most worthy in himselfe, and best deserueth it of thee, which if thou truly doest, thou canst not but lament thy sinnes with bitter grieve, whereby thou hast displeased him who so loueth thee, and whom thou so louest. Looke also vpon thy Sauour, whom by thy sinnes thou hast pearced, and lament thy sinnes which haue bene the causes of his sufferings, as a man mourneth for his sonne, and be sorry for them, as one is sorry for his first borne. It is not so much Iudas that betrayed him, nor the Scribes and Pharises that accused him, nor Pilate that condemned him, nor the Souldiers that crucified him, nor the deuill himselfe that set them all on worke,

Eph. 2. 1.

6. Sect. 3.

Motives to perswade vs to the renewing and perfecting of our repentance, and first, our humiliation and vnfaigned sorrow for sinne.

Eph. 2. 3.

Mat. 26. 38.

§. Sect. 4.
Motiues perswading to repentance and amendment of life.

1st. 23. 13.

Amos 3. 3.

as thy sinnes deliuering him into their hands, that haue beene the chiefe causes of his death. These, these (my soule) were the whips that scourged his innocent body, the nailes that fastened him to the Crosse, the speare which pearced his blessed side and heart. Mourne then and lament thy sinnes (O my soule) whereby thou hast caused him to be condemned that came to iustifie thee; to be killed, that came to saue thee; to be put to a cursed death, who being the Lord of life, was content to die, that hee might giue vnto thee life and happinesse, that wast dead in thy sins, and liable to Gods wrath as well as others. Thinke not much (my soule) to shed teares for thy sins, seeing thy Sauour was content to shed his blood for them; nor that it is too much trouble to bee a little grieued in the sight and sense of their burthen, and thy heavenly Fathers displeasure, seeing Christs innocent soule was troubled for them, and heauy vnto the death, yea, was so oppressed with their waight, and his Fathers wrath, that it forced out from his body a bloody sweat, and from his distressed and afflicted soule, that lamentable complaint, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? Consider also (O my soule) how often thou hast vexed and grieued the good Spirit of God dwelling in thee, and made him weary of his lodging, by polluting it with thy sinnes. How often thou hast tyred this peaceable Ghest by contending with him, and by not only resisting and quenching his good motions which hee hath put into thee, but also by giuing way and entertainment vnto the contrary suggestions of Satan and thine owne sinfull flesh. And let this grieue thee (my soule) that thou shouldst giue such a kind Ghest so vnkinde a welcome, that thou shouldst weary him that was sent by thy Sauour to refresh thee, grieue him that came to be thy Comforter, and contend and wrangle with him who is the Author of all thy peace.

But content not thy selfe (O my soule) to haue sorrowed for thy sinnes, vnlesse thou also leaue and forsake them, without which thy sorrow is false and hypocriticall. For these bitter medicines haue (if they be right) a purging property, and little good will they doe thee, if they distaste thy palate with the bitter vpbraids of thy sinnes, but doe not purge thee from these corrupt humours. Yea in truth, if thy sinnes be vnpleasant to thy taste; and like gall in thy mouth, thou canst not chuse but spit them out. If they be grievous vnto thee, as Hagar to her mistresse, thou wilt neuer bee at quiet till thou hast inforced them to depart. Or if through the strength of thy corrupt nature, thou canst not quite remooue them from dwelling with thee, they will be as scourges to thy sides, and thornes in thine eyes, which will make thee desire and indeuour to be rid of such cumbrous neighbours, to make continuall warre against them, and to watch all good opportunities of rooting them out; if not altogether, yet at least, by degrees. For how can two dwell peaceably together, vnlesse they bee agreed? who seeleth sinne (with Paul) like a thorne in the flesh, and will not pull it out? or if he cannot himselfe, who will not with him cry out for helpe; Wretched man that I am, who shall deliuer mee from this body of death? Yea, in truth (my soule) the same reasons which make thee truly to lament for thy sinnes, will make thee as willing to forsake them. For if thou louest God, who so loueth thee, thou must needs hate and forsake that which hee abhorreth.

horreth. If thine heart bee truly and thorowly warmed with the beames of his loue, brightly shining in that inestimable gift of his onely begotten and dearly Beloued, thou canst not thinke much for his sake to offer thy finnes to bee killed and mortified, which thou hast iust cause aboue all things to hate, (for if thou willingly lettest them escape, after God hath designed them to death, thy life must goe for theirs) seeing for thy sake he was content to giue the Sonne of his loue to be killed and crucified, that by his death thou mightest liue. If thou diddest (as thou oughtest) (my soule) esteeme thy God thy dearest and greatest friend, thou wouldest esteeme it but a small matter, to leaue for his sake thy greatest enemy. Consider also (my soule) that thy Sauour hath shed his precious Blood to wash away thy finnes, not onely in respect of their guilt and punishment, but also of their filth and corruption; and wilt thou suffer this vncleanesse of sinne still to sticke vnto thee, and so cause his blood to bee spilt in vaine? Hee was content for a time to be forsaken in his owne sense of his heavenly Father, whom to inioy, was the life; and to be seuered from him, the death of his soule, that he might make an vtter separatiō between thee and thy finnes; and wilt thou not for his sake part with them (my soule) especially considering, that if thou cleauest vnto them, they will be a partition wall to separate thee from thy God? Finally, the holy Spirit, whom thou hast entertained for thy Ghest to lodge in thee, may moue thee for his sake to forsake thy finnes. For he being holy, and delighting in purity, cannot indure to haue sinne for an inmate, where he is a Ghest; but will depart in discontent, if hee bee annoyed with such a lothsome neighbour. Now as there is no society so sweet and comfortable as this Communion of the holy Ghost, seeing hee commeth not alone, but accompanied with all sanctifying and sauing graces, with peace that passeth all vnderstanding, peace with God, and peace of a good conscience, with comforts which vphold vs in all discontents, with ioy vspeakable and glorious, which cannot bee embittered with any griefe: so there is no solitude so vncomfortable, as when thou art left and forsaken of the Comforter himselfe, because to inioy his company, thou canst not be contented to leaue thy finnes. Turne therefore from thy finnes (O my soule) but with all turne to thy God. Cease from euill, and learne to doe well; and being freed from the base seruice of sinne, become now the seruant of righteousness. The beginning of thy misery, was thy turning from God; for how couldst thou be but miserable and accursed, when thou diddest leaue him, in whose fruition consisteth thy chiefe happinesse? how couldest thou but bee in palpable darkenesse, when the beames of his fauour did not shine vpon thee, who is thine onely Light? How couldst thou be but euill and wicked, when thou diddest forsake him who is the chiefe Goodnesse? And the beginning of thy happinesse is, when thou returnest vnto him. When thou wentest from him with the Prodigall, thou hauing mis-spent the rich portion of his graces, becamest so poore and beggerly, that to satisfie thine hunger, thou wast faine to feed with swinish worldlings, vpon the base huskes of earthly vanities; but vpon thy returning to him, hee will meete thee when thou art farre off, receiue thee into wonted fauour, put on thee the best garment, kill for thee the fat Calfe, and feast thee at his owne

Psal. 23. 3.

Eph 4. 16.

Esa. 23. 8.

2. Pet. 5. 5, 10.

6. Sect. 5.
 Motiues to bring forth the fruits of repentance in all the parts thereof.
 3. Cor. 7. 11, 12.

1. Care.

Rom. 6. 12.

Table with great ioy. When thou wentst from him like a wandring sheep, in losing thy Shepherd, thou didst lose thy selfe, stray in the deserts of sinne, and being intangled in the briars of Satans tentations, wast a ready and easie prey to this rauinous Wolfe. But when thy great and good Shepherd had sought and found thee, and thou hearing his voyce, diddest desire to come out of this wofull plight, hee tooke thee vpon his blessed shoulders, when thou wast not able to goe, brought thee backe to his sheepefold, and hath caused thee to feed in pleasant pastures by the still waters. Returne then vnto thy God (O my soule) loue him who hath beene so good vnto thee, with all thine heart, and serue him with all thy might. And because thou hast mis-spent many of thy good houres in the seruice of sinne and Satan, without gaine, yea to thy losse; redeeme this lost time, by redoubling thy diligence for the time to come. His seruice is perfect liberty, and not to be in it, is to be in the worst bondage. All his seruants are his sonnes, yea heires of his Kingdome, and co-heires with Christ. It is commonly sayd, that there is no seruice to the seruice of a King. Yes (my soule) behold a seruice much more excellent, much more profitable; the seruice of the King of kings; For he maketh truely (as it is said hyperbolically of Tyre Merchants) all his seruants Kings, not of an earthly, but of an heauenly; not of a transitory, but of an euerlasting Kingdome. Serue then with cheerefulness (O my soule) such a bountifull Master, who rewardeth such simple and short seruice, with such large and lasting wages. Yea, bee sorry that thou hast returned no sooner into his seruice, for which alone thou wast created and redeemed, and repent that thou hast no sooner repented. Glorifie God in acknowledging thy errors and wandrings. Glorifie his Iustice which hath punished thy sinnes in Christ, corrected them in thee. Glorifie him in his infinite mercies, who to spare thee, hath punished his best Beloued. Finally, as thou hast dishonoured him by thy sinnes, so glorifie him by thy new obedience, and bring forth fruits worthy amendment of life. And doe it with comfort and cheerefulness (O my soule) seeing so gracious is thy good God, that hee hath coupled his glory and thy saluation inseparably together, so as thou canst not seeke the one, but thou must finde the other; thou canst vse no meanes to glorifie him, but by the same thou shalt attaine vnto glory, and make thine owne calling and election sure. Bring forth fruits of repentance in the duties of piety towards God, of righteousness and mercy towards thy neighbours, of temperance and sobriety towards thy selfe.

Clenſe thy selfe inwardly from all reliques of sinfull corruption; furnish thy selfe thorowly with those chieſeriches of sanctifying graces, and bring forth plentifull fruits of them in thy good workes, that thou mayest please thy God in all things, and cause him to bee glorified, when as thy light of a godly life shall shine before men. But especially (my soule) bring forth in the practice of thy repentance, those fruits which the holy Apostle commendeth vnto thee. First, take care to haue this assurance, that thy sinnes are pardoned, and thou freed from the guilt, punishment, and corruption of them, and that being thus once clenſed in thy iustification, thou mayest continue it in thy sanctification, not suffering sin againe to raigae in thy mortall body, that thou shouldest obey it in the lusts thereof, nor to pollute pollute and defile thee againe with the filth of it, after thou art thus pardoned and purged; but contrariwise, that thou serue God in performing of all contrary duties which he requireth, in that manner as hee hath prescribed. And this thy care (my soule) must extend, not only to the things themselves, but to the meanes and occasions of them, for the auoyding of the one, and imbracing of the other. Clear often thy selfe (my soule) seeing thou often failest of thy duty, by pleading thy pardon purchased by Christ, and set euen all accounts betweene thy God and thee, by shewing that the hand-writing of Ordinances is cancelled and nailed to his Crosse, and that thou hast a generall acquittance from thy Lord and Master sealed with Christs Blood. Yet slight it not ouer as a light matter (O my soule) that thou hast so much offended, though thy pardon hath freed thee from all perill, but haue an holy indignation against thy selfe and thy sins, that thou shouldst by them, like an vngratefull wretch, displease and dishonour so gracious a God; who of his meere mercy hath freely forgiven thee; yea, and let this for the time to come set thee so farre at oddes with them, that thou wilt by no meanes, nor vpon any termes, entertaine with them any familiarity and acquaintance. And yet because thou art fraile and full of infirmity, and thy enemies many and mighty, thou apt and easie to be ouertaken and overcome, and they as ready to surprize thee, therefore (my soule) whilest thou standest, take heed of falling, be neuer secure, which will cause negligence, but nourish euer in thee a godly fear of being surprized and foyled, which will make thee watchfull, and to stand alwayes vpon thy gard. And seeing thou canst not stand in thine owne strength, thou must also entertaine an holy desire after Gods grace and assistance of his holy Spirit, wherby thou maist be inabled to withstand tentations, and to performe all duties of Gods seruice daily in more and more perfection. The which thy desires must not be cold and remisse, but must be backed and strengthened with seruent zeale, which must shew it selfe in opposing couragiously all the meanes that hinder thee in thy Christian course; for so many blocks lie in this way, so many enemies that encounter thee, and labour might and maine to hinder thy proceedings, that thou canst not overcome them without much courage and resolution, nor amend thy life, vnlesse thou be zealous. Finally (my soule) seeing notwithstanding all thy zeale and resolution, thou art often foyled with that secret Traytor and dangerous Rebelle, which thou nourishest in thine owne bosome; doe not carelessly and cowardly put vp all these wrongs and indignities, but after thou hast armed thy selfe strongly against this trayterous enemy, set vpon him, foyle him as he hath foyled thee, and take sharpe revenge vpon him, and wound him to the death with all his sinfull lusts. Yea, if thou findest him strong in resistance, abridge thy selfe in the vse of things in their owne nature indifferent, which thine enemy hath made by their abuse, snares vnto thee, and occasions of sinne; rather then giue him any aduantage by vsing thy liberty, and chuse rather to vse moderate abstinence, then that such an enemy should get any strength by seeding with thee.

3. Clearing.

3. Indignation.

4. Feare.

1. Cor. 10. 12.

5. Desire.

6. Zeale.

Apoc. 3. 19.

7. Reuenge.

CAP. XXII.

Of diuers speciall meanes whereby the poynt meditated is wrought vpon the heart and affections.

§. Sect. I.
Of Examination.

And now (my soule) that thou seest what is required in this duty of repentance, examine thy selfe how thou hast performed it. Hast thou had a true and thorow sight and sense of thy naturall impotency and auersenesse to this duty; of thy security, impenitency and hardnesse of heart, and hast thou had seruent desires to bee freed from them? Hast thou sought and sued to thy God, the Author and fountaine of this grace, desiring the assistance of his holy Spirit, for the suppling and softening of thy hard and stony heart, that it might relent and resolue into the teares of vnfained repentance? And hast thou by faith applyed vnto thee the blood of Christ, for the working of thine heart to sound humiliation and contrition? Hast thou been carefull, as thou oughtest, in vsing all those good meanes which thy God hath giuen thee, for the effectuall working of this grace in thy heart? Hast thou diligently heard the Word of God, and applyed it vnto thy selfe for this end, the threatnings of the Law for thy humiliation, and the sweet and gracious promises of the Gospell, assuring thee of the pardon of thy sinnes, and of Gods loue and fauour, that thou mightest loue God againe, who hath so loued thee, and forgiven thee so great a debt, and testifie this loue by bewailing thy sinnes, whereby thou hast displeased so gracious a Father? Hath Gods mercy, patience and long-suffering drawne thee to repentance, and hast thou beene offended with thy selfe, because thou hast offended thy God, who hath multiplied vpon thee so many testimonies of his loue? Hast thou made right vse of Gods blessings and benefits, to be made thereby more carefull to please him; and of his chastisements and fatherly corrections, to be made thereby more fearefull to offend him? Hath thy sorrow in any good measure beene sutable to thy sinnes, and hast thou more bewailed thy sins then the punishment, the guilt then the smart; and in this respect chiefly, because thou hast by them dishonoured thy God, rather then for the miseries which they haue brought vpon thy selfe? Hast thou bewailed all thy sinnes, and those most of all whereunto thy corrupt nature is most inclined; and not onely thy sinnes of grosse commission, but also thy sinnes of omission, and the wants and imperfections of thy best actions? Hast thou been affected with Gods Iudgements, and with those most of all which are spirituall, and touch thee rather then thy sinfull flesh? Hath the smart of thy sores beene such, that nothing would ease them, but the balme of Gilead, the blood of Christ, applyed by faith, and haue carnall sports rather increased then abated thy griefe? Hast thou so washed thy selfe in the waters of repentance, as that thou hast thereby been cleansed from thy sinnes? and hast thou, being freed from sinne, become the seruant of righteousness? Hast thou been earnest in thy repentance, and taken occasion from thy former negligence and vnprofitablenesse, to redeeme thy lost time, by redoubling thy diligence in Gods seruice? Hast thou found plentifull fruits in thee, worthy repentance and amendment of life? And as thou thou hast increased in yeeres, hast thou increased in fruitfulnessse, bringing forth most in thine older age? Hast thou found in thee those speciall fruits of care, cleering, indignation, feare, desire, zeale and holy reuenge, before spoken of?

Alas (my soule) how defectiue hast thou been in all these things? Alas (my God) how should I, without much shame and confusion of face looke vpon thee, seeing when I come to pay that debt and duty which I owe thee, my siluer is turned into drosse, my medicine is become a poison, my repentance, which should be the salue for my other sinnes, is so full of wants and imperfections, that it selfe needeth to bee repented of? and if this bath wherein I should wash my polluted selfe, were not it selfe bathed and cleansed in a pure fountaine, the precious blood of Iesus Christ, so foule it is through the filth of my corruptions, that it would but the more defile me, and make me lothsome in thy sight. It is true (my God) and I acknowledge it to thy glory, that through thy grace I haue repented, and doe desire to repent still more and more. And that small measure which I haue receiued, and which I returne vnto thee, is not false and counterfet, but in sincerity and truth. But (alas my Lord) it is so maimed with imperfections, and defiled with corruptions, that it is utterly vnworthy thine acceptance. And seeing thou hast forbidden in thy Law that any sacrifices should be offered vnto thee, which were maimed or vncleane, how should I presume to offer this sacrifice of my sighes and teares which are so imperfect and defiled, were it not that thou hast told me, that the sacrifice wherein thou chiefly delightest, is a broken heart, and humble and contrite spirit? And because thy perfection can indure no imperfection, thou hast appoynted another sacrifice pure and perfect, euen that which thy deare Sonne hath offered vnto thee vpon the Crosse, to cleanse and couer the impurity and imperfection of mine, that it may be acceptable in thy sight. These waters of thy grace (O my God) were pure and perfect, as they came from thee the Fountaine of all purity and perfection; but alas, they are now defiled by running thorow the polluted channell of my filthy heart. But being againe cleansed by running thorow the pure Fountaine of my Sauours blood, they are restored to their purity, and fit for thine acceptance. From my selfe immediately I dare not offer vnto thee my repentance; for it is wholly stained and defiled with my corruption, and mingled with much impenitency, carnall security and hardnesse of heart. And though it be most imperfect, yet haue I been too too slothfull in vsing any of those good meanes whereby I might attaine vnto more perfection; or when I haue vsed them, it hath been so formally and negligently, that they haue had little efficacie to worke this grace in me. Thy legall threatenings haue not humbled me, thy Euangelicall promises haue little affected mee, the good motions of thy Spirit haue been quenched in me, thy blessings and benefits haue not allured me, thy chastisements and corrections haue not drawne me; but notwithstanding all these helps, I haue continued in my sinnes with much impenitency, or laboured to come out of them with much weakness. My sorrow for sinne hath been very small, and ioyned with much hardnesse of heart; my desires of amendment exceeding feeble and faint;

§. Sect. 2.
Of Confession.

Esa. 1. 22.

Rom. 7.

§. Sect. 3.
Of Complaint.

my resolutions weake and vnconstant, and my actions and indeuours impotent and imperfect, and when to will is present with me, I finde no power to performe that which is good, so that I cannot doe the good I would, nor leaue vndone the euill I would not.

Alas (my soule) how farre hath thy carnall security preuailed with thee? How hath it rocked thee in such a deepe slumber, that thou hast little or no sense of thy sloth, but when thou art asleepe, dreamest that thou art waking? How is thine heart hardened through the deceitfulnesse of sinne, that it is scarce sensible of its owne hardnesse? yea when thou dost discerne it, how art thou hampred and fettered with the giues of thy corruption, that thou hast neither power nor will to better thine estate? Repentance is the meanes of curing thine infirmities and sickneses of sinnes. But thou searest the medicine, more then the disease, and neglectest, or formally vnest all good meanes whereby it might be obtained and applyed. Thou thinkest no care or cost too much for the compassing of worldly vanities, and thou canst in pursuing them, keepe thy desires within no bounds, but the more thou drinkest, the more thou thirstest. But how soone art thou tyred in working thy heart to sorrow for thy sinnes; and how little of this doest thou thinke enough? In bodily smart and worldly grieve for the losse of things little to be esteemed, how many arguments of comforts (as it were) bridles, needest thou to curbe in, and moderate thy sensuall sorrowes? and yet how often doe they get head, and (as it were) catching the bridle betweene the teeth, carry thee away in a full carrear? But how many strong motiues and forcible reasons (as it were) sharpe spurres in thy sides, doest thou need, to make thee sorrow for thy sinnes? and how soone, like a dull hackney, art thou tyred in this vnusuall way, so that no spurres nor stripes will make thee mend thy pace? How cold and quiet is thy harred against thy sinnes? and vpon what easie tearmes and small submission art thou content to let them liue, when the Lord hath giuen them into thy power, and put the sword of the Spirit into thy hands wherewith thou mightest slay them? How little hast thou profited in the amendment of thy life? how small and insensible are thy proceedings in the wayes of godlines? and after long time spent, and many means vsed, how small is thy progresse, and how neere art thou still to the place from whence thou diddest sit out? How faint are thy desires (O slothfull soule) after good things? How farre from earnest longings which breake the heart, and from hungry and thirsting, which are impatient of delay, and neuer at quiet till they be satisfied? How often doest thou faile in thy good resolutions, and how seldome dost thou bring them to any good effect? How easily art thou discouraged in thy best indeuours, desisting, or at least often intermitting them, before thou bringest them to any perfection? And yet this is all thou canst doe towards that perfect obedience which the Law requireth; and all that thy God in the Gospell doth require of thee. Vngratefull soule, if thou dost not answer his demands; when hauing done so much for thee, hee desireth, in lieu of all, to haue so little returned vnto him.

§. Sect. 4.
A hearty wish to haue all wants supplied.
Jer. 9. 1.

O that thou couldest performe this duty in that manner and measure which thy God requireth! O that thy head were a fountaine of teares, that

that thou mightest with Dauid cause thy bed to swim, and water thy couch with them; and with Jeremy, weepe day and night for thine owne finnes, and the finnes of thy people. O that God would smite thy hard heart, as he caused Moses sometime to smite the Rocke, that there might gush out of it teares of vnfaigned repentance! O that I could thorowly waken my selfe out of my slumber of security, that continually expecting my Iudge, I might prepare my selfe for his comming, and lament my sins, as though it were the last day of my life! O that I could be more displeased with my selfe, because my finnes no more displease me, and lament the hardnesse of my heart, because I can no more heartily bewaile them! How should I inwardly reioyce in this sorrow! How should I haue more iust cause of delight in bathing my selfe in these floods, then Naaman had, when washing in Iordan, he perceiued himselfe cleansed from his Leprosie! How should these teares be my meate and drinke, and more refresh me then my corporall food! O that turning from my sins with implacable hatred, I could returne to my God with all seruency of affection, and that I could expresse and approue my loue vnto him who hath so loued me, by bringing forth plentifull fruits of new obedience! O that my wayes were so directed, that I might keepe his Statutes! O that thou couldest (my soule) set thy selfe perfectly to seeke and serue him, and that thou mightest neuer erre from the wayes of his Commandements! O that it were thy meate and drinke to doe the will of thy heauenly Father; and that thou couldest loue it better then thy daintiest food! O that thou couldest doe Gods will in earth, as the blessed Angels doe it in heaven, with all ioy and cheerfulness, speed and diligence! But alas, so impotent thou art in thine owne strength, that thou art altogether vnable in thy selfe to performe this duty in any such manner or measure as thou desirest.

Thou seeest thy sores, and feelest their smart, but hast no skill to cure or ease them. Thou art sensible of thy defects, but art so poore and beggerly that thou canst not supply them. Yea, thou art within the sight of the waters which haue vertue in them to cure thy lamenesse, and yest desolate bemoaning thy misery, but art so impotent that thou canst not step into them. Thou seeest and acknowledgest that thy sorrow for sinne is too too small, and it grieueth thee that thou canst bee no more grieued, but hast no more ability to draw from thy head plenty of teares, or from thy heart vnfaigned sighes and grones for thy finnes, then to command the clouds to raine, or the windes to blow. Thou seeest the miseries and dangers which attend vpon thy carnall security, but canst not rowze thy selfe vp out of this dead slumber. Thou feelest the mischiefes of an hard heart, but art not able by any meanes of thine owne to supple and soften it. Many defects and imperfections there are in thy new obedience, but thou hast no ability to supply the one, or amend the other. Rest not therefore (my soule) vpon thine owne strength, which will faile thee in this, as well as in all things else, of any weight or worth, but flee vnto him that is both able and willing to pardon thy imperfections and wants, and also to supply them. Cry vnto him (O my soule) who is ready and All-sufficient to heare and helpe thee. Lift vp thy heart vnto him, and say:

Psal. 5. 6.

Psal. 119. 5.

§. Sect. 5.
Acknowledgement of impotency.

§. Sect. 6.
Petition.

Psal. 119. 37.

*Ezek. 11. 19.
and 36. 26.*

Iob. 15. 8.

§. Sect. 7.
Inforcement.

Luk. 18. 1. 8.

Psal. 119.

*Lam. 5. 21.
Cant. 1. 3.*

O thou, who art alone able to perfect that good worke of repentance which thy selfe hast begun, attend in it what is amisse, and supply all that wherein it is defectiue. I haue desired to turne vnto thee by vnfaigned repentance; but my corrupt flesh opposeth me in this work, so as I can bring it to little effect; put to thy helping hand, and supply by thy Spirit what is wanting in me. The reliques of my corruption doe still remaine in mee, and pull me backe as I am returning vnto thee; but thou who hast deposed them from their regency, and weakened them in their full strength, canst deliuer me fully from their power and tyranny, and preserve mee from the danger of those secret ambushments, out of which these scattered forces, vpon all aduantages doe assault me. My carnall security opposeth my repentance, and maketh me apt to slumber in my sinnes; but thou canst awake me out of this sleepe, who was able to rowze me out of the sleepe of death. My heart is hard, and I bewaile great sinnes with small sorrow; but if thou smite this stony rocke, there will issue from it, as from a fountaine, streames of repentant teares. I am now slow and dull in returning vnto thee, by bringing forth the fruits of new obedience; but I shall be able to better my speed, and to turne the way of thy Commandments; when thou shalt enlarge my heart. O thou therefore who chiefly delightest in the sacrifice of an humble heart, and contrite spirit, create in me a soft and tender heart, and renew in me a right spirit. Frame me according to thine owne will, that thou maist delight in me, and dwell with me; yea, according to thine owne couenant, for thou hast promised to giue me a new heart, and a new spirit, and that thou wilt take away from me my stony heart, and giue vnto me an heart of flesh. Thou art glorified in me, when I bring forth much fruit of new obedience. O be not wanting vnto thine owne glory, by suffering me to be defectiue in fruitfulnessse; but after I haue brought forth some, purge me againe and againe, that I still bringing forth more fruits, thou maist be more glorified.

Yea Lord, my wants are not small, and therefore my suit must not bee slight. I must still wastle with thee by my prayers and strong cries, and not let thee depart, without a blessing. I am weake to preuaile, but I haue thy truth to support me, who hast promised that I shall obtaine, if I follow my suit without fainting. O then make good thy word vnto thy seruant, wherein thou hast made me to put my trust: Giue me a melting heart, which will relent and resolute easily into teares of repentance. I am much defiled with the filthinesse of my sinnes, and a little washing will not make me cleane; Purge me thorowly therefore (O my God) and multiply my washings, first and chiefly in the blood of Christ, which will cleanse mee from the ingrained guilt of my crimson and scarlet sinnes; and wash mee in the lauer of Regeneration, and in the waters of vnfaigned repentance, which will, by vertue of the former washing, helpe to purge mee from the filth of my corruptions. Turne me, O turne me vnto thee (my God) and so shall I be turned; draw me, and I will runne after thee. Rectifie and fructifie my more then ordinary barrennesse, with the extraordinary showres of thy grace, and warme my heart with the beames of thy loue, that whatsoever good seed of thy Word shall fall into it, may take deepe root, and bring forth plentifull fruits of holinesse and righteousnesse; that as I

haue

haue heretofore, more then many others, dishonoured thee by my sinnes, so also I may now glorifie thee in some good degree, by bringing forth, in more then an ordinary manner and measure, plentifull fruits of new obedience.

And now comfort thy selfe (O my soule) for thy God hath granted what thou hast so seruently craued. Yea, it is the end why hee would haue thee to aske, because he hath a desire to giue, and that by discovering thy beggery and pouerty, he might take occasion to discouer the riches of his bounry. He that hath enlarged thine heart with these seruent desires, hath done it purposely to this end, that hee may fill it, and satisfie them. Thou couldest not so much as aske this grace of repentance, if the Spirit of God did not helpe thine infirmities, and inable thee to pray with sighes and grones which cannot be vttered; and how can thy God reiect that prayer which his Spirit inditeth, and is made according to his owne will? Yea, be confident, my soule, for thou canst receiue no repulse in this suit; seeing he himselfe hath commanded thee to aske it, and promised to giue it. He, who is true of his promise, and omnipotent in performance, hath bound himselfe by his gracious Couenant, that hee will take away thy stony heart, and giue thee an heart of flesh; that thou shalt looke vpon him whom thou hast pierced, and shalt mourne for him, as a man mourneth for his onely sonne, and be in bitternesse for him, as one is in bitternesse for his first-borne. That he will write also his Law in thine heart, that louing and obeying it, thou maist neuer depart from him. And his Word is yea and Amen; his promises as good as present payment. Yet (my soule) to helpe thy weakenesse, he hath giuen vnto thee already some first beginnings of repentance, as an earnest of the rest that yet is wanting. Hee hath begun this worke of grace in thee, and therefore (his gifts being without repentance) he will surely perfect it. Wait vpon him then (O my soule) by faith, yea, wait vpon him, not onely with patience, but also with ioy and comfort; for he that hath promised, will come, and will not tarry, and will worke in thine heart such sorrow for thy sinnes, as he himselfe shall accept as sufficient; and cause thee to bring forth such plentifull fruits of new obedience, as shall glorifie him, and scale vp in thine heart the assurance of thine owne election and saluation.

Thrice happy then (my soule) art thou now in thy God; who wast in in thy selfe wretched and miserable: for he hath not onely made with thee the Couenant of grace, wherein hee hath assured thee of the pardon of thy sinnes, and of his fauour, in which consisteth thy life and blessednesse, but also hath inabled thee to performe the condition, of faith and repentance, whereby thou art assured, that thou hast thy part and interest in all his promises. Reioyce therefore in the Lord, and againe, reioyce. Praise and magnifie his great and glorious Name, who hath been so good and gracious vnto thee. Thou wast in wofull misery by reason of thy sinnes, and the punishments due vnto them, but hee hath deliuered and made thee happy, and hath both offered vnto thee ioy and blessednesse, and also the meanes whereby thou maist attaine vnto it. Hee hath shewed vnto thee the way of life, and hath giuen vnto thee both will and ability to walke in it. What wilt thou now returne vnto him (O my soule) for all the

§. Sect. 8.
Confidence.

Rom. 8. 26.

Zach. 12. 10.

Jer. 31. 33.
and 32. 42.

Phil. 1. 6.
Rom. 11. 29.

Habak. 2. 3.

§. Sect. 9.
Congratulation and thanksgiving.

Phil. 4. 4.

Psal. 136. 12.

*Psal. 116. 12.
& 150. 3.*

Psal. 103. 1.

Psal. 116. 7.

Psal. 4. 8.

Psal. 46. 1.

Psal. 126. 5, 6.

Psal. 103. 22.

good that hee hath done vnto thee? Yea, what canst thou returne that is worth acceptance, but that which thou hast receiued from this fountaine of all goodnesse? yet though hee hath giuen all vnto thee, something there is which he will be pleased to receiue from thee, as though it were thy gift, even the sacrifice of praise and thanksgiuing. Nothing else canst thou giue but this free-will offering; nothing else doth he require, who is so absolute in all perfection, that hee needeth nothing. A fit oblation (my soule) fro such a child to such a Father, from so meane & poore a subject, to so rich and high a Soueraigne. Take then into thine hand the Cup of saluation, and praise him who is so worthy to be praised. Praise him in his noble acts, praise him according to his excellent greatnesse. Praise him in his power and truth; praise him for all his grace and goodnesse. Blesse and magnifie him for all his former benefits, and his Christ, through whom they are all conferred vpon thee. And especially, as by present occasion thou art bound, for that he hath giuen vnto thee the grace of repentance, and renewed and increased it by this present exercise, graciously assisting and inabling thee by his holy Spirit to bring it to good issue. Praise therefore the Lord (O my soule) and all that is within me, praise his holy Name. And now with these praises, offer and recommend thy selfe into the hands of thy gracious God and faithfull Sauour, who is all-sufficient to keepe thee vnto the end, and in the end. Thou art not worthy (worthlesse soule) his receiuing and owning, but so much the rather offer thy selfe vnto him who is able to make thee worthy. Devote and consecrate thy selfe wholly vnto his seruice, and resolue to glorifie and please him in all things for the time to come. And because thy resolutions are weake, thy power small, and thy best indeuours full of imperfections, make thy seruice as acceptable as thou canst, by offering thine heart with it, and doing all that thou canst doe, willingly and cheerfully. Desire the assistance of his good Spirit, to direct and guide, rule and ouer-rule thee in all thy thoughts and desires, words, and workes, that they may in some measure answer vnto thy resolutions, and bee pleasing and acceptable in his sight. Especially desire his helpe, that the practice of thy repentance may be sureable to thy Meditations, in the whole course of thy life; that more and more sorrowing for thy sinnes, thou mayest haue daily more cause to reioyce in the assurance of his loue, and thine owne saluation, and that turning from them, and returning to thy God, thou mayest more and more glorifie him, by bringing forth better and more fruits of new obedience. And now returne vnto thy rest (O my soule) for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee. Repose thy selfe securely vnder the shadow of his wings who is able to defend thee, and to cause thee in the midst of garboyles and desperate dangers, to dwell in safety. God is thy refuge and strength, a very present helpe in trouble. He hath made thee to heare ioy and gladnesse, that the bones which he had broken might reioyce. Thou didst sow in teares, but he hath caused thee to reape in ioy. Thou didst goe forth weeping, bearing precious seed, but thou art come againe reioicing, bringing thy sheaves with thee. Blesse therefore the Lord, all his workes, in all places of his dominion. Blesse the Lord, O my soule.

CAP. XXIII.

*of the third priuate meanes of a godly life, which is consideration
and examination of our estate.*

THe third priuate meanes of a godly life, is consideration and examination, both which are in truth but branches of Meditation. Yea the former, if we take it in the largest extent, differeth little or nothing from it, seeing we may be said either to meditate or consider of any thing, when we thorowly and deliberately ponder and waigh it in our mindes, with all the circumstances belonging to it. But heere we will take it in a more strict sense, as it pondreth those things which neerely concerne our estate; and so it is much like vnto examination, although if we speake properly and distinctly, there is some difference betweene them. For consideration is yet, as we heere handle it, more generall, extending to all things that concerne vs, past, present, and to come; but examination properly meddleth not with things to come, but searcheth out those things which are past or present; bringing them to be tryed by the rule, according to which wee doe examine them, whether they bee true or false; good or euill. Consideration waigheth and deliberateth before-hand what wee are about to doe, and whether it be lawfull or vnlawfull, expedient or vnnecessary, profitable or to our losse, and accordingly mooueth vs either to doe it, or to leaue it vndone: But in examination we consider of that which is done already, whether it be well or euill done, wisely and to our good, or vnaduisedly and to our hurt. If the former were thorowly performed, the latter would not be much necessary, vnlesse it were to reuiue our good actions (as God did the workes of creation) that we might approue them, and reioyce in the conscience of our well-doing. But because we often faile in it, and doe things rashly and without due aduice, therefore wee are necessarily to vse the latter, and to examine what before wee considered not (our after-wit being better then our fore-wit) that so we may reforme what is amisse, and returne into the right way out of which wee haue erred. Yet because I would not make this already long Treatise ouer-redious to the Reader, but chiefly because many points and proofes are coincident, belonging to them both, I will not diuide them in my Discourse, but handle them together; and the rather, because I haue already spoken of the generalities of consideration, in which it chiefly differeth from this other of examination, in the former tract of Meditation.

This examination or consideration, is nothing else but a serious waighing, and pondring of those things which neerely concerne vs in our spirituall estate; or the diligent searching and triall of our estates, how they stand between God and vs; in matters concerning his glory and our owne saluation. The which examination is held after a solemn manner in the Court of Conscience, and in Gods presence; wee sitting as Iudges vpon our selues, to giue sentence according to the Law of God; and the euidence of our owne consciences, either with or against our selues, concerning those things which we haue done or left vndone, good or euill. In

§. Sect. 1.
How consideration and examination differ.

§. Sect. 2.
Of examination, what it is, and wherein it consisteth.

which triall, by helpe of memory and conscience, our Register and Witnesse, we reuiew and take a suruey of all that wee haue done in the flesh, of all our parts and faculties of soule and body, examining how we haue imployed them to the glory of him that gaue them; our vnderstandings in knowing and acknowledging him; our memories in remembring him; our hearts and affections in adhering and cleauing vnto him, by louing, fearing, trusting in him, and so in the rest. Of all our thoughts also, words and actions, how wee haue by them glorified or dishonoured God. Of all our course and carriage in our whole life and conuersation, and how wee haue therein answered the end of our Creation and Redemption, which was to glorifie him, who hath made and saued vs. More especially, wee may examine our selues, how wee haue performed or broken our voves and promises made vnto God, and principally our promise in Baptisme; how we haue shaken off the seruice of sinne, Satan, and the world, and deuoted our selues wholly to the seruice of God. How wee haue profited in mortification, and what corruptions wee haue subdued and weakened, which formerly were potent and strong in vs; how wee haue mastered and abated our pride, anger, ambition, couetousnesse, voluptuousnesse, impatiencie, euill concupiscence, and the rest of our corrupt affections and vnruely passions. How we haue profited in newnesse of life, both inwardly in our minds and hearts, and outwardly in our words and actions; how wee haue ruled that vnruely member our tongues, and haue made them instruments of Gods glory, and of the edification of our neighbours and our selues. How we haue growne in Gods graces, waxing daily stronger in our faith, and assurance of his loue and our saluation, more seruient in our loue and zeale, more firme in our affiance, and how we haue renewed and increased our sorrow for sinne, our hatred of our corruptions, especially of our beloued sinnes, and how we haue in our indeuours and actions answered our resolutions of seruing God in newnesse of life. How we haue furnished our selues with all the parts of our Christian Armour, and kept it fast buckled vnto vs in the whole time of our warfare. How wee haue kept our spirituall watch, and how wee haue resisted or beene overcome with the tentations of our spirituall enemies. How we haue performed the generall duties of Christianity, and the speciall duties of our callings; and how we haue obserued or neglected the duties of our daily exercise, as they haue before beene described vnto vs. How wee haue profited by Gods Iudgements vpon our selues or others, for the mortification of our sins, and weaning our hearts from the loue of the world; and how his mercies and blessings, his patience and long-suffering, haue beene auailable with vs, to leade vs vnto repentance, and to make vs diligent and cheerefull in his seruice. Whether wee haue beene made more carefull by our former falls, to looke better to our footing, and whether the remembrance of our lost time, hath not made vs double our diligence, that wee may redeeme it, by performing vnto God more faithfull seruice for the time to come. Whether we are daily carefull to renew our Couenant with God, and to preserve our selues from sliding backe in the breach of our promises. Whether we decay not in our first loue, but nourish it and all other sauing graces in their first seruency, yea increase in them daily more and more. Finally,

nally, whether wee are prepared to beare afflictions, and to meete death with a cheerefull and willing heart; and whether our accounts bee in that readinesse, that we doe with comfort and ioy expect and wish for the coming of our Sauour Christ vnto Iudgement.

But the chiefe things wherein we must most often and seriously examine our selues, are our finnes, and the miseries and punishments which attend vpon them. And first, our originall corruption, whereby we haue defaced Gods Image in vs, and defiled all the powers and faculties of our soules and bodies, whereby being vtterly disabled vnto all good duties of Gods seruice, they are prone vnto all euill, and to performe seruice vnto sinne and Satan. So that there is naturally no sound place in vs, but from the crowne of the head, to the sole of the foot, nothing but wounds and bruises, and putrifying sores. Nor any sinne and wickednesse, how abominable so euer, the seeds whereof doe not remaine in vs, wanting nothing but the tentations of the deuill, the world, and our owne flesh, to make them sprout vp and come to their full growth, as oft as we get fit opportunity. Neither is this the case of some alone, but of all without exception, one as well as another, being ready to commit any outrageous wickednes, Dauid as well as Cain, Lot as the Sodomites, Peter as well as Iudas. Or if they doe nor, it is not from the benefit of nature, which is equally corrupt in all (all being alike the children of wrath and dead in their finnes) but from the Spirit of God, which either sanctifieth and changeth the nature of the Elect, or restraineth the wicked, by giuing them some common and Morall gifts, for the good of humane society, which otherwise could not stand, if they were let loose to their naturall impiety. Of which restraint, if they be once freed and left to themselves, they burst out with Nero, Hazael, Iudas, and many others, into such outrageous wickednesse, as in the time of the Spirits restraint, their owne iudgements, who are best acquainted with their owne hearts, would haue thought, that their natures could not possibly be inclined to such abominations. Heere then is matter enough for our triall and examination to be exercised about, if wee will rake in this noysome sinke of all vncleannesse, and rip these old sores to the bottome. Which though it be vnpleasant to corrupted nature, because being full of selfe-loue, it fleeth the sight of its owne deformities, and being willing to flatter it selfe with a false opinion of some native beaurty, doth abhorre the discovery of its vgly filthinesse, and with the Elephant wilfully muddeth the cleere waters, which would giue it a view how monstrously it is misshapen; yet is it a consideration most necessary; seeing this is the roote and fountaine of all our other finnes, whereof wee should most seriously repent, bewayling, and reforming this inbred corruption; which if wee neglect, and spend all our time about our actuall finnes, it is all one, as if we should bee still chopping at the branches, and let the roote liue and grow, or be wholly taken vp in clensing of the streames, and neuer take care for the purging of the fountaine, which being polluted, defiles them with its filthinesse.

Secondly, in this examination, we must call our selues to an account for our actuall finnes, which we our selues haue committed against Gods Majesty, by breaking his Law, and all and euery of his Commandements, in thought,

§. Sect. 3.

That we are chiefly to examine our selues in respect of our finnes; and first, our originall corruption.

Esa. 1. 6.

Eph. 2. 1, 3.

2. King. 8. 13.

§. Sect. 4.

Secondly, we must examine our selues concerning our actuall transgressions, according to the Law.

thought, word, and deed. The rule of which examination, by which we are to come to our triall, is the Law of God it selfe, which by our finnes we haue transgressed; for as the Apostle saith, By the Law commeth the knowledge of sinne, being that straight rule which best discovereth the crookednesse of our actions, and wherein, and how many wayes we haue swarued from it. In which course, the best manner of proceeding is, that we begin where God beginneth, and so proceed with him, from one Commandement to another, examining our selues, how often and many wayes we haue offended against euery one of them, both by neglecting the duties which they command, and committing the finnes which they forbid. Whereof I shall not need heere to set downe the particulars, according to which, triall is to bee made, seeing I haue done it already in the former part of this Treatise, vnto which I referre the Reader, who desireth to make vse of it for this purpose. Only let vs know, that the Law of God, being a most perfect abstract of his will, doth containe in it all vertues which he commandeth, and vices which he forbiddeth, and though it be brieue in words, yet as David saith, it is in the sense and meaning, exceeding large. And therefore when we goe to examine our selues according vnto it, we must not looke so much to the bare words of euery Commandement, as to their sense, being enlarged according to the rules of extension, which are grounded vpon the Scriptures, and euen vpon reason and common equity. As first, where any vice or sinne is forbidden, there the contrary vertue or duty is commanded, and contrariwise. Secondly, where one particular vice is forbidden, or duty commanded, there all vices or duties of the same nature and kinde, are forbidden or commanded, as our Sauour hath taught vs in his exposition of the Law. Thirdly, the Law being perfect, doth require perfect obedience of the whole man, and euery part inward and outward, soule and body; so also whole obedience vnto all and euery Commandement: for hee that breaketh one of them, is guilty of all; and not onely that our obedience bee whole and totall in respect of the parts, but also in respect of degrees, that it bee in that perfection which this perfect Law requireth. Fourthly, the Law being spirituall, and hauing a spirituall sense and power, doth binde not onely the outward man to externall obedience, but also the soule and secret thoughts, the heart and conscience. Yea, the first and last Commandements haue a large extent about all the rest, reaching euen to our thoughts and first motions, which haue not the consent of will ioyned with them. Fifthly, where any vertue or vice is commanded or forbidden, there also all the meanes and occasions are commanded or forbidden. Sixthly, where any duty is commanded, or vice forbidden, there also the signes of them both are also inioyned or prohibited: for wee must haue a good conscience, both before God, and also before men, and auoyd not onely the euill it selfe, but also all appearance of it. And lastly, the common rule of charity, binding vs to loue our neighbours as our selues, and that God may be glorified in their obedience, as well as our owne, the Law of God requireth, that wee should not onely obserue all that is contriued in it, our selues, but also prouide, as much as in vs lyeth, that it bee likewise obserued by our neighbours, yea euen by our enemies.

And

Psal. 119. 96.

Mat. 5. 21, 28.

Iam. 2. 10.

Rom. 7. 14.

Mat. 24. 16.

Psal. 119. 139.

And if by helpe of these rules we enlarge the Law of God, according to the true sense and meaning of it, and examine our selues answerably in all the duties which it commandeth, and all the vices and finnes which it forbiddeth, we shall heereby come to a cleere and liuely sense and feeling of our finnes in all the sorts and kinds of them; vnto which, when we haue in some measure attained, we must then further examine our selues, how often and innumerable times we haue reiterated and multiplyed the same finnes, against euery of Gods Commandements, in thought, word, and deed. And then wee shall plainly see, that our finnes in number exceed the haire of our head, and the starres of heauen. Which when we haue done, we must in the next place consider, how haynous they haue many of them beene, in respect of their quality and degree. Where we are carefully to take heed that we doe not (as corrupt nature, pride, and selfe-loue perswade the most) excuse, minse, and extenuate our finnes; but that wee looke vpon them in their naturall vgliness and outragiousnesse, and aggravate them by all their circumstances of persons, manner, time, place, and the meanes which God hath giuen vs, to preserue vs from committing them, or of raising vs out of them by repentance. As that wee haue thus and thus sinned, not onely when wee were the vassals of Satan, vncalled and vnregenerate, with full consent of will, and with all delight and cheerefulnesse, but since wee were called, regenerate and inlightened by Gods Spirit; and since we haue giuen our names to Christ, and professed our selues to be his seruants, we haue oftentimes done seruice vnto Satan his arch-enemy, by committing many finnes, not onely through frailty and infirmity, either through ignorance, or because we were taken vpon the sudden and at vnawares; but oftentimes wittingly and willingly against knowledge and conscience, yea sometime wilfully, being transported with the violence of our carnall lusts and passions, and (as it were) with an high hand against God. That we haue thus sinned, not onely in secret, committing that wickednesse in Gods presence, which wee would haue forborne in the presence of a mortall man, but also openly and scandalously, to the dishonour of God, and slander of our profession. That wee haue not seldome falne into these finnes, but often and many times; yea even after that we haue repented of them, and haue resolved, vowed, and promised, that we would leaue and forsake them. That we haue committed these finnes, not against an enemy, a stranger, or one of meane condition, like vnto our selues, but against God, omnipotent in power, and glorious in Maiesty; and vnto vs so infinite in grace and mercy, that with all other blessings which we inioy or hope for, he hath giuen the Sonne of his loue vnto vs, and for vs, that he might by his death worke that great worke of our Redemption, and giue vnto vs life and happinesse, who were the slaues of Satan, dead in our finnes, enemies to God and our owne good, and the children of wrath as well as others. That we haue not by strong inducements beene drawne to offend so great and gracious a God, but for meere trifles, and the contemptible wages of worldly vanities. That wee haue committed these finnes, being the members of Iesus Christ our Head, and so (as much as in vs did lie) haue defiled him with the taint of our finnes, and drawne him (as much as we could) into communion with

§. Sect. 5.

How we must aggravate our finnes, in respect of circumstances.

vs in our wickednesse, that shed his precious blood to purge and purifie vs, that we might be holy, and without all blemish of sinfull pollution. That we haue by our sinnes grieved the good Spirit in vs, vexing him who is our Comforter, by quenching his good morions, and obeying the suggestions of Satan, and the lusts of our sinfull flesh. That we haue thus sinned, and hauing false, haue lien in our sinnes without repentance, notwithstanding the plentifull meanes which God hath granted of grace and sanctification. As the light of the Gospell and preaching of the Word, whereby we haue been instructed, counselled, admonished, reproued, comforted in all good courses by his gracious promises, and drawne from sinne by the denunciation of his curse and terrible threatenings. Yea notwithstanding the Lord hath encouraged vs to serue him cheerfully, with the liberall wages of present blessings, and disheartened vs from going on in sinne, by causing vs to feelee the smart of his chastisements and corrections.

h. Sect. 6.

That it is a profitable course to keep a Catalogue or Register of our speciall sinnes; and the manifold fruits which will arise of it.

And thus we are to examine our selues, both in respect of the number and quantity, and the hainousnesse and quality of our sinnes. But because our obseruation is slight, our memories short, and not able to recount and recall them, when we most need to haue them in our sight, and because we oftentimes are interrupted in this exercise by many distractions: It should be a profitable course, if we would, when wee are best at leisure, and most fit for this exercise, and especially in the day of our affliction and humiliation, examine our selues thorowly and seriously, according to euery one of the Commandements, in the order before prescribed; and as we goe, take a Catalogue of all the sinnes that we can with deliberate study call to our remembrance, which we haue committed in the whole course of our liues, not in the particular acts, which being often reiterated, are innumerable, but in their seuerall kinds. And for our more distinct and orderly proceeding herein, we may consider how we haue carried our selues in our seuerall ages, states and callings, in our childhood, youth, mature, and old age, how towards God, our neighbours, and our selues; how before we were called, in the dayes of our ignorance; and how since wee were called and inlightened with the knowledge of God and his truth; how in this, and how in that passage of our liues; how when we were children vnder government of our parents; and how since we were parents and gouernours of others. Which when we haue at once or sundry times drawne, and enlarged, as afterwards vpon occasion our sinnes come to our remembrance, it will be a notable helpe, not onely for the beginning of sound repentance, but also for the renewing of it, as oft as we goe about it: and minister vnto vs matter plentifully, for the confession of our sinnes before God, and deprecation, when we haue thus humbled our soules in his sight; and much strengthen our faith in the assurance of their remission, when as we haue thus specially repented of them, confessed them, and craued at Gods hands mercy and forgiveness. But especially we must remember in this our Catalogue, to set down our most grievous and hainous sinnes, whereby wee haue most dishonoured God, and prouoked his displeasure against vs, whether they haue been committed before, or after our calling. For though God hath forgiven them, wee must must not forget them, but must retaine them in memory, and daily repent of them, vsing them as a chiefe motive to worke our hearts to hearty sorrow, both for them, and all our other finnes, and as goades and prickes in our sides, to make vs with more zeale to goe on in the contrary course, and in bringing forth to Gods glory the fruits of new obedience. And thus the Lord required of the Israelites, that they should alwayes remember their stiffe-necked rebellion in the Wildernesse, whereby they prouoked him to wrath against them. And thus among their other finnes, they specially remembered and acknowledged their ingratitude in rejecting Gods government, and desiring of a King. Thus Dauid repenting of all his other wickednesse, doth specially call to minde his adultery and murder, euen after God by his Prophet had assured him of forgiveness. And the Apostle Paul, vpon all occasions remembreth his grieuous sinne of persecuting the Church, both for his humiliation, and to stirre vp his zeale in Gods seruice. And thus hauing set downe our accounts with God for the time past, it will be a good course for the time to come, that our reckonings may be kept continually euen, to keepe a iournall or day-booke, wherein we are to set downe what finnes of note wee can obserue in our selues every particular day, either in the committing of any euill which God hath condemned, or in omitting, or negligent performing any speciall and necessary duties which he hath commanded, respecting himselfe, our neighbours, or our owne persons, which if it haue beene hainous and grieuous, we may well register and write it in our Catalogue (as it were) in capitall or red letters, as a sinne to bee repented of in the whole course of our liues. For if Merchants and Trades-men finde it profitable and necessary, to haue not onely bookes of accounts, which containe the maine matters of their estates, what they haue, and what they haue parted with; what they owe, and what is owing to them; but also their day-bookes, wherein they write what they buy, and what they sell; what they haue laid out, and what hath come in; and yet all this paines is taken for the preserving and increasing their worldly and temporall riches, which are momentany, vncertaine, mutable and sure to perish: Why should wee thinke such care too much, and paines too great, for the good of our soules, and the preserving or increasing of our spirituall and eternall riches, the discharge and cleering of our debts vnto God, which if they bee found vpon our account at the great Audit of Gods last Iudgement, shall neuer be forgiven, but make vs liable to everlasting punishments? Besides, we shall receiue for the present, diuers benefits, by keeping and registering this strict account. For heereby we shall be more watchfull ouer our selues, that we let no enemy enter in the day, which will trouble vs at night, and will not let vs rest till we haue thrust it out by vsfained repentance; we shall be freed from carnall security, and be made more carefull in obseruing our finnes, either to preuent or reforme them, and more able to remember them when they are committed, that we may bewaile them, and take better heed for the time to come. And finally, we shall not so easily be overcome of euery temptation, and inticed vnto sinne, when as we know before-hand, that it shall come into account, and vnder the censure of conscience, awarding vs to shame or sorrow,

Deut. 9. 7.

1. Sam. 12. 19.

Psal. 51. 14.

1. Tim. 1. 13.

1. Cor. 15. 9.

A. 26. 10.

sorrow, and to lose the sweetness, which we haue tasted with some small delight in sinning, by the smart and paine of speedy repentance. And no wise man will runne vpon the score, or haue his name in the shop booke, for euery needlesse trifle, which may well bee spared, because one thing draweth on another vntill it come to a round summe, nor for a greater matter, when he purposeth present payment, as soone as the wares are brought home, because the crossed booke, as it sheweth his honesty in paying his debts, so at least it seemeth to argue defect of present meanes, in that for the time he was indebted: so much lesse would any come vpon the score, or into the booke of conscience for euery small bait of worldly pleasure or profit, seeing here especially one thing pulls on another, and many littles make a great reckoning, nor yet for matters of greater moment, if they considered that payment must bee made, the score cleared, and the booke crossed, before they can betake themselves to quiet rest. Which when it is done, though it sheweth their faith and piety in repenting, yet withall their frailty and imperfection in their spirituall estate, in that by falling into sinne they needed repentance.

And thus we must examine our selues in respect of our sins, which when we haue done, we must not rest there, but enter also into the consideration of the misery and punishments, which not being repented of, they bring vpon vs. As that they make vs subiect to the wrath and displeasure of Almighty God, who being a consuming fire, and we as stubble or combustible matter, it must needs be a fearfull thing to fall into his hands. To the curse also of the Law, denounced against all that continue not in all that is written therein to doe it, and to all the plagues and punishments threatened therein, which respect either this life, or the life to come: that they are a wall of separation betweene our God and vs, stopping from vs the sweet influences of his grace and loue, and hindring vs of many testimonies of his fauour in temporall things, which otherwise hee would graciously bestow vpon vs. And contrariwise, that till we repent, they in danger vs to euerlasting condemnation, which though we doe hereafter auoyd, by turning from our sinnes vnto God, yet in the meane time they expose vs to temporary afflictions, which God vseth as a meanes to bring vs to repentance, crossing vs in our euill courses, and setting thorny hedges in our way, to stay vs from running too farre from him. They moue him to meet with vs at euery turne, and to bring vs to a true sight and sense of our sinnes, by fitting his punishments in some proportion or likenesse vnto them; because so brutish wee are in obseruing our sinnes, and the iudgements of God inflicted for them, that (like the dog before the sheepe that he hath worried) wee need to be taken with the manner, and to haue our fault laid before vs, when he taketh vs in hand to beate vs for it. For because sinne is too sweet to our carnall appetite, therefore the Lord imbittereth it with the wormewood and gall of afflictions, which oftentimes much more vexing vs, then wee tooke delight in the pleasure of sinne, doth make vs afterwards, when wee remember this lothsome after-taste, to restraîne our appetite, and not to giue way to our carnall concupiscence alluring vs to wickednesse.

And thus we see the subiect matter and manner of our examination, with

§. Sect. 6.
Of the consideration of our misery and punishment.
Heb. 10. 31.

Hos. 2. 6.

Lam. 3. 19.

§. Sect. 7.
Of the end of this examination, and time when it is to be performed.

with the helpes and meanes whereby we may be furthered in it. Now the maine end of it is, that it may serue as an effectuall meanes to bring vs to repentance; for therefore we labour to come vnto a true sight of our sinne, that we may vnfeignedly bewaile them with bitter griefe. Therefore doe we take a thorow view of our sinnes, and the Iudgements of God, miseries and punishments, which doe accompany them, that seeing the vgly deformities of the one, and feeling or foreseeing the smart of the other, we may be moued, either not to sinne, or being ouertaken, to leaue and forsake them, and to prevent our owne woe by speedy repentance. The time of this examination is alwayes in season, because repentance is neuer vnseasonable. For seeing the score is seldome cleere, and our frailty such, that conscience is occasioned to hold the pen still in hand, and euery hand while writeth vp our debts; therefore we must be still examining, cleering and crossing of our bookes, that nothing may stand vpon account, when we shall be called to Iudgement; which being most certaine, and the time most vncertaine, it would be our wisdom to be alwaies in readinesse. In which regard it were to be wished, that we would spend some little time, euery night before vve goe to sleepe, in examining our selues, and cleering our accounts for the day past, the which I here passe ouer, hauing spoken of it before in the daily exercise. But most solemnly and seriously are wee to set our selues about this duty of examination, when as wee haue some speciall cause of renewing our repentance. As when wee desire any extraordinary benefit which vve greatly vwant, when we vndertake any waighy business; vwhen vvee humble our selues in any tolemne manner before God, either publikely or priuately, in the sight and sense of our sinnes, which vve desire should be pardoned, or of some imminent and approaching iudgement, vvhich vvee vould prevent, or some present affliction vvhich vve vould haue remoued; or vwhen vvee prepare our selues that vve may come as vvorthy ghests to the Lords Table. Then is this examination most seasonable, as being the best preparatiue for humiliation, seruent prayer, and serious repentance.

1. Cor. 11. 28.

§. Sect. 8.

A complaint of the neglect of this duty, and the causes thereof.

But alas, howv is this excellent duty generally neglected? and howv seldome doe the most that professe Christianity, call themselves vnto this account, multiplying their sinnes from day to day, and neuer making any reckoning of them? And although almost all men hold it to be most necessary, to be still reuievvng their vvorldly estates, and to keepe a strict account of their debts, and meanes to discharge them of their disbursements and expences, and of their profits and commings in; yet howv few are they vvho seriously examine their debts to God, or of the meanes vvhereby they may discharge them? howv they thrive and increase, or howv they decay and goe backvvard in their spirituall estate, till at last they prooue Banquerupts in all grace and goodnesse, and so desperate in their estates, that they onely thinke howv they may runne further in debt, and neuer take care howv it may be discharged? Of vvhich neglect there are many causes. First, because they are so farre in loue vvith their sinnes, that they loath all meanes vvhich might vvorke any dislike, or conuince them of the necessity to leaue and forsake them. So our Sauour saith, that when light is come into the world, men love darknesse rather then light, be- cause their deeds are euill. For euery man that doth euill, hateth the light, neither commeth to it, lest his deeds should bee reproofed. Secondly, because through long neglect of this duty, their debts are growne to such an hideous summe, that they are afraid to reuiew their reckonings, heerein like Banquerupts, who hauing consumed their meanes, and made their estates desperate, cannot indure to keepe any accounts, or if they doe, to cast vp their reckonings, because their debts are growne so great, that they haue no hope that they shall euer discharge them; and therefore they will not grieue themselues in looking vpon those euils which they cannot auoyd. Or like vnto foolish and desperate Patients, who haue let their sores run so long, without vsing the meanes whereby they might haue been cured, that now they feare the remedy more then the diseafe, and chuse rather to rot in their corruption, then to haue their festred sores searched to the bottome. Thirdly, because they so ouermuch loue and minde worldly things, that they securely neglect their spirituall estate, and are so wholly taken vp in keeping their accounts with men, that they can find no leasure to account with God. Yea so wholly are they possessed with earthly vanities, that they neuer so much as thinke of it, as a thing necessary, that they should spend any time in examining themselues, and searching out their sinnes. Fourthly, because they presume so much of Gods mercy, that they imagine that he wil forgieue all their debts in the grosse summe, and neuer trouble either himselfe or them, in examining particulars, though in many expresse places of Scripture he hath professed the contrary; and though it will not stand with Gods infinite wisdom to forgieue such great debts, before his debtors take notice of them, that they may loue him, who hath forgien them so much, be thankfull, and render vnto him due praise for his infinite bounty. Wherein what doe they else but make an Idoll of Gods mercy, in separating it not onely from his Iustice, but also from his Wisedome and Truth?

Ioh. 3. 19, 20.

*Eccles. 11. 9.
Maib. 12. 33.
and 16. 2.
and 25. 19.
2. Cor. 5. 10.*

CAP. XXIII.

Containing diuers effectuell reasons to moue vs vnto this exercise of Meditation.

*§. Sect. 1.
That this duty is required in the Scriptures.*

Vt that those who truly feare God, may not bee carried away in this common streame of negligence and corruption, sporting themselues in the pleasures of sinne, vntill they fall into the dead sea of endlesse destruction; let them first consider, that this duty of consideration and examination of our estates, is strictly required of God, and hath been alwayes practised by the faithfull. The former is manifest by plaine testimonies of holy Scriptures. Dauid exhorteth vs to stand in awe, and sinne not; and to commune with our owne hearts vpon our bed, and be still. The Church in the Lamentations demandeth why a liuing man should complaine, seeing a man is punished for his sinnes? and therefore his best way is, not to lye lamenting his paine, but to finde out and remooue the cause, that the effect may cease. Let vs search and try our wayes (saith she) and turne againe to the Lord. So the Lord saith, that the people of Israel, vpon their freedome out of captiuitie, captivity, should remember their mayes, and all their doings, wherein they had been defiled, that they might be loathsome in their own sight, for all the evils which they had committed. Thus the Apostle exhorteth vs to examine our selves before we come to the Lords Table, and telleth vs, that if we would iudge our selves, we should not be iudged of the Lord. So elsewhere, Examine your selves, whether you be in the faith, prove your selves, &c. And thus in many places he putteth those in mind to whom he writeth, of their former sinfull estate, out of which, through Gods mercy they were deliuered, that they might repent of their finnes past, and praise the Lord for their present condition. The neglect of which duty the Lord complaineth of and condemneth in the Iewes, as the cause of their grosse ingratitude and impenitency. The Ox knoweth his owner, and the Ass his Masters crib, but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider. So Ieremie, I hearkened and heard, but they spake not aright, no man repented of his wickednesse, saying, What haue I done? As on the other side, the practice of this duty is commended vnto vs in the examples of the godly. Thus David performing himselfe, what he perswaded vnto others, saith, that hee considered his owne wayes, and turned his feet vnto Gods testimonies. So the Prodigall did begin his repentance by coming to himselfe (as it were) out of the dead swoone of sinne, calling to remembrance his departing from such a gracious Father, and his owne wandrings in the wayes of wickednesse, in which he had lost himselfe, as in an inextricable and endlesse Labyrinth. And the Apostle often recalleth his finnes to his remembrance, to humble himselfe that had committed them, glorifie God who had forgiven them, and comfort others who had alike saine, and to incourage them with him to forsake their finnes, and turne vnto God by vntained repentance.

Psal. 4. 4.

Lam. 3. 39, 40.

Vnto these precepts drawing vs, and these examples leading vs to this duty of examination, we may adde the great profit which may allure vs, and the vrgent necessity which presseth it vpon vs. For first, the benefits are manifold which accompany this exercise. Examine thy selfe more (saith one) then thy neighbours, for that is thy gaue, this theirs. Thou shouldst rather take an account of thy actions, then of thy moneyes; seeing these perish, but they are permanent, and shall continue with thee. More especially, this examination bringeth vs vnto a distinct knowledge of sinne, which otherwise wee should onely see in generall view, and (as it were) in the whole lump or masse. It discouereth vnto vs their innumerable numbers both great and small, and as the Sun shine, helpeth vs to discerne euery fluttyish corner, which before was not seene, and reuealeth not onely the grosse vncleanesse of the house, but much dust and innumerable moates, which we not discerning, thought the house cleane and free from them: So doth this searching of our hearts lay open vnto vs many annoyances, which before were hid, and innumerable numbers of our lesser finnes, which wee thinking to be nothing, supposed our selues to bee so pure, that there was no need to be purged of them. It sheweth vnto vs not onely our grosse offences, but also the corruptions and imperfections of our best actions; and with our errors and wandrings out of the way of truth, our lameness and slownesse whilst we are walking in it. It discouereth, with the number of our finnes, their greatnesse and gainousnesse, and maketh vs know,

Ezek. 20. 43.

Reg. 1. 37.

1. Cor. 11. 28. 31.

Gal. 6. 45.

2. Cor. 13. 5.

Rom. 6. 17.

1. Cor. 6. 9. 10.

Ephes. 2. 11.

2. Sa. 1. 3.

Jer. 3. 6.

Psal. 119. 59.

Luk. 15. 17.

§. Sect. 2.

The great profit of this exercise of examination.
Plus te ipsum ex plora quam proximos: nam illud lucrum tuum est, hoc proximatorum, &c. Merianzen. infestant.

whilst we search our sores to the bottome, that they are so deepe and dangerous, that they need present cure, and the fountaine of Calvary's Blood, which seemed so slight, whilst they were skinned over with colourable excuses, that we thought there was no haste of the cure, & that our Lord, haue mercy vpon vs, or shallow broken sigh was sufficient to heal them. It worketh our hearts to a true hatred of them. When vpon triall wee see their vgliness and deformity, their horrible pollution and noysome sent. For howsoeuer, whilst these filthy channels were vnstirred, they did little trouble vs with any ill saour; yet when wee rake in these stinking puddles, they make vs abhorre them, and shew by their noysomenesse, how much they need cleansing. Yea, it will make vs to loath our selues for our sinnes sake, and thus abhorring our selues, to repent, with Iob, in dust and ashes, according to that of the Prophet, Then shall ye remember your owne euill wayes, and your doings that were not good, and shall loath your selues in your owne sight, for your iniquities and abominations. And as it thus humbleth and prepareth our hearts for repentance, so is it a most effectuall meanes to worke it in vs. And this Salomon intimateth, where hee saith, that if the Israelites hauing sinned, should besinke themselves, and repent; noting that they must consider their euill wayes, before they could repent of them. And our Saviour first requireth, that the Church of Ephesus should remember from whence shee was falne, and then that she should repent and doe her first workes of loue. Thus the lamenting Church, remembering her sinnes and afflictions which they had brought vpon her, was humbled and repented. By reason whereof, it furthereth much the worke of sanctification, and helpeth to purge out of vs the reliques of our sinfull corruptions. For this frequent examination will not suffer sin to sleepe with vs, nor to haue any time to fortifie it selfe against vs, but as soone as it is entred, it discouereth this enemy, and will not suffer it to lay against our soules any secret ambushments. It nourisheth in vs the true feare of God, and maketh vs carefull to auoyd his displeasure. It pulleth vs backe, being ready to fall into sinne, when we consider the miseries which attend vpon it, and from relapsing into our old diseases, when we remember with what danger and difficulty we did escape them. It keepeth our hearts and consciences pure and peaceable, whilst by the frequent vse of it, they are preferued from the pollution of sinne, or quickly purged when they are defiled. It nourisheth Gods graces in vs, and maketh vs constant in the wayes of godlinesse. It helpeth vs much in aspiring towards perfection, whilst by often reuiewing of our works, we see their defects, and indeuour to amend them. Finally, it preferueth vs from receiuing any hurt by Gods temporary Iudgements, for if we would iudge our selues, he would not iudge vs; and maketh vs comfortably, and with ioy expect the comming of the Lord to the last Iudgement, when as wee hereby keepe euen our accounts, and are prepared to render a reckoning when he calleth for it.

The necessity of this exercise doth likewise appeare, because the neglect of it depriveth vs of all the former benefits. But more especially, as repentance is necessary vnto saluation, so this examination must necessarily goe before repentance. For first, we must by examination come to the knowledge of our sinnes, before we can either bewaile or turne from them.

Whereof

Iob 42. 6.
Ezek. 36. 31.

1. King. 8. 47.

Apoec. 2. 5.

Lam. 3. 19, 30.

1. Cor. 11. 32.

6. Sect. 3.
That this exercise of Meditation is very necessary.

Whereof it is, that our Saujour calleth sinners onely to repentance, that is, such as know and acknowledge themselves to be in this number. And Jeremy willethe the backsliding Israelites; first to acknowledge their iniquities, and then to repent of them, and to turne vnto the Lord. And David saith, that he thought on his wayes, and then turned his feet vnto Gods Testimonies. So the Lord saith of the Iewes, that they should remember their wayes and be ashamed. And putteth consideration before repentance, as a cause and meanes of it; Because (saith he) he considereth and inneth away from all his transgressions; implying that he could not haue turned, vnlesse he had first considered of his sinnes from which hee turned. And this (as one excellently obserueth) is implied euen in nature, where there is the same instrument of seeing and weeping, to shew vnto vs, that weeping depends vpon seeing. He that sees well, weepes well. He that sees his sinnes thorowly, will bewaile them heartily. And this want of consideration, the Prophet noteth to haue beene the cause, why Ephraim would not turne vnto the Lord, that he might heale them; They consider not (saith he) in their hearts, that I remember all their wickednesse. And the Prophet Jeremy noteth this to haue beene the cause of the Iewes impenitency; because no man so much as demanded, What haue I done? Neither in truth is there any one greater cause why men in our owne dayes goe on in their sinnes without repentance, then want of due consideration what they are doing, namely, treasuring vp against themselves wrath, against the day of wrath, and (as it were) heaping vp a pile of wood for their owne burning. Neither were it possible, that they should rush into all sinne, like the horse into the battell, if they would but examine, whither they are a going, and into what desperate dangers of death and destruction they plunge themselves, by continuing in their wicked courses. Againe, without often and strict examination, it is not possible for vs to finde out, or auoyd the deceitfull wiles of our owne sinfull hearts; seeing they are so deepe, that without much searching, wee cannot found them to the bottome. Whereof it is that the Wiseman counselleth vs, that we should aboue all other obseruations, looke to our hearts. And the Apostle exhorteth vs to take speciall heed, lest there should be in vs an heart of unbeliefe, in departing from the liuing God. Moreover, without this diligent search, whereby wee come to a sight of our wants, we would flatter our selues in our weake and fraile estate, as though nothing needed reformation; and pleasing our selues in our owne imperfections, we would neuer labour and strue after more perfection. For we are naturally so full of pride and selfe-loue, that as Salomon speaketh, Every way of a man seemeth right in his owne eyes. And therefore our Saujour exhorteth vs to take heed that the light which is in vs be not darkenesse, that is, that our seeming wisdom be not foolishnesse, and that wee mistake not the stained cloth of our imperfect obedience, for the pure white linnen of perfect sanctity; and so grossly abuse our selues: for if a man thinketh himselfe to be something, when he is nothing, he is deceived, and coozeneth himselfe of his owne saluation. With which deceit it is easie to be overtaken (with proud Iusticiaries) by reason of our selfe-loue, if wee doe not often and seriously examine our selues, according to the perfect rule of Gods Law, and in this cleere Looking glasse behold our blemishes, and

Mat. 9. 13.

Ier. 3. 13, 14.

Psal. 19. 39.

Ezek. 16. 61.

Ch. 18. 28.

M. Dyke of repentance.

Hos. 7. 1, 2.

Ier. 2. 8.

Rom. 2. 9.

Ier. 17. 10.

Pro. 4. 23.

Hos. 1. 2.

Deut. 11. 16.

Pro. 2. 2.

Luk. 11. 35.

Gal. 6. 3.

the manifold wants and imperfections of our best actions. Furthermore, the necessity of this examination heereby appeareth, in that the neglect thereof is the cause of all sinne. For what is the reason why men rush headlong into all manner of grosse and notorious wickednesse? Why they blaspheme Gods holy Name for no worldly aduantage, but vpon meere vanity? Why they displease God, and disable themselues vnto all duties of his seruice, by sursetting and drunkennesse, without any gaine, yea, to the discredit of their persons, and ruining of their estates? Why they commit filthinesse and vncleannesse, thereby weakning their bodies, and shortning their liues? and why they continue in these and many such finnes, with impenitency and hardnesse of heart? Surely not so much through the ignorance of their mindes, or because their iudgements are not conuincd, that these are grieuous finnes, which for the present draw Gods fearefull plagues vpon them; and will heereafter be punished with euerlasting death: For they heare these things daily sounding in their eares in the Ministry of the Word, and see fearefull examples and preidents continually of them in others, who haue liued in the like wickednesse. But because though they haue sight and knowledge, yet they haue no vse of it, the deuill hauing so hud-winkt and blind-folded the eyes of their minde, that they neuer examine their state, nor consider with themselues what they doe, whither they are a-going, nor what will be the issue and end of these things: And so like hooded Hawkes, are carried quietly by the deuill into all wicked courses which leade them to destruction.

And this is manifest by the Scriptures, which in many places shew, that men commit many of their finnes, and liue in them without repentance, because they examine not their estate, nor enter into due consideration what they doe. Thus it is said, that the cause of the Israelites vngatitude and rebellion against God, was, because they did not consider, either Gods goodnesse and bounty, nor their owne wickednesse, and the manifold euils which thereby they brought vpon themselues. That the cause why many of them followed drunkennesse, and sported themselues in this sinne with all sensuall delight, was, because they regarded not the works of the Lord, neither considered the operation of his hands. That they forsooke the Lord, and worshipped stockes and stones, the works of their owne hands, because none considered in their hearts the vanity of Idols, and that themselues had made them of the same tree, wherof they had burned a part, and conuerted other parts of it to other vses. That the cause of Babylons insolency & pride, wherby they tyrānized ouer Gods people, was, because they did not cōsider, that God had made them only scourges & rods to correct his people, which hauing done, he would cast the into the fire: which things they did not lay to heart, nor remember the latter end, namely, their destruction, and the deliuerance of Gods people. And as neglect of this consideration is the cause of sinne, so also it exposeth vs to fearefull punishments; for if we will not iudge our selues, we shall be iudged of the Lord; if we forget his Iudgements and neuer thinke of them, hee will rub our memories, and helpe vs to recouer our lost wits, by whipping vs like Bedlems, and making vs sensible by smart, who were insensible of reason. Thus the Lord saith, that the whole Land was made desolate, because no man laid it to heart.

6. Sect. 4.
The former point, prooued by the Scriptures.
Esa. 1. 3.

Esa. 5. 18, 19.

Esa. 44. 19.

Esa. 47. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11.

Ier. 13. 11.

heart. And thus he threateth the Israelites, that because they did not remember and consider his former mercies, and their owne finnes and unworthinesse, therefore he would recompence their wayes upon their head, and make them to know him by his Iudgements, when as his mercies would not make them acknowledge him. Lastly, this may show vs how necessary this examination is, seeing it must of necessity bee done either in this world, or the world to come. For all shall render a reckoning of all that they haue done in the flesh; and therefore if wee doe not examine and iudge our selues heere, God will examine and condemne vs heereafter. If we doe not call our selues to account in this life, when as finding our selues short in our reckonings, we haue time to sue, through the Meditation of Christ, for the pardon of our debts, and to procure a generall acquittance and discharge: we shal be accountant to Gods Iustice at the day of Iudgement, when the Day of grace and saluation being past, there will bee no place for procuring of pardon; but being much indebted, and hauing nothing to pay, we shall be cast into the prison of outer darkenesse, without hope of mercy, or deliuerance from that endlesse misery. Which fearefull Iudgement and condemnation if we would auoyd, let vs heere, whilst the Day of saluation lasteth, examine, iudge, and condemne our selues, that wee may turne from our finnes by vntained repentance; and so hauing Christ to be both our Aduocate and Iudge, we shall then escape Gods seuer and strict Iudgement, seeing he will answere for vs; and our examination and iudgement being already dispatched in this life, nothing shall then remaine, but that he our Iudge should pronounce the sentence of absolution, and enter vs into the full fruition of that heavenly happinesse, and euerlasting ioyes of his Kingdome, which by his death and merits he hath purchased for vs.

CAP. XXV.

Of the fourth priuate meanes of a godly life, which is, walking daily with God.

THe fourth priuate meanes of a godly life, is, with Enoch to walke with God, that is, to set our selues in his presence, alwayes remembring that he is with vs, hearing all our words, and beholding all our actions, yea euen the very secret thoughts of our hearts: And that not as an idle spectatour, but as a righteous Iudge, who is both able and willing to reward vs bountifully, if wee doe well; and to punish vs seuerely, if wee doe euill. Wherein wee haue holy Dauid for our example, who professeth, that hee did set the Lord alwayes before him. Which that wee may imitate, let our iudgements first be thorowly informed in this truth, that howsoeuer God keepeth his chiefe residence in heauen, in respect of reuealing himselfe most cleerely to his Angels and Saints, and manifestation of his presence, by admitting them to a more full and perfect vision of his Maiesty and glory, yet being infinite and incomprehensible, he filleth all places in heauen and earth with his presence, containing all things, and being him-

Exod. 16. 43.

6. Self. 1.
That we are alwayes in Gods presence:
Gen. 3. 22.

Psal. 16. 2.

1. King. 8. 27.

Jer. 23. 23, 24.

Psal. 139. 7, 8, 9.

Job 26. 6.

Pro. 15. 3.

Psal. 139. 12.

Ezek. 4. 13.

Jer. 16. 17.

Pro. 15. 11.

Jer. 17. 10.

Job 42. 2.

§. Sect. 2.

That it would be a powerfull meanes to restrain vs from all sinne, if we would alwayes set God before vs.

selfe contained of nothing. Thus Salomon saith, that the Heauen of heauens cannot containe him. And the Lord himselfe demandeth; Am I a God at hand; and not a God farre off? Can any man hide himselfe in secret places that I shall not see him? Doe not I fill heauen and earth, saith the Lord? And David professeth, that he could in no place, either by sea or land, in heauen or in hell, goe from his presence. And being thus omni-present, he seeth and be-holdeth all things, himselfe in the meane time being inuisible. For hell is naked before him, and destruction hath no couering. The eyes of the Lord are in euery place, beholding the euill and the good. Darkenesse hideth not from him, but the night shineth as the day: the darkenesse and the light are both alike to him. He beholdeth the most hidden secrets, and all things are naked and transparant to his sight. Yea, he seeth all our actions, and his eyes are vpon all our wayes: they are not hid from his face; neither is our iniquity hid from his eyes. Yea, he cleerely discerneth, not onely outward workes in the most secret comers, but he searcheth and tryeth our very hearts and reines. For hell and destruction are before the Lord, and how much more then the hearts of the children of men? And though they be so wicked and deceitfull, that they are neuer knowne vnto other, and oftentimes not to our selues, yet the Lord, who by his infinite wisedome seeth and knoweth all things, searcheth and tryeth them.

The which if it were thorowly considered, would be a most powerfull and effectuall meanes, to moue vs continually to walke with God, to performe all duties of a godly life, and to carry our selues in all our thoughts, words, and workes, at all times, and in all places, as in his sight and presence. If we did euer set God before our eyes, and alwayes remembred that his eyes were vpon vs, it would bee a notable bridle to pull vs backe, and to hold vs vp when wee are ready to fall into any sinne. It would make vs to watch ouer our selues, that we did not doe any wickednesse which is odious and displeasing in his sight, because though it bee a great fault to transgresse the Law of our Soueraigne, yet it is much aggravated by our boldnesse and impudency, when we dare commit it before his face, and in his sight. It would make vs carefull of all our words and wayes, not onely in the duties of our callings, that wee did not carry our selues, either negligently or deceitfully, as in our tradings and dealings, buying and selling, but also in our sports and recreations, where naturally we are most apt to forget our selues, and to discouer most vanity and folly. For if the presence of some graue and godly man would so ouerawe vs, that we should thereby be withheld from the most of our sinnes; and if comming at vnawares and taking vs with the manner, as wee are talking vainely or prophanely, and doing that which is euill or mis-beseeming vs, we are ready to discover the shame of our hearts, in our blushing cheekes and dejected countenances; if the presence and eye of Parents and Schoole-masters, restraints their children and schollers from acting their childish follies, and doing such things which they haue prohibited; if no malefactor is so desperately impudent, as to play his pranks in the presence of his Iudge; and to make him an eye-witnesse of his wickednesse: then how much lesse would wee mis-behave our selues by transgressing Gods Law, if wee did alwayes remember and seriously consider, that our heavenly heavenly Father, Master, and Soueraigne Iudge did looke vpon vs, & Seneca perswaded his friend Lucilius, for the keeping of himselfe within compasse of his duty, to imagine that some graue man, as Cato or Lelius, did still looke vpon him, because spectators would keepe him from offending. And being come to more perfection, would haue a man to feare no mans presence more then his owne, nor any mans testimony, about that of his owne conscience; because hee might flee from another, but not from himselfe, and escape others censure, but not the censure of his owne conscience.

 How much more then would it keepe vs from committing of any wickednesse, if wee alwayes remembered that God looked vpon vs, whose pure eyes cannot indure any sinfull pollution? seeing hee also is greater then our consciences, and so vpriought in his Iudgements, that though conscience may be silenced for a time, and giue in no euidence, or bee a false witnesse, yet it is as impossible to corrupt him, as to escape his sentence, either by flight, or by making our appeale. And this argument David vseth to put an end to the wickednesse of the wicked, because the righteous God tryeth the hearts and the reines. And Salomon dissuadeth the yong man from folly and filthinesse by the same reason; Why wilt thou, my sonne, bee rauisht with a strange woman, and embrace the bosome of a stranger? For the wayes of men are before the eyes of the Lord, and he poureth all his goings. Yea, this should no lesse forcibly restraine vs from secret then from open sinnes, seeing no man can hide himselfe in secret places, that the Lord cannot see him, for hee beholdeth not onely our most hidden actions, but also searcheth the reines and the heart, and will giue unto euery man according to their workes, and hee will bring euery worke into iudgement, with euery secreting, whether it be good, or whether it bee euill. His eyes are vpon the wayes of man, and hee seeth all his goings. There is no darkenesse nor shadow of death where the workers of iniquity may hide themselves. And this argument the Church vseth to preferue them from forgetfulnesse of God, and from idolatry, seeing God would search this out, though men could not see them, because hee knoweth the secrets of the heart. Neither could any thing more forcibly restraine vs from secret sinnes, then a serious consideration of Gods all-seeing presence, as wee see in the example of Ioseph, who though he were sollicitated to commit vncleannesse by his mistresse, who in all lawfull things might command him, and had power to reward him, if he condescended to her desire, and to bring him into much trouble and danger, if he gaue her a repulse, and had also the opportunity of secre-cie, which freed him from shame and punishment, yet resisted the tentation by this alone consideration, that he should hereby grieuously sinne against God, who was a beholder of all his actions. Whereas on the other side, nothing doth make men sinne more boldly and securely, then when hauing put God out of their sight, they imagine they are out of his, and that he eyther seeth or regardeth not their workes of wickednesse. Thus the eye of the adulterer waiteth for the tyn-light, saying, No eye shall see mee.
 And wicked men thus encourage themselves in their wickednesse, saying;
How doth God know? can he iudge thorow the darke cloud? Thicke cloudes are a conering to him, that he seeth not, and he walketh in the circuit of beauen. So the Psalmist saith, that the mighty men of the world hearten themselves

*Atque pars pec-catorum tollitur, si peccatoris resin afficit. Sen.
 Epist. 11.*

Psal. 7. 9.

Ier. 23. 24.

Apoc. 2. 23.

Eccles. 12. 14.

Iob 34. 21, 22.

Psal. 44. 20, 21.

Gen. 39. 9.

Iob 24. 15.

Iob 22. 13, 14.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 5, 6, 7.

on in their oppressions, breaking in pieces Gods people, and afflicting his heritage; slaying the widow and stranger; and murdering the fatherless; saying, The Lord shall not see, neither shall the God of Jacob regard it. And having complained that the proud and violent had risen against him, and sought to destroy his innocent soule, he rendreth this as the reason of it; Because they had not seen God before them.

And as this consideration, that God is present and beholdeth all our actions, powerfully restraineth vs from all sinne; so doth it effectually moue vs vnto all good duties of his seruice. For if it be a strong moriue to make a subject diligent and cheerfull in doing the will of his Soueraigne, who is able to preferre him, and bountifull to reward him, when he taketh notice of his paines, and is an eye-witnesse of all his seruice; and if a souldier will fight valiantly, and hazard himselfe to all danger, when the eye of his Generall is vpon him: then much more would wee spare for our paines in performing the duties of Gods seruice, and in fighting his battels, against the spirituall enemies of our saluation, if wee alwayes remembered that the eye of our supreme Soueraigne, and chiefe Commander were still vpon vs, who is infinitely able, and no lesse willing to preferre and reward vs for our well-doing. And this argument David useth to stirre vp himselfe vnto all good duties: I haue kept (saith hee) thy precepts and thy testimonies; for all thy wayes are before thee. Yea, this consideration will preferre vs from all hypocrisie and cold formality in Gods seruice, and make vs to performe all good duties in a good manner, with integrity and vprightnesse of heart. Because the Lord beholdeth not onely our outward actions, but also our secret intentions; and as hee chiefly requireth that we should giue him our hearts, and worship him in spirit and truth, so doth he take speciall notice whether we doe so or no. And this argument the Lord himselfe useth to perswade Abraham to vprightnesse, because he was euer before him. Walke before me (saith hee) and bee vpright. And David walked in his integrity, because he knew that he was to be iudged and examined, not by men, but by God, who would try not onely his outward actions, but also his reynes and his heart. And the same moriue he useth to perswade his sonne Salomon to serue the Lord with an vpright heart, and a willing mind, because he searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts. And finally, this moued Cornelius to heare the Word of God with all feare and reuerence, because they were all in Gods presence; and the Apostle to preach it purely, and not deceitfully, as though he would make Merchandize of it, but in all sincerity; because as it was the Word of God, and not of man, which he preached; so hee did speake it in Christ, as in Gods sight and presence. And surely if when wee set our selues to serue God, we did duely consider that his piercing eye did behold our hearts and thoughts, as well as our outward behauiour; wee could not content our selues with the seruice of our lips, hands and knees, and suffer our hearts to goe a wandring about worldly vanities, because we would know, that God whom we serue is not contented with it. Wee would be ashamed that he should behold our hypocrisie and formall seruice; our hearts going one way, and our tongues another; seeing wee would blush for thame, if men like vnto our selues could looke into our hearts, hearts, and see how we dally and trifle with God, who will not be mocked; but (if they will not honour him) will honour himselfe in all that draw neere vnto him.

Leuit. 20.

C A P. XXVI.

Of the last priuate meanes of a godly life, which is, experimentall knowledge.

He last priuate meanes (whereof I will speake) which may helpe and inable vs to leade a godly life, is experimentall knowledge, whereby wee apply whatsoeuer we know, either concerning God, or our selues, vnto our owne particular vse, and indeuour to profit by it in the practice of holinesse and righteousnesse. Thus wee are not onely to know that God is a gracious Father in Christ, as to others, so vnto vs; but to labour to haue the experience of it in our selues, by feeling the beames of his fatherly loue warming our hearts, and inflaming them with vnfained loue towards God againe, by obseruing his fatherly prouidence watching ouer vs, and how often wee haue been thereby powerfully defended from our many and mighty enemies, deliuered out of imminent dangers, freed from many afflictions, when as we saw no meanes of escaping, and graciously relieued and provided for in our wants and necessities, when we haue had no possible meanes to supply them. Thus knowing God to be Omnipotent in power, we must labour to haue a feeling experience of it in his continuall supporting vs, both in respect of our soules and bodies, notwithstanding our owne frailty and weaknesse, in which we should haue often perished, in respect of the one through worldly dangers, and in respect of the other through spirituall tentations, did not he sustaine vs with his might, and glorifie his power in our infirmities and weaknes. And thus knowing God to be true of his word, yea truth it selfe, we must labor to haue the experience and feeling of it in our selues, by obseruing how he hath at all times made good his promises vnto vs, euen then, when by reason of some delay we haue most doubted of them. Finally, knowing that he is good and gracious, mercifull and bountifull, both vnto all his elect, and particularly vnto vs, wee must seeke to confirme it vnto our selues, by our owne experience, and by calling to mind how often he hath pardoned our former sinnes, and sealed this pardon in our hearts and consciences by the testimony of his Spirit; how often we haue tasted how good he is in the fruits of his bounty, and in the sweet feeling thereof haue had our hearts comforted and refreshed. The which experience of times past, will much strengthen our faith and hope for the time to come, make vs wholly to depend vpon him, and to consecrate and deuote our selues to his worship and seruice, with all cheerfulness and couragious resolution, notwithstanding all oppositions, seeing by manifold experience we haue found, that the God whom wee serue, is most mighty to defend vs, most gracious, true of his promises, and bountifull in performance, richly rewarding all those who feare and depend vpon

§. Sect. 1.
What this experimentall knowledge is, and the practice of it in many examples.

2. Cor. 12. 9.

Rom. 9. 4.

Gal. 3.

1. Cor. 13. 2.

1. Cor. 2. 2.

Phil. 3. 8, 9, 10.

2. Cor. 1. 10.

Eccles. 8. 12.

vpon him. Thus knowing the vertue and efficacy of Christs death, in taking away, by the inestimable merit thereof, the guilt and punishment of our finnes, we must strue to finde and feele it in our owne experience, by obseruing how it hath been powerfull and effectually in vs, for the mortifying and crucifying of our carnall lusts and sinfull corruptions, which heretofore haue ruled and raigned in vs. And this Paul meaneth, when hee saith, that he desired to know nothing but Iesus Christ, and him crucified; namely, this vertue and efficacie of it in himselfe, in the crucifying of his flesh, with the lusts thereof, and not onely to know the truth of it, which might easily be attained vnto by the relation and instructions of others. In which sense he saith in another place, that he accounted all things but losse, for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Iesus, and that he laboured about all things to know him, and the power of his Resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable vnto his death; that is, not barely to know these things, or to beleue them by faith, but to haue the experience of the vertue of his Resurrection, in raising him from the death of sin, to holinesse and newnesse of life, giuing him a full conquest ouer his corruptions, and spirituall life and strength to serue God in some perfection. Thus knowing the holy Ghost to be our sanctifier, we must neuer rest till we haue some good experience of it in our selues, in his purging vs thoroughout body and soule from all sinfull pollutions, and in our spirituall renewing and reforming according to Gods Image, in wisedome, holinesse and righteousnesse. Thus we must know the workes of God both towards our selues and others, not onely by hearing, reading and discourse, but also by our owne obseruation and experience. How liberally from time to time he hath rewarded our poore indeuours, and imperfect seruice, with manifold blessings; and how hee hath corrected our sloth, when as wee haue been cold and carelesse, formall and negligent in his seruice with his fatherly chastisements. How he hath visited our finnes with crosses and afflictions; yea speciall finnes with speciall punishments, which haue sprung as fruits from those cursed rootes, and by following them as at the heeles, haue plainly shewed from what causes they came, or else haue bin so fitted and proportioned vnto them, in likenesse and similitude, that the correction hath (as it were) by the hand led vs to the sight of our sinne. And how vpon our repentance and humiliation he hath graciously spared and freed vs from our afflictions, when wee least thought of any deliuerance. The which as it will notably preserue vs from falling into those finnes, for which wee haue been formerly corrected; so when wee haue falne, it will effectually mooue vs to rise out of them by vnfeined repentance; and confirme thereupon our affiance in God, that seeing he is immutable in his goodnesse, he will now againe be alike gracious vpon our humiliation, to deliuer vs from present and future euils. Thus also in Gods dealing with others, we may haue experience of his truth in his promises towards those that feare and serue him, and in his threatenings against those that are wicked, who make no conscience of their wayes, but rebelliously sinne against him; of his Iustice, by obseruing his Iudgements, executed vpon the wilfull transgressours of his lawes, and his goodnesse and mercy towards those who indeuour to serue and please him; whereby we shall shall be made fearefull to offend him, and carefull to carry our selues so in an holy conuersation, as that we may be accepted in his sight. And as this experimentall knowledge of God and his workes, will bee a notable meanes to reſtraine vs from all ſinne, and to further vs in all the duties of a godly life: ſo alſo the like knowledge of our ſelues, and our owne courſes and actions, will be a ſingular helpe to the ſame ends; as when we not onely know that we are wholly corrupted in our ſoules and bodies with originall ſinne, but alſo experimentally fee the venome and vigour of it working in vs, diſabling vs vnto all good duties, and making vs prone vnto all wickedneſſe; whereby we are made more carefull in the vſe of all good meanes, by which wee may be inabled more and more to mortifie and ſubdue it: when as wee not onely after a generall manner know our naturall weakneſſe and frailty, whereby we are often overtaken with manifold actuall ſinnes, but alſo obſerue by particular experience, our ſpeciall ſlips and falls, what corruptions are moſt potent in vs, and vnto what ſinnes our nature is moſt prone, and wherewith we are moſt often ſoyled, to the end that we may not reſt vpon our owne ſtrength, which ſo often faileth, but vpon the power and promiſes of God; and with more ſerueny craue the aſſiſtance of his holy Spirit, to ſtrengthen vs againſt our corruptions, and to ſubdue their power, that they may not preuaile againſt vs as in former times. When as we ſee that wee are defectiue in all good duties, we muſt alſo by experience obſerue vnto what ſpeciall duties we are moſt averse, and which we performe with moſt difficulty, bewraying in them our greateſt wants and imperfections; that ſo wee may goe about them with greateſt reſolution, and vſe our beſt indeuours to performe them daily in more perfection. When as wee not onely know that we are continually tempted by our ſpirituall enemies, but alſo finde by experience their particular tentations, wherewith they moſt aſſault vs, and moſt often ſoyle and overcome vs, that ſo wee may in theſe regards keepe a more ſpeciall watch, take more paines in repairing theſe particular breaches, and arme our ſelues with more courage and reſolution to withſtand them in the next encounters.

Againe, wee are thus by our experience to marke and obſerue our ſelues, in reſpect of our diuers and contrary courſes in our lines and conuerſations. As when we are watchfull over our wayes to pleaſe God in all things, and carefull to ſerue him in all Chriſtian duties, what ſingular bleſſings and benefits wee reape thereby. How wee are comforted with Gods gracious preſence, and fee the beames of his loue cheering our hearts, and the light of his countenance ſo reſreſhing them, that no afflictions can diſmay vs; how our faith is ſtrengthened againſt all tentations, in the aſſurance of the remiſſion of our ſinnes, and the ſaluation of our ſoules; how our heads are liſted vp with hope, ioyfully expecting the performance of all Gods promiſes, euen when they are delayed; and how confident we are in the middeſt of deſperate dangers, in the aſſurance of Gods preſence and protection. What peace we haue vvith God, and in our owne conſciences, which paſſeth all vnderſtanding, and how therein we triumph over all worldly oppoſitions, and the worſt that the might and malice of the diuell, and all his adherents can doe againſt vs. Final.

6. Sect. 2.

The experimental knowledge of our owne eſtates, in reſpect of our contrary courſes.

Pſal. 84. 11.
and 27. 1. 3.

Pſal. 53. 4.

and 3. 5.

Iob. 14. 27.

Rom. 8. 31, 32,
8.

Iob. 16. 23.

Rom. 5. 3.

Cant. 3. 1.
and 5. 6.

Psal. 22. 1.

Psal. 32. 3.

Psal. 6. 1, 3, 6.

Psa. 38. 1, 2, 3, 4.

Psal. 77. 2,

7, 8, 9.

Psal. 88. 15.

§. Sect. 3.

That no knowledge is to be compared with this of experience.

ly, what rauishing and vnspeakeable ioyes replenish our hearts, which none can take from vs, no not afflictions and persecutions, nor the dreadfull face of approaching death! On the other side, when wee neglect our watch, and are ouertaken with any grosse finnes; when we carelesly omit the duties of Gods seruice, or performe them slothfully & negligently, after a cold and formall manner, wee may out of experience obserue, either how we are hardened through the deceitfulnesse of sinne, and lye snoring in carnall security, without any sense or motion of spirituall life; or if our consciences be awakened, and wee come to some feeling of our wretched estate, how we are dismayed with the absence of God, when he hath withdrawn from vs the sense and feeling of his grace and fauour; how wee are terrified with the apprehension of his wrath, and with the sight of our manifold and grievous finnes; how our faith is assaulted with doubting and incredulity, our hopes vanished, our affiance weakened, yea oftentimes turned into diffidence and distrust. Our peace disturbed with the accusations of a guilty conscience, and our ioy turned into sorrow and heauinesse. Of both which estates when we haue had feeling experience, it will be an effectuall meanes, as any other, to make vs flee all manner of sinne, to striue continually against our corruptions and imperfections, and to indeuour with all care and good conscience, to please God in all things, and to performe vnto him zealous seruice in all the duties of a godly life.

In a word, there is no knowledge alike vsfull and profitable vnto this, which is seasoned by obseruation and experience. For as in ciuill affaires, that knowledge which is gotten by reading and mentall discourse, is of little vse or worth, vntill it be perfected by practice and experience; so is it much more true in the knowledge of Christianity. Wee see that men by much reading and speculation, attaine vnto great knowledge, but seldome to sound wisdome, which hath giuen way to that common Prouerbe, that The greatest Clerks are not the wisest men. It is no lesse certaine (though it may be lesse obserued) that speculatiue knowledge, not being seasoned with experience, doth not make men spiritually wise vnto saluation; whereof it is that the great Doctours of the world, who are richest in it, are commonly poorest in grace and godlinesse, hauing no sense and feeling of those things, whereof in their learned discourses they make a great shew, and are well able to teach others that way which themselves neuer trauelled. It is not much reading, nor speculatiue skill in the writings of State-policy, that will make a wise Councillour, and much lesse a prudent Prince and Gouvernour; but when this knowledge is seasoned with experience, which teacheth where the rules hold, and where they faile, and how they are varied by circumstances, which being innumerable, cannot be comprehended in any precepts, but are onely to bee determined by wise prudence, which is gotten by experience. It is not onely booke-knowledge that will make a good Generall, or skilfull Pilot; no not so much as a cunning Artificer; but when this knowledge is perfected by practice and experience: and so surely, though wee abound neuer so much in litterall knowledge, it will be farre from making vs good Christians, vnlesse wee bring precepts into practice, and by feeling experience perience apply what we know, to our owne particular vse and benefit. Yea, in truth amongst all those poynts of Religion which wee comprehend euen by the sauing knowledge of faith, those about all others are most sweet and comfortable, vsfull and beneficiall, which haue been confirmed and sealed vnto vs by most experience. A man truly wise, may cleerly discern of good and euill, and of that which is either safe or dangerous, and may not onely beleue without any doubting what he knoweth, but may be able, by effectuall reasons to perswade others, either to imbrace or shunne them; and yet neuer come to a sound vse of his knowledge, till it be seconded and better cleered by experience. As for example, hee may know the danger of suretiship, and how many men haue been vndone by it, losing not onely their wealth, but also their friends for whom they haue been ingaged, and yet be so blinded with deceiuing hopes, that with some little importunity he is content to be ingaged: but if his generall notions be seasoned by experience, and if being left in the lurch he hath found and felt the smart of his forwardnesse, afterwards a threefold Cable is not strong enough to draw him into bonds, and hazard himselfe vnto so many miseries. So a man may know that this or that meate may bee dangerous and of hard digestion, and yet be drawne by his appetite to feede vpon it; but if he haue once surfetted, and haue felt the smart of a tedious sickness which hath indangered his life, he is afterwards alienated from it, both in iudgement and appetite, so that hee will bee sure to take heed of that dish, though he will venture to feed on another no lesse dangerous in his opinion, but not tryed to be so, by experience; and thus it is in all other dangers, which wee more carefully shunne, as wee haue with more difficulty escaped out of them. So contrariwise, that which our iudgements approue as good, is not so much loued and imbraced, till we haue by experience found it to be so vnto vs; neither haue we euer so much desire of the wholesomest food, though we know it to be so, as when wee haue by experience found, that it is pleasing to our owne taste, and affording vnto vs good nourishment, hath been a notable meanes, to preserve our health, and increase our strength. And thus also it is in spirituall things. Though we see the danger of our corruption, with the manifold euils which doe accompany them, and thereby are made carefull in some degree to auoyd them, yet we may be ouertaken, and with the violence of our lusts and passions be drawne to fall into them: but if by experience we haue felt the smart of them, how their poyson hath wrought in our hearts, infeebl'd our graces (as it were the vitall spirits) and weakened and disabled vs vnto all good duties, wee will euer afterwards mortally hate them, and more carefully shunne them then in former times. And contrariwise, though we know and beleue, that such graces and duties are excellent, and therefore to be loued and imbraced of vs; yet shall wee neuer doe it vvith that ardency of affection, as vvhen vvee haue tasted the sweetnesse of them in themselves, and the manifold comforts and singular benefits vvich doe accompany them; as peace vvith God, and peace of conscience, assurance of Gods loue and our ovvne saluation, inward refreshment and joy in the holy Ghost; and such other blessings of like nature. All vvich considerations should powerfully perswade vs, not to content our selues with the knowledge of Christianity, but to labour after the feeling and experience, the vse and practice of what wee know, which will be a singular helpe to further vs in all the duties of a godly life.

CAP. XXVII.

Wherein is shewed, that prayer is a singular meanes of a godly life.

§. Sect. I.
That nothing more then prayer, maketh vs godly and religious.

hitherto we haue spoken of those priuate meanes of a godly life, which are to be vsed by our selues alone: and now it remaineth that we intreat of those which wee are to vse both by our selues, and also together with others. The first whereof is prayer, the which we haue before handled in the chiefe parts and poynts thereof: onely here we are to shew, that it is a powerfull and effectuell meanes, whereby we are furthered in all the duties of a godly life. To which purpose let vs know that nothing can be more auailable to this end, seeing there is not any thing which maketh vs more godly and religious, more like vnto God, and partakers of the diuine nature, then this daily communion and intercourse which wee haue with him. For as friendship, familiarity and neere society, ariseth amongst men, out of similitude of natures and manners; and contrariwise, likenesse of manners and conditions groweth by degrees out of friendly acquaintance, and common conuersing one with another; so that if wee vsually keepe company, and entertaine conference with wicked men, wee are made wicked like them, by their society and corrupt communication, which poysoneth our manners; but if we delight to conuerse and talke with those which are godly and religious, wee increase thereby in godlinesse and piety: so much more, if wee often haue this communion and conference with God by prayer, who is infinitely good in himselfe, and the Authour and Fountaine of all goodnesse which is in the creatures, wee shall daily increase in all piety and holinesse, and by conuersing with him (like Moses) shine in his light: whereas the further wee withdraw our selues from this Fountaine of light and heate, goodnesse and perfection, the more frozen shall we be in the dregs of our sins, the more stony-hearted, and muddy-minded, and vtterly vnlike the diuine nature. Prayer (saith one) causeth maruellous effectually an holy life, and worthily fit for Gods seruice, and what it causeth, it increaseth, and like a treasure, layeth it vp in our mindes. For if a man indeuoureth to doe any thing appertaining to a godly life, prayer being his guide, and preparing the way, hee is sure to finde a commodious and easie passage, &c. It is a signe of madnesse, not to be perswaded that it is the very death of the soule, if wee doe not often prostrate our selues at Gods feet, who is the Authour of life. For as our body seuered from the soule, is but a dead carcase; so the soule is dead and miserable, if it approach not often vnto God by prayer. And this the common experience of all times hath plainly proued; seeing those who (with Dauid) haue been most exercised in this religious duty, haue been also most holy, and men according to Gods heart; those who haue neg-

*Piam vitam, ac Dei cultu dig-nam, uiris modicatoratio concilliat, conciliatam auget, ac ceu thesaurum recondit in aximis, &c. Chrys.
lib. de orando
Deum, Tom. 5.*

tested it, most prophane; and such as haue viterly condemned it, no better then wicked Atheists, God esteeming it all alike, not to haue him at all, and not to call vpon him. And therefore the Psalmist describeth the Atheistickall foole, that saith in his heart, There is no God, by this outward marke, that he never calls vpon his Name; for if he acknowledged a God that were able to helpe him, he would sue vnto him when he needed his helpe.

Secondly, heereby it appeareth, that prayer is a most excellent and necessary helpe vnto a godly life, in that we are able to doe nothing without it, but are inabled by it, to doe in some measure whatsoeuer good thing we can desire. For of our selues we are weake and impotent vnto all duties, and all the imaginations of our hearts being continually euill, wee are not able to thinke good thought, or to entertaine a holy desire; but it is the Lord onely who beginneth, continueth, and perfecteth his worke of grace and sanctification in vs, and inableth vs to returne vnto him those workes of holinesse and righteousness, which in respect of ability to performe them, we haue first receiued from him. So that if wee tender vnto him any good duty, we may say with Dauid, Of thine owne haue wee offered vnto thee. Now the meanes which God hath ordained and sanctified for the obtaining of any grace or helpe at his hand, whereby wee may be strengthened vnto all duties of his seruice, is seruent and earnest prayer, which he hath appointed to be the hand of the soule, to receiue from him all gifts of grace and goodnesse. And though like a bountifull Prince, he offereth liberally vnto vs whatsoeuer we can lawfully desire, yet he will not deliuer his rich gifts to those who hold their hand in their bosome, and will not vouchsafe to put it forth, that it may receiue them. We are dry and empty cisternes, who haue naturally in vs no drop of grace and goodnesse; but what we receiue from God, who is the inexhaustible fountaine of euery good and perfect gift, as the Apostle telleth vs. Now as hee hath appointed Christ to be the Conduit head, so prayer to be (as it were) the Pipe, whereby he will conuay vnto vs these waters of Life, which, if we intermit not, hee will richly replenish vs with all his graces; but if we neglect this holy duty, and yet imagine to receiue any grace or spirituall strength from him, it is all one, as if we should cut off the pipe, and yet imagine to fill the empty cistern.

Finally, all the parts of Prayer seuerally serue as speciall meanes to further vs in the duties of a godly life. For first, the confession of our sinnes will withhold vs from the committing of them, whilest aggravating, bewailing, and adiudging our selues for them to those searefull punishments which they haue iustly deserued, our hearts are wrought vnto a true hatred of them, when as we see and acknowledge the miserable fruits which spring from this cursed roote. Secondly, because wee cannot for shame commit those sinnes willingly, which we haue humbly confessed, and God hath graciously pardoned. For what malefactor is so impudent, as to commit those crimes againe, which his Prince of meere loue hath lately remitted, and whilest he hath (as it were) his pardon in his hand, especially when he knoweth that he must the next day againe be arraigned for them, and stand at the barre at his Soueraignes mercy? Thirdly, because by often confession vve search out our hidden sinnes, and ransacke

Psalm. 14. 1. 24.

§. Sect. 2.
That prayer is the meanes of obtaining all Gods gifts and graces.
Gen. 6. 9.
2. Cor. 3. 5.
Phil. 2. 13.

Phil. 1. 6.
1. Cor. 29. 14.

Mat. 7. 7.
Jeb. 16. 23.

Iam. 1. 17.

§. Sect. 3.
That all the parts of prayer are singular helps to a godly life.

Pro. 28. 13.

1. Ioh. 1. 7.

Luk. 7. 47.

Luk. 11. 13.

our hearts and consciences, so as they cannot lye lurking in them, but are apprehended, condemned, and drawne out to execution. Lastly, because vpon our confession, receiuing at Gods hands assurance of pardon, according to his gracious promises; wee cannot but intirely loue him, who hath forgien vs so great a debt, whereby wee shall bee made loth to doe any thing which may displease him, and ready to performe all good duties which may bee acceptable in his sight. By petition also wee haue no lesse helpe; seeing thereby wee come to a more thorough sight of our wants, which worketh in vs an hungry and thirsting desire, that they may bee supplied, and of our imperfections in our best duties, that wee may strue and labour after more perfection, carefully and conscionably vsing all good meanes whereby our desires may be satisfied, seeing if wee should neglect them, after wee haue made these earnest suites, we should both tempt the Lord, and discover our owne grosse hypocrisie, in asking those things which wee care not to obtaine. Again, by these suites and requests made vnto God, according to his will, wee receiue the gift of his holy Spirit, which inableth vs to all good duties, by regenerating and sanctifying vs, seeing God hath promised to giue him vnto those that aske him; and together with him wee obtaine all Gods sanctifying gifts and graces, which by the same meanes are daily confirmed and increased in vs, and haue such a quickning power, vigour, and vigour added vnto them, that they inable vs to the constant performance of all Christian duties; which otherwise lying dull and dead in vs, wee should become like a body without spirits, lumpish and lazie in Gods service. Finally, by these suites and requests our loue is inflamed, vpon our assurance that they are heard and granted; which stirreth vs vp to yeeld vnto God cheerefull obedience, our faith is confirmed, and our affiance and hope strengthened, in assured confidence and expectation of Gods helpe and assistance, which will vphold vs when we are ready to faint, inable vs to overcome all difficulties, and to performe all the duties of a godly life with much comfort and delight. Lastly, thanksgiuing is a singular helpe to the same end, whilst we recount and call to minde Gods manifold blessings and rich mercies, which of meere grace, without any desert of ours, he hath from time to time multiplied vpon vs. All which (if we be not too too vngreatfull) will bee so many strong bands of loue, to tye vs vnto obedience, and to make vs cheerefull in all Christian duties, seeing by them we serue so bountifull a Master, which if we neglect to doe, we shall play the notable hypocrites, in professing that thankfulness with our lips, which we neither haue in our hearts, nor take any care to expresse in our liues.

CAP.

CAP. XXVIII

Of reading the Scriptures and other religious writings.

THe second priuate meanes of a godly life, which may be vsed by our selues alone, or with others, is reading, which is the perusing and studying of religious writings, for the information of our iudgements in the knowledge of God and his truth, the sanctifying of our hearts and affections, and the reforming of our liues and conuersations. The which exercise may be performed when we are alone, by the sight of the eye, and the discourse of the minde, either with or without the vse of speech; but with all necessarily ioynd together, when we performe this dutie with others. In speaking whereof, let vs first generally obserue, who are to reade, and then the subiect matter which is to be read of them. For the first, all sorts and conditions of men without exception, are tyed to this dutie, who are any way able to performe it, both the learned and vnlearned, the Ministers and common people, the poore and rich, men & women, yong, old, and of middle age: seeing the Lord in the Scriptures hath imposed it as necessary and profitable for all men. Thus he requireth that not onely the Leuites, but his whole people of Israel should continually studie in the Booke of his Law, and take all good occasions to speake and talke of it in all places; that they should binde the words of it for a signe upon their hands, and that they should bee as frontiers betweene their eyes, and that they should write them upon the posts of their house and on their gates, to no other end, but that they might often take occasion thereby to reade and study them. Our Sauour Christ also doth exhort all to search the Scriptures, and affirmeth this to bee the cause of all errors both in iudgement and manners, because men were not well acquainted with them. And the Apostle Peter, writing generally to all, saith, that hauing a more sure word of prophecie (that is more infallible then any reuelations) therefore they did well that they did take heede vnto it, as vnto a light that shineth in a darke place. And the Apostle writing vnto the Romanes, saith, that whatsoeuer things were written aforetime, were written for our learning; that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might haue hope. The Apostle Iohn likewise writing to children, yong and old men, plainely impleyeth that no age is exempted; but euen little children must reade, that they may be seasoned with the knowledge of Gods truth from their tender age, like yong Timothy, and the children of the elect Lady; and so being trayned up in the way which they should chuse, when they are old, they will not depart from it: and hauing this sound foundation of knowledge layd, they may haue the building of faith and piety more easily erected and set vp in them. And yong men also must reade the Scriptures, that being armed with this sword of the Spirit, they may be the better enabled to resist the tentations of the diuell, the world and their own flesh, which in that age are most strong and violent. Finally, old men, after they haue gotten much knowledge,

6. Sect. 1.
Who are to exercise themselves in this dutie of reading.

Deut. 6. 7. 8. 9.
Matth. 22. 39.

Iob. 5. 39.

2. Pet. 1. 19.

Rom. 15. 4.

2. Tim. 3. 15.

2. Iohn. ver. 1. 4.

Deut. 17. 18, 19
Iosb. 1. 8.

Mal. 2. 7.

1. Tim. 4. 13, 16.

6. Sect. 2.
That we are chiefly to be exercised in reading and studying of the Scriptures.

must still diligently studie the Scriptures, that they may be the better confirmed and settled in the things which they know, recall those things to memory, which that age otherwise is apt to forget, and that hauing knowne God and his Christ from the beginning, not onely by reading and hearing, but by much experience; they may by refreshing and renewing this knowledge, be the better able to walke themselves in this cleare light, and guide and direct others also by their fatherly instructions in the right way that they should chuse. But yet in a more speciall manner, this dutie of reading the Law and Word of God is pressed vpon Princes and Gouvernours, that being inlightened with the knowledge of Gods will and truth, they may themselves yeeld obedience vnto it, seeing hereby they shall not onely saue their owne soules, but also bee a meanes of the saluation of many others, their liues and actions being exemplarie, and powerfull to draw those which are ynder them, to follow and imitate them in that which is either good or euill: And also that hauing this light to guide them, they may administer righteous iudgement, and gouerne the people committed to their charge, in the feare of the Lord, establishing amongst them Gods true Religion, and maintaining in all their dominions iustice and truth. But aboue all others, the Ministers of Gods Word are religiously bound to exercise themselves diligently in reading the Scriptures; seeing they must not onely haue skill to direct themselves and their owne families, but to instruct all others committed to their charge, in the Word and will of God; for the Priesthood must preserue knowledge, and the people must seeke the Law at their mouth, for he is the messenger of the Lord of hosts. And he principally more then ordinary Christians, must giue attendance to reading, exhortation and doctrine, and continue in them; because in so doing, he shal both saue himselfe and those that heare him.

The second generall point to be considered, is the subject matter of our reading, of which wee must make good choyce, seeing it were much better not to reade at all, then to spend our time in perusing such bookes as are prophane, teaching nothing but vanitie and lyes, wantonnesse, ribaldry and contempt both of Religion & common honesty, in which number are bookes of scurrilous iests, plaies and Machiauellian policie. For as we say in the prouerbe, Where God hath his Church, there the diuell hath his chappell; and apishly imitating the diuine Maiesty, that he may blinde his followers, get from them the like glory, and especially that he may disgrace Gods holy ordinances, as God hath his Sacraments & Ceremonies, so he will haue his to scale vp to his vassals their more assured condemnation. And as God hath his bookes of holy Scriptures, contayning his will and Lawes, for the sanctifying and gouerning of his people; so the deuill will haue scribes inspired with his will, to set forth bookes of hellish impieties and damnable policies, for the corrupting of mens iudgements, the poisoning of their hearts and manners, and the trayning vp and gouerning of his subiects in all sinne and wickednesse. And therefore all those who desire to please God in the duties of a godly life, must with as much care flee such bookes, as Mariners doe the rockes and sands; and as they professe themselves Gods seruants, so they must make choyce of such bookes as will better their knowledge and practice in his Lawes: as they professe themselves of the Christian Religion, so they must read and studie such bookes, as being religious, will further them in Christianity, and enable them to performe vnto God more diligent and faithfull seruice. In which respect, the Booke of holy Scriptures contained in the Old and New Testament, is to be preferred aboue all others, seeing it is the foundation and ground of them all, which hauing God for it Author, is of infallible truth, and is to be beleued in its owne sole authority, and needeth not the confirmation of reason, or any humane testimony; but shineth like the Sunne in its owne light. Whereas all writings of men who are subiect to errors, are onely so far forth to be beleued and imbraced, as they are consonant, and agreeable with it. For all men are lyers, and through their ignorance, subiect to errors; apt to deceiue, and to be deceiued; and therefore are no further to be credited, then as their sayings and works are approoued by the Canon and rule of Gods infallible truth. Besides that, the Word of God is of more maiesty, power & efficacie, then any mortall mans; and his more immediate ordinance, which being more effectually assisted, and wrought into our mindes and hearts by his holy Spirit, is of greater efficacie for the inlightening of our vnderstandings, the mollifying of our hearts, the strengthening of our Faith, and sanctifying of our affections, then all other writings without it. And this Dauid found by experience, professing, that by studying and meditating in the Booke and Law of God, he became wiser then the Ancients, and of more vnderstanding then his teachers.

Neither let any man pretend that the Scriptures are of such difficulty, and so hard to be vnderstood, that priuate men must not presume to read them; seeing they haue plainly taught vs, that the Law of the Lord inlighteneth the eyes, and maketh wise the simple. And wise Salomon telleth vs, that this was one chiefe end of his penning that portion of holy Scripture, that he might giue subtilty (that is, more then common knowledge) to the simple, and to the young man knowledge and discretion. So that though the Scriptures finde men simple and ignorant, yet they doe not leaue them so, seeing they were purposely appointed by God to illuminate the eyes of the blinde, and to make the foolish wise. And therefore to forbear the reading of the Scriptures, because we are rude and of small vnderstanding, is all one, as if we should refuse the medicine, because we are sicke; the eye-salue, because we are blinde; and the light of the Sunne, because we are in the darke or dim-lighted. It is true, that all places of holy Scriptures are not alike cleare, but though some be easie and plaine, yet other are so high and mysticall, hard to be vnderstood, and of such abstruse difficulty, that the best wits and most learned may, euen their whole liues, be exercised about them, and yet neuer reach to their height, nor found them to the bottome. But this must not discourage the simplest from reading of them, because it is not necessary, nor required of all, that they should

Psal. 119. 99, 100.

6. Sect. 3.

Their obiection answered, who pretend the obscurity of the Scriptures.

Psal. 119. 7, 8.

Pro. 1. 4.

1. The first part of the book of Proverbs is a collection of sayings of Solomon, which are divided into three parts: the first part contains 31 chapters, the second part contains 31 chapters, and the third part contains 31 chapters.

Rom. 12. 3.

Augustine.

Quamvis omnem scientiam & doctrinam sacra Scriptura sine aliqua com-paratione tran-scendat, &c.
Gregor.

should vnderstand euery place, but so much as is necessarie for their saluation, and according to the measure of their gifts, which they haue receined, which if they exceed, they come vnder the censure of curiosity & presumption. And for the attayning of that maine end at which euery one must ayme, the Bookes of holy Scriptures are fit to be read of all sorts of men, being not only (as that learned Father obserued) in many places a deepe sea, wherein the Elephant may swim, but also in as many others, shallow Foords, wherein the Lambe may wade. Yea so gracious is the Creator and Redeemer of all men, that in penning the holy Scriptures, he hath taken care of the simple, as well as of the wise and learned. And as in course of nature he hath made those things most common, which are most excellent, profitable and necessary, as the Sunne, ayre, fire, water, bread and cloathing, and hath onely referred to the rich and noble, peculiar priuiledges in things of lesse vse and necessary, as gold, siluer, precious Jewels (so made and called, not by nature, but by fantasie and opinion) silken garments, delicious cates and such like trifles: So he hath layde out in common the maine points of Religion necessary to saluation, by making them so easie and familiar, that the meanest capacities may comprehend them, if they will vse the meanes and helpes which he hath sanctified for this vse; as seruent prayer for the assistance of Gods Spirit to enlighten our blinde eyes, reading, meditation, comparing one place with another, the publique ministry and priuate conference; And hath reserved other things lesse necessary in abstruse obscurity, as Chronologies, Genealogies, quiddities and intricate questions, to exercise the curiositie of such as scorne to be vulgarly wise, and would gaine vnto themselves an opinion of their learning and knowledge. Yea turne the same maine points of Religion, which are in some places plainly expressed, to the capacity of the most simple, are in other places more obscurely deliuered, that all sorts of men might be employed in this holy exercise of reading the Scriptures, the simple hauing no cause of discouragement, by their difficulty; nor the learned, and men of greater gifts, any cause of contempt or idle sloth, through their easinesse; but might haue matter deepe enough, to sound and search out, by their greatest wit and most industrious indeuour. So one saith, that the holy Scriptures, without comparison, excell all other science and learning; for they publish and preach the Truth, call vs to our heavenly Country, inuite the heart of the Reader from earthly desires, to embrace heavenly excellencies; the which are not so shut vp in obscurity, that we neede to feare them, nor so open, that we should contemne them; but the more they are vled, the lesse they are loathed, and the more they are loued, the more they are studied, &c. Notwithstanding euen in this Paradise, which aboundeth with all manner of flowers and medicinable hearbs, fit for vse, necessary and delight, there may generally at all times be choyce made of such as are most profitable and comfortable, and specially vpon seuerall occasions. For howsoeuer all contained in them be excellent and fit for diuers vses, so that no part in our reading is alwaies to be passed ouer and neglected,

yet

yet there are some places aboue others, wherein we may haue the food of our soules in greatest plentie and variety, and better prepared for our weake stomakes. And though they admit of no comparison with other writings, yet in themselves one part may excell another, if not in respect of their Author or nature, yet in respect of our vse and edification; as contayning and setting forth the maine points of our saluation more fully and plainly then others. In which respect the Prophets are to be preferred before the Bookes of Moses, as being a Commentarie and exposition of them. The Prouerbs of Salomon, before diuers of them, as being full fraught with heavenly Wisdome, and contayning diuine precepts and counsels, fit to guide vs in all our courses. And aboue them all, the Booke of the Psalmes, as being the liuely Anatomie of a true Christian in all estates and conditions, a treasure of heavenly meditations, diuine wisdome, holy doctrines and precepts, and a cleare glasse, wherein we may see, how in all estates and conditions God dealeth with his children, and they with him. And finally, the New Testament is to be preferred before the Old, because God therein hath more cleerely manifested himselfe and his will, the sending of our Sauour Christ, and the great worke of Redemption wrought by him, with all the meanes whereby we may be made partakers of him and all his benefits, Gods spirituall graces in this life, and eternall saluation in the life to come. For howsoever they are both all one in substance, & containe the same things, yet with this difference in respect of vs, that the Old Testament is the New hid and shadowed, the New Testament is the Old vnfolded and reuealed.

But though a Christian man is to studie and read the holy Scriptures chiefly, that he may out of them, as out of the fountaine, know God and all the duties of a godly life, in which respect their practice is absolutely to be condemned, who are so wholly taken vp in reading the Fathers, Schoolemen, and late Writers, that they can finde little time to reade and meditate in the Booke of God, and so are greatest strangers where they should be best acquainted, and like ill merchants who buy all their wares at the second or third hand: yet we are not so wholly to be conuersant in them, as to neglect or to want time to peruse the writings of godly and learned men, who by the helpe of their feruent prayers, the gifts of learning and tongues, and their serious studies and diligent labours, haue giuen the true sense and meaning of them; and haue distinctly handled and cleared the maine points of Religion contained in them. Nor that the Scriptures doe not themselves sufficiently teach all things necessarie vnto saluation, without any humane addition; but because the Lord, intending to vse the ministry of his seruants the Prophets and Pastors of his Church, for the edification of his people, hath caused them to be so penned, as that there should be continuall vse both of their expositions and application. Which whoso contemne or neglect, and content themselves with the sole reading of the Scriptures, if they be not of eminent parts, and indued with a great measure of spirituall vnderstanding, they

§. Sect. 4.

That we must not reade the Scriptures onely, but also other religious writings.

they will but slowly proceed in the growth of their knowledge, nor without much labour, and long study, attaine vnto any great perfection, though they may get some such competency as is necessary to saluation. For many eyes see more then one, and great workes are effected more speedily and easily, that are set forward with the helpe of many hands. And therefore I cannot commend their course, though otherwise they be godly and religious, and much lesse those who set them in it, that neglect the reading of all others bookes besides the holy Scriptures, because they haue all sufficiency in them; though in respect of the publike meane they much preferre (as they haue good cause) the Word sincerely and soundly preached, before the Word barely read; notwithstanding that this publike reading is to be preferred before priuate, as before I haue shewed. As though children should content themselues with the whole loafe of bread, or ioynt of meat, because they haue in them sufficient nourishment, and refuse to haue it cut out and carued vnto them, vntill it be at a publike feast, because, with much adoe, they can twich and pull some little peeces and fragments from them, which may bee enough to hold life and soule together. But let such know, that howsoever the Scriptures containe all things necessary to saluation; yea, are sufficient to save the most ignorant, through the inward illumination of the Spirit, where all other helpes and meanes are wanting, yet where these are to bee had, they will be lesse sufficient and effectuell to vs, if wee neglect them, seeing the Lord granteth them vnto vs to this end, that wee should vse them for the clearing of those places that are obscure, and for the inforcing and applying of those poynts that are more plaine, for the discussing of doubtfull cases, and for the laying open of many poynts of doctrine, necessary for our direction in the course of a godly life; which being many of them not manifestly expressed, but implied and to bee gathered by necessary consequence, it is not within the reach of euery ones capacity, to gather them sufficiently by their owne reading and meditation, especially if they neglect wilfully those helpes which the Lord graciously doth offer vnto them.

Now amongst those innumerable bookes which are set forth by learned and godly men, we must vse singular care to chuse such as are most profitable for our edification. As those first and before others, which are sufficient to informe our iudgements in the maine poynts of Christian Religion, the knowledge whereof is necessary to saluation. Of which we may haue plentiful choyce, both those which handle all these poynts more briefly and compendiously; as Doctor Novels Catechisme, Master Bezaes Confession, questions & answeres, Doctor Hall, Doctor Burges, and Master Balls Catechismes, A brieue method of Catechizing, The way to true blessednesse, and many others; and such as handle the same poynts more fully and largely: as Virels Catechisme, Bastingius, The summe of sacred Diuinity, A treatise of Christian Religion, Vrsinus Catechisme, Caluins Institutions, and the Workes of our reuerend Countreyman Master Perkins, who hath excellently handled the most poynts of Christian Religion, in his learned and religious writings. And hauing thorowly informed our iudgements, by reading and studying some of these, or others

6. Sect. 5.
Some speciall directions for the choyce of fit Authours which may helpe vs in the practice of godlinesse.

of like nature, which by the light of our owne iudgements, or helpe of others directions, we thinke fittest for vs, wee may then also profitably peruse other writings, which may further and direct vs in the duties of piety and of a godly life. As Master Rogers his seuen Treatises; or if they seeme too long for our little leisure, the abridgement of them, the which is so exactly done, that in my iudgement it fully comprizeth in it the whole summe and substance of them all, with the addition of many other particular poynts and proofes: Or another intituled, Directions to a godly life, gathered out of the same 7. Treatises. Besides, other books in our own language, which as excellently as in any other, handle both learnedly and religiously, many speciall parts of Christianity, and particular discourses, tending to piety, which are most perswasive, pithy and profitable, to further vs in all the duties of a godly life. Amongst which, I cannot but commend vnto thee (Christian Reader) that plaine and familiar exposition of the ten Commandements, with all other workes of the same Authours. The workes of those reuerend seruants of God, Master Greenham, Master Arthur Dent, and of my late worthy assistant, Master Daniel Dike, who shall be euer vnto me of happy memory; in whose Treatises nothing seemeth wanting, which piety, learning and wit could adde vnto them. And finally, the workes of our famous and diuine English Seneca, in which, wit and piety are so matched, as that they seeme to strue which should exceed the other. Many other labours of worthy men might be added, some of which still remaine as excellent ornaments and lights in Gods Church, and some are at rest with the Lord, and haue receiued the Crowne of their labours, but that I would not too much increase mine owne booke, with naming other mens, and also because I thought it fit to leaue some to the Readers choyce, and to the aduice of others, which vpon notice of their estates can direct them better. Onely aiming at mine owne maine end of perswading all to the duties of a godly life, let mee giue this generall rule to bee obserued, that wee rather make choyce of such bookes, as doe soundly informe the iudgement, and worke powerfully vpon the heart and affections, then of such as containing little but idle eloquence and frothy conceits of wit, doe nourish in the Reader, vaine curiosity, and please his phantasie with fruitlesse flatteries. Yea, I would perswade the deuour Christian (to whom I chiefly write) who laboureth more after piety, then learning and Speculative knowledge, that they would principally reade such bookes, as will make them more holy and religious, rather then more learned; and such experimentall Diuinity, as will fit and further them for Christian practice, rather then for discourse. Neither can I commend to such the studies of Genealogies, Chronologies & controuersies, except hauing begun with those before-named, they haue not onely leisure sufficient for the other also, and excellent wits and parts to comprehend and profit by them; but also liue in such places which are infected with errors, schismes, and heresies, where in respect of their company, they shall need to be extraordinarily confirmed and strengthened, that they may be able to defend the truth, and to confute and conuince gain-sayers; yea if it bee possible, to perswade and gaine them, that they may imbrace the same truth which they professe. In which case I would commend vnto them the learned writings of B. Jewel, against Harding; of Doctor Fulke, and especially his answer to the Rhemish Testament, Doctor Reynolds conference with Hart, Master Perkins his Reformed Catholique; Doctor Abbots learned defence of it against Bishop, Doctor Whites Way to the true Church, and Doctor Willes Synopsis, which comprizeth in it the summe of many others, and learnedly disputeth and discusseth the most poynts in controuersie between vs and our aduersaries. Otherwise I should perswade those whose maine aime is to informe themselues in the duties of godlinesse, that they may practise them in their liues, to be more sparing in the study of Controuersies, seeing if they clearly see the perfect rule of truth, it will inable them to discern the crooked errors which are contrary vnto it, it being such a light, as not onely sheweth it selfe, but also all falshood which is opposite and oppugneth it.

Dedicator Hall.

CAP. XXIX.

Of our preparation vnto this exercise of reading, and what is required in it.

§. Sect. 1.
That we must come in reue-rence to this holy exercise, and bring faith vnto it.

And thus hauing generally shewed both who are to exercise themselves in reading, and the subiect matter which they are to reade; we are now to intreat of the duty it selfe; and then to shew that it is an excellent helpe and means of a godly life. In the duty we will consider the preparation vnto it, and then the action or exercise of reading, with some directions by which we may be inabled to performe it with fruit and benefit. In our preparation our care must be, to fit our selues that wee may performe this religious duty in a right manner, and not to goe about it rashly and vnadvisedly, neuer so much as once thinking to what end we vndertake it, but onely reading to spend the time, because we want some other employment. And first, we must come vnto this duty with all reuerence, and performe it as in Gods presence, and as being one of his gracious ordinances, whereby he reuealeth himselfe and his will more cleerly vnto vs; for the edifying and building of vs vp in all grace and godlinesse. Secondly, we must bring faith with vs; for as it is said of the Word heard, so may it also of this, namely, that the Word which we reade will not profit vs, unless it be mixed with faith in those that reade it. The which is to be vnderstood first generally of iustifying faith in Christ, which is required in all our actions, that they may be pleasing to God, & more specially in this, seeing if Christ be not in vs by his Spirit and a liuely faith, both to open the blind eyes of our mindes, that we may see and vnderstand, as hee did the eyes of Saul, and our hard hearts shut vp in sinne, as he did the heart of Lydia, and of the two Disciples going to Emaus, yea, if this Lion of the Tribe of Iuda doe not open the sealed Booke, we shall see, and not perceiue; reade, and not vnderstand. Besides which, we must bring a more speciall faith, whereby we are made ready to belecue and imbrace every truth of God, and to apply it for our owne vse, as doctrines of truth for our instruction, threatnings

Heb. 4. 2.

Mat. 16.
Luk. 24.
Apo. 5. 5.

for our humiliation, promises for our confirmation in faith, consolations for our comfort, and so in the rest. But in respect of this faith, there must be some difference in the act of it, as it beleeueth the Scriptures, and as it beleeueth the writings of men, although most godly and learned. For as these are not to be read with equall reuerence and esteeme vnto the other, so neither in all respects with the like faith. For we must beleeue the Scriptures with an absolute faith, without any doubting or dispute of reason, & without other confirmatiō or appeale to further trial, because they are the Word of God, who being Truth it selfe, can neither deceiue, nor be deceiued. But all other writings of men must be read with a reserved faith, beleeuing them onely so farre forth, as vpon due triall and examination we finde their sayings consonant and agreeable to Gods Word, and grounded vpon his infallible truth, as vpon a sure foundation. For wee all being but imperfectly inlightened, doe know onely in part; and therefore being subiect to errours, others also that should build their faith vpon our authority, should erre with vs.

Thirdly, we must bring with vs good and honest hearts, that so the seed of the Word being sowne in them as in good grounds, it may take deepe root, and bring forth in vs plentifull fruits. Whereby I vnderstand, not onely an heart purified by faith, and purged from sinfull corruptions by true repentance, without which we shuld not presume to take Gods word and Couenant into our mouthes; but such an one as is replenished with sincere affections and holy desires, as after all Gods graces, so especially that we may profit by this present exercise, without which wee may long read, and yet be neuer the better or holier; like those who eating their meate without an appetite, are, after much feeding, neuer the fatter. Vnto such the saying of Salomon may be fitly applyed: Wherefore is there a price in the hand of a foole to get wisdom, seeing he hath no heart to it? For though they abound in leisure, and haue the sight and perusing of many excellent bookes, yet they purchase by them no spirituall grace, because they haue no such desire or end, when they set themselues to reading, but because they are weary of idlenesse, or for curiosity, that they may see what every one is able to say, or to get speculative knowledge, that they may be fitted to entertaine discourse. But if we would haue any good by our reading, we must come to it with a mind and desire to profit by it; to haue the graces of Gods Spirit increased in vs, to haue our minds more inlightened with the sauing knowledge of God and his will, to haue our faith, affiance, hope, loue, zeale, and all other Gods gifts and graces confirmed, nourished and enlarged in our hearts, that wee may expresse them in our liues, by increasing daily in bringing forth the fruits of holinesse and righteounesse. For if these desires be wanting, though we should do nothing else but reade the Scriptures, and other religious bookes; yea, though we were (like many of the Iewes) so conueriant in the Booke of God, that we could say the most of it by heart, and were able to tell precisely how many words and letters were contained in it; all this would yeeld vnto vs no spirituall nourishment, nor make vs to thriue any whit in grace and godlinesse.

Finally, in our preparation, we must come to reading, with a purpose

Luk. 8. 19.

6. Sect. 2.

That we must bring honest hearts, and earnest desires to profit by this exercise.
Psal. 50. 16, 17.

Prou. 17. 16.

6. Sect. 3.

That we must come with a purpose to make good vse of all we reade.

Psal. 119. 33.

Luk. 12. 47.

Sint ergo diuine Scripture sem-per in manibus tuis, et in ier mente voluantur, &c. Hyer.
ad Celant.
Ita Scripturas facias lege, ut semper memine-ris Dei illa ver-ba esse, qui legem suam non solum scribi, sed etiam
impleri iubet,
&c. Ad Demetriad.

§. Sect. 4.
That we must pray before we reade.

Psal. 119. 18.

1. Cor. 2. 11, 14.

Luk. 11. 13.

and resolution to draw all we reade vnto our owne particular vse, whether for the informing of our iudgements, or sanctifying of our affections, or reforming of our liues, by putting those good duties in practice which we know and learne. The which purpose Dauid expresseth in these words, Teach me, O Lord, the way of thy Commandments, and I will keep them unto the end. Otherwise wee can haue no assurance that God will by our reading enlighten our mindes, and increase our knowledge: for why should he giue vs more, if we make no good vse of that we haue? Yes, why should he not rather take away his Talent, if we hide it vnprofitably in a napkin? or at least, leaue it with vs to increase our account, and with it our punishment for the servant that knoweth his Masters will, and doth it not, shall be beaten with many stripes. Let therefore (as one exhorteth) the holy Scriptures be alwayes in thy hands, and meditate on them in thy mind; yet do not thinke it sufficient for thee to haue Gods Lawes in thy memory, if thou forgettest them in thy workes, but therefore know them, that thou mayest doe what thou knowest; for not the hearers of the Law are lust before God, but the doers of it are iustified. And as the same Author perswadeth in another place; So reade the holy Scriptures, as that thou alwayes remember them to be the Word of God, who requireth not only that we should know his Law, but also fulfill and obey it. For it profiteth not to know such things as ought to be done, and not to doe them. Thou vnest well thy reading of Diuinity, if thou settest it as a glasse before thee, that thy soule may behold it selfe by looking in it, and may either amend deformities and blemishes, or more adorne it selfe, where it is already beautifull.

Lastly, that we may performe both the preparation and action the better, we must lift vp our hearts (and when in respect of place and company we conueniently can) our voyce also, desiring in some short and pithy prayer, that the Lord will assist vs in this exercise by his grace and holy Spirit, that thereby it may become effectuell for the enlightning of our mindes with sauing knowledge, the informing of our iudgements, the sanctifying of our affections, the nourishing and increasing of our faith, repentance, and all sanctifying graces, and the strengthening of vs in the inner man, vnto all the duties of a godly and Christian life, to the glory of his holy Name, and comfort and saluation of our soules, through our Lord Iesus Christ. The which inuocation of Gods holy Name is necessary before the reading of the Word; for we are naturally blind, and therefore had need to pray with Dauid; Open mine eyes, O Lord, that I may see the wonderfull things of the Law. Naturally we vnderstand not the things of the Spirit of God; neither can we know them, because they are spiritually discerned, and it is onely the Spirit of God that knoweth the things of God; and reuealeth them vnto vs, which we can no otherwise hope to obtaine, then by feruent and effectuell prayer.

CAP. XXX.

Of the duties required in the action of reading, that we may profit by it.

Nd thus much concerning those things which are required in our preparation. In the action of reading, diuers points are to be considered. The first is, the ends which wee must propound vnto our selues in it. Which are either principall or subordinate. The principall end which wee must ayne at in this exercise, is the glory of God, namely, that heereby knowing his will, we may glorifie his holy Name, by yeelding obedience vnto it, and by putting in practice the things which he requireth in the whole course of our liues and conversations. The subordinate end, is generally the edification of our selues and our brethren, and the saluation of their and our owne soules; according to that of the Apostle. Attend vnto reading, and continue therein; for in so doing, thou shalt both save thy selfe, and those that heare thee. More especially, wee must reade the Scriptures to those ends for which the holy Ghost hath commended them vnto vs, as viell and profitable. And first for doctrine and instruction, in which regard, we are to reade them for the further inlightning of our minds, and informing of our iudgements, in the knowledge and acknowledgement of Gods will, that we may be directed thereby in all our wayes, for the leading of our liues in such a course as may in all things bee acceptable vnto God. For we are naturally blind and ignorant, and walking in darkenesse and in the shaddow of death, we know not what to chuse and what to refuse, but the Word of God is a lampe vnto our feet, and a light vnto our path, which shining vnto vs in this darkenesse, guideth our feet into the way of peace. Of which light if we deprive our selues, we shall passe our liues in a more then Egyptian darkenesse, and groping at noone day, shall easily be misled into all sinne and errour, according to that of Salamon, for the soule to be without knowledge, it is not good, and he who (wanting this light to guide him) walketh with his feet, sinneth, being ready to decieve and be decieved. The second end at which wee must ayne in our reading, is, that we may be established in the truth, being inabled to defend it, and also to refuse and conuince the errors and false doctrine which are contrary vnto it, especially those wherewith it is most oppugned in the times and places wherein we liue. For it wee be conueriant in the Scriptures we shall be able to try the Spirits, whether they be of God or no, and not receive all we heare hand ouer head, and to be carried away with every wind of doctrine, but to bring them to bee tryed with the Touchstone of Gods truth, and with the Bereans to search the Scriptures, and by them to examine whether the things we heare be so or no. The third end at which we must ayne, is admonition, that wee may be able to checke our selues when we are going out of the way, and both take and giue warning to our selues and others, when either they or we are entring into errors in doctrine and practice, that we may be reclaimed, and not proceed in them to our further detriment. The fourth end, is reproofe and rebuke,

§. Sect. I.
Of the ends at which wee must ayne in our reading.

1. Tim. 4. 13. 16.

2. Tim. 3. 16.

Psal. 119. 105.

Isa. 1. 9.

Pro. 19. 2.

1. Joh. 4. 1.

Act. 17. 11.

that we may be able out of the Scriptures to apply Gods threatnings and checkes vnto our selues and others; when as either we or they doe live in any knowne sinnes without repentance, that so we may by strong hand be pulled (like fire brands) out of the fire, and not suffered to perish by Gods approaching Iudgements. The fift and last speciall end, which the Apostle expresth in another place, is comfort and consolation, that wee may be able to cheere vp our fainting and drooping hearts, and to strengthen our weake hands and knees, against the manifold discouragements which affront vs in our Christian course, whether they be inward or outward, as our owne sinnes, and the anger of God due vnto them; our corruptions, wants, and imperfections in our best actions; the tentations of our spirituall enemies, afflictions, and persecutions; against which, and all others, the Scriptures as a rich Treasury, affoord vnto vs plentifull consolation, which being rightly applied, will sufficiently hartens vs to goe on with comfort and ioy in the wayes of godlinesse. And as in our reading wee must ayne at these particulars, so generally, that wee may be furnished with this Word of Truth thorowout, both in soules and bodies, and that we may be made perfect, being thorowly furnished vnto all good works.

The second point to be considered, is the manner how we may carry our selues in this exercise, as that we may performe it with most fruit and benefit, to which purpose the directions following may not vnprofitably be obserued. As first, we are diligently to marke the Theme, question, or mayne point which is handled in that Book or Chapter which we read, and how the discourse of the Author tendeth to prooue or illustrate it, with the feuerall arguments which are produced to this end. Or if we want skill to doe this, yet we may obserue if not by our owne collection, yet by helpe of the Authors paines, the summe and substance of all which he deliuereth in the contents of the Chapters or Sections, which will giue great light to the vnderstanding of all the rest, when as wee know the mayne scope at which he aimeth, and how he frameth his discourse, and what arguments and testimonies he vseth to prooue or enforce that point which he propoundeth. To which purpose, it is also profitable to obserue (as neere as we can) what was the occasion of the Authors writing, and to consider the circumstances of the persons to whose vs the writings were intended, and of the times wherein he wrote, with the state of the people that liued in them, vnto what sinnes they were most addicted, and in what vertues and duties they were most defective; and how the Author cryeth downe the one, and perswadeth them to the other. The order also and method which he vseth, the conference of the parts of his discourse, and how he passeth from one point to another, will giue much light to the vnderstanding of what we read; which if wee neglect, and confusedly goe on, tumbling all together, wee shall make euen those things which are plaine and easie, hard and intricate; obiect little in much reading, and remember little, and reape little profit by much paines.

With like care we must obserue a due order in our owne readings, making choyce of such Authors as are fittest for our owne capacity and vs, and to proceeding by degrees from those which are most easie, to such as

1. Asse. 2.
Rom. 1. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100. 101. 102. 103. 104. 105. 106. 107. 108. 109. 110. 111. 112. 113. 114. 115. 116. 117. 118. 119. 120. 121. 122. 123. 124. 125. 126. 127. 128. 129. 130. 131. 132. 133. 134. 135. 136. 137. 138. 139. 140. 141. 142. 143. 144. 145. 146. 147. 148. 149. 150. 151. 152. 153. 154. 155. 156. 157. 158. 159. 160. 161. 162. 163. 164. 165. 166. 167. 168. 169. 170. 171. 172. 173. 174. 175. 176. 177. 178. 179. 180. 181. 182. 183. 184. 185. 186. 187. 188. 189. 190. 191. 192. 193. 194. 195. 196. 197. 198. 199. 200. 201. 202. 203. 204. 205. 206. 207. 208. 209. 210. 211. 212. 213. 214. 215. 216. 217. 218. 219. 220. 221. 222. 223. 224. 225. 226. 227. 228. 229. 230. 231. 232. 233. 234. 235. 236. 237. 238. 239. 240. 241. 242. 243. 244. 245. 246. 247. 248. 249. 250. 251. 252. 253. 254. 255. 256. 257. 258. 259. 260. 261. 262. 263. 264. 265. 266. 267. 268. 269. 270. 271. 272. 273. 274. 275. 276. 277. 278. 279. 280. 281. 282. 283. 284. 285. 286. 287. 288. 289. 290. 291. 292. 293. 294. 295. 296. 297. 298. 299. 300. 301. 302. 303. 304. 305. 306. 307. 308. 309. 310. 311. 312. 313. 314. 315. 316. 317. 318. 319. 320. 321. 322. 323. 324. 325. 326. 327. 328. 329. 330. 331. 332. 333. 334. 335. 336. 337. 338. 339. 340. 341. 342. 343. 344. 345. 346. 347. 348. 349. 350. 351. 352. 353. 354. 355. 356. 357. 358. 359. 360. 361. 362. 363. 364. 365. 366. 367. 368. 369. 370. 371. 372. 373. 374. 375. 376. 377. 378. 379. 380. 381. 382. 383. 384. 385. 386. 387. 388. 389. 390. 391. 392. 393. 394. 395. 396. 397. 398. 399. 400. 401. 402. 403. 404. 405. 406. 407. 408. 409. 410. 411. 412. 413. 414. 415. 416. 417. 418. 419. 420. 421. 422. 423. 424. 425. 426. 427. 428. 429. 430. 431. 432. 433. 434. 435. 436. 437. 438. 439. 440. 441. 442. 443. 444. 445. 446. 447. 448. 449. 450. 451. 452. 453. 454. 455. 456. 457. 458. 459. 460. 461. 462. 463. 464. 465. 466. 467. 468. 469. 470. 471. 472. 473. 474. 475. 476. 477. 478. 479. 480. 481. 482. 483. 484. 485. 486. 487. 488. 489. 490. 491. 492. 493. 494. 495. 496. 497. 498. 499. 500. 501. 502. 503. 504. 505. 506. 507. 508. 509. 510. 511. 512. 513. 514. 515. 516. 517. 518. 519. 520. 521. 522. 523. 524. 525. 526. 527. 528. 529. 530. 531. 532. 533. 534. 535. 536. 537. 538. 539. 540. 541. 542. 543. 544. 545. 546. 547. 548. 549. 550. 551. 552. 553. 554. 555. 556. 557. 558. 559. 560. 561. 562. 563. 564. 565. 566. 567. 568. 569. 570. 571. 572. 573. 574. 575. 576. 577. 578. 579. 580. 581. 582. 583. 584. 585. 586. 587. 588. 589. 590. 591. 592. 593. 594. 595. 596. 597. 598. 599. 600. 601. 602. 603. 604. 605. 606. 607. 608. 609. 610. 611. 612. 613. 614. 615. 616. 617. 618. 619. 620. 621. 622. 623. 624. 625. 626. 627. 628. 629. 630. 631. 632. 633. 634. 635. 636. 637. 638. 639. 640. 641. 642. 643. 644. 645. 646. 647. 648. 649. 650. 651. 652. 653. 654. 655. 656. 657. 658. 659. 660. 661. 662. 663. 664. 665. 666. 667. 668. 669. 670. 671. 672. 673. 674. 675. 676. 677. 678. 679. 680. 681. 682. 683. 684. 685. 686. 687. 688. 689. 690. 691. 692. 693. 694. 695. 696. 697. 698. 699. 700. 701. 702. 703. 704. 705. 706. 707. 708. 709. 710. 711. 712. 713. 714. 715. 716. 717. 718. 719. 720. 721. 722. 723. 724. 725. 726. 727. 728. 729. 730. 731. 732. 733. 734. 735. 736. 737. 738. 739. 740. 741. 742. 743. 744. 745. 746. 747. 748. 749. 750. 751. 752. 753. 754. 755. 756. 757. 758. 759. 760. 761. 762. 763. 764. 765. 766. 767. 768. 769. 770. 771. 772. 773. 774. 775. 776. 777. 778. 779. 780. 781. 782. 783. 784. 785. 786. 787. 788. 789. 790. 791. 792. 793. 794. 795. 796. 797. 798. 799. 800. 801. 802. 803. 804. 805. 806. 807. 808. 809. 810. 811. 812. 813. 814. 815. 816. 817. 818. 819. 820. 821. 822. 823. 824. 825. 826. 827. 828. 829. 830. 831. 832. 833. 834. 835. 836. 837. 838. 839. 840. 841. 842. 843. 844. 845. 846. 847. 848. 849. 850. 851. 852. 853. 854. 855. 856. 857. 858. 859. 860. 861. 862. 863. 864. 865. 866. 867. 868. 869. 870. 871. 872. 873. 874. 875. 876. 877. 878. 879. 880. 881. 882. 883. 884. 885. 886. 887. 888. 889. 890. 891. 892. 893. 894. 895. 896. 897. 898. 899. 900. 901. 902. 903. 904. 905. 906. 907. 908. 909. 910. 911. 912. 913. 914. 915. 916. 917. 918. 919. 920. 921. 922. 923. 924. 925. 926. 927. 928. 929. 930. 931. 932. 933. 934. 935. 936. 937. 938. 939. 940. 941. 942. 943. 944. 945. 946. 947. 948. 949. 950. 951. 952. 953. 954. 955. 956. 957. 958. 959. 960. 961. 962. 963. 964. 965. 966. 967. 968. 969. 970. 971. 972. 973. 974. 975. 976. 977. 978. 979. 980. 981. 982. 983. 984. 985. 986. 987. 988. 989. 990. 991. 992. 993. 994. 995. 996. 997. 998. 999. 1000.

Job. 17. 17.

1. The. 5. 13.

2. Tim. 3. 17.

6. Sect. 2. 1.
That we must obserue the Theme and Argument.

The second Rule.

6. Sect. 3.
That we must obserue a due order in our reading, and make choyce of fittest Authors.

are more difficult, as we increase in knowledge and understanding. First, our care must be to lay a sure foundation, by reading diligently some profitable Catechisme, containing the maine points of Christian Religion, not thinking it to bee read sufficiently, although we have gone over it diuers times, till we so thorowly vnderstand & remember it, that we are able to giue an account, though not in the same words, yet in respect of the matter and substance, of all the points contained in it, and as the Apostle speaketh, to giue a reason of our faith and hope, whereby we shall not onely be armed against all errors and lyes, when as wee are able to examine all we reade, according to the rule and analogie of faith, but also shall with much more ease vnderstand all other discourses, which without this helpe will be darke and obscure. For want of which order obserued in reading, it is pittifull to see how many that thinke themselves great proficients, and euen able to teach others, not being thus grounded, are easily caried away with euery winde of doctrine, and being themselves decciued, for want of skill to examine what they reade and heare, are ready also to deceiue others. So impossible a thing it is to amend such errors as are committed in the foundation, though wee bee neuer so curious in the rest of the building. But though our first care must be in laying the foundation, yet wee must not rest there, but proccede and goe forward, till wee be built vp in knowledg vnto some perfection; we must not, whilst we are babes in Christ, out of pride and curiosity, affect strong meates, which are of too hard digestion for our weake stomacks, but hunger after the sincere milke of the Word, and maine principles of Christian Religion. With which, when wee are well nourished and growne to some strength, wee must, as the Apostle saith, leave the principles of the Doctrine of Christ, namely, the foundation of repentance from dead works, and faith towards God, &c. and goe on vnto perfection, and studie both the holy Scriptures, and such Authors as those before named, which will thorowly instruct vs in the whole body of diuinity. In which, when we haue made some good proceedings, we shall be fit to reade Treatises of any argument, which more thorowly handle speciall parts of Religion, wherein we desire to be specially informed, or to haue them effectually pressed vpon our hearts and consciences.

1. Pet. 3. 15.

1. Pet. 3. 1, 2.

Heb. 6. 1.

The fourth rule of direction, which I would commend to the deuout Christian in his reading, for the better enabling of him in the duties of a godly life (for I doe not take vpon me to prescribe directions vnto the learned in their studies, but rather desire to bee directed by them) is, that they make choyce, not of many Bookes of the same argument, but of such as either in their owne iudgements & experience, or by the direction of others, they know to be best and fittest for the informing of their iudgements, in all things necessary for their salvation, and sanctifying of their hearts and affections, & that they do not so much affect the reading of many Authors, as to studie thorowly those which they do reade, & by distinguishing them through serious meditation, to turne them in wholesome nourishment for the preserving of their spiritual health, and the strengthening of them in all the graces

6. Self. 4.
That the deuoute Reader is not to reade many bookes of the same argument, but to make choyce of some few which are best.

Eccles. 12. 12.

of Gods Spirit. For there is no end of making, so neither of reading many bookes; and much reading in this kinde, is a wearinesse to the flesh. And therefore as those which are invited to a great feast, doe not, if they haue care of their health, eate a little of euery dish, or more then their stomackes can well digest, seeing the superfluities would turne to crudities, and breede ill humours and obstructions in the body: so in that great variety of spirituall food, which in these dayes is set before vs, cooked and dressed after diuers manners, it is not the best course for a Christian, who hath a care of his soules health, to feede of many or more then hee is able by meditation to digest, seeing this would but the more weaken and confound the memory, and vnterle his iudgement, so as he cannot tell what to take and what to leaue, and fill his minde with raw conceits and indigested opinions; but to make choyse of some of the most approued Authors in euery kinde, and to studie thorowly, till he hath turned them to good nourishment, and doth feele his soule refreshed and strengthened by them. And as it is not the best way for any that intendeth to make himselfe a good States-man, to ramble and runne ouer in his trauailes, many countreys, seeing much, and making vse of little for the improuing of his knowledge and experience in State-policie; but rather to stay so long in euery place, till he haue noted those things which are best worthy his obseruation, so also is it in the trauailes and studies of the minde, by which if we would be bettered in our iudgements and affections, it is not our best course to run slightly ouer many things, taking onely such a general view of them, as somewhat increaseth our speculatiue knowledge; but to rest vpon the points wee reade, that wee may imprint them in our memories, and worke them into our hearts and affections, for the increasing of sauing knowledge, which chiefly consisteth in feeling and experience. Which course if wee take, we shall profite more by one good booke often read, and thorowly pondered, then by running ouer a multitude after a superficiall manner. For if men of ordinary capacities and memories can hardly in once or twice reading of a booke, attaine vnto the true sense and meaning of the Author, nor comprehend many of his notions and mayne intentions, in all the particulars of his discourse, in their vnderstandings onely; especially considering that the minde of the most diligent reader is often carried away with distractions of many kindes, how much lesse is it possible to conuert these spirituall treasures, at the first view, to all their speciall and seuerall vses, to lay them vp orderly in our memories, that when wee haue most neede, wee may know where to finde them, to worke them into our hearts and affections, that wee may haue sense and feeling of their fruite and benefit, for inward sanctification and outward practice in the duties of godlinesse.

6. Sect. 5.
That we must labour to vnderstand thorowly what we reade.

The fifth point to be obserued in this exercise is, that wee reade with vnderstanding, and that hauing made choyse of such bookes as are within the compasse of our capacity, we doe not content our selues with a slight perusall, but that wee thorowly vnderstand what wee reade, and not passe to a new point, till wee see in some sort the meaning

ning of that wee last had in hand. The which rule hath place chiefly in reading of the Scriptures primarily by our selves, wherein it is better to reade five words with the vnderstanding, then ten thousand when we vnderstand the meaning of them no more, then if they were written in a strange language. In which regard their practice bringeth little profit, who set themselves (as it were) to their taskes in reading ouer the Bible euery yere, and so many Chapters euery day, if they rest in the deede done, and haue little care how they doe it, and take more paines in reading ouer the words, then in attaining to their meaning, vnto whom, if Philips question to the Eunuch were propounded, Vnderstandest thou what thou readest? they were not able to shap vnto it so good an answer, seeing they want not so much an interpreter to expound darke prophecies, as an intente and industrious minde, setting it selfe to vnderstand what it is able by study to comprehend. The which I speake not to discourage any in this exercise (farre be it from me to quench the smoking flaxe) but rather to perswade them to continue it still with more fruite and benefit, the taste and feeling whereof can onely make them constant in it, for who delighteth long to feede on that meate, wherein he findeth no relish or sweetehesse? neither is it my meaning, that in reading the Scriptures, men of ordinary callings and gifts should tye themselves to vnderstand all they haue read, before they proceede further, for many points are so deepe and mysticall, that for the vnderstanding of them, they will thorowly exercise the greatest learning and best wits, yea oftentimes, euen such with much studie shall not be able to comprehend them: but onely I would not haue any negligently to slight ouer what they reade, but seriously to apply their mindes to vnderstand as much as they can, and as for places of difficulty, they are not by them to be stopped in their course of reading, (as it were with blocks lying in their way) but to passe by them vnto more easie and plaine passages, vnlesse their leysure, learning and liberty will afford them the helpe of some good Commentary to cleare their doubt. Onely they may take notice of such difficult places, as they thinke would, if they were well vnderstood, bee most profitable for their vse, and seeke to be resolued of them, by some of more knowledge and learning, and chiefly of their owne Minister, whose lips should preserue knowledge, that the people committed to his charge, may seeke the Law at his mouth. Wherein notwithstanding two cautions are to be obserued: first, that the points wherein they desire resolution, be not slight and triuiall, but of speciall moment and vse, seeing it is not fit that their Pastour, who is to apply himselfe in his studies for the publike seruice of the Congregation, should spend too much of his time in giuing satisfaction to euery particular man, that commeth vnto him in euery vellefle doubt, wherein he should be wholly taken vp, and made vnseruiceable vnto the rest of his charge. In which respect it is also fit, that men should make choice of such times, when as he is vsually most free from his owne serious imployments, and not (as it is the custome of many) when as themselves are at best leysure. And secondly, that they doe not

1. Cor. 14. 19.

2. Tim. 2. 15.
Him owne will Iust. 8. 30.
not without Iust. 10. 200

Mal. 2. 7.

§. Sect. 6.

That we must ioyne with our reading, serious Meditation.

not presently run vnto him at the first appearing of any difficulty, but after they haue vsed their best indeuours, to satisfie their doubts by their owne serious studies. For if it were vnreasonable amongst the Ancients (as Plutarch recordeth) to borrow water of their neighbours, vntill they had first digged to the clay, vsing their labour and indeuour to finde a spring in their owne grounds for their owne vse; by the same reason it may be thought as vnfit to trouble others (at least vnseasonably) about resolving our doubts, till our selues haue indeuoured (though in vaine) to resolve them by our owne studies.

The sixth rule of direction in our reading, is, that we ioyne with it serious meditation, pondring and weighing well the point in hand, before we passe to another, when we finde it of speciall vse; either that we may more fully conceiue it in our vnderstanding; if it be a materiall thing which wee knew not before; or better imprint it in our memories, if knowing we had forgotten it; or worke it into our hearts and affections, if we had not a liuely sense and feeling of it; or fruitfully practise it in our liues, if we haue formerly neglected it, especially when as we finde it powerfully pressed by the Author vpon the heart and conscience. And thus it is profitable, after that we haue priuately read a Chapter of the Bible, to meditate a while vpon it, and to recall vnto our remembrance what remarkable things we haue obserued for the better informing of our iudgements and sanctifying of our hearts. As what doctrine we haue learned for our better instruction; what errour in our iudgement hath beene refuted; how we haue beene admonished or reprooued for any sinne, which we are prone vnto or haue committed; what promises made to any vertue and grace or holy dutie, for our better encouragement to imbrace and practise it; what threatnings against vice and sinne to withdraw vs from them, or to mooue vs to rise out of them by repentance, if we haue falne into them; what examples we haue obserued of Gods Iudgements vpon the wicked for their sinnes, or of his blessings and benefits vpon the faithfull, whereby he hath richly rewarded their seruice, and thereby encouraged vs to follow them in their holy practice; what gracious deliuerances we haue noted of those who haue trusted in God, for the confirmation of our Faith and affiance in him; finally, what comforts and consolations, we haue obserued to incourage vs in Gods seruice in the midst of all afflictions and persecutions. Which course if we should take in our reading, it would not be much lesse profitable then meditation, of which we haue before intreated, seeing it would not onely increase our knowledge, and inlighten our mindes, but also worke the things knowne into our hearts and affections, and moue and inable vs to put them in practice in our liues. Whereas though we read much, and doe not vse this helpe, it is but like the eating of much meate, that is neuer digested in the stomake; which may puffe men vp with the winde of speculatiue knowledge, but seldom turneth vnto any wholesome nourishment. But yet this durie of meditation after reading, cannot bee performed to any purpose, vnlesse another goe before it, which is to vse, whilst we are reading, ding, all attention of minde vnto the things read, that we may not onely conceiue and vnderstand them, but orderly dispose and lay them vp as we goe, in our memories, that afterwards we may recall them into remembrance, and so more thorowly weigh and ponder them. To which end we must in this exercife (as much as in vs lieth) banish out of our mindes all worldly distractions and wandring thoughts; that we may wholly intend the action in hand. And this the Apostle seemeth to imply, where he exhorteth Timothy not simply to read, but to attend vnto reading, setting himselfe so seriously about it, as that no other thing in the meane while should withdraw him from it, either in respect of the maine duty, or right manner of performing it.

1. Tim. 3. 13.

The seuenth rule is, that we read with affection and deuotion, applying all vnto our selues, according to the nature of the subiect matter for spirituall vse; framing and fashioning our hearts vnto it, and changing and varying our affections, as the matter is varied & changed. For that counsell which one giueth for the reading of the Psalmes, may in the perusing of other parts of Scripture and holy writings, be profitably obserued. If (saith he) the Psalm prayeth, doe yee also pray; if it mourneth, mourne ye; if it congratulateth and reioyceth, reioyce ye likewise; if it hopeth, hope ye; if it feareth, doe ye also feare; for all things that are here written, are our looking glasse, that we may compose our selues as it directeth. Thus the Apostle telleth vs, that whatsoeuer things were written aforatime, were written for our learning; whereby he vnderstandeth, not onely the information of our iudgements, but also the working of them into our hearts and affections for spirituall vse, as the words following doe plainly shew, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might haue hope. And so Eliphaz hauing shewed the miserable end of wicked men, and the happy end of Gods chastizements vnto his children, he thus concludeth his discourse: Loe this, we haue searched it, so it is; heare it, and know thou it for thy selfe, that is, for thine owne speciall vse and benefit, by applying it to thy present condition and estate. More especially, when the Scriptures teach, we are to receiue instruction for the inlightning of our owne mindes; when they admonish, we are to take warning; when they reprove, we are to be checked; when they comfort, we are to be cheared & encouraged; when they commend any grace, we are to desire and imbrace it; when they command any dutie, we are to hold our selues enioyned to doe it; when they promise, we are to hope; when they threaten, we are to be terrified, as if the iudgement were denounced against vs; and when they forbid any sinne, we are to thinke that they forbid it vnto vs. By which application, we shall make all the rich treasures contained in the Scriptures, wholly our owne; and in such a powerfull and peculiar maner enioy the fruit and benefit of them, as if they had bee wholly written for vs, and for none other else besides vs.

§. Sect. 7.
That we must reade with affection and deuotion, applying all to vse.

Et si orat Psalm- mus, orate; et si gemit, gemit; et si gratulatur,
gaudete, &c.
August. in Psalm.
30. Conc. 3.

Rom. 15. 4.

Iob. 5. 27.

The last rule to be obserued in our reading, is, that we proceed in it after an orderly maner, with diligence and constancie, and not by fits and snatches, here a Chapter and there another, or onely the beginnings of bookes, and then laying them aside, and taking others in hand,

§. Sect. 8.
That we must reade orderly with diligence and constancy.

of

of which we are as soone wearie as of the former, only out of nouelty and to feed our vaine curiosity, without any true desire of edification and spirituall profit. But when vpon sound aduice, wee haue made choyce of a booke, we are not to giue it ouer till we come to the end. Yea if we finde it sound and fauoury, vsfull and profitable, we are to read it againe and againe, as before I haue shewed, neuer thinking that we haue perused it sufficiently, till we haue thorowly vnderstood it, layd it vp in our memories, applied it to our hearts, and drawne it into vse and practice. The which constant course, as we must obserue in our studie of other godly bookes, so especially in reading the holy Scriptures, the which must not be read by piéces without order, as the Booke hapneth to open, when we take it into our hand, but the best way is, in our ordinarie course to begin at the beginning, and so to proceed till we come to the end. The which will be a notable helpe both for the vnderstanding of the matter, and the History of the Bible, when as we obserue the coherence, and how one thing dependeth vpon another: which if it be interrupted, causeth much obscuritie, and maketh vs vnacquainted with the whole Counsell of God, seeing by reason of this confusion, we shall reade many things often, and as many others neuer at all. The which rule hath place in our ordinarie course of reading onely: for vpon extraordinary occasions, it is fit and necessarie to reade in any place as the occasion requireth; As also some speciall parts of holy Scriptures, more often then others, which are most full and fertill of spirituall instructions, and most profitable for edification, which out of our ordinarie course we may reade, when we get any fit leisure and opportunitie. Againe, though in our ordinarie reading no portion of Scriptures is alwaies to be passed ouer, seeing all is profitable for some vses and purposes; yet (sauiug other mens better iudgement) I thinke that some parts may be read much more seldome then others, especially by common Christians of meane knowledge and capacity, who are able to make little vse of them; as the Chapters which containe nothing but Genealogies, those in the New Testament excepted, the Leuiticall law abrogated by Christ, containing the ceremonies of Gods seruice, whereof we can make vse only as they were types & shadowes of Christ, which cannot easily be done by ordinarie wits; the building of the Tabernacle & Temple, with many Chapters in diuers of the Prophets, which are either so obscure, or so fitted to diuers Nations, against whom they denounced Gods iudgements, that few can vnderstand them, who are not acquainted with the state of those Countries, and Histories of those times, which are out of the reach of ordinary Christians, to whom chiefly I write, and not so vsfull as other parts of holy Scriptures to those who are most learned, for the helping them forward in the duties of a godly life, but only profitably serue for speciall purposes and vses, for which the Holy Ghost did principally intend them. In which regard I haue found it profitable, to reade ouer the whole Scriptures seriously twice or thrice, and to obserue as we goe, both these Chapters of lesse ordinarie vse, and others of greatest excellencie, and most profitable for our

Matth. 1.
Luk. 3.

our edification, and as we get to prefix before them, with our pen a small mark, as for example, before the former sort, this *; before the other, this #, or some such like; that we may readily chuse the one vpon extraordinary occasions, and more seldome read the other in our ordinary course. The which I prescribe to some, but onely propound, and so leave it vnto euery ones choyce, either to vse or not to vse it, as they shall thinke most fit for their owne profit. Onely this I would perswade euery good Christian, as a matter most profitable and necessary, that they would read the holy Scriptures with all diligence, not only at their idle houres, when they haue nothing else to doe, but making it one of their most important businesses, to borrow some time for it fro their ordinary employments; yea even from their sleepe, rather then to want time any day studiously to read some part of holy Scriptures: and finally, that they bee not onely thus diligent by fits and flashes, reading much one day, and nothing in another, but that they keepe themselves constantly (es nece as they can) to a settled course, seeing he commeth sooner, and more subely to his journeyes end, who obserueth a discreet constancy in his traude, though he goeth but a slow pace, then another who by spurts and fits, treadeth vpon his gallop, and not minding his journey, spendeth the most part of his time in needlesse staves vpon the way.

And so much concerning the things which are to be observed in the manner of our reading. The next poynt to bee considered, is the time, which we may most fitly allot to this exercise, when we are to performe it, and how long it must be continued. For either of which no certaine rule can be giuen, but they must be left to be determined by euery Christians discretion, and deuotion, according to their severall occasions and opportunities. We are generally fittest for this, and other spirituall exercises of like nature, in the morning, when our spirits and wits are freshest; or if we be not drowzie when we goe to bed: because things which are last thought vpon, are better imprinted in the memory, when as they haue had without disturbance of other businesse, some time of settling, especially if we recall them to mind the next morning. But some mens businesse will allow rather some other time, in some other part of the day; hauing then little enough for more necessary duties, as prayer and meditation. In which regard, the Christian is to bee left vnto his owne discreet choyce, when his occasions will giue him fittest opportunity, so that they doe not neglect it altogether. Some who abound in leisure and meanes, may chuse that time which they finde most fit; others which earne their linings by their labours, or are otherwise taken vp with many and important businesses, either priuate or publike, must take such times as will best stand with their waighy affaires. Yet let euery one allow a little to this profitable exercise, and euen those who are most pinched with poverty, and so pressed with the waight of important employments, that they can finde no leisure in the weeke dayes; yet in any case let them not omit it vpon the Lords Day, which is wholly to bee set apart from all worldly businesses, and to be all spent in such spirituall exercises. So likewise the time of continuing in reading cannot bee stinted and limited to any certaine and constant space, but must bee measured by our deuotion,

§. Sect. 9.
Of the fittest time for this exercise of reading.

and other affaires: Only this may be generally said, that seeing such reading is a want to the flesh, and wearines dulls the appetite, and causeth distaste, therefore it is best not to reade ouermuch at one time, but to temper with an appetite, that we may receive more to againe with more delight, and not be weary and satiey, but with some and disaffection put an end vnto it.

h. Sect. 10.
Of the wofull neglect of this holy exercise.

But though this counsell be good, yet few in these dayes do greatly need it, seeing it is so wofully neglected amongst the most who profess Christ. Alas, that there is much more need of a spur to hasten our speed, than of a bridle to restrain vs from running our slay out of breath. For many there are, who otherwise in their iudgements hold this exercise of reading as commendable and profitable, that are yet so wholly addicted to the world, that they can scarce finde any leisure in any one day of the weeke, to spend some time in this religious exercise, but are wholly taken up with such employments, as will bring vnto them some earthly profit, or with the cares of this life, and forecaring of their businesse for their better advantage. Others abound in leisure, rather then they will spend any time in this profitable exercise (the which notwithstanding is trifling and tedious, when they are idle and haue nothing to doe) do wholly giue themselves ouer to sports and pastimes, hunting and hawking, carding and dicing, dancing and reuelling, or else idle and vaine communications, and complacentall visitations, hereby preparing against themselves a fearful reckoning, when being called to giue vp their accounts, before the supreme Iudge of heauen and earth, how they haue spent that precious time which he hath allowed vnto them to glorifie him, and make their Calling and Election sure, they shall be constrained to giue euidence against themselves, out of the bookes of their owne consciences, that they haue spent almost all their time in things vaine and wicked, seruing thereby the diuell, the world, and their owne carnall lusts, and little or none at all in spirituall exercises, and in the duties of Gods seruice. Neither will it (at this day) any thing auail vs to say, that we had so much worldly busines, that we could not intend this, and such religious exercises, seeing God in his Law hath absolutely required them, not dispensing with vs vpon any pretence of busines. For euen Kings and great Commanders, who haue greatest, and most important employments, both in warre and peace, are not withstanding expressly inioyned to reade and meditate in Gods Law. The which was accordingly performed by holy David, though hee had as many distractions, and waighy employments as any other. Yea, then it will be told vs, if we will not know it before, that we were chiefly sent into the world, that we might do seruice vnto our Lord and Master, who hath created and redeemed vs, which therefore ought to haue bin preferred before all other employments, & that the duties of Gods seruice, and means fitting vnto it, was that one thing necessary, and our main and chiefe busines, vnto which all other busineses & worldly affaires, which tend only to maintain our momentary and vncertaine liues, & to vpheld our brittle & mutable estates for a moment of time, in respect of eternitie, ought to haue giuen place, if both of them could not stand together as they ordinarily might, if we were not too greedy in pursuing these worldly things with an

o. Sect. 2.
How a ch. 10
sith not sent to shew gibber

Deut. 17. 19.

Josh. 1. 8.

Psal. 119.

Luk. 10. 42.

Mat. 6. 33.

vnvariable

vnvariable appetite, or wanted not wisdom and discretion to performe duties of both kinds in due order and time.

C A P. XXXI.

That reading is a notable meanes to further vs in the duties of a godly life.

RHe second maine poynt which I propounded, is, that reading of the Scriptures, and other holy and religious bookes, is a notable helpe and furtherance vnto a godly life. The which may easily be vnderstood by that which is already spoken, and needeth not any large discourse to proue it. And yet it will not bee amisse to say something of it, not so much to informe or conuince the iudgement of the truth, as to perswade the heart to put it in practice. And first, generally it may be said, that to what vses fouer the Scriptures are profitable and necessary, to the same purposes reading of them, which is the meanes whereby we deriue from them these benefits, is necessary and profitable; seeing though they be a most rich treasury of all goodnesse, yet they will doe vs little good, if they be locked vp and not by reading and preaching opened vnto vs. So that we may truly say, that reading of the Scriptures doth nourish our soules, seeing it conueyeth vnto them the food whereby they are nourished; that it cureth vs of all our spirituall sores and sicknesses, seeing it conueyeth and applyeth vnto vs the soueraigne salues and medicines whereby wee are recovered; that it guideth vs in the way of truth, because it openeth vnto vs the light, which serueth to direct vs. Yea, it semeth to all vses and purposes, whereby we may be furthered in all duties of godlinesse, seeing it discovereth vnto vs that diuine brightnesse of the supreme and vncreated wisdom, the reading whereof (as one saith) sharpeneth the sense, inlargeth the vnderstanding, heateth our lukewarmenesse, rowzeth vp our sloth, extinguishteth the darts of lust, moueth mourning, draweth from vs teares, maketh vs to approach neere vnto God, who when we reade, conferreth with vs by his holy Spirit. In which respects he perswadeth in another place, that it should bee our chiefe care to study and know the diuine Law, wherein we may see the examples of Gods Saints as present before our eyes, and by the counsell thereof, learne what is to be done, and what auoyded. For it is a great helpe vnto holinesse and righteousness of life, to replenish the mind with the diuine Oracles, and to be alwayes meditating in our hearts vpon those things, which we desire to practise in our liues.

More especially this exercise of reading doth singularly further vs in a godly life, as it doth inlighten our vnderstandings in the knowledge of Gods will, vnto which we are to yeeld obedience, and sheweth vnto vs the way in which we must walke. To which purpose, no exercise whatsoeuer is so vusefull and effectuall. For howsoeuer the preaching and hearing of the Word, haue a superiour priuiledge in the worke of our Regeneration and conuersion, and for the working of sauing graces in vs; as faith, repentance, and the rest; yet for the inlightening of the mind with the full knowledge of the truth, after wee are conuerted and illuminated in some measure, this exercise of reading hath many speciall priuiledges.

§. Sect. 1.

That reading is a most profitable exercise.

*Hieronym. ad Celsus. de Instruct.
matrisam.*

§. Sect. 2.

That by reading, the mind is much inlightened in the knowledge of Gods will.

For first, wee may vse it as oft as wee will, and haue any desire to gaine knowledge; but the other can be had but at certaine times, not then neither in euery place. Secondly, by reading, we may in short time, if we be studious and diligent, be thorowly instructed in the whole body of Diuinity, and in all the seuerall parts thereof, which by preaching we cannot come to know, but in long time, though our Pastour take the best, and most direct course of ioyning Catechizing with Preaching, nor in our whole liues in any great perfection, if this be neglected; seeing in a Sermon some few of innumerable poynts are usually deliuered, and they rather pressed vpon the affection for vse and practice, then sufficiently cleared to the vnderstanding. Thirdly, because by reading we may helpe our vnderstanding, by reuiewing ouer and ouer againe, that which at first we conceiued not, and by the same meanes also may recall to our remembrance the things which after once or twice reading wee haue forgotten: the which helpes hearing affordeth not, especially when wee most stand in need of them. Finally, because we may at our owne pleasure sit our reading for our owne occasions, and furnishing vs in the knowledge of those poynts, wherein we are most defectiue, for the resolving of our particular questions and doubts, and for the informing our iudgements in all poynts whereof for the present, and vpon euery occasion, wee haue speciall vse: whereas the Preacher speaking generally for the good of the whole Congregation, and not being acquainted with our defects in knowledge, seldom or neuer speaketh of all those poynts wherein we need instruction, and often of such as we know already. In all which respects it is hard to finde a Christian thorowly grounded in all poynts contained in the body of Diuinity, though hee be neuer so diligent in hearing the Word preached, and may haue some competency of knowledge necessary to saluation, and some good measure of faith, and other sauing graces, if he vtterly neglect this duty of reading.

§. Sect. 3.
That reading bringeth with it many other benefits.

Again, as reading singularly enlighteneth the mind, so also it affordeth many other helpes of a godly life; for it is a speciall meanes to relieue the memory, and to mooue the will, inclining it powerfully vnto good, and withdrawing it from euill, though not in that degree of efficacy as the Word preached. It worketh vpon the hart, for the mollifying & softening it, and vpon all the affections, for the purging and sanctifying of them, inflaming our loue towards God and all good things, and our hatred against all that is euill; it kindleth our zeale when it groweth lukewarme, and stirreth vp our deuotion when it is cold and sluggish. It much increaseth all Gods graces in vs; as faith, affiance, repentance, patience, peace of conscience, and the rest, by imparting vnto them that spirituall food whereby they are nourished. It amendeth our liues, and maketh vs (as the Apostle speaketh) perfect vnto euery good worke. It specially inableth vs to the fruitfull hearing of the Word of God, when as we can, with the Bereans, search the Scriptures, whether the things we heare be so or no; and try the spirits of those we heare, whether they be of God or no, by examining their doctrines according to the touch-stone of this Truth: besides that, it maketh vs well acquainted with the Scriptures, both for matter and history, so that when they are cited, they are familiar vnto vs.

Whereas

2. Tim. 3. 13, 17.

Act. 17. 11.

Whereas without this benefit of reading, we cannot tell whether the testimonies quoted be in the Canonickall Scriptures or no, or if we take this vpon our Teachers word, yet we cannot tell where they are, nor easily turne to them vpon the sudden. It teacheth vs to manage the Sword of the Spirit, whereby we are enabled to defend our selues, and repell the tentations of our spirituall enemies, as we see in the example of our Sauour Christ. Finally, if we vse this exercise carefully and conscionably to profit by it, we shall be assured of euermore lasting blessednesse; For blessed is he that readeth, and they that beare the Words of Gods Booke, and keepe the things which are written therein. Blessed is the man who delighteth in the Law of the Lord, and meditateth therein day and night. All which being duly considered, should be effectfull mo-tiues to make those diligent in reading, who are able to performe it, and greatly to humble those who are not, in the sight and sense of this great defect, and either to labour that yet they may attaine vnto this skill, if they be capable and haue meanes, or else to supply their wants, by resorting often vnto others, that they may read vnto them the euidences of their saluation and heavenly inheritance, which themselves for want of skill are not able to peruse.

CAP. XXXII.

The last ordinary meanes of a godly life, is the choyce of our company, shunning the society of the wicked, and consorting our selues with the godly and Religious.

THe last ordinary meanes of a godly life is, that we make good choyce of our company, vnto which two things are required: first, that we shun and auoid the society of the prophane and wicked; the other is, that we consort our selues with the godly and religious. By the former we are not to vnderstand that we must forbear the society of all, who are not as forward and zealous in their profession and practice as our selues, or who bewray in their course and conuersation many infirmities and imperfections, as though those were to be esteemed wicked and prophane, who haue made but small progresse in their sanctification, if any sparkes of grace and goodnesse appeare in them, though (as it were) raked vp vnder the ashes of many and great corruptions; for then we should breake the bruised reede, and quench the smoking flaxe; and by our censorious neglect vtterly discourage them in their first entrance into Christianity, and from making any further proceedings in the waies of godlinesse. Yea rather, if we can in the iudgement of charity thinke, that the little good in them is in sincerity and truth, we must, as the Apostle exhorteth, take such vnto vs, and vse all good meanes, in loue and meekenesse, whereby we may draw them on by degrees to more perfection. For babes in Christ being vnable to helpe themselves, had most need of tender cherishing, and those that are sicke, hauing some life of grace in them, had most neede of good Nurseries and skilfull Physicians, as our Sauour hath

6. Sect. 1.
 That we must carefully auoid the society of wicked and prophane persons.

Matth. 12.30.

Rom. 14.1.

Matth. 9.12, 13.

Heb. 12. 12.

Acts 3.

1. Cor. 5. 10.

taught vs by his owne example. And the Apostle exhorteth vs not to neglect the weake, but to lift up the hands that hang downe, and strengthen the feeble knees; and to hold such an even course, that those which are lame in the profession and practice of Religion, be not through our harshnes quite turned out of the way; but rather that they may be healed, & so may (like the Cripple in the Temple) together with vs glorifie God, and loue vs aboue others, who haue bene the meanes of their spirituall cure. But such onely are here vnderstood, who haue let the reines loose to all impiety, and are of professed prophanenesse, not caring to make shew of it vpon euery occasion, and either scorne and scoffe at the exercises of godlinesse, or neglect and contemne them in the whole course of their liues. Neither may we reiect such as shew some willingnesse to conforme themselues to our good courses, and to ioyne with vs in the exercises of Religion, though for the present we see in them little power of godlinesse; but onely such Ismaels and Esaus, as hold them in contempt, are worthy to be expelled out of all societies. Neither are we so to vnderstand it, as though it were vtterly vnlawfull to come at all into the company of such wicked men; for then (as the Apostle saith) we must goe out of the world, and euery place almost abounding with such, we cannot chuse but oftentimes at vnawares come amongst them, but that we doe not purposely make choyce of such company, and if vnwittingly we happen to come into it, that we quit our selues of it as soone as wee can. Nor are wee debarred from hauing any entercourse and commerce with such in worldly affaires, as trading and merchandize, buying and selling, and all other such contracts, as are ordained for the benefit of humane society, whereby we may doe or receiue good in our outward estate; nor from performing any ciuill or Christian dutie to our friends & allies, kindred and neighbours, or any worke of mercy towards those that are in misery, and neede our helpe: so that we entertaine their company no longer, then is necessary for these vses, and then be careful that we goe not without our preseruatiues about vs, that we may not, in seeking to do them good, hurt our selues with the contagion of their wickednesse, nor receiue more detriment in our spirituall estate, then they or we profit in respect of outward things. Though in truth it is most safe conuersing with wicked men, when we minister vnto them in their extremities, seeing when they are benumbed with the cold of their afflictions, they cannot spit out their venome and poison, but like frozen serpents may be taken into our hands without receiuing any great hurt. Besides that, their necessity importuning our helpe, will be a curbe to restraints their malice, at least till their turne bee serued, that they may make vs more cheerefull in relieuing their miseries. But this onely wee vnderstand to be vnlawfull, to stretch our action further then our excuse will reach, that is, vnder any, or all these pretences, to conuerse with wicked men more then we neede. And much more to make them our bosome friends, and to entertaine familiar acquaintance and society with them, being either bewitched with their naturall and morall parts, or allured with some baytes of worldly benefit, fit, or carnall delight. For though wee may not out of hatred towards the persons of euill men be enuious against them, yet in detestation of their finnes, wee must not desire to bee with them, as Salomon teacheth vs.

And for this we haue many caueats, and expresse inhibitions in the Booke of God, both in the Old and New Testament; for in them both these beasts are vnclane. So Salomon chargeth vs, not to enter into the path of the wicked, nor to goe in the way of euill men; A void is (saith he) passe not by it, turne from it, and passe away. For though he be about other matters so short and sententious, yet wisely fore-seeing the greatnesse of this danger, he thought he could scarce vse words inow in warning vs to shunne it. And the same reason maketh him to beate so often vpon it in other places: For sake the foolish and lue, and goe in the way of vnderstanding. My sonne, walke not thou in the way with the wicked, refraine thy foote from their path; for their feete runne to euill, &c. And amongst other sinners, he specially inhibiteth vs to keepe company with drunkards and gluttons, which in the world are esteemed the only good fellowes and boone companions, because they aboue other sinners are most dangerous; seeing they both allure vs with their ill example, and draw vs by their inuitations that way, to which our carnall appetite is naturally too prone. Be not (saith he) amongst wine-bibbers, amongst riotous eaters of flesh. Thus the Apostle also in the New Testament inhibiteth vs to keep copany with wicked men. Haue no fellowship (saith he) with the works of darkness, but rather reprove them. And againe, We command ye, brethren, in the Name of the Lord Iesus Christ, that ye withdraw your selues from euery brother that walketh disorderly, and not after the tradition which yee haue receiued of vs. And, If any man that is called a brother, be a fornicatour, or couetous, or an idolater, or a rayler, or a drunkard, or an extortioner, with such an one I haue written, you should not keepe company, no not to eate. But aboue all other societies with the wicked, we must take speciall care, that wee doe not match with them in that neere bond of marriage, according to that of the Apostle, Be not vnequally yoked together with vnbeleeuers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousnesse? and what communion hath light with darkenes? & what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that be- leueth, with an Infidell? For if holy David match with scoffing Michol, shee will be a snare vnto him, and a proud scorner of his humble zeale in Gods seruice. If Iehoram the sonne of good Iehosaphat, marry with Abahs daughter, it will be a strong inducement to make him an Idolater, and to doe euill in the sight of the Lord.

Vnto these testimonies of holy Scriptures, deborting vs from entertaining neere society and alliance with the wicked, we may adde the examples of Gods seruants, who haue carefully shunned all fellowship with them. Thus Elisha so much detested the wicked life and raigne of idolatrous Iehoram, that had he not respected the presence of Iehosaphat, who was in his company, he would not, as he professeth, so much as haue looked towards him, nor seen him. So the Apostle Iohn, as it is recorded of him, finding Cerinthus, a blasphemous heretike, in a bath with some of his consorts, belching out blasphemies against our Sauour Christ, in haste departed

Pro. 24. 1.

6. Sect. 2.

That the Scriptures often warne vs to shun wicked company.
Pro. 4. 14, 15.

Pro. 9. 6.

Pro. 1. 15, 16.

Pro. 23. 30.

Eph. 5. 11.

2. The. 3. 6.

1. Cor. 5. 11.

2. Cor. 6. 14.

1. Sam. 18. 21.

2. Sam. 6. 16, 20.

2. King. 8. 18.

6. Sect. 3.

Examples of the faithfull who haue shunned wicked company.
2. King. 3. 14.

Ieremias aduers.
Haref. 1. 3. 6. 3.

Psal. 26. 4, 5.

Psal. 101. 4, 7.

Psal. 6. 8.

Psal. 119. 115.

§. Sect. 4.

Reasons perswading vs to shun the society of wicked men, first, because it is a strong temptation vnto euill.

1. Pet. 4. 4.

Pro. 1. 10, 11, 12.

Psal. 119. 115.

Psal. 141. 4.

Ab. 13. 8.

Pro. 31. 24.

Psal. 5.

with his cōpany, for feare of being attached by Gods Iudgments together with them; Who was no sooner gone out of the company, but presently the house fell downe and overwhelmed all that curled crue. But more plainly may we see this practised in the example of holy Dauid; who in many places sheweth how much he hated and shunned the society of wicked men; I haue not (saith he) sate with vaine persons, neither will I goe in with dissemblers; I haue hated the congregation of euill doers, and I will not sit with the wicked. A froward heart shall depart from me; I will not know a wicked person. He that worketh deceit, shall not dwell within my house; he that telleth lies, shall not tarry in my sight. So elsewhere, he banisheth them out of his company, Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity; and, Away from me, ye wicked, &c. I will keepe the Commandements of my God.

Besides which testimonies and examples, we may adde diuers effectual reasons, which may dissuade vs from keeping company with wicked men. As first, because we shall be in great danger to grow in short time like vnto them. For it is a strong temptation to draw vs vnto all euill, and it is iust with God, to leaue vs when we wilfully rush into it. The loue which wee beare to their persons, will lessen daily our dislike of their sinnes, making vs to thinke them at first lesse haynous then they are, afterwards small and veniall, then tolerable and excusable, till at last we come to iustifie and defend them, to approoue and practise them. Besides, sinne is of a contagious nature, and wee most apt to receiue infection; in which regard, it spreadeth as fast as the plague in a City, or the rot in a flocke of Sheepe. For not onely are the examples of the wicked of such great force, that if wee keepe them company, they thinke it a strange thing, if we doe not runne with them into the same excessse of riot; but they are also ready to set vpon vs with perswasions, and to vse arguments of worldly aduantage, to allure vs to accompany them in their wickednesse, as Salomon teacheth vs. Being heerein like to them who are sicke of the plague, that care not how many are infected by them, that so the fewer may thinne their company. And this Dauid knew to bee so strong a temptation, that resolving to keepe Gods Commandements, he first caused the workers of wickednesse to depart from him, because so long as they consorted with him, he had little hope of making good his resolution. And finding not power in himselfe to resist it, because of the many allurements and baits of wickednesse, hee desired by prayer Gods assistance: Incline not mine heart to any euill thing, to practise wicked workes with men that worke iniquity; and let me not ease of their dainties. Thus Elymas the Sorcerer being, it seemeth, in times past gracious with Sergius Paulus the Deputy, so maliciously withstood the Apostles, Paul and Barnabas, and so powerfully wrought with the Gouverneur to turne him away from the faith; that the Apostle was faine vehemently to oppose him, and to disgrace him with the Deputy, by bringing vpon that caytife by miracle, a fearefull Iudgement of God. And this danger of being tainted and corrupted with the sins of wicked men, by keeping them company, Salomon plainly implieth, where he perswadeth vs to make no friendship with an angry man, and not to goe with one that is furious, lest wee learne his wayes, and get a snare to our soules; for as he saith before; Thornes and snares are in the way of the froward: he that doth keepe his soule, shall bee farre

farre from them. And so likewise the Apostle, where perswading the Corinthians to excommunicate the incestuous person, lest they should be infected with his example, vseth this as a reason, because sin is like vnto leaven, a little whereof leaveneth the whole lump. The which we see verified in the example of Ioseph, who notwithstanding that he was so vertuous and Religious, yet living in the Kings Court, learned to swear ordinarily by the life of Pharaoh. Yea, if their example be not strong enough to allure vs to sinne, yet other motives draw vs into it, and especially feare of their scornes and reproches, violence and persecution, if we goe not with them hand in hand in their euill courses. As we see in the example of Dauid, who being in the Court of Achish, one time basely counterfeited madnesse, and at another time dissembleth, and faineth himselfe to be a friend to the Philistines, and an enemy to Gods people, and in the Apostle Peter, who being amongst the High-priests seruants, for feare of them denieth his Master. So that as one saith wittily, If wee keepe companie with wicked men, though wee be not burnt with their fire, yet wee shall be smutcht with the smoke. Yea, not onely doe wicked men hurt vs in these respects by this societie and familiarity, if seeing their sinnes, we doe not shew our dislike by our rebuke, and (if they will doe no good) by leauing their companie; but wee also shall hurt them, and harden them in their sinnes, because it is no small heartning and encouraging of wicked men to goe on in their euill courses, when as they are countenanced with the societie of the godly, and are moued to thinke that they are, if not commendable, yet at least tolerable, or else men of such Pietie would not be so inward and familiar with them. Whereas contrariwise by shunning their societie, wee shall giue them occasion to enter into a consideration of their estate, and of their sinnefull courses, which make them lothsome both to God and all good men; and moue them at least to an outward reformation, out of naturall shame, to be thus shunned, according to that of the Apostle; If any man obey not our Word, haue no company with him, that he may be ashamed.

And these reasons, though there were no more, are sufficient to withdraw all that intend to leade a godly life, from inward friendship with wicked persons. Vnto which, if it were needfull, many others might be added. As that such societie may be vnto vs a strong presumption, that we are not truely righteous, and vpright in heart, but that we still halt between God and the world. For if as Salomon saith, An vnjust man is an abomination to the iust, and he that is upright in the way, is an abomination to the wicked, how can we delight in one anothers company? And if, as our Saviour hath taught vs, we were not of the world, but in their number whom he hath chosen out of it, then would the world hate vs, and we it; and little comfort should we take in conuersing familiarly one with another. Againe, as societie with the wicked is dangerous, for feare of being tainted with their sinnes, so also because it maketh vs liable to their punishments: For as the Lord often spareth the wicked for the righteous sake, so also he punisheth with temporall iudgements

1. Cor. 5. 6.

Gen. 4. 17. 24.

Nestor. ad

Calasium.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

2. Tim. 2. 16.

Num. 16. 26.
Apoc. 18. 4.

Psal. 1. 1.

§. Sect. 6.

That we must confort our selues with the godly and ver-tuous.

Pro. 13. 20.

Gen. 2. 18.

Heb. 10. 24.

Psal. 16. 3.

Psal. 101. 6.

Psal. 119. 63.
79.

Psal. 122. 1.

Acts 2. 46. &
9. 31.

ments the godly for the wickeds sake, and pulleth them from them with violence (as Lot from the Sodomites) when as for earthly respects they are loth to leaue their company. And therefore if we would not perish with Corah and his companions, we must leaue the Tents of those wicked men, and come out of Babylon, if we be Gods people, that we may not be partakers of her sinnes, and thus we receive not of her plagues. Finally, the vtter leauing of familiar society with the wicked, will be vnto vs a comfortable euidence of our eternall happinesse; seeing the Spirit of God hath pronounced them blessed, that walke not in the Counsell of the ungodly; nor stand in the way of sinners, nor sit in the seat of the scornfull; that is, who doe not conuerse, nor communicate with them in any of their sinfull courses.

The second point is, that as we are carefully to shun the company of the prophane and wicked, as being notable pulbacks in the wayes of godlinesse, so must we with no lesse care confort our selues with the godly and vertuous, as being a singular furtherance vnto all Christian duties. For being naturally backward and auerse vnto all that is good, and after that we are regenerate, fraile and feeble in all duties of a godly life, here, if any where, is Gods Word verified, that it is not good for man to be alone, but that an helper is needfull vnto him, and that two are better then one, because they haue a good reward of their labour; for if they fall, the one will lift up his fellow, &c. And therefore wee must not, to shun the company of the wicked, run into the contrarie extreme, and keepe company with none, seeing God hath made vs politicall creatures, who are preferued by mutuall society; and fellow members of the same body whereof Christ is the head: and therefore we must not by withdrawing our selues, make a Schisme and rent, but continue together in louing society, that we may be ready to performe mutually all good offices whereby we may edifie and benefit one another: According to that of the Apostle; Let vs consider one another, to prouoke vnto loue and to good workes: not forsaking the assembling of our selues together, as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another, &c. For the more we conuerse with the godly & religious, the greater increase shall we finde in our Piety, Faith, Loue, Zeale and all others graces, as coales layd together, doe, if any of them be kindled, kindle one another, and so all together make a great fire, which if they be seuered one from another, giue but little heat, and in a short time will goe quite out. And this we see in the example of David, who greatly reioycing in the communion of Saints, and in the fellowship of the Faithfull, excelled also in Piety and Holinesse. So he professeth that all his delight was in Gods Saints; that his eyes were to the Faithfull of the Land, that they might dwell with him. That though he were a King, yet he made himselfe a companion of all them that feared God, and kept his precepts, and that he invited such to come vnto him; and reioyced greatly when they said, Let vs goe together into the House of the Lord. And it may be obserued that then Christians flourished in greatest purity, and best thrived in all grace and godlinesse, when this community and fellowship was most frequent amongst them. For so it is said, that they con- tinued

simid daily with out accord. In the Temple, and breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God; and having favour with all the people.

More especially, this society with the godly and religious, doth much further vs in the duties of a godly life, because it taketh away the tediousnesse of our iourney, when we haue good company to trauell with vs: Seeing they draw vs on by their good discourse; and pur out of our mindes the tediousnesse of the way; they comfort and encourage vs, when we begin to be weary, they are ready to help vs, if any euill betide vs, to secure vs by their assistance from feare of our spirituall enemies, who are ready to rob vs of the treasures of Gods graces; and when we are slothfull, they much better our speede; because we would not be cast behind. Again, the fellowship of the godly doth much further vs by their good example, seeing their zeale and diligence conuinceth our luke-warmenesse and negligence, and their good workes of piety and righteousnesse are good patterns and presidents for vs to imitate. For though the Law of God be the most perfect rule, and the example of our Saviour Christ the most exact squire, according to which all our actions and whole conuersation are to be framed; yet these being of such incomparable excellency, and so farre above our low growth in grace and short reach, would altogether discourage vs in the sence of our imperfections, if wee did not also obserue men subiect to the like infirmities, walking before vs in the wayes of godliness, and inuiting vs to follow them, who though they goe not so swiftly as they should, yet haue much outstripped vs in the Christian race. Furthermore, this society and communion with the faithfull is a notable meanes to make vs familiar with God, and to imioy the fellowship of his holy Spirit, which is the chiefe bond that vniteth vs together in this holy communion. For where two or three are gathered together in Christs name and Gods seare, to performe Christian exercises; and to further one another in the waies of saluation; there he also is in the midst of them, taking notice of their actions; and making himselfe better knowne vnto them, his face and fauour, his bounty and goodnesse; whereby they are encouraged with more chearefulness to doe him seruice.

Finally, it is a notable helpe vnto a godly life, because it is a powerfull meanes to restraîne and pull vs backe, when as we are ready to fall into any sinne. In which regard that wise heathen man perswadeth his friend, to suppose some graue man to bee present when he was alone, because men would not easily offend, if there were alwaies some by to bee witnesses of their faults. And one of the Ancients vseth it as a reason to dissuade from a solitary life; because thereby wee become more prone to sinne; seeing that euill, which none seeth, none rebuketh; and where there is none to reprehend, both the temperance faulteth more securely, and the offence is committed more licentiously. If thou doest any good things in good company, no man prohibeth. But if thou wilt doe euill, thou art not suffered; for presently thou art by many obserued, reprobued, and amended; whereas contrariwise,

6. Sect. 7.
That good company taketh away all tediousnesse in good exercises.

ex. 2. 7
14. or

6. Sect. 8.
That good company: pro-

Math. 18. 20

6. Sect. 8.
That good company: proserueth vs from falling into many sinnes, and inciteth vs to many duties.
*Magna pars peccatorum tollitur, si peccatoris testis affuerit, Seneca Epist. 11.
Malum quippe quod nemo videt nemo arguit, C. Bernard. Epist. 115.*

Pro. 27. 17. 2.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

riwise, if they behold any good, they all admire it, honour and imitate it. In which respect also, good company doth no more forcibly restraine vs from euill, then incite and prouoke vs vnto that which is good. For as iron sharpeneth iron, so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend; that is, one friend by the presence of another, is whetted on and prouoked to doe such good duties as deserue his approbation. In which respect the Apostle exhorteth Christians to observe one another, that they may mbeet and sharpen each other to loue and good works. For if hypocrites, and men of ingenuous natures, though they care not for good exercises, are ready to ioyne with their friends in them, to get their allowance and loue: Then how much more will it quicken them that are truly religious, vnto euery good worke and Christian duty, which they like and loue, when with the approbation of their friends, they haue the allowance of God and their owne consciences. And if Saul himselfe prophecied by keeping company with the Prophets, being as it were rap't and rauished for the time with a diuine furie: how much more shall those that are truly religious, bee much inflamed with zeale and deuotion in all holy exercises, when being in good company, they are rap't vp and rauished with the diuine breath of the holy Spirit, which bloweth amongst them.

6. Sect. 9.

That by good company wee are fitted to performe

Christian duties one towards another.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

h. og. red. T.

Lastly, good company is a singular helpe vnto a godly life, as it fir-and enableth vs to vse all Christian duties one towards another, whereby we doe mutually further one another in all holy and religious actions, tending to edification, to the enriching of vs with all sauing graces, and the strengthening of vs vnto all good works. The first whereof is mutuall obseruation, and watching ouer one another, that we may take all occasions of doing good both by restraining those from sinne that are ready to fall into it, and by inciting and prouoking one another vnto all vertuous actions. Vnto which the Apostle exhorteth, Let vs (saith he) consider one another, to prouoke vnto loue and to good works. For the Law of charity requiring, that wee should loue our neighbours as our selues, bindeth vs to seeke their good as well as our owne, and to this end to watch ouer them, that we may take all good opportunities, whereby we may further them in the waies of godlinesse. And therefore let vs not thinke that wee haue discharged our duty, when as wee haue vsed the meanes of our conuersion and saluation, and that we haue nothing to do with other men, seeing our Sauior requireth, that when we are conuerted, we strengthen our brethren. And the Apostle giueth vs in charge, that we should not onely looke on our owne things, but that every man should also looke on the things of others. And not to take care of our brethren as well as our selues, is plainly to discouer that we are of Cain's spirit, who refused to be his brothers keeper, and no true members of Christs body, whose property is, not to respect their owne good alone, but as it is conioyned with the good of the whole bodie, and of all the rest of their fellow members. The second Christian dutie, is instruction, whereby with all readinesse, we informe the ignorant in all the waies of godlinesse, enlighten them in the knowledge of God and his truth, and open their eyes, that they may turne from darknesse to light, and from the power

power of Satan vnto God, that they may receiue forgiveness of finnes, and inheritance amongst them which are sanctified by faith in Christ. Whereby also wee reclaime the erroneous which wander out of the way of truth, which is a speciall dutie required by the Apostle: Brethren, if any of you doe erre from the truth, and one conuert him: let him know, that he which conuerteth the sinner from the error of his way, shall save a soule from death, and shall hide a multitude of finnes. Which duties if we performe, wee shall be richly rewarded in Gods Kingdome, where they that turne many to righteousness, shall shine in the light of glory, like the Starres in the firmament, as they shined here in the light of truth. The third dutie is admonition, whereby wee put our brethren in minde of their dutie, when they seeme to forget and neglect it by falling into sinne, and lying in it without repentance, or omitting the duties of Gods seruice, either those which are generall and belong to all Christians, or those which specially belong to them in their seuerall places and callings, of which I haue spoken before at large. The fourth dutie is reprehension, whereby we rebuke those that wittingly fall into sinne, and wilfully continue in it without amendment. The which the Apostle requireth, where he chargeth vs to haue no fellowship with the unfruitfull workes of darkenesse, but to reprove them rather, implying, that if wee see sinne in our brother, and doe not rebuke him for it, hauing a calling thereunto, wee haue communion and fellowship with him, and are accessary to his finnes. The right course of performing which dutie, our Saviour plainly setteth downe: If thy brother shall trespass against thee, goe and tell his faults betweene thee and him alone: and if he shall heare thee, thou hast gained thy brother, &c. Which dutie if wee neglect, we hate our brother in truth, whatsoeuer shew we make to the contrary, and doe nothing hereby but discouer our selfe-loue, which maketh vs loath to trouble our selues in so vnpleasant a businesse, and suffer others rather to perish in their finnes, then wee will venter the alienation of their hearts from vs by giuing them any distaste. And this reason the Lord vsseth to presse this duty: Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine heart, but thou shalt in any wise rebuke thy neighbour, and not suffer sinne upon him. The fifth dutie is exhortation, whereby wee incite and prouoke others vnto all duties of godlinesse, pricking forward those which are dull and sluggish, dehorting and disswading from vice and sinne, those that are in danger to fall into it; and encouraging those who runne well in the Christian race, that they may continue faithfull, and hold out vnto the end. And vnto this the Apostle perswadeth vs; Exhort one another daily, while it is called to day, lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sinne. The sixth dutie is consolation, whereby wee strengthen the weak hands and feeble knees, and refresh with seasonable comforts, those which are ready to faint vnder the waight of their afflictions. And this the Apostle requireth of all Christians: Comfort (saith he) your selues together, and edify one another, euen as you doe; and againe, Comfort the feeble minded, support the weak, be patient towards all men. Reioyce with them that reioyce, and weep with them that weep; be of the same minde one towards another; for it is an ease to those that are in misery, to haue

James 5. 20.

Dan. 12. 3.

Rom. 15. 14.
1. Thes. 5. 14.

Eph. 15. 11.

Matth. 18. 15.

Leu. 19. 17.

Heb. 3. 13.

Heb. 12. 12.

1. Thes. 5. 11, 14

Rom. 12. 15.

have companions of their griefe, and the heauiest waight is made more tolerable, when as it is borne by many shoulders. The seueneth duty is counsell, whereby we aduize those, who doe not know of themselves what to doe in the best course, which is an excellent office to bee performed by those whom God hath indued with wisdom and sound iudgement, towards them who are weake and defectiue in these gifts. Yea in truth, it is very profitable, when it is giuen by those which are of equall parts; yea oftentimes by those who are much inferiour vnto vs, as we see in Abigail's counsell to Dauid; because lookers on being free from all preiudice and passion, can see more cleerly then those who are interestted in the busines, though at other times more quick-sighted; pride, selfe-loue, and vnuly affections, corrupting and blinding their iudgement, and mis-leading them out of the right way. The last duty tending to further one another in godlinesse, is good example, by which, shining before them in the light of an holy conuersation, we doe not onely shew them the wayes of righteousness, but also (as it were) by the hand leade them in it. And vnto this our Sauour exhorteth; Let your light so shine before men, that seeing your good workes, they may glorifie your Father which is in heaven. And the Apostle Peter; Have your conuersation honest among the Gentiles; that whereas they speake against you as euill doers, they may, by your good works which they shall behold, glorifie God in the day of visitation. And so much concerning the ordinary helpes and meanes whereby wee may be enabled and furthered in all the duties of a godly life.

Mat. 5. 16.

1. Pet. 2. 12.
and 3. 1.

CAP. XXXIII.

Of extraordinary meanes of a godly life, and first, of feasting, and solempne thanksgiuing.

6. Sect. I.
Of solempne thanksgiuing what it is, and when to be performed.

Having intreated of the ordinary meanes of a godly life; it now followeth that we say something of the extraordinary, which are such as are to be vsed vpon extraordinary occasions, when God offereth them vnto vs. And these are specially two; the first is, holy feasting, wherein we returne vnto God thanks and praise, for his speciall blessings and benefits; the other, an holy fast, wherein we doe, after an extraordinary manner, humble our selues before him, in the sight and sense of our sinnes, or some afflictions which they haue deseruedly brought vpon vs. Concerning the former, I shall not need to say much, seeing I haue already spoken of it, and am here onely to shew, what extraordinary thanks and praise we are to returne vnto God, when as we are stirred vp thereunto by some extraordinary and speciall benefit. The which is the same thanksgiuing spoken of before, performed in a solempne & speciall manner, for some great & extraordinary fauour of God, shining cleerly in some more then vsuall benefit received (as it were) from his owne hand, when in respect of secondary causes, we could not so much as hope for it, and in regard of our sinnes and vnworthinesse, we had good cause to expect the contrary. As when God hath magnified his wisdom, power and goodnesse vnto vs in some wonderful deliuerance from some dreadful and desperate danger, threatening imminent imminent destruction, as out of some grievous calamity, into which we are already plunged, when as we could not reasonably expect helpe and safety from our owne means, or the assistance of any creature, but from God alone, to whom nothing is impossible; or in bestowing vpon vs some positive benefit of great use and worth, when vpon the former considerations we could conceiue small hope, that euer we should haue misseyed it. Of the former we haue diuers examples in the Scriptures. As in that solemn thanksgiving rendered vnto God by the people of Israel, for their freedom out of the Egyptian bondage, and for drowning their enemies in the red Sea, for which Moses, Calirius, with the rest of the people, men and women, reioyce before God, and sing vnto him songs of deliuerance. The which they yearly renewed in a most solemn manner, in the celebration of the Feast of the Pascheouer, wherein they literally magnified Gods mercy for that temporary deliuerance; and typically for their spirituall Redemption from sinne, Satan, and all other enemies of their saluation, by the true Paschall Lambe, the Messias, who was to bee slaine and offered to God his Father, as a propitiatory sacrifice; and all sufficient price of Redemption for their sinnes, and all others who should beleue in him. And such a solemn thanksgiving was made by Deborah and the people, for their victory ouer Sisera, and their freedom from the tyranny of Jabin King of Canaan, who had long oppressed them. By David, when as God had deliuered him out of the hands of all his enemies, and especially out of the hand of Saul; and by Hester, Mordecai, and the Jewes of the Captiuitie, from that fearful conspiracy of Haman, who had plotted the destruction of the whole Nation. And such a feast of thanksgiving we worthily celebrate vpon the fifth of Nouember, for that marvellous and almost miraculous deliuerance of our King and State, from that horrible and vnmarchable Powder treason, by giuing wisdom to our gracious Soueraigne, to interpret their darke riddle, as he did sometime to Daniel, for the expounding of Nebuchadnezzars dreame, when the wisdom of the wisest in the Land could not vnfold it. Of the other we haue an example in Abraham, who made a solemn feast, that he might render vnto God, praise and thanksgiving, for giuing vnto him, contrary to all hope, a son in his old age, of whom should come that promised seed, in which, both himselfe, and all the Nations of the earth should be blessed.

Exod. 15.

Judg. 5.

Ester. 9.

Gen. 21.

§. Sect. 2.

When this solemn thanksgiving is most seasonable; how it differeth from that which is ordinary, and the kinds of it.

Which examples we ought to imitate, conseraering vnto God some day for solemn thanksgiving, whensoever wee receiue from him any great and extraordinary benefits, either priuatiue, consisting in deliuerance from some imminent or present euill; or positive, when as he vouchsafeth vnto vs some great and v unexpected blessing. But about all other times we must performe this duty, when wee celebrate the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, in remembrance of that inestimable benefit, the great worke of our Redemption, wrought by the death and Passion of Iesus Christ, whereby we are deliuered out of the hands of all our spirituall enemies. The which is called the Eucharist, or a Sacrament of thanksgiving, because therein wee doe, in a solemn manner, render vnto God thanks and praise, for Christ and all his benefits, the pardon of our sins, and that great Charter of our peace, sealed first by his blood, and now by this Sacrament instituted to put vs in remembrance of it; and as it were afresh to renew his Covenant, and to put our Pardon into our owne hands. Now, this extraordinary thanksgiuing, to bee used vpon such speciall occasions, differeth from that which is ordinary, not in the matter, which is one and the same, but in the manner and measure, which according to the occasion, ought to be extraordinary in quantity and degree. For our hearts must be more then usually inflamed with the apprehension of Gods loue and goodnesse, and inward ioy in the speciall fruition of his singular blessings, which must affect them with extraordinary zeale to glorifie and praise him, and to expresse our thankfulness by renewing our covenant with God, binding our selves by firme resolution, that in sense of his present fauours, wee will be more deuout and zealous in all duties of his seruice for the time to come, then euer we haue been in time past. And by continuing our thanksgiuing in a solemne manner, for a longer time then ordinary; setting it apart as a Sabbath of rest from all our worldly labours; that it may be wholly spent in Gods praises, and in testifying our loue and inward ioy and reioycing in him, by outward feasting, and more liberall vse of meates and drinckes, and all other comforts of this life; and in shewing our loue and bounty in obedience to God, by entertaining at our table, and by sending gifts and rewards vnto our poore neighbours, that they also may reioyce with vs. And this solemne feasting and thanksgiuing is, according to the occasion of it, publike or priuate. Publike, for some publike benefit which concerneth the welfare of the Church or Common-wealth, which is to bee appointed onely by the publike authority of Christian Magistrates; and is to be celebrated in a most solemne and publike manner, all sorts and conditions of men assembling together in the Church, to magnifie and praise Gods holy name, and to craue the continuance of his loue and fauour. The which prayers and prayes are profitably conioyned with the preaching of the Word, for the stirring vp of the whole Assembly to extraordinary thankfulness, when as thereby the greatnesse of the blessings received, and the inestimable mercie of God is set forth vnto them. Priuate, for some speciall benefits bestowed, either on a particular person, or a whole family, which is to bee solemnized by singing of Psalmes, prayer and thanksgiuing, reading of some portions of holy Scriptures, sicke for the present occasion; holy conferences, whereby wee are to magnifie Gods mercies, and to recount and tell what great things hee hath done for vs; and also expressing our inward ioy, by a more free and liberall vse of Gods creatures, whereof wee must also cause our poore neighbours to haue some taste. The which kind of feasting and solemne thanksgiuing is a notable helpe vnto true godlinesse, as it worketh our hearts to a more liuely sense & feeling of Gods loue, stirreth vs vp to more zealous performance of all religious duties vnto him, who hath been so gracious and good vnto vs; and as it giueth vs occasion to renew our covenant with God, and to confirme our resolution, that wee will be more diligent and zealous in doing all things which may please and glorifie him.

CAP. XXXIIII.

*Of the second extraordinary meanes, which is,
solemne fasting.*

He other extraordinary meanes of a godly life, is, an holy fast, of which it is my purpose to speake briefly, though the vse and benefit of this duty is so great, that it well deserueth a more full discourse; because it is already so excellently and exactly handled in diuers Treatises purposely written of this argument, and especially in one, which is called, The holy exercise of a true fast: and in another, intituled, The Christian exercise of fasting, written many yeeres since, by the right Reuerend Father and my most deare brother, that nothing materiall can be added vnto it. And therefore I will content my selfe to set downe, after mine owne manner, some of those poynts briefly, which are most essentiall and necessary vnto this exercise, (for how should I in a Chapter, expresse all fully, which would require a whole Treatise?) referring the Christian Reader vnto those learned Treatises, if he desire more thorow satisfaction, and particular direction in any of them. And first, that wee may begin with the description of this duty: A fast, as we here vnderstand it, is a voluntary, religious and solemne action, vndertaken vpon some extraordinary occasion, wherein we seriously humble our selues before God, in the sight and sense of our sinnes, and the Iudgements of God due vnto them; testifying our repentance for them, and our vnworthinesse of his least mercies, by resting from all bodily labour in the day of our fast, and wholly abstaining from our food, and all other comforts and delights of this life, so farre forth as it will stand with necessity of nature, charity, and comelineesse; and much more by forsaking all our sinnes, and doing the workes of piety and charity; that by this renewing of our humiliation and repentance, wee may increase the seruency of our prayers, and strengthen our faith in this assurance, that they shall be graciously heard and granted vnto vs. In which description this religious fast, being principally intended as an exercise of repentance, by which it is increased, and as a helpe to our prayers that they may bee more seruent, is sufficiently distinguished from all other kinds of fasts. As first, from the fast of necessity, for want of sustenance, or appetite to it; seeing this is voluntary and at our free choyce. Secondly, from that ordinary abstinence whereby wee temperately, soberly and sparingly feed vpon Gods creatures, for the satisfying of nature, and not the pleasing of our carnall lusts and appetite (which is most commendable, as being of common and daily vse, and the other onely to be vsed vpon extraordinary occasions) seeing in this fast we restraine our selues but in respect of some part of our food: whereas that whereof wee intreate, is a totall abstinence for the time, both from all food, and the most of our worldly comforts. Thirdly, from a physycall fast, which is prescribed and vsed for the cleansing of the stomake and body from ill humours, and the preserving or recouering of our health; and from a politique fast appointed by the Magistrate for ciuill ends, and the good of the Com-

§. Sect. I.
What a true fast is, and how it differeth from all other fasts.

mon-wealth; ſeeing this is a religious faſt, which aimeth onely at ſuch ends as are ſpiritual, and tend to the health and welfare of our ſoules. Laſtly, from a morall faſt, which is vnderaken by thoſe which are ſingle and vnmarried; for the preſeruing of their chaſtity, and keeping their bodies from being defiled with filthy luſts; ſeeing this is no ſolemne or extraordinary action, but to be commonly put in practice, ſo oft as wee finde it neceſſary; and ſeeing alſo it aymeth at a farre other end then this, of which I heere ſpeake, namely, the preſeruing of chaſtity: Whereas the end of the religious faſt is, by humiliation and prayer to obtaine ſome ſpeciall ſuites at Gods hands.

Againe, whereas I call it a religious aſt, I imply hereby that God is the Author of it, and requireth it at our hands, ſeeing he hath reſtrained vs in all duties appertaining vnto his ſeruice, that we worſhip him according to his reuealed will, and not according to our owne inuentions. Neither are we to eſteeme it as a part of the ceremoniall Law, which is abrogated by Chriſt; for howſoeuer there were many rites about it of this nature, which now are ſome of them aboliſhed, and ſome out of uſe; as renting of their garments, wearing of ſackcloth, ſitting in aſhes, and covering their heads therewith, and ſuch like; yet in reſpect of the maine ſubſtance, which is the humbling of the ſoule before God by all good meanes, that we may teſtifie our repentance, and be made more ſeruent in our prayers, as it was required of them more eſpecially then the outward rites and ceremonies in the time of the Law, ſo is it no leſſe commended vnto vs vnder the Goſpel, to be religiously obſerued vpon all extraordinary occaſions. For our Sauour Chriſt purpoſely teacheth vs the right manner how it ought to bee done; commendeth the efficacy of it being ioyned with prayer; ^a and ſheweth that howſoeuer his Diſciples vſed it not whileſt he was with them, becauſe it was vnſeaſonable for the children of the Bride-chamber to faſt, the Bridegroom being with them, yet they ſhould perſorme it when he was taken from them. And thus it was accordingly practiſed by the ſeruants of God, not on certain dayes & ſet times, but vpon great and extraordinary occaſions, not only in the time of the Law, as by ^b Iehoaſaphat and his people, by ^c Daniel, ^d Ezra, and the children of the captiuitie; by ^e Queene Heſter, her maids, Mordecai, and all the whole people of the Iewes; but in the New Teſtament alſo, by the ^f Diſciples of Iohn the Baptiſt, ^g and by the Church, when they ſet apart Paul and Barnabas. By ^h Hannah the Prophetesse, and ⁱ Cornelius, who ſeemeth frequently vſed this exerciſe (and not onely vpon extraordinary occaſions) that by the helpe thereof their prayers might be more ſeruent and effectuell to preuaile with God, though it may bee not in that ſolemne manner, and with that deepe humiliation, as is ioyned with this whereof we ſpeake. For this is to bee performed, not ordinarily and ſo oft as wee pray, but vpon extraordinary occaſions, as the Apoſtle implyeth, where he inioyneth married perſons not to defraud one another, vnleſſe by conſent for a time, that they might giue themſelues to faſting and prayer, ſeeing he muſt needs be vnderſtood of extraordinary faſting & prayer vpon vnusuall and waighy occaſions, becauſe ordinary prayer is to be vſed by them euery day together, without any neceſſity of ſuch ſeparation. So

our

§. Sect. 2.
That the duty of faſting is not ceremoni-all, but required in the Go-ſpel, as well as the Law.

Ioel. 2. 12, 13, 14
Eſa 58. 5, 6, 7, 25
et c.
2. Chro 20. 3.

Mat. 6. 16.
& 17. 21.

^a Luk 5. 34, 35.

^b 2. Chro 20. 3.

^c Dan. 9. 3. &

10. 2, 3.

^d Eſr. 8. 21.

^e Heſt. 9. 18, 19.

^f Mat. 9. 14.

^g Act. 13. 2, 3.

^h Luk 2. 39.

ⁱ Act. 10. 30.

1. Cor. 7. 4.

our Saviour telling vs that the time of fasting is a time of mourning, implyeth that it is vnseasonable, but when we are occasioned to mourne vpon some speciall and waighty cause: for otherwise ordinarily Christians are to reioyce in the Lord, as the Psalmist and the Apostle exhort; and not to mourne after this extraordinary manner, till God calleth them vnto it. Finally, it is euident that this fasting ought not to be ordinary, seeing it is a Sabbath of humiliation, wherein we are bound to rest from all our ordinary labours and duties of our callings, in which we are ordinarily to spend our time.

The cause which should moue vs to performe this duty of fasting, is, that we may by more seruient and effectuall prayer obtaine at Gods hands some great and extraordinary benefit; either priuatiue or positie. Priuatiue, as freedome, and deliuerance from some dangerous euill, either of sinne or punishment. In respect of the former; when we, or our Country in which we liue, are guilty of some grieuous sinne, and other meanes ordinarily vsed haue not bene effectuall to pull vs out of it; or when some strong corruption doth yet lye vnmortified in vs, and preuaileth against vs, notwithstanding our many purposes and promises to subdue and root it out, then is this exercise seasonable, that humbling our selues in an extraordinary manner, wee may with all seruency desire the assistance of Gods holy Spirit, for the healing of our selues and the Land, by turning vs vnto God, and for pulling vs out of these preuailing and raigning sins, through serious and sound repentance; for the subduing of our corruptions, that they may no more leade vs captiue vnto sinne, and bringing of them in subiection to the spirituall part. And thus Paul, in the fight and sense of his sinnes, especially that haynous wickednesse, in persecuting the Saints of God, in his first conuersion, is said to haue fasted three dayes. And Ezra with the people, humbled themselves by fasting before the Lord, because they had grieuously sinned by taking strange wiues; the which rained and swayed so powerfully amongst them, that the authority of the Magistrates and preaching of the Prophets, was not for a good while sufficient to pull them out of it. The euill of punishment is also a sufficient motiue to make vs humble our selues before God by fasting and prayer, and that either when some heavy iudgement is threatned and imminent, that we may auert it, or already imposed, that we may bee deliuered out of it; whether it bee priuate, and concerne our owne person and family; or publike, respecting either the Church or Commonwealth. Concerning the first, when the heavy Iudgements of God are but threatned, and ready to light vpon vs, then the Lord especially calleth vs to fasting and mourning, that vnfainedly repenting of our sinnes which are the causes, the iudgement which is the effect, may cease and be auerted. And then this exercise is most seasonable and profitable, because the sentence is more easily stayed then reuoked, and the malefactor with lesse suite acquitted or pardoned, then the execution put off after he once hath his doome; besides, that it is a greater benefit, and much more safe and sweet, to be kept from the fire, then to be pulled out, like fire-brands that are halfe burned; and much more pleasing vnto God, seeing he attaineth vnto the end of his threatnings, which is not to punish: for hee deli-

Psal. 33. 1.
Phil. 4. 4.
Esa. 22. 12.

6. Sect. 3.
The causes of a true fast, and when it is most seasonable.

Am. 9. 9, 11.
Ez. 9. 3, 6.
10. 6.
Neh. 9. 1, 2.

Esa. 22. 12.

Ezek. 23. 11.
Micah 7. 18.

Ier. 18. 7, 8.

Iudg. 2. 4, 5.

☞ 3. 9.

Dan. 9. 3.

Ios. 7. 6.

Ios. 1. 14.

☞ 2. 12, 15.

Egy. 8. 21.

Nehem. 1. 4, 13.

Heb. 4. 16.

Act. 13. 3.

Iam. 1. 5, 17.

☞ Sect. 4.

The ends of a true fast.

lighteth not in the smart of his children whom he correcteth, but that by mature and seasonable repentance we may escape, and so his mercy may be magnified in the forgiveness of our sinnes. An example whereof we haue in Iehosaphat, who by humbling himselfe by fasting and prayer, escaped the inuasion of his many and mighty enemies; and in the Nineuities, who at Ionas preaching, repenting of their sinnes, were spared and preserved from that imminent destruction which was threatned against them. Neither are Gods threatnings absolute, but to be vnderstood with the condition of repentance, namely, that the punishment denounced shall be inflicted, if we goe on in our sinnes; but auerted, if wee humble our selues before God, and so leaue and forsake our sinnes. But if wee haue neglected this duty, till the Iudgement haue already seized vpon vs, then our best course is to doe it rather late then neuer, and to labour by our sound humiliation to haue our sinnes first pardoned, and then to haue the punishment remooued which we haue had no care to preuent. Whether it bee a priuate iudgement inflicted on our selues, as sicknesse, poverry, losses, disgraces, and such like; or publike, lying vpon the Church and Common-wealth, wherein wee haue our part and share, either in our owne persons, or by sympathy and compassion, as being fellow-members of the same body, as the sword, captiuitie, pestilence, famine, and the rest. So likewise this exercise is profitable, when wee address our selues vnto God as humble suiters, for the obtaining of some speciall and important benefit, which is no lesse necessary for the good estate of our selues or others, then hard and vnlikely to bee obtained or archieued by any meanes of our owne deuizing. And thus it is fit that wee should humble our selues before God by fasting and prayer, when wee vndertake any waighty businesse, either for our selues, or the good of the Church and Common-wealth; vpon which occasion, Ezra, Nehemiah, and Hester fasted, and the Church, when they sent forth Barnabas and Paul about that great worke, the conuersion of the Gentiles. But especially we haue iust cause of thus humbling our selues, when we finde some great defect in any of Gods sauing graces, and would labour earnestly with God by Prayer, that it may bee supplied, when wee finde our selues exceeding weake in faith, and desire to haue it increased and strengthened; when we feele our hearts hardened through the deceitfulness of sinne, so as we cannot repent, and would haue them suppld and softened, that they may resolve and melt in vnfeined sorrow for our sinnes; when wee finde our assistance in God so feeble, that it is ready to faint and faile in euery small triall: or when we perceiue want of gifts and abilities in our selues, for the well performing of the duties of Christianity, or of our callings, and would be suiters to him who is the Fountaine and Author of euery good and perfect gift, that hee will inable vs, at least, with competency and sufficiency of such gifts, as are necessary for the discharge of our duty, with comfort to our selues, and profit to others; but especially so as Gods glory may receiue no damage or detriment.

And these are the causes which may moue vs to fasting. The ends at which we must chiefly ayme in this action, are of two sorts. The first and principall is the glory of God, which wee then most magnifie,

CAP. XXXV.

Of the parts of a true Fast, or the things wherein it consisteth.

6. Sect. I.
That the outward fast consisteth in to-tall abstinence.

Leuit. 23. 29.

Eccl. 10. 8.

Psalm. 116.

Leuit. 3. 7.

Ab. 9. 9.

Eccl. 6. 7.

Isidor. de summo bono.

*Durius tractan-dum est corpus ne rebelles, ne insolentat;
sic tamen ut ser-
uire sufficiat,
c. Bernard.
Etenim (dilecte) si ob corporis imbecilli-tatem non potes ieiunium diem perducere, c. c.
Chrysost. in
Gen. 2. Hamil.
10. T. 1.*

He next point to be considered, is the parts of this Fast, or the things wherein it chiefly consisteth. For either this Fast is outward and bodily, or inward and Spirituall: The former being a helpe to the latter, and the latter, the end of the former. The bodily Fast, is our abstinence for the time that it continueth from the most of the commodities and comforts of this life, so farre forth as will stand with charity and comelinesse, and a cessation from all our ordinary affaires & labours, because it is to be kept as a Sabbath of humiliation vnto the Lord. The commodities of this life are many, the chiefe wherof are meates and drinckes, from which we must totally abstaine in all kindes whilest the Fast continueth, so farre forth as will stand with the health of our bodies, and the aduancing of those ends which we principally intend in this exercise. If our health will beare it, we must not content our selues with the sober vse of the creatures as at other times, but wholly abstaine from them, according to the example of the faithfull in all ages, seeing in this exercise one main thing, at which we ayme, is to humble our selues before God, acknowledging, that we are vterly vnworthy of the least of his benefits for the preseruing of our liues. But if in respect of our weakenesse, such totall abstinence will hazard our health, wee may eate or drinke so much as the necessity of our state requireth, seeing the Lord desireth mercia rather then sacrifice, and enioyneth this bodily abstinence, that it may helpe and further vs, and not disabie vs for the spirituall duties of his seruice, as it must needs, if our spirits be exhausted, and our bodies weakened, so that there remaineth no vertue nor vigour in them, to performe them in any cheerefull and deuour maner. And this liberty the Ancients haue giuen, who otherwise were the strictest exactors of this exercise.ouer-much weakenesse of the body (saith one) doth weaken the powers of the soule, and maketh the Fast of the minde barren, so that it is able to doe no good thing by reason of this imbecillity. The body (saith another) is to be handled somewhat austere-ly, that it may not rebell and waxe insolent, but so, as it may be fit for imployment, because it is giuen that it may serue the soule. It must be restrained, not wasted; burthened, not tyred; humbled, that it may not insult; and serue, that it may not rule. But more plainly and directly another speaketh to this purpose. If thou canst not (beloued) through bodily infirmity hold out the whole daies Fast, no man that is wise will blame thee for this. For we haue a gentle and mercifull Lord, who exacteth nothing of vs aboue our strength. Neither doth he simply require Fasting and abstinence, nor that we should remaine so long fasting, but that withdrawing our selues from worldly and carnall workes, we should spend our time in spirituall exercises. And yet we must take heed that we doe not abuse this liberty vnto licentiousnesse,

neſſe, ſeeing it is neuer good, but when it is neceſſary; and much better it is, if our ſtrength will beare it, that we wholly abſtaine from all food for the day of our Faſt, for diuers reaſons. For firſt, God requirereth in our Faſt, that we afflict our ſelues, the body by abſtinence, the minde by ſorrow and humiliation. Secondly, hereby we come to a more thorow ſenſe and feeling of our vnworthineſſe of Gods benefits. Thirdly, we become more deuout & feruent in prayer, & the body being leſſe dull & heavy, is made a more fit inſtrument vnto the ſoule for ſpirituall exerciſes. Fourthly, our bodily hunger, through emptineſſe of food, may make vs more ſenſibly to conceiue of the ſoules emptineſſe of ſauing graces, that we may hunger and thirſt after them, and vſe all good meanes whereby we may be filled and ſatiſfied.

And as we muſt thus totally abſtaine from meates and drinckes, ſo muſt we in the greateſt part, from all other bodily and worldly comforts and delights, and much more moderate our ſelues in the vſe of them, ſo farre forth as will ſtand with neceſſity and comelineſſe, then at other times. Thus wee muſt abridge our ſelues from ſome part of our ordinary ſleepe, that by this bodily waking, wee may be more ready to keep the ſpirituall watch, & haue more time to ſpend in religious and ſpirituall duties; as alſo that we may hereby teſtifie our humiliation, acknowledging our ſelues vnworthy, as of other bleſſings, looſe our ordinary reſt and ſleepe. To which purpoſe the Faithfull vnder the Law did lie vpon the ground, and in ſack-cloth and hard beds, that lying thus vneafily, they might take the leſſe reſt. Wherein our care muſt be, that wee ſo performe this bodily exerciſe, as that it doe not the next day diſable vs for Gods ſpirituall ſeruiſe, as hearing the Word and prayer, which are the ends of it, by making vs drowzy and ſleepie through ouer-much watching. Secondly, we muſt moderate our ſelues in the vſe of our apparell, putting on our worſt attire, which may be moſt fit to ſignifie and alſo further our humiliation. And in any caſe for that time to forbear ſuch ſhew of brauerie in our garments, either in reſpect of the coſtlineſſe of the ſtuffe or faſhion, as may in the eyes of others be an enſigne of our pride, and in our owne hearts the fuel of it. And much leſſe are we at ſuch times to vſe light and vaine faſhions, frizling of the haire, and painting of the face, which if they be at all times vnlawfull and vtterly miſ-beſee- ming Chriſtians, whoſe beſt ornaments are humility and modeſtie, then ſurely are they in the day of our humiliation odious and abominable. Thirdly, we muſt abſtaine this day from all carnall and worldly delights, and pleaſing the ſenſes, which would leſſen our ſorrow for our finnes, hinder our humiliation, and abſtract our mindes from ſpirituall duties. And as we muſt not delight the taſte with meates and drinckes, ſo neither the eyes with delightfull ſights, nor the eares with pleaſant muſicke, and witty and merrie diſcourſes, nor the ſmell with ſweete odours; eſpecially the vſe of the marriage bed is to be forborne, euen of the bride and bridegroom, and much more of others; and recreations in all kindes, which are at other times lawfull and neceſſary for the reſreſhing and chearing of the heart and minde.

Laſtly,

Leuit. 23. 29.

§. Sect. 2.

That wee muſt in our Faſt abſtaine for the moſt part from all worldly comforts.

Col. 4. 2.

Eph. 6. 18.

2. Sam. 12. 16.

Iſa. 2. 16.

Exod. 33. 5. 6.

1. Pet. 3. 3.

Quod ſi gula ſola peccauit, ſola quoque inuincit, & ſufficit: Si uero peccauit uerunt & cetera membra, non inuincit & ipſa, &c. Bernard de inuincio, Quadrageſ. Sermon 3. Iſa. 2. 16. 1. Cor. 7. 5.

*Leuit. 23. 36.
Eſa. 58. 13.*

*Leuit. 23. 36.
Iud. 20. 26.
Joſ. 7. 6.
2. Sam. 1. 12.
Eſa. 3. 35.*

*Heſt. 4. 16, 17.
Dan. 10. 2, 3.
Aſ. 9. 9.*

*6. Sect. 3.
Of the inward and ſpiritual exerciſes in our faſt.
1. Tim. 4. 8.
Rom. 14. 17.*

*Zach. 7. 3, 6, 9.
10.*

Laſtly, we muſt in the day of our faſt abſtaine from all worldly buſineſſes and workes of our callings, ſeeing it is to bee obſerved as a Sabbath and day of reſt in the ſtrictest kinde; for the Lord inioyneth vs, that in this Sabbath of humiliation, we doe not our owne pleaſures, walke in our owne waies, nor ſpeake our owne words. The which reſt is neceſſary on this Day, that wee may conſecrate it wholly vnto the Lord, by ſpending it in the duties of his ſeruiſe without diſtraction; and alſo that we may hereby be put in minde of our reſt from ſinne; for if the workes of our callings which are lawfull in themſelues, may not on this Day be lawfully done; then how odious muſt wee needs thinke will it bee vnto God, if doing the workes of darkneſſe, we ſerue the world, the diuell and our owne fleſh? Now the time of this bodily exerciſe which it is to continue, may bee diuers, in reſpect of the diuers occaſions which require greater or leſſer humiliation, and the diuers ſtates of mens bodies, as they are able to hold out in this exerciſe without impayring of their health. The ordinary time of a faſt is the ſpace of foure and twenty houres, or of a naturall day, from ſupper time on one day, to ſupper time on another, or from dinner to dinner; though this be leſſe fit and more rarely vſed, becauſe it ſhould be a whole day, that is conſecrated vnto God as a Sabbath of humiliation, and not part of two dayes. So the Lord inioyning it, ſaith; It ſhall bee vnto you a Sabbath of reſt; and ye ſhall afflict your ſoules in the ninth day of the moneth as euen, from euen to euen ſhall you celebrate your Sabbath. The which was accordingly obſerved by the faithfull from time to time. But when the occaſion hath bene extraordinarily great, and the cauſes of humiliation of greateſt weight and importance, the faithfull haue prolonged the time of their faſt, to teſtifie their ſorrow for their ſinne ſo much the more, and that with greater feruency they might implore Gods mercy for the deliuerance of them from ſome imminent danger of fearefull deſtruction. In which caſe, Heſter & the Iewes continued their faſt three days together, Daniel one and twenty dayes, Paul three dayes, to the end that hauing a longer time for this exerciſe, their humiliation might be the greater, and their hearts more thorowly touched with a thorow ſenſe of their ſinnes, and with a liuely feeling of their diſtreſſed eſtates, then they could haue bene in a ſhorter time.

The ſecond part of the Chriſtian faſt, is the inward and ſpiritual exerciſe, which is the end of the outward, and without which it is of no value: for as the Apoſtle telleth vs, Bodily exerciſe profiteth little, but godlineſſe is profitable vnto all things; and The Kingdome of God conſiſteth not in meates and drinckes; but righteouſneſſe, and peace, and ioy in the holy Ghoſt. In which regard the Lord hath alwaies reieſted the outward faſt as hypocriticall and ſuperſtitious, if the inward faſt were not inioyned with it. Thus hee chargeth the Iewes, that they faſted to themſelues and not to him, when they reſted in the externall abſtinence and bodily humiliation; and telleth them, that if they would keepe a faſt which ſhould bee acceptable vnto him, they muſt execute iudgement, and ſhow mercy and compaſſion euery man to his brother, and not oppreſſe the fatherleſſe.

lesse, stranger and poore, nor so much as imagine euill against their brother in their heart. So elsewhere he reiecteth the fast of the Iewes, because therein they onely afflicted their soules with bodily abstinence, and did hang downe their heads like a bulrush for a day, and did spread sackcloth and ashes vnder them; but did not ioyne with it the Spirituall fast, in abstaining from carnall pleasures and couetous exactions: losing the bonds of wickednesse, and vndoing the heavy burthens, ceasing from oppression, and doing the workes of mercy. To which purpose one demandeth; What doth it profit thee that thou afflictest thy body, when as thine heart is neuer the better? To fast and watch, and not to amend thy manners, is all onc, as if a man should take paines to weede and husband the ground about the vineyard, but let the vineyard it selfe grow like a desert, full of thornes and thistles.

Now this spirituall and inward exercise is nothing else, but a serious humiliation of our soules before God, ioyned with feruent prayer and vnfeined repentance; that wee may finde grace with God, and haue our speciall suites heard and granted. The first thing is humiliation or penitency, vnto which is required: First, a thorow sense and feeling of our sinnes, whereby we haue prouoked Gods anger against vs. Secondly, vnfeined sorrow and bitter grieve, chiefly in this respect, because by our sinnes wee haue displeased and dishonoured our glorious God and gracious Father, vnto which wee must attaine, by considering and aggrauating our sinnes, in respect of the quantity and quality, their number and haynousnesse, by meditating on Gods Iudgements and Mercies, the curse and threatnings of the Law, and the gracious promises of the Gospell, on Gods gloriousnesse in himselfe, and graciousnesse towards vs; that by our sinnes wee haue perced ad crucified our Sauour Christ, and caused the Lord of life to be put to a shamefull death, vexed and grieued Gods good Spirit dwelling in vs, slandered our profession, giuen offence to our neighbours, and drawne vpon our selues Gods heauie punishments in this life and the life to come, and especially the present Iudgement which we feare as imminent, or feeble as being already inflicted vpon vs. Thirdly, A vile and base conceite of our selues in respect of our sinnes, whereby wee adiudge our selues as vtterly vnworthy of Gods least mercies; and contrariwise, that wee haue deserued the greatest of his plagues, and not onely that which we presently feare or feeble, but all other punishments temporall and eternall. Lastly, in this humiliation we are to expresse our sorrow and grieve of heart, by our lamentations and wooll complaints, bewailing our wretched condition both in respect of sinne and punishment, and bemoaning our miserie before the Lord, as a fit subiect, whereon hee may exercise his abundant and rich mercies, in pardoning our sinnes, and remouing our punishments.

The second thing required in the spirituall exercise, is effectuall prayer; for this is that which giueth vertue and vigour to our fasting, euen as fasting helpeth and strengtheneth prayer. And here first wee must beginne with humble confession of our sinnes, principally in

2sa. 58. 3. to the 8.

Quid prodest quod of stigcorpus tuum, quando nihil
prodest cor tuum
Euseb. amiss. ad Monach. Ho-
mil. 4.

§. Sect. 4.
Of humiliation and penitencie in the time of out fast.

§. Sect. 5.
That prayer must be ioyned with our fasting.
Ieiunium orationem roborat, oratio ieiunium
sanctificat.
Bernard. in Quadrages.
Serm. 4.

Psal. 51. 4.
Neh. 5.
Ezr. 9. 6.
Dan. 9. 51.

Lam. 3. 22.

Pro. 28. 13.
1. Iohn 1. 7.

Heb. 13. 6.
Apo. 3. 19.
Rom. 8. 28.
2. Cor. 4. 17.

Isa. 2. 17.

Dan. 9. 5, 18, 17.
Neh. 9. 32.

Math. 7. 7.
Iob. 16. 23.
Psal. 50. 15.
Isa. 2. 12, 13.

fasting vpon those whereby we haue most displeased and dishonoured God, and drawne vpon our selues his present Iudgements. The which wee may profitably aggravate by all their particular circumstances (as before I haue shewed) but chiefly because wee haue committed them against such a gracious God, who hath multiplied vpon vs so many fauours and testimonies of his loue, respecting our soules, bodies and estates, this life and the life to come. Vnto which confession we must adioyne the adiudging and condemning of our selues to deserued punishments both temporall and euerlasting, this which we feare or feelee, and all others with it, if God should deale with vs according to our deserts. By which confession and condemning of our selues, wee shall glorify God, both by iustifying his righteous Iudgements, & magnifying his Mercies, either because he deliuereth vs out of our afflictions, or doth not inflict them in a measure proportionable to our sins. Secondly, hereby wee shall increase our humiliation and sorrow for our sinnes, when as we thus rip them vp and recount them, and (as it were) set them in order before vs. And finally, wee shall hereby much strengthen our faith in the assurance of the pardon of them, seeing if we confesse our sinnes, the Lord will vouchsafe mercy; if wee acknowledge them, he is faithfull and righteous to forgive them. And consequently wee may bee assured, that our present iudgements shall be auerted or removed, when as sinne, which is the cause of them, is done away; or if they be continued, that their nature shall be changed, seeing they shall cease to be punishments, which are inflicted to satisfie Gods Iustice, and shall bee vnto vs the chastizements of a gracious Father, signes of our adoption, testimonies of his loue, and much further our spirituall enriching with all sauing graces, and the eternall saluation of our soules. In which assurance of faith, grounded vpon Gods infinite mercies and free promises, wee are to proceed in making our suits knowne vnto God, either for our freedom and deliuerance from euill, by deprecation, or the obtaining of some good by petition. For after that we haue made our peace with God, and obtained by vnfaigned humiliation and confession, the assurance of the remission of our sinnes, we must in the next place become suiters at the Throne of grace, in the mediation of Iesus Christ, that the Lord will be pleased for his owne mercies, and his merits, to remove the Iudgements which our sinnes haue drawne vpon vs. And thus the Lord hauing proclaimed a Fast to his people, doth prescribe vnto them a forme of deprecation, after that they were humbled, and had bewayled their sinnes: Let the Ministers (saith he) weepe and say, Spare thy people, O Lord, and giue not thine heritage to reproach, that the heathen should rule over them. The which was also practized by Daniel and Nehemiah in their fasts, where after the confession of their owne and the peoples sinnes, they craue pardon and deliuerance out of their afflictions. In which suites for freedom out of our miseries, we are to strengthen our faith in this assurance, that wee shall bee heard, by Gods speciall promises which he hath made, that hee will heare our prayers, and aboue all other times, when wee call vpon him in the day of trouble. Or if the sentence being pronounced, cannot cannot be reuoked, let vs humbly sue vnto God, that hee will at least accomplish his promises, in sanctifying our afflictions vnto vs, that they may not be punishments for our sinnes, but chastisements for our amendment, meanes to mortifie our corruptions, to weane vs from the world, to strengthen and increase his graces in vs, faith, hope, affiance, lone, patience, humility, the feare of God, and the rest; and that they may bee as strong cords to draw vs neerer vnto God, and as sharpe spurres and goads in our sides, to pricke vs forward in the wayes of godlinesse. Vnto which deprecation, we are to ioyne petition, whereby wee must craue at Gods hands whatsoeuer good thing we stand in need of; as peace of conscience, following iustification, sanctification, and the gracious assistance of Gods Spirit, for the mortifying of our corruptions, & our spiritual quickning vnto newnes of life, for the replenishing of our harts with all sauing graces, and the strengthening of vs to all good duties, with perseuerance vnto the end, and that we may be inabled to withstand all the assaults of our spirituall enemies, who labour to hinder our course in godlinesse, and to turne vs into the broad way that leadeth to destruction. More specially, we must pray according to the present occasion of our fast; as if it bee some grieuous sinnes which we haue committed, that the Lord will not onely graciously forgiue them, but strengthen vs with his grace and holy Spirit, that we may not againe fall into them; and enrich vs with the contrary graces, that we may honour him thereby for the time to come, as we haue dishonoured him by our sinnes in times past. If it be for deliuerance from some great danger, or out of some great affliction, that then the Lord will be pleased to giue vs the contrary safety and security, by taking vs into his protection, and vnder the shadow of his wings; or that he will vouchsafe to bestow vpon vs the contrary blessings and benefits, if in his wisdom he seeth that they are fit for vs: As health in stead of sickness, honour for disgrace, plenty for penury, peace for warre, and such like. The which our petitions, as at all other times, so especially in the time of our fast, must be ioyned with extraordinary feruency, and such importunity as will receiue no repulse, according to the waightinesse of the occasion, which maketh vs in this extraordinary manner to humble our selues before God. And also with a speciall faith, that the Lord will heare, not onely all our prayers agreeable to his will, which we make in his Sons name, but also our speciall suits which we haue now made in the time of our fast, so far forth as it will stand with his glory, and our owne saluation. The which our faith must be grounded vpon Gods gracious promises; & strengthened, by calling to minde the examples of Gods Saints from time to time, who hauing thus humbled themselues, and prayed in the time of their troubles, haue found helpe and deliuerance at Gods hands.

The last thing thing required in our fast is, that wee ioyne with it vnfeined repentance; for this is the principall end of the outward exercise, that we may thereby both testifie and also increase our repentance. And vnto this, two things are required; the first is, that wee forsake our sinnes which we haue bewailed; and secondly, that wee imbrace the contrary vertues, and expresse them in the duties of a godly life. Concerning the former, it little auaieth vs to abstaine outwardly from our food, and other

Ierl. 1. 14.
Ionas 3. 8.
Dan. 9. 19.

Psal. 50. 15.
Ierl. 2. 18, 19.
Hesl. 9. 22.
2. Chron. 20.
Dan. 9.
Ezra 8. 13.

§. Sect. 6.
That with our fasting wee must ioyne vnfeined repentance.

Esa. 58. 3, 4.
Zach. 7. 10.

*Quid autem prodest ieiunari abstinentia corpus, si animus intumescat superbia, &c. ?
Hieron. ad Ce-lantium.*

*Lasivitas carnis refrenemus, & verum seruemus
ieiunium, &c. .
Chrysost. in
Gen. 1. Hom. 8.
Homo enim ieiunij, non cibo-rum abstinentia, sed peccato-rum fuga.
Chrysost. ad pop.
Antiochen.
Homil. 3.*

§. Sect. 7.

That we must
in our fast, exercise our selues in all Christian
duties.

comforts of this life, which are the gifts of God, and in their owne nature lawfull, if we liue still in our sinnes; and will not rume from them vnto God by vnfained repentance; to rest from the honest labours of our callings, and not to rest from the workes of darknesse, wherein we performe seruice vnto sinne and Satan; to pine the body with outward abstinence, and to pamper the flesh by satisfying of our carnall lusts, to haue empty bellies and cleane teeth, and to haue our soules replenished with wickednesse, and defiled with sinfull corruptions. In which regard the Lord condemneth and reiecteth the fast of the Iewes, because they rested in the bodily exercise, and did not forsake their carnall lusts, exactions and oppressions. What doth it profit (saith one) to make thy body thinne and leane with fasting, if thy minde doe swell with pride? What praise wilt thou deserue, by the palenesse of fasting, if thou be pale also with enuy? What vertue is in this, not to drinke wine, and in the meane while to bee drunke with anger and hatred? But our abstinence is praise-worthy, and the chastening of the body, of some excellency, when as the mind fasteth from vices, &c. Let vs (saith another) bridle our fleshly lusts, and we shall keepe a true fast. For that I call a fast, when we abstaine from vices. And therefore abstinence from meates is required, that we may subdue the vnruly power of the flesh, and by curbing in this pampered horse, teach it to obey. And againe; The honour of a fast is not abstinence from meates, but the forsaking of our sinnes, &c. For it is most absurd to refrain by fasting from lawfull meates, and to taste the vnlawfull lusts of the eyes: Doeest thou not eate flesh? neither let thine eyes draw in wanton lusts. Let thine eare also fast, by not receiuing slanders and detractions. And let thy mouth fast from filthy and reprochfull words. For what will it auaille vs to fast only like birds and fishes (or like the beasts of Nineue) if we bite and deuoure our brethren? But with most diligent care must wee forsake our beloued sinnes, and those wherewith we haue most offended our gracious God, as being the chiefe causes which haue drawne vpon vs Gods present Iudgements. Against which we must bend our chiefe forces, that we may not onely lay them aside, like our garments ouer-night, which we purpose to put on againe the next day, but vtterly forsake them, mortifie and subdue them, that they may neuer againe preuaile against vs. To which purpose we must renew our couenant with God, and strengthen our resolutions, if we haue formerly found them weake and vnconstant, by making a solemne vow, that we will, vpon no occasion, wittingly and willingly fall into those sinnes againe, for which wee haue now humbled our selues before the Lord in this present exercise.

The second part of repentance, which wee must both professe and practise, is, that ceasing from euill, we doe that which is good, exercising our selues in all Christian duties, both towards God, and our neighbours, both in the day of our fast, and afterwards. In respect of that present time, we must, with extraordinary care and diligence, exercise our selues in all good workes, and principally in the duties of piety, and of Gods seruice; as prayer, hearing and reading of Gods Word, holy conferences, and meditation, the subiect matter whereof may fitly bee repentance, of which I haue before spoken; all which, according to the occasion, are to be

be performed with more then ordinary zeale and deuotion. And these duties of piety towards God, we must approue to be sincere and without hypocrisie, by our workes of iustice and righteousnesse, mercy and compassion towards our neighbours. For in the day of our fast, the Lord specially requireth, that we should execute iudgement, and shew mercy and compassion euery man to his brother, that we should loose the bands of wickednes, vndo the heauie burthen, let the oppressed goe free, and breake euery yoke. For therefore (as one saith) we restraints our minds from desiring meate, that we may exercise their whole force in coueting after vertues. And so our flesh will lesse feeble the paine of abstinence, when it hungreth after righteousness. But especially we must, in this day, exercise our charity in the workes of mercy, and in relieuing the poore. To which vses wee must at least spend so much as we spare from our selues and our families by our fast, or else we giue iust cause of suspition, that wee fast more out of miserableness then deuotion, being content to fast, that all our seruants may beare vs company, and so by emptying their and our owne bellies, to adde something towards the filling of our bags. And this the Lord specially requireth in the day of our fast; namely, that we should deale our bread to the hungry, and bring the poore that are cast out, into our house, that when wee see the naked, we should clothe him, and that we hide not our selues from our owne flesh; that we should draw out our soules to the hungry, and satisfie the afflicted soule. Which duties if we neglect, we may be iustly charged that wee fast rather with the Lewes, to our selues, then vnto the Lord; hauing more regard to our profit, then to piety or charity. As therefore our Sauior hath ioyned these three together in his doctrine, so must wee (after the example of good Cornelius) conioyne them in our practice; for our fasting will bee maimed and of no worth, if it be seuered from either of them. Mercy (saith one) and piety are the wings of fasting, by which it mounteth aloft into heauen, and without which, it lyeth and walloweth vpon the earth. Fasting without mercy, is but a picture of hunger, and image of holiness. Without piety, fasting is but an occasion of couetousnesse; for what is spared from the body, is put into the bag. Hee that fasteth not to the poores aduantage, lyeth vnto God; and he who when he fasteth doth not bestow his dinner vpon the poore, but layeth it vp in store, doth plainly shew, that he fasteth for couetousnesse, and not for Christs sake; &c. And these are the workes wherein we must exercise our selues in the day of our fast: which must not end when it endeth, but be continued in some good measure for euer after. For as we must then resolue, that we will, in the whole course of our liues afterwards, be more carefull and conscionable in all our wayes, and more earnest and diligent in performing all good duties vnto God, our neighbours, and our selues, so if wee would approue our purpose to be sincere, we must indeuour accordingly to put it in practice, and vse all good meanes which may inable vs heereunto. Where, for a conclusion of this discourse of fasting, we may obserue, that if it be vsed aright, and as God requireth, it must needs be a singular good helpe to the leading of a godly life, seeing nothing more humbleth vs in the sight and sense of our sinnes, and spirituall wants, nor doth make vs more hunger after grace with a vehement appetite, nor doth make vs

Zach. 7. 9.
Esa. 58. 6.

*Idcirco à varijs ciborum deside-rys mentem re-trahunt, ut totam eius vim occupent in cupiditate virtutum, &c.
Hieron. ad Celantium.*

Esa. 58. 7, 10.

Math. 6.

*Al. 10.
Misericordia & pietas ieiunij, sunt ala, &c.
Coryss. in serm. de ieiun.
& elemos.*

more seruent and earnest in our prayers, for the obtaining spirituall strength to serue God, and to withstand the tentations of all our spirituall enemies; nor finally, that more exerciseth and increaseth our repentance, our sorrow for our sinnes past, and purpose of amendment for the time to come, by seruing God with more zeale and diligence in all Christian duties of piety and holinesse in his owne worship, in the workes of righteousness, and mercy towards our brethren, of temperance and sobriety in respect of our owne persons.

CAP. XXXVI

*Of the arguments and reasons which may moue vs to leade a godly life;
and first, such as respect Gods nature, workes, and loue towards vs.*

§. Sect. I.
The first sort of reasons taken from Gods nature and attributes.

Hitherto we haue intreated of the reall and practicall meanes, whereby we may be inabled to leade a godly life. And now it followeth that we propound some reasons and arguments which may effectually perswade vs, both to vse these meanes, and also to performe all the duties of holinesse and righteousness, vnto which by these meanes we are inabled; seeing it would little auaille vs to haue all the helpes of godlinesse, vnlesse we haue also hearts to vse them. And because the reasons which might bee produced to this purpose, are innumerable, seeing there is scarce any part of Gods Word or workes, either of Creation or Gouernment, which doth not hold some motiue vnto godlinesse, therefore passing by the most which might be alleaged, it shall suffice, as briefly as I can, to touch some of the chief and principall; all which I will reduce vnto three heads, either as they respect God, our neighbours, or our selues. The arguments of the first sort, either respect God himselfe, his nature and attributes, both generally considered, and as he exerciseth them towards vs; or that duty which we are bound to performe vnto him. Concerning the former, there cannot be any more forcible reasons alleaged, for the perswading of vs to serue God in duties of a godly life, then a thorow consideration of Gods nature and attributes. For first, he is the onely true God, Iehouah, the most absolute Being, who hauing his Essence in and from himselfe, giueth being to all things; and therefore is to be serued by all creatures, and especially by vs, seeing in him we liue, moue, and haue our being. He is God, infinite in all perfection, and therefore ought in all things, according to his nature, to be serued with absolute and perfect obedience. Hee is infinite, and therefore the actions of all things finite must tend vnto him, and bee determined in him, as their supreme end. And being infinite, hee is but one onely God, and therefore requireth our whole seruice, there being none other to be worshipped and serued but he alone. He is an holy Spirit, and therefore must be serued, not onely outwardly with our bodies, but also with our soules, in spirit and truth. He is in his nature most pure and simple, without mixture or composition, and therefore we must yeeld vnto him simple and pure obedience, without any by-respect, or the mixture

AB. 17. 28.

Job. 4. 24.

ture of humane inuentions with his most pure and perfect will. Hee is eternall, and is therefore to be serued and glorified in all ages, and from the beginning to the end of times, seeing he is to day, yesterday and the same for euer, and alwaies liueth to reward those that serue him, and to take vengeance of them who rebell against him. He is immutable and vnchangeable in himselfe, and in his loue, goodnesse, bounty, mercie, and iustice toward vs, and therefore ought to be serued of vs dayly and constantly, without any leuitie or wauering, seeing there is no change in him towards vs. He is immense and omniscient, so that wheresoeuer we are, we are in his presence; wharsoeuer we doe, we are in his sight; and therefore we are alwaies and in all places to carry our selues in all durifull obedience, as being euer in the view of our Lord and Master, who standeth by and taketh notice of all our actions. He is all-sufficient to reward our seruice, and to preserue all those who depend vpon him against all enemies; and therefore we must not be discouraged in his seruice by any worldly or spirituall wants, seeing he is abundantly able to supply them, nor by the aduerse attempts of any that oppose vs, seeing he alone, though, we had no other helpes, is sufficient to protect vs, and to bring to nought, whatsoeuer might or malice seeketh to hinder vs in the waies of godlinesse. He is God blessed for euer, yea, blessednesse it selfe, in whose fruition consisteth all happinesse, and therefore ought to be serued with all the powers of our bodies and mindes, seeing he only is able to make vs blessed. He is Almighty, and able to doe whatsoeuer pleaseth him; the which also should effectually withdraw vs from all sinne, seeing thereby wee prouoke him to wrath, who is powerfull to punish vs; and moue vs to serue him in all Christian duties, seeing hauing all power in heauen, and earth, he is able to reward vs in our well-doing. He is true, yea, truth it selfe, and in this regard ought to be serued, seeing he will most assuredly make good all his gracious promises, which he hath made to all that serue and please him; and contrariwise will bring to passe all his fearefull threatnings against those, who neglect and disobey his commandements. His will is absolutely good, and the most perfect rule of righteousness; and therefore our wills and actions must be conformable vnto it, seeing so farre as they digresse and differ, they are wicked, crooked and erroneous. So also the Lord is good, yea, the chiefe and supreme Goodnesse, vnto which all things are to be destinated as their principall and supreme end; the which should make vs deuote our selues wholly vnto his seruice, seeing thereby both wee and our actions doe attaine vnto their supreme end and chiefe perfection; and contrariwise become vaine and to no purpose, if we and they be not thus employed. He is holy, yea, holinesse it selfe, and therefore ought to be serued in holinesse and righteousness of all that approach neere vnto him, and would be esteemed of his family; for being himselfe holy, he delights in those who are like him in holinesse, neither can his pure eyes indure sinfull pollution, as being most contrary to his diuine nature. He is gracious, bountifull and munificent; and therefore is to be serued with

Heb. 13. 8.

1. Cor. 10. 22.
1st. 7. 19.

all diligence and cheerefulnesse, seeing he who is so beneficent and liberall to all his creatures, will be vnspokeably bountifull towards those who glorifie him by their willing obedience. He is louing & gracious, yea, Grace and Loue it selfe, and therefore being also infinitely louely, deserueth worthily all loue, and that wee should bring forth the fruits of it, by doing all things that are pleasing in his sight. He is most mercifull, gentle, patient and long-suffering, and therefore is to be serued with all cheerefulnesse and comfort, seeing he is so mercifull, that he pardoneth all our sinnes; so milde and gentle, that he passeth by all our infirmities; so patient and long-suffering, that when wee are slack and slothfull in our dutie, he doth not presently inflict deserued punishment, but beareth with vs, and expecteth our amendment. He is iust, yea, Iustice it selfe, the which also should make vs spend all our time in his seruice; seeing without any respect of persons he is the same to all that obey him, and will not faile to recompence to the full our labour of loue, nor to giue vnto vs that rich & inestimable wages, wherewith he hath graciously bound himselfe by covenant, to reward our seruice; nor contrariwise to inflict deserued punishments vpon those, who being bound to serue him, neglect their dutie. And thus also those attributes which are improperly ascribed vnto God, as shewing rather his actions then affections, and his workes towards vs, rather then his nature in himselfe, may also yeeld vnto vs powerfull reasons which may moue vs to serue him. As his anger and hatred against sinne and sinners (which is nothing but his rewarding Iustice, recompencing them as they haue deserued) may moue vs effectually to flee all sin and wickednesse; seeing his wrath is a consuming fire, and wee like stubble before it, in which regard it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the euerliuing God. His ioy, whereby he delighteth himselfe in those that feare and loue him, and so also replenisheth them with all ioy and happinesse in the fruition of him and his loue. His sorrow and displeasure, when wee vnkindly griene him by our sinnes, who hath beene so kinde vnto vs; and if we make him sorry who is our ioy, who shall glad our hearts in the day of our sorrow, and comfort vs in our mourning? His repenting in doing vnto vs the good he hath promised, when wee doe euill; and in bringing vpon vs his Iudgements threatned, when wee turne from our sins, and reconcile our selues vnto him by our wel-doing. Finally, his ieaousie which is mixt of loue and anger, should make vs wholly deuote our selues to his seruice, seeing he can abide no corriuals in our loue and dutie, but will be loued & serued with all our hearts, and with all our soules; and therefore wee must not deuide our selues betweene God, and the deuill, the world and our owne sinfull lusts, but we must consecrate our bodies and soules vnto the seruice of God alone in the duties of a godly life, seeing he is a ieaous God, who is impatient of any copartners, and will haue all or none.

The workes also of God doe yeeld vnto vs most effectuell reasons, to perswade vs vnto all duties of a godly life, but especially his manifold and inestimable benefits; which he hath vouchsafed to bestow vpon

Act. 10. 34.

Heb. 10. 31.

Matth. 22. 37.

Rom. 12. 1.
1. Cor. 9. 20.

§. Sect. 2.
The second reason, taken from Gods loue towards vs.

vpon vs, whether wee consider the Fountaine from which they all spring, or the blessings and benefits themselves, which as streames doe issue and flow from them. The fountaine of them all, is his diuine and incomprehensible loue, whereby, of his free grace and meere goodnesse, he hath loued vs from all eternity, without any respect of our deserts and worthinesse. The which he hath manifested, when as we were dead in our sinnes, and the children of wrath as well as others, when we were weake and of no strength, hauing not so much as any power to desire his fauour and mercie, to free and deliuer vs out of our wofull misery. When as wee were like poore impotent infants, new borne, whose Naueil was not cut, and who wallowed in the filthy and bloody gore of our naturall corruptions, no eye pitying vs, nor hauing any friend, that was able to help vs, or to wash vs cleane from our corruption. For euen then when we were helpelesse and hopelesse, this loue moued him to take compassion on vs, and to say vnto vs whilest wee were in our blood, You shall liue. And when wee were so deepe stained, yea, euen in-grained in the filthy dye of our sinnes, that all the waters in the world could not make vs cleane, he in this incomprehensible loue, gaue his Son to the death, that we might be washed in the Lauer of his precious blood, and so purged from our crimson and scarlet sinnes, both in respect of the guilt, punishment and corruption of them, that thereby we are restored vnto a snowie whitenesse, and being washed with the blood of his innocent Sonne, are recouered and cleansed from our incurable Leprosie. O how ought this vnspokeable loue to affect and warme our frozen hearts with vnfaigned loue towards him againe! How should our soules cleaue vnto him, and be inflamed with most seruent affection towards him, who being infinite in all goodnesse and perfection, and needed neither vs, nor any thing from vs, yet vouchsafed to set his Loue vpon vs, who were so vnlovely and vnworthy, yea, so sinnefull and wicked, that wee iustly deserued his wrath and fearefull vengeance? How can we chuse, if we thorowly consider this, but haue our hearts thorowly inflamed with most feruent affection towards him, who is the chiefe Goodnes, most amiable in himselfe, and most gracious vnto vs? How can we sufficiently expresse our loue, by doing or suffering any thing for his sake? How fearefull should this make vs to offend him, and how carefull in all things to please him? How zealous should wee be of his glory, and how diligent and cheerefull in doing him faithfull seruice, by performing all duties of a godly life? How should this weane our hearts and affections from the loue of the world and earthly vanities, and make them to become as bitter as gall and wormwood to our spirituall taste, seeme they neuer so sweet and pleasant to our carnall appetite, when as they are offered as the deuils bayts to withdraw our hearts from God, and to make vs more slothfull in his seruice?

The fruits also and effects of Gods Loue towards vs, doe serue as strong arguments to moue vs vnto a godly life. As first, his decree of election, whereby from all eternity he hath chosen vs in Christ, out of the corrupt masse of mankind, vnto eternall life and happinesse, and

vnto

1st. 31. 3.

Eph. 2. 1. 3.

Rom. 5. 8. 10.

Ezech. 16. 4. 5. 6.

Esa. 1. 16.

1. Job. 2. 15.

1am. 4. 4.

§. Sect. 3.

The third reason, taken from Gods decree of our election.

1. Pet. 1. 4, 5.

Psal. 8. 4.

Rom. 9.

Eph. 1. 4.
1. Pet. 2. 9.

vnto all the meanes which may bring vs vnto it. What greater mercy can be imagined, then that God of his free grace should chuse vs in Christ, who were vtterly lost in Adam, dead in our finnes, and the children of wrath as well as others, not vnto some meane estate or low degree of happinesse, but to the highest & greatest priuiledges, as to be his owne peculiar people, and seruants of his owne family, yea, to be his adopted children & coheires with Christ, not of some earthly patrimony, or worldly kingdome, which though it were neuer so great and glorious, yet is it mutable and momentary, but of an heavenly inheritance, which is incorruptible, vndefiled, and fadeth not away, as the Apostle speaketh: The which benefit will be much amplified, if we consider his infinit Maiesty and Glory, who hath thus chosen vs; and our owne vilenesse and vnworthinesse, whom he hath aduanced to these rich and wonderfull priuiledges, seeing we were dust and ashes, corrupt and sinnefull, strangers, yea enemies vnto God: which if it be well weighed, may iustly make vs cry out with the Psalmist; O Lord, what is man, that thou art mindfull of him, and the Son of man, that thou visitest him? Especially, if we consider vnto what dignity wee who were so low are exalted; For if it had beene a matchlesse mercie, for vs that were so base, to haue beene made the meanest of Gods family, euen doore-keepers in the House of our God, what incomparable kindenesse and loue is this, to be made his owne Sonnes, and Heires of his Kingdome: The which mercie is not indefinitely communicated vnto all, though all haue deserued it as well as we, but to the least part of mankinde; and yet such is his goodnesse towards vs, that passing by many great Kings and Monarches, many rich, noble and wise in the world, he hath vouchsafed to make vs of this small number. Not because wee deserued such extraordinary fauour more then others that want it, but of his meere grace and free good will. O how should our hearts be inflamed with the Loue of God, in the sight and sense of such an inestimable benefit: How should it fill our hearts with thankfulnessse, and our mouthes with his prayes: How zealous and diligent should it make vs in his seruice: And to thinke all time lost, which is not spent in doing something which may tend to his glory, who of his meere Loue hath done so much for vs: Out of the same lump, of which haue beene made so many vessels to dishonour, he hath chosen vs, that he might make vs vessels of grace and honour; O how should we delight to be seruiceable to so gracious a Lord, and to shine in the light of godlinesse to his glory, who hath thus aduanced vs: He hath chosen vs, which were children of wrath, as well as others, out of that huge multitude and cursed crue, to be his owne children by adoption and grace; how then should this inflame our desires, to glorifie so gracious a Father, and to carry our selues in all things as becometh his children: But if the meere Loue of God will not worke this in vs, let vs consider further, that the Lord hath propounded this end to the decree of our election, that we should glorifie him by our Holinesse and vnblameablenesse, according to that of the Apostle; He hath chosen vs in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy, and without without blame before him in loue; and therefore vnlesse we thinke that God, infinite in wisdom and power, can faile of his end, we can haue no hope that we are elected to happinesse, vnlesse we attaine vnto some measure of Holinesse. He hath predestinated vs, that we should be conformed to the image of his Sonne, as in glory and blessednesse in the world to come, so in this life, both in his sanctity and sufferings: and therefore as we must not thinke that we can by the broad way of carnall pleasures, attaine to Christs heauenly happinesse, and to be crowned with him before wee haue suffered with him; so much lesse let vs imagine that we shall euer come into his ioyes, if wee doe not follow him in that path of righteousnesse, which he hath beaten before vs, seeing the Apostle hath plainly told vs, that without Holinesse we shall neuer see God. So that the consideration of our election ought to be a strong motiue to perswade vs vnto a godly life, both that we may glorifie God by our holy conuersation, who hath beene so gracious and good vnto vs, and that we may be assured, that he will glorifie vs, by attayning vnto that end of Holinesse, for which we were elected. Whereof it is that the Apostle hauing largely intreated of the doctrine of Gods predestination, doth out of this doctrine inforce this vse, that we should offer vp our selues a liuely and holy Sacrifice, acceptable vnto him, by our reasonable seruing of him. And the Apostle Peter perswading vs to make our election sure, could prescribe no other course for the obtayning of this assurance, then by ioyning one vertue and grace with another, and bringing forth the fruits of them all, by doing these things, that is, seruing and glorifying God who hath chosen vs, in the duties of a godly life.

The second fruit and effect of Gods Loue, and cause or meanes of our saluation and happinesse, is our creation by his Almighty Word; and preservation, being thus made by his powerfull prouidence. Concerning the former, whereas God might haue left vs without a being, which is to be esteemed amongst the greatest euils, he created vs of nothing, or which is all one, of the dust of the earth, which came of nothing, by sole vertue of his powerfull Word; and whereas hee might haue made vs the vilest and basest of the creatures which creepe vpon the earth, yea worse then they; euen wicked deuils, ordained to condemnation, he created vs according to his owne image, in wisdom, holinesse and righteousnesse, indued vs with an immortall and reasonable soule, and made vs Lords ouer all the rest of the creatures vpon the earth, and onely inferiour to himselfe, that wee might bee ruled and gouerned by him; and by our seruice glorifie him who hath created vs, and giuen vs our being. The which, if it be rightly considered, is an vnspokeable benefit, as being the ground of all that follow it. Neither could wee euer attaine vnto well-being, vnlesse we had first a being; nor vnto our finall end, eternall saluation, vnlesse wee had found an entrance and passage vnto it by our creation. In lieu of which great benefit, God requireth nothing at our hands, but that by our seruice we glorifie him, for which end he gaue vs our being. Not that his glory needs our seruice, seeing it is in it selfe absolute & infinite, but out of the same loue which moued him first to make

vs,

Act. 14. 22.

2. Tim. 2. 12.

Heb. 12. 14.

Rom. 12. 1.

2. Pet. 1. 10.

§. Sect. 4.
The fourth
reason taken from the benefit of our creation.

Eph. 2.10.

Eph. 4.24.

Pro. 16.4.

§. Sect. 5.

The fifth reason taken from the benefit of our preservation.

A. 17. 28.
Psal. 104. 28.

1. Pu. 5. 8.

vs, that hee might honour vs in this life, by vsing vs as instruments to manifest his glory, and might hereby take occasion to glorifie vs in the world to come, by crowning our seruice, of his meere grace, with heavenly ioy & happines. The which also is a most effectuell reason to perswade vs, that we deuote and consecrate our selues vnto Gods seruice in all duties of a godly life, seeing hee is our Lord and Maker, who hath created vs vnto good workes, that wee should walke in them, to the glory of him that hath giuen vs our being, and that to this end, that wee should for euer bee partakers with him in glory. For what can bee more iust, then to giue euery one his owne? that hee who soweth his owne seede in his owne ground, should reape the fruit of his labours? that he who buildeth a house, should haue the benefit of dwelling in it? that he who planteth a Vineyard, should cate of the grapes, and drinke of the wine? and that he who lendeth any thing vnto another, should haue his owne repaide vnto him? And how much more iust then, and equall is it, that the Lord, who hath not fashioned and framed vs of pre-existent matter, but of nothing hath created our soules and bodies, should haue them wholly deuored and consecrated to his seruice, which was the end for which he made vs and gaue vs our being? vnto which end if wee attaine not, it is a signe that we neuer thinke of the end for which we came into the world; or imagine that wee were sent by God hither, that we should serue our owne lusts, and in fulfilling them, the diuell himselfe, and not that wee should serue him, who hath right vnto vs by this great benefit of our creation. Yea if we doe not spend our time in Gods seruice, we faile of the mayne end for which wee came into the world, and so spend all our life and strength in vaine. But though we faile of our end, which is, by seruing and glorifying God, to attaine vnto happinesse, (which also is Gods end reuealed in his Word) yet we shall neuer frustrate the end of his secret counsailes, which is, either to glorify his mercy in vs, if we feare and serue him, or his Iustice, if we neglect his seruice, and yeild obedience to sin and Satan. For the Lord being the summum bonum, and supreme end of all things, hath (as the Wise man speaketh) made all things for himselfe, euen the wicked for the day of euill.

The benefit of our preservation and gouernement, doth also iustly challenge this seruice at our hands; because being created, wee haue no power to subsist of our selues, but wholly depend vpon God for the continuance of vs in our life and good estate; for (as the Apostle saith) In him we liue, & moue, and haue our being, so that if he withdraw his assisting power, we perish and returne vnto our dust. By his all-ruling prouidence we are euery day in the yeere, euery houre in the day, and euery minute and moment in the houre, preserved from innumerable dangers, which otherwise would seaze vpon vs, from the assaults of our many and mighty enemies, and especially of that roring and deuouring Lyon, who is alwaies ready to destroy vs, if wee were not preserved vnder the wings of the Almighty from his rage and malice. By it wee are gouerned and directed in all our waies, so as we cannot stirre a foote, nor moue a hand, nor open our eyes or eares, nor speake a word, word, if wee had not strength from him. By it all the creatures become seruiceable vnto vs, and worke together for our good, which otherwise would bee our bane. From God wee haue all the benefits which we inioy, the Sunne which giueth vs light and vitall heate, the ayre which wee breathe, the earth which sustaineth vs, the meate which feedeth vs, the apparell which couereth our nakednesse, and keepeth vs warme; our health and wealth, our peace, plenty and prosperity, and all other blessings, fit both for necessity, and for our comfort and delight. And not onely the things themselues, but all their vertue and vigour, whereby they become profitable to those ends for which we vse them, doe come from him, and doe as meanes and instruments serue his Prouidence for the deriuing of all good vnto vs; himselfe still remayning the chiefe and principall cause which worketh by them, or can deriue vnto vs all things needefull without them, if they bee wanting. For it is he who feedeth vs by our meate, by our clothes keepeth vs warme, by our friends doth comfort and relieue vs, for which vses they would be vneffectuall, yea produce the cleane contrary effects, if they had not from his blessing their power and efficacy. Now to what end, O man, dost thou receiue daily at the hands of God such innumerable blessings, but that thou shouldest acknowledge him the Author of them, and praise him for all the good which he doth vnto thee? Why doth hee preferue thy life, but that thou shouldest liue to his glory? Why doth hee make all his creatures in heauen and earth seruiceable vnto thee, but that thou shouldest hereby be moued with more cheerefulnesse to serue him, who hath created both them and thee? Why doth he preferue thee from dangers, and protect thee from enemies, and deliuer thee out of troubles and afflictions, but that thou shouldest glorify and serue him without feare, in holinesse and righteousness all the dayes of thy life? Why doth he giue thee the light of the Sunne, but that thou shouldest shun the workes of darkness, and serue him in the duties of thy calling? Why doth he let thee breathe the ayre, but that thou shouldst spend this breath in speaking & singing to his praise? Finally, why doth hee feed and clothe thee, and giue vnto thee those manifold blessings which thou inioyest, but that by this rich wages, hee may encourage thee to doe him faithfull and cheerful seruice? which if thou neglectest, and mis-spendedst all the rich gifts which thou hast receiued, to the dishonour of him that giueth them, in the seruice of sinne and Satan, and in satisfying of thine own carnall and sensuall lusts, what dost thou hereby, but bewray thine horrible ingratitude towards such a gracious and bountifull Lord and Master? What dost thou but alienate his loue from thee, and prouoking his wrath against thee, mooue him in his iust displeasure to withdraw his gifts from thee which thou abusest, or let thee inioy them in his anger to thy greater hurt, leauing them with thee as testimonies to conuince thee of thy shamefull vngratitude, and as talents lent vnto thee, which when thou hast mis-spent to the dishonour of thy Lord, or not employed them in his seruice, will but prepare for thee a fearefull account at the terrible Day of Gods last Iudgement.

CAP. XXXVII

Two other reasons mouing vs vnto a godly life. The first, taken from Christ, giuen vnto vs by his Father; the other, from the Conenant of grace made in him.

§. Sect. 1.
Of the inestimable gift of Iesus Christ, which should moue vs to loue and serue God.

John 3. 16.

Ephes. 1. 4, 5.

HHe fourth mayne benefit which God hath giuen vnto vs, is his onely begotten and dearly beloued Sonne Iesus Christ, to be our Head and Sauour, in whom we were elected, & by whom we were to be saued & redeemed. For being false in Adam, who was the head and roote of all mankinde, and not onely partakers of the guilt and punishment of his sin, but also of the corruption of nature deriued from him, whereby we were disabled to all good, and made prone vnto all euill, it would not stand with Gods Iustice to elect or saue vs, till it were fully satisfied, and wee freed from this sinfull condition. Which being a worke impossible to men and Angels, in respect of that infinite price which was to bee payd, God, of his free grace and loue ordained and appointed in his eternall Counsell, his Sonne to be our Sauour and Redeemer; and to this end, to take our nature vpon him, that hee might be vnto his elect the second Adam, and the Head of his Church, in whom he chose them to life and saluation, which the first Adam lost both for himselfe and all his posterity. For howsoever the free loue, and meere grace and good will of God, be the supreme and highest cause of our election and saluation, and Christ, in respect of it, but a meanes or subordinate cause of working that for vs, which Gods loue had first decreed (neither was Christ the cause that moued God to loue vs with this first loue and free grace, but this loue, the cause which moued God to giue his Sonne vnto vs to be our Sauour and Redeemer) yet may it be truly said, that wee could no otherwise be elected then in Christ, as our Head and the roote of all our righteoufnesse, that iustice and mercy meeting together, God might be glorified in them both; although we be nor elected for him, but of Gods absolute will and free grace, which moued him to giue vs his Sonne and all other good which wee receiue by him. And this the Apostle plainly affirmeth, that God hath chosen vs in him before the foundation of the world, and that he hath predestinated vs to the adoption of children by Iesus Christ, vnto himselfe, according to the good pleasure of his will; to the praise of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made vs accepted in his Beloued, who were worthily reiectd in Adam, both for the guilt of his sinne, and the corruption of our nature which we haue deriued from him. Now this benefit of Christ giuen vs of God, to bee the foundation of our election and saluation, may be vnto vs a most forcible argument to make vs loue God about all things, who hath so loued vs, that hee hath not spared to giue his onely begotten and dearly beloued Sonne vnto vs, and for vs, euen vnto the death, that wee by him might attaine vnto eternall life and happinesse, and also to expresse this loue, by labouring and indepouring to serue and please him in all the duties of a godly godly life. For what should withdraw our hearts from God, which he hath tyed vnto him by such a bond of loue, that was much stronger then death it selfe? why should any hire intice vs to neglect his seruice, and to serue Satan, the world, and our owne lusts; by committing any knowne sinne, vnlesse it be of equall value to that gift that God hath given to vs and for vs, that he might redeeme vs from all iniquity, and appropriate vs vnto himselfe for his owne seruice? But ten thousand worlds cannot match this gift, and why then should we lose the benefit of it, by neglecting the seruice of God, and hiring our selues to worke wickednesse, for the base hire of worldly vanities?

Againe, as Christ our Sauour giuen vnto vs by God his Father; so also the great worke of Redemption wrought by him, may serue as a most powerfull argument to mooue vs vnto the diligent performance of all the duties which belong to a godly life: For though the worke of our Creation and preseruation are inestimable benefits; yet, this much exceedeth them, being farre aboue all humane conceit, and so vnspokeable, that it can neuer be sufficiently expressed and magnified by the tongue of men and Angels. Yet let vs take, as we are able, some slender view of it; and with rauishing wonder, admire and adore the rest which we are not able to comprehend. And consider first, what wee were who were thus redeemed, to wit, mortall men, dust and ashes, weake, and of no strength, strangers, sinners, yea, enemies vnto God and our owne saluation. Secondly, from what we were redeemed, namely, out of the greatest and most desperate misery which could possibly bee incident vnto any creature. For Christ hath deliuered vs from the wrath of God, the curse of the Law, and all the fearefull plagues therein threatned, temporall and eternall, from the miserable bondage and captiuiety of sinne and Satan, from death, hell, and euerlasting condemnation both of body and soule; and that when we were so desperately and vnreouerably plunged into these fearefull miseries, that wee were vtterly vnable to helpe our selues, yea, when all the power of men and Angels was altogether vninsufficient to doe vs any good. Thirdly, consider who redeemed such poore sinfull wretches out of this wofull plight, euen the glorious Sonne of God, equall to his Father in power and Maiesty; hee vouchsafed to pittie vs in our misery, and to take vpon him our deliuerance. Fourthly, consider the meanes which he vsed to effect this great worke of our Redemption, namely, by humbling himselfe, in taking vpon him our nature, and vniting it in a substantiall and inseparable vnion vnto his Diuine nature, that so he might in our stead, doe and suffer whatsoeuer was necessary for our saluation. Fifthly, consider the manner of effecting this great worke, or the meanes which hee vsed, that he might redeeme vs; namely, by offering himselfe vnto God his Father, as a sacrifice for our sinnes, and an all-sufficient price for our Redemption, and to suffer in his body and soule, all those punishments which were due vnto vs for our sinnes. As all the miseries of his life, poerty and meane birth, flight from his enemies, the tentations of the deuill, hunger, wearinesse, the persecutions, scornes, reproches, and slanders of the world and wicked men. And those especially, which he indured a little before his death; for he was betrayed by his owne Apostle, and forsaken

§. Sect. 2.

That the work of redemption should mooue vs to serue our Redeemer in all duties of a godly life.

Rom. 9. 3, 10.

taken by the rest, apprehended by his enemies, and by them most iniuriously and barbarously abused, and haled from one Iudgement seat to another, falsly accused, wrongfully condemned, blindfolded, buffeted, rayled at, spit vpon, scorned and mocked, whipped, crowned with thornes, and crucified; and so suffered for vs that cruell, ignominious, and accursed death of the Crosse, and his Fathers wrath due to our sinnes, which made him to sweate drops of Blood, and vnder the waight of this intolerable burthen, to complaine, as a man forlorne and forsaken of God. All which, he willingly, meekely, and patiently suffered for vs, that he might redeeme vs out of the hands of all our enemies, and purchase vs vnto himselfe as his owne peculiar people. So that wee are now his by a treble right: for he hath made vs, and therefore we are his, euen his home-borne seruants, who owe vnto him our birth and being; hee preferueth vs, and giueth vnto vs all the good things which we inioy, and so we are his hired seruants, who owe vnto him all loue and duty, for the rich wages of his bounteous benefits; and finally, he hath redeemed vs out of the hands of our mortall enemies, by giuing for vs, not siluer or gold, or any corruptible thing, but himselfe and his owne precious Blood, as a price to satisfie his Fathers iustice for our sinnes; and therefore we are no more our owne, but his by the Law of Redemption. What then remaineth, but that we yeeld vnto our Sauour his owne right which hee hath so dearly bought: and seeing he hath giuen a price for vs, which is of ten thousand, yea, infinite times more value then his purchase; O let vs not defraud him of his bargain, but deuote our bodies and soules wholly to him, that we may glorifie him by our seruice, and be sorry that we haue no more to giue vnto him. Wee owed our selues vnto him before, by right of creation, but by our sinnes robbed him of his due, by selling our selues ouer to Satan, as his slaues, for the base hire of worldly vanities; and now hee hath againe made vs his owne, by giuing himselfe as the price of our Redemption: and therefore let vs not againe deprive him of his right, and defraud him of his seruice, which if we vngratefully doe, there remaineth no further sacrifice for sinne. He hath giuen himselfe for vs; and shall we thinke it too much to giue our selues to him? He came, not to be serued, but to serue, and to giue his life a ranfome for many; and shall the seruant detra& his seruice, when his Lord and Master, his King and Soueraigne hath abased himselfe to doe seruice for him? Hee hath made no spare of his Blood for our sakes, and shall we thinke our selues prodigall in our duty, if wee take a little paines, and spend some sweate in his seruice? Yea, rather let vs thinke no time well spent, which is not thus imployed; and all our labour lost, which by holy duty expresseth not some loue towards him, to whom we owe so much, and are able to pay so little. Excellent is the meditation of a deuout Father to this purpose; If (saith he) I owe my selfe wholly vnto him, for my Creation; what shall I now adde for my restauration and Redemption? especially being restored after this manner? Neither was I so easily restored as created. For to create me and all things else, God did but say the word, and it was done; but he that by once speaking made mee, said many things, wrought wonders, suffered things not onely grievous, but disgracefull and vnworthy of him, that he might redeeme mee. What therefore

Psal. 100. 3.

1. Pet. 1. 17, 18.

1. Cor. 6. 20.

Heb. 10. 26.

Mat. 20. 28.

*Quid scitum me debeat pro me facto, quid addam iam & pro refecto, & re-
fecto hoc modo, &c? Bern. lib. de
diligen. Deo. c. 1.*

therefore shall I returne vnto the Lord, for all the good things which hee hath done vnto me? In his first worke he gaue me vnto my selfe; in the second, he gaue himselfe to me; and by giuing himselfe, restored me vnto my selfe. Being then both giuen and restored, I owe my selfe vnto him for my self, & so am twice due. But what then shal I giue vnto God for giuing himselfe for thogh I could giue my selfe a thousand times for recompence, what am I in comparison of him? Besides which argument of thankiulnes, which might moue vs to performe all duties of Gods seruice, there is another of necessity, which like a strong chaine tieth vs vnto them: Seeing our Sauour Christ hath propounded this as the maine end of our Redemption, yea, hath also ratified it by his solemne Oth, that all those who are by him redeemed out of the hands of their spiritual enemies, shall serue him in holines and righteousness, before him, all the dayes of their liues. He therefore died, that he might be Lord of all, not in bare title & profession only (for that wil nothing profit vs at the day of Iudgment, as himselfe telleth vs) but in deed & truth, by performing vnto him faithfull and diligent seruice. Hee hath bought vs, that we should no more be our owne, (and much lesse the deuils or the worlds) but his, & glorifie him both in our soules & bodies, seeing they are his, as the Apostle telleth vs. And therefore vnlesse we thinke that Christ may faile of his end which he hath propounded, & so die in vaine, yea, if he may not faile of his truth, & falsifie his Oath, let vs not imagine that we are his redeemed, or haue any part in that great worke of saluation wrought by him, vnlesse we labour and indeuour to serue him in the duties of holinesse and righteousness, and that not by fits and flashes onely, but, from the time of our conuersion, all the remainder of our liues.

The first benefit, is the Couenant of Grace, which God hath made with vs in Iesus Christ; for being redeemed by his full satisfaction, death, & obedience, the Lord hath made a new Couenant with vs, not like that vnder the Law, the condicion whereof, was perfect obedience, the which being impossible vnto vs, by reason of our imperfections and corruptions, the promise was made voyd and vnprofitable; seeing this new Couenant is not grounded vpon our workes and worthinesse, but vpon the free mercies of God, and the all-sufficient merits of Iesus Christ. In which, the Lord promisseth for his part, that he will be our gracious God and louing Father, that he will pardon and forgiue vs all our sinnes, and giue vnto vs all good things spirituall and temporall in this life, and glory and happinesse in the life to come. And we for our part promise vnto God againe, that he shall be our God, and we his people, and that wee will receiue and embrace all his blessings promised, by a true and liuely faith, and especially, Iesus Christ and all his benefits, and wholly rest vpon him, for our iustification and saluation, that he may be all in all, and haue the whole glory of his owne gracious and free gifts. And because a dead and fruitlesse faith cannot doe this, therefore by a necessary consequence wee promise, that we will approoue our faith to be liuely and effectuell for these vses, by bringing forth the fruits thereof in vnfeined and hearty repentance and amendment of life. Now whereas we couenant that he shall be our God, and we will be his people, we doe not promise that wee will make a bare profession of these things in word onely, but that in deed and truth wee

Luk. 1. 74, 75.
Rom. 14. 9.
Mat. 7. 22.
Mal. 1. 6.

1. Cor. 6. 20.
Col. 1. 22.
1. Pet. 2. 24.
Eph. 4. 4. 22.
1. Pet. 1. 17, 18.

§. Sect. 3.
That by the Couenant of Grace we are strongly bound vnto all Christian duties of a godly life.

Heb. 6.18.

will haue him to be our God, in our hearts by desiring and endeavouring to cleaue vnto him alone, louing, fearing, hoping, and trusting in him and no other, and that in our liues and actions we will labour to glorifie him, by liuing as it becommeth his people, and bringing forth the fruits of holinesse and righteousnesse, in the whole course of our conuersation. The which Covenant strongly bindeth vs to these duties; seeing as it is on Gods part most vnchangeable, being effectually ratified and confirmed by the blood of Christ, by Gods owne hand-writing in his Word and Gospell, whereunto he hath annexed his seales and Sacraments; yea, by his solemne Oth, wherein it is impossible that God should lye; for hauing no greater to sweare by, he hath sworne by himselfe, that hee will not faile of any of his promises made in Christ: so is it confirmed on our part by our solemne Vow in Baptisme, where (as it were) by a sacramentall oath we haue bound our selues to renounce the seruice of sinne and Satan, the world and the flesh, and that we will serue God and no other, in the duties of holinesse and righteousnesse all the dayes of our liues. To which end we make a solemne profession of our faith, and take vpon vs Gods Liuey and Cognizance, promising, that we will fight vnder his Colours and Standard, against all the enemies of our saluation. And therefore seeing we haue made this vow and promise vnto God, and haue, vpon many occasions, renewed our covenant, that we wil in all things serue & please him; we must, in the whole course of our liues, carefully indeuour to performe what we haue promised, vnlesse wee would bee esteemed covenant-breakers, falsifiers of our word and promise, not to men, but to God himselfe, yea perfidious traytors to him and our owne soules. The which will be much more intolerable and vnexcusable, seeing in this Covenant of Grace, God doth not stand vpon strict termes with vs, exacting legall and perfect performance, but onely Euangelicall sincerity and truth, and that we desire and indeuour to keepe our promise as much as we are able. And seeing also, because our strength is but small, the Lord hath graciously promised the assistance of his holy Spirit, to strengthen vs in our good indeuours, and inable vs to performe what he requireth, and we haue vndertaken, in some such manner as may be acceptable in his sight. Now what stronger motiue can there be vnto the duties of a godly life, consisting in a liuely faith and vnfained repentance, then to consider that wee are tyed hereunto by this covenant, which is the maine ground of all our good, the remission of our sinnes, grace and glory, which if wee make voyd, by our impenitency and infidelity, wee can haue no part in Gods mercies and gracious promises, nor in Iesus Christ and all his benefits. Especially considering, that if we but resolute and indeuour to please God in these holy duties, both wee and our seruice shall bee accepted in Iesus Christ, our imperfections being couered with his perfect obedience, and our corruptions washed away with his blood: which if we neglect to performe, and liue stil in our infidelity and impenitency, without any serious desire or constant indeuour to know God, or to feare and serue him, whatsoever profession and shew we make to the contrary, yet most certaine it is, that we are not yet in this Covenant, nor shall, as long as we continue in this state, haue any part in the benefits promised; seeing the Lord, who cannot

Jer. 31. 33, 34.
35.
and 32. 40.

cannot faile of his word, hath in this couenant assured vs, that he will not onely bestow his blessings, but will also sit and inable all his Elect, with whom onely he maketh it, to performe what he require that their hands, that he will inlighten them with the knowledge of himself & his will, and write his Law in their hearts, thereby working in them these resolutions and indeuours to obserue and keepe it; that he will be their God, and they his people; and that he will knit them so vnto him, as that they shall neuer depart from him; and therefore so long as wee finde no such things wrought in vs, we can haue no assurance, that as yet we haue any part in this Couenant, or in any of the benefits therein promised.

CAP. XXXVIII.

Of two other reasons mouing vs to a godly life: the one, taken from our effectuall Calling; the other, from our free Iustification by faith.

He sixth benefit, is our effectuall Calling, whereby the Lord vouchsafeth, by the preaching of the Gospell, to make knowne vnto vs his good will and pleasure, concerning the eternall saluation of our soules, in and for Iesus Christ, and by the inward operation of his holy Spirit, working with the outward ministry, to beget in vs a true and liuely faith, whereby wee apply vnto our selues Christ Iesus and all his benefits. For in the ministry of the Word, God not onely offereth vnto vs Christ to be our Sauour and Redeemer, but also prepareth and firreth vs to receiue him, giuing vnto vs a true sight of our sinne and misery, by which our hearts are humbled and broken, and working in them an earnest hungry and thirsting after Christ and his righteousness, that by him wee may be recovered out of our wretched estate, and attaine vnto life and saluation by his merits and obedience. The which seruient desires he graciously satisfieth, by working faith in vs, grounded vpon his infinite mercies, the all-sufficient merits of Christ, and his free and indefinite promises, whereby we apply him vnto vs with all his benefits. So that in this benefit of our effectuall Calling, three things chiefly concur: first, the sauing hearing of the Word, whereby our eares and hearts are opened, and our minds inlightened with the knowledge of the great worke of Redemption wrought by Christ. Secondly, the donation of God the Father, whereby he offereth and giueth Christ vnto vs, to bee our Sauour, and vs vnto Christ, to be saued and redeemed by him. Thirdly, incision into Christ, and vnion with him, he becomming our Head, and wee his members, the bond whereof, on his part, is his holy Spirit, and on our part, a true and liuely faith. All which affoord vnto vs strong motiues to perswade vs vnto all duties of a godly life. For first, what an incomparable benefit is this, that the Lord passing by innumerable others, who either neuer heard the sound of the Gospell, or hearing, haue made no benefit by it, wanting the inward assistance of his holy Spirit, hee should both grant vnto vs this light, and also open our eyes that we should behold it? and that he should

§. Sect. I.
That the benefit of our effectuall Calling should moue vs to serue God in the duties of a godly life.

Iob. 12. 35.

1. Cor. 6. 15.

1. Tbes. 4. 7.
Tit. 2. 11, 12.Iob. 9. 31.
Jam. 4. 17.
Luk. 12. 47.

Iob. 15. 2, 6.

Ephes. 4. 1.
2. Pet. 1. 10.
§. Sect. 2.
The second reason taken from our Iusti-fication, and the fruits which follow it.

hereby chuse and call vs out of the corrupt masse of mankind, which lieth dead in sinne, and make vs true members of his Church, giuing Christ vnto vs, and vs vnto Christ, and vniting vs vnto him, as liuely members of his body, that we might be partakers of him and all his benefits? And how should this affect our hearts, and prouoke vs to make a right vse of such inestimable blessings, which is the end why God hath bestowed them? For why hath he inlightened our eyes more then others, but that by the benefit of this light, we should walke in the wayes of holinesse and righteousnesse, and so glorifie him in our saluation? Wherefore hath he called and culled vs out of the world, but that wee should walke worthy of this high calling, and renouncing the world and worldly lusts, deuote our selues wholly to his seruice? Why hath hee giuen Christ vnto vs, and vs vnto Christ, but that hee might saue vs from our sinnes, not onely in respect of their guilt and punishment, but also from their corruption, and that he rainging in vs by his grace and holy Spirit, might depose sinne and Satan from their regency, and suffer them no longer to rule and raigne in our mortall bodies? Why hath he vnited vs vnto Christ by his Spirit, but that wee should bee led and ruled by it, and not by our owne lusts, and that we should submit our selues as becommeth members, to his government, seeing it were a thing monstrous in the body, for any inferiour part, to rebell against the Head, and to withdraw it selfe from its regiment and iurisdiction; and vtterly vsutable, that so holy an Head should haue any members delighting in wickednesse, and drawing it, as much as they are able, into the fellowship and communion of the same sinnes? And that this is the maine end of our calling, that we should glorifie God by seruing him in holinesse and righteousnesse, it is cleere and eident, by the Scriptures. For the Apostle telleth vs, that God hath not called vs vnto uncleannesse, but vnto holinesse, that the grace of God which bringeth saluation, appearing or shining vnto vs, in the ministry of the Gospell, teacheth vs to deny vngodlinesse and worldly lusts, and to line soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world: which lesson if we leame not, we had been better to haue sate still in darknesse, seeing our knowledge will but aggrauate our sinne, and increase our condemnation, according to that of the Apostle, To him that knoweth to doe good, and doth it not, to him it is sinne; and that of our Sauour, The seruant that knoweth his Masters will, and doth it not, shall be beaten with many stripes. Finally, our Sauour telleth vs, that if we be grafted in him, we must bring forth fruit; seeing every branch that beareth not fruit, be taketh away, and casteth forth as a branch that is dead and withered, and men gather them and cast them into the fire, and they are burned. And therefore if wee would haue any assurance that we are effectually called, that Christ is ours, and we his, and that being vnited vnto him, as liuely members of his body, we haue right vnto him, and all his benefits, let vs, as the Apostle exhorteth, walke worthy the vocation wherewith we are called; and as the Apostle Peter perswadeth, Let vs make our Calling and Election sure, by adding one vertue vnto another, and bringing forth the fruits of them all in a godly and Christian life.

Finally, the benefit of our Iustification, with all the fruits that doe follow it, are so many strong motiues to incite vs vnto the duties of a godly life:

life: for God, in our Iustification, of his free grace, imputing vnto vs the death and obedience of Iesus Christ, hath forgien vs all our sinnes, and pronounced vs iust and righteous, in his righteousness. By which inestimable benefit, he hath bound vs to serue and glorifie him in all holy duties, who hath done so great things for vs. For seeing there is no euill, like the euill of sinne, no tyranny and bondage alike miserable, therefore when God of his free grace hath freed vs from it, wee must with all care flee sinne, and take heed, that wee doe not againe come into this thralldome. And seeing he hath forgien vs so great a debt, let this make vs loue him much, and expresse our loue, by seruing and pleasing him in the duties of holinesse and righteousness. The which vie the Apostle maketh of this benefit, namely, that being dead vnto sinne, that is, freed from the power and tyranny of it, and alieue vnto God, we should not let sinne any longer raigne in our mortall bodies, that we should obey it in the lusts thereof, but that we should yeeld our selues vnto God, as those that are alieue from the dead, and our members as instruments of righteousness vnto God; and that being made free from sinne, we should become the seruants of righteousness. Which if we doe not, we can haue no assurance that wee are redeemed by Christ and iustified; seeing the same vertue and power of Christs death and Resurrection, which taketh away the guilt and punishment of our sinnes in our Iustification, is as effectuell to sanctifie vs in the killing and crucifying of our corruptions, and our spirituall quickening to holinesse and newnesse of life in our sanctification, and as well did there issue our of his pierced side the water of ablution, to cleanse vs from the pollution of sinne, as the blood of Redemption to free vs from the guilt and punishment. The fruits also which follow our Iustification, doe effectually perswade vs to serue God in all the duties of a godly life. For seeing wee are reconciled vnto God by the death of Christ, our care must bee to walke in such a course as may preferue vs in his loue: for Christ hath, as the Apostle speaketh, reconciled vs in the body of his flesh through death, to present vs, holy, vnblameable, and vnreprooueable in his sight. We haue receiued the Spirit of Adoption crying in our hearts, Abba Father, that it may be also in vs the Spirit of Sanctification, and inable vs to please God in al things, as it becometh his children. And in whomsoever this Spirit is, them it regenerateth, raising them from the death of sinne, to the life of righteousness. So our free accessse to the Throne of grace, should make vs take heed of sinne, which will be as a wall of separation betweene God and vs, and to liue in such holinesse of life, as may still preferue our confidence in making our suits knowne vnto God. The loue of God shied abroad in our hearts by the holy Ghost, will inflame them with loue towards him, and make vs carefull to approue it, by liuing according to his will. The peace of God following our Iustification by faith, and passing all vnderstanding, must make vs diligent in shunning those things which might disturbe it, and imbracing and praetising such vertues and holy duties as will preferue it. Our spirituall ioy and reioycing in God, will make vs a uoyd all knowne sinnes which would interrupt our ioy, and turne it into sorrow, and to please the Lord in all things, that his face and fauour may make vs still glad. Our hope of heauenly happinesse will also much in-courage

Luk. 7. 47.

Rom. 6. 10, 11, 18.

Ephes. 5. 25, 26.
1. Pet. 2. 24.

Col. 1. 21, 22.

Rom. 8. 15.

Ephes. 3. 12.

Rom. 5. 5.

Rom. 5. 1.

Rom. 5. 3.

1. Job. 3. 23.

courage vs in the worke of our sanctification: for as many as have the hope, that they shall be like Christ in glory, purge themselves, as he also is pure, as the Apostle teacheth vs. In a word, there is no benefit accompanying grace and saluation, which may not serue as an effectually reason to moue vs to the practice of all holy duties, both out of thankfulness towards God for such inestimable gifts, and for the better affuring our selues, that we haue receiued them, seeing God hauing giuen them all vnto vs for this end, we haue no reason to perswade our selues, that wee haue any interest in them, vlesse they further vs to it, and stirre vs vp in some measure to glorifie God in all the duties of an holy life. And therefore if wee haue any loue towards God, wrought in vs by so many rich mercies, or any true loue towards our selues, which is chiefly shewed in seeking the assurance of such inestimable benefits; let vs about all things labour and indeuour to serue and please God, by bringing forth the fruits of holinesse and righteousness, in the whole course of our liues and conuersations.

CAP. XXXIX.

Other motives arising from those duties which we owe vnto God and our neighbours.

§. Sect. I.

The first reason, taken from that thankfulness which we owe vnto God.

Rom. 8. 12.

Luk. 17. 10.

Eph. 5. 8, 10, 15, 16.

And these are the reasons and arguments, respecting Gods workes and benefits towards vs, which may perswade vs to performe all the duties of a godly life with diligence & cheerefulness. Besides which, there are diuers other motives, arising from those duties which we owe vnto God, in lieu of so many great & inestimable benefits, that are also effectually to the same purpose. As first, our vnfaigned thankfulness towards God, which we are bound to testifie and approue, by performing seruice vnto him in the duties of holinesse and righteousness. For we are not debtors vnto the flesh, that wee should liue according to the lusts thereof, but so infinitely indebted vnto God for his innumerable mercies, that we are neuer able in the least part to discharge it, and are therefore bound euer to remaine thankfull debtors, and to testifie our thankfulness by magnifying his grace and holy Name, and by straining and indeuouring, as much as we are able, to doe his will, and performe all such duties as are acceptable in his sight, acknowledging when we haue done the best we can, that wee are still vnprofitable seruants, who come farre short of that dutie which wee owe vnto him. His grace shining vnto vs when wee were in darkenesse and shadow of death, requireth at our hands that wee should no more doe the workes of darkenesse, but that we should now walke as it becommeth children of the light, prouing what is acceptable vnto the Lord, and by more then ordinary diligence and circumspection, redeeming our lost time, which we haue mispent in the seruice of sinne and Satan. The great worke of Redemption also wrought by Christ, whereby he hath saued and deliuered vs out of that miserable bondage of sinne and Satan, and purchased chased vs vnto himselfe, as his owne peculiar people, should make vs zealous of good workes, and in thankfulness for so great a benefit, most careful to serue our Lord and Redeemer, in holinesse and righteousness all the daies of our liues; and seeing he hath reconciled vs vnto God his Father, by paying for our ransome, not siluer or gold, or any corruptible thing, but that precious price of himselfe, and his blood shed for our finnes, that so he might present vs holy, unblameable and unreprouable in his sight; let not vs vngratefully frustrate his end, by defying our selues with sinne, but let vs offer our bodies and soules a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable vnto God, which is our reasonable seruice, as the Apostle exhorteth. He hath incorporated vs into his owne body, and so made vs partakers of himselfe and all his benefits, the sonnes of God by adoption and grace, and coheires with him in glory and happinesse, and therefore let vs bring forth fruits worthy so holy and happie a communion, and in all things submit our selues to be ruled and gouerned by so gracious and good an Head. The Holy Ghost also hath applied vnto vs by his vertue and efficacie Christs merits and obedience; and though heauen, and the heauens of heauens are not sufficient to containe him, nor the infinitenesse of his Glory and Maiesty; yet he is content to dwell with vs, yea in vs, as in his Temples: and therefore let vs not prophane that which he hath sanctified with his presence, and so vex and grieve this Holy Spirit, but labour to preferue our bodies and soules in purity and honour, that being fit for his habitation, he may dwell in vs with pleasure and delight.

Secondly, Gods manifold and rich mercies should moue vs in thankfulness to glorifie him, who hath beene so good and gracious vnto vs, which is the maine end why the Lord hath bestowed all his blessings and benefits vpon vs. For therefore he hath created vs, that we should glorifie him by our seruice; and for this end he hath redeemed vs, that we should worship and serue him in holinesse and righteousness, and that being no longer our owne, but his, wee should (as the Apostle exhorteth vs) glorifie him in our soules and bodies. Therefore hath he called vs to be a chosen generation, a Royall Priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people, that we should shew forth the prayes of him, who hath called vs out of darkenesse into his maruailous light. And this is the end why the Apostle prayeth so earnestly for the Thessalonians, that he would count them worthy of their calling, and fulfill in them all the good pleasure of his goodnesse, and the worke of Faith and power; to wit, that the name of the Lord Iesus Christ might be glorified in them, and they in him. Now we thus glorifie God, not by adding any thing to his glory, but as we are instruments of manifesting it; or giue occasion vnto others of glorifying him. And thus wee glorifie him in our regeneration and New birth, when as his infinite wisdom, power and goodnesse doe more wonderfully shine to his glorie, in that maruailous change of our nature from death to life, from sinnefull vncleannesse, to purity and holinesse; and of our state from the deepest misery, to the highest happinesse, then in our first creation. Thus also we glorifie him by our fruits of new obedience, according to that of our Sauour, Hereby is your

Tit. 2. 14.

Luk. 1. 74, 75.

1. Pet. 1. 18.
Col. 1. 21, 22.

Rom. 12. 1.

1. King. 8. 27.

1. Cor. 6. 19.

§. Sect. 2.

The 3. reason taken from that desire which should be in vs to glorifie God.

Luk. 1. 74.
1. Cor. 6. 20.

1. Pet. 1. 9.

2. Thes. 1. 11, 12

Job. 15. 8.

Leuit. 10. 2.

Matth. 5. 16.

1. Pet. 2. 12.

1. Sam. 2. 30.

§. Sect. 3.

The third reason taken from the will of God, that we should thus serue him.

1. The. 4. 3.

2. Pet. 3. 9.

Matth. 26. 39.

Iob. 4. 34.

a Eph. 4. 23, 24.

b 5. 14, 15.

c 2. Cor. 5. 17.

d Rom. 12. 2.

e 13. 14.

f 1. Cor. 15. 34.

g Col. 3. 13.

h 2. Tim. 2. 22.

i Heb. 12. 1.

your heavenly Father glorified, if you bring much fruit. Seeing we make it manifest vnto the world, that the God whom we serue, is himselfe holy, pure, and iust, seeing he is so much delighted in the purity, holinesse and righteousnesse of his seruants, and cannot indure sinne and wickednesse in those that draw neere vnto him. And this argument our Sauour vseth to perswade vs vnto an holy conuersation; Let your light (saith he) so shine before men, that seeing your good workes, they may glorifie your Father which is in heauen. And the Apostle Peter vseth the same reason: Haue your conuersation honest among the Gentiles, that where as they speake against you as euill doers, they may by your good workes which they shall behold, glorifie God in the day of visitation. Finally, wee glorifie him by our godly liues, when as by our outward seruice, wee approve and testifie, that inwardly we loue, feare, reuerence, and depend vpon him, as being omniscient, who taketh notice of our workes, omnipotent and al-sufficient to reward our wel-doing, and of infallible truth in all his promises, made vnto all those that feare and serue him. Now what stronger motiue can there be to perswade vs vnto all the duties of a godly life, then to consider, that God, infinite in Glory and Majesty, doth vouchsafe vnto vs this honour to make vs, who are so base and contemptible, instruments of his glory, and that not because he needeth our helpe, but that he may take occasion hereby to glorifie vs, and to crowne our workes with glory and happinesse?

Finally, it may be an effectuell reason to moue vs, to imbrace holinesse, and to bring forth the fruites of it in a godly life, because it is the will of God, that we should so doe, according to that of the Apostle, This is the will of God, euen your sanctification. For the will of God is the perfect rule of all Iustice and goodnesse, according to which we must frame all our actions, which that we may fulfill, we must vtterly renounce our selues and our owne pleasure, saying with our Sauour, Not my will, but thine be done. & with him esteeming it our meat & drinke, to doe the will of our heavenly Father. And this is that we daily aske in the Lords Prayer, that the will of God may be done in earth as it is heauen; that is, that we may obey it with that speed and diligence, cheerefulnesse and delight, as the holy Angels. And therefore vnlesse wee pray in hypocrisie, we must labour and indeuour, that wee may in our practice attaine vnto that, which wee craue at Gods hands in our daily prayers. Now that it is the will of God, that we should serue him in keeping his Law, and performing all the holy duties of a godly life required in it, it is cleere and euident by his Word, wherein he hath reuealed his will, and by innumerable precepts and exhortations, by which we are pressed and perswaded to sanctification and new obedience. So the Apostle exhorteth vs as Gods Ambassadour, to be renued in the spirit of our mindes, and to put on the new man which after God is created in righteousness and true holinesse. And againe; if any man be in Christ, let him be a new creature. And be not conformed to the world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mindes, that ye may proue what is that good, acceptable and perfect will of God. Awake to righteousness and sinne not; Fly also yonibfull lusts; but follow Righteousnesse, Faith, Charity, Peare, &c. Thus the

the Lord exhorteth by the Prophet Esay: † Cease to doe euill, learne to do well, seeke iudgement, relieue the oppressed, &c. And finally, the Wiseman after a long discourse concludeth with this, as the summe of all which either he could teach, or any other, Feare God and keepe his Commandement, for this is the whole duty of man. And therefore seeing the Lord, who hath absolute authority ouer vs, and full right vnto vs, doth in these and innumerable other places command and exhort vs to performe the duties of holinesse and righteousness, and thereby to serue him in the whole course of our liues, who is our Creator, Preseruer, & Redeemer, we must carefully indeuour to yeeld our obedience, ylesse we would rather shew our selues stubbornely rebellious, and enemies both to his glory and our owne saluation. And that we may be encouraged to serue God in all Christian duties with more diligence and cheerefulnesse, let vs remember that if we doe our best indeuour, we and our seruice shall be accepted, though it be full of imperfections and stained with many corruptions. For he doth not deale with vs as a seuerer Iudge according to the rigour of the Law, but like a gracious Father, he passeth by our infirmities, and accepteth the will for the worke. And though nothing as it is stained and imperfect, can be pleasing vnto God, whose exact Iustice and pure eye can indure no blemish; yet the duties which we performe vnto him, respectiue-ly doe please him, and moue him also to delight in vs. For they please him not as they are tainted with the corruption of our will, but as by them we doe his will, who hath commanded vs to doe them. Not as they are done by vs who are defiled with sinne, for how can any thing cleane, come out of vs that are vncleane? But as they are done in Christ, in whom he is well pleased, and fruits of this Vine which we beare, being ingrafted in him by a true and liuely faith. Not as they are imperfect and stained, but as their imperfections are couered with Christs perfect righteousness, and their corruption washed away by his blood. Not as they are done by vs, but as they are the fruits and effects of his owne holy Spirit, working in, and by vs. They doe not please him in their owne worth, but because our persons are accepted and please him, being iustified by faith in Iesus Christ, reconciled vnto him, and children by adoption and grace, whose poore indeuours are accepted of our gracious Father for perfect obedience; and the rather, because howsoeuer we faile through weaknesse and infirmities, yet the mayne end which we propound in them vnto our selues is, that we may, by performing our duty, glorify our heauenly Father; and because, though our workes be vnperfect, yet they are done with perfect hearts, that is, in vprightnesse and sincerity, which maketh vs doe the best we can, and to bewaile our imperfections, because wee can doe no better. Finally, they please God, not that hee hath any pleasure in vnrighteousnesse or imperfect righteousness, but because we doing them out of loue and filial obedience, he also loueth vs, & so is well pleased with our workes of piety & righteousness, because they tend to our good, to whom in his loue he wilsheth so well, as being the way which will bring vs vnto eternall life and happinesse.

Esa. 1. 16, 17.
Eccle. 12. 13.
Matth. 23. 37.

Mal. 3. 17.
2. Cor. 5. 12.

Job. 14. 4.
Matth. 3. 17.
† 17. 5.

§. Sect. 4.

The fourth reason is, that we may adorne the Gospell of God which we professe. Deut. 4. 6, 7, 8.

1. Tim. 6. 1.
Tit. 2. 5.

Tit. 2. 10.

2. Tim. 3. 5.

Tit. 1. 16.

2. Sam. 12. 14.

§. Sect. 5.

The 1. reason, that we may auoid giuing of offence. 1. Cor. 10. 32.

2. Pet. 2. 7, 8.

Matth. 18. 7.

Acts 24. 16.

The second reason.

The last motiue respecting our duty towards God, which may perswade vs to serue him by a godly life, is, that hereby we may adorne the Gospell of God, and of Iesus Christ which we professe; and cause it to bee well spoken of by all that see the fruits of it in our vnblameable and holy conuersation. And this argument the Lord vseth to perswade his people to obserue his Commandements, because hereby they should not onely get honour vnto themselues amongst the Nations, but moue them likewise to speake well of his Lawes and statutes, when as they should see the fruits of them in their obedience. And thus the Apostle perswadeth Christians in diuers callings to performe their duties in them, that they might not cause the Word of God to be blasphemed; seeing it is the common custome of worldly and wicked men, to lay the faults of Professours vpon their profession, and to impute their scandalous sinnes, to their much going to Church and hearing of the Word, as though their profession and hearing were the cause of their wicked and vnlawfull courses, whereas in truth, they would (if they abused them not) bee as strong cables to draw them from all impiety and vnrighteous dealing. And contrariwise, he would haue them to liue in an holy conuersation, that they might adorne the doctrine of God our Sauour in all things. For men are apt to speake of the Religion and truth which wee professe, either in the better or worse part, according to the fruits which we bring forth of it in our liues; thinking our Religion to bee pure and good, if we approue our selues to bee so, by our holy and Christian practice and conuersation; but contrariwise, if (like those of whom the Apostle speaketh) wee haue onely a forme of Godlinesse, and in our liues deny the power thereof, or professe that we know God, but in our workes disclaime him, being abominable and disobedient, and vnto euery good worke reprobate; wee shall open their mouthes, not onely against vs, but also against all Professours of Gods true Religion, yea euen against the Religion and Doctrine of truth it selfe which we professe. For if euer David himselfe fall into soule sinnes, it will not onely tend to his owne dishonour, but also giue occasion to the enemies of the Lord to blaspheme, as though he were a patrone or approuer of such crimes.

And so much of those reasons which respect God. The second sort respect our neighbours, from whom also wee may draw diuers arguments to perswade vs to an holy conuersation. And first, because we shall, being vnblameable, auoid giuing vnto them any iust offence, either by laying stumbling blockes in their way, whereby they should be hindred from the professing of the true Religion, when as they are able to take exceptions to the liues of Professours; or if they bee religious, bee grieued in their righteous soules, when they see our liues full of blots and blemishes; or make the weake fall by our ill example. The which we must carefully auoid, because our Sauour pronounceth a fearefull woe against those by whom such offences come; and contrariwise, labour with the Apostle, to exercise our selues daily in this, that wee may haue alwaies a conscience void of offence towards God and towards men. Secondly, we may be moued to the practice of of al holy duties of a godly life, that we may gaine those that are without, to Christ, & to imbrace that true Religion which we professe. For if we haue our conuersation honest among the Gentiles, they seeing our good works, will glorifie God in the day of their visitation. And this argument the Apostle Peter vseth to perswade wiues vnto their dutie, that they which obeyed not the Word, might without the Word be won with their Christiana conuersation. The which so much preuailed with the Apostle Paul, that he vtterly denied himselfe and his owne will, and became all things to all men, that he might gaine some to Christ, and was content to please all men in all things, not seeking his owne profit, but the profit of many, that they might be saved. And how much more then should we with all willingnesse walke in such a course of holinesse and righteousnesse, which in gayning others, will profit our selues, and not onely saue them by gayning them to Christ, through our good example, but assure our selues also of our saluation: Finally, wee may be perswaded vnto all holy and Christian duties, because they so much tend to the good and profit of our brethren, who are in the same holy communion with vs.

First, because by the light of our godly liues, we shall moue them, together with vs, to glorifie our heavenly Father, who is the Author and Fountaine of all good things which they see in vs. Secondly, because we shall edifie them by our good example, and moue them to imitate those good things they shall see in vs, and by our communion and fellowship with them (like kindled coales on the same heape) wee shall inflame their zeale, and by an holy emulation make them strive to match vs in their Christian duties, as the Apostle sheweth in the example of the Corinthians, whose zeale in Christian beneficence, had (as hee saith) prouoked many. And thus hee perswadeth Timothy to be an example vnto beleeuers, in word, in conuersation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in puritie: And exhorteth vs all to consider one another, to prouoke vnto loue and to good workes. To which purpose nothing can bee more effectuell then good examples, when as we see those duties constantly performed by our brethren with much comfort and delight, which wee feared as tedious, troublesome and almost impossible, and in this regard durst not vndertake them. Finally, wee shall doe good to our brethren euē in the duties themselues, both of piety, by teaching, admonishing, exhorting, comforting, and counselling them that neede our helpe; and also of mercy, by feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, visiting the sicke, and such like workes of Christian charity, whereby wee minister vnto their necessities.

1. Pet. 2. 12.

1. Pet. 3. 1.

1. Cor. 9. 19, 22.

2. Thes. 10. 33.

The third reason.

Math. 5. 16.

2. Cor. 9. 2.

1. Tim. 4. 12.

Heb. 10. 24.

CAP. XL.

*Of such reasons moouing vs to the duties of a godly life
as respect our selues.*

6. Sect. 1.

The first reason taken from that dignity vnto which God hath called vs.

Eph. 4. 1.

Eph. 5. 8, 15, 16.
1. Cor. 5. 6, 7, 8
Col. 1. 10.

Rom. 13. 2.
Tit. 2. 14.

Phil. 3. 20.
Col. 3. 1, 3.

Rom. 6. 18.

1. Pet. 2. 9.

1. Pet. 2. 5.

Rom. 9. 15, 16.

1. Pet. 1. 17.

IN respect of our selues, there are also many effectual arguments and reasons, which may mooue and perswade vs vnto all duties of a godly life. As first, that high and heavenly dignity, vnto which, God of his free grace and goodnesse hath called vs, out of a most miserable and wretched condition, which should effectually mooue vs to walke worthy this high and excellent calling, as the Apostle exhorteth vs. For wee were in darkenesse and in the shaddow of death, but the Lord hath called vs into a marvellous light, revealing cleerely vnto vs the knowledge of himselfe and his will, the great mystery of saluation by Iesus Christ, and the meanes whereby we may be made partakers of the fruits and benefits of it; in which respect it becommeth vs to walke as children of light, circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the time, because the dayes are euill. He hath called and separated vs from the world, which lieth stil dead in sinne, and hath made vs his owne peculiar people, who are made partakers of all the priuiledges of his Kingdome, to the end that we should no longer fashion our selues to the world, but that we should walke worthy of God, who hath called vs vnto his Kingdome and glory, and serue him as it becommeth his subiects, being zealous of good workes; and be no more earthly-minded, but haue our conuersation in heauen, whereof wee are Citizens, and minde those things which are aboue. He hath iustified vs, and forgien vs all our finnes, that being freed from sinne, we should become seruants of righteousness. Hee hath made vs a chosen generation, a royall Priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people, to the end we should behaue our selues as becommeth those who are thus dignified, and that wee should shew forth the praises of him, who hath called vs out of darkenesse into this marvellous light, as the Apostle Peter teacheth vs. He hath made vs liuing stones, that wee might adorne the spirituall building of his House and Church; and an holy Priesthood, to offer up spirituall sacrifices, acceptable vnto God by Iesus Christ. Yea, he hath made vs Temples of the holy Ghost, which it becommeth to bee purged from all pollution of sinne, which is odious vnto him, and to be decked and adorned with holinesse and righteousness, wherein hee is chiefly delighted, whereas naturally we were like cages of vncleane birds, and the lothsome habitations of sinne and Satan. And therefore we must beautifie our selues with these ornaments which so much please him, and keepe our selues vndefiled from the filth of sinne, which he hateth and abhorreth, lest leauing vs vnto Satan, as more fit for his dwelling, wee become worse then Baals temple, which was turned into a common draught house, and receptacle of all pollution. Finally, he hath called vs who were the children of wrath, and bond slaues of sinne and Satan, vnto the glorious liberty of the Sonnes of God, and hath made vs his owne children by adoption and grace, and co-heires with Christ in heavenly happinesse, and and therefore wee must carry our selues in holinesse of conversation, as it becommeth children of such an holy Father. For let vs assure our selues, that the Lord, who hath called vs to these great and heavenly priuiledges, will attaine vnto his end, and make those fit to receive them, vpon whom hee bestoweth them. Neither will he, who hath commanded vs not to cast holy things to dogges, nor pearles before swine, commit this error himselfe, by giuing his choyce and best gifts vnto Dogges and Swine, who neglect the wayes of holinesse and righteousness, returning to their vomit, and to wallow themselves in the mire of sinne.

Mt. 7. 6.

2. Pet. 2. 20, 21.

§. Self. 2.

The second reason is, because hereby we are assured that we shall prosper in all our wayes. Psalm. 1. 3. 3. Esa. 3. 10.

Psalm. 37. 6, 17. 19. 10. 34. 9. 10.

Psalm. 34. 19.

Psalm. 37. 37. Ver. 35. 36.

Eccles. 8. 22, 23.

§. Self. 3.

The third reason, because without this indeuour all outward exercises are vaine,

Secondly, if wee set our selues to serue God in the duties of holinesse and righteousness, we shall be heereby assured, that we shall prosper in our wayes, and that whatsoever troubles we endure for the time, yet it shall goe well with vs in the latter end. For he that delighteth in the Law of the Lord, shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of waters, which bringeth forth his fruit in his season, his leafe also shall not wither, and whatsoever hee doeth shall prosper. So the Lord biddeth the Prophet to say to the righteous, that it shall be well with them, for they shall eat the fruit of their doings; and to denounce a woe to the wicked, for it shall be ill with him, for the reward of his hands shall be given him. Innumerable places might be alleadged to this purpose out of the Scriptures, and especially the Booke of the Psalmes, which set forth the happinesse of those in all estates and conditions, who feare and serue the Lord, seeing he watcheth ouer them, vpholdeth them when they are ready to fall, preserveth them from danger, protecteth them from all enemies, deliuereth them out of all their troubles, prouideth and giueth them all that is good, feedeth them in the dayes of famine, and supplyeth plentifully whatsoever is wanting either to their soules or bodies. So that if we put on this breastplate of righteousness, that is, bring forth the fruits of holinesse and righteousness, with an vpright heart and good conscience, it will be armour of proofe, to preserue vs against the incounters of all euill. And we shall be secured by it against all dangers, according to that of Salomon, He that walketh uprightly, walketh surely: so that though they fall into many troubles, yet they shall not perishe in them, because the Lord deliuereth them out of all; though their beginnings may be turmoyled with many crosses, yet their end is peace, as the Psalmist speaketh. And though the wicked may exceed them in worldly and momentary prosperity, yet when they are so rooted out that their place can no more be found, the righteous after many stormes, shall safely arrive in the Haven of their hopes. According to that of Salomon, I though a sinner doe euill an hundred times, and his dayes bee prolonged; yet surely I know it shall be well with them that feare God, which feare before him. But it shall not be well with the wicked, neither shall he prolong his dayes, which are as a shadow, because he feareth not before God.

The third reason may be this, that without this study and indeuour to serue the Lord in the duties of a godly life, all outward exercises of Religion are vaine and vprofitable, as the hearing and reading of the Word, the receiuing of the Sacraments, Prayer, Fasting, profession of Religion, and the rest, seeing they cannot please God, yea, are odious vnto him; nor

Esa. 11, 13,
13, 14.

Esa. 66. 3:

Ier. 6. 30. & 7.
22, 23.

Esa. 8. 4, 5.

Pro. 15. 8.

Psal. 66. 18.

Psal. 34. 17, 18.

§. Sect. 4.

The fourth
reason, taken from the confi-deration of our lost time before our con-uersion.

profit vs, nor we take profit by them. Thus the Lord professeth, that hee abhorred their new Moones and solemne feasts, their Sacrifices and Oblations, because they neglected the workes of righteousness, and lived in their finnes. That he who killed an Ox, was as he that slew a man; he that sacrificed a Lambe, as if hee had offered a Dogs head, &c. because their liues were not reformed, but their sinnes delighted in their abominations. So when the people feared Gods Law, and thought to haue pleased him with Oblations, and (as it were) to haue stopp'd his mouth with bribes, the Lord reiecketh their seruice as vaine and unprofitable. To what purpose (saith hee) commeth there to me incense from Sheba? and the sweet cane from a farre Country? your offerings are not acceptable, nor your sacrifices sweet unto me. Thus the Lord reiecketh their solemne feasts, because they were not ioyned with the workes of Iustice and mercy. So Salomon telleth vs, that the sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to the Lord; but the prayer of the upright is his delight. And Dauid saith, that if he did regard wickednesse in his heart, the Lord would not heare him. Whereas in other places hee telleth vs, that the righteous cry, and the Lord heareth them; and deliuereth them out of all their troubles.

The fourth argument may be taken from the consideration of our lost time, which we haue mispent before our conuersion, whilest we lived in ignorance, and in the state of Infidelity, when as we wholly neglected all duties of Gods seruice, and the meanes which might haue enriched us with all saving graces, and furthered the assurance of our saluation; and haue spent all our strength in pursuing of worldly vanities, and in un-fruitfull workes of darkenesse, to the great dishonour of our good God, the wounding of our consciences, and the burthening and defiling of our soules with the guilt and corruption of sinne. The which should bee a powerfull reason, after that we are effectually called, to make vs more zealous of Gods seruice, that we may in the remainder of our liues, as much glorifie him by our holy conuersation, as wee haue before dishonoured him by our sinfull liues, and that we may by our extraordinary industry and diligence, attaine vnto the treasures of his spirituall graces, whereby we may be enabled to trauaile in the wayes of godlinesse with so much the greater speed, by how much we haue beene more late in setting forth in our spirituall Iourney, and more sluggish and slothfull in trauailing in this way which leadeth vs to our heavenly Countrey. And as those who haue mis-spent their youth in riotous liuing, neglected all meanes of thriving, and wasted their states by prodigall courses, when they come to riper age, and see their folly, being beaten by their owne experience, doe not onely desist from their former vaine and prodigal courses, but are sorry and ashamed of them, and set themselves with so much the more care and diligence to recouer and repaire their decayed estates, and with the greater earnestnesse vse all good meanes of thriving. And as those who being to trauaile about important businesse, neerely concerning them in their life and state, if they haue ouerslept themselves in the morning, or trifled out their time, about things of no worth, when they see their error and folly, doe make more haste in their way all the day following, that they may not be benighted, and so comming short of their Iourney, be frustrated of their

their hopes: so must we doe in this case, labouring with so much more earnestnesse, after the spirituall riches of Gods grace, and the assurance of our heavenly hopes, by how much the longer wee have neglected this spirituall thirst, and travelling so much more speedily in the wayes of godlinesse, by how much the longer we haue deferred our journey, and haue loytered by the way, fearing (as the Apostle speaketh) lest a promise being left vs of entering into Gods Rest, we should come short of it: for want of care and diligence. And this argument the Apostle vseth, that seeing wee haue formerly liued in darknesse, and haue spent our time in sleepe and sluggishnesse, we should now, when we are awaked, not as soles, but as wise, redeeming the time, because the dayes are euill. And seeing we haue been scandalous in our sinfull courses, hindring others from the profession and practice of godlinesse by our ill example, therefore as hee exhorteth, we must now make it our wisdom to be without spot, redeeming the time, by a more earnest indouour in seeking their conversion, by our holy communication and gracefull speeches, and by shining before them in the light of Godlinesse that we may moue them to glorifie our heavenly Father. So, perswading the Romans to sanctification and holinesse of life, he putteth them in mind of their former condition, and the little fruit which they receiued by it, that it might bee as a spur in their sides, to hasten their speed in the Christian race. For as ye haue (saith he) yeelded your members seruants to uncleannesse and to iniquity, vnto iniquity (hauiug no other fruit of sinning but sinne) now ye haue yeelded your members seruants to righteousness, vnto holinesse, &c. What fruit had ye then in those things, whereof ye are now ashamed? for the end of those things is death. But now being made free from sinne, and become seruants to God, ye haue your fruit vnto holinesse, and the end euerlasting life. And thus the Apostle Peter exhorteth vs, that we should no longer live the rest of our time in the flesh, to the lusts of men, but to the will of God; because the time past of our life may suffice, to haue wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciuiousnesse, and in all wicked and sinfull lusts.

Heb. 4. 1.

Ephes. 5. 8, 14,
15, 16.

Col. 4. 5.

Rom. 6. 19, 21, 22.

1. Pet. 4. 23.

CAP. XLII.

Other reasons taken from our owne profit, and the manifold benefits of a godly life.

BVt among all other arguments which respect our selues, none are more effectuell to preuaile with vs, then those which are drawne from our owne profit, seeing as the Psalmist speaketh, every man is ready to inquire, who will shew them any good. And therefore if I shall plainly shew that godlinesse is the greatest gaine, and nothing in the world so profitable and beneficiall to all vses and purposes, as the practice of holy and righteous duties, belonging to a Christian life, I hope it will be effectuell to perswade all, who wel waigh and consider the inestimable gaine and profit which they shall assuredly reape vnto themselves, that constantly goe on in the wayes of godlinesse, to spend their time and chiefe strength and

6. Sect. 1.

That godlines is the chiefe gaine.

Psal. 4. 6.

1. Tim. 6. 6.

inducours in that, whereby they may receive so great advantage; and neglect the pleasures of sinne, and the eager pursuit of worldly vanities, which profit not, as bringing in comparison, no true good, sound comfort, or solid contentment for the present; and when they bee taken from vs, or we from them (one of which must needs happen, and we know how soone) leave nothing behind them, but woe and misery. Doe not therefore (I beseech thee Christian Reader) as thou tendrest the everlasting saluation of thy precious soule, O doe not suffer thine eyes to bee blinded and dazeld with the sudden flashes of worldly vanities, which like lightening passe swiftly away, and leave nothing behind but blacke darknesse, so as thou canst not discern the beauty and brightnesse of spiritual graces and heavenly excellencies. Doe not content thy selfe with a slight and superficial view of these following reasons, which perswade thee for thine owne good, vnto the duties of a godly life, nor to haue read them ouer with a curious eye, rather to see what may bee said, then with a purpose to make vse of them for thy practice of holinesse, if thou be thorowly conuincted by euidence of truth shining in them: but ponder them seriously with thy selfe, and if thou finde them to beare any waight, be perswaded by them to neglect no longer thine owne good, nor to deferre and put off the seruing of God in the duties of a godly life, but seeke first his Kingdome and righteousness; when as thou shalt plainly discern, that his glory, and thy good, are through his mercy so matched together, that thou canst not seeke the one, but thou shalt assuredly finde the other.

Deut. 6. 24.

§. Sect. 2.

That by leading of a godly life, we are assured of freedom from all our sins, both in respect of their guilt, punishment, and corruption.

Now the good things which accompany the duties of a godly life, are either the benefits, which as fruits and effects, attend vpon it; or those speciall and rich priuiledges, wherewith God of his free mercy is pleased to crowne his owne graces, and to reward, as with rich wages, that poore seruice which we performe vnto him. The benefits which follow a godly life, are either priuative, consisting in our freedome from euill; or positive, in the fruition of good, and both of them either temporall or eternall. The priuative benefits of this life are many, according to the multitude of euils vnto which it is liable, both in respect of sinne and punishment, from which, in the greatest and worst part, we are by the benefit of a godly life freed and deliuered. For first, if wee leade a godly life, it will be a meanes to assure vs of our freedome from the guilt of all our sinnes, by sole vertue of Christs death and blood-shed, applyed vnto vs by faith, both in regard that these holy duties of a godly life are the vndoubted fruits of a liuely faith, approuing it to bee sincere and vnfaigned; and as fruits of our Sanctification, assuring vs, that the same vertue of Christs death and Resurrection, which wee finde effectuell for the mortifying of our sinnes, and our spirituall quickening vnto holinesse and newnesse of life, hath been already alike effectuell vnto vs, for the freeing of vs from the guilt of sinne in our Iustification, of which the other are but fruits and effects. And secondly, wee shall hereby be freed, in the greatest part, from our fleshly corruption, and innumerable actuall sinnes; seeing those that are carefull to please God in the duties of a godly life, doe bend their whole force in the vse of all good meanes, for the subduing of their carnall all lusts, that though they dwell, yet they may not rule and raigne in them, resist, as much as in them lyeth, all the tentations of their spirituall enemies, alluring and drawing them into sinne, and keepe a conscionable and diligent watch over themselves, that they may not wittingly and willingly commit any thing which Gods Law hath forbidden and condemned. Whereof it cometh to passe, that howsoever they are sometime (and it may be not seldome) overtaken through humane frailty and infirmity, and so, contrary to their purpose and resolution, are led captiue into sinne, yet are they, by this care and circumspection, preserved from falling into any knowne transgression, for the most part, and from hainous and grievous sinnes, which wound and waste the conscience, and like the hectic feuer, consume the graces of God (as it were) the vitall spirits, which preserve the spirituall life; into which, worldly and carnall men, who neglect the duties of a Godly life, doe ordinarily fall, and make them (as it were) their ordinary trade. Or if through violence of tentation, and neglect of keeping their watch, they have been surpris'd vpon a sudden, and overtaken of such sinnes, yet having this care to please God in the duties of a godly life, this will but very rarely happen; and when it doth, yet they doe not like wicked men, multiply their transgressions, by committing often the same hainous sinne; nor impenitently continue in it from day to day, and yeere to yeere, but being through frailty false, they doe not lye still, but labour to come out of it by vnfeined repentance. Now how inestimable this benefit is, which accompanyeth a godly life, whereby, in the greatest part, we get victory over our corruptions, by which, others are conquered, and as slaues held captiue, and preserved from falling into innumerable, and those the most hainous sinnes; it will easily appeare, if we consider the greatnesse of the euill from which we are hereby deliuered, namely, from sinne, which, aboue all things in the world is most odious vnto God, and most pernicious vnto our soules and bodies, as being the root and fountaine of all those mischiefs and miseries, vnto which men are lyable, both in this life, and the life to come.

Psal. 119. 9, 10, 11.

The which also may be a second motiue to perswade vs vnto a godly life, in that being thereby in the greatest part freed from our sinnes in respect of their corruption and sinfull acts, and wholly in assurance of faith from the guilt of them, by vertue of Christs death and obedience applyed vnto vs, we doe also hereby escape the punishments which are due vnto them. Of both which the saying of Salomon is verified; The feare of the Lord tendeth to life, and he that hath it shall abide satisfied; he shall not be visited with euill; to wit, either of sinne and punishment. And againe, The feare of the Lord is a fountaine of life, to make vs depart from the snares of death. For first, the faithfull which walke in the waies of holinesse and righteousness, are wholly freed by the death and sufferings of Christ, from all punishments properly so called, which are inflicted to satisfie Gods Iustice; seeing Christ hath made full satisfaction for all their sinnes; and therefore as it would not stand with the Iustice of God, to let them goe vnpunished, so neither that they should be twice punished, once in our surety, and the second time in our selues, as I haue proved at large in another place. Whereas those who make no conscience of their wayes, and neglect the duties

6. Sect. 3.

That by leading a godly life, we are freed from the punishment of our sinnes.
Prov. 19. 23.

Prov. 14. 27.

Christian Warfare, the third part.

Heb. 6. 6, 7, 8.

1. Cor. 11. 32.

1er. 31. 3, 31, 33.

34.

2. Sam. 7. 14.

Psal. 89. 31, 32.

Heb. 12. 6.

Apo. 3. 19.

1. Cor. 11. 31.

32, 33.

Eccl. 14. 13.

Pro. 22. 3.

Psal. 34. 17.

Heb. 12. 11.

duties of a godly life, being out of Christ, doe beare the punishment of their sinnes themselves, both in this world and the world to come. Secondly, by leading of a godly life, they also escape many temporary iudgements, and sharpe afflictions, whereby God, like a gracious and wise Father, doth correct his children, when they neglect their dutie, and sinne against him, which differ nothing from the punishments that are in this life inflicted vpon the wicked, in their manner, and oftentimes very little in the quantiry and sharpnesse of the stripes, but onely in the causes from which they proceed, which is the loue of a gracious Father towards the one, and the anger of a iust and seuerer Iudge towards the other, & also their diuers ends; the chastizements of the Faithfull, being intended for their good and amendment, that they may not, being iudged, be condemned with the world; but the punishments of the wicked, for the satisfying of Gods Iustice, by inflicting on them deserued punishments. But howsoever, the sinnes of the Faithfull cannot moue the Lord to reiect them, or cause his loue to depart from them, seeing it is one branch of the couenant made in Christ, that he will loue them with an euertlasting loue, and pardon all their sinnes; yet they doe moue him to correct them with the rod of men, and the stripes of the children of men; for he chastizeth every sonne whom he loueth and receiueth, that being pulled out of their sinnes by strong hand, which they would not flee and forsake out of meere loue, they may, by their vnfeined repentance and amendment, escape eternall condemnation; as wee see in the example of Dauid, the Corinthians and many others. The which his iust, yet gracious seuerity, there is no possible meanes to escape, no not though Noah, Daniel and Iob should intercede for vs, or any other who are most highly in his fauour, vnlesse we preuent these sharpe corrections, by leading a godly life, and fleeing from sinne, which is the cause of them; or stay Gods hand, by turning from our sinnes by vnfeined repentance. Which course if wee take, wee shall be freed not onely from eternall punishments, but also from temporary afflictions, which our sinnes doe bring vpon vs, vnlesse it be such as the Lord inflicteth for the triall of his graces in vs, that being approued, they may be crowned with an answerable measure of ioy and heauenly happinesse. According to that of Salomon; A prudent man foreseeeth the euill, and hideth himselfe; but the simple passe on, and are punished. Or if by our sins we haue brought them vpon vs, yet repenting of them, and returning into the waies of righteoufnesse, we shall, when we crie vnto God, obtaine helpe and deliuerance, according to that of the Psalmist; The righteous crie, and the Lord heareth, and deliuereth them out of all their troubles. Seeing then no chastening for the present seemeth ioyous, but grievous, what a strong motiue should this be, to perswade vs to forsake all our sinnes, and to serue the Lord in the duties of a godly life, seeing wee haue hereby this singular benefit, of being freed from temporary afflictions, which are so sharpe and bitter vnto vs? A third benefit which will redound vnto vs by leading of a godly life, is, that being vnblameable, & giuing vnto none any iust cause of offence, we shall hereby stop the mouthes of wicked men, men, so as they shall not be able to reproch vs, nor blemish our good name by their calumnies & slanders, with any shadow or colour of truth. And this was a strong reason to moue the Apostle to walke in a godly & vnblameable life, that by exercising himself herein, he might haue alwaies a conscience voyd of offence towards God & towards men. And this argument he vseth, to perswade Titus to shew himselfe in all things a patterne of good workes, that he who was of the contrary part might be ashamed, hauing no euill thing to say of him. Thus the Apostle Peter exhorteth vs to sanctifie the Lord in our hearts, and to haue a good conscience in all things, that whereas wicked men speake euill of vs, as of euill doers, they may be ashamed, that falsely accuse our good conuersation in Christ. And perswadeth the Faithfull to abstaine from fleshly lusts, and to haue their conuersation honest among the Gentiles, that whereas they spake euill of them, as of euill doers, they might by their good workes which they should behold, glorifie God in the day of visitation. And thus he mouerh subiects to shew all obedience to Magistrates, because it is the will of God, that by wel-doing, they should put to silence the ignorance of foolish men. Or if wee cannot thus farre preuaile with them by our holy conuersation, in respect of their maliciousnesse, but that they will seeke to disgrace vs by their vniust slanders and reproches, yet may wee in the confidence, and peaceable cleerenesse of a good conscience, stand out against them as a brazen wall, beating backe their false calumnies vpon their owne heads, and like immouable rockes, returne their sorne and froth vpon themselues, when as all that heare them, shall condemne their malice and fals-hood; Yea, they shall by the, slanders but giue occasion vnto all men to speake of our innocencie, in which respect (as Iob speaketh) though they should write a booke against vs, wee might take it vpon our shoulders, and binde it as a crowne vnto vs; and that not onely a Crowne of Fame in this life, but of Glorie also in the life to come; according to that of our Saviour; Blessed are ye when men shall reuile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of euill against you falsely for my sake. Reioyce and bee exceeding glad, for great is your reward in Heauen. And that of the Apostle Peter: If yee be reproched for the Name of Christ, happie are yee, for the Spirit of Glorie, and of God resteth vpon you. Now what a strong reason this should bee, to moue vs to walke vnblameably in the duties of a Godly life, it may hereby appeare, if wee consider how precious and excellent a good name is, seeing as the Wise-man speaketh; A Good name is rather to be chosen then great Riches, and louing fauour rather then Silver and Gold. And is to be preferred before the most precious oymment, seeing it smelleth most sweetly, both to our selues and others which are neere and farre off.

A fourth benefit of a godly life is, that it much strengtheneth vs against the assaults of Satan, and so armeth vs against all his tentations, that they shall not be able to doe vs any hurt. For whereas those who liue in their sinnes, and neglect the duties of a godly life, doe giue vnto him all aduantage against them, and by leauing off the brest-plate of Righteousnesse, doe lie open to his poysonous darts; so as he

1. Pet. 2. 12, 13.
Tit. 2. 7, 8.

1. Pet. 3. 15, 16.

1. Pet. 2. 11, 12.

Vers. 15.

Iob 31. 35, 36.

Matth. 5. 11, 12.

1. Pet. 4. 14.

Pro. 22. 1.

Ecc. 7. 1.

6. Sect. 4.

That a godly life doth much strengthen vs against Satans tentations.

he may easily perswade them, that they are subiect to Gods wrath and the curse of the Law, seeing they continue in their sinnes : that they are not ingrafted into Christ, seeing they bring forth no fruits of holinesse and righteoufnesse ; that they are out of Gods fauour, seeing they haue no care to please him, by performing such duties as are acceptable in his sight ; and finally, that they are not the children of God, because they are nothing like him, nor reformed according to his image ; nor heires of heauenly happinesse, seeing they haue not purged themselues, as it becommeth those who haue this hope. Contrariwise, when we keepe this brestplate of Righteoufnesse fast buckled vnto vs, wee may without danger repell all his fiery darts, seeing we are assured that we are in Gods fauour, whilest wee labour in all things to please him ; that wee are in Christ, seeing without him we could doe nothing ; that we are Gods children, seeing we resemble him in holinesse and righteoufnesse, and labour after perfection, as he is perfect. That we are freed from the curse of the Law, and the guilt and punishment of all our sinnes, seeing we feele the vertue of Christs death effectually in vs, for the mortifying and subduing of our corruptions. And finally, that maugre all the malice of our spirituall enemies, we shall attaine vnto heauenly happinesse, seeing our mercifull God hath graciously promised, that he will reward our temporary seruice with this inestimable and eternall wages, and crowne his owne graces in vs, and the fruits which wee haue brought forth of them in the Christian duties of a godly life, with endlesse ioy and immortalitie.

Iob. 15.5.

6. Sect. 5.

That by a godly life we are prepared against the day of death.
Heb. 9.27.

Pro. 14.32.

Chap. 11.4.

Apoc. 14.13.

Psal. 116.15.
Phil. 1.21.23.
Auguſt. in
1. Epiſt. Ioan.

The fourth benefit of a godly life is, that thereby wee are continually prepared against the day of death, so that the manifold evils which accompany it cannot hurt vs, nor the dreadfull terrours thereof daunt and dismay vs. For howsoever it is appointed that all must die, and this sentence, like the lawes of the Medes and Persians, is irrevocable, yet to those that walke in the waies of godlinesse, the nature of death is quite changed, and the sting thereof taken away. For of the last and greatest evil, it is made vnto them, a preparatiue to the chiefest good ; of an enemy, it is become a friend ; of a Sargeant to arrest vs and imprison vs in hell, it is become a ioyfull messenger sent of God, to deliuer vs out of all worldly miseries, and to bring vs into the ioyes of heauen. In which regard the Wise man saith, that howsoever the wicked is driuen away in his wickednesse, yet the righteous hath hope in his death. And that riches profit not in the day of wrath, but righteoufnesse deliuereth from death, that is, from the sting of death, and all the evils that doe accompany it. And the Spirit of God pronounceth them Blessed, that die in the Lord ; for they rest from their labours, and their works follow them ; Namely, that they may be crowned with ioy and immortality. The which if it were well weighed, might iustly, not onely free the faithfull from the immoderate feare of death, but also make it appeare precious in their eyes, as it is in the sight of God, and moue them with the Apostle, to desire to be dissolued and to be with Christ, seeing that is best of all ; and (as one saith) not to die patiently, but to liue with patience, tience, and to die with ioy. For who reioyceth not, when after a wearisome pilgrimage, hee approacheth neere vnto his owne Country; when after a dangerous passage; wherein hee hath beene tossed and turmoiled with aduerse windes and tempestuous stormes; hee is ready to arriue safely in the long expected ha- uen; when after his dayes labour, hee commeth to receiue libe- rall wages; and when after a dangerous and doubtful fight, hauing conquered all his enemies, hee is to be presented by the holy An- gels before his Soueraigne King, that hee may receiue the Crowne of victory. And howsoeuer death hath many terrours which doe accompany it, yet to those that haue serued God in the duties of a godly life, they need not seeme terrible, seeing against euery blow they haue their ward, against euery poyson their soueraigne antidote. They must leaue the world; but they must goe to heauen; forgoe their riches, but for them enioy heavenly treasures; bee deprived of momentanie delights, but that they may attaine vnto e- uerlasting ioyes; lose the comfort of all their friends, but in lieu of it, shall haue the sweete society of the Saints and Angels, yea, the fruition of God himselfe, and his Christ and holy Spirit, whom to enioy, is to bee perfectly happy. Yea, but it is a grie- uous sight to behold our friends mourning for our departure: but this is recompenced with the hope of our happie meeting; and the present ioyes of our heavenly entertaynement, by the rest of our friends that are gone before vs. Yea, but death is a straight and paynesfull passage; but it bringeth vs to a spacious and glori- ous Palace. In our bodies wee are afflicted with many griefes of sicknesse; but these are eased with the inward peace of conscience, and comfort of the Spirit. Wee are in euery part of our bodies racked with paine; but they are onely the throwes, that goe before our heavenly birth, whereby we are borne to euerlasting and immor- tall glory. Our bodies must be buried and corrupt in the earth; but being sowne in corruption, they shall rise incorruptible, and our mortall shall put on immortality, our weaknesse, strength, and our balenesse, glory. Fi- nally, if liuing in Gods feare, wee dye in his fauour, wee may bee strongly armed against all the terrours of death, and expect it at all times with a ioyfull countenance.

Lastly, by leading of a godly life, wee may be assured, that wee shall bee freed from Iudgement, and condemnation in the world to come. For if we liue here in the feare of God, our sinnes shall not come into Iudgement, because they are already iudged in Christ, who hath satisfied Gods Iustice for them, and payed our debt to the vttermost farthing. If wee haue beene carefull here to play the good Stewards, and dayly keeping our reckonings straight, receiue our acquittance and discharge before wee sleepe, sealed with the blood of Christ, applied vnto vs by a liuely and renew- ed faith, wee shall haue nothing to account for at the Day of Iudge- ment. If wee haue beene faithfull and diligent in our Masters ser- uice, wee shall haue nothing to doe then, but to receiue with ioy

1. Cor. 15. 42, 43

§. Sect. 6.
That by leading of a godly life we are assured to be freed from iudgement & condemnation

Rom. 8.1.

Apoc. 20.6.

Heb. 10.31.

Matth. 12.33.

Job 9.23.

Psal. 143.2.

our reward and wages. If wee walke not after the flesh, but after the Spirit, wee are in Iesus Christ, and there is no condemnation due vnto vs; for hee was condemned, that wee might bee acquitted, and suffered the punishment of our sinnes, that Gods Iustice being satisfied, and wrath appeased, wee might bee freed from hell and death. If wee bee partakers of the first Resurrection, from the death of sinne, to the life of righteousness, the second death shall haue no power ouer vs. Now what stronger motiues can there bee vnto a godly life, then to bee thereby assured of deliuerance from these greatest euils? For how terrible a thing is it to fall into the hands of the euer-living God? and to bee called to account before his Iudgement Seate, who searcheth the heart and reines, and will call vs to a reckoning for euery idle word? Whose iustice is so perfect, and his examination so strict, that though wee were as iust as Job, yet wee should not bee able to answer one of a thousand. Though wee were as holy as Dauid, yet had wee neede to pray with him, Enter not into Iudgement with thy Seruant, O Lord: for in thy sight shall no man liuing bee iustificed. How fearefull and intolerable, endlesse and caselesse, are those hellish torments which they must indure, who are not in this life acquitted from them. And consequently, how inestimable is this benefit, and worthy to bee valued more then ten thousand worlds, to bee fully assured, that wee haue through Christ escaped this seuerer Iudgement, hellish condemnation, and euerlasting torments with the deuill and his angels: which assurance wee can no otherwise attaine vnto, then by seruing God in the duties of a godly life, and bringing forth the fruits of our faith in repentance and new obedience. But I shall not neede to presse these points any further, although much more might bee said of them, as being most effectuell motiues to perswade vs to flee all sinne, and to practise all Christian duties in the whole course of our liues, seeing they are much beaten vpon, and largely handled by many others, there beeing scarce any that omit them, who write of and perswade vnto Christian resolution.

2. Cor. 5.10.
I shall be acquitted of the Lord
at that time and hee shall reueale the secrets of our hearts whether wee be obedient or disobedient to the Gospel of Christ.

For we shall be acquitted of the Lord
at that time and hee shall reueale the secrets of our hearts whether wee be obedient or disobedient to the Gospel of Christ. For we shall be acquitted of the Lord at that time and hee shall reueale the secrets of our hearts whether wee be obedient or disobedient to the Gospel of Christ.

CAP. XLII

Other reasons taken from those singular priuiledges, which are peculiar vnto those who serue God in the duties of a godly life.

AND so much concerning the priuatiue benefits which accompany a godly life. The positiue benefits which we receiue by it, are manifold. For first, hereby the image of God is repayed in vs, and wee are made like vnto him, seeing this image chiefly consisteth in wisdom, holinesse and righteousnesse, whereby knowing God and his will, we are transformed in all holy obedience vnto it. So the Apostle saith, that we haue put on the New man, which is renued in knowledge, after the image of him that created vs. And exhorteth vs to bee renewed in the Spirit of our mindes, and to put on the new man, which after God is created in righte-ousnesse and true holinesse. So that if we be renewed in wisdom and knowledge, in holinesse and righteousnesse, we shall become like vnto God, hauing his image through Christ renewed in vs, after which wee were created, but had it defaced in vs by the fall of Adam. And this argument the Scriptures doe often vse to perswade vs vnto an holy and righteous life. So the Lord himselfe presseth this reason to his people: For I am the Lord your God, ye shall therefore sanctifie your selues, and ye shall bee holy, for I am holy. And againe, Tee shall sanctifie your selues, and be ye holy, for I am the Lord your God. And our Sauour Christ exhorteth vs to bee therefore perfect, that, as children of our heavenly Father, wee may resemble him in perfection. So the Apostle would haue vs to approue our selues to be the sonnes of God, by being blamelesse, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked & peruerse nation. And the Apostle Iohn teacheth vs, how we may approue our selues to haue fellowship with God, namely, by walking in the light, as he is in the light. And finally, the Apostle Peter perswadeth vs to an holy life by the same reason: As he that hath called you is holy, so bee yee holy, in all manner of conuersation, because it is written, Be ye holy, for I am holy. Neither in truth can any thing bee more effectually to perswade vs to an holy life, then this argument, if it bee well waighed. For the neerer wee come to this most absolute and perfect patterne, the more we shall bee restored to that state of excellency and perfection, in which we were created; the more wee resemble him who is the chiefe Goodnesse and blessednesse, the more wee shall exceede in goodnesse and glory, in holinesse and happinesse, the which alwaies accompany one another. The more like we are vnto God, the more communion we shall haue with him; the more hee will loue vs and delight in vs, as a Father ordinarily best loueth that childe, that most resembleth him in fauour and nature, though oftentimes out of meere selfe-loue, because hee seemeth to liue in him, and not for any excellencie that is in those parts and qualities which hee loueth in him. And if generally likenesse causeth loue, when there is no worth in the thing beloved,

6. Sect. 1.
The first priuiledge is, that the image of God is repayed in vs.

Col. 3. 10.

Eph. 4. 23, 24.

Leuit. 11. 44.

Leuit. 19. 2.

Ex. 20. 7.

Matth. 5. 48.

Phil. 2. 15.

1. Iohn 1. 6, 7.

Eph. 5. 1.

1. Pet. 1. 15, 16.

loued, how much more will God infinitely loue vs, when as by our like-nesse we shall be made most louely, and that for his owne sake, with a pure and perfect loue, because his Image is stamped in vs, and he after a sort li-ueth in vs, and we in him, his holinesse and righteounesse being manifested in our godly life and conuersation?

6. Sect. 2.
The second priuiledge is that by a godly life we haue title to inherite in all Gods promises, and first,
of temporall blessings.
1. Tim. 4. 8.
Psal. 34. 9. 10.
Psal. 41. 1. 2.
1. Pet. 1. 3, 4.

Secondly, by a godly life wee haue interest vnto all Gods promises, whereby he hath assured vs of all his blessings and benefits, both temporall and eternall, according to that of the Apostle, Godlinesse is profitable vnto all things, hauing the promise of the life that now is, and that which is to come.
So the Psalmist saith, that they which seeke and feare the Lord, shall not want any good thing. For the Lord God is a sunne and shield, he will giue grace and glory, and no good thing will hee withhold from them that walke uprightly.
And the Apostle Peter testifieth, that God, according to his diuine power, hath giuen vnto vs (that is, all the faithfull who serue him in holinesse and righte-ousnesse) all things that pertaine vnto life and godlinesse, through the knowledge of him who hath called vs to glory and vertue; whereby are giuen vnto vs exceeding great and precious promises, &c. Now these blessings and benefits which God hath promised as the gracious rewards of a godly conuersation, are either temporall, and of this life, or eternall, and of the life to come. Those of this life, are either corporall, concerning the body and outward estate; or spirituall, respecting chiefly the good of the soule, by inriching it with all sanctifying and sauing graces. The benefits of the former kinde are promised to all those who serue the Lord, and carefully obserue all his Commandements, although not absolutely, but conditionally, so farre forth as the corporall blessings will best stand with Gods glory, and our spirituall and eternall good. Thus the Lord promiseth in the Law, that hee will giue vnto those who obserue and keepe it, all the blessings of this life, respecting either their persons or states. As that hee will blesse them in themselues, and also in their children and posterity; that he will giue them health of body, and a long life and good dayes, prosperity and plenty of all good things, strength of body, and gifts of the minde, as wisdom, fortitude, and the rest, that he will blesse them in the field and in the house, at home in the city, and abroad, by giuing them victory ouer all their enemies, and causing them to be had in honour and high esteeme amongst all the nations which dwelt about them. All which his gifts, are vnto those that feare God, double blessings, because he not onely giueth the things themselues, but also the right vse of them, whereby they become truely profitable. Secondly, because he maketh his gifts sufficient, in what proportion soeuer they are, for their preseruation and comfort, and by giuing contentment with them, causeth them to satisfie their desires; whereas worldly men are insatiable, like the graue and hell, which neuer say, Enough. Thirdly, because hee doth measure out vnto them such a proportion of worldly blessings, as is most fit for their spirituall estate, that they may bee more mindfull of him, and haue their faith, hope, affiance, humility, and other sauing graces exercised and increased, and doth not suffer them to abound in such superfluous excess, as would bee rather an heauy burthen vnto them then a benefit; it meanes to quench his graces in them, and to distract them in all religious duties;

Dent. 28.

Leuit. 26.

Psal. 34. 12.

duties; a share to intangle them in worldly cares; and to withdraw their hearts from him, and to fasten them vpon the world; an occasion to make them forget him, and like pampered horses, to kicke against him that feedeth them; to weaken their affiance, and to make them trust in themselves and their owne provisions; to puffe them vp in pride towards him, and insolencie towards their neighbours, as though they excelled them as much in true worth, as they exceed them in worldly wealth. The which is a singular benefit to the faithfull; that seeing they cannot, through naturall corruption, measure their appetite; the Lord, like a carefull and skillfull Physician, should stime and dier them; letting them haue so much, not as they desire, but as they are well able to digest, seeing a greater quantity would but surcharge their stomakes and cause a fever, turning all the superfluity into crudities, and the hurtfull humours of vice and sinne; as pride, couetousnesse, loue of the world, and such like, which would much hazzard and impaire their spirituall health. And thus the Lord promisseth corporall blessings vnto them that serue him, not simply and absolutely, but so as they may be truly benefitall; nor because he would haue them so mercenary as to serue him chiefly for worldly wages, as the deuill charged Iob (for hee respecteth onely that filiall obedience which ariseth out of a lively faith, and vsfained loue) but seeing we are so sensuall, that we haue things present in great esteeme, and neglect future blessings much more precious and permanent; therefore the Lord graciously condescending vnto our weakenesse and infirmities, doth also promise and giue vnto vs corporall benefits, as it were temporary wages, that receiuing, besides our future hopes, this present pay, we might the rather be encouraged to perseuer vnto him diligene seruice. Thus the Lord perswadeth vs not to forget his Law, but to apply our hearts to keepe his Commandements; because length of dayes, long life, and peace they shall adde vnto vs. Thus wisdome moueth all to imbrace her, not onely for her spirituall excellencies, but also because riches and honour are with her; (and those which seldome meete) durable riches and righteousnesse, vnlesse these promises are rather to bee taken in a spirituall sense. And our Saviour Christ perswadeth vs to forsake the world and our selues by this argument, because no man that leaueh house, or brethren, or sisters, &c. for his sake and the Gospels; but they shall receiue an hundred fold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, &c. and in the world to come eternall life. The Apostle also vseth this reason to perswade vnto Christian beneficence; not only because they should reape a plentifull haruest, of their seed so sowne, in heauen, but also because God was able to returne vnto them such sufficient plenty of temporall blessings, that they might still abound vnto euery good worke. So that Gods earthly and corporall benefits, which he hath promised to those that serue him, may serue as strong, though not the strongest reasons, to make vs diligent in all Christian duties. For howsoeuer carnall and worldly men are to be condemned, who stand most affected to temporary rewards, enquiring who will shew them any good; and what profit there is in seruing the Almighty, when any man perswadeth them vnto it; yet Gods owne children, though they are chiefly to regard spirituall grace and heavenly glory, may haue, in performance of their duty, some respect to earthly benefits; and

1. Cor. 9. 6, 8.

Iob 1. 9.

Pro. 3. 2.

Pro. 3. 18.

Iob 22. 24, 25.

Mat. 10. 29, 30.

1. Cor. 9. 6, 8.

Mal. 3. 14.

6. Sect. 3.
That by a godly life, Gods sauing graces are;
much increased in vs.

1. Tim. 1. 19.
1. Cor. 15. 58.

Rom. 11. 6.
Eph. 1. 4.

2. Pet. 1. 10.

Psal. 15. 3.
& 24. 4.

1. Ioh. 3. 6.
1. Ioh. 4. 19.

2. Pet. 1. 10.
Tit. 2. 11, 12.

Luk. 8. 15.
Ioh. 15.

Psal. 1. 2.
Mat. 7. 17, 18, 30
Luk. 6. 45.
Ioh. 8. 47.
Mat. 12. 50.

incourage themselves in Gods seruice, in hope to receive such a proportion of them, as will stand with their spirituall good, and eternall saluation, to which end God hath promised them.

The second sort of the benefits of this life, are Gods spirituall graces, all which are much increased by a godly life. And first, hereby our faith is much confirmed and increased, by our frequent performing the duties of holinesse and righteousness. For as often Acts doe confirme and increase an habit; and both our bodily strength, and all faculties of the mind, are not onely preserved, but also much improved by continuall exercise, so vertuous actions and workes of piety and righteousness, being the exercises of our faith, doe tend much to the strengthening of it; whereas contrariwise, by the neglect of these duties, it is much weakened, and by the contrary vices and acts of sinne exceedingly shaken, and grievously wounded. In which regard the Apostle ioyneth the holding of faith, and a good conscience, because the one will not stay without the other, being such loving twins as cannot be diuided, but live and die together. More especially, the duties of a godly life, doe confirme our faith in the assurance of our election, not as causes, for the election of God is free of grace, and not of workes, but as the effects and fruits of it, and as the end vnto which wee are elected, for wee are not chosen because wee were holy, but to the end that wee might bee holy, as the Apostle sheweth. Thus the Apostle Peter exhorting vs to make our calling and election sure, prescribeth this as the onely meanes, the ioyning of one vertue and Christian duty with another, telling vs, that if wee doe these things, we shall neuer fall. The Psalmist likewise setting downe the markes and signs, whereby wee may know whether God hath chosen vs to dwell in his holy mountaine, maketh this the first & chiefe, to walke uprightly, and work righteousness, and to haue cleane hands, and a pure heart. Secondly hereby our faith is perswaded of Gods grace and love in Christ. For by keeping of Gods Commandements, we are assured that we loue God, according to that of the Apostle Iohn, Who so keepeth his Word, in him verily is the loue of God perfected; and consequently, that he loueth vs, seeing we loue him, because he loued vs first, our loue being but a sparke of that diuine and infinite flame. Thirdly, of our effectuell calling, this being the meanes which the Apostle prescribeth to make it sure. For hereby we know, that the grace of God, bringing saluation, hath shined vnto vs, when as we are taught thereby, to deny vngodlinesse and worldly lusts; and to liue soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world; that wee haue in a sauing manner heard Gods Word, when hauing receiued it into honest hearts, wee haue brought forth fruits with patience. That wee are ingrafted into Christ the true Vine, when wee bring forth the ripe Grapes of holinesse and righteousness. That wee are trees of righteousness of Gods owne planting, when like the tree planted by the riuers of waters, wee bring forth fruit in due season. That wee are good men, when out of the good treasure of our hearts we bring forth that which is good. That wee are of God, and the Sheepe of Christ, when we heare Gods Word, and follow him. And that wee are truly a kinne to Christ, when wee doe the will of his Father which is in heauen. Fourthly, by a godly life, and the workes of piety and righteousness, our faith faith is assured of it selfe, that it is lively and vnfaigned; for as our good workes doe shew vnto others, so also they approoue it vnto our selues, as being the fruits of this tree, and the very breath of this body, without which it is but a dead stocke and rotten carcase. For as the Apostle James telleth vs, Faith, if it haue no workes, is dead, being alone; And as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without workes is dead also. Fifthly, our faith is heerby assured of our iustification, and of all the fruits and benefits that doe accompany it. As that we are freed from our sinnes, both in respect of their guilt and punishment, by the death and resurrection of Iesus Christ, when as by the vertue and power of them, we feele our selues deliuered from the corruption of them, so as they doe not rule and raigne in vs, as in former times, and quickned in the inner man vnto holinesse and newnesse of life. That we are reconciled vnto God, when as we feele an earnest desire and constant indour wrought in vs of pleasing him in all things. That we are his children by adoption and grace, when we liue as it becometh his children, and resemble our heauenly Father in holinesse and righteousness. That we are sanctified by his Spirit, when as wee bring forth the fruits of our sanctification in a godly and Christian life. That we haue vnfaignedly repented of our sinnes, when as wee bring forth fruit worthy amendment, and doe daily exercise our selues in good workes. Finally, that we are Citizens of heauen, and heires of euerlasting happinesse, when as we haue our conuersation there, setting our hearts and affections on things aboue, and not on things beneath; and when hauiug this hope, that we shall be made like vnto Christ, we haue purged our selues, as he also is pure.

1 Iam. 2. 17, 16.

Phil. 3. 20.

Col. 3. 2.

Job. 3. 2, 3.

§. Sect. 4.

That a godly life strengthneth and increaseth our hope and confidence in God.

Psal. 34. 15.

Psal. 115. 11.

Dan. 3. 17.

Dan. 6. 16.

The second spirituall benefit of a godly life is, that it strengtheneth and increaseth our hope and confidence in God, grounded vpon this assurance, that hee will preserve all those that feare and serue him, from all euill, all perils and dangers, and the malice and might of all their enemies, and that he will provide for them all things necessary, seeing he, who is so bountifull euen to his enemies, will not let his owne children want any thing that is good, who haue a desire to serue and please him. So that they which feare the Lord, haue great cause to trust in the Lord, as the Psalmist exhorteth, because he is their helpe and shield. And this made the three Children so confident, that they cared not for the rage of the Tyrant, nor for the fiery Furnace, though sevenfold hotter then ordinary, because they had serued God with a good conscience, and thereby were assured, that the God whom they serued, was both able and willing to deliuer them. This made Daniel to serue God constantly, whom hee had formerly serued, notwithstanding the cruell edict of the King; because he well knew, that the God whom he serued, was able to deliuer him from the Lions, as Darius also acknowledged. From which confidence there arise diuers other singular benefits, as inward ioy and comfort in all estates, seeing in this confidence we haue cast all our care vpon God; patience in all troubles, seeing we trust assuredly in God for helpe and deliuerance, in that time which shall be most seasonable, both for his glory, and our owne spirituall good and euerlasting saluation. Cheerfulnesse in the wayes of godlinesse, when they seeme fullest of difficulty and danger, because the

Iam. 5. 16.

Psal. 4. 7. 3.

Psal. 34. 15.

1. Pet. 3. 11, 12.

Psal. 145. 19.

Ephes. 3. 12.

Heb. 4. 16.

Heb. 10. 22.

Heb. 9. 14.

Psal. 66. 18.

Iob. 3. 20, 21, 22

Pro. 15. 8.

Lord, in whom we trust, is able to support and defend vs. And finally, conscience of our well doing, and our earnest desire to glorifie and please God in all Christian and holy duties, doth not onely much strengthen our faith in the assurance of Gods infinite mercies, and Christs all sufficient merits, but also exceedingly confirme our affiance, in the sense and feeling of Gods lope, so that we are thereby inabled, with great confidence, to haue our accessse vnto the Throne of grace, and with much liberty of speech and spirit, to make all our suits knowne vnto him, with assurance that they shall be graciously heard and granted. For the effectual seruent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. And we are assured, with Dauid, that the God of our righteousness will heare our prayers, and that the Lord, who setteth apart him that is godly, for himselfe, will heare vs (being such) when we call vpon him; That the eyes of the Lord are vpon the righteous, and that his eares are open to heare their cry. The which the Apostle Peter veth, as an effectual argument, to moue vs to eschew euill, and doe good, to seeke peace, and ensue it, because it confirmeth our confidence, that God will heare and grant all our suits; seeing, as the Psalmist speaketh, He will fulfill the desires of them that feare him, he also will heare their cry, and will saue them. For howsoeuer the chiefe and principall cause of our confidence and boldnesse be not any thing in our selues, but onely Iesus Christ, in whom God is well pleased with vs, according to that of the Apostle; In whom we haue boldnesse and accessse with confidence, by the faith of him: And though this be the maine ground of our affiance, when we make our suits knowne vnto God, because Christ our high Priest maketh intercession for vs, in confidence whereof we may, as the Apostle exhorteth, come boldly vnto the Throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, & find grace to help in time of need, yet we may draw neere with much more boldnesse, and with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, when we haue our hearts sprinkled from an euill conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water; that is, not only the blood of Redemption, which purgeth vs from the guilt of our sinnes, but also the water of ablu-tion, which cleansing vs from the corruption of sinne, doth assure vs, that we are washed in that Lauer of Christs blood; and when our consciences are so purged from dead workes thereby, as that wee are inabled, in some good measure, to serue the liuing God. For if wee regard wickednesse in our hearts, we can haue no assurance that God will heare vs; if wee come into Gods presence with guilty consciences, accusing vs for the neglect of his seruice, and for liuing in sinne without repentance, shame will couer our faces, and take away all boldnesse and confidence, when wee make our suits vnto him. For we know, that if our heart condemne vs, God is greater then our heart, and knoweth all things; but if our hearts conideinne vs not, then haue we confidence towards God: And whatsoeuer we aske, we receiue of him, because we keepe his Commandements, and doe those things that are pleasing in his sight. For this maketh him to entertaine our suits, not onely graciously in respect of vs, but also with great pleasure in himselfe, according to that of Salomon; The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to the Lord; but the prayer of the vpright is his delight. Whereof it is that Dauid, though a man highly in Gods fauour, would not rashly presse into his presence, to make his suits vnto him, before hee had renewed his righteousness by faith faith and repentance. For he professeth, that he would first wash his hands in innocency and then he would compasse Gods Altar. Now what greater benefit then this, or what more effectuall motiue vnto a godly life, then to haue hereby the grace and fauour of our Soueraigne Lord and King, so as we may at all times, with boldnesse, come into his presence, and as his chiefe fauorites haue his eare still open vnto vs, so as we may freely make all our suits knowne vnto him, with assured confidence, that they shall be heard and granted, seeing he taketh delight in our prayers, and is as well pleased in giuing, as we in receiuing?

The third spirituall benefit which a godly life bringeth, is Christian courage and true fortitude: For being assured of Gods fauour, and gracious assistance, no dangers are able to daunt vs; and hauing put on the brestplate of righteousness, we feare not the incounters of any enemies. According to that of Salomon; The wicked flee, when no man pursueth, but the righteous are bold as a Lion. An example, whereof wee haue in Dauid, who was so couragious in the assurance of Gods assistance, that hee saith, he would not be afraid of ten thousand of people, that had set themselves against him round about. And professeth, that because God was his refuge and strength, he would not feare though the earth were removed, and though the Mountaines were carried into the midst of the sea. Yea, though he should walke thorow the vale of the shadow of death, yet he would feare no euill, because God was with him, and his rod and staffe comforted him. Neither was this his case alone, but of all those that feare and serue the Lord, who, as he sheweth at large, stand in feare of no euill, though dangers beset them on all sides, because they haue made God their refuge and fortresse, who will therefore deliuer them from the feare of the Fowler, and from the noysome pestilence, &c. And giue his Angels charge ouer them, to keepe them in all their wayes; who shall beare them up in their hands, lest they dash their foot against a stone. And therefore if we would be truly couragious, let vs serue God in the duties of a godly life, and being safe vnder his protection, and hauing him on our side, we shall not need to care who set against vs, nor to feare what man can doe vnto vs.

The fourth benefit is, that this godly life doth keepe our consciences pure and peaceable. For when wee set our selues with full resolution to please God in all things, we carefully flee all knowne sinnes, whereby the conscience would be defiled. And so hauing nothing to lay to our charge, or to accuse vs of before God, sauing humane infirmities and infirmities, for which we haue (as it were) a pardon of course, sealed by the blood of Christ; the conscience becommeth peaceable, and speaketh nothing but good and ioyfull things vnto vs, testifying the remission of our sinnes, our reconciliation with God, and that we and our workes are accepted of him. So that if with vprightnesse of heart we will serue the true Milchidech, in the duties of a godly life, he will be vnto vs, not onely a King of righteousness, but also a King of peace. For dying for our sinnes, and rising againe to iustifie vs, he hath at his departure left this rich legacy to all his true Disciples; Peace I leaue with you, my peace I giue vnto you. The which is not to be esteemed a gift of small value, seeing as the Apostle telleth vs, it passeth all vnderstanding; being one of those fruits, wherein the

Psal. 26. 6.

§. Sect. 5.
That a godly life bringeth courage and true fortitude.

Psal. 3. 3.

Psal. 46. 1, 2.

Psal. 23. 4.

Psal. 91. 3, 3,
&c.

Rom. 8. 31.

Psal. 56. 11.

§. Sect. 6.
That a godly life keepeth our consciences pure and peaceable.

Heb. 7. 2.

Iob. 14. 27.
and 16. 33.

Phil. 4. 7.

Rom. 14. 17.

6. Sect. 7.

That a godly life causeth constancy and perseuerance vnto the end.

Hos. 14. 1. 2.

Ezek. 33. 11.

Jer. 3. 5, 6.

Isa. 31. 20.

Luk. 19. 41.

Aik. 5. 31.

Ezek. 36. 26.

Zach. 13. 10.

the Kingdome of heaven, and our euermlasting happinesse is begun in vs in this life; for as he saith, The Kingdome of God is not meate and drinke, but righteousness, and peace, and ioy in the holy Ghost. The which may effectually moue vs to all Christian and holy duties of a godly life, seeing these fruits of heavenly ioy, are incomparably of more value, then a whole harvest of all earthly happinesse, euen in their present worth, as bringing with them more sound comfort and contentment, more durable and lasting ioy; and also because they are sure euidences and earnest pennies of our heavenly Inheritance, and full fruition of euermlasting blessednesse.

The fifth benefit which we shal receiue by a godly life is, that if we once with a firme resolution & earnest indeuour seroue selues to serue & please God, we shall continue in this estate, notwithstanding our manifold infirmities and corruptions which make vs daily prone to fall into sinne. For they who are once receiued into covenant with God, haue not onely the gracious promise of the remission of their sinnes; but also haue the meanes offered vnto them, yea wrought in them by God, of vnfained repentance, whereby turning vnto him from their sinnes, and renewing their faith, which is the condition of the covenant, in the assurance that they are all pardoned in Christ, they may with peace and confidence proceed againe in their course of godlinesse, as if they had neuer fallen in it, nor gone astray. Neither doth the Lord onely, as a gracious Father, provide fit nourishment for his children, to preserve them in their health and strength; but like a skillfull and wise Physician, soueraigne medicine to recouer them when they are sicke and weake; and not onely affoord vnto them meanes to keepe them whole and sound, but the precious Balme of Gilead, the blood of Christ, applyed by faith; and the Spirit of all lores of sinne, vnfained repentance, to heale them, when in the spiritual conflict they are hurt and wounded. The which he provideth for them, and (as it were) putteth it into their hands by his earnest exhortation, O Israel, turne vnto the Lord thy God, for thou hast falne by thine iniquity. Turne vnto your words, and turne to the Lord; Say vnto him, Take away all iniquity, and receiue vs graciously. And againe; As I liue, saith the Lord God, I haue no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turne from his way and liue. Turne ye, turne ye from your euill wayes, for why will ye dye, ye house of Israel? Yea, he is displeased with them, and sharply reproveth them, if they neglect this medicine when he offereth it vnto them, that they may be cured. Why is this people slidden backe by a perpetual backsliding? they haue fast deceit, they refuse to returne; no man repented him of his wickednesse, saying, What haue I done, &c? And if thus they are not moued to returne, his bowels are troubled, and yearne with compassion, as the Prophet speaketh, and he is sorry that they sorrow not, as wee see in the example of our Sauiour Christ, who wept ouer Ierusalem, because they would not make vse of the acceptable Day whilest it lasted, that they might repent, and escape Gods imminent Iudgements. Yea, he doth not so leaue them, but effectually worketh, in the hearts of his faithfull and chosen Ones, this repentance which he requireth: for he giueth repentance to the house of Israel: he taketh away their stony hearts; and giueth them hearts of flesh: hee poureth the Spirit of grace vpon the house of Iudah; and causeth them to bewaile their their finnes. The which may be vnto vs a singular incouragement in our Christian course, when as wee are assured, that notwithstanding our many frailties and infirmities, wee shall not be cast off, and though we haue many foiles and fals, yet we shall not lie still and perish in our finnes, seeing the Lord giueth vnto all his that feare and serue him, the grace of vnfained repentance, so as they rise againe, and recouer their former estate of holinesse, and withall his wonted grace and fauour, as though they had neuer sinned, and with it their wonted peace of conscience, and ioy in the Holy Ghost.

And these are the benefits which accompany a godly life, whilst we continue in the world: the benefits which it bringeth, when by death we are to depart out of it, are also great and inestimable. For when all worldly blessings faile, and like miserable comforters leaue and forsake vs, when being in greatest agony and distresse, wee stand in most neede of helpe, then the consolations which it bringeth, doe exceedingly cheere and refresh vs. For the good Spirit of God, which hath ruled and guided vs throughout the whole course of our liues, doth not leaue and forsake vs at the houre of death; but then especially doth accompany and assist vs, and the more our afflictions and sorrows abound, the more it causeth our consolations to abound also. It scaleth in our hearts and consciences, the assurance of the pardon and remission of all our finnes, and saith vnto vs, as sometimes Christ to the sicke of the palsey, Sonne, be of good comfort, thy finnes are forgiven thee. It incourageth vs against the feare of death, by assuring vs that it hath lost its sting, and therefore though like a serpent it still liue, yet it is not able to doe vs any hurt. It causeth the beames of Gods loue to shine clearly in our hearts, by which they are so warmed and cheered, that the chill and cold terrors of death cannot shrike and dismay vs. It calleth to our remembrance our former care to serue and please God, and how we haue walked with him & before him, though not in legall perfection, yet with integrity and vprightnesse of heart, & how we haue done that which is good in Gods sight. It witnesseth with our consciences, that wee haue beene faithfull Seruants, who haue well husbanded Gods talents intrusted vnto vs, and that our accounts are euen, so that we neede not feare now when we are called to a reckoning. Yea, it putteth into our hands a general acquittance, sealed with the blood of Christ, that wee may haue it in readinesse, when we appeare before our Iudge. It telleth vs, that now all our labours are ended, and that nothing remaineth, but to receiue our wages, and to keepe with God, his Saints and holy Angels, a perpetuall Sabbath in all ioy and happinesse, that now wee are safely passed thorow a sea of danger, and are arriuing and entring into the heauenly Haven of euermlasting rest, that we haue fought a good fight, and finished it with an happy victory, and that now nothing remaineth, but to receiue the Crowne of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Iudge hath layd up for vs, and is now ready to set vpon our heads with triumph and glory. Again, a godly life changeth the nature of death, and of a curse for sinne, maketh it to become a great blessing, as being

6. Sect. 8.
Of the benefits which a godly life bringeth at the houre of death.

Math. 9. 2.

2. Tim. 4. 7.

2. Tim. 4. 7.

2. Tim. 4. 7.

Phil. 1. 21.

Apo. 21. 4.

Psal. 120. 5.

§. Sect. 9.

Of the inestimable benefits which a godly life will bring in the world to come.

Rom. 8. 1.

Apo. 20. 6.

Matth. 19. 28.

Rom. 8. 15.

1. Iob. 3. 2, 3.

Heb. 12. 14. 15.

Augustine.

Phil. 2. 12.

a meanes to free vs from all euils, and to enter vs into the fruition of the chiefest good; so that whosoever with the Apostle haue led their liues in the true feare of God, may say with him; For to me to liue, is Christ; and to die, is gaine. For the death of the godly puts an end to all their troubles, that all teares may be wiped from their eyes. It causeth them cease to sinne, which so long as they liue in the flesh, hangeth vpon them as an heauie burthen, and presseth out of them many a sorrowfull sigh and deepe grone. It bringeth with it a ioyfull rest from all their labours, which in this life are so tedious and troublesome, and putteth an end to their wearisome pilgrimage. It freeth them from all worldly miseries, from pouerty and penurie, sores and sicknesses, slanders and disgraces, and bringeth with it heavenly plentie, and the riches of Gods Kingdome, perpetuall health & euerlasting glory. It putteth an end to the spiritual conflict, and to all the assaults of our many, mighty and malicious enemies, so as they shall neuer more be able to disturbe our peace. It separateth vs from the society of wicked worldlings, which whilest wee liue, is so irksome and dangerous, and from participating with them either in their sinnes or punishments. It secureth vs from the euils to come, and acquitteth vs from approaching dangers. Finally, as it putteth an end to all our euils both of punishment and sinne, so it serueth as an entrance into the full fruition of all good, and for a strait gate, whereby we passe into heavenly happinesse. All which considerations should be effectuell reasons to perswade to the leading of a godly life, which is alwaies attended vpon by such a blessed death, that bringeth so many comforts with it, when all other comforts faile; and so many ioyes after it; of all which they deprive themselves, who neglect Gods seruice, and spend their time and strength in the eager pursuite of worldly vanities.

Finally, as a godly life is in this world profitable to all purpops, so is it most beneficiall in respect of the life to come. For thereby wee are secured from that euerlasting woe and misery, prepared for all those who liue and die in their sinnes, seeing there is no condemnation to those who are in Iesus Christ, which walke not after the flesh, but after the spirit, and the second death shall haue no power ouer them, who haue their part in the first resurrection; to holinesse and newnesse of life. Secondly, we are assured hereby of heavenly happinesse; For they that haue followed Christ in the regeneration, shall accompany him in glorie. They that haue liued like Gods children in holinesse and righteousness, as in this life they haue the adoption of sonnes, and the Spirit of adoption, crying in their hearts Abba, Father, so shall they in the life to come, receiue from their Father their heavenly inheritance; whereas they who haue neglected these duties, can neither haue this hope here, nor that fruition hereafter, seeing without holinesse no man shall see God. For howsoeuer (as one saith) God made vs without our felicitie, yet he will not so saue vs. But hauing giuen vs a Being, reasonable foules, and his Word, whereby he hath made vs acquainted with his will, and required our conformity and obedience, he will haue vs to be with him in working out our owne saluation, by performing those duties which which he hath prescribed, and to walke in the way of holinesse and righteousnesse, which leadeth to everlasting happinesse. So that though our seruice of God in holy duties be not the cause of a small life and glorie, but the free mercies of God and meritt of Christ yet being the way which leadeth vnto it, all may be assured that they shall attaine to heavenly happinesse, who goe constantly in it. whereas contrariwise they who neuer goe in this way, can neuer come vnto that glorie vnto which it leadeth. Finally, a godly life is most profitable in respect of the life to come, because God graciously crowneeth his owne graces in his children, and the fruits of them in their new obedience, with a proportionable measure of glory and happinesse. So that they who haue in this life shined brightest in the light of grace and godlinesse, shall in that life shine brightest in glorie and blessednesse. They who haue most glorified him by their holy conuersation, he will impart vnto them the greatest measure of glory, and both make them capable, and replenish them with greatest ioyes. So that if wee haue any care or desire to be secured from endlesse miseries, or to be assured of eternall happinesse, let vs be moued hereby to serue and please God in the duties of an holy life. Wee seeing the Lord in some proportion fitteth his wages to our workes, and the rich rewards of his free grace, according to those inducours which he hath wrought in vs of seeking his glory, let vs being transported with an holy ambition, deuote our selues wholly to his seruice, & not only labour to keep an ordinary pace with others, but striding for the richest prize, let vs indetout to our strip all that run with vs in the race of godlinesse.

C. P. XLIII

*Of other singular priuiledges, wherewith God crowneeth
a godly life.*

Having seene the benefits which accompany a godly life, let vs now also consider of the priuiledges wherewith God crowneeth those that leade it. Although in truth there is little difference betweene these two, seeing those benefits are priuiledges, as being peculiar prerogatives belonging onely to the godly, and these priuiledges singular benefits, which are promised and giuen them as rewards of their godlinesse. But because I would not glut the Readers appetite with satiety, by setting before him all at once, a multitude of dishes cooked after the same fashion, I thought it not amisse to referue these that follow (as it were) for an after-course on second seruice, dressed in somewhat a different manner, for as I considered the former benefits as the fruits of a godly life, so I will consider these as priuiledges com-ming directly from God, wherewith he endoweth and innesteth the persons of the godly, who desire and inducours to serue and please him. Although here againe I must confesse, that those fruits of god-linesse are the free gifts of Gods grace, and these priuiledges wherewith

6. Sect. 1.
Their con-ceits confu-ted, who imagine that God wholly refer-reth the rewards of those that serue him, for the life to come.

with God peculiarly aduanceth the godly, may in some sort be called the fruits of their godlinesse. But that wee may come to our present purpose. It is the conceit of wicked worldlings, that God wholly deferreth to reward those that leaue their sinnes, and denote themselves vnto his seruice, till the Day of Iudgement; and the punishments of those who neglect him, and serue their owne lusts, to the same time, if at least they beleue at all, that there will bee such a Day, or such a retribution of rewards and punishments: And that in the meane while all things happen alike to all; to the righteous and to the wicked, to the good and cleane, and to the euill and uncleane, &c. Now because (according to the fewes prouerbe) the dayes are prolonged, therefore they conclude, that all prophecies shall faile, being ready with those scorners to aske, Where is the promise of his comming? and because sentence against their euill workes is not executed speedily, therefore their hearts are fully set in them to doe euill; and because good workes, and the sincere seruice of God is not (as they thinke) in this life rewarded, they measuring all things by sense and outward appearance, conclude that there is no profit in it. And that therefore they will not buy vncertaine hopes at so high a price, as to forgoe for them the pleasures of sin, which are so sweet to their carnall taste, and to weary themselves in Gods seruice, which is so distastefull to their corrupt appetite.

And surely it cannot be denyed, but that God, in the greatest part, reserueth in his owne keeping the rewards which he hath promised to his owne seruants, and maketh them to liue more by faith then sense. That ordinarily he giueth outward and temporall things in greatest plenty, to such beasts as he fatterh for the slaughter, and letteth his own sheepe feede vpon bare Commons; that hee fillesh the bellies of wicked men with his hid treasures, and causeth their eyes to stand out with fatnesse; because (according to their owne desires) hee giueth vnto them their portion in this life, and all the good things which they are euer to inioy; and keepeth his owne children to a shorter allowance and more spare dyet, trayning them vp in his Schoole, with more seuer discipline, that learning his will and waies, they may bee made fit for their heauenly Inheritance. It is true, that Gods seruants also are most commonly subiect to crosses and afflictions more then other men; and alwaies debarred of many pleasures of sinne, which are sweete and delightfull to the carnall appetite, of which bewitching cups the wicked of the world doe drinke their fill. So that if they should bee sequestred from their hopes, and iudged onely according to outward appearance, they, aboue all others, would seeme most miserable. But what more then brutish blockishnesse were this, if we should by all this be encouraged in sinne, or discouraged in Gods seruice? For can wee imagine that the iust Iudge of heauen and earth should deale uniuersally? or that Wisdome it selfe should bee so vnwise in the dispensation of rewards and punishments? Is God thus bountifull to strangers and enemies, that hee causeth them to abound with earthly blessings; and reserueth hee

Eccles. 9. 2.

Ezech. 18. 23.

2. Pet. 3. 4.
Heb. 3. 11.

Mal. 3. 14.

6. Sect. 2.
That God ordinarily giueth greatest plenty of worldly blessings to worldly men.
Psal. 17. 14.
P. 73. 7.
Luke 16. 25.

1. Cor. 15. 19.

Gen. 18. 25.

nothing better in store for his owne children that serue and please him? Dost hee correct their slips and falls with such smarting rods of temporary afflictions? and hath he not three-stringed whips, Strappadoes and Rakes, for such as trayterously rebell against him, and wilfully dishonour him by their outrageous wickednesse? Shall wee, who haue not so much as the least sparke of that iustice and truth, bounty and goodnesse, which is in him as an infinite flame, performe our promises which wee haue made to our seruants? and shall not God keepe his couenant with his? Shall we preferre those of our owne family before strangers, and extend our bounty to those that serue and please vs by doing our will, much more then to others who neglect vs, yea rather disgrace and wrong vs by their ill carriage? and shall the Lord, whom wee see so bountifull to his enemies, bee niggardly to his friends? and not reserve his richest rewards for those which haue indeuoured to doe him best seruice, seeing heauen and earth are at his disposing? Let vs not then so much looke vpon our seuerer education, as vpon the inheritance vnto which wee are thus trayned. Not vpon the sorrowfull seede-time, but vpon our ioyfull haruest. Not vpon our sharpe conflict, wounds and skarrs, but vpon our Victory, Triumph and Crowne. And so shall wee bee easily able to make Moses his choyse, and rather desire to suffer affliction with the people of God, then to enjoy the pleasures of sinne, which last but for a season.

Heb. 11. 35.

Yet, that secure worldlings may not be proud of their present preferments, nor pleasing themselues with their portion, neglect to doe God better seruice, because they thinke hee hath no better wages then the temporary pay of worldly benefits; and that Gods faithfull Seruants may not be discouraged in holy and Christian duties, because all their estate standeth in hopes, and little in fruition; let vs consider in the next place, that euen in this life the faithfull haue many rich and royall priuiledges, as the present pay and earnest of their heauenly happines, for their better incouragement in all Christian duties, of which, wicked worldlings that vtterly neglect them, are wholly destitute. Whereof we are to take the better notice, because howsoeuer they generally belong to all Gods children, yet many take little comfort by them, either by reason of their ignorance, which causeth them not to know them; or their carelesnesse, which will not let them seriously consider of them; or their earthly-mindednesse, which maketh them, with Lot's wife, more to looke backe vpon the pleasures of Sodom, then vpon those priuiledges which lye before them, as they are going on in the waies of godlinesse, and to cast their eyes so much vpon the false splendor and brightnesse of worldly vanities, that being dazled therewith, they are not able to discern spirituall and heauenly excellencies; or finally, because they are so negligent in the duties of Gods seruice, and weaken their faith with so many slips and falls, wants & imperfections, that they are not able to make vse of their priuiledges, nor to apply them vnto themselues with any comfort & assurance.

§. Sect. 3.
That euen in this life God endoweth the Godly with many singular and peculiar priuiledges, and first, that hee loueth them aboue all other his creatures.

Ier. 31. 3.
Iob. 13. 1.

Iob. 3. 16.
Rom. 5. 8, 10.

Iob. 1. 12.
1. Iob. 3. 1.
Mal. 3. 17, 18.

Esa. 49. 15.

Hos. 2. 19.

Gen. 2. 24.

Num. 14. 8.

Iob. 17. 21, 24.
1. Iob. 3. 2.

And to speake nothing of that reward which vertue and holy duties bring with them, in their owne excellency, and in the conscience of well-doing; nor of the foulness of vice, which is punished in it selfe, and with those checkes of conscience, and terrours of minde accompanying sinfull actions, which make the heart sorrowfull and full of disquietnesse, when there is nothing but mirth and iollity in outward appearance (in which regard, notwithstanding piety in the seruice of God, is much to be preferred before the pleasing of our owne sinfull lusts, though there were no after-reckoning, no heaven or hell, rewards or punishments) there are many speciall and rich priuiledges, wherewith God euen in this life crowneth that faithfull seruice which is done vnto him. The first, and fountaine of all the rest, is, that God loueth them aboue all other his creatures, with a speciall and singular loue, which mooueth him to multiply all his fauours vpon them, in all things which may further their temporary good and euermlasting happinesse. For he loueth those that feare and serue him, with an euermlasting loue, and hauing set his affection vpon them, he loueth them to the end; which hee hath notably manifested vnto them, in that this loue could not be broken off by their enmity against him, but when they were yet sinners and enemies, he sent his Sonne, his onely Sonne, the Sonne of his loue, to die for their sinnes, that they by him might attaine vnto euermlasting life and happinesse. In him hee hath adopted them for his sonnes and children, and loueth them as a tender father loueth his child, accepting graciously of all their imperfect seruice, passing by all their infirmities, and pardoning all their sinnes. Yea, hee numbrell them among his chiefest Iewels, and indoweth them with such speciall testimonies of his loue, that it is easie to discerne betwene the righteous and the wicked, betweene him that feareth God, and him that serueth him not. But though the loue of a father bee great towards his child, yet it doth not sufficiently expresse Gods loue towards his, and therefore hee compareth it to the loue of a tender-hearted mother towards her sucking infant. And yet this cometh short (as it needs must: for how can that which is finite reach to that which is infinite?) and therefore hee saith, that though a woman may forget her sucking child, yet he will not forget them. And in this regard, to expresse the greatnesse of his loue, he taketh a resemblance, from the highest degree of loue amongst men, which is of an husband towards his wife, yea of a Bridegroom to his Bride, vnto which, the loue of parents and friends, yea, of any other thing in the world, giueth place, seeing they are coupled in such neere vnion and communion, that they are no more two, but one flesh; so that the one, in louing the other, loueth himselfe, and cannot make much of his Spouse, but he cherisheth his owne flesh, (as it were) in another body. The which infinite loue of God towards those that serue him, giueth vnto them full assurance, as of his present fauours, so especially of heavenly happinesse. For if the Lord delights in vs, then hee will assuredly bring vs into this beaueuly Canaan, which floweth with a large streame of farre greater blessings then milk and honey, euen with a flood of pleasures, which are at Gods right hand for euermore. If the Lord so dearely loue vs, then he will delight in our company, and where he is, there we shall be also. For where should the children bee, but in their fathers family? Where should should the Bride be, but with her Bridegroom, who take their chiefe pleasure in the mutuall fruition of one anothers loue? The which high and holy priuiledge, is a most effectuall reason to make vs diligent in all the duties of Gods seruice, which assureth vs that we are in this loue and liking with God, vpon which dependeth our eternall happinesse. For if men thinke it such an high prerogative to bee the favourites of great Princes, that they thinke all paines and seruice too little, which may endear them to their loue, because this alone intitleth them to all other benefits of honours, riches, and pleasures which a kingdome can yeeld vnto them; then with what cheerefulnesse should wee performe all holy duties of Gods seruice, which assure vs, that wee shall be, and are his speciall Favourites, who hath heaven and earth at his disposing, with all the rich treasures and ioyfull pleasures contained in them, in the assurance whereof, our Sauour telleth vs, that wee haue much more cause to reioyce, then in the gift of miracles, or that the foule spirits are subdued vnto vs?

Luk. 10. 20.
1. Pet. 1. 8.

§. Sect. 3.
That God watcheth over the godly with his speciall providence, and the benefits of this priuiledge

Psal. 34. 15.
33. 18.
Job 36. 7.
Psal. 37. 13.

Mat. 10. 30.

Deut. 1. 31.
30. 11.
Ezech. 34. 12.
Psal. 23. 1, 2, 3.

Job. 10. 1, 2, & 4.

The second priuiledge which God vouchsafeth vnto all those that leade a godly life, is, that louing them with this fatherly loue, he watcheth over them with his providence, to conferre vpon them all manner of good. For howsoeuer all things in heaven and earth are subject to this all-seeing and all-ruling providence, yet after a more speciall manner he watcheth over those that feare him, as his owne peculiar people; and though his power and presence extend to all the world, like the power of a King vnto his whole Dominions, yet he is heereby chiefly beneficiall to those that feare and serue him, as being of his owne family, yea his adopted children in Iesus Christ. Thus the Psalmist saith, that the eyes of the Lord are vpon the righteous, and his eares are open vnto their cry. And againe, The eyes of the Lord are vpon them that feare him; And as Elisha speaketh, He withdraweth not his eyes from them. So David in another place; The Lord knoweth the dayes of the vpright, and their inheritance shall be for ever. Yea, but the eyes of the Lord are vpon all things, and there is nothing so secret, that is vnknewne vnto him; and what priuiledge then haue those herein that serue him, about those that serue him not? It consists not in the generall view, and notice which God taketh of one thing as well as of another; but in that he hath a more watchfull and benigne eye over those that feare him, to preserue them from all euill, and to bestow vpon them all that is good; by reason whereof they are so farre from miscarrying by any chance and casualtie, any malice or fury of their enemies, that not so much as an haire can fall from their head without the will of their heauenly Father. In which respect, the Lord compareth himselfe to an Eagle, which safely carrieth her yong, and defendeth them from all other rauinous birds, when they are vnable to shift for themselves. And to a carefull Shepherd, who not onely keepeth his Sheepe from the Wolfe, but also feeds them in greene Pastures, driueth them to the still waters, cureth the sicke, and carrieth in his armes the lame and weake, as David also sheweth by his owne experience. And thus our Sauour called himselfe the good Shepherd, who watched over his Sheepe with such loue and care, that he was ready to lay downe his life for them, rather then they should perish by any danger. Now the benefits which we haue by this priuiledge, are many and inestimable. For

Esa. 30. 21.

Psal. 37. 23.

Zach. 2. 8.

Psal. 17. 8.

Psal. 34. 7.

Dan. 3. 25.

Ch. 6. 22.

2. King. 6. 17.

Psal. 91. 4, 5, 6,
&c.

Psal. 33. 18, 19.

Esa. 41. 10.

Psal. 37. 24.

Psal. 34. 17, 18.

Psal. 41. 12.

Psal. 37. 34.

by this speciall prouidence, God, like a faithfull Shepherd, leadeth vs out and in, and directeth vs in all our courses, guideth vs in the wayes of his Commandements, and keepeth vs from wandring in the by-paths of error, and from losing our felices in the desarts of sinne. And thus the Psalmist saith, that the steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord, and he delighteth in his way; whereby hee is kept from falling into many sinnes, vnto which hee is prone through naturall corruption, and wherewith others, that are not thus guided and gouerned, are often and easily ouertaken; and also into many dangers and euils, to which their fraile liues are subiect, whereinto others not thus directed, doe rush and perish in them. Secondly, by this speciall prouidence, those that serue the Lord, are preferred from all euils, and protected against all enemies; and that not after a slight and ordinary manner, but with such vigilant care and tendernesse, as a man watcheth ouer the apple of his eye, as the Lord professeth, and David also found by his owne experience. The which, though it bee all-sufficient to preferue vs from all danger of euill, yet for our greater comfort, and the better confirming of communion and loue betweene his holy Spirits and vs, hee causeth his Angels to incampe round about those that feare him, and deliuereth them; yea, hee committeth them vnto them, as their speciall charge, to keepe them in all their wayes, and to beare them in their hands, that they dash not their foot against a stone. Of which, we haue many examples; as of the three children thus preferred in the fiery furnace, and Daniel in the Lyons den; and in that mighty Army of holy Spirits, sent for the comfort and incouragement of Elizeus seruant. Thirdly, by this speciall prouidence, God both vpholdeth his children that serue him, when they are ready to fall into sinne and danger, and raiseth them vp being falne; preferueth them from troubles and afflictions, and deliuereth them out of them when they call vpon him. For he couereth them with his feathers, and under his wings they shall be safe, his truth shall be their shield and buckler, &c. The eyes of the Lord are vpon those that feare him, to deliuer their soule from death, and to keepe them alliue in famine. In which regard, the Lord incourageth his seruants against all dangers; Feare thou not, for I am with thee: be not dismayd: for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee, yea, I will helpe thee, yea, I will vphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness, &c. Or if for their chastisement they be afflicted and soyled with any euill, either of sinne or punishment, yet they shall not be forsaken, and suffered to lye and perish in it, and as the Psalmist speaketh, Though they fall, they shall not utterly be cast downe, for the Lord vpholdeth them with his hand. Yea, though many be the troubles of the righteous, yet the Lord deliuereth them out of all; and though he beareth them with his rods, yet he keepeth all their bones, so that not one of them is broken. For the Lord vpholdeth them in their integrity, and setteth them alwayes before his face, as David speaketh out of his owne experience. Finally, as God by this speciall prouidence preferueth those that serue him, from all euill; so also he provideth for them all that is good, supplying all their wants, and relieuing them in all their necessities. For if we trust in the Lord, and doe good, we shall dwell in the Land, and verily we shall be fed; if we delight our selues in the Lord, hee will giue vs the desires of our hearts. Which argument David vseth, to moue all vnto Gods

feare:

feare: O feare the Lord (saith he) ye his Saints, for there is no want to them that feare him. The young Lions lacke and suffer hunger, but they that feare the Lord, shall not want any good thing. Now what greater priuiledge, then to be thus at Gods finding? to haue him our guide to direct vs, our King to gouerne and defend vs; our louing Father, and carefull Shepheard, to feed vs, and supply all our wants; to preferue vs from dangers, and deliuer vs out of all our troubles; to heale our wounds, and cure our diseases: seeing he beholdeth all our wants, and is all-sufficient to supply them? What stronger motiue then this, to moue vs wholly to deuote our selues vnto his seruice, in whom we liue, and moue, and haue our being, seeing our fraile liues are lyable to so many euils, both of sinne and punishment, obnoxious to so many dangers, and stand in need of so many helpes and comforts, that if the Lord should but for the least moment withdraw his hand, and cast vs from vnder the protection of his wise and powerfull providence, we should vtterly perish and come to nothing?

The third priuiledge which the Lord vouchsafeth vnto the godly, is, that he so guideth and gouerneth them by his grace and holy Spirit, that they make a right vse of all estates, both of prosperity and aduersity, and turne all things which happen vnto them by the Diuine providence, to their spirituall good, the enriching of their soules with all sauing graces, and the furthering and assuring of their eternall saluation. For whereas wicked men, inioying worldly prosperity, doe stand in slippery places, their table becomming a snare vnto them, and their honours, riches and pleasures, the baits of sinne, which make them to fall into the diuels nets of perdition (for their honours nourish and increase their ambition, their riches serue as sweet drinckes, to make them thirst the more, and increase their swelling dropsie of couetous desires, their pleasures make them more sensuall and voluptuous, and all together worke in them pride, and forgetfulnesse of God, carnall selfe-loue, and loue of the world, affiance in earthly vanities, and contempt of spirituall and heavenly things) The Lord preferueth those that feare and serue him, from falling into these tentations, by moderating their desires, and mortifying their carnall concupiscence, so as they doe not excesssiuely affect these worldly vanities, nor dote vpon them when they haue them, but vse them onely as helpes and comforts of their pilgrimage, and not set their hearts vpon them as their Paradise, and the rewards of their Countrey, because they know them to be vaine and vncertaine, both in their getting and keeping; momentany and mutable, being euery day ready to leaue vs, or we them. Their honours doe not puffe them vp in pride, but make them the more humble, seeing they possesse them not as their owne proprieties, but as Gods Talent, whereof one day they must giue a reckoning; as wee see in the example of Dauid, who though he were aduanced from a lowe estate to a Kingdome, yet professeth, that his heart was not haughty, nor his eyes lofty, but that he behaued himselfe in all meeknesse and mildnesse, as a child weaned of his mother. Their riches doe not withdraw their hearts from God, though they abound in them, neither doe they trust in them, because they know them to be vncertaine, but in the euerliuing God, who giueth them richly all things to ioy; as we see in the example of Iob, who though hee

Psal. 34. 9, 10.

Aa. 17. 28.

§. Sect. 4.

That he guideth and gouerneth the godly with his grace and holy Spirit:

1. In their prosperity.

Psal. 131. 1, 2.

1. Tim. 6. 17.

Job 31. 24.

Iob. 31. 24.

Iob. 31. 16,
17, 19.

Eccles. 2. 11.

Heb. 11. 25, 26.

Heb. 13. 14.
and 11. 10.

6. Sect. 5.

Secondly, he guideth the godly in the time of their afflictions.1. Pet. 2. 24.
Col. 2. 14.
Gal. 3. 13.

Jam. 1. 12.

were the wealthiest man in all the East, yet he did not make gold his hope, nor said vnto the fine gold, Thou art my confidence; nor reioyced, because his wealth was great, nor because his hand had gotten much. But onely they vse them as the great instruments of well doing, and as meanes to inable them to exercise themselues in the workes of mercy, according to Iobs example, who being rich and able to doe good, did not withhold from the poore their desire, nor caused the eyes of the widow to faile, nor did eate his morsels alone, but did let the fatherlesse ease thereof, nor would see any perish for want of clothing, nor the poore to lye without a couering. Their pleasures, though as great as they inioy, who haue eminent places in Kings Courts, doe not, like intoxicating cups, bewitch them, and make them so drunke, that they forget the ioyes of heauen, vnto which they aspire, but euen when they haue drunke the deepest draught of them, they can (with Salomon) say of them, that all is vanity and vexation of spirit, and that there is no profit vnder the Sunne. And when they are put to their choyce, so as they must of necessity leaue the one, to imbrace the other, they will, with Moses, haue such respect to the recompence of their heauenly reward, that they will chuse rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, then to inioy the pleasures of sinne for a season. Finally, though with the Patriarches they abound with Gods blessings, yet they will not fixe their hearts vpon them, because here they haue no continuing City, but they seeke one to come, which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God; and therefore like the Workman, is permanent and euerlasting. Now what a priuiledge is this, to be vpheld in such slippery places, in which, all that are left to themselues, doe tearfully fall? to haue antidotes against these dangerous drinckes, wherewith all that want them, are poysoned? to bee made more humble, mindfull of God, and thankfull vnto him by these worldly things, which make the most proud, forgetfull and vngratefull? Finally, to haue such a right vse of all these earthly and temporary blessings, that they become vnto vs pledges of Gods loue, and earnest pennies of eternall happinesse, and so to inioy both earth and heauen, all the comforts of this life, as helps and furtherances to assure vs of the glory and ioyes of the life to come? Of which, seeing none but the godly are partakers, what a strong motiue should it be to perswade vs vnto the seruice of God in an holy life?

In respect also of the afflictions of this present life, godlines hath no lesse priuiledges. For first, they which carefully serue & please God, are wholly deliuered from the, as they are punishments of sin to satisfie Gods Iustice, because Christ hath in their stead satisfied for them, & paid their debt to the vttermost farthing, and by taking away their sinnes through his death and sufferings, hath also cancelled the hand-writing which was against them, freed them from the curse of the Law; and all the punishments which were due vnto them. Secondly, by leading of a godly life, we are freed from afflictions in the greatest part, as they are the corrections of Gods children. For howsoeuer sometimes the chiefe end, at which God aimeth in afflicting the godly, is the triall of those graces which hee hath giuen them, that being approoued, he may be glorified that gaue them, and his gifts crowned in those that haue receiued them; yet for the most part, sinne being the occasion, euen of these trials, and the cause of other crosses, crosses, according to that in the Lamentations; Wherefore doth a living man complaine, a man suffereth for his sinnes? Her eof it followeth, that wee may escape these afflictions, if we carefully flee sinne, and serue the Lord in the duties of a godly life. For though the Lord iudgeth his children in this life, that they may not be condemned in the life to come; yet it is not as they are innocents (for the they should neuer come into iudgment) but as offenders, who by their sinnes and negligence in his seruice, haue deserued these, and farre greater punishments. Though he chastizeth euery sonne whom he receiueth, yet not being faultlesse, but when by their sins they haue displeased him, that he may bring them to repentance and amendment. And therefore he prescribeth this repentance as a meanes to prevent his corrections, seeing, by reason of naturall frailty and corruption, we cannot be wholly innocent: As many as I loue, I rebufe and chastize; be zealous therefore and amend. Though he make afflictions to serue for soueraigne salues to his Children, yet he would not apply them to the whole skinne, and sound flesh, but because they haue sores which need to be cured, being so festered, that the balme of his benefits will not heale them. Finally, when by afflictions he weaneth them from the loue of the world, it presupposeth that they dote too much vpon it, and argueth, that if, as they ought, they did lothe and contemne it, in comparison of spirismall graces, and heauenly glory, they should not haue it imbittered vnto them: For what mother would rub her teat with mustard, or worme-wood, to weane her child, if he had wit and will to leaue it in due time? So that if we would carefully flee sinne, and please our heauenly Father, by doing our duty, we should not need to feare stripes, but should be continually cherished and incouraged with rewards. If we would not surfet of sinne and wound our consciences, we should not be troubled with the bitter medicine, and sharpe and searching salve. But we might, with comfort and assurance, apply Gods promises of preservation, both from outward and inward afflictions, euen when they are most rife in the world, and seaze vpon others round about vs, according to that of Eliphaz to Iob. He shall deliuer thee in sixe troubles, yea in seven there shall no euill touch thee. And that of the Psalmist, Many sorrowes shall be to the wicked, but he that trusteth in the Lord, mercy shall compass him about. Thirdly, if by our sinnes we haue brought afflictions vpon vs, yet walking before God in our ordinary course, after an holy manner, we shall haue heereby this priuiledge, that those afflictions which are pernicious vnto others, both in respect of their soules and bodies, shall not be able to doe them any harme. Or though, like the Serpent, they bite them by the heele, and cause some temporary smart, yet being armed with the brest-plate of righteousness, they shall not hurt their vitall parts, nor any whit hinder them of euerlasting happinesse. Yea contrariwise, through the good blessing of God, and assistance of his holy Spirit, sanctifying them to their vse, they, with all other things, shall work together for their good, by drawing them neerer vnto God, through vnfained repentance, by mortifying their sinnes, weaning them from the world, strengthening them in all grace, and by being vnto them infallible signes of Gods loue, and their adoption. In all which, and innumerable other respects, they may conclude (not from the sense

and

Lam. 3. 39.

1. Cor. 11. 32.

Heb. 12. 6, 7.

Apo. 3. 19.

Iob 5. 19.

Psal. 32. 10.

and 91. 3, 4.

Pro. 3. 31, 32,

33, 34.

Rom. 8. 28.

Heb. 12. 11.

Psal. 119. 71.
Lam. 3. 27.

Psal.

Pro. 11. 8.

Psal. 34. 17, 19.

Psal. 50. 15.

§. Sect. 6.

That God inwardly guideth the godly by his grace and holy Spirit.

1. Cor. 3. 16.
and 6. 19.

and smart of their afflictions, which, as the Apostle speaketh, seeme not ioyous, but grieuous) but from the fruits of righteousness, which spring from them; that it is good for them that they haue been afflicted, that they might learne Gods Statutes; and that it is good for a man that he beare the yoke from his youth: yea, that they are blessed whom the Lord chasteneth, and teacheth them out of his Law. Finally, by leading of a godly life, wee haue this priuiledge in respect of our afflictions, that we shall haue seasonable deliuerance out of them, when as it shall be most fitting, both for Gods glory, and our owne spirituall and euerlasting good. For as the Wile man saith, The righteousness of the vpright shall deliuer him, but transgressors shall be taken in their naughtinesse. So the Psalmist saith, that many are the troubles of the righteous, but the Lord deliuereth them out of all. For, When the righteous cry, the Lord heareth, and deliuereth them out of all their troubles: according to his gracious promise, Call vpon me in the day of trouble, I will deliuer thee, and thou shalt glorifie me. And therefore this also should effectually moue vs vnto the duties of a godly life, seeing heereby all estates are sanctified vnto vs, and euen afflictions themselves are turned to our good, which in their owne nature are the punishments of sinne. For seeing through our intemperate lusts, we oftentimes surfeit of the pleasures of sinne, and thereby cast our selues into many afflictions (as it were) dangerous diseases, who would not esteeme much of such a cordiall, as will keepe the poyson of the disease from the vitall parts? yea, which will cause the sicknesse it selfe to become a meanes of increasing and confirming our spirituall health? But such a cordiall is true godlinesse, which connecteth afflictions, which in their owne nature are the diseases of our soules, and states, caused by surfetting vpon sin, into notable helps and meanes for the bettering of our spirituall estates, by making vs to flee sinne more carefully, whereupon we haue surfitted, and by confirming and increasing all Gods graces in vs.

The fourth priuiledge which the Lord bestoweth vpon the godly, is, that as he outwardly gouerneth, defendeth and preserueth them by his wise and powerfull providence; so hee giueth vnto them an inward guide to direct and rule them, to excite, uphold and strengthen them in all good courses, to purge them from all their corruptions, and to inable them vnto euery good worke; euen his owne holy Spirit, and that not to visit them sometimes by fits, but to dwell in them as in his temples, and to keepe in their soules and bodies continuall residence, that hee may be alwayes ready to direct and guide them in all their wayes, to strengthen their weaknesse, and to comfort their feeble hearts, that they may not faint in their Christian course. And this the Lord promiseth to the faithfull; I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walke in my Statutes; and, Ye shall keepe my Iudgements and doe them. Neither doth this Spirit come alone, but richly and royally attended with a choyce troope and traine of all sanctifying and sauing graces; as faith, hope, charity, patience, humility, and a good conscience, with the rest, which are of incomparable more value then the whole world, as bringing with them, for the present, the greatest comfort and contentment, and being for the time to come, earnest pennies of euerlasting ioy and happinesse. Nor doth this holy Spirit giue giue vs these graces in the first and least degrees onely; but doth daily nourish and increase them in vs, from one degree to another, till from infancy to child-hood, and from thence to youth, wee doe at last grow vp vnto a perfect age in Christ, bringing forth most fruit in our latter end. For being assisted and comforted by the Spirit, wee ouercome all difficulties, and those duties which at the first seemed hard and almost impossible, become familiar and pleasant; that yoke of Christ which at first galled vs, doth not hurt vs at all; when we are anoynted with this oyle, and his burthen which seemed intolerable, hauing this Companion to helpe and assist vs, becommeth light and easie, yea, sweet and delightfull. And so on the other side, when wee submit our selues to be guided and gouerned by the Spirit in the duties of a godly life, and doe not grieue it by quenching the good motions which it suggesteth vnto vs, we cause the good Spirit of God to take pleasure in his habitation, and to delight in vs to doe vs good, multiplying and increasing his graces in vs, of which we haue brought forth such good fruits, and redoubling our talents, when as we haue rightly vsed them to our Masters aduantage; according to that of our Sauour; To him that hath, shall be giuen, and he shall haue abundance; and from him that hath not, shall be taken euen that which he seemeth to haue.

Psal. 92. 14. 15.

Eph 4. 13.

Math. 11. 29.

Math. 13. 12.

Luk. 11. 12.

CAP. XLIIII.

Other singular priuiledges, wherewith God in this life crowneth the godly, which are the fruits and effects of his holy Spirit.

He fifth priuiledge peculiar to the godly, is the fruits and effects of the Spirit, the first and chiefe whereof is this, that the Spirit witnesseth and sealeth in their hearts and consciences the assurance of their adoption, whereby of the children of wrath and firebrands of hell, they become the children of God, and coheires with Iesus Christ of their heavenly Inheritance. For as many as are led by the Spirit, they are the sonnes of God. For ye haue not (saith the Apostle) receiued the spirit of bondage againe to feare; but ye haue receiued the Spirit of adoption, whereby wee cry, Abba Father. The Spirit it selfe beareth witnesse with our spirit, that wee are the children of God. And if children, then heires, heires of God, and ioynt-heires with Christ. And againe, Because ye are sonnes, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Sonne into your hearts, crying Abba Father. So the Euangelist Iohn saith, that as many as receiued Christ, to them he gaue this priuiledge to become the sonnes of God, euen to them that beleue on his name. So that whosoever lay hold vpon Christ by a true and liuely faith, and bring forth the fruits thereof in holinesse and newnesse of life, thereby approouing themselves to be such as are led by the Spirit, they haue this high and honourable priuiledge, that they are the sonnes of God, and coheires with Christ in his

6. Sect. 1.

That God sealeth vnto the godly, the assurance of their adoption.

Rom. 8. 14, 15, 16.

Gal. 4. 6.

Iob. 1. 12.

Eph. 4. 30.

1. Cor. 9. 25.

1. Cor. 2. 9.

6. Sect. 2.

The second
speciall priu-ledge, is spirituall illumination.

Psal. 119. 18.

Matth. 11. 35.

1. Cor. 2. 14.

1. Iob. 2. 20, 27.

Iob. 14. 26.

1. Cor. 2. 10, 11.

Apoc. 2. 12.

Esa. 31. 21.

Tit. 2. 11, 12.

Psal. 25. 12.

Psal. 117. 99,
100.

his Kingdome of glory. The which should be a most effectual argument to perswade vs to flee all manner of sin, that we may not grieve the holy Spirit of God, whereby we are sealed vnto the day of Redemption, and to leade a godly & Christian life, that wee may walke worthy this high calling, & approue our selues to be Gods children, by resembling our heavenly Father in holinesse and righteousness. For if wee would thinke no paines too much in the seruice of an earthly King, if there by wee could be assured, that he would adopt vs for his sonnes, yea, make vs heires apparant to his Crowne and Kingdome, though corruptible and momentany, how diligent should wee be in seruing and pleasing God, who hath of his free grace assured all those that feare and serue him, that they shall be his adopted sonnes, and heires of his incorruptible and glorious Kingdome, which shall haue no end, seeing this Crowne bringeth no care with it, but all security, and such surpassing ioy and glory, as neither the eye hath seene, the eare heard, nor the heart of man can possibly conceive?

The second speciall priuledge and fruit of the Spirit, peculiar to the godly, is, that he openeth their eyes blinded with naturall ignorance, so as they see the wonderful things of Gods Law, and inlighteneth their darke mindes with supernaturall, spirituall and heavenly Wisdom and prudence, so as they not onely conceiue of the high and hidden mysteries of Gods Kingdome, which the wisest of the world that are not thus illuminated, are not capable of, but also in a saving manner are able to bring all they know to vse, for their spirituall direction in all the waies of godlinesse, which will bring them to heavenly happinesse. For it is the oyle of the Spirit, wherewith our eyes being anointed, doe see and know all things. It is this comfortable Schoole-master that teacheth vs all things, as our Sauour speaketh, without whose instruction wee remaine ignorant of Gods will. For as no man knoweth the things of a man, saue the spirit of man which is in him, even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God. And whatsoever God maketh knowne vnto vs of his secret counsels, he revealeth it vnto vs by his Spirit; for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deeper things of God. He is that spirituall eye-salue, wherewith Christ anoynteth our eyes that wee may see. It is he which by his secret whisperings (as it were) a voyce behinde vs, teacheth vs the way of saluation, saying, This is the way, walke yee in it. But yet this voyce is not heard of all, but the faithfull onely, whose eares God hath opened. This heavenly Light shineth not to all in all places, but onely in Goshen to the true Israel of God, all others still remayning in a more then Egyptian darkenesse, and to whomsoever it appeareth, it teacheth them to denie vngodlinesse and worldly lusts, & to liue soberly and righteously, and godly in this present world. This spirituall and diuine Schoole-master teacheth not all men; but those that truly feare God, according to that of the Psalmist, The meek will be guide in judgement, and the meek will he teach his way. And againe, What man is he that feareth the Lord? him shall he teach in the way that he shall chuse. And to such alone, who meditate in his Testimonies, and keepe his Precepts, he giueth more wisdom and understanding then to the ancient, or then to their teachers. The which should be a powerfull reason to mooue vs vnto the practice of all holy duties in a godly life, seeing hereby wee are assured of this spirituall illumination and heauenly Wisdome, which is so high a priuiledge, that it farre exceedeth all worldly treasures, in so much as he who best knew it, could not tell how to value it, or to equall it with any price. Happie (saith he) is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding: for the merchandize thereof is better then the merchandize of Silver, and the gaine thereof then fine Gold. She is more precious then Rubies, and all the things thou canst desire, are not to be compared vnto her, &c. So Iob, But where shall Wisdom be found? And where is the place of understanding? Man knoweth not the price thereof, neither is it found in the Land of the liuing. It cannot be gotten for gold, neither shall silver be weighed for the price thereof. It cannot be valued with the gold of Ophir, with the precious Onix, and the Saphir, &c. And therefore if men thinke no paines too much to obtaine gold and precious treasures, how much more should wee labour without wearinesse for the getting of this Spirituall Wisdome, which in true worth doth so farre exceed them? What care should we take to be in the number of the godly, to whom this diuine Light onely shineth? Yea, to be richly stored with this treasure of godlinesse, wherein this heauenly Wisdome chiefly consisteth? For the feare of the Lord is Wisdom; and to depart from euill, is understanding. Or as the Psalmist speaketh; The feare of the Lord is the beginning of Wisdom; a good understanding haue all they that doe his commandments.

vnder-

The third speciall priuiledge bestowed vpon the godly, is, that the Spirit of God sanctifieth them, changing and renewing their natures, from sinnefull corruption, to sanctity and holinesse. For it so enlighteneth their mindes, that they behold sinne as it is in it owne nature, most vgly and deformed, and causeth them to condemne it as the greatest euill. It worketh their wills, hearts and affections to a loathing and detestation of it, so that they consent not vnto it, so farre forth as they are renewed, euen when the Law of their members, warring against the Law of their mindes, doth leade them captiue. Neither can they sinne, as in former times, with full consent of will, because it is in part sanctified, nilling that which the flesh willeth, in which regard the Apostle Iohn saith, that he who is borne of God, sinneth not, for his seed remaineth in him, and he cannot sin, because he is borne of God. And as being thus sanctified, they are inwardly kept from sinne, in respect of the loue of it, and free and full consent vnto it; so also from innumerable outward acts of sinne, into which others fall; partly, because they looke more carefully & conscionably to their waies, but especially, because the good Spirit of God dwelling in them, quencheth the fiery darts of Satans tentations, by his holy motions and monitions, which oppose and fight against them, and so stayeth them when they are ready to slip, and vpholdeth them when they are ready to fall. Yea, by renewing and changing of our natures, it worketh in vs, so farre forth as we are sanctified, an vtter auersnesse to sinne, and maketh vs

Pro. 3. 14, 15. &
8. 11, 19. & 16.
16.

Iob 28. 12, 13.
&c.

Iob 28. 28.

Psal. 111. 10.
Pro. 9. 10.

6. Sect. 3.

The third
speciall priu-iledge, is Sanctification by the Spirit.

Rom. 7. 23.

1. Iob. 3. 9.

Gal. 5. 17.

Job 19.16.

Job 4.34.

Micah 6.6.

Psal. 84. 2.

Psal. 119. 30.

Psal. 11. 3.
Luke 11. 28.

6. Sect. 4.
The fourth
speciall priui-ledge, is internall and spiri-
tuall ioy.
Gal. 5. 22.

spiritually to hate it as much as euer we naturally loued it; so that it is no paine to vs, nor any violence offered vnto our will, when wee resist and flee from sinne, as it is to the wicked and vnregenerate, who naturally drinking in iniquity as the Fishwater, are (as it were) tormented with thirst, when they are forced to to forbear it. But though there were no shame nor punishment to restrain them, no law to condemne them, nor heauen or hell to reward or punish them, yet they would be a law to themselves; and with all cheerefulnesse flee and forsake sinne; out of that hatred and detestation which they haue conceived of it. And as they are thus preserved from sinne; so beeing quickened by the Spirit of God dwelling in them; they receiue power and spirituall strength, whereby they are enabled to doe Gods will, and to serue and please him in the duties of a godly life, & that not with that irkesome tediousnesse which the vnregenerate feelee in themselves, because Gods will and theirs are opposite and contrary one to the other, but with cheerefulnesse and delight, as the Angels in heauen, because their wills, being changed and renewed, are conformed to the will of God, so that in doing his will, they doe their own, in which regard it is their meate and drinke, when as with our Sauour they performe the will of their heauenly Father. Now what a singular priuiledge is this, to bee freed from the tyranny of sinne and Satan, so as they haue no dominion ouer them, to rule and carry them which way they list, to their vtter ruine and destruction? To leaue sinne, not as wicked men, for feare of punishment, though they loue it better then the first borne of their bodies, yea then their owne liues, but out of more hatred and detestation of it, because there is an auersenesse of their renewed nature vnto it? To yeeld obedience vnto Gods Law, not out of terrour and constraint, but out of loue and liking? To long and thirst in our soules after Gods presence, and the fruition of his holy ordinances, and euery to breake with longing after Gods Iudgements at all times, that wee may yeeld vnto them that perfect obedience which he requireth, and we desire? To esteeme sinne the greatest bondage, and to complaine most bitterly, when we are led captiue by it? Finally, to be freed from all burthen and wearisomenesse in our obedience, and to esteeme Christs yoke light and casie, yea sweete and pleasant; seeing Gods glory and our saluation, our obedience and eternall blessednesse, are inseparably linked together? All which inestimable priuiledges accompanying a godly life, may, as effectuall reasons, moue vs to imbrace it.

The fourth speciall priuiledge, which the Spirit of God bringeth to the godly, is, internall ioy, which the Apostle numbrell among the fruits of the Spirit; and is a grace that ariseth out of our iustification and reconciliation with God, peace of conscience, and assurance of our saluation, which cannot be crossed by any occurrent. The which ioy far exceedeth all the ioyes of the world. For they satisfy not, but leaue the soule empty, so that the ioy of one pleasure, doth but stirre vp the appetite to hunger after another, which if it should not be inioyed, leaues nothing but sorrow behind; whereas this (as our Sauour speaketh)

keth is a full ioy, in the fruition of God, partly, in sense and feeling, according to that of the Psalmist, O taste and see that the Lord is good! and partly, in the assurance of faith, which maketh vs reioyce in expectation of full fruition. Worldly ioy is short, and momentany, like the crackling of thornes under a pot, which causeth a suddaine blaze, & as suddenly goeth out: but the ioy of the Spirit is lasting and permanent, and no man (as our Sauour saith) can take it from vs. That consists in eating and drinking; and the inioying of such company as are like our selues; but this, in the soules fruition of her beloued Spouse, whose loue is better then wine; seeing his fauours are so full of rauishing delight; that the heart is not able to containe them, as we see in the example of the Spouse in the Canticles, who being brought by her Bridegroom into his banketing house, was so filled, that the euen surfered of his delicacies, which forced her to cry out, Stay me with flaggons: Comfort me with apples for I am sicke of loue. Of which sweete and gracious entertainment of the faithfull soule, the Psalmist also speaketh, They shall bee abundantly satisfied with the fatnesse of thy House, and thou shalt make them drinke of the riner of thy pleasures. Finally, the ioy of worldlings accompanieth their prosperitie; but when the euill day commeth, it leaueth and forsaketh them, and is turned into sorrow and griefe of heart: but the godly reioyce euen in their tribulation & affliction, in their assurance of Gods loue, and because they know that they shall worke together for their good, these light and momentany afflictions causing vnto them a farre more excellent and an eternall waight of glory. They account it all ioy (as the Apostle James speaketh) when they fall into diuers temptations, knowing that the tryall of their faith worketh patience. And when they are persecuted for righteousnesse sake, they being blessed in their sufferings; reioyce, and are exceeding glad, because their reward is great in heauen. And thus the Apostle saith, that the Thessalonians received the Word in much affliction, and with ioy in the holy Ghost. And that the Hebrewes reioiced fully the spoyling of their goods, knowing themselves, that they had in heauen a better, and induring substance. The which ioy is a supernaturall gift, and fruit of the sanctifying Spirit, which all cannot attaine vnto, but the faithfull only; and therefore the Apostle prayeth for the Romans, that the God of hope would fill them with all ioy and peace in believing, that they might abound in hope through the power of the holy Ghost. It is a priuiledge wherein wicked men haue no portion, but is peculiar to the godly; in whom the Kingdome of God is begunne in this life, which none inioy, but they which seeke also his righteousnesse; seeing it consisteth not onely in peace and ioy in the holy Ghost, but also in righteousnesse, as the Apostle speaketh: and therefore, seeing those things cannot bee separated, which God hath conioyned, we must labour after righteousnesse, if we would be partakers of this ioy; vnto which, if we doe attaine, we shall assuredly be filled with it. For if the Apostle reioiced in it, as in his Crowne and ioy, when he had bene a meanes of conuicting others, and bringing them into the way of truth and righteousnesse; and if the Apostle John reioiced so greatly, that he professeth he had no greater ioy in any outward thing, then when he saw his children walking in this way, then what inesti-

Iohn 15. 11.

Psal. 34. 8.

Eccles. 7. 6.

Iohn. 16. 22.

Cant. 1. 2.

Cant. 2. 4, 5.

Psal. 36. 3.

Rom. 5. 3.

Rom. 8. 28.

2. Cor. 4. 17.

Iam. 1. 2.

Matth. 5. 12, 11

1. Thes. 1. 6.

Rom. 15. 13.

Matth. 6. 33.

Rom. 14. 17.

Phil. 4. 1.

1. Thes. 19. 30.

Iob. Epist. 2. 4.
and Epist. 3. 3. 4.

§. Sect. 5.

The last special priuiledge is Christian liberty.

Luk. 1. 74.

2. Cor. 3. 17.

Iob. 8. 36.

Gal. 3. 13.

Heb. 2. 14, 15.

Iob. 16. 33.

Job. 8. 34.

Rom. 6. 16.

2. Pet. 2. 19.

nable ioy must this needs cause vnto vs, when our selues, by walking in the way of holinesse and righteousnesse, doe attaine vnto the assurance of our owne happinesse?

The last special priuiledge peculiar vnto the godly, which the Spirit bringeth, is Christian liberty, whereby being freed out of the hands of all our spirituall enemies, we serue the Lord in holinesse and righteousness without feare, and so attaine vnto the glorious liberty of the sonnes of God, seeing his seruice is perfect freedome; and haue power and dominion ouer all the creatures, so as wee may vse them to all purposes, both for necessity and comfort, hauing full right and interest in them by our adoption. The which priuiledge also is a fruit of the Spirit, according to that of the Apostle, Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. And is deriued vnto vs, when as the holy Ghost, by a liuely faith applyeth vnto vs the verue and efficacy of Christ Iesus his death and satisfaction, whereby this liberty was first purchased for vs; in which respect, our Sauour also challengeth vnto himselfe this power and prerogatiue of setting vs at liberty, as being our alone Redeemer, who hath deliuered vs out of the hands of all our spirituall enemies; If (saith he) the Sonne shall make you free, you shalbe free indeed. We were subiect to the wrath of God, but our Sauour hath freed vs from it, and by satisfying his Iustice, hath reconciled vs vnto him. We were vnder the curse of the Law, but hee hath freed vs, by being made a curse for vs. Wee were the wretched slaues of Satan, and in the state of death and condemnation: but hee by his death hath destroyed him that had the power of death, that is, the deuill, that he might deliuer them, who through the feare of death, were all their life time subiect to bondage. Wee were seruants to the world, and the vassals of the earthly Mammon; but Christ hath overcome the world, both for himselfe and all his Elect, and so set vs at liberty out of this thraldome. Wee were the seruants of sinne, which made vs slaues to all other enemies, and obeyed it in the wicked lusts thereof: for as our Sauour saith, Hee that committeth sinne, is the seruant of sinne; For his seruants wee are whom wee obey, whether of sinne vnto death, or of obedience vnto righteousness. And though with the Iewes wee were ready to boast of our freedome, and (as it were) out of our store, to promise liberty vnto others, like those of whom the Apostle Peter speaketh, yet were wee (like them) our selues, seruants of corruption. For of whom a man is overcome, of the same hee is brought in bondage. Finally, wee were slaues to our owne sinfull lusts, vile affections, and turbulent passions, as wrath, pride, ambition, couetousnesse, and voluptuousnesse, which were the most cruell Lords that ever tyrannized ouer any, seeing they kept such a narrow watch ouer vs, that they gaue vs not so much as a breathing time of liberty, but forced vs to drudge night and day, not only in the sight of others, but when wee were retyred into the most secret corners, because they held in miserable bondage our soules, as well as our bodies, our iudgements, wills, and affections, so as wee liked and pleased our selues in our thraldome, and had no desire to come out of it. But our Sauour hath freed vs from these enemies also, by mortifying our sinnes, and crucifying our corruptions, by verue of his death, applyed vnto vs by his holy Spirit. And lastly, we had had no right to any of the creatures, hauing by sinne lost our dominion over them; but our Sauour and his holy Spirit, by giuing vs the liberties and priuiledges of sonnes, hath restored vs to our right, so that they are all become good and pure vnto vs, being sanctified by the Word and prayer. But this royall priuiledge of Christian liberty belongeth not to all, but onely to the faithfull, who desire to serue and please God in the duties of holinesse and righteousnesse. Neither can wee euer attaine vnto any assurance that wee haue right and title vnto it, till wee seele it effectually in vs for our sanctification. For all those who are by Christ freed from Gods wrath, and reconciled vnto him, haue heereby a desire wrought in them to serue and please him, and will not willingly for any worldly hire prouoke his displeasure. They that are freed from the curse of the Law by the Crosse of Christ, will crucifie their owne lusts, and not runne such a course, as will againe make them accursed. They that are deliuered out of the hands of their spirituall enemies, doe worship and serue their Lord and Saniour in holinesse and righteousnesse, and being redeemed, that they may be his peculiar people, they become zealous of good workes. They that are freed from sinne, in respect of the guilt and punishment, are also in some measure freed from the corruption of it, so as it doeth not reigne and rule in their mortall bodies, that they should obey it in the lusts thereof; but being freed from sinne, they become the seruants of righteousnesse. The which should bee a forcible argument to mooue vs vnto the duties of a godly life, seeing heereby wee may be assured of this royall priuiledge of Christian liberty, according to that of our Sauour; If yee continue in my Word, then are ye my Disciples indeed, and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free. Whereas if wee neglect them, and still liue in sinne, yeelding obedience vnto our owne carnall lusts; wee lose the benefit and comfort of this priuiledge, and haue iust cause to feare, that as yet wee remaine in that miserable bondage of the deuill, the world, and our owne lusts.

CAP. XLV.

Of foure other mayne priuiledges, wherewith God crowneth the godly, both in this life and the life to come.

THe sixth mayne priuiledge which God vouchsafeth to the godly, is, that he bestoweth vpon them the Spirit of prayer and supplication, and both heareth and granteth all the suites which they make vnto him. For hee powreth vpon the house of David, and the inhabitants of Ierusalem, the Spirit of grace and supplication, as he hath promised; and whereas naturally we know not how to pray, nor what to pray for as we ought, the Spirit helpeth our infirmities, and maketh intercession for vs with groanings which cannot be uttered. And hee that searcheth the hearts, knoweth what is the minde of the Spirit, because he maketh intercession for the Saints, according to the will of God. Yea, he not onely by his Spirit teacheth vs how to pray, and what to aske, but hath also bound himselfe by his gracious and free promises, that hee will heare

1 Tim. 4. 3.
Tit. 1. 15.

Luk. 1. 74.
Tit. 2. 14.

Rom. 6. 13.

Vos. 19.

Iob. 8. 31, 32.

6. Sect. I.

The sixth mayne priuiledge is, that God bestoweth vpon the godly the Spirit of prayer and supplication.
Zach. 12. 10.
Rom. 8. 26, 27.

Mat. 7. 7.
Iob. 16. 23.
1. Ioh. 5. 14. 15.
Psal. 50. 15.

Dani. 4. 7.

Iob. 15. 7.

Pro. 15. 8.

Eccl. 28. 9.

Esa. 1. 15.
Pro. 1. 28.
Zach. 7. 11, 12.
13.

6. Sect. 2.

The seventh maine priui-ledge, is, that God granteth vnto them the meanes to build them vp in grace vnto saluation.

Esa. 6. 9.

all our suites made in the name of his Sonne, and indited by his Spirit according to that of our Sauour; Aske, and you shall haue; seeke, and you shall finde; knocke, and it shall bee opened vnto you. And againe, Verily, verily I say vnto you, whatsoeuer ye shall aske the Father in my Name, hee will giue it you. Now what an high and holy priuiledge is this, to haue alwayes free accesse vnto God in all our wants and necessities, who is alone able to helpe vs, and will also doe it because of his promise? To haue a deare and able friend, into whose bosome wee may with boldnesse and comfort powre out all our complaints, who is ready to pittie and ease vs? To haue a key alwayes in our keeping, which through Christ will open vnto vs the treasury of Gods graces, where wee may relieue our wants, and store our selues with all things needfull for his glory, and our owne spirituall good and euerlasting saluation. Finally, to conuerse with the supreme and glorious King of heauen and earth in a familiar manner, and to talke with him, as a man talketh with his friend? For as the Lord speaketh to the Israelites, What nation is so great, who hath God so nigh vnto them, as the Lord our God is in all things that we call vpon him for? But this priuiledge is pecliar vnto them who serue the Lord, by obseruing his will, according to that of our Sauour; If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, aske what you will, and it shall be done vnto you; and not vnto wicked men, who turne away their eare from hearing the Law, and neglect the duties of Gods seruice, whose sacrifices and prayers are abominable (as before I haue shewed) and shall not bee heard or granted of God, as hee telleth the rebellious Iewes; When you spread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you, yea, when you make many prayers, I will not heare. And therefore let this also effectually moue vs to serue the Lord in the duties of a godly life, that wee may be partakers of this rich and royall priuiledge, hauing not onely the Spirit of God as our Counsellor, to draw all our suites and Petitions in such manner and forme as is agreeable to Gods will, and Christ our Ad-uocate and Master of Requests, to preferre them vnto God in our behalfe, not pleading our deserts, but his owne merits and his Fathers promises; but also this high Court of Requests night and day open vnto vs, that in all our necessities wee may make our suites and supplications knowne vnto God, with confidence and assurance that they shall bee heard and granted.

The seventh priuiledge peculiar to the godly, is, that God granteth vnto them the meanes to build them vp in grace, and to bring them to saluation, with hearts to vse them, and the inward assistance of his holy Spirit, whereby they become profitable and effectuell to their ends. The which is to bee vnderstood, first, of the publike meanes, as hearing the Word, Sacraments, and Prayer, which the most in the world haue not at all, but those onely that liue in the Church, of which the fewest, and least number inioy them to their vse and benefit, either because they neglect and contemne them, or vse them after a cold, carelesse and formall manner, without any desire and indeuour to profit by them, wanting in themselues faith, and a good conscience, and also the inward co-operation of Gods holy Spirit, to blesse and sanctifie them to their vse. By reason whereof, it cometh to passe, that after they haue long been partakers of

Gods

Gods holy ordinances, they are neuer the better, but remaine as ignorant and full of infidelity, as impenitent and vnprofitable as they were at the first; yea in truth much the worse, seeing for want of faith and preparation, the preaching of the Word, which is in it owne nature, Gods strong power to their saluation, and the saueur of life vnto life, becommeth vnto them the saueur of death, to their deeper condemnation; and the Sacrament, which is the seale of saluation, through their vnworthy receiuing of it, sealeth vnto them iudgement and condemnation; yea euen their prayers themselues are turned into sinne, whilest they know not how to pray as they ought, with faith and serueny, in spirit and truth, but draw neere vnto God with their lips onely, when as their hearts are farre from him: whereas vnto the godly, they are great and inestimable priuiledges, because the Lord by his Spirit stirreth vp their appetite to hunger and thirst after them, and giueth grace to vse them aright, after that manner as hath before been shewed, mixing faith with them, whereby they become profitable, and that not onely a iustifying faith, without which it is impossible to please God, but a speciall faith or branch of the other, whereby they vse Gods holy ordinances without doubting, assuring themselues that hee will, according to his gracious promise, accompany their diligent, carefull and conscionable vse of the outward meanes, with the inward operation of his holy Spirit, and make them effectuell for the enriching of their soules with all spirituall and sanctifying graces, and the furthering of their euerlasting saluation. And secondly, the godly haue this priuledge more peculiar vnto themselues, in respect of the priuate meanes before spoken of; as watchfulnesse, meditation, examination of themselues, priuate prayer, and the rest, seeing scarce any but they vse them; or if they doe, slightly, coldly, and to no purpose: whereas God giueth them grace to vse them aright, and with an earnest desire to profit by them; the which he also satisfieth, whilest by the inward assistance of his holy Spirit, he maketh them powerfull and effectuell for their spirituall nourishment, and the enriching of their soules with all sanctifying and sauing graces. And this also may be an effectuell reason to moue vs to godlinesse, that we may inioy these great priuiledges, and not only haue and vse them with others, but also haue them blessed and sanctified by Gods Spirit, that they may become profitable and effectuell to our saluation, without which, our nourishment it selfe will turne to poyson, and Gods holy ordinances, which are the meanes of life and happinesse, being abused by vs for want of grace and godlinesse, will but harden vs in our sinnes, and so increase our condemnation and punishment.

The eighth priuledge peculiar to the godly, is, that they shall perseuere in the state of grace and saluation vnto the end; and howsoeuer, through the violence of the tentations of their spirituall enemies, and their owne frailty and corruption, they haue many slips and falls, yet they shall neuer fall away; and though they erre sometimes out of the way of righteousness, into the by-ways of sinne, yet they returne into it againe by vnfeined repentance, and redeeme this lost time with more then ordinary diligence in Gods seruice. So that though there may bee, and are some ill premises in their liues which truly feare God, yet they alwayes

Math. 11. 21.

Rom. 3. 16.

2. Cor. 2. 16.

1. Cor. 11. 29.

Esa. 29. 13.

Psal. 43. 3.

Heb. 4. 2.

Heb. 11. 6.

Iam. 1. 5.

§. Sect. 3.

The eighth maine priu-ledge is, that they shall perseuere in the state of grace
vnto saluation.

Psal. 37. 37.

2. Cor. 1. 21.

Eph. 6. 10, 12.

1. Pet. 1. 4.

Col. 3. 3.

Ioh. 6. 39.

1. Thes. 5. 9.

Jer. 31. 8.

Job. 13. 1.

Rom. 14. 4.

2. Tim. 1. 12.

Iob. 10. 28.

Apo. 1. 5.

2. Cor. 1. 20.

Ier. 31. 31.

and 33. 33.

Esa. 59. 21.

Ier. 32. 40.

Psal. 37. 24.

Psal. 112. 9.

Esa. 54. 10.

Luk. 16. 17.

make a good conclusion; though they haue many rubs in the way, yet at length they come safely to their iourneys end. And though they haue many faults and failings in their liues, yet they are alwayes blessed in their death; according to that of the Psalmist; Marke the perfect man, and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace: and that of the Preacher, Though a sinner doe ill an hundred times, and his dayes be prolonged, yet surely I know, it shall be well with them that feare God, which feare before him. The which their perfeuerance in the state of grace vnto the end, is not grounded vpon themselves, or the strength of the graces which they haue receiued (for then it were but a poore priuiledge, which would euery day be subiect to losing) but vpon the power and promises of God, his Nature and Attributes, the Intercession of Christ, and the vertue of his holy Spirit assisting and strengthening them. For, It is God which stablisheth vs in Christ. It is his strength, whereby we are inabled to stand fast against all the tentations of our spirituall enemies: it is his power, whereby we are kept through faith vnto saluation. And though wee are able to doe nothing of our selues, yet we can (with the Apostle) doe all things, through the power of Christ, which strengtheneth vs: neither is our spirituall life in our owne custody, but it is hid with Christ in God, as the Apostle speaketh. It standeth not vpon the strength of our owne free will, but of Gods will; and as our Sauour telleth vs, This is the Fathers will, that of all which hee had giuen him, he should not lose one, but should raise it vp at the last Day. It standeth vpon, not our resolution or loue towards God, but vpon his vchangeable counsell and decree, which shall stand, who hath not appointed vs to wrath, but to obtaine saluation by our Lord Iesus Christ; and vpon his loue which is immutable and euerlasting: for whom he loueth, to the end he loueth them. Not vpon our strength, but vpon the power of God, who is more mighty to saue, then all our enemies to hurt and destroy vs; so that though we be weake, and vnable to hold out, yet we shall bee established, for God is able to make vs stand, and to keepe that which wee haue committed vnto him, against that great Day of Christs appearing; for, he is greater then all, and none is able to pull vs out of his hand. Finally, it resteth not vpon the truth of our promises made to God, but of his promises made to vs, who is a faithful and true witnesse, and all his promises in Christ, Yea and Amen. For the Lord hath made his couenant with vs, and promised, that hee will put his Law in our inward parts, and write it in our hearts, and will be our God, and wee shall be his people. That he will forgive our iniquity, and remember our sinnes no more: that he will put his Spirit vpon vs, and that his words which hee hath put into our moutbes, shall not depart out of them, from henceforth euen for euer: and that he will make an euerlasting Couenant with vs, and not turne away from vs to doe vs good, but will put his feare into our hearts, so as we shall not depart from him. That though we fall, we shall not be cast off, because the Lord putteth vnder his hand. That our righteousness shall remaine for euer, and that we shall neuer be moued, but shall be had in euerlasting remembrance. The which Couenant and promises of God are most immutable and vchangeable. For the Mountaines shall depart, and the Hills shall be remoued, but Gods kindness shall not depart from vs, neither shall the Couenant of his peace be remoued. Yea, it is easier for heauen and earth to passe, then one tittle of his Word to faile.

The

The which may serue as a forcible argument to perswade vs to serue the Lord in the duties of a godly life; seeing when wee are once entred into it, we shall be sure to hold out in our Christian course vnto saluation, notwithstanding our owne frailty and corruption, the many and great difficulties which we find in the way, & the might & malice of all our spiritual enemies; for he that hath begun this good worke of grace in vs, is able and willing to perfect it vnto the end. The which argument, taken from the infallibility of Gods counsell, ordaining vs to saluation, the Apostle vseth to with-hold vs from all sinne; The foundation of God (saith he) standeth sure, and the Lord knoweth them that are his. And let euery one that nameth the name of Christ, depart from iniquity. Yea, that we might the better bee encouraged to forsake all sinne, and to serue God in holinesse and righteousness, he hath not kept this royall and inestimable priuiledge of our perseuerance in grace vnto saluation, as a secret to himselfe, but hath so plainly reuealed it in his Word, that we may take notice and bee assured of it, according to that of the Apostle; These things haue I written vnto you who beleue on the name of the Son of God, that ye may know that hee hath eternall life. To the end that thereby our hearts may bee replenished with gladnesse, and wee encouraged to hold on in our course with ioy, seeing though we haue many lets and mighty oppositions in the way, yet we are sure that at the last we shall come safely to our iourneys end.

And these, with many other, are the rich and royall priuiledges, where-with God in this world doth reward and crowne a godly life: which though they be great and inestimable, yet are they all little, in comparison of that glorious happinesse, which God hath reserued for those that loue and serue him in the world to come, being all but short preludes to that heauenly harmony, and small earnest-pennies and first-fruits of that maine bargain, and plentiful harvest. For there we shall, both in our soules and bodies, be perfectly freed from all miseries and evils both of sinne and punishment, and all teares shall be cleane wiped from our eyes; and there shall be no more death, nor sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there bee any more paine, as the holy Ghost speaketh. And contrariwise, wee shall there inioy such honours, riches and ioyes, as neither the tongue can vter, nor the heart conceiue. For we shall inherit ^a a Kingdome, an ^b heauenly Kingdome: yea, the Kingdome ^c of God, which like himselfe, because it chiefly consisteth in the fruition of himselfe, is most absolute and infinite in all perfection. There we shall be crowned with a ^d Crowne of life, an ^e incorruptible Crowne, a ^f Crowne of glory. There wee shall be perpetually feasted at the great feast and marriage Supper of the Kings Sonne, where there shall be nothing but mirth and gladnesse, plenty without want, and fulnesse without satiety. There we shall rest from all our labours, and sanctifie vnto God a perpetuall Sabbath, continually singing praises vnto him, who is the Authour and Fountaine of all our happinesse. There we shall swimme in a riuer and torrent of pleasure, and haue fulnesse of ioy as Gods right hand for euermore. There we shall haue spirituall bodies, that is, such as shall be indued with spirituall and excellent qualities; as immortality and agility, strength and impassibility, beauty and comelinesse, brightness and glory. There our soules shall be perfectly renewed according to Gods

Image,

Phil 1. 6.

2. Tim. 2. 19.

1. Job. 5. 13.

6. Sect. 4.

The great and inestimable priuiledges wherewith God crowmeth a godly life in the world to come.

Apo. 21. 4.

^a Mat. 25. 34.^b and 7. 31.^c Act. 4. 23.^d 1. Cor. 1. 12.^e 1. Cor. 9. 25.^f 1. Pet. 5. 4.^g Apo. 19. 9.

Psal. 36. 8.

and 16. 11.

1. Cor. 15.

Eph. 5. 27.

Psal. 16. 11.

Job. 6. 51.

1. Pet. 1. 4.

Christian Warfare. The

2. part.

lib 3. cap. 3. 4.

6c.

Rom. 6. 23.

Heb. 12. 14.

Matth. 25. 34.

Job. 10. 27.

2. Tim. 4. 8.

Rom. 6. 22.

Heb. 12. 18.

Image, being indued with such wisdom and vnderstanding, that wee shall know God and his will, our selues, and all the secrets and mysteries both of nature and grace; and with such complete holinesse and righteousness, that there shall be neither spot nor wrinkle in them. There we shall haue the blessed and glorious societie of all the holy Saints and blessed Angels, and perfectly louing them as our selues, we shall reioyce in their happinesse, as much as in our owne, whereby our ioyes shall be, according to their innumerable number, multiplied and increased. There wee shall enioy the company of our Sauour Christ himselfe in his perfect glory; and that which shall be the top and perfection of all our happinesse, we shall haue the vision and fruition of God himselfe, the Father, Sonne and holy Spirit, who being infinite in goodnesse, glory, beautie, excellencie, wisdom, power & all perfection, will be the full consummation of all our ioy and happinesse; which blessed estate we shall enioy, not for a thousand, or many thousand millions of yeeres, but these pleasures shall last for euermore, and of this Kingdome there shall be no end. All which points I doe here but briefly touch, hauing intreated of them at large in another place. Onely let vs here take notice, that this rich priuledge and incomparable happinesse belongeth not to all or the greatest part of men, but is peculiar to the faithfull, who desire and indeuour to serue and please God in the duties of a godly life: For though eternall life be the free gift of God, and he may bestow it where he will, yet he giueth it not vnto any, whom he doth not first fit for it, induing them with grace, before he aduanceth them to glory, and working holinesse in them whom he purposeth to bring vnto happinesse; without which no man shall see God, as the Apostle speaketh. Though we are not saued and glorified for a godly life; but for the merits and righteousness of Christ applied by faith, yet we are not saued without it, seeing it is the way which leadeth vs vnto this place of heauenly happinesse, in which if we trauaile not, wee can neuer come to the end of our iourney. It is a free inheritance, but yet giuen to none who haue not approued themselves the children of God, by resembling their Father in holinesse, and righteousness. It is not Wolues or Goates that must feed in this heauenly pasture, but onely the Sheepe of Christ, who stand at his right hand: and none are in this number, but those which heare his voyce and follow him. And therefore the Apostle calleth this heauenly happinesse a Crowne of righteousness, not only because it was purchased by the righteousness and obedience of Christ, but also because it is giuen to none but the righteous, and their righteousness (not by merit, but of grace) is crowned with it. So he telleth vs, that wee must first be freed from the seruice of sinne, and become seruants to God, bringing forth the fruits of holinesse, before wee can attaine vnto that end of everlasting life. The which, aboue all other reasons, should powerfully mooue vs vnto the duties of Gods seruice in a godly life. For seeing, as the Apostle speaketh, we expect to receiue a Kingdome, which cannot be moued, let vs haue grace, whereby we may serue God acceptably with reuerence and godly feare. And so I will conclude this part of my Treatise, contayning the arguments guments and reasons, which may effectually perswade vs to the leading of a godly life. And now nothing remayneth, but that I intreate thee (Christian Reader) not slightly to passe ouer what hath beene sayd, but that thou consider and weigh seriously these reasons which I haue produced. And if they conuince thy Iudgements (as they must needs, if it be not wilfully blinded) that the godly life is most happy and blessed; both in respect of Gods glory, and thy owne benefit; freedome from euill, and fruition of good; present comfort, and future hope; be encouraged to goe forward in this way with more diligence and greater speed, if already thou walkest in it; or be perswaded by them, if thou art not as yet entred into this course of Christianity, now to resoluē of a happy beginning, leauing thine eager pursuit of worldly vanities; which, if nothing else, yet miserable experience in the end will teach thee, to be not onely vnprofitable, but (if thou preferre them in thy iudgement, and loue them in thine heart, before spirituall and heauenly excellencies) hurtfull and pernicious, and betaking thy selfe vnto a new course, indeuour to serue and please God thorowout the whole remainder of thy daies in the duties of a godly life. For be thou well assured, that these reasons shall be powerfull and effectual, either to perswade thee, or to condemne thee, and shall serue as euidences of truth to draw thee, vnto God in the duties of holinesse and righteousnesse, or as euidences of terrour to conuince thee before God at the day of Iudgement, for thy wilfull neglect and contempt of all meanes and motiues, which in this acceptable time and day of saluation he hath graciously granted thee, to draw thee by the way of Grace and godlinesse, into that his heauenly Kingdome, full of glorie and happinesse.

THE

THE SIXTH AND LAST BOOKE OF A GODLY

LIFE, INTREATING OF THE IMPEdiments which vsually hinder and discourage men from entring into, and proceeding in the Christian duties which are required vnto it, and of the helpes and meanes whereby they may be remooued.

C A P. I.

Of those impediments which are cast into our way, to hinder vs in the duties of a godly life, by Satan the Arch-enemie of our saluation.

S. Sect. I.

That Satan ben:eth all his forces against vs, to hinder vs in the duties of a godly life.

Having spoken of the duties of a godly life, and of the meanes whereby we may be inabled to performe them, it now followeth, according to the order which we haue propounded in the beginning of this Treatise, that we in the last place set downe the impediments, which vsually hinder vs from entring into this Christian course, and from proceeding, when we haue re-solued to begin and go forward in it. For as there is nothing excellent & of great moment, wherein we meete not with some mighty opposition and notable hinderances, which, if we be not well armed and prepared, will discourage vs from attempting it, or disable vs in achieving it: so nothing in the world findeth more lets and discouragements, then our entrance into the course of Christianity, and our progresse in the wayes of godlinesse. For whereas all the promises of this life, and the life to come, doe infallibly belong vnto all those who serue the Lord in the duties of holinesse and righteousness (from whence there ariseth an impossibility that they should miscarry, who conscionably performe them, or not attaine vnto euerlasting happinesse, who walke constantly in the way that leaeth vnto it) hereof it is, that the enemies of our saluation bend all their might and malice, to keepe vs from entring into this way, or to diuert vs out of it, if wee haue already begun to runne this race. These enemies are the deuill (who is the chiefe and principall) the world and the flesh, which are his two chiefe captaines that vnder their conduct lead all his forces. How mighty and dangerous these enemies are, I haue shewed shewed at large in another place; onely let it here suffice to know, that the great red Dragon, as he is ready to spit out his venome against vs at all times and vpon all occasions, that he may shew his malice and spite against God by seeking our destruction, who were created according to his Image; so he disgorgeth against vs whole fouds of hellish poison, when we set our selues to serue God in the duties of a godly life, that hee may, by making our wayes slippery, cause vs to fall. And though he suffer vs quietly to goe on in our owne wayes which leade to perdition, without stoppe or checke, yea labourerh all he can to make them easie and pleasant to our corrupt flesh; yet when wee set our face towards the heauenly Canaan, hee pursueth vs with all malice and fury, encountreth vs with an huge host of hellish tentations, and stopperh our course with innumerable impediments and discouragemens, which he casteth in our way, that wee may returne againe into the Egyptian slavery, and glut our selues with sensuall and sinfull pleasures. Yea, no sooner doe wee conceiue a good thought or godly motion, but hee watcheth vs that he may take al opportunities of killing it in the wombe, and to make it an abortiue birth, or of strangling it as soone as it is borne and seeth the light, that so he may disharten vs by many discouragemens, from proceeding in well doing. Let vs know, that as hee is a malicious Dragon, so a strong and mighty Lyon, who still standeth in our way, armed with sufficient power to destroy and deuoure vs, if wee were left to his furie. That hee is a crafty old Serpent, excelling in naturall subtilty, and through long and great experience, able by a thousand cunning deuices to supplant and stop vs in the wayes of godlinesse, being well able through his deepe policy, to vse and employ all his forces for his best aduantage. Finally, that hee is most vigilant and neuer sleepeth, most diligent and neuer resteth, but night and day goeth about seeking to deuoure vs, by enticing vs to come within the reach of his cruell pawes, whilst wee wander and goe astray out of the wayes of Godlinesse, and so are out of the protection of our great and gracious Shepherd.

Christian Warfare.

But that this may not discourage vs from entring into, and proceeding in the waies of godlinesse, let vs consider, that whilst wee study and indeuour to serue and please God in all holy and Christian duties, wee are in his grace and fauour, and vnder his protection, and hauing him on our side, we neede not to feare, though Satan and all the power of hell bandy themselves against vs. And therefore let vs encourage our selues against the malice of the deuill, by setting against it Gods infinite and inestimable loue towards all that feare and serue him, which is more powerfull to saue and defend vs, then Satans malice to hurt and destroy vs. Let vs remember, that the Lord hath loued vs with an euerlasting loue, yea so loued vs, that he hath giuen vnto vs his only begotten and dearly beloued Sonne to the death, that we thereby might attaine to life and happinesse. That he thus loued vs when wee were strangers and enemies, and out of this inestimable loue redeemed

1. Pet. 5. 8.
How we may remoue the former impediments.

6. Sect. 2.
How we may remoue the former impediments.

Rom. 8. 35.

1. Cor. 13. 8.

1. Cor. 13. 14.

Rom. 8. 35.

Zach. 3. 8.

Job. 6. 40.

6. Sect. 3.

That Satans might be trilice compared with our weakenesse and simplicity, must not discourage vs, and the reasons hereof.

Eph. 6. 16.

Exod. 24. 15.

2. Cor. 14. 11.

vs out of the hands of all our spirituall enemies, that we might serue him in holinesse and righteounesse, and therefore much more will this loue moue him to saue and deliuer vs from their malice and fury, when we haue wholly consecrated our selues to his worship and seruice. That this loue maketh him so zealous of our safety, that hee who toucheth vs, toucheth the apple of his eye; and therefore as well will he suffer Satans malice to impeach his own Maiestie, as to hurt vs who are so deare vnto him. And though he hath such a spight and spleene against vs, that he willet and desireth about all things, that God might be dishonoured in our destruction; yet let vs cheerefully go on in the waies of godlinesse, seeing Gods Almighty and All-ruling will opposeth and over-throweth his, and with no lesse earnestnesse seeketh our preservation and saluation. According to that of our Saviour: This is the will of him that sent me, that euery one which seeth the Sonne, and beleueth on him, may haue euertlasting life, and I will raise him vp at the last day.

Neither let Satans power consisting in his might and strength, and in his craft and policy, compared with our weakenesse and simplicity, discourage vs from seruing God in the duties of holinesse and righteounesse. But when wee haue set our faces towards the heavenly Canaan, and are traualing vnto it in the wayes of godlinesse, though wee see mountainous difficulties, impossible in respect of our owne strength to be ouerpassed; on either hand, a sea of troubles and dangers before vs, and an huge host of spirituall enemies armed at all points with hellish tentations, pursuing vs at our backes; let vs goe on in our course without dread, seeing those which are on our side are more, and more mighty, then those which are against vs. And first, when wee see our owne wants and weakenesses opposed with such malicious might and hellish furie, let not this dismay vs, seeing it is a great part of our strength to see our weakenesse, and we are best armed, when wee see, acknowledge and bewaile our owne nakednesse. For this will make vs more carefull to prouide and put on the spirituall Armour, especially the shield of faith, and the sword of the Spirit, whereby we shall bee enabled to quench the fiery darts of the wicked one, and to stand fast and firme against all his tentations in the euill day, wherewith if wee be thorowly armed, we can neuer be foiled. Or if through our frailties and infirmities, we finde herein many wants and imperfections, this must not discourage vs, seeing our armour hath not so much sufficiency to defend vs in its own strength, as from the Author that made it, and gaue it for our vse, who being Almighty, to make good his owne worke, and to be of high prooffe against all tentations, will neuer suffer those to be vanquished, who are of his arming, but will manifest his power in their infirmities, and glorify himselfe in their victory. Againe, the sight and sense of our weakenesse, and our enemies power, must not so dismay vs, as that wee should desist in our course, but drue vs vnto the God of our strength, crying with Moses vnto him for helpe and deliuerance, when we are pursued by our spirituall enemies. And acknowledging with Asa our owne impotency to resist them, let vs make it our ground, to implore Gods helpe. Let vs bee as children children in the hand of our heavenly Father, and the more we finde and feele our owne weaknesse and pronenesse to fall, let vs take so much the surer hold of him by a liuely faith, and implore his helpe with the more feruency, who is able and willing to support vs, and by the assistance of his holy Spirit to doe all our workes for vs, as the Prophet speaketh. Finally, when we are most weake in our selues, this is no hinderance vnto vs, but that wee may be so strong in the Lord and in the power of his might, as that we may bee able to withstand and overcome all Satans tentations, whereby he laboureth to hinder vs in the wayes of godlinesse. For though this strong armed man is able to keepe in safety all that hee possesseth, against weaker opposition, yet God, who is stronger then he, is able to disarme him, and to set vs at liberty from vnder his tyranny. Though our aduerlarie bee mighty, yet our Sauour, who hath redeemed and deliuered vs, is almighty, and no power of earth or hell is able to pull vs out of his hand. And therefore when we see our owne weaknesse, let vs labour also to see the exceeding greatnesse of Gods power; not onely in himselfe, but also towards vs who beleeue in him; and pray for our selues, as the Apostle for the Colossians, not onely that wee may walk worthy of the Lord vnto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good worke, but also that we may be strengthened with all might according to his glorious power, and overcome all difficulties, which our spirituall aduersaries cast in our way, to stoppe and hinder vs in this course of godlinesse. The like comforts we may haue in the performance of all good duties, when as wee consider Satans craft and policy, and compare it with our ignorance and simplicity, seeing this need not to discourage vs, if we deny our owne wisdom as insufficient to guide vs, and suffer our selues to be wholly directed by the light of Gods truth, which is sufficient to discouer and defeat all his subtilties, and hellish stratagems whereby hee indevoureth to circumuent vs; and giue our selues over to bee guided in all our waies by the good Spirit of God, who being infinite in wisdom, is able to turne this Achitophels policies into foolishnesse, to frustrate all his cunning plots and proiects, and so to direct vs in all our courses, that wee shall easily auoid all the snares and secret ambushments of this subtille enemy. And finally, his vigilancy and diligence, in seeking to turne vs out of the right way, that wee may fall into his snares; cannot discourage vs, if denying our owne providence and watchfulness, wee commit and commend our selues vnto Gods protection, seeing hee is that great Watch-man of Israel, who neuer slumbereth or sleepeeth, but continually keepeth vs vnder the all-seeing eye of his providence, that he may preferue vs safe from the malice and might of Satan and all the enemies of our saluation.

And thus wee see, how wee may generally encourage our selues in the duties of a godly life, against these impediments which arise from the nature of this grand enemy, who opposeth vs in them. Many others there are which are cast in our way by his tentations, which either respect our faith, or the fruits of it in a godly life. Concerning the former; this wily and experienced enemy mainly be-

Esa. 36. 11.

Eph. 6. 10.

Luk. 11. 20.

Job. 10. 28, 29.

Eph. 1. 18, 19.

Col. 1. 10, 11.

Psal. 121. 3-4.

6. Sect. 4.

Satans tentations, whereby he impugneth our faith.

deth all his forces and engines of battery against our faith, because he well knoweth, that if he can destroy the roote, the branches and fruites which spring from it, will wither and faile of their owne accord. And therefore sometime taking aduantage of our wants and vnworthinesse, our falls, frailties, and infirmities, hee perswadeth vs that wee haue no faith at all, when as wee haue it; and sometimes labourerh to make vs neglect all meanes of getting faith when it is wanting, by causing vs to rest vpon that shew and shaddow of it, carnall security and fond presumption. Yea, hee assaulteth our faith directly, in respect of all the causes and meanes of our saluation; that so hee may hinder vs in the wayes of godlinesse. For first, hee mouerh vs either falsely to believe, that all men are beloued of God; and so wee among the rest, because wee inioy testimonies of his fauour in worldly prosperity, though that outward gifts are giuen in common to the good and bad; or to doubt of Gods loue, in respect of our afflictions; and so to neglect all duties of his seruice, because wee know not whether wee or our workes are accepted of him. Secondly, hee perswadeth vs either to thinke that all are elected to saluation, and so wee among others, liue as wee list; or if some be elected, and some reprobated, that this Decree is vnchangeable; and therefore if wee be elected, wee shall be saued, though wee take our pleasure and neglect all good duties; or if we be reiected, wee shall be condemned, though wee take neuer so much paines in the wayes of godlinesse. Finally, that wee can haue no assurance that wee are elected, and therefore it is in vaine to labour after it, but rather, that it is our wisest course to leane it to the venter, and take the benefit of present pleasures. Thirdly, hee will tell vs that all are redeemed by Christ, and wee with others, and therefore wee may liue in our sinnes, seeing he hath satisfied for them; or that if he haue redeemed but some onely, that we cannot be assured that we are in this number, though wee be neuer so diligent in Gods seruice. Fourthly, hee will suggest that all are vniuersally called, and yet seeing many fall away, few are chosen, and consequently, that it is a matter impossible to be assured that we are in Christs little flocke, because when we haue done all we can, we may become Apostates, and no better then Wolves and Goats; and therefore it were best to spare our paines, and to inioy our pleasures when we may haue them. Fifthly, he will tell vs that we are iustified by faith alone, and therefore by that faith which is alone, and that good workes are not required to the act of iustification, and therefore are needlesse to the party iustified; that they are not the causes of our saluation, and therefore wee need not to walke in them, but may easily goe to heauen by another way. Sixthly, that none vpon earth can be perfectly sanctified, and therefore seeing we cannot be Saints heere, we must liue like other men, and not tire our selues in vaine, by labouring after impossibilities. Finally, that though wee haue neuer so much grace, and be as forward as any in the duties of godlinesse, yet we may fall from this state, and become as wicked as any other; and therefore seeing when we haue done our best in seruing God, and haue with much paines stored our selues with all spirituall graces, wee may lose all our labour, and become, notwithstanding all our care and diligence, vtter brankrupts in all all goodnesse; it were our best course to giue ouer this doubtfull paines in the service of God, and to satisfie our owne hearts with the present fruition of worldly delights. Of all which tentations, which Satan as impediments casteth in our way, to discourage vs in the course of godlinesse, I haue largely spoken in the first part of my Christian Warfare, and therefore heere thus briefly passe them ouer, referring the Christian Reader to that Booke, for his more full satisfaction in these points.

In respect of the godly life it selfe; Satan raiseth against vs many lets and impediments, either to hinder vs from entering into the course of Christianity, or to make vs performe the duties required in it superficially and vnprofitably. In respect of the former, he vseth many deuices, to stop our entrance into the wayes of godlinesse. And first, he laboureth to keepe our eyes blinded with ignorance, that wee may not see the wayes of godlinesse wherein we should walke; or if they be discovered by the light of the Gospel shining vnto vs, hee will indeuour to keepe vs from seeing the profit and necessity of walking in them. The former whereof we may auoyd, by remembring and considering, that sauing knowledge is one of the chiefe grounds of a godly life; without which, it is no more possible that we should performe the duties of Christianity, then to walke in difficult wayes, hauing no eyes to guide vs, nor light to direct vs in them. And therefore we must not content our selues with our good meaning and ignorant deuotion, which can bring forth no better fruits, then blind superstition and will-worship, which are odious vnto God; but vse all good meanes, whereby our minds may be inlightened with the sauing knowledge of Gods truth; and carefully inquire after the good and old wayes (as the Prophet speaketh) that wee may walke therein, and finde rest to our soules. And for the auoyding of the other, wee must know and remember, that nothing in the world is so profitable and necessary, as to walk in the wayes of godlinesse, after that by the light of truth they are discovered vnto vs, seeing this alone, though all worldly things bee wanting, will make vs happy and blessed in this life and the life to come; whereas if we haue all other things, and want this, wee shall be wretched and miserable. Secondly, Satan laboureth to hinder vs from entering into the wayes of Christianity, by alluring vs to continue in our sinful courses, with the baites of worldly vanities; and by causing vs to content our selues with the present possession of these earthly trifles, hee maketh vs to neglect our heauenly hopes, which are infinitely more excellent and permanent. For the escaping of which snare, wee must labour to contemne these inticing baites, by considering that these worldly things are, in respect of spirituall grace and heauenly glory, vaine and vnprofitable, vncertaine, mutable and momentany, as elsewhere I haue plainly shewed. Thirdly, he hindreth vs fro all duties of godlinesse, by the deceitfulness of sin, which he secretly windeth into our hearts by degrees, till by many acts of wickednesse, he hath brought vs vnto a custome, which is like another nature, and hath in it the commanding force of an vnresistable Law. Which hindrance if we would auoyd, we must watch ouer our selues, that our hearts be not hardened; through the deceitfulness of sinne; to which purpose,

§. Sect. 5.

Satans tentations, whereby he seeketh to hinder vs from entering into the wayes of godlinesse, or from proceeding in them.

1er. 6. 16.

Luk. 10. 42.

Christ. Warf.
2. part.

Heb. 3. 13.

Heb. 12. 1.

Math. 6. 33.

pose, we must shunne the first occasions, withstand the first motions of it, and plucke vp these cursed plants, before they be thorowly rooted, or wee haue already loaded our consciences with these dead workes, our second care must bee to breake off our sinnes by vnfeined repentance, offering hitherin to our corrupt nature, an holy violence, and as the Apostle speaketh, We must lay aside every waight, and the sinne that doth so easily beset vs, clinging (as it were) about our neckes, to hold vs backe, that we may so runne with patience vnto the Race which is set before vs, making voyd, by degrees, the strong custome of sinne, by the acts of piety and righteousness, vntill wee haue confirmed in vs the contrary custome of godlinesse and new obedience. Finally, Satan laboureth to hinder vs from entering into the course of Christianity, by perswading vs to make delays; and when he cannot any longer make vs belecue that it is needlesse, or of small waight, but that seeing the profit and necessity of it, wee doe resolve to leaue our former sinfull liues, and to betake our selues vnto Gods seruice, he will perswade vs to deferre it for a time, as a thing vnpleasing to our corrupt nature, and vnprofitable to our worldly ends, vntill we may finde some fitter opportunity, and haue better settled our earthly businesse. The which impediment I shal haue fitter occasion to remoue in the following Discourse; Onely let vs here remember, that if we will be aduised by our Sauours wife counsell, We must first seeke the Kingdome of God and his righteausnesse, which being a matter of greatest waight, and (in comparison) onely necessary, we must not put it off till after-times, which are vncertaine, but secure our selues of it, whilest the day of saluation lasteth. And these are the common impediments which Satan casteth into our way, that he may stop vs from entering into the wayes of godlinesse; with which, if he cannot so farre preuaile, as to make vs neglect all holy duties altogether, hee will in the next place indeuour to make them vnprofitable for our saluation. To which purpose, amongst many other lets, he chiefly and most usually vseth these two. The first is, to keepe vs from feeling in them any power of godlinesse, for the bettering of our spirituall estate, by causing vs to performe these duties in a cold and formall manner, more for custome then conscience sake. The other is, to make vs fickle and vconstant in them, performing them by fits and startes, when we haue leasure to doe, and haue some spare time from our worldly employments. The former whereof wee may auoyd, by setting our selues about the duties of Christianity, as our mayne businesse, with all resolute diligence, and zealous deuotion, knowing that it is impossible to trauaile in this way, so full of difficulties and dangers, without serious indeuour, or to performe duties of so high a nature, and so contrary to naturall corruption, without diligent and painefull labour. The latter, by tying our selues vnto a settled course, in the performance of all Christian duties, knowing that hee who goeth sometime forward, and sometimes backward, can neuer make any riddance of his journey, nor come seasonably to the end of it. Both which waighty points I heere thus briefly passe ouer, because I haue already spoken of them at large. And let this suffice to haue briefly mentioned those impediments, which Satan immediately by himselfe ordinarily vseth to hinder vs from entering into, or proceeding in the way of godlinesse; vnto which,

which many more might be added, if I had not already handled the most of them in the first part of my Christian Warfare.

C A P. II.

Of worldly impediments which hinder a godly life; and first, such as are publike.

Vnto the impediments which the diuell himselfe directly vseth to hinder our proceeding in Christian duties, wee will now adde those which are cast into our way by the world and the flesh, who ioyne all their forces with him, which are farre more powerfull and preualent then his owne tentations. The impediments of the world are either publike, or private. The former respect superiours, as Magistrates and Ministers; or inferiours, as the people that are vnder their government. The impediments which oppose a godly life, respecting Magistrates, are chiefly two: the first is, their authority and greatnesse abused to impiety, as to the discountenancing of vertue and godlinesse, and the countenancing of vice and sinne; the discouraging of the faithfull in all good courses, and the heartening of the wicked in their impiety and prophaneesse. The which is done by their priuate fauours, denyed to the one, and imparted to the other; or by their publike edicts and lawes crying downe the sincerity of Religion, and strengthening the sonnes of Belial in their outrageous wickednesse. For the auoyding of which impediments, let vs often consider how much better it is to haue the fauour of God, in which consisteth our life and happinesse, and which being permanent and vchangeable, will neuer forsake vs, then the fauour of Princes and great men, whose fauours are momentany, seeing (as the Psalmist speaketh) their breath being in their nostrils, they will sooner returne to their dust; and also sicke and mutable, being ready to hate to morrow, whom they loue to day; as wee see in the example of Haman, and many others. That it is better to haue the peace of a good conscience which accompanyeth well doing, then the praise and applause of the greatest Potentates, in our neglect of holy duties. That we shall haue little comfort when we are going to hell, though we carry in our hands their Passe or Patent, affoording vnto vs a quiet passage without checke or disturbance, no though we haue ourselves to beare vs company, and countenance vs in the way. Neither let the lawes of euil Magistrates discourage vs in Christian duties, seeing we haue a superiour Law of the supreme King of heauen and earth, whereunto both they and we are bound to yeeld obedience; and howsoeuer we are thereby tyed to be subordinate vnto them, so long as they hold their subordination vnto God, yet when they leaue him, we must leaue them and their lawes, chusing with the Apostles, to obey God, rather then men, and resolutely sustaining our selues in our Christian obedience, by our inuincible patience, in suffering with meeknesse, whatsoever might and malice can inflict vpon vs, and with our infallible hopes of inioying that eternall happines, which Christ hath promised to all those that suffer persecution

6. Sect. 1.

The first publike impediment arising from euill Magistrates.

Psal. 148. 4.

Act. 5. 29.

Mat. 5. 10. 11.

for righteousnesse sake. The other impediment is the euill example of great men, which mightily draweth inferiours to imitation, if God stay them not with his Spirit. For seeing likenesse causeth loue, and this in great personages, is the staffe and strength of inferiours hopes, expecting to rise by their meanes, heereof it is, that they conformance themselves to imitate their manners, though neither out of loue to their persons or conditions, but meerly out of selfe-loue, that they may hereby aduance their owne worldly ends. In which regard, as prosperity findeth many friends, so Princes and great men haue many followers, because they are the chiefe dispensers of these worldly preferments. But if we would also leape ouer this block, and keepe a constant course in the wayes of godlinesse; wee must liue, not by examples, but by precepts, and not looke what others doe, but what God requireth of vs. And as wee must not follow a multitude, and (as it were) the whole Herd, in doing euill, so neither the mighty (as it were) the Rammes of the flocke, when as, like ill presidents, they misleade vs out of the wayes of godlines, into the by-paths of errour and sin. And to this end let vs remember, that greatnesse hath no priuiledge in grace and goodnes, seeing (as the Apostle telleth vs) Not many rich and mighty are called: yea rather (as the experience of all times hath taught vs) they come as farre behind the meaneest sort (for the most part) in all grace and goodnesse, as they doe exceed them in glory and greatnesse. And therefore let not these glorious lights dazle our eyes, and like the Ignis fatuus, or fooles fire, bewitch and intice vs to follow them into the ditches and quagmires of vice and sinne, but leauing them where they leaue the light of Gods truth, let vs wholly commit our selues ouer to be guided by it, which will preserue vs from being misled by such ill examples.

The other sort of publike impediments, whereby the world hindreth vs in the wayes of godlinesse, arise from euill Ministers, both in respect of their doctrine, and also their liues and ill examples. In the former respect, the people are much hindred by such insufficient and vnconscionable Ministers, as either cannot, or will not instruct them in the duties of a godly life, or else doe it not after a right manner. And first, when such blind guides are set ouer them, as cannot see the way of truth, and much lesse leade and direct others in it; for when the blind lead the blind, they must needs both fall into the ditch, as our Sauour speaketh. Which kind of Ministers are so farre from deseruing the esteeme of true Pastours, that they are vnworthy the place of the dogs of the flocke, seeing they are dumbe, and cannot barke and giue any warning to the sheepe when the Wolfe commeth. Secondly, when such vnconscionable Ministers haue the charge of foules committed vnto them, as hauing sufficiency of gifts, will not, through negligence and idlenesse, feed them with the Bread of life, and being more cruell then the Ostriches, or the Dragons (as Jeremy speaketh in another case) will not pull out their breasts, though full of milk, for the feeding of Gods children committed to them, but let them starue and perish for want of nourishment; herein worse then the other, who hauing dry breasts, cannot (though they would) affoord vnto them the sincere milke of the Word. Whereas these are so hard-hearted, that they

Exod. 33. 2.

1. Cor. 1. 26.
Math. 11. 25.

§. Sect. 2.
Of the impediments which arise from euill Ministers.

Math. 15. 4.

Esa. 56. 10.

Lamen. 4. 3.

they can, but will not, chusing rather to let their milke corrupt in their breasts, and to dry vp for want of drawing, then to preserve their owne plenty, by communicating to the peoples necessities. And not much better are they who preach but very seldome, having gifts and strength sufficient, and then not so much out of conscience to performe their duty, as to avoyd the penalty of the Law, or the blemish of ignorance and insufficiency. Seeing the life of grace in Gods people, cannot ordinarily bee preserved in any vigour by a monthly meale, but needeth frequent nourishment, as the people are able to heare and beare away. And therefore the Apostle layeth a strait charge upon Timothy, and in him, upon all Gods Ministers, not onely that they should preach the Word, but also that they should doe it instantly, in season, and out of season, that is, often, and upon all occasions. Fourthly, the worke of grace and godlinesse is much hindred in the people, when as the Ministers preach themselves, and not Christ, chiefly intending to shew their owne gifts, learning and eloquence, and not the edification and saluation of the people. When as they doe not preach the Word with power and authority, like our Saviour Christ, nor in the evidence and demonstration of the Spirit, to their hearts and consciences, that they may cast downe the strong holds of sinne; but come in the insinuating speech of mans wisdom, to tickle the eare, and soare aloft in idle and heartlesse speculations, farre out of the reach, and aboue the capacity of their hearers, filling their heads with the froth of witty conceits, which haue in them no solid nourishment. Wherein they carry themselves contrary to the charge which our Saviour giueth to the Apostle Peter, and all his faithfull Ministers; namely, that in their teaching they should take care to feed, not onely his sheepe, but also his tender lambes. Finally, the people are much hindred in their growth of godlinesse, when as their Ministers take no paines publicly to catechize and instruct them in the maine principles of Christian Religion, seeing no good building can be erected by them who neglect to lay a sure foundation; or privately to resolve their doubts, and to prouoke them by holy conferences, and earnest exhortations and perswasions, to put in practice those duties which they haue learned by their publike ministry. Through which faults and defects in worldly and carelesse Ministers, the people committed to their charge, are much hindred in the wayes of godlinesse. For where prophecie faileth, there the people must needs perish. Where there is a famine of the Word, what can follow but faintnesse and feeblenesse for want of food? Where the Gospell is not preached, which is the power of God vnto saluation, and the sauour of life vnto life, to all that beleeue: what can ensue hereupon, but impotent weaknesse vnto all good duties, and death and destruction of body and soule? If the Watchmen sleepe, who should giue warning to Gods people, of the approach of enemies, how easily may they surprize and vanquish them? If the Gardener, and Vintager be slothfull and idle in planting and watering, how shall Gods Plants and Vines flourish? And if they busie not themselves in pruning and weeding, how shall the Garden and Vineyard thrive, and not rather be ouer-growne with weeds and thistles? If the lights be put out, or hid vnder a bushell, what can follow but palpable darknesse, through which the

Ex. 28. 9, 10.

2. Tim. 4. 1.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Mat. 23. 23.

Rom. 10. 17.

the people of God must necessarily erre out of the waies of truth. And if the Gospell of Christ bee not painfullly preached, which is the ordinarie meanes of begetting Faith; how should the people come out of the state of infidelity; and beleue, that they may be saved? And what can follow of all this, but the vtter neglect of all the duties belonging to a godly life, when sauuing knowledge and a liuely Faith, the foundations of it, are overthrowne.

6. Sect. 3.

Of the means whereby the former impediments may be removed, first, in respect of the Ministers.

1. Pet. 5. 3. 3.

Matth. 5. 13.
14. 15.Ezek. 3. 17. &
33. 7.

Matth. 15. 14.

1. Cor. 3. 6, 9.

1. Cor. 4. 1, 2.

Matth. 13. 31.

2. Cor. 5. 20, 21.

1. Cor. 4. 15.

For the removing of which impediments, first the Ministers are to be exhorted and perswaded to doe their dutie. And in the first place, that none presume to take vpon them this high calling, which God hath neuer called vnto it, being altogether vnfit and vnfurnished with gifts necessarily required to this high dutie; seeing they purchase their meanes and maintenance with the price of blood, not of the bodies, but of the precious soules of the people, the which shall be required at their hands in that terrible day, when as Christ shall come to iudge both the quicke and the dead. And secondly, those which God hath furnished with gifts, are to be mooued, and admonished in the feare of God, that with all care and good conscience they feed the flocke of Christ committed to their charge, not for filthy lucre, but with a willing minde, chiefly ayming at the glorie of God in the saluation of the people. To which purpose, let them first remember those names and titles giuen them in the Scriptures, implying not onely their dutie, but great and high priuiledges whereby they should be encouraged vnto it. For they are appointed of God to be the Lights of the world; and what sinne and shame is it to hide their Light, and to let the people sit in darkenesse and in the shadow of death? They are the Salt of the earth, appointed not onely to be savorie in themselves, but also to season others, which salt of Grace and Wisdom if they lose, they are good for nothing, but to be cast vpon the dung-hill, and to be troden vnder feete. They are Gods Watchmen, who haue the care of his armies committed vnto them, to giue them warning of the approach of their enemies, which if they neglect, the blood of those which perish through their sloth, shall be required at their hands. They are appointed to be Captaines ouer the people, to goe out and in before them, and to traine and teach them how to fight against the enemies of their saluation. They are Gods Husbandmen, Gardeners and Vintagers, to plant and sow, purge, weede and prune his fields, gardens and vineyards, that they may bring forth fruit in due season. They are Stewards of his family, who must haue in store both new and old, that they may giue a fit portion to all their fellow seruants. They are Gods Ambassadors vnto the people, who represent his owne person, and deliuer vnto them the glad tidings of the Gospell, wherein God offereth vnto them peace and reconciliation; and therefore being so highly honoured, they must not be slacke in doing their message. Finally, they are their spirituall Fathers, ordained of God as his instruments, to beget them vnto himselfe by the immortall seed of the Word; which if they neglect, the people through their default remaine the children of wrath, and dead in in their sinnes. Secondly, let them remember that heavy woe and dreadfull curse denounced against those who preach not the Gospel, or doe the worke of the Lord negligently. Thirdly, let them haue in minde that fearefull account which those haue to make at the day of Iudgement, that through their sloth, worldlinesse, or vnconscionable kinde of preaching, are found guilty of destroying the soules which were committed to their charge. Fourthly, let them be encouraged to the diligent performance of their dutie, by that inward peace of conscience, and vspeakable ioy and comfort, which all Gods faithfull Ministers finde and feelee in their owne hearts and consciences, when as by their Ministry they see God glorified in the saluation of his people committed to their charge. Finally, let them encourage themselues in their painfull labours, by calling to minde that vspeakable recompence of reward, promised to all those who conuert others vnto righteousnesse, seeing they shall shine as starres of the firmament in the glory of Gods Kingdome.

Secondly, the people for their part, are to vse all good helpees and meanes for the remouing of this impediment. And first, their care must be to place themselues vnder sufficient, godly, and faithfull Ministers, who will carefully and conscionably breake vnto them the bread of life. And if in the dayes of their ignorance, they haue feared themselues vnder blinde guides, ignorant & insufficient Ministers, or if such be imposed vpon them against their wills in those places where their lands and liuings, trades and meanes doe lie, they must not onely sigh and mourne vnder this burthen, but also vse all lawfull meanes to be freed from it as soone as they can, either by procuring some better meanes by their care and charge, or by remouing their habitation (though with some worldly inconuenience) vnto some other place; Esteeming this one thing necessary, to enioy the meanes of their saluation, and with the wise Merchant purchasing this pearle and treasure at the highest rate, rather then be without it. For if wee would be hired with no worldly gaine, to liue in such places as afford no food for the nourishment of our bodies; let vs be no lesse wise and carefull for our precious soules, and not hazard them to death and destruction, by continuing in those places for our worldly aduantage, where there is a continuall famine of the Word, but rather then want it, wee must wander from sea to sea, and from the North to the East, that we may seeke and finde it. But if the Ministers vnder whom God hath placed vs, haue sufficiencie of gifts, and yet through sloth and negligence, worldlinesse or want of care and good conscience, neglect their dutie, we are not so easily to abandon them, before wee haue vsed all good meanes whereby they may be made more painefull and diligent. And first, wee must labour with God by our feruent prayers, that he will sanctifie their gifts, and giue vnto them, such faithfull and honest hearts, as that they may more conscionably set themselues to seeke Gods glory in the saluation of the people committed to their charge, and so imploy their talents which they haue receiued, as that they may be able to make a cheerefull account, when as they shall be called to

1. Cor. 9. 16.

1st. 48. 10.

1st. 1. 1. 1. 1.

1st. 1. 1. 1. 1.

1st. 1. 1. 1. 1.

1st. 1. 1. 1. 1.

6. Sect. 4.

Of other meanes respecting the people.

Matth. 13. 45.

2. 1st. 1. 1. 1.

1st. 1. 1. 1. 1.

1st. 1. 1. 1. 1.

1st. 1. 1. 1. 1.

1st. 1. 1. 1. 1.

1st. 1. 1. 1. 1.

1st. 1. 1. 1. 1.

Matth. 10. 10.

Gal. 6. 10.

1. Cor. 9. 7.

Heb. 13. 5.

1. Tim. 5. 17.

1. Tim. 5. 17.

1. Tim. 5. 17.

1. Tim. 5. 17.

1. Tim. 5. 17.

1. Tim. 5. 17.

1. Tim. 5. 17.

§. Sect. 5.
Of the impediment of a godly life, arising from the euill liues of some Ministers.

to giue vp their reckoning. For if those which are most faithfull and diligent in discharge of their dutie, need these helpes, which made the Apostle so often to desire the prayers of the people; how much more doe they need them, who haue so many defects in the worke of their Ministry? Secondly, we must indeuour to draw them on to more diligence by our good counsels and admonitions, in the Spirit of loue and meekenes, without all spleene and bitternes, or any disgrace offered to their persons. Thirdly, we must labour to win and encourage them, not onely by auoyding causelesse wranglings and contentions, but also by paying vnto them iustly and honestly their full due, which by the Lawes of God and men belong vnto them, and not take occasion vpon the neglect of their dutie to neglect ours. Yea, rather with open hearts and hands, wee must carry our selues liberally towards them according to our ability, that gayning their loue, they may become more carefull to seeke our spirituall good, communicating vnto vs their ministeriall gifts, when they see vs willing to communicate vnto them our corporall blessings. Fourthly, we must not vilifie and contemne their Ministry, though there be therein some wants and imperfections, nor runne from them to others, who in our iudgement doe exceed them; but beare with their infirmities, and doe our best to reforme and amend them. Finally, when they preach vnto vs, we are to heare them with all diligence and reuerence, whereby we shall make them more carefull to deliuer things worth our hearing, and more ready to take greater paines, when they see them so much regarded. For as the sucking of the childe draweth downe the mothers milke, and causeth it to come in greater plenty; whereas if the brest be not drawne, all the milke is soone dryed vp; so is it in this case betweene the Minister and the people. By all which and the like meanes if wee preuaile nothing, wee are (if possibly wee can) to remooue our selues from vnder their charge, seeing it is not much materiall vnto vs, whether they cannot or will not teach vs the way of saluation, and no lesse necessitie lyeth vpon vs of hearing, then vpon them of preaching the Gospell; nor a lesse woe, if through our owne negligence wee heare it not.

The last publike impediment respecting the Ministry, is the euill liues of many, who take vpon them to perswade othersto the practice of Christian duties. For ordinarily the people imagine, that they goe fast enough in the waies of godlinesse, if they keepe full pace with those which are their Teachers. And though they heare them often in the Pulpit, vse many arguments to draw them on to more perfection; yet they suppose that there is no necessity of seruing God so strictly and sincerely, but that all is spoken for forme and fashion sake; otherwise they who are so earnest in perswading vs, would leade vs the way by their good example. For the remouing of which impediment, we are to know, that howsoever Ministers excell others in the common gifts of the Spirit, as knowledge, learning and such like, yet the sauing graces of God are free, & not tyed to any calling or profession session more then others. And therefore seeing in this regard, the learned hath no priuiledge aboue the vnlearned, the Doctor aboue the Artificer, or the Pharisee before the Fisherman, it is no great maruaile, if the greatest Rabbins in the world bee as small proficients in grace, and in the practice of holy & Christian duties, as those which they scorne for their ignorance and simplicity. But yet so long as they sit in Moses chayre, wee must not onely heare them, but doe as they say, though not as they doe, seeing their speeches are not grounded vpon the authority of their persons or actions, but vpon the Word of God, vnto which wee owe simple and absolute obedience, who-soeuer bee the Messenger that bringeth it vnto vs. But of this I haue written more largely in the first part of my Warfare, vnto which I referre the Reader, who desireth in this point more full satisfaction.

The common impediments of a godly life which respect the people, are also diuers. As first, when they content themselues with a forme of profession and Religion, without any desire to finde in themselues the power, efficacy and fruite thereof, for the sanctifying of their hearts, and reforming of their liues. As when they professe Religion, because the State establisheth it, goe to the Church and heare the Word, because the Law requireth it, pray in the Congregation, and goe to the Communion, because it is the custome of the Countrey, and other of their neighbours doe it as well as they. But this is to rest in a shadow without a substance, and in a forme of godlinesse, but daring the power thereof. Which if wee would auoid, our care must bee to serue God in obedience to his Commandements, to worship him in Spirit and truth, and to ioyne the inward seruice of the heart and soule, with the outward seruice of the body, and finally, that in all these duties we propound vnto our selues right ends, namely, to profite by them in knowledge, faith, and the practice of all holy duties of a godly life, that we may glorify God in the further assurance of our saluation. The second impediment respecting the people, is the neglect and contempt of the Preaching of Gods Word, as a thing vnecessary for their saluation. For howsoeuer they suppose, that there is some vse of it for their conuersion vnto God, the inlightening of their mindes with some knowledge of the truth, and the working of faith in some first degrees; yet they hold it a needlesse taske to bee continually ryled to these religious exercises, and that it is sufficient to vse them sometimes at their best leysure. Which impediment if wee would shun, wee must remember, that as the Word and the ministry thereof, is the immortall seede which begetteth vs. to God; so it is the spirituall food of our soules, whereby they must bee continually nourished, that the graces of the Spirit begun, may bee increased and confirmed in vs, vntill we come to a perfect age in Iesus Christ. That it is the sword of the Spirit, wherof we haue daily vse in our spiritual warfare, (which lasteth as long as our liues last) for the repelling of our enemies, & the ouercoming of all their dangerous temptations. That it is the only true light, which

T t t

Matth. 11. 25.
1. Cor. 1. 26.
Matth. 23. 2. 3.

6. Sect. 6.
Of the publike impediments which respect the people.

2. Tim. 3. 5.

The second impediment.

Eph. 4. 11, 12,
33.

1. 2. 103. 1

1. 2. 103. 1

1. 2. 103. 1

The third impediment.

Psal. 19. 10.

The fourth impediment.

The fifth impediment.

1. Cor. 2. 4.

1. Pet. 2. 1.

1. Cor. 3. 2.

which guideth vs in all our waies, whereof if through negligence wee deprive our selues, we shall walke in darkenesse, and sit in the shadow of death. That it is our counsellor in all our doubts, and our comfort in all our troubles; the means to strengthen and uphold vs when we stand, and to recouer and raise vs when we are falne; the chiefe helpe we haue to keepe vs in the way of truth, and to recall vs when we erre and goe astray; our food in time of health, and our physicke to cure and restore vs when we are sicke. The third impediment to the life of grace and godlinesse is, when as the people are content to heare the Word, but without any cheerefulnesse and delight, with cloyed stomacks and lost appetites, whereof it is, that this delicious Manna is loathsome to their carnall and surfetted taste, and yeeldeth no wholesome nourishment, because it is eaten against the stomacke. Which if we would remoue, wee must labour often to quicken our appetite, that wee may with David finde and feele the sweetenesse of Gods Word, farre exceeding the hony and the hony-combe, and earnestly hunger and thirst after it, that we may profit by it, and haue the graces of Gods Spirit nourished and increased in vs. To which end wee must often meditate vpon the excellency, profit and necessity of it, as being a Pearle about all price, and the onely chiefe treasure which will make vs truly rich. The fourth impediment, is want of diligence, reuerence and attention in the hearing of the Word, whereby most of this precious liquor spilleth beside, and is vterly lost; and want of care to treasure it vp in our memories, or to meditate vpon it afterwards, that we may bring it home to our hearts and consciences, and practise it in our liues. Which if we would remoue, we must consider, that it is not the deede done, which will make Gods ordinances truly profitable, but the right manner of doing them; that God will neuer blesse vnto vs the means of our saluation, if wee only bring our lips and eares, and outward man vnto them, and do not performe these religious duties with our heart and spirit. And finally, that for our spirituall nourishment it is not sufficient, that we haue plenty of food set before vs, wlesse we feede on it with good appetites, retaine it in our memories (as it were) in the stomacke; and well digest and apply it to our vse by serious meditation: which duties if wee neglect, either not feeding vpon the food of our soules, or casting it vp againe as soone as it is eaten, we can neuer attaine vnto any spiritual strength, but must needs grow faint and languish in the life of godlinesse. The last impediment (which I will here speake of) in the people, is too much curiosity, both in their hearing and applying of the Word. For such itching eares haue many, that they loath the sincere milke of the Word, and all ordinary points handled in an ordinary manner; and affect nothing but nouelties, idle speculations and curious questions; witty discourses and frothy conceits. But that we may shun this foolish curiosity, let vs know, that as the Ministers are bound to deliuer the sincere truth in the euidence of the Spirit and power, so they no lesse to hunger after it, even the sincere milke of the Word, that they may grow up thereby. That as they are bound to teach, so we about all things must desire to know

Iesus

Iesus Christ and him crucified. That they who desire to vnderstand about that which is meete, and affect onely nicities and nouelties, doe feede vpon froth and winde, which will puffe them vp, but neuer nourish them; and finally, that hungering after continuall variety, and strange dishes, is a signe of a sicke and weake stomacke, full of grosse humours, which needes to bee purged, before it can bee nourished. The like hinderance curiosity bringeth to our proceedings in godlinesse, in respect of applying the Word; when as men will not bring it home to their owne hearts, but curiously prying into, and examining the liues and manners of others, doe put off all that is spoken from themselves, and apply it vnto them whom they thinke it more neerely concerneth. Which if we would auoid, we must conceiue that God hath purposely sent what we heare as a message vnto vs, that all that is spoken, is for our own learning and vse, as if there were none in the Church besides. That the Word which we heare wil not profit, vnlesse it be mixed with faith, & that there is no faith, where there is no application to our own vse. Finally, that y meate only nourisheth vs which our selues feed vpon and digest, and not that which being carued vnto vs we doe not eate, but put it away from vs, or else lay it vpon another mans trencher.

CAP. III.

Of such private impediments which the world vsesh, to hinder vs in a godly life, and first, those on the right hand.

WHat are the publike impediments, which the world casteth in our way, to hinder vs from proceeding in the duties of a godly life, we haue shewed in the former chapter: & now it remaineth that wee intreate of those which are more priuate. And these are either the tentations wherewith the World vsually assaulteth vs; or certaine scandals and offences which it layeth before vs, to discourage vs in the waies of Godlinesse. The World tempteth vs diuersly, both on the right hand with earthly prosperity, and on the left with crosses and afflictions. The more dangerous of these two, are the tentations of prosperity, wherewith the world allureth vs (as by her bewitching baites) to make vs leaue the narrow & afflicted path of righteousnesse and holinesse, and to walke in the broad and easy way that leadeth to destruction. These are those intoxicating cups, whereby it maketh men so drunke, that they haue neither list nor power to walke in the path of piety; those false lights, which so dazle mens eyes, that they cannot discern the excellencie of spirituall grace and heavenly glory; those inamouring potions, that make vs to loue the world, & to dote so on this painted Strumpet; that we thinke all time lost which is not spent in her seruice; those waters, which quench in vs the loue of God, the zeale of his glory, and all feruency of desire in attayning to heavenly happinesse; those thornes, which choake in vs all good motions of Gods Spirit; and finally, those

6. Sect. I.
Of the tentations of prosperity, which are most dangerous impediments of a godly life.

1. Iob. 2. 15.

Iam. 4. 4.

Pro. 1. 32.

§. Sect. 2.

Of such impediments as arise from worldly things, as honours, riches and pleasures, and from the society and familiarity of wicked men.

Sicut malus aer assiduus statu tractus inficit corpus; ita peruersa locutio assidue infirmantium inficit animum, ut tabescat delectatione prauis operibus, assiduitate curiosi sermonis. Greg. super Ezech. Pro. 23. 6.

intangling snares which catch and hold vs, that wee cannot goe on in any religious duties or holy actions. Against these tentations, which as strong impediments hinder so many from the profession and practice of godliness, wee may best arme our selues, by considering that the loue of the world and the loue of God will not stand together, because, as the Apostle Iames teacheth vs, The amity of the world is enmity against God, and he who maketh himselfe a friend to the one, doth make himselfe an enemy to the other. That the prosperity of the world is vaine and vncertaine, momentary and mutable, hard to get, and easily lost. And that it doth not usually further vs towards the attaining of our wayne and chiefe ends, as neither adding any thing to Gods graces in vs heere, nor to our glory and happinesse in the life to come. Yea, by reason of our corruption, which is apt to abuse it to our owne harme, it vsually becommeth a great hinderance, and a notable pulbacke in running the Race of Christianity, making vs forgetfull of God and our owne good, proud and high-minded, worldly and carnall, doting so vpon the present fruition of earthly vanities, as that we vtterly neglect all meanes of our future happinesse.

Now the speciall impediments of a godly life are diuers and manifold, but the chiefe and principall which the world vseth to tempt vs on the right hand, are honours, riches, pleasures, worldly friends and acquaintance, whose society and conuersation are notable hindrances to a godly life. And these baites the world fitteth to euery mans seuerall humour and disposition; vnto the ambitious, it propoundeth honours and the glory of the world; vnto the couetous, riches and earthly treasures; vnto the voluptuous, pleasures and carnall delights, causing them to bend their whole thoughts, and to spend their whole time in compassing them, so as they haue no leasure to thinke vpon, much lesse to performe the duties of a godly life. Which impediments if we would auoyd, we must learne to contemne these earthly vanities, as being vaine and worthlesse, vncertaine both in respect of getting and keeping, and vnprofitable, yea hurtfull and pernicious to all those who set their hearts vpon them. All which, with many other to this purpose, I haue largely handled in the second part of my Christian Warfare, and therefore doe heere thus briefly passe them ouer. Neither is it needfull that I should heere say much of the society, friendship, and familiarity with the wicked and prophane, seeing I haue already spoken of it in the former Discourse. Onely let vs heere take notice, that it is one of the chiefe impediments which the world vseth to hinder vs in the wayes of godlinesse. For no more apt is the contagious ayre, which wee daily breathe, to poyson and infect the body, then the company of vngodly and vngracious men, to taint and infect the soule. And no more possible is it to walke daily among snares and nor be caught, or to liue amongst theeuers and not be robbed, then to preferue our selues from being intangled in the nets and grinnings of the wicked, and to bee spoiled of all Gods graces, if wee take delight to consort our selues with such as are gracelesse and vngodly. So Salomon telleth vs, that in the transgression of an euill man, there is a snare, whereby he doth not onely more and more intangle himselfe, but also all others that beare him company. For society

Society and familiarity ariseth out of likenesse of mindes and manners, and cannot long continue, if it doe not either finde, or at least make this similitude and correspondence, according to that of the Prophet; Can two walke together, and not be agreed? And as possible it is to reconcile light and darkenesse, truth and falshood, good and euill, as the faithfull and infidels, godly Christians and prophane worldlings, both retaining their owne properties and dispositions. For an vnjust man is an abomination to the iust, and he that is vpright in his way, is an abomination to the wicked. Neither let any so much presume vpon their owne strength, as to imagine that they can retaine their sincerity, though they keepe wicked company, and rather conuert them to good, then be perverted by them vnto euill, seeing this is a matter of great difficulty. To bee good (saith one) among the good, hath in it health and safety; among the wicked to be so, is also commendable and praise-worthy; in that, happinesse is ioyned with much security; in this, much vertue with difficulty. For as hee who is running downe the hill, can sooner pull with him one that is ascending, then hee who is going vp, can cause him to ascend that is running downe: so he who holdeth an headlong course in wickednes, can more easily carry with him one that is ascending the hill of vertue, being a motion contrary to naturall disposition, then he can cause him to ascend with him. For in common experience we see, that the worser state preuaileth more, in altring the better to its condition, then the better to make the worse like it selfe. The infected are not so soone cured by the sound, as they tainted with their contagion; Rotten Apples lying with the sound, are not restored to soundnesse; but the sound are corrupted with their rottennesse. Dead carcases vnto living bodies, are not thereby reuiued, vnlesse it be by miracle, as we see in Elizens and Paul; but the liuing, if they continue any time vnto the dead, partake with them in their mortality and corruption. And thus it is also in our spirituall state, wherein the worser more preuaileth to corrupt the better, then the better to reforme the worse. For they being wholly flesh, are more earnest and diligent in the deuils seruice, to draw others vnto his Kingdome, then true Christians can be in the cause of God, seeing they are but in part regenerate, and the flesh opposeth the Spirit in all good actions, which either respect themselues or their neighbours. And therefore wicked men will leaue no meanes vnassayed, but will imploy their whole strength and indeuour to draw others with them into the same excess of worldlinesse and wickednesse. For first, they will infect them by their vnfauoury speeches and filthy communication, which is a powerfull meanes to taint those that beare them company with their wickednesse, according to that of the Apostle; Evill words corrupt good manners. Secondly, by their exhortations and perswasions, as the Wiseman excellently sheweth in diuers places, vnto which Syrens songs wee are apt to giue heed, vnlesse wee submit our selues to be guided and directed with the voyce of Wisedome, and be powerfully restrained with the contrary motions of Gods Spirit. Thirdly, wicked men doe much hinder them who keepe them company in the wayes of godlinesse, and prouoke them to accompany them in their sinnes, by their euill examples, especially when they see them thrive and prosper in their wickednesse, as we see in Daniel;

Amos 3.3.

Pro. 29.27.

Inter bonos bonum esse, salutem habet, inter malos vero etiam laudem, &c. Bern. in Epist.

1. King. 4.34.
Aa. 20.10.

1. Cor. 15.31.

Pro. 1.10, 11, 12.
Eccl. 5.3. & 7.13.
14.21.

Psal. 73. 2, 13.

Pro. 1. 11, 13, 14.

Psal. 20. 6.

2. Pet. 2. 7.

Eph. 5. 7, 11.

Num. 16. 26.

Apoc. 18. 4.

Exod. 23. 1.

Psal. 73. 17.

Pro. 13. 20.

who though hee were a man according to Gods owne heart, yet his foot had almost slipped, when he saw the great prosperity of the vngodly, being ready to conclude, that he had cleansed his heart in vaine, and washed his hands in innocencie. The which tentation is of greater force, when wee haue the euill example not of some few, but of the multitude, or of some great and eminent persons, whose actions aboue others, are most exemplary. Finally, wicked men draw on those who keepe them company, to haue fellowship with them in their wickednesse, by their faire promises, alluring baits, and liberall offers of rewards. And thus those sinfull wretches of whom Salomon speaketh, draw on their companions to ioyne with them in violence and oppression, by offering vnto them part of the spoile, and large rewards, to incourage them in their wickednesse: Wee shall finde (say they) all precious substance, we shall fill our houses with spoile. Cast in thy lot among vs; let vs all haue one purse. Which dangerous impediment if wee would auoyd, let vs with all care and diligence make choyce of good company, which will both by their words, mutuall exhortations, and good examples, helpe vs forward, and better our speed in the wayes of godlinesse, like runners in a race, who by struiuing who shall out-runne one another, doe all come to the goale in shorter time and with much more speed, then if they should runne alone, and haue no other to contend with them. And contrariwise, let vs with like care shunne familiar society with wicked men, though in worldly respects it is profitable vnto vs, assuring our selues, that though for the present, wee finde some benefit by such society, yet in the end our spirittuall losse will farre exceed our worldly gaine. Or if wee bee so fettered and hampered, with such neere bonds of consanguinity, alliance, necessary intercourse of dealing, or neere neighbourhood, that wee cannot goe farre from them, yet at least let it bee our grieve, that wee are constrained to liue with them, and come into their company more often then wee would, according to the example of holy Dauid, who cryed out in this case; Woe is mee, that I sojourne in Mesech, that I dwell in the tents of Kedar; and of Lot, whose righteous soule was much grieued, when liuing among the Sodomites, hee was forced to see their filthy conuersation. And to this end, let vs remember first the many exhortations vsed in the Scriptures, inciting vs, with all care and circumspection, to shunne and auoyd the society of the wicked: Bee ye not partakers with them; neither haue any fellowship with the unfruitfull workes of darkenesse. Separate your selues from them, and come out from amongst them, lest you bee partakers of their plagues. Secondly, when their prosperity allureth vs to accompany them in their euill courses, let vs not iudge according to outward appearance, nor consult with flesh and blood, but with Dauid goe into Gods Sanctuary, and there wee shall learne the end of these men, namely, that being set in slippery places, they shall quickly catch a fall, and be so wholly rooted out, that their place shall no more be found. Thirdly, that if we keepe company with the wicked, we shall not only communicate with them in their sinnes, but also in their punishments; for the companions of foolles shall be destroyed, and they that will not come out of Babylon, shall be partakers of her plagues. Finally, let vs remember, ber, that they are blessed, who walke not in the counsell of the vngodly, nor stand in the way of sinners, nor sit in the seat of the scornfull. But of these motiues I haue before spoken, and therefore content my selfe here, thus briefly to haue touched them.

C A P. III.

Of priuate impediments on the left hand, as afflictions and persecutions.

IN the left hand the world assaulteth vs with afflictions and persecutions, that it may hinder and discourage vs in the wayes of godlinesse. For first, it loadeth vs, as much as in it lyeth, with crosses and calamities, euen for righteousness sake, and then perswadeth vs, that we serue God not only in vaine, but euen to our losse: and therefore that it were our best course, to take our liberty, and to liue as others doe, seeing wee haue no other rewards for all our painfull seruice, our strictnesse of life, and abandoning of our pleasures, the vnpleasent exercises of mortification, and denying in all things our owne wills and delightfull lusts, but misery and affliction. And thus Dauid was assaulted, when hee was ready to conclude, that he had cleansed his heart, and washed his hands to no purpose in innocency, seeing he was afflicted euery morning. And with the like tentation Iob was often discouraged, when as his three friends in so many places labour to perswade him, that all his former labours in Gods seruice were vaine and of no worth, because of the extraordinary afflictions which he endured. And Jeremy likewise was so much troubled with the sight of the wicked prosperitie, and the sense of his owne miseries, that hee breaketh out into great impatience. For the removing of which impediment, wee are to know, that howsoeuer the world, and worldly men vse all their might and malice to hinder vs in our course of godlinesse, yet they are no wayes able to doe what they intend, seeing they are not the chiefe causes of our afflictions, but onely Gods instruments, who ouer-ruleth them at his pleasure, and so ordereth and disposeth of all our crosses and calamities which they inflict vpon vs, both in respect of their matter and manner, measure and time of continuance, as that they shall not any wayes hurt vs, but shall wholly tend to our good; not consume and destroy vs, but purifie and purge vs (like gold in the fire) from the drosse of our corruptions; not coole or quench our zeale and deuotion, but rather kindle and inflame them; and finally, not hinder vs at all in the duties of a godly life, but further and make vs more forward and cheerfull in performing them, causing vs, by these many tribulations, to goe more surely and safely, by the way of grace and godlinesse, into the Kingdome of heauenly ioy and happinesse.

Now these afflictions and persecutions, which the world raiseth against vs to discourage vs in all the duties of a godly life, are manifold, which in their owne nature are to flesh and blood bitter and grievous. And first, it persuereth vs with professed hatred, maligning all, with all

Psal. 1. 1.

6. Sect. 1.

How the world seeketh to hinder our course in godlinesse by afflictions and persecutions.

Psal. 73. 13.

*Jer. 12. 1.
and 20. 14, 18.*

6. Sect. 2.

Of the worlds professed hatred, whereby it seeketh to discourage vs in the duties of a godly life.

Job. 15. 9.

Jam. 4. 4.

Psal. 38. 20.

Psal. 139. 21, 23.

1am. 4. 4.

1. Iob. 2. 15.

Math. 6. 24.

Gen. 3. 15.

Joh. 15. 19, 20.

spleene and spite, who leave the world, and loue God. For though whilst we are of the world, it loueth vs, because wee are her owne, yet when Christ hath chosen vs out of the world, and we haue giuen our names vnto him, professing that wee will be his souldiers and seruants, then the world, out of that hatred which it beareth to our Lord and Master, will begin, for his sake to hate vs. And as they who make themselues friends of the world, doe, by reason of that enmity which is betweene them, make themselues thereby the enemies of God: so contrariwise, those that become friends vnto God, doe hereby make themselues enemies to the world. So David saith, that they who rendred euill for good, were his aduersaries, because he did follow the thing that was good. And therefore hee professeth the like enmity against them, because they were Gods enemies: Do not (saith he) I hate them (O Lord) that hate thee? and am I not grieved with those that speake against thee? I hate them with a perfect hatred, I count them mine enemies. The which hatred of the world, and malicious enmity against the faithfull, is a strong temptation, and great discouragement, especially to those who are of mild, gentle and peaceable dispositions, to hinder their speed in the wayes of godlinesse. Against which, that wee may be the better armed, let vs first consider, that it is a matter of meere necessity to vndergoe the worlds hatred, if we would be assured, that we either loue God, or that we are beloued of him. For such enmity there is betweene them, that he who maketh himselfe a friend to the one, doth necessarily become an enemy to the other; and if any man loue the world, the loue of the Father is not in him. So our Saniour telleth vs, that wee cannot serue God, and Mammon, being Masters of such a contrary disposition, but we shall hate the one, whilst we loue the other; or else cleaue to the one, and forsake the other. Secondly, let vs consider, that there is no great losse of the worlds loue, which doth vs little good; yea, no little hurt, seeing (like a miery dog) the more it fawneth vpon vs, the more it defileth vs; nor any great harme, yea no small gaine in the worlds hatred, seeing it doth but so much the more weane our hearts and affections from the loue of earthly vanities, that they may with more intirenesse cleaue vnto God, and bee wholly fixed vpon spirituall and heauenly excellencies. Thirdly, let vs remember, that the hatred of the world hath been from the beginning, the portion of all Gods Saints and seruants, whom it hath pursued with deadly malice, because they haue been beloued of God. Yea, aboue all others did it most hate and maligne our Lord and Saniour Iesus Christ, and therefore we must not thinke much if it pursue vs with the like malice. For as he hath told vs, The seruants are not greater then his Lord; if they haue persecuted me, they will also persecute you. Fourthly, the worlds hatred needeth not to discourage vs in the wayes of godlinesse, seeing it is vnto vs a comfortable euidence, that we are not of the world, for then it would loue his owne, but that we are the true Disciples of Iesus Christ, whom he hath chosen out of the world. Yea contrariwise, if the world should loue vs, we had iust cause to suspect our selues, seeing loue ariseth out of likenesse; neither could we be so much in the worlds fauour, vnlesse we too much fauoured it. Fifthly, the worlds hatred cannot discourage vs, if wee consider, that it is abundantly recompensed with the loue of God, and of his Saints and blessed Angels. For the worlds malice can but bring some temporary trouble, ioyned with much inward and spirituall comfort, but in the fauour of the Lord is life and blessednesse. And therefore as no wise man, who is highly in the fauour of his Prince, his chiefe Nobles, and the best of the people, will greatly care for the hatred of base gally-slaves, and the abjects of the Land, especially when the fauour of both will not stand together: so if we be truly wise for our owne good, we will not, if we be assured of Gods loue, and all his faithfull seruants regard much the hatred of the world, which can loue none but those whom God hateth. Finally, this hatred of the world for righteounesse sake, will not dismay vs, if we alwayes remember, that it shall be rewarded with everlasting happinesse, according to that of our Sauour, Blessed are ye, when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproch you, and cast out your name as euill, for the Sonne of mans sake; reioyce yee in that day, and leape for ioy; for behold, your reward is great in heauen; for in the like manner did their fathers to the Prophets.

of

But yet some cautions must be heere obserued: as first, that howsoeuer we are not to loue the world, nor to maintaine neere and inward familiarity with Gods enemies, yet in respect of our private carriage, we must behaue our selues innocently and iustly towards them, and as the Apostle speaketh (as much as in vs lieth) haue peace with all men. Secondly, we must so hate their sinnes, their worldlinesse and prophanesse, as that in the meane time we loue their persons, performing vnto them all ciuill and religious duties, whereby we may gaine them to Christ, and bee meanes (as much as in vs lieth) of their conuersion and saluation. Thirdly, that vnder colour of hating the world, we doe not carry our selues cynically and harshly, peeuisshly and contentiously with those which remaine still professed worldlings, but goe forward in the practice of all holy duties, with all meeknesse of conuersion, opposing them in nothing, but when they oppose vs in piety and righteounesse. For the world is ready to hate vs too much already, for our profession and practice of Gods true Religion, though by our peruerse behauiour, and rigid stiffenesse, euen about things indifferent, we doe not giue it any cause to hate our persons. And therefore let vs auoyd their error, who when they haue taken vpon them the profession of Christian Religion, thinke themselves bound to professe open enmity against all those who are contrary minded; and that they best approue their Christianity, when as the fire of dissension, by their tart behauiour, is kindled betweene them, because Christ came to bring a sword and fire vpon the earth, and to set at variance, euen those which are of a mans family. For in many other places, wee are earnestly exhorted to vse all meeknesse and loue, that we may win them by our conuersion who are without, vnlesse it be in the cause of God, and the defence of his truth. And therefore that place of our Sauour is not to be vnderstood so much of the doings of the faithfull, whereby standing vpon tearmes of hostility, they should prouoke the enemies of the Gospell against them, but rather of their sufferings and persecutions, which for Christs sake and the Gospell they should indure at the hands of the wicked, though they behaued themselves as meekly and mildly, as innocently and

Psal. 30. 9.

Luk. 6. 22, 23.

§. Sect. 3.
That the former poynt ought to be held with diuers cautions.
Rom. 12. 18.

Matth. 10. 34.
Luk. 12. 49.

and lovingly, as the cause of God and defence of his truth would suffer them. Or if at all, of their doings and oppositions against prophane worldlings, yet not in such things, wherein they might lawfully agree, but in matters weighty and important, as concerning Gods glory and their owne saluation; and not in spleene, and spite, or priuate reuenge, but when they haue lawfull authority to suppress their fury, & curbe in their malice; or by an open war, according to the Law of God and Nations proclaymed against them. Finally, we must take heed, that we doe not esteeme all them as worldlings, who goe not as farre as wee in the profession of Religion and the practize of holy duties; for there are Christians of all sices and ages, and as well babes as growne men in Gods family. But those onely are to be ranked in this number of worldly opposites, who are professed enemies of Christian Religion, or onely haue the name of Christians, but are in truth grosse idolaters, or wickedly prophane, who in their liues deny the power of that truth, which they outwardly professe; maligning and hating all those who loue and feare God, euen for their godlinesse sake, and displaying their banners of impiety against all grace and goodnesse. Neither doe I thinke that formall Christians, who liue ciuilly amongst vs, professing Christianity, and ioyning with vs in the publique exercises of Religion, are to be reckoned amongst these worldlings, who oppose vs, and whom we oppose, though wee cannot obserue in them any signes of sound conuerfion, or of the sincerity and power of godlinesse; (seeing our Sauour himselve is sayd to haue loued the yong man, who yet had not so farre proceeded in the course of Christianity) but prophane persons, lewd liuers, notorious blasphemers, professed scornors, and malicious opposers against the Professors and practisers of Gods true Religion.

Marke 10. 21.

§. Sect. 4.
Of the false iudgement of the world, shewed in their bitter censures of the godly.

1. King 9. 11.

And thus we may incourage our selues in the duties of a godly life, against the hatred of the world and wicked men. Let vs in the next place consider of the fruits of this hatred, from which diuers impediments doe arise, that hinder many in the wayes of godlinesse. And these are either internall in the minde and iudgement, or externall in the words and actions: of the former sort there are two notable hinderances and discouragements. The first is the false iudgement and erroneous opinion of wicked worldlings, shewed in their hard and harsh, bitter and vncharitable censures of the godly, whereby they condemne their persons, and all the good graces of God in them, with all the vertuous actions which are done by them, as euill and faultie. Their seruencie of deuotion in religious exercises, they iudge to be grosse hypocrisie; their wisdome and Christian prudence, they repute wilinesse and subtilty; their simplicity, folly; their zeale, madnesse; their patience, Stoicall apathy and stupidity; their frugality, niggardly auarice; their bounty, lawish wastfulness; their Christian forbearance and long-suffering, pusillanimity and base cowardize; their seuerity, cruelty; their resolute and absolute obedience to Gods Law, they condemne as no better then rebellion against Princes and Magistrates; their contempt of the world and earthly earthly vanities, is reputed by them cynicall and melancholike foolishnesse and folly. In a word, if wee set our selues seriously to please God, nothing that wee can doe will please the world, but all is taken at the worst, and euen our best vertues will be branded and blemished by their vniust and vncharitable censures, as blameworthy and vicious. But that this may not discourage vs in our Christian courses, let vs consider, that this hath beene euer the portion of all Gods children, to be condemned by his enemies. Thus the Prophets were censured to be opposites to Princes and States, the Apostles to be seditious persons and broachers of nouelties. Iohn the Baptists abstinence and austeritie was counted deuillish, Maries loue and bounty reputed needlesse and latish wastefulnesse. Yea, our Sauour Christ himselfe escaped not these false and vniust censures, but had his best actions blemished with the malicious censures of wicked men. His miracles done by the vertue of his diuine nature, were deemed to be done by the power of Beelzebub the prince of the deuils; For his benigne sociablenesse, he was iudged a boone-companion and a friend to Publicanes and sinners; and all his gracious words, wrested and misconstrued vnto the worst sense, which wit and malice could giue vnto them. And therefore if we will walke in their steps, we must looke for the like measure, which both our fellow seruants, and our great Lord and Master haue found before vs. Againe, let vs remember that we stand or fall to our owne Master; and as it will doe vs little good to be approued of the world, when he condemneth vs, so as little hurt, to be condemned of the world, when God and our consciences doe approue and iustifie vs. Finally, let vs know to our comfort, that the day will come, when all these vniust censures and sentences pronounced by the mouthes of malicious men, shall be wholly reuerfed; and all the sorrow and grieve caused by them, swallowed vp with rauishing ioy, when we shall heare that last sentence of approbation pronounced by our Lord and Saviour, Well done, good and faithfull seruant, &c. applauded by the acclamation of all the Saints and Angels.

Matth. 11. 18.

Matth. 26. 3.

Matth. 23. 33.

The other impediment, whereby the world laboureth to discourage all that in the sincerity of their hearts feare and serue God, is, to haue them about all other men in greatest contempt and basest esteeme. For whom God prizeth as his choicest Jewels, the world vilifieth as abiects and the refuse of all things; whom the Lord honoureth with the glorious titles and priuiledges of his owne children, and heires apparant to his heavenly Kingdome, the world despiseth as men vnworthy to liue in any humane society. And no sooner are they admitted into that holy and happy communion with God, and fellowship of his Saints, but presently worldly and wicked men shunne them as vnworthy their company. For as the vnjust man is an abomination to the iust, so he that is upright in his way, is an abomination to the wicked. And this was that stumbling block, which being cast into the way, hindered many of the Rulers from following Christ, and from embracing and professing that truth, of which their consciences were convinced, because they feared, lest hereby they should impeach their reputation,

6. Sect. 5.
Of worldly contempt, vnto which the godly are liable.
Mat. 3. 17.

Pro. 29. 27.

Iob. 12. 43.
Job. 9. 23.

Luk. 16. 15.

Iob. 5. 44.

1. Cor. 4. 3.

2. Cor. 6. 8.

Gal. 1. 10.

Math. 7. 1. 2.

Esey 51. 7, 8.

Gen. 43. 32.

reputation, and expose themselves to the contempt of their comforts, louing the praise of men, more then the praise of God. This kept the parents of the blinde man from confessing Christ, and iustifying his miracle, because the Iewes had decreed, that if any man did confesse that Iesus was Christ, he should be put out of their Synagogue, and banished from their societies and publique assemblies. Which impediment if we would remoue, wee must learne to esteeme basely of the worlds estimate, and neither to thinke better of our selues, when it honoureth vs, nor worse, when it vilifieth and despiseth vs. To which purpose let vs consider, that when wee are for righteousness sake most contemned in the eyes of the world, wee are most magnified in the eyes of God; and contrariwise, when we haue most the applause of men in our euill courses, we are esteemed of God most vile and abied, according to that of our Sauour, That which is highly esteemed amongst men, is abominable in the sight of God. Let vs remember, that we cannot immoderately affect the applause of men, and maintaine faith and a good conscience. For as our Sauour demandeth: How can yee beleue, which receiue honour one of another, and seeke not the honour that cometh from God onely? That we can neuer hold out constantly in our course of Christianity, vnlesse we can with the Apostle, esteem it a very small thing to be iudged of mans iudgement; and can be content with him, by honour and dishonour, euill report and good report, to goe forward in the duties of a godly life, which if wee performe with neuer so much diligence & zeale, yet if therein we doe not ayme chiefly to please God more then men, we shall not be the seruants of Christ, but of the world, seeing we will be willing to lay aside our profession and holy practice, when the world censureth and condemneth them. Let vs know, that it will little auail vs at the day of death or iudgement, to haue had the approbation and applause of men, when as God and our owne consciences shal condemne vs; nor be any cause of griefe at that day, when we call to minde, that for the pleasing and honouring God in all Christian duties, we haue displeased the world, and brought our selues into contempt with men; when as the Lord & our owne consciences shal approve & iustifie vs. Let vs consider, that as the praise & applause of men is mutable and momentary, so likewise their contempt, dispraises and false censures; of which wee within a while shall be acquitted, and they being repayed according to their owne measure, shall be iudged and condemned. The which argument the Prophet vseth to encourage vs in this case: Harken vnto me, ye that know righteousness, the people in whose heart is my Law; feare yee not the reproch of men, neither be afraid of their revilings; for the moth shall eate them up, as a garment, and the Worme shall eate them up like wool: but my righteousness shall be for euer, and my saluation from generation to generation. Finally, let vs remember, that it hath beene alwaies the lot of the Righteous, who haue truely feared God, and made conscience of all their waies, to be vilified and basely esteemed amongst wicked worldlings. Thus the Israelites, because they serued God according to his will, by offering vnto him such sacrifices as he required, were so contemned and despised of the idolatrous idolatrous Egyptians, that they accounted it an abomination to eat with them. Of this, the true Church complayneth, and against this it prayeth: Haue mercy vpon vs, O Lord, haue mercie vpon vs, for we are exceedingly filled with contempt. Our soule is exceedingly filled with the scorn of those that are at ease, and with the contempt of the proud. So likewise David complayneth; I am small and despised; yet doe I not forget thy precepts. And the Apostle Paul speaking of himselfe, and of other Gods faithfull Ministers, saith, that they were made and reputed as the filth of the world, and the off-scouring of all things. Which Saints and seruants of God wee must be contented to accompany in their contempt and vile esteeme, when by the profession and practice of the truth we fall into it, if euer wee meane to accompany them in glory. Yea, our Saviour Christ himselfe was content for our sakes to be contemned and despised amongst men, as it was foretold by the Propheer, and whilest he performed the duties of his calling, to be accounted a friend and companion of Publicanes and sinners, yea, to be himselfe esteemed a notorious sinner; a prophaner of the Sabbaths, whilest hee healed on them; a Sorcerer, whilest he did miracles; a Wine-bibber, whilest he consorted with sinners after a familiar manner, that he might call them to repentance; and lastly, after a despised life, to die a contemptible and reprochfull death, euen the death of the Crosse, and thereby to be numbred amongst the wicked. And therefore why should the members looke for honour and high esteeme, where the Head was so scorned and contemned? Why should wee not for his sake deny our selues and our owne credit and reputation amongst men, who therefore despise vs, because wee deuote our selues vnto his seruice? Why should wee not thinke such contempt our chiefeest glory, and the base esteeme of the world sufficiently recompenced, when wee are dignified with the title of Gods seruants and sonnes, and with that precious account which he maketh of vs? Why should we not with patience and ioy, follow our Head in the same way, by which he ascended vnto glorie, comforting our selues, according to his example, against all contempt and reproch, by looking vpon the ioy which is set before vs?

LIB. 6. Private impediments hindring a godly life.

767

Gen. 43. 32.

Psal. 123. 3, 4.

Psal. 119. 141.

1. Cor. 4. 13.

Esa. 53. 2, 3.

Heb. 12. 2.

C A P. VI.

Of externall impediments whereby the world hindreth vs in the duties of a godly life; and first, slaunders and derision.

And these are the impediments, which are internall in the mindes and iudgements of wicked worldlings. Those which are externall, arise from their words and actions. Concerning the former, the world seeketh to discourage all those which truly feare God in their profession and holy practice by their contumelies and foule aspersions, slaunders and reproches. For when they haue nothing in truth to object against them, in respect of their holy and vnblameable conuersation, then

6. Sect. I.
How we may be armed against the slaunders of the world.

1. King. 18. 17.

Amos 7. 10.

Acl. 6. 11.

Acl. 16. 30. &

17. 7. & 18. 13.

Acl. 21. 28. &

24. 5.

Matth. 12. 24.

& 26. 61.

Luk. 23. 2.

Nos modò id
agamus, ut malè de nobis nemo loqui absque mendatio possit.
Hieronym. ad
Celsianum.
1. Pet. 3. 16. &
2. 12.

imitating their father the deuill, who is a false accuser of the brethren; they loade them with calumnies and slaunders, either by laying to their charge the things which they neuer did, or reporting things materially true after a false and malicious manner, that with these obloquies and reproches they may discourage them in their Christian courses, and discountenance and disgrace euen their best actions. Thus Ahab accused Elias to be a troubler of Israel; and Amanias Amos to haue conspired against the King in the midst of the house of Israel, and that the Land was not able to beare his words. Thus they slaundered Stephen, that he had spoken blasphemous words against Moses and against God. Paul and Silas, that they were troublers of the Citie and State, that they did contrary to the decrees of Cæsar, saying, that there was another King, one Iesus. That they perswaded men to worship God contrarie to the Law. That they taught all men euery where, against the People, Law and Temple, and had polluted that holy place by bringing Greekes into it. And thus by Tertullus they slaundered Paul, affirming that he was a pestilent fellow, and a mouer of sedition among the Iewes throughout the world, &c. Yea, so malignant are these blacke mouthes, that they dared to cast feule and false aspersions vpon our Sauour Christ himselfe, and blot and blemish the white and pure robe of his innocencie, with their vniust and reprochfull calumnies. And such measure his Saints and seruants found at the hands of wicked men, in the time of the persecuting Emperours; such haue they found since, and shall doe vnto the end of the world. Against which discouragement, if we would be armed, wee must remember, that this needeth not to seeme any strange thing vnto vs, seeing our Sauour Christ hath foretold, that this should be the lot of all his seruants, to be reuiled and slaundered for his sake and the Gospels. That our Head and Lord hath borne these reproches for our sake, and therefore wee his members and seruants must not thinke much, if wee suffer the like for him and his truth. That there was neuer any so deare vnto God, nor innocent amongst men, who haue not beene whipped with the scourge of malicious tongues; and therefore we must not thinke to goe alone vpon earth, but must here beare them company, if euer wee hope to enioy their society in that heauenly happinesse. Secondly, if we would not be discouraged with the obloquies and slaunders of wicked men, let vs preserue our innocencie, and walke vnblameably in this euill generation, taking great care so to carry our selues in all Holinesse & Righteousnesse of conuersation, that no man may speake euill of vs without a lie; and so the testimony of a good conscience will more comfort and support vs in all our Christian courses, then the slaunders of wicked men shall be able to daunt and dismay vs. And this is the best way to conuince them of falsehood, not onely vnto others, but euen to their owne consciences, and euen to make them like and loue (if they belong vnto God) the Religion which we professe. Neither can any thing more powerfully beate backe these poysonous darts of slanderous reports, then the brestplate of righteousness and integrity, so as they shall neuer wound our heart, though for a time they may blemish the brightnesse of our fame. No verball

verball Apologies can so cleare and iustifie vs, and conuince our aduersaries of fals-hood and malice, as this reall confutation of an innocent and vnblameable life. Finally, let vs consider, that they are pronounced blessed by our Sauour, who are thus reuiled and slandered vniuſtly and wrongfully; and the more we are thus disgraced and dishonoured in this life, the more wee shall be aduanced and glorified in the life to come; In which regard there is no iust cause of mourning, when wee are thus falsely traduced for Christs sake and the Gospell: Yea, rather we should reioyce and be exceeding glad, because our reward is great in heauen, as our Sauour hath taught vs.

The second impediment is the derision, scoffes and scornes of wicked worldlings, whereby they disgrace the persons of the godly, and discountenance and discourage them in all religious and holy duties. The which they doe either by their words, as in taunting speeches, making a iest of their profession and holy practice, their hearing, reading, and studying of the Scriptures, praying, godly communication, and such religious exercises; or by branding them with opprobrious names, as Lollards, Hugonotes, Puritans, Sectaries, Bible-bearers, Holy brethren and such like; or else by scornfull gestures, as nodding, shaking the head, mowing, ieering, laughing at them, and the like. The which is a great impediment that hindreth many (especially such as are of milde, modest and ingenuous natures) from making any outward profession of Gods true Religion, and performing of any religious exercises; or at least, to proceed in them with much discouragement and disquietnesse of minde; as appeareth by those pittifull complaints which they haue from time to time made vnto God, of these indignities offered vnto them by their spitefull aduersaries. Thus the Church complaineth, that Gods enemies did hisse and gnash their teeth against them; that they were a derision to all the people, and their song all the day. And that in their bitter mourning and day of affliction, they in a taunting maner required of them, that they would be merry and sing one of the songs of Sion. That they were become a reproch to their neighbours, a scorne and derision to them that were round about them. That they were made a by-word among the Heathen, a shaking of the head among the people. Thus Iob complaineth, I am as one mocked of his neighbour, who calleth vpon God, & he answereth him: The iust and vpright man is laughed to scorne. So Dauid: The proud haue had me greatly in derision, with hypocriticall mockers as feasts they gnashed vpon me with their teeth. They that did sit in the gate, spake against me, and I was the song of the drunkards. And speaking of himselfe as a tipe of Christ, he saith; All they that see me, laugh me to scorne, they shoote out the lip & shake the head. By this, Iobs misery was much aggravated, when as wicked men made him their song and by-word. And Ieremie brought to such impatience, that he resolved to speake no more in the name of the Lord, because he was in derision dayly, & euery one reproched and mocked him.

But howsoeuer this is a great and grievous tentation, yet we must take heed that wee be not so discouraged thereby, as to desist, or so much as slacken our pace in the waies of godlinesse; but though we sometime stumble at it & catch a fall, yet we must not lie still & quite

Matth. 5. 11, 12

§. Sect. 2.
Of derision and scoffes, which the world useth to discourage the godly.

Lam. 2. 16. &
3. 14.

Psal. 137. 3.

Psal. 79. 4.

Psal. 119. 5. &
35. 16.

Psal. 69. 12.

Psal. 22. 7.

Iob 30. 9.

Ier. 20. 7, 8.

§. Sect. 3.
How wee may be armed against the derisions, and scornes of worldlings.

Psal. 44. 13, 17,
18.

Psal. 119. 51.

Gen. 21. 9.

2 Sam. 6. 16.

2 Chro. 36. 15,
16.

Ezek. 33. 32.

Neh. 4. 1, 4.

Act. 2. 13.

Luk. 23. 11.

Matth. 27. 27.
to 41.

Luk. 23. 31.

Matth. 10. 24, 25.

giue ouer our profession and holy practice, but rise vp againe, and goe in our course with renewed resolution: According to the example of the Church of God, who though they were somewhat daunted and grieued with the scoffes and derisions of the wicked, yet they did not forget God, nor deale falsely in his covenants; Their heart turned not backe; neither did their steps turne from his way. And of holy David, who professeth, that though the proud had him greatly in derision, yet he declyned not from Gods Law. Vnto which resolution that wee may attaine, let vs consider first, that herein no new thing doth betide vs, but that which all Gods Saints and seruants haue suffered at the hands of the wicked from time to time. For thus Ismael derided Isaac, and (as it is probable) the promises of God made vnto him, and all the faithfull in his seed. Nichol scoffed at the zeale of holy David, when she saw him dancing before the Arke. Thus the Israclites scorned Gods Prophets and messengers that spake vnto them in the Word of the Lord: And made themselues sport with Ezechiels Sermons, as if he had beene some pleasant Musician. Finally, thus Sanballas and Tobiah derided Nehemiah and the Iewes, when they set them seriously to doe the worke of the Lord. And the Iewes scoffed at the Apostles, when they spake with strange tongues the wonderfull workes of God, as though they had beene drunke with new wine. Yea, our Sauour Christ himselve, in whom all grauity and wisdom shined, and in whose actions Might and Maiesty, Grace and Goodnesse clearly appeared, was notwithstanding no whit priuiledged and exempted from the derision and scornes of wicked worldlings. For the Pharisees laughed at his diuine Sermons. Herod and the souldiers in scorne clothe him in white and purple, crowne him with thornes, bow the knee before him, and flowtingly salute him as King of the Iewes. Yea, in his bitter passion (which he suffering as innocent, should haue drawne from all men euen teares of blood) they sported themselues, nodded their heads, and made themselues merry with his lamentable crie and pittifull complaint, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? Now if they haue done these things to a greene tree, fruitfull in all grace and goodnesse, what will they doe to a drie and barraine? If they haue thus scoffed and derided our Lord and Master, let vs not, who are his poore and vnworthy seruants, thinke much to be thus vsed: If he haue suffred all these taunts and scornes for our sakes, why should wee thinke it much, to suffer with patience and ioy the like or greater (if it were possible) for his sake and the Gospels? Yea, if he haue meekely borne our sinnes and sorrowes, and shed his precious blood, and indured the heauie wrath of God due vnto vs, that he might saue and deliuer vs out of the hands of all our enemies; how vngratefull are we for all his loue, if wee will not for his sake indure a taunt, a spitefull scorne or reprochfull name, but chuse rather to neglect the duties of his seruice, and to runne with wicked worldlings vnto the same excesse of riot? So oft therefore as the scoffes of prophane men discourage and dis-hearten vs in Christian duties, let vs animate and strengthen our resolutions in them, by

by looking, with the eye of faith, vpon our Sauour Christ, hanging naked vpon the Crosse, and dying a shamefull death for our sinnes, contemning this disgrace, and swallowing vp this shame with the infinitenesse of his loue. Let vs be content to accompany him in despising these despites, that we may also accompany him in glory and happinesse; according to that of the Apostle; Let vs runne with patience, the race which is set before vs, looking vnto Iesus, the Author and finisher of our faith, who for the ioy that was set before him, indured the Crosse, despised the shame, and is set downe at the right hand of the Throne of God. For consider him that indured such contradiction of sinners against himselfe, lest wee bee weary and faint in our minds.

Secondly, let vs consider, that this Christian apology in the profession of the truth, and practice of all holy and Christian duties, is a matter of vrgent necessity, which as neerly concerneth vs, as the euermlasting saluation of our soules. For they that will be Christs Disciples, must take vp their crosse daily, and follow him; and bee contented, for his sake and the Gospels, to forsake kindred and friends, houses, lands, and life it selfe, if they be called thereunto. Now how shall we with patience and constancy indure for Christs sake, wounds and stabs, if wee shrink for words and scoffes? How shall wee euer hope to suffer racks and gibbets, fire and sword, for the profession of the truth, and the practice of Christian duties; if we be daunted with euery small disgrace, and discouraged in them with reprochfull names, and scomefull taunts? Let vs thinke with our selues, that if we cannot indure causelesse shame before men, which is accompanied with true glory, how shall we be able to beare that euermlasting shame and confusion of face, when as Christ shall be ashamed to acknowledge vs for his, before his Father, his holy Saints, and blessed Angels, because we haue been ashamed of him and his truth? Now that wee may performe this duty, which is so necessary, with cheerfulness and delight, and contemne the derisions and scornings of gracelesse men, when they scoffe at vs for the performance of Christian duties, blushing for shame that we should be thus ashamed; let vs consider, that when wee are most derided of the wicked world, for the conscionable performance of any Christian duties, we are then most approued of God; and therefore when they seeke to daunt vs with their scoffes, and to driue vs from our Christian hold with gibes and reproches; let vs oppose this as a shield of strength against them, saying vnto our soules, My defence is of God, who saucth the vpright in heart. Let vs comfort and cheere our selues with the peaceable testimony of a good conscience, and our inward ioy in well-doing; and with the applause of the holy Angels who looke vpon vs, and the approbation and praise of all that feare God. Let vs remember, that they are pronounced blessed by our Sauour, who are thus abused for righteousness sake, and that they shall raigne with him in his glory, who haue suffered with him in these disgraces: that then, for their shame, they shall receiue double honour, and for confusion, they shall reioyce in their portion, and euermlasting ioy shall be vnto them. In which respect, the Apostle Peter exhorteth vs to reioyce, in as much as we are partakers of Christs sufferings, that when his glory shall be reuealed, we may be glad also with excee-

Heb. 12. 2, 3.

§. Sect. 4.
Of the necessity of Christian Apology and profession of the truth.
Luk. 9. 23.

Math. 10. 33.
Mark. 8. 38.

Psal. 7. 10.

Mat. 5. 10, 11.
Luk. 6. 22.

Esa. 61. 7.

1. Pet. 4. 14.

2. Cor. 6. 8.

Heb. 13. 13, 14.

ding ioy. And therefore let no scoffes and scornes discourage vs, but let vs, with the Apostle, approoue our selues in all things, by honour, and dishonour, euill report, and good report; and accompany our Sauour Christ bearing his reproch, that we may accompany him in glory; for we haue heere no abiding City, but we seeke one to come, as the Apostle speaketh.

CAP. VII.

Of worldly persecutions, and how we may be strenghtened against them.

§. Sect. 1.

Of the worlds cruelty, in persecuting the godly.

WE haue shewed in the former Chapters, what impediments the world, and wicked men cast in the way, to hinder our profession and practice of the true Religion, which respect their iudgment and affections, their words and outward gestures: and now we are to intreat of those which respect their works and actions. And these are their contumelious and malicious handling of them, and the bitter persecutions which they raise against them, that they may either hinder them wholly from proceeding in the course of Christianity, or at least cause them to goe on with much discouragement and discomfort. The which contumelies and persecutions are great and manifold; as the pursuing of them with all malice and extremity, from place to place, apprehending them as malefactours, haling them before their Iudgment seats, false accusations, vniust condemnations, imprisonment, and banishments, fire and sword, tortures & punishments, executed and inflicted in the most exquisite manner which wit and malice can deuise and impose. And this malicious rage of wicked men, the Prophet Esay in liuely manner expresseth: The act of violence (saith hee) is in their hands; Their feet run to euill, and they make haste to shed innocent blood: their thoughts are thoughts of iniquity, wasting and destruction are in their paths. The way of peace they know not, and there is no iudgement in their goings. Neither doth the world vse such spite and spleene towards the most outrageous offender that euer liued, as it doth to the Saints and seruants of God, for the truth sake. For towards them oftentimes it quite blunteth the poynt and edge of humane lawes, and commonly moderateth and mitigateth the extreme rigour of them in their punishments; but against the faithfull it sharpeneth the poynt and edge where none is; yea, deuise new lawes, when the old restraine their malice. And whereas they content themselues with those punishments which the lawes determine against the most notorious and hainous offenders, and when they are forced for the safety and preservation of humane societies to execute them, they doe it as the Law requireth, and oftentimes with some pity and compassion: contrariwise, when they haue to doe with those, who being Gods faithfull seruants, haue made themselues liable to their lawes, they sport themselues in their torments, and out of meere malice to them for their Religion and piety, they execute the Lawes with all sauage cruelty, adding both by their words and actions, many outrages ouer and aboue those punishments which the Law requireth; as we see in the example of our

Esa. 59. 6, 7, 8.

our Saviour Christ, and the theeues crucified with him. For whereas they contented themselues with their simple death, without any additaments of malice, they could neuer satisfie their spitefull rage, in vexing and tormenting our Saviour Christ, but vsed him with all contumelious reproch, spitting vpon, and buffetting him, scourging and crowning him with thornes, scoffing and deriding him, mocking and moing at him, giuing vnto him when he thirsted, gall and vineger, and insulting ouer him in mirth and triumph, when they saw the bitter anguish of his soule. The which also is to be obserued in the examples of those punishments which haue been inflicted vpon most hainous malefactours; as murtherers, traytors, paricides, and vpon the innocent Martyrs of Iesus Christ, if wee compare the one with the other. Of which, no other reason can be giuen, but that the world loueth her owne, and hateth those which belong vnto God, affecting the persons of wicked men, and setting themselues onely against their crimes, not out of any loue towards God, or simple hatred of their sinnes, as being transgressions of his Lawes; but out of selfe loue, because their offences are against humane lawes, which if they should not be preserued and maintained, obserued and obeyed, societies could not subsist, nor the safety and welfare of their owne estates bee otherwise vp-held. Whereas contrariwise, it maligneth and hateth euen the very persons of the godly, as being the members of Iesus Christ, onely for their profession of Religion, and practice of holy duties, and in these respects can neuer sufficiently disgorge its malice against them.

Now the meanes to remoue the former impediments, are manifold. The first is, to consider, that it hath alwayes, from the beginning of the world, been the lot of Gods children, to be persecuted of the wicked; in which regard it is vnto vs a notable and comfortable euidence, that wee loue God, and are beloued of him, when the wicked world maligneth and pursueth vs with all rage and cruelty, for righteousness sake. For thus Cain persecuted Abel, because his seruice was accepted of God. Thus Pharaoh and the Egyptians raged against the Israelites, when they did but make mention of going into the Wildernesse to offer sacrifice. Thus the wicked Kings, and more wicked Priests, persecuted Gods true Prophets; the Scribes and Pharises, the Apostles of Iesus Christ; the idolatrous Emperours, the Christians of the Primitiue Church; and the limmes of Antichrist, the holy Martyrs, because they professed Gods true Religion, and brought forth the fruits of it in their holy practice. More particularly, Dauid often professeth, that he was maligned by his wicked enemies without cause, onely because he did that which was good, and sought in all his courses to be approued of God. And the Apostle Paul in many words setteth downe the grievous persecutions which hee often suffered at their hands, who were enemies to Gods truth. But as these holy Saints of God were not by all these persecutions discouraged in their course of godlinesse; but the more boysterously the stormes of malicious rage blowed against them, the more firmly and constantly they held the cloke of their Christian profession and holy practice; according to that of Dauid; Many are my persecutors and mine enemies; yet doe I not decline from thy testimonies: so must we doe in this case, following their good example,

§. Sect. 2.
That it hath alwayes been the lot of the godly to bee persecuted in the world.

Gen. 4.

2. Cor. II. 23,
24, &c.

Psal. 119. 157.

Mat. 5. 12.

Job. 15. 20.

1. Pet. 4. 1.

1. Pet. 1. 6, 7.

1. Jam. 1. 2, 12.

if we would haue any comfortable assurance that God will thinke vs worthy to be ranked in this number. And this argument, taken from these examples, our Sauour vseth to arme his Disciples against this discouragement: Reioyce (saith he) and be exceeding glad, seeing your reward is great in heauen: for so persecuted they the Prophets which were before you. Yea, our Sauour Christ himselfe hath begun to vs, that wee may not feare to pledge him, and hath drunke the deepest draught in this bitter cup of worldly persecutions. For what mischief could hell it selfe raise vp out of her infernall bowels, what cruell rage and exquisite vexations and torments could malicious wit deuise, which were not inflicted vpon this innocent Lambe, the Lord our righteousnesse? Now what can be a more effectuell reason to moue vs with all patience and cheerfulness, to indure the greatest extremities for Christs sake, then to remember what grievous torments he hath suffered for vs, who were strangers and enemies vnto God, and the children of wrath as well as others? For if our great and glorious Generall, and Soueraigne King, hath thus exposed himselfe to the extremest dangers, and thrust himselfe into the thickest crowd of enemies, where he hath receiued grisly and mortall wounds, that hee might rescue and recouer vs, who were taken captiue by them, and set vs at liberty; how valiantly should we fight his battels, euen vnto blood, against the enemies of our saluation, especially considering, that he looketh vpon vs, encourageth vs to the fight, supporteth and strengtheneth vs with his grace and holy Spirit, defendeth and succoureth vs when we are over-matched, raiseth vs vp when wee are foyled, and holdeth in his hand the Crowne of victory, being ready to set it vpon our heads, when wee haue finished the fight? And this argument our Sauour vseth to encourage vs in all our sufferings and persecutions: Remember (saith he) the word that I said vnto you; The seruant is not greater then his Lord. If they haue persecuted mee, they will also persecute you. And so likewise the Apostle Peter; For as much then (saith he) as Christ hath suffered for vs in the flesh, arme your selues likewise with the same mind: for he that hath suffered in the flesh, hath ceased from sin, &c. The which our persecutions we may well suffer with greater patience and comfort, if we consider, that they are not punishments for our sinnes, from all which, Christ hath fully freed vs, but the trials of our faith, which being approued, shall be crowned with euerlasting ioy and happinesse. In which regard we haue cause greatly to reioyce (as the Apostle Peter speaketh) though now for a season (if need be) we are in heavinesse, through manifold temptations; that the trial of our faith, being much more precious then the gold that perisheth, though it be tryed with fire, might be found vnto praise, and honour, and glory, at the appearing of Iesus Christ. So the Apostle Iames, My brethren, count it all ioy when ye fall into diuers temptations; of which hee afterwards rendreth this reason, Because blessed is the man that indureth temptation: for when he is tryed, he shall receiue the Crowne of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that loue him. And indeed, what a wonderfull priuiledge is this? and what great cause doth it minister vnto vs of comfort and reioicing, when we consider that the Lord hath vouchsafed vnto vs this great honour, to suffer afflictions for his owne glory, and the furthering and assuring of our saluation, when as he might haue iustly inflicted them, and and farre greater vpon vs for our sinnes, and to the burthen of our sufferings, haue deseruedly added the vncomfortable waight of shame and infamie? All which blessed priuiledges we shall lose, and run into the contrary mischieses, and euen hellish condemnation, if we shrinke from our profession and holy practice, for feare of persecution, and refuse to suffer for his sake, who hath suffered so much for vs. For he that loueth his life, shall lose it; and hee that hateth his life in this world, shall keepe it vnto life eternall. And againe, If any man come to me (saith our Sauour) and hate not his father and mother, and wife and children, and brethren and sisters, and his owne life also (namely, when they come in comparifon with Christ, and when the loue of both cannot stand together) hee cannot be my Disciple. And whosoever doth not beare his crosse and come vnto me, cannot be my Disciple.

Iob. 12. 25.

Luk. 14. 26, 27.

§. Sect. 3.

That our Sauour hath foretold these persecutions.

Luk. 9. 23, 24, 25

Mat. 16. 24, 25.

Mat. 14. 22.

2. Tim. 3. 12.

Luk. 14. 27, 28, &c.

Secondly, let vs consider that our Sauour Christ hath long agoe foretold, that whosoever wil be his Disciples, must suffer in this world troubles and persecutions, and that those who will attaine vnto heauenly happinesse, must trauaile vnto it by that afflicted way which himselfe and all his seruants haue gone before them. If any man (saith he) will come after mee, let him deny himselfe, and take vp his Crosse daily and follow me. For whosoever will saue his life, shall lose it; and whosoever will lose his life for my sake, shall saue it. Now what is a man aduantaged, if he gaine the whole world, and lose himselfe, or be cast away? So the Apostles first offered the Crosse vnto them, who would afterwards weare the Crowne, and haue told vs before-hand, that by many tribulations we must enter into the Kingdome of God. And that whosoever will liue godly in Christ Iesus, shall suffer persecution. And therefore our Sauour Christ seriously aduiseeth vs, that before we take vpon vs the profession of Christianity, we first sit downe and cast vp our accounts, examining our selues, whether we can be content to suffer with him, that wee may afterwards raigne with him; and to indure afflictions and persecutions in this world, that wee may eternally triumph with him in glory and happinesse in the world to come. Now what more faire dealing could be vsed, then to tell vs before-hand what we must trust to, and before hee entertaine vs into his seruice, to acquaint vs thorowly with our worke which he requireth of vs, before we can receiue our wages which wee expect from him? If indeed hee had allured vs to serue him, by promising that we should inioy pleasures, riches, and honours in the world, and that for his sake wee should bee well accepted and fauoured of all men, wee should haue had great cause of discouragement, when wee should come so farre short of our hopes, and finde nothing in the world but crosses and afflictions, paines for pleasures, pouerty for riches, and for glory, shame and disgrace; for then seeing his promises faile in things that concerne this life, we had cause to doubt of those that respect the life to come. But now contrariwise, seeing he hath foretold, that we must in this world suffer troubles and persecutions, and be hated of all men for his Name sake, and that afterwards, when by our patient suffering we haue approoued our faith and loue towards him, he will crowne these his graces in vs with ioy and happinesse in the life to come; our afflictions and persecutions should not daunt and dismay vs; yea, rather wee should reioyce in them, as the infallible signes of our future hopes, for hauing found Christs Word verified

§. Sect. 4.
That worldly persecutions cannot greatly hurt vs.

Mat. 10. 28.

1. Pet. 4. 19.

2. Cor. 1. 5.

Job. 15. 11.

Act. 16. 25.

§. Sect. 5.
Of the patience which the Saints
haue shewed in suffering persecutions.

Act. 5. 41.

Heb. 10. 34.

Heb. 11. 35, 36.

rified in the first part of his predictions, respecting our afflictions, and persecutions, we may vndoubtedly expect, that we shall finde it also true in that part which concerneth our crowne of victory and heavenly ioyes, which after our momentany sufferings, we shall euerlastingly possesse, according to the gracious promises which he hath made vnto vs.

Thirdly, let vs encourage our selues against these persecutions, because they cannot greatly hurt vs; for first, they are either light and easie, if they be long and tedious; or short and momentany, if they be sharpe and grievous. For God hath graciously so composed and framed our natures, that their frailty and weakenesse cannot hold out to beare any heavy burthens, and hath made them mortall and of such short continuance, that their afflictions and grievances must needs be short and momentany. Secondly, the greatest persecutions which rage and malice can raise against vs, can but reach vnto the body, and onely extend to the time of this life; but cannot at all hurt the soule, nor hinder our happinesse in the life to come. In which respect, our Sauour encourageth vs against these persecutions; Feare not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soule, but rather feare him who is able to destroy both body and soule in hell. Thirdly, these persecutions cannot much hurt vs, because our gracious God keepeth and preserueth vs, so as we cannot faint and fall, and pulleth out their sting, so as they shall neuer be able to giue vnto vs any mortall wounds. And therefore as the Apostle Peter exhorteth, Let them that suffer according to the will of God, commit the keeping of their soules to him in well-doing, as vnto a faithfull Creatour. Fourthly, because in our sharpest persecutions we are so inwardly comforted with the consolation of Gods Spirit, that in our greatest sufferings our ioy may well exceed our griefe. For as the sufferings of Christ abound in vs, so also our consolation aboundeth by Christ; as the Apostle found in his owne experience. And this is that lasting and full ioy that our Sauour promised to giue, and so to continue it vnto vs, that no man should bee able to take it from vs. This is that ioy which causeth vs to reioyce in tribulation, singing vnto God with Paul and Silas Psalmes of praise, when our backs are tome with stripes, and our feet fastened in the stocks.

Fourthly, let vs encourage and comfort our selues against all persecutions, by remembering the patience and meekenesse, the ioy and thankfulness which the Saints and holy Martyrs of God haue shewed, in suffering all crosses and calamities, tortures and grievous paines which the wicked world could inflict vpon them. For wel may we go forward in this afflicted way with ioy and comfort, when as we haue the Word of God to be our guide, the holy Martyrs of former ages, as precedents for our imitation, and the faithfull that now line with vs, to beare vs company. Thus wee reade that the Apostles reioiced, that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for the Name of Christ. Thus the Saints tooke ioyfully the spoiling of their goods, knowing in themselves that they had in heauen, a better and more enduring substance. And when they were tortured, accepted not deliuerance, that they might obtaine a better resurrection. Others had triall of cruell mockings and scourgings, bonds and imprisonment: They were stoned, sawne in sunder, tempted and slaine with the sword, &c. And thus the holy Martyrs of the Primitive Church, and of later dayes, euen tyred their tormentors with their patience and constancie, out-faced their most bitter tortures with their cheerefull countenances, reioyced in the scorching flames, and euen before they died, triumphed ouer death. And therefore (as the Apostle exhorteth) seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let vs lay aside euery weight, and the sinne which doth so easily beset vs, and let vs run with patience vnto the race that is set before vs, &c.

Primitiue

Fifthly, let vs consider the great and rich rewards which are giuen graciously vnto all those who suffer for the truth and righteousness sake. For first, in it selfe it is an high and holy priuiledge, to suffer any thing for the name of Christ, which the Apostle maketh a higher degree of dignity then simply to beleue in him to iustification, which is common to ordinary Christians; For vnto you (saith he) it is giuen in the behalfe of Christ, not onely to beleue on him, but also to suffer for his sake; which is a prerogative peculiar to the holy Martyrs. In which regard, the Apostle James would haue vs to account it not an ordinary matter of common reioycing, but of exceeding ioy, when wee are thus tempted and tryed. But how much more haue we cause of vspeakable ioy in our greatest afflictions and persecutions, if we consider the present comfort which wee feele in conscience of well-doing, and the inward peace and ioy in the holy Ghost, which alwayes accompany our sufferings, for the profession of the truth, and practice of holy duties; and the future rewards which God hath promised to all that indure them with constancie and patience. For if we lose this life which is mortall and momentany, we shall in lieu thereof find such an one as is immortall and everlasting; If we suffer with Christ, we shall also reigne with him. If we be persecuted for righteousness sake, we are by Christs owne mouth pronounced blessed, because the Kingdome of heauen belongeth vnto vs. So the Apostle Peter; If ye suffer for righteousness sake, happy are ye, and be not afraid of their terrour, neither be troubled: yea, rather as our Saviour exhorteth; Reioyce, and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heauen. And the Apostle Peter likewise willet vs to reioyce, in as much as we are partakers of Christs sufferings, because when his glory shall be revealed, we shall be glad also with exceeding ioy. And surely, if we consider well of it, there can be no greater cause of sound reioycing, seeing there is no comparison betweene our present sorrowes, and future ioyes; betweene our smart of afflictions, and solace of heavenly delight, either in their quantity or continuance, according to that of the Apostle, I reckon that the sufferings of the present time, are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in vs; for after that we haue suffered but a little while, God will call vs into his eternall glory by Christ Iesus; and as the Apostle speaketh, These light and momentany afflictions, shall cause vnto vs a farre more exceeding and eternall weight of glory. And therefore let vs not looke to the sorrowfull seed-time, but to the ioyfull harvest; not to our present labours, but to our Sabbath of rest; not to our bleeding wounds in the Christian Warfare, but to our victory and everlasting triumph; not to the fire and faggot, gibbet and sword, but to the glorious Crowne, which shall be set vpon his head that fighteth vnto the death. Let vs looke to Iesus, the Author and finisher of our faith, who for the ioy that was set before him,

indured

Heb. 12. 1.

§. Sect. 6.
That our persecutions for righteousness sake shall bee richly rewarded.
Phil. 1. 29.

Iam. 1. 2.

Iob. 12. 35.

2. Tim. 2. 12.

Mat. 5. 10.

1. Pet. 3. 14.

Mat. 5. 11.

1. Pet. 4. 13.

Rom. 8. 18.

1. Pet. 5. 10.

2. Cor. 4. 17.

Apo. 2. 10.

Heb. 12. 2.

Apoc. 21. 8.

Mat. 10. 33, 34.
Ch. 7. 23.

Mark. 8. 36.

indured the Crosse, despising the shame, and is now set downe at the right hand of the Throne of God; that so following his example, wee may partake with him in ioy and happinesse. On the other side, let vs set before vs, the dreadful estate of those men at the day of Iudgement, who either to please men, or to gaine their worldly ends, or finally, for feare of punishment, haue denyed Christ and his Truth, either verbally with their mouthes, or really in their actions. For amongst other desperate sinners, the fearefull shall bereiect of Christ, and haue their portion in that lake which burneth with fire and brimstone. And as they haue denyed him before men, so he will deny them before his Father in heauen; saying, Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity; I know yee not. Suppose therefore that wee could by neglecting all Christian duties, attaine vnto the honours, riches, and pleasures of the earth, which men so eagerly hunt after, yet alas, what inestimable losse is in this purchase? for as our Sauour speaketh; What will it profit vs to gaine the whole world, and lose our owne soules?

CAP. VIII.

Of the impediments of a godly life, which arise from scandals and offences.

§. Sect. 1.
The first scandal arising from the prosperity of the wicked.

And thus haue I shewed what are the vsuall impediments which the world and worldly men vse to hinder vs in the wayes of godlinesse, both in respect of their iudgement and affections, their words and actions. Now we are to intreate of such as arise from scandals and offences, which they commonly cast in our way, as stumbling blockes, to discourage vs in the course of Christianity. The first whereof, is the flourishing estate of wicked worldlings, who prosper in their sinfull courses, and abound in riches, honours, and pleasures, as though they were highly in Gods fauour, and were approoued of him in all their courses, seeing they inioy about all others, so many testimonies of his loue, and exceed all other men in outward blessings. And this the wise Salomon obserued in his time: There is (saith he) a vanity which is done vpon the earth; that there be iust men, to whom it happeneth according to the worke of the wicked; againe, there be wicked men, to whom it happeneth according to the worke of the righteous; I said that this also is vanity. This was it which had almost made holy Dauids foot to slip, to offend against the generation of Gods children, and to conclude, that he had clesed his heart, and washed his hands in innocencie in vaine, when hee obserued the great prosperity of the wicked, and how they thrived in all their courses. This brought Ieremy to a stand, and made him so bold as to reason the matter with God, concerning the administration of his righteous Iudgements; Wherefore (saith he) doth the way of the wicked prosper? wherefore are all they happy that deale very treacherously? Thou hast planted them; yea, they haue taken roote, they grow, yea, they bring forth fruit: Thou art neere in their mouth, and farre from their reynes. But this impediment we shall easily remooue, if with Dauid wee will goe into Gods Sanctuary; for there we shall vnderstand their end: namely, that

Eccles. 8. 14.
Ch. 9. 1, 2.Psal. 73. 2, 3.
13, 18.

Ier. 12. 1, 2.

that God hath set them in slippery places, from which he casteth them dwone into destruction. And this truth we may confirme vnto our selues, not only by our owne dayly obseruation, but also by the experience of the faithful, who haue gone before vs, and haue rayled vp their hearts with comfort, after that they had stumbled at this stone of offence. I haue seene (saith Dauid) the wicked in great power, and spreading himselfe like a greene Bay tree. Yet he passed away, and lo, he was not; yea I sought him, but he could not be found. And contrariwise; Marke the perfect man, and behold the upright; for (howsoever his beginnings may be embittered with afflictions, yet) the end of that man is peace. But the transgressours shall be destroyed together; and the end of the wicked shall be cut off. So out of his wise experience Salomon thus concludeth, Though a sinner doe euill an hundred times, and his dayes be prolonged, yet surely I know it shall be well with them that feare God, which feare before him. But it shall not be well with the wicked, neither shall he prolong his dayes, which are a shadow, because he feareth not before God. Againe, let vs consider, that the wicked in this life haue with Diuces all their good, the which through their abuse turneth to their great euill, fattening them for the day of slaughter, and seruing vnto them as occasions and instruments of sinne, doe but increase their fearefull condemnation. Let vs remember that they haue their portion in this life, hauing their bellies filled with Gods hid treasure, and no further ioy remayneth vnto them, but this which is so mutable and momentany; whereas the Lord hath farre better things in store for his owne children and seruants, euen permanent riches and honours, and pleasures at his owne right hand for euer-more. And therefore we neede not to enuie the happinesse of these slaues, nor to be discouraged in the seruice of our heavenly Father, though for the present they haue more to spend in their riotous courses then we; seeing though in the time of our non-age, he giueth vnto vs but some short allowance, because through childish folly wee are apt to abuse greater plenty, and to accompany them in the same excessse; yet he reserueth better things in store for vs, euen our heavenly inheritance, glorie without disgrace, riches and treasures which fade not, and rauishing delights which shall continue for euermore.

The second scandall and offence, is that delay which God seemeth to make in the administration of his Iudgements, and dispensation of his benefits and rewards. For first, when wicked men multiply their sinnes, and yet escape deserued punishment, they begin to doubt whether there be any prouidence, and so let the reines loose to all manner of wickednesse: According to that of the Preacher, Because sentence against an euill worke is not executed speedily; therefore the hearts of the children of men are fully set in them to doe euill. And Gods children likewise stumble at this stone of offence, being tempted to thinke that there is no gaine in godlinesse, and little profit in being more diligent then others in the duties of Gods seruice, when as they obserue that there is, in respect of outward things, no assurance of loue or hatred, nor any difference betweene one and another, seeing all things come alike

Psal. 73. 17, 18.

Psal. 37. 37.
36, 37.

Eccles. 8. 12, 13.

Luk. 16. 29.

Psal. 17. 14.

6. Sect. 2.
The second scandall arising from iudgement
deferred.
Eccles. 8. 11.

Eccles. 9. 11.

2. Pet. 3. 8.

2. Cor. 4. 17.

alike to all, and there is one euent to the righteous and the wicked, to the good and to the cleane, and to the vncleane, to him that sacrificeth, and to him that sacrificeth not. As is the good, so is the sinner, and he that sweareth, as he that feareth an oath. But this tentation & stumbling blocke I haue before removed; only let vs remember, that Gods Iudgements like himselfe are eternall, & that he giueth such rewards to the godly, & inflicteth such punishments vpon the wicked as are endlesse and euerlasting. In which respect, a thousand yeeres are with God but as one day, as the Apostle speaketh; and the benefits and afflictions of the longest liuer, nothing in comparision of future ioyes and miseries. And therefore the greatest prosperity of wicked men should not encourage any to follow their sinfull courses, seeing it shall soone haue an end, and bring with it endlesse punishments. Neither should the longest and greatest afflictions discourage vs in the duties of a godly life, seeing they are but light and momentany, in respect of that eternall weight of Glory, which they shall cause vnto vs. Let vs consider, that though the Lord deferreth long to execute his Iudgements, yet those that abuse this patience and long-suffering, shall not escape in the end, and the longer that vengeance hath beene delayed, the more fearefull and intolerable will it be when it is inflicted. For though God commeth slowly, yet he payeth surely, and the longer that he is fetching his stroke, the more heauily will it light vpon those who doe not preuent it by their repentance. Finally, let vs know, that wicked men, when they seeme most to flourish in the world, doe not, euen in this life, escape unpunished. For if they be not haunted with those hellish furies, the terrors and torments of a selfe-accusing conscience, which giueth them inwardly many a cold pang, when they smile and laugh in the face and outward appearance; they are not free from more dangerous and desperate punishments, though they bee lesse sensible and smarting, euen the deadly lethargie of carnall security, and that scarce cureable disease of a seared conscience and hardnesse of heart. Neither ought wee to be any more discouraged, because God seemeth wholly to deferre the bestowing of his rewards vpon those that serue him, vnto another life, and because in the meane time godlinesse bringeth little gaine, and the seruice of God small profit in the world. For suppose that this were so, yet the riches and eternity of the reward, will, when it is bestowed, abundantly recompence our short forbearance. And therefore, if the most couetous vsurers can with patience forbear the sight and fruition of their gold, which notwithstanding is that dearely-beloued idoll, vpon which their hearts are fixed; and can satisfie both their eyes and mindes with the sight and perusall of their bonds, which assure them, that at the yeeres end, they shall receiue it with some aduantage, though it be but tenne in the hundred; why should not we with ioy and comfort performe seruice vnto God, though he should wholly deferre the rewards which he hath promised, euen vnto the end of our liues; seeing wee haue a most sure Pay-master, who hath couenanted to giue, in lieu of our forbearance, an hundred for tenne, yea, a thousand for one, and hath

com-

committed to our keeping infallible bonds and evidences sealed with the blood of Christ, and ratified with his oath, with the daily reviewing wherof, we may continually revieve and refresh our drooping and fainting soules: But if wee be so sensuall, that wee onely minde things present, and preferre small possessions, before the greatest possibilities, & richest reuerfions, let vs further know, that euen in this life God rewardeth his seruants with gifts of incomparable greater value, then those which worldlings can most bragge off. For besides that the godly are in respect of outward things, at Gods finding, who will neuer suffer them to want such a conuenient competencie, as in his infinite Wisdome he knoweth to be fittest for them, and though he giueth not vnto them such superfluity and abundance, as many worldlings doe possesse, because he knoweth, that it would rather be a burthen to presse them downe vnto the earth, then a benefit to further them in the way to heauenly happinesse, yet he giueth them sufficiency and contentation of minde, which the other want in their greatest plenty. Besides all this (I say) he bestoweth vpon them all the Royall priuiledges, wherof I haue already spoken, especially the assurance of his loue and their saluation, with all other spirituall graces, peace of Conscience, and ioy in the Holy Ghost, as before I haue shewed more at large.

The last scandall & offence, wherof I will speake, by which men are hindred from entring into, & proceeding in the duties of a godly life, ariseth from those that make profession of Christianity and sincerity, whether they be private persons, or publique, as the Ministers of the Word and Sacraments. The first is that which is giuen by hypocrites, who making profession of the true Religion, doe in their liues deny the power thereof, falling into many grosse and grieuous sinnes, especially such as are committed against the second Table, as vniustice and vncharitableness, fraud and deceit, cruelty and oppression, pride and couetousnesse, falsifying of their couenants and promises. And also by such as professe the truth in sincerity and vprightnesse of heart, and yet through humane frailty and infirmity, are sometimes ouer-taken of these and such like sinnes. Both which cast before the feet of those, who are vnregenerate, such stumbling blockes of offence, that they are thereby brought out of loue with Gods true Religion, presuming that there is little good in it, when as they discern no better fruits of it in their liues: and so hate not onely such professours; but also their profession for their sakes, resolving with themselves, that they will neuer be of their religion, which is so disgraced in the world by the euill conuersation of these seeming forward men. Yea, not onely those which are without, are wholly hindred from entring into the course of Christianity, but those also that are already entred, are hereby so discountenanced and disheartened, that they proceed in the waies of godlinesse, with much discomfort and discouragement. For they are not onely hindred from making any profession of Religion more then others, when they see it thus infamed, lest hereby they might seeme like vnto them, and so bring

§. Sect. 3.

The third scandal arising from hypocrites.

2.Tim.2.19.

Psal.50.16.

Matth.24.51.

upon themselves the disgrace and reproch of hypocrites, but also out of the same respects shunne the practice of all Christian duties, which haue at least any appearance of Piety, as hearing the Word with any extraordinary diligence and deuotion, Holy communication, Christian admonition, strict obseruation and sanctification of the Lords day, prayer in their families and such like, because they would not incurre among worldlings, the suspicion of being hypocrites. For the auoyding of which scandall and impediment, let all those in the feare of the Lord be admonished, which call upon the Name of Christ, to depart from iniquity, and that as they shine more then others in the Light of an holy profession, so also that they approue this Light to be diuine and heauenly, by the kindly and liuely heate of a charitable conuersation, and glorifie God, and adorne their profession, by bringing forth the fruits of it, not onely in their piety towards him, but in their works of righteousnesse and charity towards their neighbours. Let them take heed, that they presume not to take Gods holy covenant into their mouthes, when as they hate to be reformed; nor to weare Gods liuery of a sincere profession, to dishonour him by their infamous liues: and that they doe not, by giuing iust cause of offence, as much as in them lieth, destroy those for whom Christ hath died, and so cause his precious blood to be shed in vaine, lest in that great Day of accounts, the blood of these men, who haue perished by their euill example, be required at their hands. Let them remember, that counterfet piety is double iniquity; that the hypocrite shalbe cut off, & his hope perish; that the seeming holy Pharise is much more odious in Gods sight, then Publicanes and open sinners, seeing they more dishonor God, & disgrace his holy truth then any other. Finally, that God will be honored in all those that draw neere vnto him, either by rewarding their sincerity, or punishing their hypocrisie; and that aboue all others, the hypocrite shall be assuredly plunged into that bottomelesse Gulph of hellish condemnation, in which regard, when our Sauour speaketh of the vndoubted punishments of desperate sinners, he vsually saith, that they shall haue their portion with hypocrites in outer darkenesse, where shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. Those also, who are not yet called and regenerate, are to be admonished, as they tender the euerlasting saluation of their soules, that they doe not suffer themselves to be hindred and discouraged by this scandall of the euill liues of hypocrites, and weake Christians, from the profession of Gods true Religion, and the practice of holy duties. And to this purpose, that they ascribe these enormities or frailties to any thing rather, then vnto the profession of the truth, or the outward practice of it in any Christian duties of Gods seruice: As namely, to the malice of the deuill, who with his tentations, assaulteth professours with more hellish policy & fury then other men, because their sins & fals doe most dishonor God, and blemish the beauty and brightnesse of his shyning truth, to the wily spite of worldlings, who with all their indeuour intice or compell those that make any shew of Religion, to accompany them in their wicked courses, that they may countenance their actions by their examples, or escape escape their admonitions and reprehensions, when as they are now become alike faulty. Or to their deepe and poysonous corruptions, which notwithstanding their outward profession, doe still lye secretly lurking in their hearts, which cause them to breake out into those sinnes, which their owne consciences, inlightened with Gods truth, doe utterly condemne. Neither can they with more shew, impute their scandalous sins and foule falls, to the iust and pure Religion professed by them, then the crookednesse of the worke to the right and perfect squire, or the foulenesse of their hands to the pure cristall fountaine, which if it were rightly vsed, would wash and make them cleane. For what are all their faults, but crooked aberrations from this straight way of truth? What are they, but such sinnes as are continually condemned and beaten downe in the preaching of the Gospell? For how can they haue any encouragement to goe on in their wickednesse, by their often hearing of Gods Word, wherein his fearfull Iudgements are daily denounced against all those who liue in their sinnes? And therefore accursed be that foule mouth, if it bee not washed in the teares of vnfeined repentance, that dare belch out such a blasphemie against Gods holy truth, as to say, that if there were lesse preaching and hearing of the Word, there would be more obedience towards superiours, and more loue and charity towards equalls and inferiours. And likewise thrice vnhappy they, who will so stumble at this stone of offence, cast into their wayes by the euill liues of hypocrites, as that they refuse to take vpon them this holy profession, or to bring forth better fruits then they in their Christian practice. As if all should refuse physicke, because some dye that take it; or wholsome food, because some who haue their stomackes full of corrupt humours, are not nourished thereby, but becomming more sicke, doe presently cast it vp againe without profit. Finally, let no weake Christians bee discouraged by the euill liues of hypocrites, from making open and bold profession of Gods truth, and bringing forth the outward fruits of it in the practice of all Christian duties, because they would not be thought like vnto them. For what were this, but to deny Christ before men, because we would shun their reproches? and to be in truth impious in the neglect of Christian duties, because we would shunne the suspicion of hypocrisie? What were this, but to esteeme more of the vaine and false censures of prophane worldlings, then of the approbation which our good actions, and holy duties shall haue from God and a good conscience? What were this, but to refuse to be Gods true treasure and pure gold, because there are in the world many counterfeit slips? to grow in his field, and to lye in his barne, like good wheat, because there are tares in the one, and chaffe in the other? What were this, but to giue ouer our lawfull callings, and honest labours in them, because there be some of the same trade that discredit themselves and their calling, by their fraudulent and deceitfull dealings? But if this preuaile with vs, let vs also be ashamed to eate wholsome food, because some haue surfeted on it; or to drinke such drinckes as others haue abused to drunkennesse. Yea rather, because others haue disgraced the pure and true Religion which we professe, by their wicked liues; let vs, who are sincerely minded, make open profession of it, that we may adorne it by our holy conuersation; for the more it is blotted and blemished with their fruits of iniustice, the more it needeth the hands of innocents, to wash and restore it to its natue purity. And thus much of that scandall which ariseth from the euill liues of hypocrites; of that which is caused by the bad example of euill Ministers, I haue before spoken, and therefore refer the Reader to that which hath been said.

CAP. IX.

Of the impediments of a godly life, arising from the flesh: and first, such as arise from the intellectuall faculties.

§. Sect. 1.

That the most dangerous impediments arise from our owne corrupt flesh.

Heb. 12.1.

IF there were no other, or greater impediments, to hinder vs in the wayes of godlinesse, then those which are already handled; yet were there no cause why we should flatter our selues with a vaine conceit, that we may goe forward in this course with much ease, as being a thing so slight and ordinary, that the atchieuing of it needeth little care and small indeuour. But how much more will this fond opinion vanish, and the necessity of uniting all our forces cleerly appeare, for the attaining vnto any perfection in spirituall graces, and the outward practice of them in the duties of a godly life, if we further consider, that there are many more, and far more dangerous impediments which arise from our sinfull flesh, and the inbred corruption of our polluted nature, the which is so auerse and contrary vnto the sincere and spirituall seruice of God, that nothing in the world seemeth more irksome and tedious vnto it? In which regard, wee can no sooner set our selues seriously to serue and please God in those holy duties which he requireth, but presently it opposeth vs, discourageth vs in all good courses, hangeeth (as it were) about our neckes as an heauie burthen, and tyreth vs in our iourney, hampereth and fethereth vs, that we can but slowly, and not without much paines and difficulty, proceed in any Christian duties, and laboureth might and maine to shake off the yoke of new obedience, that it may regaine wonted liberty, and glut it selfe in the pleasures of sinne, with sensuall delight. Neither in truth would it be an hard thing for vs to ouercome all those difficulties, and remoue those impediments which the diuell and the world cast in our way, if our corrupt flesh did not betray our Christian resolution, and willingly admit these discouragements, and if it were not as ready to stumble at these blockes, that it may take occasion thereby to stand still, or turne out of the way, as our other enemies to cast them before vs. So that about all impediments which hinder vs in the course of Christianity, we carry those which are most dangerous, in our owne bosomes, even rebellious reluctations and oppositions of our owne sinfull flesh, which hinder vs wholly from all holy duties, or so interrupt vs in them, that we performe them at the best, with much weaknesse, and manifold wants and imperfections. And thus the flesh hindreth vs, either by its frailty and weaknesse, whereby it disableth vs to performe the duties of Gods seruice; as we see in the example of the Apostles, who through naturall drowzinesse, could could not watch and pray, as their Lord inioyned them; according to that of our Saviour, The spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak; or else by its maliciousnesse, which maketh it wilfully to oppose and hinder the spirituall part in all good duties; according to that of the Apostle, The flesh lusteth against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh, and these are contrary the one to the other, so as we cannot doe that good we would. Of which impediments caused by the flesh, the Apostle pitifully complaineth; To will, is present with me, but how to performe that which is good, I finde not. For the good that I would, I doe not, but the euill that I would not, that I doe. I delight in the Law of God after the inner man; but I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sinne, which is in my members. O wretched man that I am, who shall deliuer mee from the body of this death? Which impediments if we would remooue, we must daily make warre against our sinfull flesh, and corruption of nature, from whence they arise, and strike at the root, if wee would kill the branches which spring from it. We must labour with God by prayer, for the assistance of his holy Spirit, that thereby we may be inabled to mortifie and subdue the flesh, and all its sinfull lusts, which fight against our soules, and quickened in the inner man, vnto new obedience and holinesse of life. And hauing gotten the mastery ouer this enemy, we must not content our selues with our first victories, but we must still keepe it vnder, like a slaue, and by daily buffeting and beating of it, hold it in subiection, that it may not rebell against the spirituall part, nor hinder it from performing the duties of a godly and Christian life. But this I will thus briefly passe over, because I haue already intreated of it at large, in the fourth part of my Christian Warfare.

The speciall impediments which the flesh vseth, to hinder vs in the duties of a godly life, arise either from the corruptions of nature, or from those manifold obiections, whereby it discourageth vs from entring into, or proceeding in it. The impediments of the former kind are internall in the soule, or externall in our workes and actions. Concerning the first; the soule is so generally corrupted in all the powers and faculties of it, that it wholly disableth vs vnto all the duties of a godly life. The which corruptions are either in the mind and vnderstanding, or in the heart and affections. The mind and vnderstanding doe hinder vs in the practice of all Christian duties, both by ignorance, which hindreth and disableth vs from knowing those things which are necessary to saluation, and to the practice of all holy duties, and by curiosity, which maketh vs to affect the knowledge of such things as are needlesse and vnprofitable. For first, we are hindred in the duties of a godly life, by our naturall ignorance of God, who is to be worshipped and serued by them, especially when wee doe not vnderstand and know his sauing attributes; as that hee is omniscient to take notice of all our thoughts, words and actions; and omnipotent to reward them, if they be good; or to punish them, if they bee euill; that he is iust, and will call all we doe, to account; and mercifull, to pardon our infirmities and imperfections, if wee labour and indeuour to doe vnto him the best seruice we are able; that he is all-sufficient and infinite in all goodnesse, most bountifull and gracious, and a rich reward

Matth. 26. 41.

Gal. 5. 17.

Rom. 7. 18, 22, 23, 24.

1. Pet. 2. 11.

1. Cor. 9. 27.

6. Sect. 2.

That ignorance is a great impediment to a godly life.

der of all those who seeke and serue him. All which being singular mo-tiues and encouragements vnto all Christian duties, the ignorance of them must needs be a notable impediment to hinder vs in them. For who can with cheerfulnesse serue such a master as he knoweth not? or be faith-full and diligent in his duty, when as he cannot, vpon any well-grounded knowledge, be assured that his seruice is accepted, or shall be rewarded?
 Who can performe duties agreeable to Gods nature, when he vnderstandeth not what it is, or performe any spirituall seruice, if he know not that he is spirituall vnto whom it is performed? Thus also wee are hindred in the duties of a godly life, by being ignorant of Gods reuealed will; for seeing no seruice is acceptable, which is not agreeable vnto it, all deuotion not guided by it, meere superstition, and all will-worship inuented by our owne braine, though with neuer so good intention, odious and abominable; who seeth not, that he who is ignorant of Gods will, is no more able to walke in the way of his Commandements, then hee who wanteth his bodily eyes, to goe in a strange and difficult way, without a guide?
 Yea, suppose that we were set in this way, and led (as it were by the hand) by the directions of others, yet if we doe not see with our owne eyes, and be not able of our selues to discern the right way, by the light of Gods Word shining vnto vs; how easily (if our guides doe but a little leaue vs) shall we, through the malice of the diuell and our owne corruption, erre and goe astray? And if we be not able to try the spirits of our Teachers, and to examine their doctrines by the Touch-stone of Gods truth, how apt are wee to become a prey vnto seducers and false teachers, and to fall into sects, schismes, and damnable heresies? like blind men, who not seeing their way, doe stand wholly at the deuotion of their guides, to goe with them whithersoever they shall be pleased to leade them. Againe, ignorance of Gods speciall providence, is a notable pulbacke from pious duties, whereby in a gracious and iust maner, he doth euen in this life administer & dispense his rewards to those that serue him, preserving them from all dangers, and from the malice and fury of all enemies who oppose them in their Christian conuersation, and prouiding for them all things necessary for their soules and bodies, in such a competency and sufficiency, as is most fit for his owne glory, and their saluation: and also his iudgements and punishments to them who neglect his seruice, and spend their dayes in the workes of darknesse, performing ready seruice vnto sinne and Satan. For when we doe obserue no profit accruing vnto them, who are carefull to please God by doing his will; nor any discom-modity or punishment accompanying those, who walke in the sinful imaginations of their owne hearts, we are much hindred thereby in all Christian duties, and ready to take any course which may further our worldly and wicked ends, seeing wee are neither restrained from euill by Gods feare, nor stirred vp vnto any good duty by his loue; neither terrified from sinne by his affrighting iudgements, nor encouraged vnto vertuous actions, by the expectation of his gracious rewards. Finally, ignorance is a notable impediment to a godly life, because if we doe not know the duties which are required vnto it, nor the chiefe things wherein it consisteth, it is not possible that we should performe them. If we doe not know what

1. Job. 4. 1.
 Act. 17. 11.

is pleasing, and what displeasing vnto God, what he requireth in our seruice of him, and what he forbiddeth and condemneth, as odious and abominable, we shall mistake the one for the other, yea, be much more ready to doe such things as he hateth, then such as are pleasing vnto him, because our corrupt nature is prone to the one, and auerſe and backward to the other. Besides, if we be ignorant, wee cannot ſee the excellency, profit, and neceſſity of all Chriſtian duties belonging to a godly life, which as they are ſingular motiues to perſwade vs vnto the embracing and praſtiſing of them; ſo the ignorance of them doth make vs vtterly careleſſe and negligent. In all which reſpects (if we would remooue this impediment) it is moſt neceſſary, that we labour after the ſauiug knowledge of God and his attributes, his will and providence, and of all thoſe duties of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe which he requireth of vs; and to this end, carefully and conſcionably uſe all good meanes whereby we may attaine vnto it; of which I haue ſpoken in the beginning of this Treatiſe. For be wee well aſſured, that ſo long as wee continue ignorant of theſe things, it is not poſſible to performe any duty acceptable vnto God. Neither let vs content our ſelues with a ſpeculatiue, idle, and fruitleſſe knowledge ſwimming in the braine, in which, though we excell all others, we ſhall not become more godly and religious; but rather more proud and vaine-glorious; but let vs labour after that ſauiug and experimentall knowledge of God and his attributes, his will and works, whereby we find and feele the things wee know, effectually for the ſanctifying our hearts and affections, and for the renewing of our liues in all holy obedience vnto Gods will.

The other impediment, reſpecting the vnderſtanding, is vaine curioſitie, when as neglecting to know thoſe things concerning God and his will, which he hath reuealed vnto vs in his Word, we pry into his ſecrets which belong not vnto vs; ſpending our wits in ſpinning ſuch Spiders webs, as are vtterly vnprofitable for any uſe. For whileſt we delight our ſelues in the ſtudy of theſe captious curioſities, we wholly neglect all uſe-ful knowledge of the mayne points of Chriſtian Religion, as being matters too obuiouſ and common for our ſublimated and ſubtle wits, yea, are ſo wholly intent vnto idle ſpeculations, that we can find no leaſure for the praſtice of any Chriſtian duties, like thoſe ſtar-gazing Aſtroglogers, who ſo fixe their eyes vpon them, to obſerue their magnitudes, motions, and influences, that they cannot diſcerne their way, but are ready to ſtumble at euery ſtone, and to ſlip and fall into euery ditch. Which impediment if we would auoyd, we muſt labour to mortifie our ſpirituall pride, which is the mother and nurſe of this idle curioſity. Secondly, wee muſt be wiſe vnto ſobriety, not preſuming to vnderſtand aboue that which is meete, knowing that the ſecret things belong vnto God, and onely things reuealed, vnto vs. Thirdly, let vs in the firſt place bend our ſtudies vnto the attaining of ſuch knowledge as is moſt profitable and neceſſary, wherein we ſhall find ſuch plenty and variety, ſuch high contemplations and diuine Myſteries, that we ſhall haue little leaſure or pleaſure, in looking after idle ſpeculations, and fruitleſſe curioſities. Finally, let vs propound uſe and praſtice, as the maine end of all our knowledge, and condemne as vaine and frivoulous,

§. Sect. 3.
That vaine curioſity is a great impediment to a godly life.

Rom. 12. 3.

1. Cor. 13. 2.

lous, that which doth rather hinder then aduance it; for the more we spend our time and strength about curious nicities, the lesse remaineth for the gayning of solid knowledge, and the practise of it in holy duties. Other impediments there are, which arise from the sinfull corruption of our intellectuall faculties, which respect either our mindes, imaginations, and discourse of reason, or our iudgements and conclusions which arise from them. In respect of the former, it is a notable hindrance of a godly life, when as all our cogitations are so wholly bent vpon worldly things, that we neuer enter into any consideration of our spirituall estate, whether we and our actions are accepted of God or no, or whether that wee doe please or displease him: Nor euer thinke with our selues, whether we are in the state of grace and saluation, or of corruption and condemnation, and whether wee take that course, and walke in that way that leadeth to life and blessednesse, or that which bringeth all that goe in it to hell and destruction. And finally, when as we as are so wholly sensuall and addicted to the present fruition of earthly vanities, that we neuer consider, whether the meanes be good or euill whereby wee may compassse them, nor take any notice of the manifold euils both spirituall and corporall, temporall and eternall, which our sinnes will bring vpon vs, if we continue in them without repentance; nor yet of the manifold and vspeakeable comforts and contentments, blessings and benefits which accompany a godly life, both in this world and the World to come. Which impediment, if we would remoue, we must often enter into consideration of these things, and into a serious examination of our estate, according to those directions which I haue before giuen, when I intreated of the meanes whereby we may be inabled to leade a godly life.

§. Sect. 4.
Of impediments arising from corrupted and erroneous iudgement.

The iudgement also corrupted with error and ignorance, is a notable impediment to hinder vs from the sincere practise of all Christian duties of a godly life. For heereby men be-foole themselves with idle conceits, that haue no ground or warrant in Gods Word, and thereby rest contented with their present estate, and neuer labour to attaine vnto a better. For so are they blinded with naturall ignorance, that they cannot discern their blindnesse, but thinke themselves as sharpe sighted as any other. So poore are they and destitute of the riches of Gods sauing graces, that they haue no sense of their pouerty, but please themselves with shadowes in stead of substance, like men replenished with winde, in stead of wholesome nourishment, and those who mistake the swelling of their dropsie humours, for sound and good flesh. So dead they are in sinne, that they haue no feeling of their deadnesse, and though they be neuer so much cut and lanced with the sword of the Spirit, and keene Razour of the Word, they haue no sense of it, nor euer complaine more then dead men of their wounds and gashes. Finally, lying in their sinnes, as in their proper element, though they be neuer so heavy and intolerable, yet like a fish vnder the water, they doe not all feele the waight of them. As wee see in the example of the proud Pharises, who thought themselves sharpe sighted and righteous, when as they were in Christs estimate starke blind, and wicked aboue all men, euen Publicanes and sinners: of the Iewes, who thought themselves free-men, and the children of Abraham, when as they were

Iob. 9. 49.

Iob. 8. 33.

were

were the sonnes and slaues of sinne and Satan; and of the luke-warme Laodiceans, who falsly imagined that they were rich and increased with goods, and had need of nothing; when as they were wretched and miserable, poore, blind, and naked. The which false and erroneous iudgement, is a principall impediment vnto a godly life; vnto which (as one saith of wisdom) many might haue attained, if they had not falsly supposed that they had already attained vnto it. For who laboureth to better his estate, that thinketh it is good enough already? or to attaine vnto more wealth, that contenteth himselfe with his portion, as thinking it abundantly sufficient? who goeth to the Physician, that assureth himselfe that hee is in perfect health? or to the Lawyer for counsell, that maketh no doubt of the validity of his euidences? or to the Diuine for instruction, who supposeth that he knoweth already as much as he can teach him? And who laboureth to better his spirituall estate, who thinketh it already so good, that it needeth no amendment? Which dangerous impediment if wee would remooue, let vs not measure our selues by the false ell of carnall reason, and an erroneous iudgement, nor compare our selues with our selues, or with other men, whom we thinke worse then we; but let vs examine our wayes and workes by the perfect rule of Gods Word, and try thereby how infinitely wee come short of that exact obedience which his Law requireth. Let vs thereby labour to come to a true sense of our owne misery, and to haue our blinde eyes so opened and inlightened, that we may discern the manifold wants and imperfections of our best actions, and so labour after more perfection. Finally, let vs know it for certaine, as an vndoubted truth, that we haue not yet set forward one foot in the wayes of Christianity and true godlinesse, when we thinke that we haue gone farre enough already; for true grace is in continuall growth; and he that hath attained vnto any measure of it in truth, seeing his wants and imperfections, striueth and laboureth after more perfection; wherein he, who hath made the greatest progresse, is most earnest in proceeding, like him that runneth a race, who maketh best speed when he approacheth neere vnto the goale; or like the naturall motion, which is slow at the beginning, but the longer it continueth, the swifter it groweth; as we see in the descent and fall of a stone, which mooueth fastest, when it draweth neere vnto the center. And this we see in the example of the Pharises and the Apostle Paul; For they hauing an opinion of their owne perfection, rested in their owne righteousness as sufficient for saluation, and neuer desired to be made partakers of the righteousness of Christ, for their iustification; whereas by Christs testimony it cleerely appeareth, that they had not so much as made an entrance into the way of life, and were much farther off from the Kingdome of God then Publicanes and sinners. But contrariwise, the Apostle hauing out-stripped almost all others, when he came neere the goale of perfection, made his greatest speed; forgetting those things which were behind, and reaching forth to those which were before, and pressing towards the marke, for the price of the high calling of God in Iesus Christ.

The speciall and particular errors in iudgement, which hinder men from resoluing to leade a godly life, are innumerable; and therefore I will content my selfe to set downe heere some few of them, and but slightly to touch

Apoc. 3. 17, 18.

Phil. 3. 13, 14.

6. Sect. 5.
Of impediments arising from speciall errors in iudgement.

touch them, because the bare naming of them, in respect of their inutility and weakenesse, is a sufficient confutation. First then, out of an erroneous iudgement concerning God, they falsly conceive, that hee is so mercifull, that either he will saue all men, or at least, them who performe some kinde of seruice vnto him, though they bee not like others, strict in their courses, but giue liberty to the satisfiing of their sensuall lusts, and to leade such a life as best pleaseth them. Whereby they make an Idoll of Gods mercy, in separating it from his iustice and truth, which hath denounced death and condemnation against all that neglect his seruice, and liue in their sinnes without repentance. So they thinke that God will accept of their good meaning, though being ignorant, they know not how to serue him as hee hath required, notwithstanding that the Lord in innumerable places of holy Scriptures, professeth his hatred to superstition and all will-worship. That he will accept of vs, if wee goe to the Church according to the Princes Lawes like other men, and offer vnto God the outward seruice of the body, in hearing the Word, and praying with the Congregation, and receiuing the Sacrament at Easter, although all bee done in meere formality and hypocrisie without any zeale and deuotion, or desire to serue and please God, or to profit by these spirituall exercises for the increasing of his graces in vs, notwithstanding that God in so many places reiects these heartlesse sacrifices, lip-labour, and hypocritical formalities, and being a Spirit, doth require of vs such a seruice as is performed in Spirit and truth. Thus they thinke that God is serued in an acceptable manner, when they repeat the Lords Prayer, though they doe not vnderstand any one Petition in it, and when they rehearse the Beliefe and the ten Commandements, which they also vse in stead of Prayer, not vnderstanding aright any one article of their faith, nor any precept of the Decalogue; and that they haue by this repetition blessed themselves sufficiently for the day following, though a little child, who is destitute of all sauing knowledge, is able to performe this taske as well as they. That they may liue in their sinnes without repentance vnto old age, or the day of sickenesse and death, and that God is so gracious that he will forgieue all their sinnes, if before they depart this life, they haue but leasure to say; Lord, haue mercy vpon me, though the Scriptures teach vs, that he who turneth away his eare from hearing the Law, his prayers are abominable; that God abhorreth euen the very sacrifices of the wicked; and that those who stop their eares when God calleth, shall not be heard when they call and cry vnto him. Finally, they suppose that they can repent when they list, though it be a free grace of God, which must be accepted when he offereth it, and cannot be reasonably expected, if it be refused and reiected when he tendreth it vnto vs. In respect of the Christian life it selfe, and the graces and duties required vnto it, they doe all delude themselves with a false and erroneous iudgement. For they cannot perswade themselves that the godly life is best and most blessed, nor that there is such necessity of it, as Preachers would beare them in hand; but that they may take heere their full swindge in pleasure, and set their hearts vpon riches and other worldly vanities, and yet bee assured of heavenly happinesse, as well as those who are most scrupulous and precise; though the Scriptures tell vs that

Esa. 49. 13.

Mat. 15. 8.

Ioh. 4. 24.

Pro. 28. 9. &

15. 8. & 1.

24. 28.

Zach. 7. 11, 12.

wee cannot serue God and Mammon; that if wee loue the world, the loue of the Father is not in vs, because the loue of the one, is enmity against the other, that without holinesse we cannot see God; and that the way to heauen is narrow, and the gate so straight, that without much strining wee cannot enter into it. Thus they imagine, that they neede not to take such paines in hearing many Sermons, seeing the Preacher can tell them no more then they know already, namely, that they must loue God aboue all things, and their neighbours as themselves, that the best faile in this, and that wee are all sinners, and must be saued onely by Iesus Christ. Though the Scriptures truely preached, are not onely the spirituall seed to beget vs, but the food also to nourish vs, the strong power of God to saluation to all that beleue, and the sword of the Spirit, to defend our selues, and beate backe our enemies: Our heavenly Schoole-master to teach the way, and the meanes also whereby wee may be enabled to walke in it, and finally, our guide to direct vs and leade vs by the hand, and our comforter to support vs when wee are ready to faint in our iourney. That it is sufficient, if wee leade a ciuill life, and be no heynous malefactours, as murthers, theeves, adulterers and such like; and that wee are good Christians, if wee doe no man harme, if wee doe no good, though he who hid his talent in the earth, and did not increase it, was cast into outer darkenesse: Dives tormented in hell, because he releued not Lazarus. And though our Sauour professeth, that hee will reject at the day of Iudgement, not onely oppressours, theeves and murtherers, but those also who haue not fed the hungry; and clothed the naked. Thus they thinke that they haue abundantly discharged their dutie, if they haue, for worldly ends, had some respect to some duties of the second Table, as keeping their word, and dealing iustly, and giuing now and then an almes; though they haue wholly neglected the duties of the first Table, and haue made no conscience of Gods seruice and Sabbaths; though piety be the ground and foundation of all obedience, without which, Iustice and morall honesty haue no true subsistence. That they neede not to labour after the knowledge of God and his will, because they are vnlettered and vnlerned, though without knowledge of the maine principles of Religion, there can be no Faith, and without Faith, no Saluation. That they haue good hearts towards God, though their speeches be filthy and prophane, and their actions wicked and mischieuous, notwithstanding that our Sauour hath told vs, that the tree is knowne by its fruit, and that such as the fountaine is, such also are the streames that flow from it. That wee are all sinners, and full of infirmities and humane frailties, and therefore they must be excused, when wittingly and wilfully they fall into grieuous sinnes, though the Apostle telleth vs, that he who thus sinneth, is not borne of God; but that he is of the deuill, if with full swinge of will, he doe him seruice. That they are in Christ, and therefore haue escaped condemnation, though the Apostle saith, that all who are in him, walke not after the flesh, but after the Spirit, and that all who haue put on Christ, are become new

Matth. 6. 14.

1. Ioh. 3. 15.

1. Iam. 4. 4.

Heb. 12. 14.

Matth. 7. 12.

Rom. 1. 16.

Matth. 7. 18.

15. 18. 19.

Rom. 8. 1.

2. Cor. 5. 17.

Job. 35. 2.

Matth. 9. 13. &
11. 28.

Rom. 8. 30.

Eph. 1. 4.

1. Pet. 1. 2.

Rom. 8. 29.
Eph. 2. 8.

2. Cor. 1. 10.

Matth. 25. 34.
35. 36.

Iam. 2. 17, 26.

Matth. 25. 34.
Rom. 6. 23.

Heb. 12. 14.

creatures, and being ingrafted into this Vine, doe bring forth fruits in him. Thus they erroneously alleadge, that because Christ came to saue sinners, therefore though they continue still in sinne, they may haue their part in this saluation, whereas this comfort onely belongeth vnto repentant sinners, who labour and grone vnder their sinnes, as vnder an heauie burthen, and being weary of it, doe flee vnto Christ for ease. Thus they abuse Gods eternall decree of predestination, concluding, that because he hath decreed and ordained all men, either to life and saluation, or to death and destruction; and his counsell must stand, being immutable and vchangeable; therefore it is no matter how they liue, for if they be ordained to life, they shall be saued, liue how they list; or if to destruction, they cannot attaine to saluation, though they take neuer so much care and paines in Gods seruice. The which their conceit is quite contrarie to the Scriptures, which teach vs, that God hath, in his decree of predestination, included the meanes with the end, so that it is not possible to be condemned, if wee conscionably vse the meanes, of attayning to saluation; or to be saued, if wee neglect these meanes and walke in the wayes of wickednesse which leade to destruction. For whom he hath predestinated to saluation, those also he calleth, iustificieth and sanctifieth. Those whom he hath chosen, he hath also ordained, that they should be holy and without blame before him in loue, and hath elected them, through sanctification of the Spirit, vnto obedience, and sprinkling with the blood of Christ. Those whom he hath ordained vnto glory, he hath predestinated them to be conformed to the Image of his Sonne, and hath created them in him to good workes. And therefore if wee be effectually called, iustified and sanctified, we may thereby be assured, that we are elected to saluation; but if none of these can be found in vs, wee still continue in the state of reprobation, seeing the meanes and end doe inseparably goe together. Finally, whenas the Scriptures teach vs, that Faith alone iustificieth, as being the onely instrument that applieth vnto vs Christ our righteousness; loose Libertines doe hence conclude, that that Faith which is alone, iustificieth, and therefore, so they beleue in Christ, they haue liberty to liue as they list, and need not to take any paines to serue & please God in the duties of a godly life. Whereas the Apostle plainly telleth vs, that we shalbe iudged according to our workes, whether they haue bin good or euill. And our Sauour hath taught vs, that he will pronounce the last sentence according to the workes of mercy, either performed or neglected by vs, as being the signes and vndoubted euidences of our Faith, whereby it is approued as sound and sincere, or condemned as counterfet & hypocriticall. And the Apostle Iames expressly affirmeth, that Faith without works is dead, & like a carcase without breath or life. And therefore, though good workes are not required as causes to the act of iustification, yet they are necessary as effects to the party iustified; though they doe not merit euermlasting happines, seeing it is a gracious inheritance, & Gods free gift, yet they are the way that leadeth vnto it, in which we must necessarily walke, if we wil be saued, for without holinesse we shall neuer see the Lord; as the Apostle telleth vs.

Againe,

Againe, the corruption of our intellectuall faculties, doth exceedingly hinder vs from seruing God in the duties of a godly life, not onely as it blindeth them with ignorance, and misleadeth them with error; but also as it poysoneth them with cursed infidelity, which is the roote of all other finnes, and the chiefe impediment of all Christian duties, the ground of all which is a lively faith. For as the Apostle speaketh, No man can come vnto God, vntill he first know that God is, nor performe any faithfull seruice vnto him, vntill he be perswaded that he is a rich rewarder of them who diligently seeke and serue him. Againe, Without faith it is impossible to please God, because whosoever is not done of Faith, is sinne. Without Faith wee cannot be ingrafted into Christ, seeing it is the bond of this vnion, nor bring forth in him any fruits of new obedience, for without Christ we can doe nothing. Vnlesse by Faith we be assured of Gods loue towards vs, we cannot loue him (for as the Apostle Iohn saith, We loue him, because he loueth vs first.) and without loue there is no obedience, seeing it is the summe of the whole Law. And therefore if we would leade a godly life, wee must with all care and indeuour remooue this impediment, then the which, none is more pernicious (for how should wee flee from that sinne, which we naturally loue, or practise those duties, vnto which our natures are auerse, if wee neither beleue Gods threatnings restrayning vs from sinne, nor his promises alluring vs to obedience?) And to this end wee must carefully vse all those meanes of which I haue before spoken, both of begetting Faith in vs, if it be wanting, and of confirming and increasing of it, if it be begun.

C A P. X.

Of those manifold impediments of a godly life, which arise from our sinnefull and corrupt hearts and affections.

And thus haue I shewed, how we may remooue those impediments of a godly life, which arise from the corruption of the intellectuall faculties. Those which respect the heart and affections, are many and dangerous. The first is, when our hearts are hardened through the deceitfulness of sinne, and so habituated and accustomed to euill courses, that it is death to vs, if we indeuour to forsake them, and to serue God in the duties of a godly life. Of this wee haue many warnings in the Scriptures, as being a most dangerous rocke, vpon which many haue suffered shipwracke: To day if you will heare his voyce, harden not your hearts. And, Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an euill heart of unbelieve, in departing from the liuing God. But exhort one another dayly, while it is called to day, lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sinne. Which impediment if we would remooue, let vs withstand sinne in the first motions of it, and if at any time we be ouertaken, let vs carefully take heed, that wee doe not lie in sinne, but rise againe speedily by vnfeined repentance. Let vs beware that wee doe not often

§. Sect. 6.

That infidelity is a great impediment to a godly life.

Heb. 11. 6.

Rom. 14. 23.

Iob. 15. 2, 5.

1. Iob. 4. 19.

§. Sect. 1.

The first impediment is an heart hardened through the deceitfulness of sinne.

Psal. 95. 7, 8.

Heb. 3. 12, 13.

fall into the same finnes, after wee haue repented of them; seeing by many acts, wee come at last to an habit and custome. Or if this custome hath already preuailed, and is now come to haue in it the strength of a Law, and to be (as it were) a second nature, let vs not suffer it any longer to continue inuiolable, but bend all our power and strength to disanull and breake it. Neither let our corrupt nature pleade prescription for sinne, or the neglect of holy duties, as though because we haue long done that which God forbiddeth, or not done that which he hath commanded, therefore we must be borne with, if we doe so still; seeing this is no excuse at all, but rather the greatest aggrauation of our sinfulness and negligence. For though they might be somewhat excused, if they were done but once or twice, they are altogether intolerable when they grow common and customeable. And therefore our long liuing in sinne, and in the neglect of Christian duties, should be so far from excusing our continuing in these courses, that it ought to be a strong motiue to double our diligence in redeeming this lost time, as the Apostle exhorteth. And this reason the Apostle Peter also vseth to perswade vs, that we should no longer liue the rest of our time in the flesh, according to the lusts of men, but according to the will of God, because the time past of our liues may suffice vs to haue wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciuiousnesse, lusts, excessse of wine, reuellings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries. Now the means whereby wee may be enabled to breake off this custome in sinning, and to performe the contrary duties of a godly life, is, to labour to haue our hearts possessed and fraughted with Gods feare, partly in respect of his Iudgements denounced against sin, & partly in respect of his mercies and manifold blessings, promised to all that serue and please him. For nothing doth more powerfully ouer-master this tyrannicall custome, then the true feare of God; euen as the want thereof is the chiefe cause of falling into, and continuing in sinne. And secondly, our best course is to let our selues with a firme resolution to breake off, and discontinue our custome in sinning, and to performe the contrary duties of a godly life, seeing many acts of wel-doing will at last bring vs to an habit and custome, and make them easie and familiar, which at the first entrance seemed difficult and almost impossible. The like impediment vnto all Christian duties, ariseth from security and hardness of heart, which taking away all sense and feeling, both of Gods mercies and Iudgements, and putting away the euill day farre from vs, doth make vs also therewith to put off the day of repentance, to neglect all holy and religious duties, and to goe on securely in our former euill courses. Of the remouing of which impediment I will not here speake, because I haue handled it at large in my Treatise of carnall security, and hardness of heart.

Eph. 5. 16.
1. Pet. 4. 2, 3.

§. Sect. 2.
Of the second impediment respecting the heart, which is loue of the world.

The second impediment of a godly life, respecting the heart, is worldly concupiscence, and immoderate and excessiue loue of the world and earthly things, and chiefly of honours, riches and pleasures, and that carking care which ariseth from it, for the getting or keeping of them. Concerning the former. As the loue of God and

and the loue of the world will not harbour together in the same heart, because the amity and friendship of the one, is enmity against the other, as the Apostles John and James teach vs; so neither can we performe faithfull service to them both; being Masters which stand in flat opposition one to the other, as our Sauour hath told vs. In which regard, Demas is said to haue forsaken the Apostle Paul, and with him, his Master Christ and his truth, as soone as he begun to loue this present world. For when men haue once fixed their hearts vpon earthly vanities, all their cogitations are so taken vp with them, that they haue no leisure to thinke vpon any Christian duties; and so wholly are they besotted with the loue of this painted strumpet, that they thinke all time lost, which is not spent in winning and gaining her. So that when Christ inuitheth them vnto his Marriage Supper, to feast them with spirituall delicacies, that Gods graces may bee so strengthened in them, as that they may bee inabled to serue him in all Christian duties, they presently pretend excuses, and will not come. For the remouing of which impediment, wee must vse all good meanes to weane our hearts from the loue of the world, that wee may contemne it as vaine and worthlesse, in comparison of spirituall grace, and heavenly glory. To which purpose we must consider, that the worlds prosperity which we dote so much vpon, will, being thus abused, become a notable temptation to draw vs into all manner of sinne, to our perdition and destruction; according to that of the wise Salomon; The prosperity of fooles shall destroy them: And, What will it profit vs to gaine the whole world, and lose our owne soules? as our Sauour speaketh. Let vs consider, that these worldly things are momentany and mutable, hardly gotten, and soone lost; vncertaine in the pursuie, whether after all our labour we shall obtaine them or no, and no more certaine in the possession, seeing they may euery day be taken from vs, or we from them. Let vs consider, that they are vaine, and satisfie not, but the more we drinke, the more we thirst; the more we abound, the more we want; and that they bring not any sound contentment to their owners, but labour in getting, care in keeping; and feare in losing them. That they doe not at all profit vs for the assuring of those things which are chiefly to be desired, nor at those times when wee shall stand in most need of helpe and comfort; namely, at the houre of death, and day of Iudgement. Yea, if we immoderately dote on them, they will become exceeding hurtfull and pernicious, being those thornes which will choke in vs the seed of Gods Word, from which all sauing graces doe spring; those snares of the diuell, which intangle vs to our perdition; those heauie burthens, which hinder vs in our iourney towards our heavenly home, and Cammell-like bunches, which will keepe vs from entring into that straight and narrow gate.

The cares also of this world are a great impediment to a godly life. For first, they hinder vs from performing religious duties, as we see in the example of those, who being inuited to the Marriage Supper of the Kings Son, refused to come; and of those, who being called to be Christs Disciples, were so taken vp with the care of their worldly businesse, that they could finde no present leisure to follow Christ. Yea of Martha herselfe, who though she were a good woman, yet was so cumbred with care,

1. Job. 3. 15.
Jam. 4. 4.

Math. 6. 24.

2. Tim. 4. 10.

Luk. 14. 16, 17.

Job. 12. 43, 43.

Prou. 1. 32.
Mark. 8. 36.

Math. 13. 12.

1. Tim. 6. 9, 10.

§. Self. 3.
The third impediment arising from worldly cares.
Math. 23. 5.
Luk. 14. 18.
and 9. 59, 61.
Luk. 10. 40.

Math. 13. 22.

Luk. 8. 14.

Psal. 37. 5.

Prou. 16. 3.

Heb. 13. 5.

1. Pet. 5. 7.

Math. 6. 25,
26, &c.

in providing for Christs entertainment, that she could finde no time to heare his heavenly Sermons, and enuied her sister, for performing this high and holy duty. Or if we set our selues to performe any service vnto God, these cares interpose themselves, and distract vs with worldly and wandring thoughts, so as we cannot performe it with any fruit and benefit: as we see in the Parable of the Sower, where he that receiued seed among thornes, is (as our Sauour expoundeth it) he that heareth the Word, and the cares of this world, and the deceitfulnesse of riches choke the Word, and hee becommeth vnfruitfull. In which regard, our Sauour giueth vnto vs a speciall caueat (whereby we may be fitted for his comming) that wee should take heed to our selues, lest at any time our hearts be ouercharged with sursetting and drunkennesse, and the cares of this life, and so that day come vpon vs at vnawares. For as the one furchargeth the stomake, and maketh vs vnfit for any bodily employment, so the other oppresse and intoxicate the mind and heart (as it were) with a kind of spirituall gluttony and drunkennesse, that they become altogether vnprofitable for any religious exercise. Now the meanes to remoue this impediment are first, to contemne these worldly things, as being of small value, in comparison of sauing grace, and heavenly glory: For what we can despise, we will not pursue with ouer-much care. Secondly, let vs learne to liue the life of faith, and not resting vpon our owne prouision, cast our selues vpon Gods all-sufficient providence, and neuer-failing promises, who will assuredly provide for vs, if we wholly depend vpon him. And this meanes and motiue the Scriptures offer vnto vs, to preserue vs from couetousnesse and carking care, according to that of the Psalmist, Commit thy way vnto the Lord, trust also in him, and he shall bring it to passe. And that counsell of the Wise man; Commit thy workes vnto the Lord, and thy thoughts shall be established. So the Apostle; Let your conuersation be without couetousnesse, and bee content with such things as ye haue; for he hath said, I will not leaue thee, nor forsake thee. And the Apostle Peter; Cast all your care vpon him, for he careth for you. But most excellently doth our Sauour Christ, with many strong arguments, arme vs against this carking care: Take no thought (saith he) for your life, what you shall eate, or what you shall drinke, nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. First, because he that hath giuen vs that which is the greater and better, he will not, if we depend vpon him, deny vnto vs that which is lesse and worse. Is not the life more then meate? and the body then rayment? Secondly, because he who is so gracious, bountifull, and prouident, as to provide for the Fowles of the ayre, and the Lillies of the field, without their care and paines, will much more provide for his children that rely vpon him, and with their reasonable paines and moderate care, doe serue his providence. Thirdly, because this carking care is bootlesse and vnprofitable, seeing God, according as it seemeth best to his infinite wisdom, hath allotted vnto euery one a stint and proportion in their estate, as well as in their bodily stature, vnto which they shall come, and not exceed it. And therefore as no man can adde one cubit to his stature of body, though he take neuer so much care and paines; so also it is alike impossible hereby to adde one mite vnto that dimension of our estate, which God by his wise and powerfull providence hath allotted vnto vs. Fourthly, ly, because this immoderate care is more fit for Infidels, who rest wholly upon themselves and their owne meanes, then for Christians, who acknowledge God, most wise, and all sufficient, to bee their Father; seeing he is omniscient, and taketh notice of all our wants, and omnipotent, and most gracious and bountifull, and therefore most able and willing to supply them. Fifthly, because the best meanes to be assured of all earthly blessings, in such a proportion as is most fit for Gods glory, and our saluation, is aboue, and before all things, to seeke Gods Kingdom and righteousness, because we haue his infallible promise, that if we so doe, other things shall be added vnto vs, as it were small advantages to this maine bargaine. The which Salomon found verified in his owne experience; who being put to his choyce, and preferring wisdome, before riches, honour, and long life, did not onely obtaine it at Gods hands, but all these things likewise for which he made no suit. Lastly, because it is extreme folly to anticipate future cares and troubles before they come, no not those of the next day, seeing when they come, they will bring griefe and vexation enough, though we doe not prevent them before they happen, and so redouble our sorrowes. Neither in truth can we tell whether those things whereof wee take care, will befall vs or no; and therefore what folly is it to vndergoe certaine trouble and care about vncertainties? or if they shall happen, we may haue wit to foresee them, but no power to prevent them; and therefore to vex our selues before they come, is to bee miserable before the time.

1. King. 3. 9, 10, 12, 13.

CAP. XI.

Of impediments arising from our corrupt affections, and first, from carnall hope and presumption.

IN respect of our carnall and corrupt affections, there are also many and strong impediments which hinder vs in the duties of a godly life. For whilest they remaine vnmortified and vnsubdued, they lust against the Spirit, powerfully drawing vs from the practice and performance of Christian duties, and violently carrying vs into sinfull courses. In which regard, the affections are called the feet of the soule, because they carry vs whither they incline and leade vs, either into the wayes of godlinesse, if they be sanctified, or of sinne and wickednesse, if they continue carnall and corrupt. The first vn sanctified affection, is carnall hope of escaping Gods heauie iudgements and punishments denounced against sinne, and of this long continuance of our liues, by benefit whereof we may safely ioy the pleasures of sinne, and need not to trouble our selues by entering into any strict course of godlinesse, seeing after wee haue long ioyed the world, we shall haue time enough afterwards to thinke of such a course, as may fit and prepare vs for the ioyes of life eternall. The which is a notable hindrance to keepe men from leading of a godly life. For whereas if men had learned rightly to number their dayes, they would apply their hearts

§. Sect. I.
That carnall hopes are great impediments to goodnesse.

Psal. 90. 12.

2. Pet. 1. 10.

1. Cor. 10. 12.

Luk. 12. 19, 20.

Mat. 24. 45, 46.

vnto wisdom; and if they were thorowly perswaded that our liues are so momentany and vncertaine, that death may seaze vpon them suddenly, to day before to morrow, it were not possible that they should so slightly put off a matter of such great importance, as the euerlasting saluation of their soules, vnto after and vncertaine times, but rather would instantly begin to make their Calling and Election sure, and to worke out their saluation with feare and trembling, by furnishing their soules with all sauving graces, and expressing them in the duties of a godly life: Now when as they promise vnto themselves long life and many dayes, they put off all these things, as being yet vnseasonable and vnnecessary, and with the rich foole in the Gospell, say vnto their soules; Soule, thou hast much goods laid up for many yeeres, take thine ease, eat, drinke, and be merry: which they would not be so desperately mad to doe, if that terrible voyce of God still sounded in their eares, Thou foole, this night thy soule shall bee required of thee; then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided? But contrariwise, if with the wise seruant, they well waighed the vncertainty of their Lords comming to call them to an account, they would still be prepared, and be in readinesse, that they might enter with him into his heavenly ioyes. Neither is there any better meanes to remooue this impediment, then to meditate often, not onely of the momentany shortnesse of our liues, but also of the great vncertainty of this short time. For if wee would seriously consider, that our life, in respect of eternity, is but as one day, yea an houre, a minute, a moment; that it passeth away as swiftly as a Weauers shuttle, as a tale told, as a Post; and is but a flower, a vapour, a shadow, yea as vanity it selfe: If we would also remember, that this short time is also vncertaine, seeing we may dye to day, as well as to morrow, this very houre, as well as the next, hauing no assurance of any more time then the present, as being tenants at will, who hold not life by lease, but onely at the Lords pleasure, without so much as a minutes warning; And finally, seeing in this short and vncertaine time, euerlasting life and saluation is either gotten or lost; what folly and madnesse is it to goe on in our sinnes, and neglect all Christian duties, in hope of long life, and to hazard our precious soules vpon so vncertaine and tickle a poynt? It may be thou shalt liue another yeere, and it may bee not another day. The which resteth not onely on a possibility, but vpon some probability likewise, in respect of those innumerable dangers which outwardly beset vs, and the inward infirmities of our fraile nature, which being the matter, or (as it were) the harbingers of death, wee carry still about, and in vs: which is also made more likely by the experience of many others, who haue been taken away suddenly, in the prime of their age, and chiefe of their strength, not hauing had so much as a dayes, or houres warning. And shall we venture our chiefe iewels, our precious soules, which are of much more price vnto vs then ten thousand worlds, vpon may-bees and vncertaine hopes, which being once lost, can neuer be recouered? Shall we hazard the euerlasting ioyes of heauen, which are vnspeakable and inestimable, and in danger our selues to intolerable and endlesse torments in hell fire, vpon some likelihoods onely, which haue so often failed? It may be thou shalt liue as long as thou expectest. And what then gainest thou thou in this course of wickednesse, but the pleasures of sinne, accompanied with the present checks and terrors of an euill conscience, and the feares of imminent and approaching iudgements, and attended vpon at the best, with continuall sorrow and repentance euen to the day of death. And it may be thou shalt die before thou art prepared for it, by repenting for thy sinnes, and deuoting thy selfe to Gods seruice. And then what loest thou, in lieu of the former gaines, which are so vaine in true value, and momentany in continuance? Surely those pleasures which are at Gods right hand for euermore, the ioyes of heauen, the fellowship of the Saints, and the vision and fruition of God and his Christ, who being infinite in all goodnesse, beaurty, glory, and all perfection, doe make all those perfectly and eternally happy, who hauing faithfully serued them in this life, shall see and inioy them in the life to come.

The second corrupt affection which hindreth vs in the duties of a godly life, is carnall presumption, which carrying with it some shew and semblance of a strong faith, in the opinion of those who are blinded with ignorance, becommeth vnto them a notable impediment, hindring them from the profession and practice of true godlinesse. Yea, it is the deuils ordinary preuailing weapon, wherewith hee assaulteth secure worldlings, which hee findeth by common experience so powerfull for his purpose, that for the most part hee vseth no other, vnlesse they haue wounded their consciences, with committing of some horrible and outrageous sinnes, which will suffer them to entertaine no hope of Gods fauour and mercy in the forgiuenesse of them. In which case hee possesseth them with terrors and feares, and driueth them into the contrary extreme of desperation. The which hee also doth, when hee hath to deale with melancholike persons, who being naturally of a timorous and fearefull disposition, cannot so easily be perswaded to presume when there is no cause. Otherwise hee seldome awakeneth their sleeping consciences, but carrieth them quietly to hell and destruction without noise. For the more sensible we are of our disease, the more we feare the issue of it, and the more earnest and diligent we are to seeke all meanes of helpe, vnlesse we haue no hope of cure. In which regard, it may be truly said, that whereas one perisheth through despaire, many hundred are plunged into destruction by security and presumption; so much more dangerous this is then the other, although nothing so horrid and terrible to looke vpon. Now this presumption may be considered in respect of the obiect, either generally or more specially. Generally, when as we presume of Gods mercy and goodnesse, of the pardon of all our sinnes, and of the saluation of our soules, without any sound ground or warrant out of Gods Word, when as wee are in no sort qualified and fitted to receiue them. The fruit and effect of which perswasion, is a purpose and resolution to continue still in our sinnes, because God is mercifull to forgiue them, and to neglect the duties of a godly life, because they are not onely tedious and irksome vnto vs, but also of no great necessity, seeing God respecting our frailty and weakenesse, will receiue vs to grace and mercy. Whereas contrariwise, a true and liuely faith doth alwayes bring forth the fruits of vnfeigned repentance, and perswading vs of Gods loue, doth worke in our hearts true

§. Self. 2.
That carnall presumption is a great impediment to a godly life

true loue towards him againe, and a desire and indeuour to expresse it in all holy obedience to Gods will, that we may thereby glorifie him who hath beene so good and gracious vnto vs. With like presumption men are hindred from entring into the wayes of godlinesse, and heartned to continue in their finnes, whilest they plead that Christ came to saue sinners, and that his deare and merits, as they are sufficient in themselves to satisfie Gods iustice, so they will bee effectuell vnto them for their iustification and saluation, though they bee not so strict and precise in making conscience of all finnes, or in practising the duties of a godly life.

§. Sect. 3.

Of the meanes
to remoue the former impediment.

Now if we would auoyd these impediments, let vs know and consider first, that this is a shamefull and horrible abuse of Gods mercy and goodnesse, which hee will neuer let goe vnpunished, to take occasion thereby, the more to offend and displease him by wilfull continuing in sinne, and neglecting the duties of his seruice. To prouoke God to wrath, because he is patient and long-suffering, and to sinne against him, because hee is good and gracious, and ready to forgiue. And finally, to neglect all duties of his seruice, because he is such a bountifull Master, that he giueth of his free grace and mercy, rich wages and rewards, without all merit and desert. For these should rather be arguments to inflame our loue towards him, and to make vs so much the more zealous of his glory, and tearefull to offend so gracious a God; according to that of the Psalmist; There is mercy or forgiuenesse with thee, that thou mayest bee feared. Or if through frailty and infirmity, we haue, contrary to our purpose and resolution, been ouertaken of any sinne; this patience and loue of God should be a strong motiue, to make vs to rise out of it by vnfeined repentance; according to that of the Apostle; Despisest thou the riches of his goodnesse, and forbearance, and long-suffering, not knowing that the goodnesse of God leadeth thee to repentance? Secondly, let vs consider, that as the Lord is infinite in mercy and compassion, so hee is no lesse infinite in iustice and truth; that as he is mercifull and gracious, long-suffering, and abundant in goodnesse and truth, keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity, transgression, and sinne: so also hee is iust in all his wayes, and holy in all his workes, and will by no meanes cleare the guilty, visiting the iniquity of the fathers vpon the children, vnto the third and fourth generation: that as he is a mercifull Saniour, so also a iust God, and a righteous Lord, who loneth righteousness, and will not let sinne goe vnpunished, but will iudge euery man according to his workes; and that he is a terrible Iudge, especially to those who abuse his mercy and long-suffering. And therefore let vs not disioyne these things which cannot be seuered, nor imagine such a mercy in God, as will not stand with his iustice, which were to mayme the Diuine nature, and to pull (as it were) one of his hands from him; which outrageous violence offered vnto his holy Maiesty, hee will neuer suffer to goe vnpunished. Let vs, with Dauid, so acknowledge that hee is good, as that wee doe not deny that hee is also vpriight, and in our songs so sing of his mercy, as that wee doe not disioyne his Iudgement from it. Let vs remember, that in God and in all his workes, mercy and truth doe meete together, righteousness and peace doe kisse each other. Let vs not say, His mercy is great, he will be

Psal. 130.4.

Exod. 34.6,7.

Psal. 145.17.

Isa. 45.21.

Psal. 11.7.

2. Cor. 3.10.

Psal. 35.8.

Psal. 101.1.

Psal. 81.10.

ecclus. 5.6,7.

be pacified for the multitude of my sinnes: for mercy and wrath come from him, and his indignation resteth upon sinners. Neither let vs, presuming on Gods mercy and patience, make any tarrying to turne vnto the Lord, nor put it off from day to day; for suddenly shall the wrath of the Lord come forth, and in thy security thou shalt be destroyed, and perish in the day of vengeance. Thus the Apostle telleth vs, that if we despise the riches of Gods goodnesse and forbearance, which should leade vs to repentance, we shall after our hardnesse and impenitent heart, treasure up vnto our selues wrath, against the day of wrath, and reuelation of the righteous iudgement of God, who will render vnto euery man according to his deeds. And the Lord threatneth, that if any man hearing the words of his curse against sinners, doe blesse himselfe in his heart, saying, I shall haue peace, though I walke in the imagination of my heart, to adde drunkennesse to thirst; that he will not spare him, but that his anger and ielousie shall smooke against that man, and all the curses that are written in the booke of the Law, shall lie vpon him, and the Lord shall blot out his name from vnder heauen. Let vs remember what the Apostle teacheth vs, namely, that no outrageous sinners, continuing in their wickednesse without repentance, shall inherit the Kingdome of Christ and of God, and therefore exhorteth, that wee suffer no man to deceiue vs with vaine words; seeing, because of these things commeth the wrath of God vpon the children of disobedience. Finally, let vs consider, that though Gods mercies be in themselves infinite, and aboue all his workes, and all his gracious promises which are in Christ, yea, and Amen; yet they are limited by his infallible truth, and appropriated vnto repentant sinners, and therefore cannot extend to the presumptuous, who take occasion from his mercies to continue impenitently in their sinnes, but he will glorifie his iustice in punishing them, as hee glorifieth his mercy, in pardoning the sinnes of all those who turne vnto him by vntained repentance. And therefore let vs acknowledge with the Psalmist, that the Lord is good and gracious, yet not to all, but onely to Israel, even to such as are of a cleane heart; and that as the eyes of the Lord are vpon the righteous, and his eares open to heare their cry: so the face of the Lord is against them that do euill, so cut off the remembrance of them from of the earth. Let vs not presume vpon Gods mercy whilst we continue impenitently in our sins, but let vs stand in awe of Gods iustice and iudgements, and sin not, and offer first the sacrifice of righteousness, and then put our trust in the Lord. Those likewise, who presuming vpon the all-sufficiencie of Christs death, merits, and satisfaction, doe take occasion thereby to continue in their sinnes without repentance, and to neglect the duties of a godly life, may easily remooue this dangerous impediment out of their way, if they will but seriously consider, that this is a most fearefull abuse of his inestimable loue, who hath done so much for vs, when as we vse his helpe to vphold vs in our sinnes, and his death and merits, as a pillow whereon we may sleepe more securely in our wickednesse. Whereas he came not to ratifie and confirme, but to dissolve and abolish the workes of the deuill: And gaue himselfe for vs, not onely to free vs from all sinne, in respect of the guilt and punishment, but also to purge vs from all iniquity, and that being his peculiar people, we should bee zealous of good workes. He hath redeemed us out of the hands of all our spirituall enemies, that wee may serue him in holinesse and righteousness before him all the dayes

Rom. 2. 4, 5, 6.

Deut. 29. 19, 20.

Eph. 5. 5, 6.

Psal. 73. 7.

Psal. 34. 15, 16.

Psal. 4. 4, 5.

1. Iob. 3. 8.

Tit. 2. 14.

Luk. 1. 74, 75.

1. Cor. 6. 20.

Eph. 5. 25, 26.

1. Pet. 1. 18.

Mat. 9. 13.

Esa. 59. 20.

Esa. 55. 6, 7.

Pro. 28. 14.

Phil. 2. 13.

1. Cor. 10. 12.

1. Pet. 1. 17.

§. Sect. 4.

Of presumption in neglecting the meanes of holinesse.

Rom. 10. 20.

Act. 2. 13, 37.

dayes of our liues. He hath bought vs with a price, that we should glorifie God in our bodies and in our spirits, because they are his. He hath giuen himselfe for vs, not onely that hee might iustifie vs in the remission of our sinnes, but also sanctifie and cleanse vs with the washing of the water by the Word; that he might present vs vnto himselfe, as a glorious Spouse and Church, not hauing spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, but that we should be holy and without blame. Finally, he hath redeemed vs, not onely from the guilt of sinne, but also from our vaine conuersation, by shedding his most precious Blood, as the Apostle Peter speaketh. And therefore if wee doe not finde and feelee the vertue of Christs death and merits, as effectually for our sanctification as for our iustification, and to free vs from the corruption of sinne, as well as from the guilt and punishment, wee haue little cause to presume of their efficacy for our saluation, seeing these are alwayes inseparably linked and conioyned. Lastly, let vs consider, that as our Sauour Christ came to saue sinners, so withall to call them to repentance. And that the Redeemer came only to Sion, and to them who turne from transgression in Iacob: and therefore let vs not foolishly presume, that we shall be his redeemed, if wee continue in our sinnes without repentance. Let vs not putt off God to another time, when he offereth vnto vs mercy and forgiveness: But let vs seeke the Lord, while hee may be found, and call vpon him while hee is neere. Let the wicked forsake his wayes, and the vnrighteous man his thoughts, and let him returne vnto the Lord, and then hee will haue mercy vpon him, and abundantly pardon, as hee hath promised. Let vs not presume on Gods mercy, whilest we continue in our sinnes; yea, rather after that wee haue vnfaignedly repented of our sinnes, let vs feare alwayes, considering our owne frailty and infirmity, which maketh vs apt to relapse into them, and so to prouoke Gods wrath against vs. Let vs worke out our saluation with feare and trembling, and whilest we presume of standing, take heed of falling. And if we call God, Father, who without respect of persons iudgeth according to euery mans workes, let vs passe the time of our sojourning heere in feare, as the Apostle Peter exhorteth vs.

And thus wee see how carnall presumption generally hindereth vs, from entring into, or proceeding in a godly life, and how we may remove this impediment. More especially, we are hindered thereby, when as wee presume, that we may performe all duties required vnto it, notwithstanding, that wee neglect all meanes of sanctification and holinesse, which God hath ordained for the working his graces in vs (as hearing the Word, receiuing the Sacrament, Prayer, and the rest) by the extraordinary operation of his holy Spirit in vs. For the remoouing of which impediment, wee are to know, that howsoever God sometimes, to shew the infinitenesse of his mercy, goodnesse, and power, which are free, and not tyed vnto any meanes, doeth, when wee least thinke of it, and when wee haue not so much as a desire and indeuour to serue and please him, regenerate and conuert vs, according to that of the Apostle, I was found of them that sought me not; I was made manifest vnto them that asked not after mee. As we see in the example of those, who comming to heare the Word onely for forme and fashion sake, without any desire to profite by it, are notwithstanding effectually called and truly conuerted converted by the mighty operation of Gods Spirit working with his owne holy ordinance. And though also when greater meanes are wanting, as in the time of persecution, the Lord giueth an extraordinary blessing to such as are meane and sinall, causing his seruants (like Moses and Elias) to goe on constantly for many dayes in the waies of godlinesse, in the strength of one meale; to the end it may appeare that the worke of conuersion and sanctification, is not effected by any vertue inherent in the meanes, but that it is a gift of his grace, and conuayed vnto vs by the powerfull working of his holy Spirit: yet this is not Gods common course, and ordinary manner of working his graces in vs, but ordinarily hee will haue vs to vse the meanes, and sanctify them as his owne holy ordinances, that they may bee effectuell to the ends for which we vse them; which if wee neglect, we doe in a presumptuous maner tempt the Lord; and can haue hereby no more hope, that God will worke his graces in vs, or enable vs vnto the duties of a godly life, then if we rest vpon his immediate prouidence, and in the meane time neglect our meate, which hee hath ordayned to nourish vs, or our clothes, which hee hath appointed vs to vse for the keeping of vs warme.

CAP. XII

Of the third sort of carnall affections, which are impediments to a godly life; as superstitious scrupulosity, deiection of minde, feare and desperation.

THe third sort of carnall affections which are impediments to a godly life, are such as are in the quite contrary extreme to the former, as anxious and superstitious scrupulosity, heauinesse and too much deiection of minde, feare and desperation. Superstitious scrupulosity is, when through naturall blindnesse and want of sound knowledge, we doubt of all our actions, whether they be lawfull or vnlawfull, and call euery thing into question, being ready to yeeld vnto euery temptation which abridgeth vs of our Christian liberty, when some fearefull iudgement is suggested and threatned by the deuil and our owne corruption, if we forbear not the vse of things lawfull, or doe not such things as are vnlawfull. The which, we mistaking for our owne thoughts, and concluding that wee haue giuen our full consent vnto them (though in truth they are the meere suggestions and tentations of our spirituall enemies) doe yeeld our selues ouer vnto them, as though wee were bound vpon some fearefull penalty, to obey them, though they haue no ground or warrant out of Gods Word, yea in truth are expressly contrary vnto it. The which is a notable impediment to a godly life; First, because it maketh vs to spend our thoughts and time about toyes and trifles, as the vsing or not vsing such creatures, the doing or not doing of such actions, as are in their owne nature indifferent; and of small importance; whilst in the meane while, wee neglect the maine duties of Gods seruice and of a godly life. Secondly, because these

§. Sect. I.
That scrupulosity is a great impediment to a godly life.

scrupulous and superstitious feares, apprehending vpon euery vaine suggestion and slight occasions, some dreadfull iudgement threatened, if we doe not yeeld to the tentation, doe disturbe and disquiet the minde, and take away all inward peace and tranquillity which should comfort and incourage vs in well-doing, and so maketh vs to neglect altogether all good duties, or to performe them to no purpose and profit, by reason of our doubting and incredulity, our trouble of mind and disquietnesse. Yea oftentimes the body is so infeeble, partly by these inward vexations, griefe and heauinesse, and partly by beeing restrayned from the comfortable vse of Gods creatures, that they are disabled vnto all good duties, and become weake, sicke, and vnfit instruments to be vsed by the soule in the seruice of God. Now the cause of these scrupulous feares and troubles of minde are diuers. For first on Gods part, they are either fruits and effects of his iustice, hereby punishing our former sinnes, and especially because wee haue neglected his holy feare, and to performe vnto him the duties of his seruice which he hath required of vs; it being iust with God, that because we would not harbor his feare in our hearts, we should haue the replenished & vexed with causles feares of Bug-beares & shadows, & because we would not serue him by yeelding obedience vnto his will, that therefore wee should become slaues to our owne superstitious phantasies, sometimes imposing vpon vs obedience vnto them, and when wee are ready to performe it, pulling vs backe with some new suggestion, so that wee stand in an astonished manner, neither daring to doe it, nor leaue it vndone, seeing both alike threaten the same danger. Or else it is an effect of Gods mercy, when as he conuerteth these effects of his Iustice to their good; vsing them as meanes of their contrition and humiliation, whereby they are fitted and prepared for true repentance, and haue a resolution and indeuour wrought in them of seruing God in all good duties, that so they may either be freed, or at least secured from all those euils, which these scrupulous feares doe threaten against them. Secondly, on our part they are caused, first, by our sinnes, whereby we haue iustly brought these vexations vpon vs. Secondly, by our ignorance and want of iudgement, which maketh vs that wee cannot distinguish betweene the suggestions and tentations of Satan and our owne thoughts; betweene the bare imaginations of our mindes, vnto which we giue no entertainment, and the consent of our wills vnto them. By reason whereof, wee either condemne our selues of such sinnes as we neuer committed, seeing we haue at the first entrance of such thoughts and suggestions resisted, and like Wilde-fire haue cast them out of our mindes and hearts, or that our sinnes in this kinde are much more grievous then they are, as though we had giuen full consent vnto them, because we haue a while harboured them in our mindes, by reuoluing and thinking too long on them, before we haue bearen them backe, and quenched them by the shield of faith. Thirdly, such scrupulosities and superstitious feares, arise commonly from the naturall humour of melancholy abounding in vs, which maketh fearful impressions in our imaginations,

imaginations, and disquieteth our mindes and hearts with terrible apprehensions, which haue no true ground in themselues; especially when as this humour is (as it were) leauened and set a working and boiling with the guilt of sin, tormenting the conscience, or with the sense and smart of some great and extraordinary crosses and afflictions. Lastly the diuell laboureth to hinder vs in the duties of a godly life, by making vs scrupulous and superstitious. For when he can keepe vs no longer in carnall security, by reason that wee are naturally timorous, and haue some feare of God, through the sight of our sins, and apprehension of his iudgements begun in vs, then he induceth to turne our feare to false objects, that so fearing those things which are not to bee feared, he may keepe out of our hearts the true feare of God, which should be in vs the fountaine of true obedience. And when he can no longer continue vs in open prophanesse, being now resolved to performe some seruice vnto God, he will moue vs, all he may, to spend all our time and strength about trifles and things of no worth, that in the meane while, we may neglect mayne and substantiall duties, which are necessary for the setting forth of Gods glory, and the furthering and assuring of our saluation. Secondly, by these scrupulous feares hee distracteth our mindes, turmoyleth our hearts, and disturbeth and disquieteth our consciences, so as we cannot at all performe any duties of Gods seruice, or if wee doe, yet so vncomfortably, and with such anxiety and distraction, with such doubting and infidelity, that they can neither bee acceptable to God, nor profitable for our owne saluation. Lastly, when our hearts are possessed with these scrupulous feares, he easily withholdeth vs thereby from performing those holy duties which God requireth, whilst hee suggesteth that some fearefull iudgement shall befall vs, if we doe them, because we are vnworthy or vnprepared; or else presseth vs to doe them out of these feares, that wee may escape that which he threatneth to impose: And so to performe Christian duties not out of true grounds, and to right ends, as loue, filiall feare, and obedience to God, to the end we may glorify him, but out of slauiish terrour, that we may escape that violence which he threatneth vpon our neglect. Whereof it will come to passe, that the best duties thus performed, are not any true seruice of God, but rather of the deuill, seeing feare of him, & not the loue of God; his terrible threatnings, and not faith in Gods promises moueth vs vnto them.

Now the meanes to be freed from this impediment, are, First, that wee forsake our sinnes, and turne vnto God by vnfained repentance, and so apply his gracious promises vnto vs by a liuely faith, that being reconciled vnto vs, he may keepe vs safe vnder his prouidence and protection, and not iustly for our sinnes giue vs over to the Tempter, to be terrified with his feares, and turmoyled with his false suggestions. Secondly, wee must labour to haue our mindes illuminated with sauing knowledge, the light whereof will easily discouer the falshood and vanities of these superstitious scruples and feares, and to attaine vnto spirituall wisdom and sound iudgement, that thereby wee may be enabled to discerne betweene our owne thoughts, which we enter-

6. Sect. 2.

Of the meanes whereby we may be freed from superstitious scrupulous.

taine with consent of will, and the tentations of the deuill which wee haue resisted; the good motions of Gods Spirit which are alwaies agreeable to his Word, and the suggestions of the diuell, which haue no ground or warrant from it. Thirdly, we must take heed, that we doe not take any thing vpon the deuils bare suggestion, seeing he is a lyer from the beginning, who by his falshood laboureth to deceiue & destroy vs (for what were this, but to beleue in him by an absolute faith, when there is no reason for it?) but wee must examine his tentations by the rule of Gods Word, which will easily discouer the fraud, weakenesse, and maliciousnesse of them. For nothing giueth Satan more aduantage against weake Christians, then their readinesse to giue credit to his tentations, without bringing them to the touchstone of Gods Truth. Fourthly, if Satan taketh aduantage from the humour of melancholy abounding in vs, to fill and fraught our hearts with these scruples & feares, we must vse the helpe of the skilfull Physician for the remouing of this cause, that so the effects may cease: And withal aske the counsell of some iudicious & faithful Diuine, who may direct vs in our wayes, & resolue our doubts, vpon whose iudgement, grounded vpon Gods Word, we must more rest, then vpon our owne weake conceit and opinions, especially being thus blinded with those blacke and foggie mists, which false feare and melancholy haue cast before them. Fifthly, wee must labour to haue our hearts possessed and replenished with the true and filiall feare of God, springing from Faith and Loue, whereby we shall be made zealous in Gods seruice; and then there will be no roome for these Panicke and superstitious feares, nor any aduantage giuen to Satan of seazing vpon vs with his suggestions. Lastly, we must carefully take heed, that we doe not yeeld our selues ouer to be ruled by these scruples and feares, either to doe, or not to doe any thing, because of some euill threatned; but in things indifferent, it is our best course to resist the temptation, by doing the contrary to that which is suggested, if Christian prudence tell vs, that it is conuenient, all circumstances considered. And in things lawfull or vnlawfull, we are to performe or omit them, not out of scrupulous feare of any euils threatned by the tempter, from which God is al-sufficient to shield vs, but in obedience to God, because he in his Word hath commanded or forbidden them.

§. Sect. 3.

That carnall feare is a great hinderance vnto godlinesse, and the meanes to be freed from it.

Secondly, we are hindred by carnall feare in the duties of a godly life, whilst thereby we are moued to thinke, that we shall neuer be able to performe them, though we vse all our indeuour; or if we haue begunne well, yet we shall neuer hold out vnto the end, by reason of our owne frailties and infirmities, the afflictions and troubles which crosse vs in these courses, and the manifold and malicious tentations and persecutions, which are raised against vs by the enemies of our saluation. By which feares our mindes are troubled, our hearts vexed and turmoyled, our courage quailed, our resolutions weakned, and we vtterly disabled and discouraged from entring into this course of Christianity, when as we haue little or no hope of proceeding & continuing in it vnto the end, that we may be saued. The which temptation

is

is much strengthened, when we see the many faintings and faylings of others that haue gone before vs, who professing Christianity, haue either neglected the duties belonging to it, or performed them to little purpose in a cold, formall & carelesse maner; and in the end haue wholly desisted & returned back to their old prophanenes. Which impediment if we would remoue, we must know that neuer any did seriously & sincerely seeke God in the waies of his commandements, but they haue assuredly found him. And therefore we must not be discouraged with the faylings and relapses of hypocrites & temporaries, if our owne consciences testifie vnto vs, that we labour to serue and please God in the vprightnesse of our hearts. Secondly, our faintnes and weaknesse must not discourage vs from entring into, and proceeding in the waies of godlinesse, seeing we walke not in our owne strength, but by the power of God assisting vs, nor by vertue of our own resolutions & indeuours, but of Gods gracious and free promises made vnto vs in Christ, that he will not onely iustifie, but also sanctifie vs, & free vs as well from the corruption of sin, as the guilt and punishment. The which if we apprehend by a true & liuely Faith, we shalbe able to ouercome all difficulties, and to serue God in some good & acceptable maner; as I haue more fully shewed in the beginning of this Treatise. Finally, we need not to feare our perseuerance in the duties of godlinesse vnto the end, if disclayming our owne strength, we rest and rely wholly vpon Gods power and promises, seeing he is able and al-sufficient to perfect that good worke which he hath begunne, to enable vs likewise, who are impotent in our selues, to doe all things necessarie for his glory and our saluation, through the power of Christ which strengtheneth vs. To arme vs against all the tentations of the deuill, the world and our owne flesh, so that all the power of hell, the prosperity or persecutions of the world, nor any thing else whatsoever, shall be able to separate vs from the loue of God, or to put out and extinguish our loue of him in our hearts, or to hinder our proceeding in the wayes of godlinesse, vntill by walking in them, wee attaine vnto euerlasting ioy and happinesse.

Againe, we are much hindred in the duties of a godly life, by carnall sorrow and lumpish heauinesse. For if (as the Apostle saith) worldly sorrow causeth death, both in respect of the life of grace and glory, then must it needs also disable vs vnto all actions of life, being made as vnfit for them hereby, as a man in the state of death, to performe any works of the liuing. Now this heauines & excessiue sorrow ariseth from diuers causes, as first, from the sight & sense of our innumerable & grievous sins, when as it is not mixed with faith & the loue of God, but meere ariseth out of seruil feare & self-loue, apprehending Gods terrible Iudgments against vs for our sins. Secondly, from the imperfection in our sanctification, whereof it is, that our vnmortified corruptions doe rage & sway in vs, disabling vs vnto Gods seruice, and making vs prone vnto sin. That the duties which we performe, are so full of wants & weaknesse, that we can with no comfort looke vpon them. That the graces of Gods Spirit are imperfect, & continually assaulted with our contrary corruptions; our faith with doubting; our affiance with 13.

Phil. 1. 6. & 4.

1oh. 10. 28.

Rom. 8. 35, 36, 38.

6. Sect. 4.

That carnall sorrow is an impediment to a godly life. 2 Cor. 7.

diffidence; our humility with pride; our repentance with security and hardnesse of heart, and so in the rest. Thirdly, from our weaknesse in faith, perswading vs of the remission of our sinnes, and of our reconciliation and peace with God. Fourthly, from spirituall desertions, whereby God estrangeth himselfe from vs, and seemeth to haue left and forsaken vs. Fifthly, from our fainting and failing in the waies of godlinesse, and often relapses into sinne. Sixthly, from our manifold and sharpe afflictions, which are so bitter and vnpleasant to the flesh, that they make vs immoderately sorrowfull, and to breake out into some impatency, as though they were signes of Gods wrath and displeasure, and not of his fatherly loue correcting vs for our amendment. Seuenthly and lastly, this sorrow ariseth in the hearts of weake Christians, when as they compare themselves with others that haue made a better and greater progresse in the graces of Gods Spirit, and in the duties of a godly life; being hereby moued to think, that the graces which they see in others, are wholly wanting in themselves, because their lesser light is obscured by a greater, and seemeth nothing, because it is not of equall brightnesse. Or if they haue any at all, yet that it is false and hypocriticall, because it is but of slender growth, and much inferiour to those which we obserue in many others, whom notwithstanding we haue as much exceeded in meanes, as they vs, in the fruits of them. By which sorrowes and heauinesse, arising from these and such like causes, the poore Christian doth more & more weaken the operation of Gods graces in him in the duties of a godly life, because he doth too much already apprehend their weaknesse, and more disableth himselfe, because he seeth his inability. For hauing with immoderate griefe weakened his body, and spent his spirits; oppressed his heart, and terrified his conscience, he is made lumpish and dull, vncheerfull and vncomfortable in all the duties of Gods seruice. For the remouing of which impediment, we must carefully take heed that we doe not disioyne faith from our repentance; but as wee haue one eye vpon our sinnes, that wee may sorrow for them, so the other eye vpon our Sauour Christ, who hath fully satisfied for them. Secondly, we must not dreame vpon any perfection of sanctification in this life, though we labour after it, and then we shal not be too much dejected, and mourne immoderately for our imperfection; whereas if we fancy vnto our selues a farre greater measure of grace and holinesse then it is possible for vs to attaine, it will be a cause of excessive sorrow, when we finde how farre we come short of our hopes. Thirdly, we must looke vpon Gods graces, and the fruits of them in holy obedience, as testimonies of Gods loue, and euidences of our sanctification, and not as being any meritorious causes of his fauour, and our saluation. For then we need not to stand so much vpon the quantiry and degree of them, as vpon their sincerity and truth, which when we finde, we may reioyce in the assurance of Gods free grace and loue through Iesus Christ. Whereas if we looke vpon them in their worth and worthinesse, the sight of their imperfections will bereaue our hearts of all sound comfort. Fourthly, we must consider, that the first and least degrees of true grace are accepted of God, and will make vs also acceptable vnto him. For hee will not breake the bruised reed, nor quench the smoking flax. He respecteth eth and tendreth his younglings and weaklings, as well as those who have attained to greater strength; and he hath pronounced them blessed, who hunger and thirst after righteousness, as well as those which are perfectly righteous. Finally, as we must take notice of that wee have not, that wee may labour after it, so also we must not neglect what wee have, that wee may be truly thankfull vnto God, from whose free grace we haue receiued it; among which we may number spirituall life, whereby onely we can be sensible of our wounds and weaknesse, the fight and sense of our sinnes, by which we are moued to deny our selues, and to fly vnto Christ, hungering desires of grace and holinesse, seeing wee haue Gods promise that they shall be satisfied. And so we shall ioyne faith with our repentance, ioy with our mourning, loue and thankfulnesse with our meeknesse and humility.

Finally, these scrupulous feares, and carnall sorrow, if they bee not remoued or moderated, will bring vs by degrees, into that fearefull gulph of deepe despaire, whereby we shall cast off all hope of Gods mercy, and reiect the all-sufficient merits and satisfaction of Iesus Christ, through our incredulity, as though the multitude and hainousnesse of our sinnes, did farre exceed them. And this is the very cut-throat of all piety, and the diuels strongest and most horrid chaine, to inflaue men in his seruice, and to hinder them from entertaining so much as a thought or desire of seruing God in the duties of a godly life. For it wholly discourageth a man from proceeding in such a way, as offreth no hope of bringing him to his journeys end. It maketh a seruant wholly to neglect his duty, when as hee is quite cut off from all expectation of reward. It causeth men to giue themselues to all sensuality, voluptuousnesse, and prophanesse, when they haue no other hopes, but what this present life offereth vnto them; and the rather, that they may hereby put off, for a little while, their terrours of conscience, and griefes of minde; as it were by drinking of cold water in the fit of a seauer. And wanting faith, by which wee are vnited vnto Christ, in whom alone we can bring forth fruits of holinesse and righteousness, how can we otherwise chuse but be vtterly barren in all true obedience, and like wild Oliue trees, bring forth onely fruits of impiety and wickednesse? Which impediment if we would remoue, we must remember, that the Lord is infinite in grace and mercy, as he describeth himselfe in his Word, so that though our sinnes be many and grievous, yet they are infinitely exceeded by them, for his mercies are aboue all his workes. That he taketh delight in shewing mercy toward repentant sinners; seeing hereby he exerciseth his nature, and magnifieth his holy name in the manifestation of his grace and goodnesse. That he loued vs when we were his enemies; yea so loued vs, that he sent his onely begotten and dearly beloued Sonne to dye for vs, and therefore will not now reiect vs, when as through Christ we sue and seeke to be reconciled vnto him. That he hath made his free couenant of grace with vs, wherein hee hath promised the remission of all our sinnes, vpon the alone condition of faith, bringing forth the fruits thereof in vnfeined repentance, and that his promises are indefinite, without exception of any sinners, and therefore shall assuredly belong vnto vs, if we doe not reiect them through vnbelieve. That the me-

Math. 5. 6.

§. Sect. 5.
Of desperation, and that it is a great impediment to godlinesse.

Exod. 34. 7.

Micah 7. 18.

Iob. 3. 16.

rites and satisfaction of Christ are of infinite value, and an all-sufficient satisfaction for the finnes of the whole world, if they were applyed by faith; and that he hath giuen vnto vs his couenant in writing, and ratified it by his Sacraments, which he hath annexed as seales to the great Charter of our peace, that there might no place be left to doubting. Finally, that our Sauour Christ continually maketh intercession for vs, pleading the all-sufficiency of his merits and satisfaction for our iustification and saluation. So that though we sinne, yet this is our comfort, that we haue an Advocate with the Father to pleade our cause, euen Iesus Christ the righteous, and he is the propitiation for our finnes.

1. Iob. 2. 1, 2.

6. Sect. 6.
That pride is a singular impediment to a godly life.

Iob. 9. 31.

Apoc. 3. 17.

Math. 19. 30.

Luk. 1. 52, 53.

Apoc. 3. 18.

Besides these, there are diuers other carnall corruptions, which are notable impediments vnto a godly life. The first wherof is naturall pride, whereby we haue an high conceit of our selues, and of euery shadow and shew of grace in vs, and imagine that we haue so much already, that wee need not to labour after more, nor to vse any meanes for enriching of our selues with those graces whereof we stand in need. An example whereof we haue in the Pharises, who thought they saw, when as they were blind, and therefore neglected the light of truth, when as the Sunne of righteousness did shine vnto them. In the Laodiceans, who thought that they were rich, and had need of nothing, when as they were poore and miserable, blind and naked. In the young Iusticiary, who thought hee had done all that God required of him, and attained vnto perfection, when as yet hee had done nothing, but still remained the slaue of sinne, loaded with corruptions and imperfections. And in the Corinthians, who proudly conceited that they were rich, and raigned as Kings, not needing any helpe from the blessed Apostle, when as still their lusts raigned in them. The which, aboue all other corrupt affections, hindreth vs from proceeding in the wayes of godlinesse. First, because God denyeth to giue his graces to such as being proudly conceited of themselves, doe not acknowledge that they stand in need of them, and consequently would neuer be thankful for them. For he exalteth the humble, and pulleth downe the proud, he filleth the hungry with good things, and sendeth the full empty away. Secondly, because they, thinking that they haue enough already, neuer labour after more, but neglect all good meanes which God hath ordained for the begetting and increasing of all his graces in vs; and hauing scarce set one foot forward in the course of Christianity, yet conceiting that they haue almost attained vnto the Goale of perfection, & that they haue far outstripped all others, they stand still, as though there were no need of further proceeding. Now if we would remooue this impediment, wee must mortifie our camall pride, and labour after true humility, that hauing a sight of our sinne and misery, we may not content our selues, but labour to come out of this wretched estate. Wee must strue to see and feele our wants and weakneses, that so we may vse all good meanes whereby they may be supplied, and we strengthened; and the imperfections of our best actions, that so we may labour after more perfection. Wee must acknowledge our selues wounded and sicke with sinne, that Christ may heale and cure vs; weake in grace, that he may strengthen vs; naked, that he may clothe vs; poore, that he may enrich vs; blind, that hee may giue vs sight, and lost in our selues, that he may saue vs. The second, is vniust anger, frowardnesse, and peeuihnesse, which for the time take away the vse of reason, and much more the power of Religion, making vs vnfit to pray, reade, or heare the Word of God, or to performe any other Christian duty, either vnto God, our neighbour, or our own person; and for the time so stifeth and hindereth the operations of Gods Spirit, and the holy motions of his Diuine graces dwelling in vs, that scarce any semblance or shew of them will appeare, either to others or our selues; as wee see in the example of holy Dauid, who in his cooler thoughts and well tempered affections, made some scruple of cutting Sauls garment, but being enraged with fury, resolueth on the death not onely of Nabal who had offended him, but of his whole family, who were innocent, and rather on his side then against him. For the remoouing of which impediment, it is necessary that we doe not giue way vnto this vnruely passion, according to the Apostles admonition, but that we subdue and keepe it vnder, not suffering the Sunne to goe downe on our wrath; vsing all good meanes to mortifie these carnall passions, and to attaine vnto the contrary grace of meekenesse and gentlenesse, of which I haue written at large in my Treatise of Anger.

The third corrupt affection, is sloth and lazinesse, which maketh men loth to take paines in performing the duties of Gods seruice, as watchfulnesse, Prayer, hearing the Word, Meditation, and the rest. For many hauing proceeded thus farre, as to approoue these things in their iudgements, and haue some desires and faint resolutions to put them in practice, yet when they finde that they cannot be done without some paines, being of an idle and sluggish disposition, they are presently discouraged, and hauing found the treasure which is sufficient to make them rich, chuse rather to remaine in their spirituall beggery, then they will spend any sweat in digging for it. Needs then must this be a great impediment to the duties of a godly life, when as men are so luskish and lazie, that they flie that labour which is required vnto them. Needs must such sluggards liue in pouerty, seeing it is onely the hand of the diligent that maketh rich. And farre off are they from archieuing any excellent worke, who sit idly still, pretending excuses of danger and difficulty, and that there is a Lyon without, ready to slay them, if they goe out into the streer; which impediment if wee would remooue, let vs consider, that howsoeuer such men please themselves with idle desires, yet they wil nothing profit them, vnlesse they shake off their sluggishnesse, and vse all diligence in their spirituall businesse. So Salomon saith, that the soule of the sluggard desireth, and hath nothing; but the soule of the diligent shall be made fat. Yea, such desires, if wee rest in them, doe hurt, rather then helpe vs, according to that of Salomon; The desire of the slothful killeth him, for his hands refuse to labour. Secondly, let vs consider, that by this sloth we doe not only not get any spiritual riches, but also that wee consume that we already seeme to haue. For as our Sauiour speaketh in another case, He that gathereth not, scattereth abroad; in which respect, Salomon maketh that man which is slothfull in his worke, a brother to him that is a great waster. Thirdly, let vs consider, that the Lord hath appointed this world to be a place of paines & labour, and reserueth his

1 Sam. 25.

Eph. 4. 26.

§. Sect. 7.
That sloth and lazinesse is a great impediment to a godly life.

Pro. 32. 13.

Pro. 13. 4.

Pro. 21. 25.

Mat. 13. 30.

Pro. 18. 9.

his Sabbath of rest for the world to come, after wee haue finished our worke. Heere we must worke in his Vineyard, and the night of death must come, before wee shall bee called to receiue our wages. Heere wee must keepe our markes, and there inioy the riches which wee haue gotten by our spirituall trading. Heere wee must fight the Lords battels, being couered with sweat and blood, and there wee shall obtaine the Crowne of victory. Finally, heere wee must trauaile like poore Pilgrims, and then take our ease when we haue finished our iourney, and are come safe to our heauenly home. Fourthly, let vs call to minde the labours of the Saints which haue gone in this way before vs, and especially of our Saviour Christ himselfe, who trauailed for our sakes, not onely vnto wearinesse and sweat, but euen vnto blood, and not foolishly imagine that wee may take our ease, and yet come timely and safely to the end of our hopes; seeing our Saviour hath told vs, that the Kingdome of heauen suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force, and that wee must strive to enter into the straight gate with all earnestnesse and constancie, because many shall seeke to enter, and shall not bee able. Lastly, let vs consider the punishments denounced against those who idly sit still, and refuse to travell in the wayes of godlinesse. For it casteth them into a deepe sleepe, whereby all the operations of Gods graces are hindred, yea, it emptieth the sluggard of them all, like him, who wanting meate, is famished with hunger: According to that of Salomon; Sloathfulnesse casteth into a deepe sleepe, and the idle soule shall suffer hunger. And as it depriueth him of all grace in this life, so also of glory and happinesse in the life to come; for hee onely must haue the wages, who hath laboured in Christs Vineyard. And contrariwise, plungeth him into euerlasting death and destruction. For the sloathfull and vnprofitable seruant must bee cast into ouer darkenesse, where shall bee weeping and gnashing of teeth. And therefore, if nothing else will mooue vs, yet at least, let vs take some paines in Gods seruice, which being small and momentany, shall bee euerlastingly rewarded, that wee may escape the endlesse paines of hell. For if wee cannot for a little while indure the kindly heate of the Sunne, how shall wee bee able to suffer the skorching and tormenting flames of hell fire? If wee are impatient of a little sweate and labour in the duties of Christianity, and of our callings, let vs thinke with our selues how much more intolerable the endlesse torments of the damned will bee vnto vs.

Mat. 11. 21.

Luk. 13. 24.

Pro. 19. 15.

Mat. 25. 26, 30.

§. Sect. 8.
Of wearinesse
in well-doing,
and how it hin-dreth vs in all Christian duties. And first, that which proceedeth from an ill disposition of the body.

The last impediment which hindreth vs in the duties of a godly life, is wearinesse in well-doing, which proceedeth from a twofold cause. The first outward, which is the ill disposition of the body to the performance of Christian duties; proceeding either from externall causes, as hunger, thirst, heate, cold, excessiue labour in worldly employments, and such like, or from inward infirmities and diseases, which make the body faint and feeble, weake, and vnable to take any paines in the duties of a godly life. For seeing the soule vseth the body as its organ and instrument, for the performing of all outward actions, and seeing there is such sympathie and familiarity betweene them, that they mourne and reioyce together; hereof it must needs follow, that when the body is indisposed to the duties of

of Gods seruice, the soule is thereby vsfitted for them; when the body is feeble and faint, the faculties of the soule cannot be strong and vigorous in their actions and operations. When the body is weary and full of paine, it must needs affect the mind, and much distract it in all good duties. And finally, when the tooles and instrument is blunt and dull, vsfit and vnward, the most cunning Artificer must needs be hindred, and much faile in his curious workmanship. For the remoouing of which impediment, wee must vse our best indeuour, that wee may haue a sound minde in a sound body, and to vse all good meanes of diet and Physicke for the preseruing or recouering of our health, and to auoid intemperance, infobriety, and excessiue labour about worldly employments. Yea, wee must auoyd immoderation and excessse, euen in the exercises of mortification, as fasting, watching, and the rest; For as luxuriousnesse, delicacie, and sloth, doe weaken the body for want of exercise, and intemperance and infobriety doe make it feeble and vsfit for any employment: so likewise the contrary extremes, and ouer-rough and rigorous handling of it, doe exhaust and consume the spirits, and make it so weake and faint, that it is ready to sinke vnder euery burthen. And therefore wee must carefully obserue the meane, and auoyd both extremes, especially that vnto which our corrupt nature inclineth and carryeth vs, whether it bee to sensuality, which pampereth the body with excessse, or will-worship and superstition, in not sparing of it; which is not much lesse dangerous then the other, although it bee nothing so common and ordinary. For as if we would make speedy iourneys, our Horse must neither be pampered nor starued, seeing by the one he is made either resty or out of breath, and by the other so enfeebled, that hee will not be able to beare vs: so is it with our bodies which carry our soules, and therefore they must be vsed with like prudence and prouidence.

The second cause is internall, which is the ill disposition of the minde and will, being auerse vnto all good duties and vertuous actions, and prone vnto all euill; delighting in worldly vanities, and pleasures of sinne, and dis-affecting and lothing spirituall exercises, as being wearisome and tedious, difficult and troublesome to our corrupted nature. The which is a notable impediment to our well proceeding in the wayes of godlinesse; for either this vnwillingnesse causeth such wearinesse, that it will make vs either not to enter into the Christian course, or soone desist and returne againe into our former wayes of wickednes & sensual delights, or else it will make vs vsfettled and vnconstant in all good duties, doing them onely by fits and startes, when the good mood of deuotion commeth vpon vs, and neglecting them, when other things which better please vs come in the way; or finally, it quencheth our zeale and seruour of loue vnto the duties of Gods seruice, so that wee performe them weakely and wearily, coldly and formally, with much dulnesse and spirituall deadnesse. The which impediments, if wee would auoyd, wee must labour and strue against this wearinesse and faintnesse in well-doing, and indeuour all wee may, to take away both these causes and effects of it. And first wee must rowze vp our spirits, and stirre up Gods graces in vs, as the Apostle exhorteth, that wee may not be weary of well-doing, by considering

Col. 3. 23.

§. Sect. 9.
Of wearinesse
in well-doing,
arising from the auersenesse of our wils vnto
good duties.

2. Tim. 1. 6.

2. Thes. 3. 13.

Matth. 24. 13.

Apoc. 2. 10.

Luk. 9. 62.

considering the waight and worth, the profit and necessity of Christian and religious duties, in comparison whereof, all worldly things ought to be neglected as vaine and of no value. Let vs remember, that all the promises of grace, life and saluation shall be assured vnto vs, if we faint not; whereas we shall haue no part or interest in them, though we haue made neuer so good beginnings or proceedings, if we doe not still goe forward and hold out vnto the end. For if we indure to the end, we shall be saued: if we fight vnto the death, we shall receive the Crowne of Life. But if wee lay our hand vpon the Plough, and looke backe, we shall not be thought worthy of the Kingdome of heauen. Finally, let vs dayly renew the meanes of Spirituall life and strength, that so they also may be renewed and repayred, as hearing, reading, meditation, prayer, watchfulness, holy conferences and the rest, without which the soule will grow faint and languish, like the body which is depriued of corporall food; but especially when we feele our faintnesse, and languishing wearinesse, let vs vnite all the powers of our soules in prayer vnto Almighty God, desiring him by the inward operation of his holy Spirit, to quicken our deadnesse, and strengthen our weakenesse, that we may not waxe wearie of well doing, but continue constant vnto the end. Now concerning the effects of this slothfull wearinesse, which are also great impediments to a godly life, as hindring vs from entring into it, or proceeding in it; inconstancie and vnsettlednesse in performing Christian duties, and want of seruencie in our loue and zeale in doing of them; I shall not neede to adde any thing here for the remoouing of them, seeing I haue spoken before of perseuerance, and constancie in the dayly performance of all Christian duties, and of that seruour of loue and zeale, which ought to be vsed in doing of them. And therefore thus much shall suffice to haue spoken of those impediments which arise from the flesh and corruption of our nature, and also of the helpes and meanes whereby wee may remoue them.

CAP. XIII.

Obiections against a godly life made by the flesh, answered, and first, such as pretend impossibility and difficulty.

6. Sect. 1.

That a godly life is possible
vnto vs.

Iob 34. 4.

Vt the flesh doth not onely hinder vs in the duties of a godly life, by those reall impediments, which it casteth in our way, of which I haue before spoken; but also by suggesting into our mindes, many strong obiections, which tend to this maine end, that wee may be discouraged from entring into the course of Christianity. And first, the flesh is ready to object, that in this state of frailty and corruption, it is vtterly impossible to lead a godly life, in that manner as it hath beene before described. For who can bring that which is cleane, out of that which is vncleane? Who can leade such a life as is pleasing and acceptable vnto vnto God, whose pure eyes can indure nothing which is impure and imperfect, seeing the Prophet telleth vs, that our best righteousnesse is as a polluted cloth; and the Apostle, who so farre exceeded vs that now liue in piety and righteousnesse, notwithstanding complayneth, that he could not doe the good he would, but contrariwise did the euill he would not. And therefore it is in vaine to wearie our selues about impossibilities, and so to lose both the pleasures of this life, and that which is to come. And thus the flesh perswadeth vs to play the bankrupts, and to resolute, that because we cannot pay all our whole debt, that therefore wee will pay nothing at all. To which I answered with our Sauour Christ, that those things which are impossible to vs, are both possible and easie vnto God, who hath promised to assist vs, if we desire and indeuour to serue and please him. Secondly, I answered, that though nothing will please God, but that which is pure and perfect, & all our best actions are full of corruption & imperfection; yet this need not to discourage vs from doing the best we can, seeing Christ, who hath perfectly fulfilled the Law for vs, couereth our imperfections, with his most perfect righteousnes, & washeth away our corruptions, in his most precious blood, so that we may doe the best we can, & then what is wanting on our part, shalbe supplied on his. For what the Law could not doe, in that it was weake through the flesh, God sending his owne Son, in the likenes of sinfull flesh, and for sin, condemned sinne in the flesh, that the righteousnes of the Law might be fulfilled in vs, who walke not after the flesh, but after the Spirit; as the Apostle speaketh. Thirdly, though that perfect obedience which the Law requireth, be impossible vnto vs in respect of our frailty & corruption, yet that Euangelical obedience, required in the couenant of grace, (namely, that beleeuing in Christ, we desire, resolute & indeuor to please God in all things) is not so. Though we haue no ability to performe seruice vnto God, in that exact perfection which the Law requireth; yet if we doe that which we are able, in sincerity & truth, with vpriht hearts & good consciences, we shal through Christ be accepted of God. For he reiecteth not the least indeuours of his faithfull seruants, who desire to feare his name. He will not breake the bruised reed, nor quench the smoking flax, till he bring forth iudgement vnto victory. He spareth vs as a father spareth his sonne that serueth him, and if we haue a willing mind, we shalbe accepted according to that we haue, and not according to that we haue not. He pittieeth our frailties and infirmities, like as a father pittieeth his children that feare him, & out of this pittie pardoneth them; For he knoweth our frame, & remembereth that we are but dust. And though he hath most pure eyes, which can indure no pollution, yet he beholdeth not iniquity in Iacob, neither doth he see peruersnes in Israel. Nor is he any acceptor of persons, but in euery nation he that feareth him, & worketh righteousnes (not according to the rigor of the law, from which Christ hath freed vs, but in the truth and vprihtnes of his heart) is accepted of him. And thus was Dauid accepted as a man according to Gods own heart, because he applied himselfe to obserue his precepts alwaies & to the end, notwithstanding his grieuous sins and fearefull fals. Thus Zacharias & Elizabeth were reputed righteous & perfect, because in the sincerity & vprihtnes of their hearts, they did labour and strue

Esay 64. 6.

Rom. 7. 15.

Rom. 8. 3.

Nebem. 1. 11.

Matth. 12. 20.

Mal. 3. 17.

2. Cor. 8. 13.

Psal. 103. 13, 14.

Num. 33. 21.

Act. 10. 35.

Psal. 119. 112.

1. King. 15.
11, 14.
2. Chro. 24. 2.
compared with Chap.
15. 7. and 16.
2, 7, 10, 12.

Math. 25. 29.

§. Sect. 2.
To whom a godly life is difficult, and the causes of
it.

Pro. 26. 13.

after righteoufnesse and perfection. And thus Asa is said to haue done that which was right in the sight of the Lord, notwithstanding his manifold slips and great infirmities; because his heart was perfect or vp-right before him. So that the impossibility of leading a godly life need not to discourage vs, seeing the Lord is all-sufficient to make it possible vnto vs, for he that could create vs pure and holy, according to his owne Image, is as able to restore vs to this purity and perfection. Vnto which, though it be not his pleasure, that wee should attaine in this life, because he would traine vs vp in humility, and moue vs to ascribe vnto him the whole glory of our saluation; yet will he enable vs vnto such a measure and degree as himselfe will accept of, as it were in full perfection; and dayly adde vnto his owne gifts of grace, vntill we come to a full age in Christ; for vnto every one that hath, shall be giuen, vntill he haue abundance, as our Sauour speaketh.

Secondly, the flesh is ready to obiekt, that though the duties of a godly life are not absolutely impossible, yet at least they are so full of difficulty, and vnpleasant, so tedious and troublesome to our feeble and fraile natures, and so vncomfortable and painefull, that there is no likelihood, that euer wee shall hold out in the doing of them; and therefore it is as good for vs to neglect them altogether, as to take vpon vs such an insupportable burthen, as wee shall be forced to cast off, before we come halfe way to our iourneyes end. The which objection our corrupt flesh doth much strengthen against vs, to hinder our Christian resolution, and both our ingresse and progresse in the wayes of godlinesse, by setting before vs the manifold examples of those, that haue liued in formertimes, and in our owne dayes, who hauing made some good beginnings, haue false backe and relapsed into their former courses; and hauing begunne well with a purpose to proceede, haue through wearinesse desisted, before they could attaine to their iourneyes end. And thus, like the slug-gard, the flesh perswadeth vs to sit still in the house, because there is a Lyon in the streetes. And like the murmuring spies, though it confesseth that the spirituall and heavenly Canaan be worth the desiring, as abounding with all Gods blessings, yet it bringeth vp an euill report of it, in respect of the manifold difficulties whereby we must passe vnto it, and the sonnes of Anachim, the mighty enemies of our saluation, which must be ouercome by vs, who are so farre inferiour vnto them in strength, before wee can attaine vnto that place of rest and ioy. The which tentation is exceeding dangerous, and a notable impediment to hinder many from once entering into the course of Christianity, because they imagine it to be so irksome and painefull, that they shall quickly be tyred, and neuer be able to hold out vnto the end. For the answering whereof, that it may be no impediment vnto vs in the wayes of godlinesse, wee are first to know and acknowledge, that it is true in part; namely, that the course of Christianity is full of difficulties, hard and tedious, vnpleasant, and euen intolerable and impossible in some respects. For the Deuill, which is that strong man, who holdeth all all that he possesseth in peace, will not easily leaue his hold, nor be cast out without many combates and conflicts. And howsoeuer he seemeth deafe and dumbe, whilest he is in quiet possession, and lulleth vs asleepe in the cradle of carnall delights, yet when our Saviour Christ by the Ministry of the Word and Gospell, seeketh to dispossesse and cast him out, then he both heareth and cryeth out, rageth and resteth vs, with the violence of his tentations, making vs to seeme both to our selues and others, as if wee were quite depriued of all spirituall life. And though this infernall Pharaoh suffereth vs, whilest wee doe him seruice, to sit quietly by the fleshpots of worldly and sensuall delights, and euen to glut our selues, and take our fill of the pleasures of sinne, without any great disturbance; yet no sooner doe wee inwardly resolute, and outwardly make mention of departing out of his bondage, that we may serue the Lord, but presently he rageth against vs, and pursueth vs with hellish furie, that he may hinder vs in our Spirituall iourney towards the heavenly Canaan, and againe recouer vs into his captiuitie. Again, the practice of Christianity becommeth vnto vs tedious and difficult by reason of our sloth, which maketh vs vnwilling to take any paines in the duties of a godly life; and euery thing seemeth tedious and wearisome to a minde that is indisposed and auerse vnto it. And also because of our carnall sensuality, which maketh vs thinke that we are not at liberty, if we may not runne with full careere into all manner of licentiousnesse. And like vnto those Heathen Rulers, to fret and fume, when we are restrained from going on in our wicked courses by Gods Law; saying, Let vs breake his bonds asunder, and cast away his cordes from vs. And hereof it is, that the godly life is in the Scriptures compared to a wearisome pilgrimage, which cannot be finished without much paines and trauaile; to a dangerous Warfare, in which wee must haue many a sore and dangerous conflict, before wee get the victorie; to a narrow and afflicted way and strait gate, thorow which wee cannot passe without much struing. So likewise to the mortification and cutting off our bodily members, which cannot be without much griefe; To a circumcision, yea, the circumcision of the heart: and how can the heart strings be cut, without much sense of paine? And finally, to the birth of a childe, which cannot be without sore trauaile going before. Now if the infant which hath continued but nine moneths in the mothers wombe, cannot in the ordinary course of nature bee borne without much paine and many sharp throwes; then how much lesse can we be spirituallie borne againe without great griefe and labour, who haue lyeen for the space of many yeeres in our finnes, and strengthened our naturall corruptions with long and continuall custome; seeing this is a worke contrary vnto and aboue nature?

Again, the duties of a godly life are somewhat tedious and troublesome, euen vnto the regenerate, who haue made some entrance into them, because this worke of regeneration is not perfected at once, but only inchoate and begun. And therefore, as they are delighted with

Mat. 9. 37, 38.

1. 2. 3.

1. 2. 3.

Psal. 2. 1, 3.

Math. 7. 12, 13.

§. Sect. 3.

The causes
why the duties of a godly life
seeme difficult and tedious euen to the regenerate.
Rom. 7. 5.

Rom. 7. 23, 24.

Gal. 5. 17.

Heb. 12. 1.

the Law of God in the inner man, so they finde another law in their members, warring against the Law of their mindes, and leading them captive to the law of sinne. The which spirituall bondage affecteth them with such griefe and sorrow, that it forceth them to cry out with the Apostle, O wretched man that I am, who shall deliuer me from the body of this death? We are not wholly and perfectly sanctified, but remayne partly flesh, and partly spirit, like a city which is at ciuill warres within it selfe. And these doe continually lust the one against the other; So that no sooner doe we set our selues to performe any Christian duties of a godly life, in the spirituall part; but presently the flesh opposeth and interrupteth vs in it. No sooner doe wee resolue to goe forward in the waies of godlinesse, but forthwith the corruption of our nature, like an heauy burthen, incompasseth vs, and (as it were) clingerh about our neckes, so as wee cannot proceede without much labour and wearinesse. All which and many other the like impediments, as they doe much disturbe and distra& all in the duties of a godly life, so especially yong beginners at their first entrance into it. For then the flesh is strongest to oppose, and the Spirit weakest to make resistance. Then the world and worldly wicked men, doe vse most indenuour to regaine vs into their wonted society in the works of darkenesse, when wee haue newly left their company; and the pleasures of sinne, and the baytes of worldly profits, alluring vs to continue in our wonted courses, are freshest in our memories, when as wee haue lately renounced and forsaken them, so as they are still scarce out of our sight. Then the deuill bendeth all his might and malice, his stratagems and engins of battry against vs (as Sennacherib against Hezekiah) when wee doe disclaime his seruice, and refuse to pay him tribute. Then wee meete with greatest difficulties, and haue least strength to ouercome them. Then wee goe in the waies of Christianity, like little children, when they first learne to goe alone, who at eue-ry step are ready to stagger and fall, through weakenesse and want of practice; whereas when wee haue accustomed our selues to these courses, for some moneths or yeres, wee goe both more steadily and with much greater safety and delight. Finally, then wee are like vn-to sluggards, who leaue their down-beds with much irkesomnes & discontent, but when they haue once risen and shaken off their sloth, they are sorry that they haue slept so long, and goe cheerefully about their businesse. Neyther did euer man repent of his repentance, though at the first entrance it seemed vnpleasant & difficult, but rather feeleth such ioy and comfort in it, that he much grieueth in his soule, that he was no sooner griued for his sins. Now this difficulty is much increased vnto yong beginners by diuers meanes. First, because they are apt to trust too much vnto their owne strength, which most faileth those that most rest vpon it, and doe not walke in the life and strength of faith, relying themselues wholly vpon Gods power and promises. For so naturally are we, through pride and selfe-loue, addicted to our selues, that we will not casily seeke for helpe abroad, so long as any hope remaineth that we shal finde it at home. Secondly, because in our first

first beginnings we are more fickle, vnconstant, and vnsettled in our Christian courses. For how can he make any good proceedings in his way, who sometimes goeth forward, and sometimes backward? how can he dispatch his businesse, who vndoeth one day that which he did in another? or how should a man preferue his health and strength, who one day carefully vseth good dyet or physicke, and the next day neglecteth both, and impayreth and hindreth them by the quite contrary courses? Finally, because we looke more vnto our selues then vnto God, and so seeing the difficultie of the worke, and comparing it with our owne weakenesse, wee beginne to despaire of euer atchieuing it; but in the meane time seldome or neuer looke vnto God, who is all-sufficient to strengthen vs, and to make vs perfect vnto euery good worke. We apprehend our weakenesse to goe alone, and are thereby discouraged, because we consider not that wee are led and supported by the hand of our heauenly Father. We see our wounds and weaknesses, but not the salues and remedies. We behold with Elias seruant, who are against vs, but through our spirituall blindness cannot discern the more numerous and potent aydes that are on our side. And finally, we are ready with the Apostle to take notice of the Law of our members, warring against the law of our mindes, and leading vs captiue to the law of sinne; but not with him to acknowledge with thankfulness our deliuerance by Iesus Christ: And to be discouraged with the sight and sense of our infirmities; but not to consider, that Gods grace is sufficient for vs.

In all which respects it cannot be denyed, but that there is some difficulty in leading of a godly life, and much paines and labour required for the right performance of the duties which belong vnto it. Notwithstanding this must bee no impediment to hinder vs from entering into, and proceeding in the course of Christianity. Yea rather, because this aboue all things is most excellent, profitable and necessary, as concerning vs, no lesse then the euerlasting saluation or condemnation both of our bodies and soules, the difficulties which we finde in this way, should bee so farre from discouraging and making vs sit still, or turne backe againe to inioy our sinfull pleasures; that they should rather inflame our desires, wher and confirme our resolutions, and make vs much more painefull and diligent in our indeuours, that wee may attaine vnto it, seeing though the difficulty were much greater, yet the excellency, profit, and necessity of leading such a life doe farre exceede it. And this vse our Saujour Christ maketh of it; For from the consideration of the small number which shall be saued, and the difficultie of attayning vnto heauenly happinesse, hee enforceth this exhortation; Striue to enter in at the straight gate, for many, I say vnto you, will seeke to enter in, and shall not bee able. Because straight is the gate, and narrow is the way which leadeth vnto life, and few there bee that finde it. So he telleth vs else-where, that the Kingdome of God suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force. And the Apostle Peter hauing said, that the righteous shall scarcely be saued, that is, not without much difficulty and laborious diligence, taketh thereupon occasion to perswade all, both to patient

Rom. 7. 24, 25.

2. Cor. 12. 9.

6. Sect. 4.
That the difficulty of a godly life must not discourage vs from it.

Luke 13. 24.
Matth. 7. 13, 14.

Matth. 11. 12.

1. Pet. 4. 12, 13.

In omni est vultus

tient suffering what God imposeth, and diligent doing that which hee inioyneth. And surely if we had hereby no other benefit, but the escaping of the euerlasting torments of hell fire, which are easelesse and endlesse, it were me thinks a motiue strong enough to make vs arme our resolution against all difficulties, and to spare for no labour, that we may secure our selues from this dreadfull condemnation. He that is in danger of drowning, doth not dispute of the great paines which he must take before hee can come to land, but thinking that his strength can bee no wayes better spent, then in sauing his life, he vseth all diligence, and laboureth euen to extreme wearinesse, to secure his safety, yea euen then when hee is doubtfull of the successe. And shall we thinke all labour little, to preserue a momentary and miserable life, from a naturall death: and can wee thinke any too much for the escaping of those euerlasting torments of hell fire? O that our fore-wit were as good as our after-wit! and that we could be as wise by instruction and discourse of reason, as wee are by feeling and experience! O that we could consider with our selues, when we stumble at small difficulties, and are discouraged from performing the duties of a godly life with a little labour; how much lesse we shall be able to indure those intolerable and endlesse torments, which are prepared for those who neglect Gods seruice, and are slaues to Satan, and their owne sinfull flesh, to obey it in the lusts thereof! If the easie paines of a godly life bee not to be indured of these nice and worldly wantons, which are also of such short continuance, how intolerable will those torments bee vnto them which shall neuer haue end? If the damned spirits might haue liberty to resume their bodies, and liue vpon the earth againe for a further triall, that amending their liues, they might bee saued, or returning vnto their former sinfull courses, they might be cast backe againe into hell fire: O how would they melt, and be euen resolu'd into teares of hearty repentance for those finnes which haue made them obnoxious to such fearfull condemnation! How would they labour and spend their strength in the exercises of mortification, and make their throats hoarse with prayers and strong cries, that they might obtaine mercy and forgiuenesse? How diligent would they be in hearing, reading, and meditating in the Word, that they might attaine vnto a liuely faith, and thereby apply vnto themselves Christ Iesus and his righteousness, for their iustification and saluation? How fruitfull would they be in good workes; and how liberall and bountifull in almes-deeds, and in relieuing the poore members of Iesus Christ? And yet most certaine it is, that their case shall be ours, if wee run on in the same courses which they haue gone before vs, seeing God is no respecter of persons, but is alike iust and true to all. Our punishments shall be as great, if we neglect Gods seruice, and liue in our finnes; our too late repentance as desperate and comfortlesse, if wee abuse Gods patience and long-suffering, and let passe the acceptable time and day of saluation.

§. Sect. 5.
That the recompence of reward must make vs to overcome all difficulties.

And yet there is a farre stronger motiue to make vs overcome all difficulties, and to vse all painefull diligence in the duties of a godly life, namely, the riches of reward promised to all those who spend their time and strength in Gods seruice, euen the euerlasting ioyes of his Kingdome, vn-

to which, both all the sufferings and doings of this life are not to worthy to be compared. In which regard, Gods precepts are more to bee desired then gold, yea then much fine gold, and to be esteemed sweeter then the honey, and the honey combe; because by them we are warned, and in keeping of them there is great reward. For who would not serue such a Master, as is so bountifull in requiting his paines? Who would not vndertake any labour (seeing the greatest is light, and the longest momentary) to bee assured of that super-exceeding and eternall waight of glory? Who would not patiently indure a sorrowfull seed-time, for so ioyfull an haruest? or refuse to worke in Gods Vineyard with all painfull diligence, and comfortable cheerfulness, who is assured of such liberall wages when hee hath ended his worke? And therefore though there were neuer so much difficulty in the duties of a godly life, and neuer so much paines required vnto the seruice of God, this should not discourage vs from entring into the course of Christianity, seeing our wages and reward will infinitely exceed our worke and labour. Especially considering that these holy and religious duties are only vnpleasant and tedious to the flesh and corrupted nature, vnto which (as the Apostle speaketh) wee are no debtors that wee should liue according to the lusts thereof; and so by pleasing of it, to displease God, and purchase vnto our selues eternall death and hellish condemnation.

Neither in truth are the duties of a godly life vnpleasant and burthensome, tedious and troublesome vnto the spirituall and regenerate part, but sweet and delightfull, easie and full of comfort. For Gods Commandments are not gricuous, as the Apostle Iohn speaketh; and our Sauour telleth vs, that his yoke is easie, and his burthen light; and that they who will take them vpon them, shall finde rest to their soules. Vpon which words Chrysostome speaketh excellently to our present purpose. If (saith hee) hearing of a yoke and a burthen, thou art afraid and shrinkest backe, thou must attribute this feare, not to the nature of the things themselves, but to thine owne sloth; for if thou art prepared, and not sluggishly effeminate, all shall seeme vnto thee easie and light. And therefore Christ, that he might teach vs with what care we ought to watch, hath neither concealed the burthen, nor the sweetness; but ioyning both together, he hath said; that it is a yoke, and also that it is sweet. Hee calleth it a burthen; but adde, that it is light; that thou shouldest not shunne it, as being too laborious, nor contemne it, as being too easie. But if after all this, vertue seemeth vnto thee hard and difficult, consider how much more vice and sinne, which Christ intimateth, in that before hee said any thing of his yoke, he cryeth out, Come vnto me all, yee that labour and are heauie laden. Thereby showing, how great labour, and what an intolerable burthen sinne imposeth: for he saith, not onely all ye that labour, but also, who are heauie laden. The which the Psalmist expresseth more plainly, and describeth the nature of sinne, saying, Mine iniquities are gone ouer mine head, as an heauie burthen they are too heauie for me. And Zachary likewise, where he calleth it a talent of leade. For experience will teach vs, that the soule is oppressed with no heauier burthen, then the conscience of an ill spent life, and the remembrance of our sinnes; euen as contrariwise nothing more

Rom. 8. 18.

Psal. 19. 10, 11.

§. Sect. 6.

That a godly life, in it owne nature is not difficult and tedious, but sweet and delightfull.

1. Job. 5. 3.

Mat. 11. 29, 30.

Chrysost. in Mat.

11. Homil. 39.

Psal. 38. 4.

Zach. 5. 7.

Psal. 119. 72, 127
Psal. 119. 10.
Pro. 8. 11, 18, 19

Psal. 119. 9.
Psal. 119. 103.
111.
Prov. 14.
Prou. 2. 10.
and 3. 17.
Iob. 4. 34.

Esa. 40. 4.

Mal. 3. 17.
2. Cor. 8. 12.

Phil. 4. 13.

exalteth and cheereth the mind; then the possession of iustice and vertue. Yea, that Euangelicall obedience which Christ here calleth his yoke and burthen, is not onely light and easie, but also commodious and exceeding profitable. Which made Dauid, out of good experience, to professe, that the Law of Gods mouth was better vnto him, then thousands of gold and siluer: and that it was more to be desired then gold, yea then much fine gold. And Salomon likewise affirmeth, that wisedome (that is, the sauing knowledge and praetice of true godlinesse) is better then Rubies, and all things that may be desired, are not to be compared vnto it: that riches and honour are with it, yea, durable riches and righteousness; and that the fruit thereof is better then gold, yea then fine gold, and its reueneue then choyce siluer. Yea, the duties of a godly life are not onely easie and profitable, but also sweet and pleasant. In which respect Dauid saith, that Gods Commandements were sweeter to his mouth then the honey, and the honeycombe; that they were the reioicing of his heart, and that he reioiced in Gods testimonies, aboue all riches. So Salomon saith, that wisedome is pleasant vnto the soule, and that her wayes are wayes of pleasantnesse, and her paths are peace. And our Sauour Christ found so much pleasure and comfort in doing his Fathers will, that he neglected his food, euen when he was hungry, in comparison of it. Now if the way of Gods Commandements was esteemed of the Saints so easie, profitable and pleasant in the time of the Law; how much more haue wee cause so to iudge of it in the time of the Gospell? seeing God hath reuealed his will much more cleerly, and afforded vs farre greater helpe; and encouraged vs to serue him with much sweeter and more gracious promises, not now veiled with types and shadowes, but cleerly exprest to the vnderstanding of the most simple, and certainly assured vnto vs by the seales, the Sacraments, to take away from vs all doubting and wauering. By all which, and many other meanes, our Sauour Christ (as it was prophesied of him) maketh all crooked wayes straight, and all rough places plaine; that all difficulties being taken away and remoued, we may trauell in the wayes of godlinesse with much ease and comfort, ioy and delight. But aboue all other incouragements against all pretended difficulties, this is one of the greatest, in that the Lord, in the time of the Gospell, doth not exact of vs the rigorous and strict performances of seruants, who must not haue their wages, vnlesse they doe the will of their Lord, in that manner and measure as he requireth; but the duty and obedience of sonnes, passing by our infirmities, and accepting the will for the deed; the purpose and endeavour, for the act and performance. And that there may be no manner of discouragement, hath also promised to assist vs with his grace and holy Spirit, that we may be the better enabled to doe that which he requireth; so as we may say with the Apostle, I am able to doe all things through the power of Christ which strengtheneth me.

CAP.

CAP. XIII.

That a godly life is not tedious and troublesome to the regenerate man, but easie and familiar.

And thus it appeareth, that the godly life is easie and pleasant in it selfe and it owne nature. Now if wee can further prooue, that it is also vnto vs nothing hard or impossible, tedious or troublesome, but contrariwise easie and familiar, then the objection of difficulties being sufficiently answered and removed, need not to be any impediment to hinder vs from entering into the wayes of godlinesse. To which purpose we are first to know, that howsoever the leading of a godly life be as hard and difficult, as grievous and euen vnpossible for a naturall man, as for Lead to swimme, or for the earth to leaue its center, and to mount vp vnto the skies; yet vnto those who are regenerate, it is not so, seeing their corrupt nature is changed and sanctified, and they haue a new nature wrought in them, vnto which a godly life is easie and familiar, by reason of that similitude which is betweene them. And thus the Lord, when hee would haue his people to serue him in the duties of holinesse and righteousnesse, doth promise to worke this change in them: And the Lord thy God will circumsaze thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to loue the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and all thy soule, &c. For this commandment which I command thee, is not hid-den from thee, neither is it farre off, &c. But the Word is very nigh vnto thee, in thy mouth, and in thine heart, that thou maist doe it. And againe, I will giue them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within you, and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and I will giue them an heart of flesh, that they may walke in my statutes, and keepe my ordinances and doe them. So in the new covenant of grace the Lord promisseth, that he would write his Law, not in Tables of stone, but in the fleshie tables of their hearts, and put it into their inward parts; thereby inabling them to yeeld vnto it cheerfull obedience, seeing they haue an internall cause of this spirituall motion in themselves, euen an heart sanctified and replenished with the loue and feare of God, which maketh them to desire aboue all things to serue and please him. In respect of which change (so farre forth as they are changed and regenerate) it is no more tedious and wearisome vnto them to performe the duties of a godly life, then for the liuing fountaine to spring, or the river to flow, or for grosse vapours and slimie exhalations to mount aloft into the middle and highest region of the aire, when as they are rarified by the Sunne, and haue their nature changed from an earthly grosseesse, to an ayery or fiery subtilty and lightnesse; although the reliques of sinne and corruption of nature remaining still in the vnregenerate part, doe hang vpon vs, and pull vs backe, hindring vs in our spirituall motion (like an exhalation inclosed with the vapours of the middle region, so as it cannot mount vp vnto his owne proper place) whereof arise some tedious conflicts and sharpe incounters, which make the duties of a godly life to seeme vnto vs by fits more difficult and wearisome. Yea, if wee rest vpon our owne strength and abilities, the infirmities and corruptions which we shall dis-couer,

§. Sect. I.

That the regenerate haue a new nature, vnto which a godly life is easie and pleasant.

Deut. 30. 6, 11, 24.

Ezek. 11. 19, 20
and 36. 26, 27.

Ier. 31. 33.

2. Cor. 13. 9.

Psal. 119. 9, 10.

power, will be notable discouragements to hinder vs in the wayes of godlinesse, and like children which presume to goe alone, when they haue onely strength to walke as they are led in their fathers hand; we shall, by receiuing many falls and knocks, be so daunted and dismayed, that we shall be afraid to set a foot forward in the duties of Christianity, as farre exceeding our abilities of performance. Whereas, if seeing our frailties and infirmities, we take occasion thereby to deny our selues and our owne strength, and wholly distrust the weak reede of our owne free wills, as being vtterly insufficient to stay and vphold vs in our Christian course: And contrariwise, altogether rely vpon Gods power and promises, and acknowledge that his grace is sufficient, when we most see and bewaile our owne weakenesse and impotencie; wee shall heereby receiue no discouragement, but goe on cheerefully in all holy duties of his seruice. For when wee are most blinde and ignorant, this grace of God will bee all-sufficient to inlighten vs; when wee are most weak and feeble, it will confirme and strengthen vs; when wee most distaste the duties of Christianity, as being bitter and vnpleasant to our corrupted nature, it will, by changing and repping it, make them to become easie and pleasant, and (as wee see in the example of David) sweeter vnto our mowthes then the hony and the hony combe. When wee feeble the flesh rebelling and lusting against the Spirit, it will mortifie and subdue it. And when our tumultuous passions and inordinate affections doe rage in vs, struiuing to carry vs with headlong fury, from the seruice of God, to the seruice of Satan, the world, and our owne vnruely lusts, it will powerfully purge away their corruption, rectifie their disorder, and make them become seruiceable to the spirituall part; like wild beasts, which being in their owne nature fierce and cruell, and ready to deuoure or teare vs in pieces, when they are mastred and tamed, become helpfull and commodious for diuers vses. And thus the grace of God sanctifieth our loue, and weaning it from worldly vanities, fixeth it vpon spirituall and heavenly things. Thus it changeth our choller into zeale; our hatred of good things into the hatred of that which is euill; our worldly sorrow, into repentant grieve for sinne; our carnall ioy into spirituall reioycing in the assurance of Gods fauour; and our desperate boldnesse and audacioufnesse, into Christian courage, and magnanimous resolution, which will inable vs valiantly to oppose and ouercome all difficulties, which would discourage and hinder vs in the profession and practice of true godlinesse. So that the difficultie of Christian duties, compared with our owne frailties and infirmities, will not discourage vs, if wee doe not seuer the Law from the Gospel, looking onely vpon that obedience which it requireth, and not vnto that grace of God which the Gospell promiset, and which he purposely bestoweth vpon vs, that thereby we may be enabled to performe that which he commandeth. But rather the sight and sense of our owne weakenesse, will but make vs cling the faster to the firme pillar of our strength, and to flee vnto him in our earnest & effectuall prayers, desiring him to command what he will, if withall hee will giue vnto vs grace and strength to performe those duties which he commandeth.

Secondly,

Secondly, the duties of a godly life, which are so difficult, in respect of our frailty and corruption, become easie and familiar vnto vs, not onely in respect of this grace, whereby our natures are changed and renewed; but also in respect of those fresh supplies which wee daily haue from God himselfe, euen the Father, Sonne, and holy Spirit. For first, God the Father doeth not content himselfe to haue regenerated vs, and renewed our nature, and so to leaue vs, but hee daily repaireth our decayed strength; hee doeth not onely infuse some spirituall graces into vs, and so leaue vs to be upheld by their inherent strength, but hee still standeth by vs, and continually assisteth vs by his power and providence, out of his rich Treasury supplying what is wanting, strengthening vs when wee are ready to faint; rayling vs, when wee slip and fall; repairing his graces with new supplies, when they are spent and wasted, and (as it were) re-inforcing his spirituall Bands and Troupes, when as they are enfeebled and wearied in the conflict of tentations. Hee not onely commandeth the duties of his seruice, but also that wee may bee both encouraged and inabled to doe them; hee promisseth his assistance, and that hee will ioyne with vs, supplying by his all-sufficient power, what is wanting through our weakenesse. Thus hee willethe vs to ^a repent and turne vnto him, and ^b worketh also this conuersion and repentance, exhorteth vs to ^c circumcize our hearts, and withall, ^d promisseth that hee will circumcize them, inioyneth vs to ^e loue and feare him, and ^f sheadeth abroad his loue in our hearts by his holy Spirit, whereby hee inflameth them with loue towards him, and ^g putteth his feare into them, that wee dare not depart from him, by doing wilfully any thing that is displeasing in his sight. Though then wee bee naturally barren in the fruits of new obedience, yet this must not discourage vs, seeing the Lord hath promised, that hee will make vs trees of righteousness planted by his owne right hand, which shall bring forth fruit in due season, like trees planted by the riuers of waters, and that he will powre the sweet dewes of his grace upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground. If we be feeble and weake in our owne strength; yet the Lord himselfe will strengthen and incourage vs in euery good worke by his gracious presence; saying, Feare thou not, for I am with thee; be not dismayd, for I am thy God, I will strengthen thee, yea, I will helpe thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness. I the Lord thy God will hold thy right hand, saying vnto thee, Feare not, I will helpe thee. When wee finde and feele our faintnes and feeblenes in holy duties, let not this make vs to desist & giue them ouer, as impossible to bee atchieued; but let vs remember, that the euermourning God, the Lord, the Creatour of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary; who giueth power to the faint, and to them that haue no might, increaseth strength. So that though those who are in their youth and prime age, be weary, faint, and vterly fall, yet if being humbled in the sense of our owne weakenesse, we doe deny our selues, and waite upon the Lord, he will renew our strength, and we shall mount up with wings as Eagles; we shall run, and not be weary; and walke, and not be faint. This worke of regeneration is not our own, but the Lords, who is as able & willing to perfect a work, as to begin it;

Sect. 2.

That a godly life is made easie, through the power of God the Father assisting vs.

^a Joel. 2. 12.^b Jer. 31. 18.^c Jer. 4. 4.^d Deut. 30. 6.^e Deut. 10. 12.^f Rom. 5. 5.^g Jer. 32. 40.

Esa. 61. 3.

Psal. 1. 3.

Esa. 44. 3. 4.

Esa. 41. 10.

11. 14.

Esa. 40. 28. 29.

30. 31.

Phil. 1. 6.

Esa. 66. 9.

Luk. 1. 37.

Eph. 3. 30.

Iude vers. 24.

Luk. 15.

Rom. 8. 31.

2. Cor. 12. 9.
Eph. 6. 10, 13.

2. Tim. 4. 18.

Psal. 119. 32.

Cyr. in Hesaiam.
lib. 4. cap. 55.

it; for not to finish what he hath vndertaken and begun, were a signe either of inconstancie, or want of power, whereas he is immutable and omnipotent; according to that of the Prophet, Shall I bring to the birth, and not cause to bring forth, saith the Lord? Shall I cause to bring forth, and shut the wombe, saith thy God? Though then the duties of a godly life seeme vnto vs hard, difficult, and euen vnpossible; yet let not this discourage vs, seeing nothing is impossible with God; though they bee so farre aboue our abilities, that they also exceed our hopes, so as we scarce dare sue and seeke after that power of performace which God requireth, and we desire; let vs remember, that the Lord is able to doe exceeding abundantly, aboue all that we aske or thinke, according to the power that worketh in vs. And though we are ready to stumble at euery stone of offence, and to sinke in euery tentation, let vs goe on cheerfully for all this, seeing our God is able to keepe vs from falling, and to present vs faultlesse before the presence of his glory with exceeding ioy. Yea, he is ready to preuent vs with his grace, and not only to worke in vs (as in the Prodigall son) some good desires of returning vnto our heavenly Father, that we may serue him; but euen when he seeth vs as farre off, he will run to meet vs, giue vs kind intertainment, and feast vs so with a banquet of his graces, that we shall be inabled with cheerfulness to doe his worke. And therefore, though we find neuer so mighty opposition, as soone as we are entred into the course of Christianity, yet being assured of Gods presence and assistance, let not this dismay vs; For if God be with vs, who can be against vs? Pharaoh may wel frowne and storme against vs, but his ruine shal be our safety. The deuill may rage, and (as it were) rend vs with his tentations, but out he must come & leaue his hold, when God commandeth him. Though we apprehend the greatnesse and difficulty of the worke, and our owne weakenesse and insufficiency to goe thorow with it; let not this discourage vs from vndertaking it: for the Lord is with vs, his grace is all-sufficient, and his power is manifested and glorified in our infirmities. Though we are weak in our owne strength, and able to doe nothing, yet we are strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might, & (with the Apostle) able to do all things, through the power of Christ, which strengtheneth vs. Though we through our corruption, are prone to fall into any sinne; the Lord shall deliuer vs from euery euill worke, and preserue vs vnto his heavenly Kingdome: and finally, though we are so settred and gauled with our naturall corruptions, that wee can scarce creepe in the wayes of Gods Commandements, yet we may resolute to run in them with great agility and swiftnesse, when he shall be pleased to enlarge our hearts. They (saith an ancient Father) who resolute to passe from the loue of worldly pleasure, vnto an honest and vertuous life, finde it at the first a rough and vncouth way, which is hardly passable. For the sweetness of a long settled and confirmed custome, opposeth and hindreth them, and lothnesse to breake it, doth much intoxicate and disturbe their mindes. Neither can our carnall affections be easily shunned or subdued, nor is the way of vertue plaine and easie to euery one who offereth to run in it. But yet, God prospering and helping vs forward, and smoothing and leuelling these rough and vnpassable wayes, a man may easily escape, or overcome the assaults of his owne carnall affections, and courageously mount vnto the top of the hill of vertue.

Secondly,

Secondly, God the Sonne ioyning with vs in the duties of a godly life, will take away all difficulty, and enable vs to performe them with all cheerefulnes and delight. For being vnited vnto him by a true and a liuely faith, and ingrafted into this blessed & fruitfull Vine, as liuing branches, wee shall receiue such spirituall life and sap of grace from him, that we shall bring forth the ripe grapes and pleasant fruits of holinesse and righteousnes. Being knit vnto him in this blessed vnion, and becomming liuely members of his body, wee shall haue communion with him, and receiue such vertue and vigour, as shall be effectuell, not only for our iustification, but also for our sanctification. From his death we shall receiue vertue & strength for the mortifying of the flesh and the sinfull lusts thereof, so as it shall no longer reigne and rule in vs as in former times, and from his Resurrection such a quickning power, as will enable vs to rise out of the graue of sin, and to walke in the waies of holinesse and righteousnes, bringing forth the plentifull fruits of new and true obedience. Besides, our Sauour, who exhorteth vs to take his yoke vpon vs, offreth himselfe to ioine with vs, and to be our yoke-fellow; and as the taller and stronger Oxe, drawing together with one that is lesse and weaker, easeth him of the chiefe part of the burthen; so our Sauour so farre exceeding vs in greatnesse and strength, doth free vs from all irkesomnesse and cumberfome tediousnesse of that burthen which he layeth vpon vs, by bearing it vpon his owne blessed necke and shoulders. Neither doth he call vs vnto him to trouble and vex vs, but to ease and comfort vs. Not to oppresse vs with a burthen aboue our strength, but to lighten vs of the intolerable load of sin, by taking it vpon himselfe, in stead wherof, he layeth vpon vs his sweet and easie yoke of Euangelicall obedience; according to that his gracious call and inuitation, Come vnto me, all yee that labour and are heauie laden, and I will ease you; take my yoke vpon you and learne of me, for I am meeke and lowly in heart, and yee shall finde rest vnto your soules; for my yoke is easie, and my burthen light. So that though it be a yoke and burthen, yet it needs not dismay vs, seeing it is but light and easie, in comparision of that vnsupportable waight of sin, the wrath of God, and curse of the Law, from which he hath freed vs; and not such an one as will toyle and turmoile vs; but a burthen that bringeth ease, and a labour which causeth rest. It is not Christs purpose to surcharge and oppresse vs, by imposing a burthen aboue our strength; for he that hath taught vs that a good man is mercifull vnto his beast, will not be hard-hearted and cruell to his yoke-fellowes, yea to his owne body and bowels; but onely he desireth that we would beare him company, promising that if our weight be ouer-burthenfome, he will ease vs, if it be irksome and tedious, he will make it sweet & pleasant, and if there be any defects & wants in vs, he will supply them by vertue of that communion which we haue with him. If we be dead, and cannot mooue in the actions of piety and righteousnesse, by touching his dead body, he will giue vs spirituall life and motion: For as the Father rayseth vp the dead and quickneth them; euen so the Sonne quickneth whom he will. He is the Resurrection and the Life; he that beleeueth

§. Sect. 3.
That God the Sonne ioyning with vs, taketh away all difficulty.

Rom. 6. 4.

Math. 11. 28, 29, 30.

Pro. 12. 10.

Rom. 6. 4.

Job. 5. 21, 25.

Iob. 11. 25.

Eph. 5. 14.

Eph. 3. 16.

Vers. 20.

2. Cor. 4. 8, 9.

§. Sect. 4.

That the duties of a godly life are made easie by the assistance of the holy Spirit.

Rom. 8. 11.

Deut. 30. 6.

Mic. 2. 7.

Luk. 16. 14.

Rom. 8. 26.

Job. 4. 14.

in him, though he were dead, yet shall he live. So if being rayfed, we want spirituall illumination, that we may walke in those wayes which God hath prescribed, our Sauour will supply it, according to that of the Apostle; Awake, thou that sleepest, and stand vp from the dead, and Christ shall giue thee light. If we be weake & feeble, he will strengthen vs with might by his Spirit in the inner man. If we feele the exercises of a godly life so difficult & vnpleasant to our corrupt nature, that we haue little hope of proceeding in them, that which is defectiue through naturall corruption, he will supply by grace aboue all that we can expect; for he is able to doe exceeding abundantly aboue al that we aske or thinke, according to the power that worketh in vs. If we be faint, he will support vs; if weary, he will refresh vs; if we fall, he will lift vs vp. If we be discomforted and discouraged with afflictions & tribulations which we meet with in the way, he will strengthen vs with faith & patience, that we may be able to beare them; so as we may say with the Apostle; We are troubled on euery side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despaire; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast downe, but not destroyed.

Finally, the holy Spirit so assisteth vs with his grace, that the duties of a godly life, which are to the flesh difficult and vnpleasant, become sweet and easie. For when we feele our selues most dull & dead, and vterly vnable to moue in the wayes of godlinesse; this Spirit of life and power will quicken and reuiue vs; according to that of the Apostle; If the Spirit of him that rayfed vp Iesus from the dead dwell in you; he that rayfed vp Christ from the dead, shall also quicken your mortall bodies, by his Spirit that dwelleth in you. If our flesh rebell and labour to hinder vs in all good duties, the Spirit of God will mortifie and subdue it. If carnall corruption be so strong in vs, that it withdraweth our hearts and affections from God and his seruice; This Spirit of God as a sharpe razour will circumsise our hearts, and purging vs from our naturall corruption, will inflame them with Gods loue, and with seruent desires to please him in all things. If we be so straightned in our zeale and deuotion, that we can neither read, heare, nor pray, yet our comfort is, that the Spirit of God is not straightned, but can like fire thaw our frozen hearts, open our eares and hearts, that we shalbe able with Lydia to attend vnto those things which concerne our saluation, and helping our infirmities, will make intercession for vs with groanings which cannot be uttered. If we be destitute of all sauing graces in our owne sense and feeling, and doe thirst after them like the drie lands, Gods Spirit will quench our thirst, and be in vs as a fountaine of liuing water springing up into euerlasting life. Finally, if wee be stiffe and vnactiue vnto euery good worke, so as we cannot performe any dutie of Gods seruice, or if we doe, yet with much difficulty, and with murmuring and complaining of the flesh; this oyle and holy vnction of the Spirit will supple and soften our hearts and stiffe ioynts, making vs to goe with ease and agility in the wayes of godlinesse, like the wheelles of a cart, which being drie, goe hardly and with a creaking noyse, but when they are oyled, runne with much ease and swiftnesse. And therefore when wee finde our selues indisposed to Gods seruice, prayer or any other other duty and see some difficulty in them to our sinfull flesh, let vs not hereby be discouraged, but feeling our owne weakenesse, let vs craue the helpe and assistance of this holy Spirit, that we may be strengthened thereby in the inner man, with all might, according to his glorious power, and so walke worthy of the Lord vnto all pleasing, being fruitfull in euery good worke. Let vs goe boldly vnto the Throne of grace, craving the Spirit to support vs, seeing we haue Gods promise that he will giue it to those that aske him. Let vs begge the Spirit of Grace and supplication, seeing the Lord hath promised to bestow it vpon all the faithful, and finding our selues so drie and emptie of all goodnesse, that we thirst after Gods grace which enricheth vs with it, let vs by faith goe vnto Christ, inuiting vs to come vnto him, and to drinke plentifully of these waters of the Spirit, that we may be nourished thereby vnto euerlasting life.

And as the Spirit it selfe, so the gifts and graces which it bringeth with it, and worketh in vs, are notable helpes enabling vs to overcome all difficulties which we find in the way. As first, a true & liuely Faith, which not onely ouercommeth the world and all the enemies of our saluation, and vniting vs vnto Christ, doth cause vs to bring forth fruits in him, but also perswadeth & assureth vs, that notwithstanding all lets and difficulties, we shall attaine vnto that sanctification and holinesse of life which we labour after. The which as a singular encouragement hearteneth vs to take paines, & to vse all diligence in all Christian duties, when as we are sure that we shall not lose our labour, but shall receiue the fruit and benefit of it in the end. Secondly, a liuely hope enableth vs to overcome all difficulties, when as we do assuredly expect, not only helpe & assistance from God, for the performing of those duties, vnto which in our selues we are altogether insufficient, but also do wait for that bountifull wages & rich reward, which God hath promised to all those who serue & please him; namely, all the testimonies of his loue & fauor in this life, and that eternall crowne of glory & happinesse, which he reserueth for vs in the life to come. For this is that helmet of saluation, which defendeth vs against all incounters of our spiritual enemies, this is that sure anchor-hold which keeps vs immouable in all the tempestuous stormes of tentations, and from making shipwrack of our soules against the rocks of despaire. Neither is it possible, that we should be tired with any labour, or danted and dismayed with any difficulty or danger, if we haue an eye to the recompence of reward, & expect after our short and small labours, such an inestimable and euerlasting waight of glory. Thirdly, seruent charity enableth vs to overcome all difficulties. For loue maketh euery burthen light, and if our necks be anoynted with this oyle, the yoke of Christ will seeme easie and sweet. For as Augustine saith, The labors of louers are not burthensome, but bring rather delight, as wee see in the example of those who loue those painfull sports of hunting, hawking, fishing & such like, seeing the paines which are taken about the things we loue, are either counted no labour, or else the labour is loued & bringeth no tediousnes. In which regard, loue is compared to the peyzes of a clock, which setteth all the wheelles a-going. Or to the wheelles of a chariot, which make it easily into weakness

Eph. 3.12
Col. 1.10, 11.

Luk. 11.13
Zech. 12.10.

7. 1. 10. 1

Ioh. 7. 37, 38.

G. Sect. 5.
That the fauoring graces of the Spirit
wrought in vs, make the godly life easie and familiar.

1. Thes. 5. 3.
Heb. 6. 18.

1. Thes. 5. 3.
Heb. 6. 18.
1. Thes. 5. 3.
Heb. 6. 18.

Lib. de Sancta
viduitate.

*Grandem vim obtinere uera dilectio, &c. Hier.
ad Celantian.*

*Iohn. 14. 15.
Confess. lib. 11.*

1. Cor. 13. 7.

Psal. 119. 47.

Esa. 57. 20, 21.

Rom. 5. 3.

Math. 5. 11.

*6. Sect. 6.
That Christian fortitude o-uercommeth
all difficulties, and maketh a godly life easy.*

drawn, & to go with much ease, which otherwise are hardly to be moued. True loue (saith one) is of great force. And he that is loued in an high degree, challengeth vnto himselfe the whole will and heart of him that loueth him. Nothing so imperiously commandeth as charity. And if we truly loue Christ, remembring that he hath redeemed with his blood, wee shall then know, that we can then neither will nor doe any other thing, then that which he willeth and commandeth; according to that,
He who loueth me, keepeth my commandments. He that loueth, saith August.
laboreth not; and it is onely loue which blusseth at the name of difficulty. So the Apostle, Charity beareth all things, beleeueth all things, ho-peth all things, endureth all things. An example whereof we haue in Da-uid, who because hee loued Gods Commandements, therefore they were not tedious vnto him, but sweete and pleasant. Fourthly, ardent zeale and feruent deuotion, will arme vs greatly against all difficulties.
For this serueth to the soule, as the spirits to the body, making it, which in it selfe is heauy and lumpish, quick and vigorous, actiue, and neuer wearied in well-doing. And whereas sloth, coldnesse and a-uersnesse of wil doth make things easy, hard and difficult, a huge moun-taine of euery little mole-hill, and euery straw a great blocke; contrariwise the heate of feruent zeale and deuotion, causeth vs to contemne & scorne all oppositions, & maketh our greatest labours in the seruice of God, light and delightfull. Fifthly, the inward peace of conscience and ioy in the holy Ghost, which followeth our iustification by faith, and reconciliation with God, is a notable help enabling vs to ouercome all difficulties. For the minde & conscience being inwardly quiet, are nothing or but little troubled with outward stormes, but go on quietly in all holy duties acceptable to God, without any disturbance, euen in the midst of worldly garboiles and tumultuous troubles. And whereas the wicked which want this peace, are neuer at quiet in the greatest calme of worldly prosperity, being like vnto a troubled sea, which cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt; those who haue this inward peace, are quiet in the greatest stormes of trouble, and reioice not only in temporall blessings, but euen in their tribulations & persecutions for righteousness sake.

Sixthly, Christian fortitude and magnanimous resolution will exceedingly helpe vs to ouercome all oppositions, the which is not to bee grounded vpon our owne strength, nor vpon the vertues and graces which are inherent in vs, but vpon the power and promises of almighty God, the mediation and intercession of Iesus Christ, and our vnion and communion with him, and finally vpon the help and assistance of the holy Spirit, which in our greatest weakenesse are all-sufficient to strengthen vs against all impediments that hinder vs in Christian duties. For if we be armed with this fortitude and Christian courage, we shall be the better able to withstand the tentations of Satan and the world, and subdue our own corrupt lusts and violent passions, which will not easily be mastered and overcome, if we weakely & feare-fully set vpon them. For as Nettles lightly and gently touched, reaine their venome and vigour, and sting the hand, but hurt not at all, if wee roughly graspe and gripe them in fast hold; And as the fire, if we resolutely

lurely rush vpon it and trample it vnder foote, is easily extinguished, but if it be gently handled, burneth that which toucheth it, and if there be plenty of combustible matter, increaseth to a great flame: so our corrupt flesh and tumultuous passions, if they be handled gently, and (as it were) with a fearefull touch, will but the more sting and burne vs, but if they be assaulted with vndaunted courage, and nought-dreading valour, they will soone be subdued, and giue vs the comfort of an easie victory. Besides, howsoever we haue many helpes from God, & sweete comforts of his Spirit, which may sufficiently encourage vs in our Christian courses, against all oppositions, yet it cannot be denyed, but that we shall meete with so many difficulties, in respect of the corruption of our nature, and encounters of our spirituall enemies, that we had great neede of courage and resolution for the ouercomming of them. The palace of vertue is not seated vpon the plaine, but vpon a rocke and steepe hill, which we cannot mount without some paines, nor continue this paynes without resolued courage. Wee must trauayle, like painefull pilgrims, before we can take our rest in our own cuntry. Wee must laboriously work, before we can receiue our wages, mourne and weepe, before we can laugh and reioyce, bedewing our cheekes with teares, before we can haue them cleane wiped away; and both fight and overcome our spirituall enemies, before we can obtaine full victory, or triumph in glory. All which, as on the one side they must not daunt and dismay vs, because our ioyes exceede our griefe; our comforts, our crosses; and they which are on our part, those that are against vs: so on the other side, they should keepe vs, when we enter into the course of Christianity, from dreaming of ease, or pleasing our selues with a vaine conceit, that we shall finde pleasures without paines, and vndertake such a worke as is so easy, that we may go about it betweene sleeping and waking, & easily overcome it, though we be neuer so negligent: And contrariwise make it appeare how necessary it is, that before we goe about this building, we cast vp our accounts, & when we haue resolued vpon it, that we arme our selues with courage & fortitude, that ouercoming all difficulties and oppositions, we may be able to perfect and finish it.

Now the meanes of attaining vnto this Christian fortitude, whereby we are made ready to doe whatsoever God commandeth, and to suffer whatsoever he imposeth, are first to consider what our Sauour Christ hath done and suffered for our sakes; what pouerty and contempt, shame and disgrace, slanders and reuilings, blindfolding and buffeting, scourging and crucifying; what inward sorrowes and bitter agonies in the sight and sense of Gods wrath due vnto our sinnes, hee hath meekely and patiently indured for vs. And this argument the Apostle Peter vseth to strengthen our resolution against all difficulties: For as much then as Christ hath suffered for vs in the flesh, arme your selues likewise with the same minde: seeing as Apostle speaketh, He therefore indured these things, lest we should bee weary and faint in our mindes. And then also let vs thinke with our selues, who it was that suffered all this, namely, Iesus Christ the innocent and righteous, who neuer sinned, and in whose mouth there was no guile; the glorious and eter-

Apoc. 2. 10.

§. Sect. 7.
Of the meanes whereby wee may attaine vnto Christian fortitude.

1. Pet. 4. 1.

Heb. 12. 3.

nall Sonne of God, equall vnto his Father in might and Maieſty: And for whom he ſuffered all theſe great euils, euen for vs and for our finnes, which were ſtrangers and enemies vnto him, dead in our finnes, and the children of wrath as well as others; and the motiues and manner of theſe ſufferings, not vpon our intreaty, and much leſſe deſert, not by any compulſion or conſtraint, but vpon his owne accord, and out of his meere grace and good will, meekly, and cheerfully. To conſider likewise what our Sauour hath done for vs, namely, forgiven the infinite debt of our finnes, overcome all the enemies of our ſaluation, reconciled vs vnto God, vnited vs vnto himſelfe, whereby we haue communion with him in all his benefiſts, imparted vnto vs ſome portion of his ſauing graces, and innumerable pledges of his loue and fauour, which are alſo earneſt-pennies of our ſaluation. For who can thorowly ponder theſe things, and not be thereby armed with a magnanimous reſolution of doing and ſuffering any thing for Chriſts ſake? For did our Lord and Maſter ſuffer all this for vs; and ſhall wee not be ready and willing to ſuffer much leſſer things for him? Shall our Captaine and Generall lye in the field, and indure much hardneſſe, and many ſharpe and dangerous conflicts; and ſhall wee take our eaſe at home, and ſolace our ſelues in worldly delights? Did hee indure many afflictions, and grieuous perſecutions for our ſakes, that hee might purchaſe for vs euerlaſting life and happineſſe, and himſelfe leade vs the way vnder his Croſſe; and will we dreame of going to that place of ioy, without paine or difficulty, as it were lying in an Horſe-litter, and ſleeping in a bed of Downe? Was his loue towards vs ſo great and ineffimable, that nothing could hinder him from emptying himſelfe of glory and coming to vs, that he might worke that great worke of our Redemption; and ſhall wee not be willing and reſolute to goe vnto him, thorow thicke and thin, fire and water, euill report, and good report, affliction and perſecution, that he may make vs partakers of his glory, and crowne vs with his happineſſe? Could no difficulty daunt and diſcourage him from ſhewing the infiniteneſſe of his loue, in doing all things neceſſary for our ſaluation; and ſhall we thinke any taſke too hard to bee vndertaken, which may expreſſe our loue, our deſire to glorifie him, and care to pleaſe him? Secondly, we may ſtrengthen our ſelues in this magnanimous fortitude and reſolution, by obſeruing the courage and conſtancy of Gods Saints and ſeruants of former ages, and in our owne times, whom no difficulties could diſcourage, either from doing that which God requireth, or ſuffering that which hee inflicteth. Of both which, we haue for our imitation, the examples of the Patriarches, Enoch, Noah, Lot, Abraham, Iſaac, Iacob, Iob, Dauid and the reſt, of the Prophets and holy men of God, the Apoſtles of Ieſus Chriſt, and the deuout and godly Martyrs which ſucceeded them, who were not onely content to ſpend their ſweat and labour in Gods ſeruice, but were alſo prodigall of their blood, and patiently indured the moſt cruell and exquisite torments which wit and malice could deuife, rather then they would leaue their holy profeſſion and praẽtice of Gods truth. And therefore if theſe Saints, of the ſame nature with vs, and bearing about with them the like infirmities, did, vpon the ſame grounds which wee likewise haue in common with them, them, courageously withstand all oppositions, and valiantly rush thorow all difficulties which stood in their way, and hindred them from following their Lord and Master Iesus Christ; why should euery small danger daunt vs, and a little labour and short paines dismay and discourage vs from going on in the duties of a godly life? If they thought it too little to expresse their loue towards their Sauour, to indure with patience and ioy, death it selfe, and exquisite torments; shall wee thinke it too much to take a little paines in mortifying our sinfull flesh, and the lusts thereof? Were they content to suffer the rendings and tearings of wilde beasts, rackes, gibbets, fire and sword; and will not we, to shew our loue to God and his Christ, our blessed Sauour, who hath done and suffered so much for vs, take a little paines in the duties of a godly life; as fasting, praying, watching, and the rest, that we may glorifie them by our holy conuersation? Finally, if wee would attaine vnto this magnanimous fortitude, which easily ouercometh all difficulties, wee must continually haue in our eye the eternall recompence of reward, according to the example of our Sauour Christ, the Authour and finisher of our faith, who for the ioy that was set before him, indured the Crosse, and despised the shame. For if hope of a little gaine make Merchants so resolute and valiant, that they dare expose themselues to the dangers both of sea and land: if souldiers are so full of courage and fortitude, that they dare rush into all desperate perils, and fight at the push of pike, yea euen at the Canons mouth, for a little pay or boory, or for the applause of their Captaine and fellow souldiers, or vaine fame and momentany glory in the world; what difficulty should be so great, that should be able to discourage vs from resolving to leade a godly life, which shall be rewarded with the infinite and euerlasting riches, and inestimable glory and happinesse of Gods Kingdome?

Heb. 12. 2.

The last meanes whereby we may be enabled to ouercome all difficulties, is the daily and constant practice of all Christian duties; seeing howsoever they may seeme at the first, harsh and vnpleasant to our corrupt nature, yet continuall vse will make them easie and familiar, and bring vs at length to such a custome and settled habit, that wee shall performe them with much comfort and delight. For as the mind is more and more darkened by the often acts of sinne, and so loseth the light of truth, that no sauing knowledge remaineth in it, but malignity onely and pollution; so by the many and often acts of piety and righteousness, the mind is more inlightened, and aspireth vnto a greater measure of true wisdom, this righteousness and holinesse offering themselues as cleere glasses, vnto the eyes of the vnderstanding, as Chrysostome hath well obserued. Besides, the more often that we performe thele Christian and religious duties, and the longer and more constantly that we continue in them, the more we shall relish and taste their sweetnesse; so that though at first they seemed to our carnall appetite as bitter and vnpleasant, as the infusion of gall or wormewood, yet continuall vse and daily practice, will make them sweeter to our mouthes then the honey and honey combe, as wee see in Dauids example; by reason that we shall finde in our owne good experience, the manifold comforts which accompany the diligent performance of thele Christian duties; as peace with God, and the beames of §. Sect. 8.

That by daily and constant practice we may easily o-uercome all difficulties

*Sicut enim qui peccat, dum peccat, magis atque magis tenebre sunt mens eius, &c.
Chrysost. in
Mat. 7. Hom. 18
Psal. 19. 10.*

his loue and fauour shed abroad in our hearts, and shining vpon vs, the peace of a good conscience, and inward ioy of the holy Ghost, sweete communion with God, access and increase of all spirituall graces, contentation in all estates, and assurance of our saluation, and that in the meane time, all things whatsoever, and euen afflictions themselves, shall turne to our good. These, and many such like benefits, accompanying our constant walking in the wayes of godlinesse, will make them not onely easie, but sweet and delightfull. And whereas at first wee came to the performing of Christian duties, as a Beare to the stake, and found nothing in them, but vexation and irksome wearinesse; by vse and custome comming to know and relish their profit and excellency, wee finde such spirituall sweetness, that it is our meate and drinke to be exercised in them. So that now we esteeme Gods Sabbaths our delight; heare, reade, pray, meditate, conferre, and doe the workes of mercy with much ioy and cheerfulness. Now the meanes to attaine vnto this daily and constant practice, which taketh away all difficulty and distast, is to inure our selues thereunto by degrees, and with a firme resolution, to break off all excuses, and set apart some short time, as a day, week, or month, for the strict leading of a godly life, in the performance of all Christian duties, as they haue bin before let downe. Which when we haue done, let vs looke backe and examine our selues, if we can in our consciences find any cause of repenting this course, in leauing worldly and wicked delights and the pleasures of sinne, and betaking and consecrating our selues to serue God in the duties of holiness and righteousness: yea, if we doe not finde in this short time, more sound comfort and true ioy, then in many yeeres before, when wee neglected them.

§. Sect. 9.
That worldlings take more paines about earthly vanities, and in the seruice of sinne and Satan, then is required to a godly life.
Pro. 26. 13.

Now if any, notwithstanding of all these helps and comforts, still complaine of the difficulties, which he findeth in the course of Christianity, and vse it as an excuse for his neglect of all the duties of a godly life; let such a man know, that the fault is not in the hardnesse and crookednes of the way, but in his own negligence, who will not vse the meanes which God offereth vnto him for the ouercomming of these difficulties, and neither take any paines to be truly informed, nor to trauell in it after hee knoweth it. For because they are lazie, and haue no list to worke; therefore they sit in the house and complaine, that there is a Lion in the way, a Lion in the streets. Because they would sit still by the flesh-pots of Egypt, and glut themselves with carnall pleasures, therefore they cauell against their entring into, and proceeding in that way which leadeth to the holy Land, as though the difficulties were so many and great which affront vs in it, that it is vnpossible and impossible to be trauelled by them. Their affections are so strong, that they cannot master and mortifie them; their bodies tender and delicate, and not inured to take that paines which is required to the well performing of Christian duties, and their natures are so easie and flexible, that they cannot withstand the allurements and importunity of their old companions, drawing and perswading them to accompany them in their sinfull courses. All which excuses, what doe they argue but their sloth and negligence; yea rather, their want of loue, and contempt of spirituall grace and heavenly glory? Seeing the same men who who pretend these difficulties, are ready to undertake farre greater paines, for the obtaining of those worldly vanities, whereupon they have fixed their hearts (and euen delight themselves in these toyle some labours) then is required for the attaining of heavenly happinesse; and goe willingly thorow many more and greater difficulties in those wayes that leade to hell and destruction, then they should euer finde in the way that would bring them to life and saluation? For first, consider the paines which worldly men are content to indure for the compassing of honours, riches and pleasures, how they carke and care, toyle and moyle, watch and labour, trauell by sea and land, and runne into many desperate dangers, for the getting of these worthlesse vanities, which are alike vncertaine in the possession, as in the pursuit and acquisition. How they tire their thoughts in the restless night, about plots and policies, for the preuenting or circumventing one another. How their hearts are continually vpon the racke of their owne passions, being diuersly distracted betweene hopes and feares; false ioyes, and true griefes; loue, and dislike; longing desires, and lothing auerfation. Consider also what paines and care they take about their fraile and mortall bodies, and for the preserving of their flitting and fading health and strength, and the prolonging of their vncertaine and momentany life. What paines they take in tricking and trimming, decking and adorning, clothing and beautifying, nourishing and feeding, pampering and pleasing, physicking and dyeting their corruptible carcases, though they are assured, that by all their care and cost they can but for a short time adiourne diseases and infirmities, and for a small and vncertaine while procure a repriall from approaching death. Finally, consider that there is much more toyle and difficulty in the wayes of vice and sinne, then in the way of vertue and godlinesse, although carnall loue so sweeteneth it to a corrupt appetite, that it is either not discerned, or not much abhorred. For example, what rackes and torments are in couetousnesse and ambition, and what comfort and sweetnesse in contentation, and submission of our estates to the will of God? What pangs and pulls of an euill conscience accompany vice and sinne, and what peace and quietnesse, ioy and delight haue wee in the conscience of our innocency and well-doing? Vnto what stormes and tempests doth pride expose vs, from all which we are secured by lowlinesse and humility? What vexation and griefe is there in malice, enuie, anger, and desire of reuenge; and what ioy and sweet delight to be found in brotherly loue, reioycing in one anothers good, peaceablenesse, passing by and pardoning of offences, and making friends of enemies, by our kind vlage and sweet conuersation? What trouble and discontent in discord, contention and wrangling suits of Law, and what sweetnesse and contentment in amity, friendship, mutuall agreement, and euen in departing from some part of our right, that we may thereby purchase Jewels of farre greater price, peace and loue? Finally, what anxiety and vexation is there in carking care about worldly things, and what ioy and pleasure in the life of faith, whereby we securely rely vpon Gods promises and providence, and goe boldly vnto him, as vnto our gracious Father, when we are in any want, with confidence that it shall be supplied in that manner and measure, confess. 19. c. 1.

Wisd. 9.7,8.

2. Tim. 4. 8.

sure, as will best stand with his glory and our owne good. In all which respects, and innumerable others, as wicked worldlings, after all their labours about worldly vanities, and the vaine and vnfruitfull works of darkness, haue iust cause to complaine with those in the Booke of Wisedome, Wee haue wearied our selues in the way of wickednesse and destruction, yea, wee haue gone thorow deserts, where there lay no way; but as for the way of the Lord, we haue not knowne it; what hath pride profited vs? or what good hath riches with our vannting brought vs? All these things are passed away as a shadow, and as a Poast that hasteth by. So on the other side, the faithfull, who haue spent their time and strength in the duties of a godly life, haue iust cause to comfort themselves in their happy choyce, when leauing the world, and the pleasures of sinne, and embracing the loue and feare of God, they haue deuoted themselves wholly to Gods seruice, seeing they may with Augustine reioyce in God and praise him, saying, Let my heart praise thee, and let my tongue and all my bones say, O Lord, who is like vnto thee, &c. How sweet and pleasant is it now become, to want the sweetnesse of worldly vanities? That which I feared to lose, what ioy is it to haue lost? For thou, O most true and supreme sweetnesse, didst cast them out of me; thou didst cast them out, and didst enter in their stead, who art sweeter then pleasure, but not to flesh and blood; cleerer and brighter then all light, but to the inner man onely; and then all honour, much more high and honourable, but not to those who are exalted in themselves. Now was my mind free from the biting and eating cares of ambition, couetousnesse, voluptuousnesse, and from scratching the itching scab of lust, and did freely talke with thee, my beaury, riches, saluation, and my Lord and God. And after a painefull warfare, they may with the Apostle make that comfortable conclusion, when death approacheth; I haue fought a good fight, I haue finished my course, I haue kept the faith; Henceforth there is laid vp for me a Crowne of righteousnesse, which the Lord the righteous Iudge shall giue vnto me at that day. And therefore let not those seeming difficulties any longer discourage vs from resolving to serue God in the duties of a godly life, seeing thereby we shun and escape much greater difficulties in the wayes of sin, then we shall euer find in the way of a Christian and holy conuersation.

CAP. XV.

That a godly life is not harsh and vnpleasant, mopish and melancholike, but aboue all others, most cheerefull and pleasant, sweet and delightfull.

6. Sect. 1.

That though a godly life were sad and sorrowfull, yet this should not discourage from it.

Third obiection which the flesh maketh against a godly life, to discourage and hinder vs from entering into, or proceeding in it, is, that it is harsh and vnpleasant, mopish and melancholike, depriving vs of all ioy and delight, which is the very life of our life, and which being taken from vs, it becommeth irksome and tedious. The which obiection of the flesh, the deuill and the world labour all they may, with their vntoost policy and skill, to confirme and strengthen; and knowing knowing that men naturally are affected with nothing more then with pleasure and ioy, and doe shunne aboue all things sorrow and sadnesse, they vse all their Art to blinde and delude vs; by offering to our view all the pleasures of carnall and corrupt courses, and hiding from vs the griefes and mischiefes which alwayes attend vpon them, and like a bitter tang or lothsome after-taste, doe vtterly spoile these sinfull and fleshly delicacies. And contrariwise, they offer to our consideration all the sorrow and smart, losses and worldly inconueniences, which they must vndergoe who resolute to please God, in the strict and constant performance of the duties belonging to a godly life, concealing in the meane while the manifold comforts which doe accompany them, and the inestimable ioyes, and euerlasting happinesse, vnto which they attaine that continue in them vnto the end. For the answering of which obiection, wee are first to know, that though there were as much sadnesse, and as little ioy for the present time in the godly life, as is pretended by our spirituall enemies, yet this should not discourage vs from chusing and imbracing it; seeing both the pleasures and paines, solace and sorrowes of this life are but short and momentany, whereas both the ioyes and griefes which shall immediately succeed them, are endlesse and euerlasting. In which regard, wee are to account that mirth miserable, which ends in perpetuall mourning, and that sorrow and sadnesse sweet and comfortable, which is attended with eternall and heavenly ioyes. So our Sauour, Blessed are they that mourne, for they shall bee comforted. And againe; Blessed are yee that weepe now, for ye shall laugh; and woe vnto you that laugh now, for ye shall mourne and weepe. Now if wee worthily abhorre vnwholesome meates and drinckes, though they be neuer so sweet and pleasant to our taste, because we lose that delight which we take in them, by the bitter paines of sicknesse, indangering our liues, which soone after followeth it; and if we loue that wholesome, though bitter medicine, which freeth vs from tedious sicknesse, and preserueth our health: why should we not be alike wise in spirituall things, which concerne our soules, hating those carnall and sinfull pleasures, which indanger them to sicknesse and euerlasting death, and louing those Christian and holy duties, though they bee bitter and vnpleasant to our fleshly and corrupt appetite, which preserue our spirituall health, and certainly assure vs of eternall life and happinesse? Neither are the religious exercises of a godly life harsh and vnpleasant, either in their owne nature, or to vs in the spirituall part, and so farre soorth as we are regenerate and sanctified: yea, rather they are of incomparable sweetnesse, aboue the honey and honey combe, and affect vs in the inner man with vnspeakable ioy and delight, as we see in the example of Dauid, the Apostle Paul, and our Sauour Christ himselfe: but to our carnall appetite and sinfull flesh, which (like a sicke and aguish stomake, full of corrupt and noysome humours) doth bring our pallate quite out of taste, iudging those spirituall duties which are sweet and pleasant, bitter and lothsome, and our sinfull vices and workes of darkenesse, that are sowre and harsh to a right iudging taste, delightfull and well-relishing. And therefore, seeing wee are not (as the Apostle speaketh) debiuers vnto the flesh, that wee should fulfill the lusts thereof, let not this distaste which it feelth in religious

Mat. 5. 4.
Luk. 6. 21, 25.

Psal. 119. 9, 10.
Rom. 7. 22.
Iob. 4. 34.

Rom. 8. 12.

1. Pet. 3. 11.

§. Sect. 2.

That sanctification taketh not away our ioy & delight, but only changeth and improveth it.

1. Pet. 1. 9.

gious exercises withdraw vs from them, or discourage vs in them; yea, let vs so much the rather be diligent & constant in these duties, that we may mortifie this carnall concupiscence, that fighteth against our soules, and by displeasing it, please our God and our owne consciences, and nourish and preserve our spirituall life and health.

But this obiection which the flesh maketh against the leading of a godly life, it further presseth and confirmeth by the experience which we may have in others, and the examples of many Christians, who spend a great part of their time in sighing and sorrowing, mourning and lamenting, as though they were deprived of all inward ioy, and outward pleasures, and doe live in such a melancholike and mopish manner, as though they thought all delights vnlawfull, being ready to condemne themselves, and censure others, if they laugh or smile, or shew any other signes of gladnesse and reioicing, as not fauouring of sanctification, and the mortification of our fleshly lusts; not becomming the season, which is a time of mourning, nor befitting the place, which is a valley of teares, nor yet well suting with the example of our Sauour Christ, of whom it is written, that hee mourned and wept, but neuer any thing sayd of his mirth and laughter. For the answering whereof, we are first to know, that sanctification and mortification doe not annihilate or change the essence and being of nature, or the substance of our faculties, passions, and affections, but onely renueth and purgeth them from their corruption, that becomming holy, they may be seruiceable to God, and the spirituall and inner man. It doeth not abolish and take them away, but moderateth them in their degree, and keepeth them from extremity and excess, when as they are exercised about worldly things; and both rectifieth their disorder, and correcteth their viciosity and faultinesse. And finally, it causeth our passions and affections to change their objects, making vs to bewaile our sinnes, in which formerly wee reioiced, and to reioyce in those spirituall exercises, which in the dayes of our ignorance we loathed and neglected. It taketh away the lightnesse, vanity, and madnesse of mirth, and causeth it to become more graue and sober: It changeth our reioicing in euill, for reioicing in that which is good: It moderateth the excess of our earthly ioy, which is more in the creature, then in the Creature: It maketh vs to reioyce but a little, in things that are but a little worth, and to abound, and euen triumph with ioy in things of greatest excellency, as the assurance of Gods loue and our owne saluation, and the manifold and vndoubted testimonies of his grace and fauour towards vs. And if Christians doe not finde in them this change of ioy, from worse to better, from carnall to spirituall, from that which is vaine and worthless, vnto that, which (as the Apostle Peter calleth it) is unspeakable and glorious; it is their own fault, and not of their Christian profession. Neither in truth can the carriage of diuers Christians be in this regard excused, who as though they thought ioy and a godly life incompatible, and not to be reconciled or conioyned, or supposed that when they did forsake the world, their sins, and carnall pleasures, they were presently bound to part with mirth and gladnesse, ioy and delight, doe purposely affect a sad countenance and carriage, a demure and dejected looke, inwardly sighing and groining groning vpon euery slight occasion, drooping and hanging downe the head, as though all ioy were in the pleasures of sinne which they haue forsaken, and no cause at all of reioycing in their present estate. Whereby they not onely make their owne liues tedious and wearisome, and so ouer-strait & strict, vnpleasant and vncomfortable, that being tyred with it, they are not able to hold out, but change this rigorous seruitude for licentious liberty; or else goe forward without life and spirit, courage or comfort: but also by their example discourage others that are without, from taking vpon them the profession of Christianity, or resolving to leade a godly life, as fearing that it is so austere and destitute of all ioy and delight, that it is altogether intolerable and not to be indured. Whereas contrariwise, if as they haue greater cause, they could also perceiue, that they haue aboue all other the greatest, most solid, and lasting ioy, it would be a notable inducement to moue them to take vpon them their holy profession, and to resolve that they will follow and ioyne with them in the practice of those duties, in which they discerne such pleasure and comfort.

But that those who affect such melancholike heauinesse, & purposely banish both out of their hearts and countenances all ioy and mirth, may be reclaimed from going on still in this erroneous and tedious course, and that others may not be discouraged by their example, from resolving to lead a godly life; let vs know, that there is no ioy comparable vnto that which is, or ought to be in Christians, that desire to serue and please God in their holy conuersation. For if, as Bernard hath excellently obserued, wee can be content with Abraham, in faith and obedience towards God, to offer and sacrifice our Isaac: First, our laughter and ioy, it shall onely be sanctified, but not slaughtered and killed. Thy Isaac shall not die, nor thy mirth perish, but the Ram onely, that is, the peruerfnesse and prophaneesse of thy pleasure and ioy, which endeth alwayes in griefe and anxiety. Isaac thy ioy shall not die, as thou supposhest, but shall surely liue; onely it shall be lifted aloft vpon the Altar and vpon the wood, that thy ioy may be holy and heavenly, sublime and lofty, not in the flesh and things beneath, but in spirituall things, in the crosse of Christ, & those high and holy priuiledges which we haue through him. For howsoeuer Christians in their first conuersion and humiliation, chiefly act the part of sorrow & heauines in the sight and sense of their manifold and heinous finnes, and shed teares of bitter griefe, looking vpon him whom they haue pierced, yet being iustified by faith, & hauing peace with God, in assurance of his mercy, and remission of their sins, they triumph with ioy, even in their afflictions and tribulations, and though they sow in teares, yet they reape in ioy; though they haue a dropping and sorrowfull seed-time, yet their haruest, which yeeldeth vnto them a fruitfull crop of lasting graces, (which yet are but the first fruits of their succeeding ioy and heavenly happines) is full of mirth & gladnes. So that with Dauid they reioyce more in the bright beames of Gods gracious countenance shining vpon them, then worldlings doe or can doe, when their come and wine is increased. And though they be, in respect of their afflicted estate,

6. Sect. 3.

That no ioy of worldlings is comparable to that which is in Christians.

*Oblatus sum dem Isaac;
sanctificatus est
non mactatus.
Non Isaac, sed
aries mactatus, non peribit tibi
lactia, sed con-tumelia.*
*Bernard, sermo
de verbin. 1. 1.
Ecc. pro telli-quibus omnia.*

*Zach. 12. 10. 13
Rom. 5. 1. 3.*

Ps. 124. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100.

2 Cor. 6. 10.

Psal. 133. 15.

Pro. 3. 17.

Psal. 36. 8.

Job. 16. 22.

Gal. 5. 22.

Psal. 35. 9.

Psal. 119. 14.
16.

Psal. 40. 8.

Aps. 5. 41.

Aps. 16.

Rom. 15. 17.

Gal. 6. 14.

2 Cor. 7. 4.

Eccl. 2. 1. 2.

Eccl. 7. 2. 6.

1 Cor. 13. 6.

Rom. 14. 17.

As sorrowfull, yet they are alwaies reioycing (as the Apostle speaketh) because they know that all things, euen crosses and calamities themselves worke together for their good. The which will more manifestly appeare, if we a little further consider the testimonies and examples of holy Scripture. For the Psalmist telleth vs, that the voyce of reioycing and saluation is in the Tabernacles of the righteous; And Salomon speaking of Wisdome, which consisteth in the sauing knowledge of God and his truth, and the practice of it in all holy and religious duties, saith that her wayes, are wayes of pleasantnesse, and all her paths are peace. So David saith of the Church and children of God; the liuely members of it, That they should be abundantly satisfied with the fatnesse of his house, and that he would make them drinke of the riuers of his pleasure. Our Sauour also promifeth vnto the Disciples, and in them to all the faithfull, that he would giue them such a permanent ioy, as no man should be able to take it from them. And finally, the Apostle setteth it downe, not as a common gift, but as a special fruit of the Spirit (not drooping sorrow, and disconsolate heauinesse, but) ioy and peace. And this also appeareth by the examples of the holy men of God recorded in the Scriptures: Thus David saith; My soule shall bee ioyfull in the Lord, it shall reioyce in his saluation. Neither did he onely thus reioyce in the testimonies of Gods fauour, and conquest of his enemies, but also in his obedience and keeping of Gods Law: I haue reioyced in the way of thy testimonies as much as in all riches. I will delight my selfe in thy Statutes: I will not forget thy Word. And againe; I delight to doe thy will, O my God, yea thy Law is within mine heart. Thus the Apostles reioyced euen in their persecutions, because they were thought worthy to suffer for Christs sake; and Paul and Silas, when as their backs were torne with fore stripes, and their feete locked in the Stockes. Thus the Apostle found matter enough to glorie in through Iesus Christ, in things pertayning to God: And tasted such vnspeakeable ioy in the knowledge of Christ and him crucified, that he disclaymeth all other ioy. And else-where he professeth, that he had no scant measure of this sweert delight, but that he was filled with comfort, and was exceeding ioyfull, euen in all his tribulations. Neither is this ioy whercof I speake, in which the Christian exceedeth all other men, sensuall and carnall, in the pleasures of sinne, and the fruition of earthly vanities, not in rioting and reuelling, in swilling and drinking, dicing and carding, vaine galliance and good fellowship, chambring and wantonnesse: for such pleasure he accounteth vanity, and such mirth madnesse; and chuseth rather to goe into the house of mourning, then into the house of such feasting & reioycing, because such ioy & laughter is but short and momentany, like the crackling of thornes vnder a pot, and alwaies endeth in sorrow and anxiety. It is not in mad mirth, and in sinfull and vnlawfull delights: for Christian charity reioyceth not in iniquity, but reioyceth in the truth; and this ioy is alwayes ioyned with righteousnes, and the peace of a good conscience, in which the Kingdome of God consisteth. For being subiects of Christs Kingdome, such as it is, such also is their ioy, but his Kingdome is not of this world, but spirituall & heauenly: and therefore their

LIB. 6. That a godly life is full of ioy and pleasure.

841

their ioy and reioycing is likewise of the same nature. And howsoeuer Gods children may and ought to reioyce euen in his temporary blessings; as they are testimonies of their heavenly Fathers loue, and also in honest sports and recreations, of which I haue before spoken, whereby they are fitted for higher duties, as musicke, shooting, hunting, hawking, and such like, those cautions before set downe being duely obserued; yea, howsoeuer in these respects they haue greater & more iust cause of ioy and reioycing then any worldling, because these are but vsurpers, who haue a fearefull account to make of their intension, whereas the other haue their right restored vnto them by Iesus Christ; yet, these are not the chiefe ioyes which they rest vpon, as being in comparison, dull and heartlesse, cold and comfortlesse, only they vse them for the necessity of their body & naturall life; as some small refreshings in their Inne, that they may afterwards with more strength & cheerefulness, proceed in their iourney. But the prime and principall ioyes which rauish their soules with inward delight, are secret & vnknowne to all, sauing those who haue tasted of them. So that they may say to worldlings of their ioyes, when they obiect vnto them their sadnesse & want of mirth, as our Sauour of his meat, We haue ioyes which you know not of, seeing our ioy is to doe the will of our heavenly Father. For it is that hidden Manna which our Sauour giueth them to eat, & like that new name written in the white stone, which no man knoweth, sauing he that receiueth it. It is a beauty which cannot be beheld with carnall eyes, and a sweetnesse which is not relished by a common & prophane taste, seeing it is of an holy & spirituall nature: so that when Christians are so afflicted in their outward estate, that they seeme vnto naturall men to haue no cause at all of reioycing, they may notwithstanding say with the Apostle, We haue wherof we may glory through Iesus Christ, in those things which pertaine to God.

*Ioh. 4. 34.
Apos. 2. 17.*

Rom. 15. 17.

*§. Sect. 4.
Of the diuers objects of our spirituall ioy.*

Now the objects of this Spirituall ioy are diuers, the chief and principal is God himselfe, his Christ and holy Spirit, for he being the summum bonum, the supreme ioy and chiefe blessednes, the fruition of him and his grace, and the bright beames of his face and fauor shining vpon vs, must needs be the matter & cause of supreme and vnspeakable ioy. And this is that ioy, and reioycing in the Lord, which is in the Scriptures not only permitted to the faithfull, & restrained vnto them alone as their peculiar and proper right, but enioyned & required as being a duty which we owe vnto God, the performance wherof maketh them happy & blessed. Let not (saith the Lord) the wise man glory in his wisdom, nor the mighty man in his might, nor the rich man in his riches; But let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, &c. So the Psalmist exhorteth to this ioy; Reioyce in the Lord, O ye righteous, for praise is comely for the upright. Of which he propoundeth himselfe for an example; My soule shalbe ioyfull in the Lord, for he shall reioyce in his saluation. And the Apostle likewise; Let him that glorieth, glory in the Lord. And againe; Reioyce in the Lord alway, and againe I say reioyce. In which himselfe tooke such abundant comfort and contentment, that he resteth in it alone, and renounceth all other ioyes; God forbid that I should glory in any thing, sauing

Ier. 9. 24.

Psal. 33. 21.

Psal. 35. 9.

1. Cor. 10. 17.

Phil. 4. 4.

Gal. 6. 14.

in the Crosse of Iesus Christ; by whom the world is crucified vnto me, and I vnto the world. And if we thus reioyce in the Lord, we shall not only be blessed and happie in our worke, but also in our wages and reward, which is promised vnto all those who make him their chiefest ioy; according to that of the Psalmist; Delight thy selfe in the Lord, and he shall giue thee the desires of thine heart. So the Lord promisseth to the faithfull, that they should delight themselues in him, and hee would cause them to ride vpon the high places of the earth, and feede them with the heritage of Iacob, &c. And as the Faithfull doe thus reioyce in God himselfe, so also in his Word and workes. For when they finde sweetenesse and comfort in the spirituall Manna and food of their soules, then they feede vpon it with ioy and delight. So Dauid, I haue reioyced in the way of thy Testimonies, as much as in all riches. Thy Testimonies are my delights and my counsellors. Thy Testimonies haue I taken as an heritage for euer, for they are the reioycing of mine heart. How sweet are thy words vnto my taste, yea, sweeter then hony vnto my mouth! I reioyce at thy Word, as one that findeth great spoyle. So also they reioyce in Gods workes of creation and gouernement, admiring Gods infinite wisdome, power and goodness that shineth in them: Especially in that great worke of our Redemption by Iesus Christ, and in the application thereof vnto themselves, by the inward and effectuall working of Gods Word and holy Spirit. Thus also doe they reioyce in the life of fayth, and in the fruits thereof, their sanctification and new obedience, and in the testimony of a good conscience, according to that of the Apostle, Our reioycing is this, the testimony of our conscience; that in simplicity and godly sincerity, not with fleshly wisdome; but by the grace of God, wee haue had our conuersation in the world. Yea, the faithfull with holy and heavenly mindes doe reioyce in earthly and temporary blessings, in their houses and lands, wiues and children, meates and drinckes, pastimes and recreations. For to this end God hath giuen them; neither is there (as the Wise man speaketh) in them any other good, but for a man to reioyce in their fruition, and to doe good in his life; and that euery man should eate and drinke, and inioy the fruit of his labour, it is the gift of God. And againe; Behold that which I haue seene. It is good and comely for one to eate and to drinke, and to inioy the good of all his labour that hee taketh vnder the Sunne, all the dayes of his life which God giueth him; for it is his portion. Euery man also to whom God hath giuen riches and wealth, and hath giuen him power to eate thereof, and to take his portion, and to reioyce in his labour, this is the gift of God.

So that no lawfull ioy, either spirituall, or temporall, inward or outward, is wanting vnto the righteous who desire to please God. But yet their chiefe and principall ioy in which they exceede all others, is spirituall, in the assurance of Gods loue and their owne saluation, and that both in respect of the excellency, perpetuity and propriety of it. For first, it excelleth all other ioyes, being of a spirituall and diuine nature, and (as it were) a short prelude to that heavenly and harmonious ioy, of which wee shall haue the full and euerlasting fruition in the life

Psal. 37. 4.

Esa. 58. 14.

Psal. 119. 14,
24, 103, 111,
162.

2. Cor. 1. 12.

Eccles. 3. 13, 13.

Eccles. 5. 18, 19.

6. Sect. 5.

That the Christians chiefest ioy is spirituall, and wherein it ex-ceedeth all other ioyes.

to come. For so the Apostle teacheth vs, that the Kingdome of God (that is, the first beginnings of it in this world) consisteth not in meates and drinckes, but in righteousness, peace, and ioy in the holy Ghost; and they who haue here tasted these first beginnings of this heavenly ioy, shall haue the perfect fruition of that fulnesse of ioy, and of those eternall pleasures which are at Gods right hand for euermore. So that when righteous men reioyce, there is great glory, (as the Wise man speaketh) seeing their ioy farre exceedeth the ioy of them who reioyce in their corne and wine, as being not onely much more excellent both in respect of the nature and obiekt, but also an earnest-penny of a greater bargain, the first beginnings and prime taste of those full riuers of diuine pleasures, whereof they shall drinke their fill in Gods Kingdome, and the first fruits of that heavenly and happie haruest of ioy, which is reserued for them in the life to come. And therefore no maruaile, seeing this spirituall ioy is about all others most excellent; that Dauid (when hauing wounded his conscience with grieuous sinnes, hee was deprived of the sense and feeling of it for a time) did so earnestly desire to haue it againe restored: Restore vnto mee the ioy of thy saluation, and uphold mee with thy free Spirit: Seeing herein hee had much more contentment, sound comfort and delight, then in all the earthly pleasures, which a Kingdome could yeeld vnto him? For they all were but slight and childish, this, solid and substantiall; they, vaine and worthlesse, this, excellent and of incomparable value; they, short and fickle, momentary and mutable, this, durable and permanent. And this is the second reason to commend vnto vs this spirituall Ioy, in that it is not like worldly ioyes, onely by fits and flashes, but settled and constant in all estates and conditions, as well in aduersity and affliction, as in prosperity and all earthly abundance. For if our hearts bee once replenished with this Ioy, no man shall bee able to take it from vs; and being of a spirituall and diuine nature, no earthly thing can quell or quench it. No prison can locke it from vs, no banishment can diuide and seuer vs, no losses and crosses, confiscations of goods, Rackes or Gibbets, fire or sword, can take it away and depriue vs of it. For in all extremities wee haue an inward Comforter, euen the Spirit of God dwelling in vs, which filleth our hearts with ioy, and turneth our mourning into mirth and gladnesse, and as our afflictions doe abound, so also he causeth our consolations to abound much more. Wee liue the life of faith, and not of sense, which looketh not so much vpon things present, as vnto our future hopes and certainties, and hereby wee apply vnto vs Gods Word and gracious promises, which supplyeth comfort sufficient to support vs in all our sorrowes. For it assureth vs, that those are blessed which mourne now, because they shall bee comforted, and which weepe now, for they shall laugh. That all things, euen afflictions themselues shal worke together for the best, and our momentary and light sufferings shall cause vnto vs a farre most excellent and eternall waight of glory, that by these many tribulations wee shall enter into the Kingdome of heauen: and if we suffer with Christ, wee shall also

Rom. 14. 17.

Psal. 16. 11.

Pro. 23. 12.

Psal. 4. 7.

Psal. 36. 8.

Psal. 51. 12.

Rom. 8. 3.

Iohn 16. 22.

Iohn 16. 7.

2. Cor. 1. 5.

Math. 5. 4.

Luke 6. 21.

Rom. 8. 25.

2. Cor. 4. 17.

Act. 14. 22.

2. Tim. 2. 12.

Psal. 119. 50. 92

2. Cor. 8. 2.

Heb. 10. 34.

2. Cor. 7. 8.

Eccl. 7. 6.

Chap. 11. vers. 9.

Prou. 14. 13.

2. Cor. 5. 12.

Luk. 12. 20.

Luk. 6. 25.

§. Sect. 6.

That this spirituall ioy is proper to the godly, and belongeth to no other.

Psal. 33. 1.

Psal. 111. 8. 15

Psal. 106. 3.

Esa. 64. 5.

Luk. 10. 20.

Esa. 61. 1, 2, 3.

Esa. 51. 11.

Matth. 22. 2.

raigne with him. And this was that Word of God applyed by faith, which was Dauids comfort in his afflictions, without which hee should haue perished. This was it which made the Church of Macedonia in a great vall of affliction, and in their deepe pouerty, to haue withall abundance of ioy. This made the godly Hebrewes to take ioyfully the spoyling of their goods, knowing that they had in heauen a better and induring substance. Finally, by this the Apostle himselfe was filled with comfort, and exceeding ioyfull in all his tribulations. But contrariwise, the camall ioy of worldlings in the pleasures of sinne, is fickle and false, mutable and momentany, like the short blaze and crackling of thornes vnder a pot, or laughter in a fit of phrensie, or of a man tickled, which laugheth in the face and countenance, when he is grieved at the heart; because in the midst of their mirth they haue many a cold qualme and checke of conscience, being not able to forget, that after all their youthfull reioycing, they must come vnto Iudgement. The which euen in laughter maketh the heart sorrowfull, because the end of their mirth is heauinesse; and when they glory in outward appearance, to haue no ioy at all in the heart. For who but fooles can reioyce in their full barnes, and abundant prouisions, that remembreth, This night his soule shall be taken from him? Who can haue any sound ioy and comfort in such pleasures and delights, which within a while shall end in endlesse woe and misery, according to that of our Sauour, Woe vnto you that laugh now, for ye shall mourne and weepe.

Finally, the faithfull, who resolute and indeuour to serue and please God in the duties of a godly life, haue propriety in this spirituall and heavenly ioy, seeing it belongeth to them all, and to them alone, none other hauing any part and share in this high and holy priuiledge. For first, this ioy in the Scriptures is appropriated vnto them onely, and no other. So the Psalmist; Reioyce in the Lord, O ye righteous, for praise is comely for the vpright. And againe, Light is sowne for the righteous, and gladnesse for the vpright in heart. The voyce of reioycing and saluation is in the Tabernacles of the righteous. In which regard, he desireth to see the good of Gods chosen, to reioyce in the gladnesse of his Nation, that hee might glory with his inheritance. And the Prophet Esay ioyneth these together; I thou meetest him that reioyceth and worketh righteousness. Secondly, the faithfull can onely thus reioyce, because all the causes of this spirituall ioy belong peculiarly vnto them alone. For they onely are elected to saluation, in which respect, our Sauour exhorteth his Disciples to reioyce in this, because their names were written in the Booke of life. They alone are the redeemed of the Lord, who being freed out of the captiuitie of all their spirituall enemies, haue exceeding great and iust cause to reioyce in this gracious deliverance. And when by the glad tidings of the Gospell, the Lord proclaimeth liberty to captiues, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound, then doth hee also thereby comfort them that mourne, giuing vnto them beauty for ashes, and for mourning, the oyle of ioy. So the Prophet saith, that the redeemed of the Lord shall returne, and come with singing vnto Sion; and euerlasting ioy shall be vpon their heads; they shall obtaine gladnesse, and ioy; and sorrow and mourning shall flee away. They are called to the Marriage of the Kings Sonne, and feasted with a delicious banquet of his speciall fauours; and and none but they haue communion with Christ, that they may reioyce and solace themselves in the fruition of his loue. They, and none besides, are iustified of Gods free grace, through the righteousness and obedience of Iesus Christ, and therefore haue cause to be of good comfort, seeing their sinnes are forgiven them. So the faithfull professe, that they would greatly reioyce in the Lord, and that their soules should be ioyfull in their God, because he had clothed them with the garment of saluation, and covered them with the robe of righteousness, as a Bridegroom decketh himselfe with ornaments, and as a Bride adorneth her selfe with her iewels. They also haue cause, above all others, of ioy and reioicing, in that they are reconciled vnto God by Iesus Christ, and are at peace with him, and with their owne consciences, in which respect they haue iust cause of glorying in their tribulations: for this peace with God, passeth all understanding, and his loue is better then wine, refreshing and cheering our harts more, then all the cold qualmes of worldly crosses can daunt and dismay them; seeing by Gods loue towards vs, and our loue towards him, wee haue this priuiledge, that all things shall worke together for our good. They alone haue the Spirit of God dwelling in them, which worketh in their hearts this spirituall ioy, and by vniting them vnto Christ, and through him vnto God his Father, the Authour and Fountaine of all goodnesse, blessednesse and ioy, doth giue vnto them cause sufficient of triumphing with ioy unspeakable and glorious, in the fruition of all happinesse through this sweet and happy communion. Finally, the faithfull onely who serue and please God, haue hope and assurance of eternall blessednesse in the Kingdome of heauen, when all teares being wiped away from their eyes, they shall bee comforted after their mourning, and after their weeping, laugh and reioyce. For the Lord will shew them the path of life, and cause them to in ioy in his presence fulnesse of ioy, and at his right hand pleasures for euermore. In which regard, the godly, in this assurance of faith, haue as much greater, and better cause of reioicing about all worldlings, who abound in their present possessions of earthly wealth, and wallow themselves in voluptuous pleasures, as a young heire in his nonage, who expecteth the inheritance of some goodly Lordship, or if you will, some great and glorious Monarchy, hath more cause of reioicing, then a poore cotager in a silly tenement, in which for the present he dwelleth, but yet onely holdeth it at the Landlords pleasure. For there we shall haue riches and treasures which cannot rust with canker, nor we be robbed of them by theeues; there are honours subiect to no blemish of disgrace, and pleasures for euermore. In all which respects, let the righteous be glad, as the Psalmist exhorteth, let them reioyce before God, yea, let them exceedingly reioyce. And that not by fits and flashes, but at all times, and vpon all occasions, according to that of the Apostle, Reioyce euermore. Neither is there any time vnseasonable for the spirituall ioy of the righteous, so long as they haue the face and fauour of God shining vpon them, which is all-sufficient in it selfe to turne all their mourning into mirth, and their sorrow into gladnesse; even when they are sore pinched and pressed with the waight of their afflictions, and cause them to reioyce inwardly in their hearts, when their cheekes are bedewed with their teares. Heerein, quite contrary to the

Cont. 2. 4. 5.

Math. 5. 3.

Esa. 61. 10.

Rom. 5. 1. 3.

Phil. 4. 7.

Cant. 1. 2.

Rom. 8. 19.

Gal. 5. 22.

Esa. 51. 12.

Apoc. 21. 4.

Math. 5. 4.

Luk. 6. 21.

Psal. 16. 11.

Mat. 6. 19. 20.

Psal. 68. 3.

1. Thes. 5. 16.

2. Cor. 5. 12.

2. Cor. 7. 10.

Psal. 2. 11.

6. Sect. 7.

An admonition to the faithfull, to lay hold on this ioyfull priuiledge, and to shake off sorrow and sadness.

Pro. 12. 25.

Pro. 15. 13, 15.

Pro. 17. 22.

wicked, who reioyce in the face, but not in the heart, whereas the faithfull doe inwardly glory, euen in their tribulations, which notwithstanding being bitter and vnpleasant to the flesh, do make them to discouer nothing but griefe in their outward countenance. Yea, sorrow for sinne it selfe, when as wee mourne as a man mourneth for the death of his onely sonne and first borne, doth not abate our spirituall ioy, yea in truth it doth much increase it; for this godly sorrow worketh repentance to saluation, not to be repented of, and caueth the true Christian exceedingly to reioyce, in that he can heartily grieue, because by his sinnes hee hath displeased his God. And this trembling in the sight and sense of our sinnes, and the Iudgements of God due vnto them, may, through faith assuring vs, that by Christ we are freed from them, be ioyned with inward gladnesse, according to that of the Psalmist; Serue the Lord with feare, and reioyce with trembling.

By all which it appeareth, that godlinesse doth not deprive any of ioy and gladnesse; yea rather, the more godly we are, the better right and title we haue vnto it, and may iustly exceed all others as much in mirth and cheerfulnessse, as we haue in vs more then they, the causes of all sound and solid reioycing. The which as it should perswade all who are yet vnresolved, to enter without delay, into this Christian course, that they may attaine vnto this high and excellent priuiledge, and not suffer themselves to be any longer discouraged with this vaine and false conceit, that they must leaue all their chiefest ioyes, when they leaue and forsake the pleasures of sinne: so should it moue those who haue a desire and purpose to serue and please God, to lay hold of this ioyfull priuiledge, seeing God freely offereth it vnto them, and not any longer to please themselves with their melancholike dumps, and affected sadnessse, as though they were greatest proficients in mortification, when they most exceed in lumpish heauines, which needs to be mortified as well as any other carnall affection, that in stead thereof our hearts may bee replenished with spirituall ioy. For hereby they doe not onely exceedingly discredit and disgrace a godly life, and by casting vpon it this false aspersiō of sorrow and sadness, discourage others from entring into it; but also make it to become so tedious and troublesome, harsh and vnpleasant, that they cannot proceed in it without much vncomfortableness; nor performe the duties of Gods seruice with any cheerfulnessse and delight, when as their spirits are dulled and deadened with this mournfull and dejected heauinessse. For as the Wise man hath obserued; Heauinessse in the heart of man maketh it stoope, needing no other burthen to ouerwhelme it, seeing it is pressed downe with its owne waight. And againe; A merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance, but by sorrow of the heart the spirit is broken. All the dayes of the afflicted are euill, but he that is of a merry heart, hath a continuall feast. And in another place; A merry heart doth good like a medicine, but a broken spirit dryeth the bones. Now that they may shake off this sadnessse, and raise their drooping hearts with spirituall ioy, let them consider, that sorrow and heauinessse in themselves are euill, and the fruits of sinne; and therefore are not simply acceptable vnto God, who delighteth not in the griefe and vexation of his seruants, but onely when they are sanctified, moderate moderate in their measure, seasonable in their time, placed vpon a right subiect, which can be nothing else but sinne and punishment, and directed to a right end. Secondly, that sanctified ioy is a fruit of the Spirit, and pleasing vnto God, as being a part of that seruice which hee requireth of vs in the first Table, seeing this is one way of hauing God in our hearts, when we reioyce in him; besides that, it is a meanes of all other parts of Gods worship, which cannot be well performed without ioy and cheerefulness. Thirdly, let them consider, that the Lord promiseth this ioy and gladnesse, as a singular priuiledge, and a speciall benefit vnto the faithfull, and therefore that it is great folly to refuse it when hee offereth it. Thus the Prophet saith, that in the Church shall bee heard the voyce of ioy, and the voyce of gladnesse; the voyce of the Bridegroom, and the voyce of the Bride; the voyce of them that shall say, Praise the Lord of hosts. For the Lord is good, and his mercy endureth for euer. And our Sauour hath promised, that hee will giue vnto the faithfull such constant and permanent ioy, as no man shall be able to take from the. Fourthly, that the priuation of this ioy is threatened as a punishment for sinne: Thou shalt not goe into the house of feasting, to sit with them to eate and drinke: For thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, I will cause to cease out of this place in your eyes, and in your dayes, the voyce of mirth, and the voyce of gladnesse, the voyce of the Bridegroom, and the voyce of the Bride. And againe, I will cause all her mirth to cease, her feast dayes, her new Moones and Sabbaths, and all her solemne feasts. And therefore who can please himselfe in affecting sorrow and heauinesse, which the Lord threatneth as a punishment of sinne? Fifthly, let them consider, that as mourning is a preparation to faith, and (as it were) a sorrowfull seed-time; so ioy and reioycing is the effect and fruit, the croppe and haruest of it, whereby we may try it, both in respect of the truth, and also the degree of it; for whereas there is no reioycing, there is no faith; little ioy, weake faith; and fulnesse of ioy, fulnesse also of perswasion. Neither is it possible that a man can haue assurance of Gods loue, the remission of his sinnes, and of that inestimable happinesse which is reserved in our heavenly inheritance, but that his heart must needs bee filled with ioy and reioycing. Although it cannot be denied, but that in the time of our first conuersion and humiliation, and in the case of spirituall desertions, when God hideth his face, and seemeth to withdraw from vs the testimonies of his loue and fauour; this ioy is so eclipsed, that the warmth and comfort of it is hardly to bee discerned, euen as faith it selfe, from which it springeth, is like a fire raked vnder the ashes, and not to bee perceived by sense and feeling. Finally, consider that this spirituall ioy maketh vs blessed, as not onely being it selfe full of sweetnesse and comfort, but also the first beginning, and the very entrance into the eternall ioyes of Gods Kingdome; wherewith our drooping hearts are so cheered and refreshed, that all difficulties become easie, all tediousnesse in Gods seruice is taken away, and the time that is spent therein seemeth short and pleasant. In which respect the Psalmist pronounceth that people blessed, that know the ioyfull sound, because they shall walke cheerfully in the light of Gods countenance; reioycing in his name all the day, and being exalted in his righteousness. And therefore let all those who desire to goe forward in the duties

Jer. 33. 11.

Job. 16. 24.

Jer. 16. 8.
and 23. 10.

Hos. 2. 11.

Psal. 39. 19, 16.

duties of a godly life with comfort and cheerefulnesse, labour to haue their hearts replenished with this spirituall ioy, and to scatter and dispell, as much as in them lieth, the foggy mists of sad, melancholy, and lumpish heauinesse, which maketh vs either to stand still in the wayes of godlinesse for want of this ioyfull light, or to goe forward in them slowly, and with much discomfort and wearinesse. And to this end, let them labour earnestly to liue the life of faith, which draweth from Christ all the cordials of comfort, and to bee thereby more and more assured of the remission of their sinnes, their reconciliation with God, and of the eternall saluation of their soules, which will lift yp their hearts with vnspeakeable ioy, euen when they are most deserted with worldly afflictions; and make them to goe on cheerefully in the duties of Gods seruice, when they are fully ascertained of such liberall wages, and such an inestimable recompence of heauenly rewards.

CAP. XVI.

Three other obiections of the flesh against a godly life, propounded, and answered.

6. Sect. I.

That a godly life taketh away no lawfull liberty, but rather establissheth it.

Iob. 8. 34.

THe fourth obiection which the flesh maketh against a godly life, is, that it taketh away all our liberty, and so checketh and curbeth vs in all our thoughts, words, and workes, within the strict limits of Gods Law, that wee haue no freedome like other men, to thinke, speake, or doe such things as are most pleasing vnto vs. To which I answere, that it doth not deprive vs of any lawfull liberty, but onely restraineth vs from lawlesse licentiousnesse, and curbeth in the flesh, that it may not run on in exorbitant courses, and glut it selfe with sinfull pleasures, which alwayes end in grieve and bitterness. Wherein it doth not take away any true liberty, but rather freeth vs from the most miserable and grievous bondage, and basest seruitude and thraldome vnto Satan, sinne, and our owne lusts. Yea, rather by leading of a godly life, we are restored vnto that ancient and true liberty in which we were created, euen the glorious liberty of the Sonnes of God, resembling heerein our heauenly Father, who, though he be most free to doe whatsoever pleaseth him, yet in respect of his holy and pure nature, cannot sinne, or doe any euill which is contrary vnto it. And as well may we say that the glorified Saints, who are crowned with ioy and happinesse, haue lost all their liberty, because they are so confirmed by supernaturall grace, that they cannot sinne, as that we are deprived of it, because wee are restrained by Gods Word and holy Spirit from all manner of wickednesse; or that a sonne hath lost his liberty, when hee liueth according to his Fathers will that dearely loueth him, and is freed from the gouernment of some base slaue, who egged and thrust him on in all wicked courses, which in the end would deprive him of his fathers loue, and iustly disinherite him of his desired patrimony. Yea, let vs know, that as sinne is the greatest bondage, so the seruice of God is the greatest and best liberty; when as we are stablished in all grace and goodnesse by his free Spirit, and

psal. 51. 13.

and submit our selues to be guided & directed by it in all our wayes, as the body by the soule. For as the Apostle speaketh, Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. Let vs know, that as our Sauour Christ came amongst vs to take away the sinnes of the world, both in respect of the guilt, punishment, and corruption: so also, as our Redeemer, to free vs out of bondage, and to purchase for vs perfect liberty, which is, that being deliuered out of the hands of all our spirituall enemies, we should worship and serue him in holynesse and righteousness before him without feare, all the dayes of our liues. Of which liberty himselfe speaketh; If the Sonne shall make ye free, ye shall bee free indeed. And therefore let vs not hearken to the flesh, which abuseth and deludeth vs, by giuing vnto things false names, gracing the bondage of sin and thralldome vnto our owne lusts, with the glorious title of liberty, and disgracing our Christian liberty and freedome from sinne, with the name of bondage; but knowing that this was one speciall end of Christs comming and dying for vs, that hee might destroy the workes of the deuill, and free vs out of the bondage of sinne; let vs stand fast in the libertie wherewith Christ hath made vs free, and not bee intangled againe with the yoke of bondage. And seeing he hath called vs vnto liberty, let vs not abuse it for an occasion to the flesh, as the Apostle exhorteth.

2. Cor. 3. 17.

Luk. 1. 74. 75.

Iob. 6. 36.

1. Iob. 3. 8.

Gal. 5. 1. 13.

§. Sect. 2.

That a godly life doth not take away friendship and good society, but rather increaseth it.

The fifth obiection against a godly life is, that it taketh away all familiar friendship and good fellowship, all merry meetings and ciuill conuersation from amongst men, estranging their minds one from another, and making them to delight more in solitariness then in company. To which I answer, that if by these glorious names of friendship, good fellowship, and ciuill conuersation, bee meant the common commerce which worldly wicked men haue one with another, in the workes of darkeness and pleasures of sinne, in gluttony and drunkenness, in May-games, misrule, and madde merriments, in carnall reuellings, Stage-playes, Wakes, and Morrice-dances, in swaggering, swearing, backebiting, and corrupt and filthy communication; in dycing, carding, and spending both their time and states in vnlawfull gaming; then is it no blemish or aspersion vnto a godly life, but rather an high praise and commendation, that it breaketh off such wicked and dangerous societies, and reformeth such pernicious disorders as alwayes end in griefe and vexation. But if hereby bee vnderstood true friendship, and Christian familiarity and acquaintance, lawfull meetings, and ioyfull feasting with one another in the true feare of God; then doth not a godly life abolish them, but rather confirme and increase them among all true Christians. For purging away the corruptions, and rectifying the disorders of societies and conuersation, and making them truly ciuill and religious, it causeth them to be much more comfortable and profitable, and consequently more frequently to be affected by all those who taste the sweetness and benefit which commeth of them, without any sting of sinne, or after-tang of bitter griefe. As wee see in the example of those Christians, which liued in the first age of the Primitiue Church, who tooke exceeding ioy in the Communion of Saints, in mutuall conuersing one with another, and in their frequent meetings, to eat and drinke and reioyce together. And therefore vnlesse any will presuppose, that sinne is the only bond of all good fellowship, and that that we cannot take pleasure in one anothers company, vnlesse wee ioyne together to displease and dishonour God, and that we can neuer be merry so long as he is with vs; And vnlesse we account that onely to be ciuility, whenas we shew no dislike of sinne, but soothe and bolster, yea, incourage and thrust on all that beare vs company in the wayes of wickednesse; let vs not falsly affirme, that a godly life is any hindrance to ciuill conuersation, or that it depriueth vs of the mutuall ioy and comfort, which wee might otherwise take in friendship and fellowship one with another.

A. 1. 1. 1.

§. Sect. 3.
That a godly life doth not bring with it want and po-uerty.

The sixth obiection is, that godlinesse bringeth with it want and pouerty, as appeareth first by common experience, and innumerable examples of those, who being most religious and conscionable in all their courses, come as far short of other men in worldly wealth, as they exceed and go before them in piety and honest dealing, in so much as it is growne into a common, yet wicked Prouerbe, that plaine dealing is a Jewell, but he that vseth it, shall dye a begger. And secondly, it standeth with reason that it should bee so, seeing piety letteth passe, and refuseth many aduantages, by which, those that want it, doe increase their wealth, and improoue their worldly estate. For their thoughts lesse runne vpon earthly things, being taken vp with heavenly; their indeuours are more faint and weake in pursuing them, then theirs who haue set their hearts vpon them; their time and strength is not so wholly employed in getting and keeping riches. They lose much which they might get, because they will not vse vnlawfull meanes, as fraud and deceit, extortion and oppression; because they will not lye, and confirme it with an oath for their aduantage; nor prophane the Sabbath by selling and buying, and labouring in their callings; nor keepe seruants vnder them, who make no conscience of these things, though they bee neuer so profitable, nor follow the bent of the times, and soothe euery one in their humour, of whom they may make any aduantage. And finally, because they will not stoope to euery baite of profit which is cast before them, vntill by due examination in the Court of Conscience it may appeare to bee honest and lawfull. To which I answer, first, that though all this were true, that godlinesse should giue a Supersedeas to worldly thirst, so that it were not possible to imbrace piety, and escape pouerty, or to bee rich and religious both at once; yet this should not weaken our resolution to serue God in the duties of a godly life, seeing our spirituall gaines doe farre exceed our worldly losse. For godlinesse it selfe is the chiefeest gaine, as bringing with it that contentation which all worldly wealth cannot purchase. Secondly, though being godly, we haue but a poore estate, yet it is more to bee esteemed then the greatest abundance of the vngodly; according to that of the Psalmist; A little that a righteous man hath, is better then the riches of many wicked. For the armes of the wicked shall be broken, but the Lord upholdeth the righteous. The little wealth they haue, is accompanied with Gods blessing; by which it is made more sufficient and durable for their vse and comfort, then the rich Treasuries, and full store-houses of worldlings; their little pittance, being like the Widdowes cruze of oyle and handfull of meale, which as it was daily spent, so by the blessing

1. Tim. 6. 6.

Psal. 37. 16, 17.

of God it was daily renewed and replenished, that there might bee no want, when the full barnes were emptied, and the storehouses of the rich without food; like Daniels pulse, which made him and his fellowes fatter and in better liking, then the prouision which was brought to others from the Kings Table. Finally, like the small streames of a liuing fountaine, which continue running in the greatest drought, when great standing waters, and huge torrents arising from land waters are dried vp. Againe, though the godly haue but little, yet that which they haue, they haue received from Gods owne hand, as a testimony of his loue and fauour, as Iacob acknowledged to his brother Eſau, Take, I pray thee, my blessing which is brought to thee, because God hath dealt graciously with me, and I haue enough. Yea, they receiue it from him as his free gift, and shall neuer be called with wicked men to account for intrusion and vsurpation. Neither is it a gift to bee esteemed onely in its owne value, but as an earnest-penny, which bindeth a greater bargain, and giueth them assurance of their heavenly inheritance, and euerlasting happinesse in Gods Kingdome. Finally, though they haue but little, yet they haue with it a good conscience, seeing they haue gotten it by lawfull meanes, the which will be in stead of a continuell feast, and make a dinner of cold herbes, or simple rootes, better then a stalled Oxe, or the greatest dainties to them that want it. Whereas contrarywise, the greater plenty of wicked men bringeth no such comfort with it; because it is mutable and momentary in it selfe, and giueth no assurance of better and more durable riches which shall succeed it. Because their worldly abundance is often ioyned with many and great discontents, which depriueth the owners of all their ioy, as we see in the example of Saul, Abab, Haman, and many others. Because their prosperity slayeth them, whilst it serueth as a snare, to intangle them in all maner of sins; as a pasture, to fit and prepare them for destruction; as an intoxicating cup, to bewitch and inamour them with worldly loue, and to make them neglect spirituall and heavenly things; because after their great cheere, they shall haue such an heauy reckoning as wil quite dampe all their musicke and delight. And finally, because they are no gifts of Gods loue and fauour, but rather of his clemency and forbearance; like the liberall allowance which Princes make to great and noble Traytors, vntill they be brought forth to tryall and execution, according to course and extremity of the Law.

Gen. 33. 11.

Pro. 15. 15, 17.

Pro. 1. 32.

§. Sect. 4.

That though many godly men are poore, yet godlinesse is no cause of their pouerty.

1. Tim. 4. 8.

Psal. 24. 1.

In the second place I answere, that though many are poore who are godly, yet their godlinesse is not the cause of their pouerty; seeing it onely findeth, but not maketh them to bee in this penurious estate. For when the Gospel is preached, the poore rather receiue it then the rich, seeing the little comfort which they haue in earthly things, doeth make them to seeke for it in spirituall and heavenly; whereas the abundance of the rich intangleth their hearts in the snares of worldly loue, choketh in them the seed of Gods Word, and maketh them to neglect the meanes of their saluation. Thirdly, I answere, that godlinesse is a cause and meanes of riches, and not of pouerty, seeing it hath the promises of this life, and that which is to come; and God hath vndertaken (who is able and all sufficient) seeing the earth is his, and all that therein is, and most true and infallible in

Psal. 34. 10.
 & 84. 11.

Esay 1. 17, 18, 19.

1. King. 3. 9, 11.

his Word) that nothing which is good, shall be wanting vnto those that feare and serue him; that if we will first seeke his Kingdome and righteousness, all other things shall be cast vpon vs; that he will withhold no good thing from them that walke vprightly. That if we will cease to doe euill, and learn to doe well, if we consent and obey, we shall eat the good things of the land. If indeed riches were simply our owne earnings, and could be gotten by our owne policies, care and labour, then those who exceed others in all these, might promise vnto themselves the greatest plenty, though they vterly neglect Gods seruice; but seeing it is onely Gods blessing that maketh rich, it is, not to be imagined, that the Lord, infinite in bounty and goodnesse, will be lesse liberall in paying our wages, because we are more faithfull and diligent in doing his worke. And therefore if wee feare want and pouerty, it must not discourage vs from the seruice of God, but rather be a strong motiue to make vs serue him with more earnest indeuour, seeing he will preferue those who serue him from pouerty, so farre forth as it is euill and a punishment of sinne, and will giue vnto them all temporall blessings, so farre forth as they are good and profitable. And if he scant them of these earthly trifles, it is but to fit them for the receiuing of his greater and better gifts, euen the rich treasures of his spirituall graces, faith, hope, patience and the rest, and for the euermore lasting riches and glorie of his heavenly Kingdome. For he that rewarded Salomon with peace, wealth and honour, because in the first place he desired ciuill wisdom to gouerne the people, will not deny them vnto those, who affect aboue all things spirituall Wisdom, consisting in true godlinesse; if in his diuine Wisdom, he doth see that it is better for them to haue them, then to want and be scant of them.

CAP. XVII.

Their obiection answered, who alleadge that their pouerty presseth them to such continuall labour, that they haue no leysure for the duties of a godly life.

6. Sect. I.
 That Gods Commandements bind vnto obedience both poore and rich.

He seuenth obiection is made by those who are afflicted with pouerty, and cannot, without much labour and great paines, procure necessities for the sustayning of their owne liues and those that depend vpon them. O, say they, we are so miserably poore, that vnlesse we spend our whole time in the workes of our callings, we cannot get such a small competency as is sufficient to hold life and soule together, nor food and clothing for our selues, wiues, children and families, which we must prouide for, vnlesse we would be worse then Infidels, being bound so to doe both by the Law of God and nature. And therefore hauing no spare time to spend in Religious duties, we hope that God will haue vs excused, and not impute the fault vnto vs, but to our pouerty, which necessarily constraineth vs to neglect the duties of his seruice, which if wee had time and leysure, like like other men, wee would willingly performe. To which I answer first, that the Law and commandements of God are giuen indefinitely, and generally vnto all men, the poore as well as the rich, and to all sorts of men equally and indifferently vnto obedience, without any exemption or toleration granted to any state and condition. Otherwise, if such excuses might passe for current pay, none would want pretences to slip their necks out of the yoke of obedience, seeing prosperity and plenty, as well as aduersity and penurie, doe not want their seuerall imployments, and distractions enow to hinder vs from the duties of Gods seruice, if at least we will yeeld and giue way vnto them. Secondly I answer, that the state of pouertie being sanctified vnto vs, is much more fit for the duties of Gods seruice, then that which floweth with plentie and abundance, as being lesse subiect to many potent vices and corruptions which hinder vs in them, as pride and selfe-loue, wrath and insolencie, sloth and idlenesse, intemperance, infobriety and many others.

Thirdly, pouerty doth not hinder any of Gods graces in vs: Yea, through Gods blessing, doth much further and increase them; as meekenesse, humility, patience, temperance, sobriety, watchfulnesse in prayer. Yea, it doth not make vs lesse fit for any, either in respect of the graces themselues or the practice and exercise of them; for sauing graces are not bought for money, nor lost for want of coyne to purchase them, but are the gifts of God, which he giueth freely without respect of persons, to poore and rich, if they hunger and thirst after them, according to that gracious call: No, every one that thirsteth, come yee to the waters, and he that hath no money, come yee, buy and eat, yea come buy wine and milke without money, and without price. So our Sauour Christ, If any man thirst, let him come vnto mee and drinke; he that beleueth on mee, as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow riuers of liuing water; that is, the sauing graces of his sanctifying Spirit, as he expoundeth it in the words following. Neither doth pouertie hinder the Spirituall exercise of any grace in our outward practice, no, not Christian bounty and beneficence, which God measureth not by the greatnesse of the gift, but the obedience and liberality of the giuer, For if a man hath a willing minde, hee is accepted according to that which hee hath, and not according to that which hee hath not, as in this particular case the Apostle speaketh. The which our Sauour evidently sheweth in the example of the poore, yet liberall widdow, whose two mites being all her wealth, was esteemed the greatest gift that was cast into the Treasurie. Much lesse doth pouertie hinder vs in the duties of Gods seruice, which seeing they are to be performed, not with outward pompe, but in Spirit and Truth, neede not the helpe of money and riches to further vs in them. And this the examples of all Gods Saints, who haue liued in former ages, doe evidently shew, vnto whom pouertie was no impediment to hinder them from performing vnto God any dutie of his seruice. For the poore Fishermen were no lesse diligent in all religious duties, then the wealthy Patriarches, poore

§. Sect. 2.

That pouerty hindreth not Gods graces in vs, but rather furthereth them.

Esay 55. 1.

Job. 7. 37, 38, 39.

2. Cor. 8. 12.

Job. 4. 24.

Luk. 9. 58.

6. Sect. 3.

That the more poore we are,
the more earnest we should be in Gods seruice.
1. Tim. 6. 6.

Psal. 119. 111.

Psal. 24. 1.

Psal. 23. 5.

Psal. 145. 15.

Psal. 127. 1, 2.

1. Sam. 2. 7, 8.

Pro. 10. 22.

Deut. 8. 3.

Matth. 4. 4.

9. Sect. 4.

That if being poore, we carefully serue God, we may securely cast
our selues vpon his gracious providence, and expect him to be our reward.

Lazarus, then rich Abraham; Amos an heard-man, then Esayas of the Kings stocke; Paul a poore Tent-maker, then David a rich King; yea, our Satiour Christ himselfe, as hee exceeded all others in po-uerty, liuing vpon almes, and not having a place of his owne where to lay his head; so hee exceeded all men that euer liued in piety, and in the practice of all Religious duties belonging to a godly life.

Fourthly, I answer, that the more poore wee are in our outward estate, the more intentiue and diligent should wee be in the seruice of God, and all religious exercises; that being defectiue in earthly blessings, wee may be made rich in all spirituall and sauing graces, and that wanting with Peter and Iohn, siluer and gold, wee may with them exceede in Godlinesse, which is the chiefeest Gaine, and bringeth with it the greatest contentment. Finally, that hauing no other patri-mony in lands and houses, wherein we might delight our selues, wee doe make Gods testimonies to be our heritage for euer, and the verie re-ioycing of our hearts. Fifthly, seeing the whole earth and all therein is, is the Lords, and at his disposing, to whom he pleaseth, and it is his blessing alone which maketh rich, therefore the more poore wee are, the more painefull and diligent should we be in all duties of his seruice, that he may so blesse our labours, and prosper our handy-worke, as that it may be an effectuall meanes, seruing his providence, for procuring some sufficiency of these temporall benefits.
Thus David acknowledged, that it was the Lord whom he serued, that had furnished his table. That it is he who giueth vnto all, their meate in due season, and by opening his hand, doth satisfie the desire of euery liuing thing. That except the Lord build the house, they labour in vaine; that build it; except the Lord keepe the Citie, the watchman wa-keth but in vaine; And that it is in vaine for vs to rise up early, to sit up late, and to eat the bread of sorrowes, vnlesse the Lord doe blesse our labours, as the experience of many in all times plainly sheweth, whose carking care, and restlesse labours will not afford them such necessaries, as are cast vpon others with little paynes. It is the Lord, as Hanna professeth, who maketh poore, and maketh rich, bringeth low, and lifteth up; Hee rayseth up the poore out of the dust, and lifteth up the begger from the dunghill, to set them among Princes, and to make them inherite the Crowne of glory. It is the blessing of the Lord that maketh rich, and addeth no sorrow with it, as the Wise man speaketh; and it is his powerfull Word, by which wee liue, and not by bread onely, as himselfe teacheth vs.
And therefore let vs not thinke, that by neglecting Gods seruice we shall thrise the better, or that we shall haue the more liberrall wages, because we are slothfull in doing his worke, and spend our whole time and strength about our owne.
Sixthly, though wee be poore, and haue nothing to sustaine vs and our charge, but what wee came with our dayly and painefull labour, yet if wee doe not wholly addict our selues to the world, but allot seasonable times to Gods worship and seruice, we shall not be the neerer to want and penury; yea rather, laying aside all carking care,

care, wee may securely cast our selues with full affiance vpon his prouidence and promises, and expect such a blessing vpon the labours of our hands performed in due place and time, as that neither we, nor those that belong vnto vs, shall want food, conuenient, nor any other thing that is good. For if the Lord be so gracious and bountifull, that he prouideth for strangers, who serue Satan and their own lusts, how can we imagine that he will suffer those of his owne family, who spare time from their necessary employments, that they may doe him faithfull seruice, to want and pine for hunger? If his prouidence extendeth to the Fowles of heauen, and the beasts of the field, to feed them without their care, and if hee closeth the Lillies of the field without their labour, how will he not take greater care for vs that are his household seruants, and adopted children, who moderately vse our best studie and indeuour to serue his prouidence, in providing things necessary, but so in the meane time, as that wee will, by borrowing some time from the works of our callings, rather indanger our selues to want, then we will bee wanting vnto him in spirituall duties of his seruice? Let vs then, as the Apostle exhorteth, bee carefull for nothing, but resting vpon his care and prouidence with firme affiance, let vs in all our necessities, by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving, make our requests knowne vnto God. For the Lord hath bound himselfe freely by many gracious promises, that if casting off all carking care, we trust in him, and serue him in the duties of piety and righteousnesse, hee will prouide for vs what wee stand in need of, and will not suffer vs to want any thing that is good. So the Psalmist, Trust in the Lord, and do good, so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt bee fed. Commit thy way vnto the Lord, trust also in him, and hee shall bring it to passe. O feare the Lord, ye his Saints, for there is no want to them that feare him. The young Lyons doe lacke and suffer hunger: but they that seeke the Lord, shall not want any good things. So the Wise man telleth vs, that the Lord will not suffer the soule of the righteous to famish, but hee casteth away the substance of the wicked. The which David saw confirmed in his owne experience, hauing not obserued in all his time from his youth to old age, that the righteous had beene at any time forsaken, or their seede begging their bread. And thus the Apostle Peter exhorteth vs to cast all our care vpon the Lord, for he careth for vs. The which promises the Apostle to the Hebrewes layeth as a ground of his dissuasion from couetousnesse and discontent; Let your conuersation (saith hee) be without couetousnesse, and be content with such things as ye haue: for he hath said, I will not leaue thee nor forsake thee. Seuenthly, if wee deuote our selues vnto Gods seruice & loue, as it becometh his children, in holy obedience, allotting time conuenient to religious duties, the Lord himselfe will be our wages and exceeding great reward, and he that is God all-sufficient, in the absence of all earthly helpes and meanes, will be our portion and inheritance, which who so inioy, can want nothing. And this argument the Lord vseth to incourage Abraham to serue him; Feare not, Abraham, I am thy shield, and thine exceeding great reward. And againe, I am the almighty, or all-sufficient God, walke before me, and be thou vpright. And therefore let vs lay with one of the Ancients; God alone suffi-

Mat. 6. 26, 28.

Phil. 4. 6.

Psal. 37. 3, 5.

Pro. 16. 3.

Psal. 34. 9, 10.

Pro. 10. 3.

Psal. 37. 25.

1. Pet. 5. 7.

Heb. 13. 5.

Gen. 22. 1.

Chap. 17. 1.

Dens mihi suffi-

cit, etiam si cate-

ra conuulsa fuerat

alius. Gregor.

Nazian. Cygn.

Carmin. lib.

Nimis anarus

est, cui Deus non sufficit.

Pro. 16. 8.
 & 28. 6. & 15. 16

Psal. 37. 18, 19.

1. Tim. 6. 6.

Pro. 13. 25.

§. Sect. 5.
 That the objection of po-uerty is but a frivolous and false excuse.

Esa. 26. 16.

ceth mee, although who so will take all things else besides him; for hee is too couetous whom God cannot satisfie. Eightly, if we be diligent in Gods seruice, though wee haue not so much as others, yet that little wee haue (as before I shewed) is much better then their great riches and reuenues who neglect it. According to that of the Wise man, Better is a little with righteousness, then great reuenues without right. Better is the poore that walketh in his uprightness, then hee that is peruerse in his waies, though he be rich. And, Better is a little with the feare of the Lord, then great treasures and trouble therewith. For as the Psalmist saith, The Lord knoweth the dayes of the upright, and their inheritance shall be for ever; they shall not bee ashamed in the euill time; and in the dayes of famine they shall be satisfied. And Againe, that little which the righteous haue, that feare and serue God, is better then the abundance of the wicked, who serue the world and their owne lusts; because that godlinesse which is ioyned with it, is the greatest gaine, and in the lowest estate bringeth contentation, which is a Iowell of such value, that it is aboue the purchase of all earthly riches, and cannot bee bought with the price of a monarchy. According to that of the Wise man; The righteous eateth to the satisfying of his soule, though his commons bee neuer so short; but the belly of the wicked shall want, even when he sitteth at his full furnished table. For when his appetite is satisfied, he is not satisfied, because he wanteth an appetite.

Finally, let all those know, who object their pouerty, and their continuall labours to supply their wants, as an excuse for their neglect of Gods seruice in the duties of a godly life, that it is but a false and frivolous pretence, whereby they palliat and colour their irreligious prophanesne. For they who will not serue God when they are poore, would much lesse do it if they were rich. They that will sue and seeke vnto God for helpe and succour, when they are destitute of necessities; would much more neglect him, if their storehouses were full, and their tables furnished with all plenty. They that will not call vpon the Lord when they are in trouble, nor poure forth a prayer vnto him when his chastisement is vpon him, would much more forget him and neglect this dutie in their prosperity and security from danger. And who seeth not by continuall experience, that many who haue seemed diligent and deuout in the duties of Gods seruice, in their poore and meane estate, haue afterwards beene loose and lazie, cold and negligent, when the world hath smiled vpon them, and their wealth and riches haue beene increased and multiplied? Neither in truth is pouerty, and paines to supply our wants, any hindrance to the daily and necessary duties of Gods seruice, seeing if wee order our time aright, and wisely dispose of our businesse, both of them may well stand together. For the Lord requireth not at our hands, that wee should spend the greatest part of our time in religious exercises, and neglect the duties of our callings; but onely that wee allot some small time to holy duties, and performe our honest labours in the rest, therein yeelding obedience by performing these workes, because hee hath required them. And so farre is hee off from exacting of vs monkish idlenesse, and and vacancy from all labour, vnder pretence that wee may wholly deuote our selues to religious exercises; that hie expressely forbiddeth it; and strictly requireth painfull diligence in the duties of our callings; and contrariwise condemneth sloth and negligence; adiudging those who will not labour; as vnworthy to eate, and censuring them to bee worse then Infi- deles, who by their diligence and care provide not for their family. But yet all this inferreth no necessity of neglecting religious duties, seeing there is no man so wholly taken vp with his labours; that may not finde some spare time for the duties of Gods seruice, seeing lesse is required hereunto, then he who is most diligent spendeth in superfluous sleepe, idle conferences, and vpon other needlesse and vnclesse occasions; as wee shall more fully shew in answering the next objection.

Prou. 6. 6.
and 24. 30, 31.
Pro. 27. 24.
Ephes. 4. 28.
2. The. 3. 10.
1. Tim. 5. 8.

C A P. XVIII.

Their objection answered, who pretend that their multitude of worldly employments will allow them no leisure for religious duties.

When the mind and heart are indisposed to Gods seruice, and auerse to religious exercises, the flesh will neuer want excuses to put them off, and withdraw vs from them; neither is there any estate and condition, which will not minister distractions and discouragements. For if wee be poore, it will suggest, that all our time is little enough, though it be wholly spent in our labours, that thereby we may earne and furnish our selues with things necessary for our maintenance: if we haue sufficiency and plenty of all temporall blessings, they will steale our hearts from God, and so wholly fixe them vpon earthly things, that they will finde little or no leisure for spirituall exercises. And now they haue so many things to looke vnto, the care of so many businesses lying vpon them, so many and waightry employments, for the well managing of their worldly estates, if they will not suffer all to goe to losse, and the blessings of God to perishe through their negligence; that they cannot, like others who haue little to doe, spend much of their time in religious exercises; as prayer, reading and hearing the Word; meditation and such like. Neither doe they thinke it necessary that they should so doe, seeing God will excuse, if not approoue and commend them, if they follow diligently the duties of their callings. And this carnall disposition in worldly men, our Sauour taxeth in the Parable of those vnworthy ghests, who being inuited vnto the Marriage of the Kings Sonne, pretend diuers excuses, all which are borrowed from their worldly employments. One had bought a piece of ground, and must needs goe and see it; another had bought a yoke of Oxen, and must needs goe to prooue them; another had married a wife, and could not come. Yea euen Martha herselfe, though otherwise a vertuous and religious woman, being incumbered with worldly employments, thought her neglect of hearing Christ, excused, and her sister Mary, worthy blame, because

6. Sect. 1.
 That earthly blessings are no hindrances vnto godlines, but the immoderate loue of them.

Math. 22. 2.
Luk. 14. 18, 19.
Luk. 10. 42.

Heb. 12. 1.

1. Joh. 2. 15.
Matth. 6. 24.

Pro. 23. 4, 5.

Hab. 2. 13.

Vers. 6.

Hag. 1. 6, 7, 8.

1. Tim. 6. 9, 10.

Ecc. 5. 13.

she did not ioyne with her. For the answering of which obiection, let vs first know, that Gods temporall blessings, which hee hath bestowed vpon vs, are not in themselves any causes to hinder vs from the duties of Gods seruice, but our immoderate loue of them, which makes vs forget and neglect the Authour of our good, and to misde and affect the gifts, more then the giuer. For otherwile, the greatnesse of our meanes and possessions would not, through multitude of employments, bee distractions to hinder vs from seruing God, but rather effectuall motives to perswade vs vnto it, which also being rightly and wisely managed, would afford vs better leisure for religious duties, seeing we are well provided for, though we take but moderate care, and but ordinary paines in the workes of our callings. It is not our necessary busines and employments, which so wholly rake vs vp, that we haue no time to spare for Gods seruice; but such cumberlome employments which the inordinate and immoderate loue of the world and earthly things imposeth vpon vs, that by excessiue care and labour, our state being managed to the greatest aduantage, wee may become suddenly rich. It is not the comforts of this life which hinder vs in the spirituall race, but the sinne and worldly concupiscence that doth so easily beset vs, which maketh them so waighy and cumberlome vnto vs. And therefore we must mortifie our carnall loue of earthly things, if wee would not haue them to be hindrances in spirituall exercises. For if wee doe not immoderately affect them, we shall take little pleasure, so to cumber and ouertoyle our selues in our worldly employments about them, that we can finde no time for religious duties. Let vs not inordinately loue the world, and worldly things, if we would haue the loue of the Father to abide in vs; nor deuote our selues to the seruice of the earthly Mammon, if we would haue any time to spare for Gods seruice. Let vs cease from our carnall wisdom, and not labour to bee rich, seeing riches make themselves wings, and fly away, like an Eagle towards heauen. Let not this heauie Iudgement of God be drawne vpon vs by our worldly loue, that we should take pleasure to labour in the very fire, and weary our selues for very vanity. Let vs remember, that a feareful woe is denounced against him, that toylerh himselfe to increase that which is not his, and ladeth himselfe with thicke clay; so as he cannot goe on cheerfully in the wayes of godlinesse. And that, if to multiply and heape vp this worldly pelfe, we neglect the duties of Gods seruice, he will crosse and curse our indeuours; and then wee shall see much, and bring in little; eate, but not haue enough; drinke, and not bee satisfied; clothe our selues, and not be warme; and put all the wages which we earne, into a bag with holes. For if God blow vpon it, when wee looke for much, it will come to little; or if he doe not, he will bring vpon vs a more heauy Iudgement, by suffering vs to inioy our riches, which wee immoderately loue, that we may fall into tentations and snares, and into many foolish and hurtfull lusts, which drowne men in destruction and perdition. For the loue of money is the root of all euill, which while some couered after, they haue erred from the faith, and pierced themselves thorow with many sorrowes. And this is that fore euill which Salomon obserued vnder the Sunne, namely, Riches kept for the owners thereof to their hurt. Let vs remember, that when we haue by all our toyle heaped vp riches, they shall (as the Wise man speaketh) perish by euill trauell;

travell; and he that hath most wearied himselfe by getting wealth, as he came forth of his mothers wombe naked, so he shall returne as he came, and shall take nothing of his labour, which he may carry away in his hand.

Finally, let vs know, that if we will vnder take all such employments as the world and the flesh will impose vpon vs, they will play the cruell Pharaohs, and oppresse our soules with a much more cruell seruitude then that of Egypt. For if wee doe but make mention of surceasing our labours for a while, that we may have some time to performe that seruice vnto God which he requireth, imputing this vnto vs as some idle and lazie humour, they will redouble our already too toyle some taskes, and presse such deuout purposes out of vs with their heauie burthens, and rather then we should want employment, to keepe vs from seruing God, they will cause vs to tire our selues, night and day, in gathering straw, that is, about idle vanities which will not profit, to be afterwards spent to as little purpose, namely, that vpon the foundation of riches thus scraped together, we may erect Pyramides and Towers threatening the skies, and mansion houses and stately buildings, to continue our names vnto posterity. Yea in truth, there is not in the whole world such a terrible bondage to the body vnder the most tyrannous Lords, as this is to the soule, which the flesh and the world impose vpon it. For in them it is lawfull for the slaue at some time to finde leisure for rest and sleepe, for eating and drinking, that being refreshed, hee may againe returne to his taske; whereas these more cruell tyrants weare out those soules which are imbondaged by them with toyle some labours, and yet will allow them no time for their spirituall repast, nor to refresh themselves and repair their strength by resting from their labours vpon the Lords Sabbaths, or by feeding vpon the Manna of the Word in hearing, reading, and meditation, and by sequestering themselves from earthly businesse, that they may by prayer and inuocation, solace themselves in that sweet communion which they haue with God in this holy exercise. But if wee would haue our soules to thrive in spirituall grace and strength, wee must shake off the yoke of this tyranny, and neuer bee so wholly intent to aduance our worldly estate, as to neglect the taking of our soules repast in religious exercises, according to the counsell of Hieremie to a voracious Mammon. So (saith hee) take care of thine house, as that thou doe alwayes allow some leisure and liberty to thy soule. Neither doe I say this, that I would withdraw thee wholly from thy charge; yea rather, I doe it to this end, that in this vacation from worldly businesse, thou maist learne and meditate, how thou oughtest to behaue thy selfe towards thy family and charge, when thou returnest vnto them. For howsoeuer wee must take care and paines about things concerning this life, in due time and place, yet so as we doe according to our Saviours counsell, giue the priority and precedency, both in our iudgements, affections, and practices, vnto spirituall and heavenly things, as being of farre greater waight and worth, seeking first the Kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and then temporall and earthly things in a second and inferiour place.

Neither is there any worldly businesse of like moment and importance, as by seruing God, to seeke and assure the saluation of our soules.

Verf. 11.

§. Sect. 2.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

That we must not vnder take all employments which the world and flesh will impose vpon vs.

Luk. 10. 42.

*Jeitur nemo se excuset publicis actibus, nemo de occupatione mi-litie conqueratur, &c. Auguſt.
in Pſal. 93.
Pſal. 119. 72.
Verſ. 127.*

Pro. 3. 14, 15.
& 8. 11.

Ier. 23. 28.

Phil. 3. 7, 8.

Job. 6. 27.

Mar. 8. 36.

Mat. 6. 19, 20.

*Illis vtiq; om-nes plangent, illi lugebunt, qui ita ſe curis vite pre-ſentis involuunt, ut obliſcantur
futuram, &c.
Hydrad Celant.*

ſ. Sect. 4.
That they who neglect the duties of Gods ſervice, cannot expect good ſucceſſe to their labours.
Pro. 10. 22.
Deut. 8. 18.

Hag. 1. 9.

For this, as our Sauour teacheth vs, is that one thing neceſſary, in compariſon whereof, all other things muſt be neglected, though they were of as high a nature as Martha's imployment, to giue entertainment vnto Chriſt himſelfe. Of which, if we were well perſwaded, and did eſteeme ſpiritual and heavenly things, according to their true worth, wee, who can in our greateſt imployments finde ſome ſpare time to ſpend about earthly trifles of ſmall value, would not onely be ſtreighted and ſcanted of it for religious exerciſes. Let no man (ſaith one) thinke it a lawfull excuſe to alleadge his buſineſſes of ſtate, nor complaine of his imployments in the warres; ſeeing with euery faithfull man the Chriſtian warfare ought firſt to be vndertaken. And this was Dauids iudgement, who eſteemed the Law of the Lord better vnto him, then thouſands of gold and ſiluer. The which was ſeconded by his affection; for as he profeſſeth, hee loued Gods Commandements about gold, yea about fine gold. So Salomon, or rather the eternall Wiſedome of God by him, teacheth vs to eſteeme our ſpiritual trading for the good of our ſoules, about the merchandize of ſiluer, and the gaine of godlineſſe about fine gold; ſeeing it is more precious then rubies, and all things that we can deſire, are not to be compared vnto it. So the Lord by Ieremie, reckoneth all worldly things in compariſon of this, as chaffe to wheate. And the Apoſtle eſteemeth thoſe things that were greateſt gaine vnto him, no better then dung, yea, then loſſe, for the excellency of the knowledge of Ieſus Chriſt. And therefore let vs not labour ſo much for the meate that periſheth, as to neglect for it the meate which endureth to eternall life; as our Sauour exhorteth vs; for what will it profit vs to gaine the whole world, and to loſe our owne ſoules? To get earthly treasures and riches, which the ruſt will fret and the moth eate; and to loſe thoſe heavenly and euerlaſting treasures, which are not ſubiect to any casualties? To compaſſe by our care and labour Dines his dainty fare and coſtly clothing; and by neglecting the ſeruice of God and the meanes of our ſaluation, to be caſt with him into hell, where is weeping and gnaſhing of teeth? For there (as one ſaith) they ſhall waile and lament, who haue ſo inſolded themſelues with the cares of this life preſent, as that they could find no leaſure to thinke of the life to come; whom the coming of the Lord ſhall take at vnawares, oppreſſed with the ſleepe of ignorance and carnall ſecurity.

Secondly, let all ſuch know, that neglect the duties of Gods ſervice, vnder the pretence of their great and waighy imployments, that they cannot in ſo doing reaſonably expect any good ſucceſſe of their toyleſome labours, or that they will anſwere their hopes, in the getting and preſeruing of that wealth, which they ſo much loue and long after; for it is not their moſt carefull and painefull indouours, but Gods bleſſing onely that maketh rich; It is he alone that giveth them power to get wealth. And how can they expect this bleſſing from God vpon their labours, when as they can finde no leaſure to craue it at his hands? how can they thinke that he will, notwithstanding all their paines, proſper their worldly eſtates, unleſſe it bee for a further and more ſearchfull Iudgement, when as they haue no care to ſerue and pleaſe him? Yea, why may they not juſtly feare that he will blow vpon their wealth, and cauſe it to vaniſh like ſmoake, and euen to melt like butter in the Sunne; or cauſe that riches, which is thus wickedly wickedly gotten, by neglecting all duties of Gods seruice, to bee as wickedly spent by their heires and successours, seruing vnto them as inducements and helps to further them in all riotous and luxurious courses, to their ruine and destruction, as the getting of them hath beene the cause and occasion of many fearefull finnes, and of the vitter neglect of all religious duties, that so both they and their heires, though they runne contrary wayes, may yet meeete together in hell and condemnation. Let them also know, that if before they goe about the workes of their callings, they would renew their Couenant with God, by renewing their faith and repentance; and so being reconciled, vndertake their employments with peaceable minds and good consciences; if they would first call vpon the Lord for his blessing vpon their labours, and resigne themselves and all their affaires to the gracious guidance of his good providence; If they would propound his glory, as the mayne end of all their labour, and as they liue the life of faith, so also they would labour in the strength thereof; resting vpon Gods gracious promises, and waiting for a blessing vpon all their affaires; if they would sanctifie their workes by the Word and Prayer, without which, euen those things which are in their owne nature pure and honest, become impure and prophane to the irreligious and vnbeleeuers, and desire the assistance of his holy Spirit for the directing of all their labours to a right end; Finally, if they would by all these religious exercises sharpen their tooles before they goe to worke, they should not heereby finde their labours put backe and hindered, but profitably aduanced, and better archieued, then if they vndertake them being blunt and dull; seeing by the sharpnesse of the instruments, they shall soone redeeme the time which is spent in whetting them. Neither would this hinder our Christian thrift, nor our godly and lawfull gaines, but much further and increase them; and repaire all wee lose, by that time which wee spend in Gods seruice with much aduantage, through his powerfull blessing vpon our labours, from which Fountaine alone, all lawfull prosperity springeth and floweth. Whereas contrarywise, if neglecting these religious duties of Gods seruice, wee rest vpon our owne paines and providence, and as the Prophet speaketh, sacrifice vnto our owne nettes, either God will curse and crosse our labours; and frustrate all our hopes, or if wee thrive by them in our worldly estates, all that wee get by this meanes, shall bee but like Naboths Vineyard to Ahab, which rooted out both him and all his posterity; like the Israelites Quayles, which came out of their nostrils; like Indas his sop, with which the deuill entred; or like cold water, given to gratifie those who are sicke of a burning feauer; seeing it but inflameth the heate of their carnall concupiscence, and prepareth matter for their euermore burning in the vnquenchable flames of hell fire.

Thirdly, let them know, that the duties of our particular callings, must give place to the generall calling of Christianity, when as both of them (as they ordinarily may) will not stand together. For by these duties we draw neere vnto God, and haue communion with him, and no calling must call vs from God, or withdraw vs from this blessed fellowship. They are obscure don

ED

1. Tim 4.5.

1. Cor. 10.31.

Thy on if looks before to work
of the prophane
of

Thy on if not
Hab. 1.16. to fore

§. Sect. 5.

That the duties of our particular callings, must give place to the generall calling of Christianity.

are the spirituall repast of our soules, by which they get spirituall strength, and liue the life of faith; and therefore if wee so highly prize the health and life of our bodies, that wee thinke no businesse so important, that should make vs neglect the meanes of preserving them, as eating, drinking, resting, sleeping, and such like; why should wee imagine any to bee so waighy and necessary, as that for the following of it, wee should neglect the health and welfare of our precious soules? Let vs consider, that our callings were made for vs, and not we for our callings; for our good and benefit, and not for our hurt and ruine; for the glorifying of God, and furthering of our saluation, and not for his dishonour, by neglecting his seruice, and like snares to intangle vs, that wee cannot proceed in such holy duties, as will make our calling and election sure. When two things come together, which differ in their degrees of excellency and necessity, we can easily resolve, in earthly things to giue priority and precedency vnto that, which exceedeth the other in worth and vse. O would wee could bee thus wise in this case; and seeing spirituall and heavenly things, and employments about them, which tend to the euermore saluation of our soules, doe as much exceed our earthly affaires, as heaven, earth, and those things which are permanent and euermore, such as are momentary and of short continuance; I would wee could be so wise for our owne good, as to giue those duties which excell, the first place and preheminance. God hath so graciously respected our infirmity and weakenesse, that whereas hee might haue challenged the greatest part of our time for his immediate seruice, as being aboue all other employments most honourable and profitable, hee is content that wee should consecrate vnto him one day of seuen, and one or two houres of euery day, out of foure and twenty, or some small part of the Morning and Evening, leauing vnto vs all the rest for our businesses and employments, which respect the good of our bodies and estates. And being left so rich, will wee yet steale? will wee incroach vpon Gods right, who hath dealt so bountifully with vs, and leaue him nothing, that deserueth all? Doe wee thinke it absurd to neglect the duties of our particular callings all the weeke, vnder pretence of spending our whole time in religious exercises, as hearing the Word, Prayer, Meditation; and yet imagine it to bee an excuse which will passe for currant, if neglecting all duties of Christianity, which are much more excellent and necessary, wee can say for our selues, that wee are so wholly taken vp with worldly employments, that wee can spare no time at all for holy duties? Yea, doe wee thinke it vnequall, that the duties of piety and Religion should incroach a little vpon that long time which is allotted to the duties of our callings; and shall these spoile the other of their right, seeing they haue ordinarily such scant allowance, though they bee in their nature much more excellent, and to vs more profitable and necessary? O let not the world and our owne carnall loue of earthly vanities so much besot vs; but let vs as willingly and cheerefully allow that short time required to religious duties, which aduance our spirituall estate, enrich vs with sauing graces, preserve our soules in good plight and liking, further our saluation, and assure vs of heavenly and euermore happiness;

nesse; as wee doe a farre longer time to worldly employments about our corruptible bodies, and fickle estates, and the compassing of such earthly things, as in comparison are vaine and of no worth, and in respect of their durableness and continuance, momentany and mutable. And if at any time we be brought into such straights of time, that the one of necessity must giue place to the other, let those exercises which are of the more noble nature, haue the precedencie; and being much more excellent in worth, and yet bounded with much narrower limits of time, let the better be preferred before the worse, and that which is onely poorer in time, borrow from that which out of its plenty hath more to lend. Wherein wee haue the poore shepherds for our examples and precedents, who neglected their sheepe, to seeke and finde out their Sauour; In Mary, who spared time from her worldly, though weighty employments, that she might nourish her soule with the bread of life; and in our Sauour Christ himselfe, who being scanted of time, for the publique duties of his calling in preaching the Word and working miracles; yet rather chose to borrow time from his rest and sleepe, then he would neglect the Religious duty of priuate prayer.

Luk. 3. 15.

Luk. 10. 40.

§. Sect. 6.

That we haue time sufficient for Religious and ciuill duties, if it be wisely husbanded.

Fourthly, let vs consider, that we are not ordinarily thrust into such straights, but that if we will, we may easily finde some conuenient time for both sorts of duties, those which are religious belonging to Gods seruice, and those which are ciuill, about our ordinary callings. Neither is there any vocation so laborious, which if it be wisely followed, will not affoord some fit time for holy exercises. For tell me, thou who complaynest of thy little leisure, and thy short time for thy great employments, if thou be so niggardly thrifty in expending it, that thou hast none to spare from the workes of thy calling to any other vse or purpose; Doe st thou not borrow from them, so much as would serue religious duties, not one houre in the foure and twenty, to be deuided betwene thy morning and euening deuotions? Doe st thou, who complaynest of this waste, in that time which is bestowed vpon Christ and the duties of Gods seruice, spend much more vpon thine own lusts and sinfull pleasures, either in superfluous sleepe, or complementall inuitations or visitations, or in vaine disports and vnprofitable pastimes, or in fruitlesse, if not carnall & corrupt communication and idle chat, or sitting longer at thy meales then either health or profit, necessity or ciuility doth require? And is thine hap so hard, that thou art at liberty for all other purposes, and art only pinched in the straits of time, when thou shouldest spare a little for Gods seruice, and the eternall well-fare of thy precious soule? Surely if this be thy case, thy state is miserable; for he that wanteth time for Gods seruice, will also want it for his own saluation. He that can finde no time for the Lords worke, shall neuer haue time to receiue his wages. He that can finde no leisure to enrich his soule with spirituall grace, shall thereby also lose the opportunity of attayning vnto heauenly glory. Doe not then for shame abuse thy selfe any longer with so vaine an excuse, as though thou couldest finde in thine heart to be godly and religious, if thou couldest finde any time for

Eeee

for religious exercises. For either thou must confesse, that thou spendest no time worse, or acknowledge thy folly in not preferring the better: either that the duties of Gods seruice, which concerne his glory, & thine own saluation, are lesse excellent and necessary then any of thine ordinary employments, or else that thou art as vnwise as prophane, in spending so thy whole time in those, as that the other for want of time should be quite excluded. But rather learne wisely to deuide thy selfe and leisure between them, allotting constantly to either their due portion, and thou shalt finde conuenient time both for religious and ciuill exercises; & when thy spirituall man, like Mary, hath chosen the better part, let not the flesh by its murmuring pull thee from it. And if the duties of our callings importune vs for a greater allowance of time, that we may dispatch them, let vs not incroach vpon Gods right, and rob our soules of that leysure and liberty which is required to spirituall exercises, but let vs rather borrow it from our flesh, which may better spare it; as either from our superfluous sleepe, or vaine pastimes, or fruitlesse discourses, or some other thing as worthlesse and vnprofitable. And if wee haue not yet time enough for our multitude of employments, our best course is to imitate wise Pilots and Mariners, who will lighten their shippe of some part of her lading, that they may saue the rest and best part of their goods from danger of sinking. And like wise trauaylers, when wee finde our selues ready to faint vnder our burthen, let vs cast away the refuse which may best be spared, that wee may bring our chiefe treasures and choysed iewels to our iourneyes end. For if our Sauour Christ would haue vs to forsake father and mother, wife and children, yea euen our owne liues, rather then they should hinder vs from being his Disciples; If he would haue vs to pluck out our eyes, and cut off our right hands, if they offend vs, and hinder our journey to heavenly happines, because it is better that some of our members should perish, then that the whole body should be cast into hell: then how much rather should we cast off some of our worldly busineses, when they so encumber and turmoyle vs, that they allow vs no leysure for spirituall exercises, nor to performe those religious duties, which being neglected, depriue vs of all assurance of eternall saluation?

Finally, let those who excuse their neglect of Gods seruice, by pretending their multitude of important busineses, which allow them no leysure for Religious exercises, know and remember, that the Lord exempteth none, no, not Kings themselues, from performing of them, whose employments notwithstanding exceede those of other men, both in weight and number, as hauing not onely the charge and burthen of their owne families, but of the whole Church and Common-wealth lying vpon them. For euen they are commanded to haue with them continually the Booke of Gods Law, and to reade and meditate therein all the dayes of their life, that they may learne to feare the Lord their God, and to keepe all the Words of his Law and his Statutes, to doe them. Let them also consider the care of Gods seruants in all ages, to yeeld vnto him this seruice and obedience. So that though their busineses and employments haue beene neuer so manifold and weighty, yet when

Luk. 14. 26.

Matth. 5. 29.

6. Sect. 7.
That none are exempted by God from the duties of his seruice, vnder pretence of any other businesse.

Deut. 1. 17, 18, 19.

when they haue bene most encumbred; they euer found time sufficient for the Religious duties of Gods seruice. Who euer had more, and more weighty imployments then Iosua, both in warre and peace; as hauing not onely a Kingdome to conquer, and many mighty and warlike enemies to subdue; which was afterward to be deuided amongst all the tribes, but also a stiffnecked people vnder his government, vnto whom, vpon all weighty occasions he wast to administer iustice. And yet, as the Lord charged him, that the Booke of the Law should not depart out of his mouth, but that he should meditate therein day and night, that he might obserue to doe according to all that was written therein; so did he answerably yeeld his obedience, professing before all the people, that though they should all neglect these duties, yet he and his household would serue the Lord. Who could spare lesse time then holy Daniel from his important imployments, both in warre and peace? And yet all this could not hinder him from Religious exercises, but vpon all occasions he meditated in Gods Law both day and night, and thrice in the day at least, did in a set and solemne manner call vpon him; besides his often prayers and prayes vpon speciall occasions. Who could haue lesse leysure then Daniel, that hauing the care of managing the chiefe affaires of a mighty Monarchy imposed vpon him, had all his actions so curiously scanned by his many, mightie, and malicious enemies, that small negligences would haue bene aggravated against him as great faults? And yet notwithstanding all these busineses of State, and those that concerned his owne particular, he could thrice a day sequester himselfe from them all, and in a solemne manner deuote himselfe to the Religious duties of Gods seruice. Yea, was there euer any man so seriously employed, in such important affaires of his publique calling, as our Sauour Christ, so as he could scarce spare any time from his preaching, working miracles, and such diuine exercises, for the releeuing of his body, and satisfying of his hunger? And yet rather then hee would want time for his priuate prayers and deuotions, hee borrowed some from his sleepe. And therefore, vnlesse we would not be numbred among the faithfull, let vs follow their examples; If wee would be esteemed Christs Disciples, let vs imitate his practice, and not thinke our selues excused in the neglect of Religious duties by our worldly busineses, which are incomparably lesse in number, and lighter in value and true worth, then those wherein many of Gods Saints and seruants haue bene dayly employed, from which notwithstanding they borrowed time sufficient for spirituall exercises. The which admonition, as it generally concerneth all Christians of euery calling; so especially Students and Professours of Diuinity, who are more apt then others, to excuse their neglect of Christian practice in pious & Religious duties, because they are so wholly taken vp with their studies and speculations, that they haue little or no leysure for the other: The which they thinke not only iustificable, but also commendable, because their mindes are continually exercised in the theory and speculation of religious objects, and in diuine studies and

Ios. 1. 8.

Ios. 24. 15.

Psal. 88. 1. &
119. 55. 62.
Psal. 55. 17.
& 119. 64.

Dan. 6. 10.

Luk. 6. 12. &
21. 37.

1. Cor. 7.
1. Cor. 7. 1.
1. Cor. 7. 2.
1. Cor. 7. 3.
1. Cor. 7. 4.
1. Cor. 7. 5.
1. Cor. 7. 6.

contemplations. But such are to know, that nothing more hindreth the Religious practice of Christianity, then when we spend our time, and suffer our selues to be wholly taken vp with iclune speculations, & such studies as are onely mentall: Because being exercises and labours of the minde and soule, they toyle and tyre it, and so spend all the vertue and vigour of the powers and faculties belonging vnto it, and waste and exhaust the spirits, that no strength remayneth for practique duties, nor any ability to performe any exercises of Religion and deuotion. Yea, aboue all other imployments, they most alienate the minde, and withdraw the heart and affection wholly from them. For whereas those who are exercised about bodily labours, as riding, trauiayling, working in their arts and trades, plowing and such like, may often haue leysure, without any great distraction, to lift vp their hearts vnto God in short Prayers & Meditations, in praying God, and singing Psalmes, not for custome, but for conscience sake, not to make themselues merie and passe the time with lesse tediousnesse, but out of a pure desire to glorifie God; or to enterraine one another with Religious discourses and holy conferences; those whose mindes are taken vp with literall studies and speculations, can no more intend the spirituall exercises of Christian deuotion, then they can at the same time suppe and blow, because the powers of the minde being finite, cannot intend many things at once. The which (as I thinke) is a chiefe cause, why the acutest Schoolemen and greatest & most learned Doctors in high mysteries and curious speculations, are oftentimes most cold in deuotion, and most negligent in the practice of holy duties, although they are able to teach them vnto others.

CAP. XIX.

Their obiection answered, who excuse their neglect of Religious duties, under pretence that the times and places wherein they liue, are full of corruption.

§. Sect. 1.

That the corruption of the times is a strong temptation to withdraw vs from godlinesse.

MAny other are the obiections, which the flesh maketh to hinder vs from the profession of piety, and the practice of it in the duties of a godly life. And first, it is ready to object, that the times and places in which we liue, and the persons with whom we dayly conuerse, are so corrupt and fmsfull, that it is almost impossible we should liue so strictly, as it were otherwise to be wished, and not be tainted and infected with the common corruptions. For the occasions of sinning are so ordinarie and manifold, the prouocations pressed vpon vs by wicked worldlings so strong and forcible, the euill examples which are dayly before our eyes, so hurtfull and pernicious, as powerfully drawing vs to imitation; the neglect and contempt of sincerity and piety, and the practice of it in the duties of a godly life, so vsuall and almost vniuersall, that he who resolueth to take a different and contrarie course, then that which is imbraced and applauded by the multitude, must seeme to go alone, & to tire and spend his strength in vaine, by by swimming against the streame, and rowing (as it were) against the winde and tyde: Yea, by liuing innocently, and obseruing iustice and righteounesse in all his dealings, what shall he gaine hereby, but expose himselfe to become a prey, as the Prophet speaketh: Besides, with what great discouragements shall the godly meete in such times and places? How are they wondred at and pursued like Owles by little birds? How shall they bee crossed in all their preferments, though they deserue neuer so well, because they doe not follow the current of the times; and make conscience of taking those corrupt courses, and vsing those vnlawfull meanes whereby others rise? How shall they bee malignd and reproched, opposed and persecuted, if they refuse to run on with others into the same excessse of riot? To which I answer, that it cannot be denyed, but that these are strong tentations, and great discouragements which hinder many from the profession of Religion, and the practice of it in Christian duties. The which our Sauour himselfe implyeth, where hee saith, that because in the latter times iniquity shall abound, the loue of many shall waxe cold; And the Apostle likewise, where he calleth the last dayes perilous times in regard of those manifold & enormous sins which should then raigne. For as it is a difficult thing in a generall plague, when men draw in dayly the infected ayre, to continue sound and healthy; so is it no lesse hard in the common corruption of life and manners, to continue in our integrity and holinesse of conuersation. But yet howsoeuer hypocrites and time-seruers stumble and fall at this stone of offence, for want of Christian resolution, and because they loue the things of this present life, better then spirituall grace or heavenly glory, yet the faithfull must not be daunted and dismayed with these discouragements, seeing our Sauour hath fore-warned them to expect no other, and so fore-armed them against they come. Yea, he hath prouided cordials of comfort against these cold qualmes of earthly calamities, and as he hath foretold the worlds rage and malice against vs, so he hath put courage into vs, by assuring vs that he hath overcome the World. As hee hath taught vs that the way is narrow, & the gate straight that leadeth to happines, and that by many tribulations we must enter into the Kingdome of heauen: so hee hath done it not to this end, that we should straine courtesie, and pretend excuses of difficulty, but to arme our resolution, and to make vs strue to goe in this way, and to enter into this gate, because if wee cannot deny the world and our selues also, we cannot be his Disciples, nor euer raigne with him, vnlesse wee are also willing to suffer with him. Againe, the Lord hath giuen vs expresse charge, that we should not regard a multitude to follow them in euill; that wee should save our selues from this vntoward generation; that when we see the vnfruitful works of darkness, we should not thereby take occasion to haue fellowship with them, but rather reprove them, that when our waies are layd full of the snares of sinne, wee looke the better to our footing, and walke so much the more circumspectly, not vsing the euilnesse of the dayes, as an inducement vnto sinne, but rather of redeeming the time, by doubling our diligence in all Christian duties. And as those who liue in infecti-

Esa. 59. 15.

Matth. 24. 12.

2. Tim. 3. 1.

Iob. 6. 33.

Acts 14. 22.

2. Tim. 2. 12.

Exod. 23. 1.

Abi. 4. 40.

Eph. 5. 11, 12.

Perse 16.

ous places, doe not (if they be wise) grow carelesse and desperate, but vse rather their best preseruatiues to keepe out the pestilent ayre, and the best dyet they can to keepe them in health: so must we vse the like care for our soules in the like case. Which if we neglect to doe, wee shall evidently declare, that what shew foerer wee make to the contrary, the times and wee are well agreed, and that there is not much lesse corruption within vs, then we see without vs, so that vnlesse God should change our hearts, we would not by the change of the place and company be much changed.

6. Sect. 2.
That though it be hard to flesh & blood to liue religiously in corrupt times, yet
it is possible, yea easie to the regenerate.

It is indeede, in respect of flesh and blood, an hard thing, and almost impossible, to liue as Lambes among Wolues, and to retayne the sweetnesse of innocency, when like that Riuer which histories speake of, wee run thorow a salt sea of worldly wickednesse: but what is impossible to nature, is possible to grace, and much more to the God of all grace and goodnesse, who hath promised to assist and to establish vs in euery good worke, when once wee are thorowly resolu'd to vndertake it. And this appeareth in the examples of the faithfull in all ages, who though they haue necessarily liued amongst the wicked, and thereby haue bin endangered to all the former tentations and incumbrances, that haue not beene drawne hereby to follow the times, and to imitate the examples of wicked men, but haue continued constant in their holy profession, and religious practice of all the duties of piety and righteousnesse. Thus Enoch walked with God, and Noah continued in his vprightnesse, though almost all the world followed their owne sinfull lusts, and liued in all wickednes and sensuality: So Lot in Sodom, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob amongst the Canaanites, Ioseph, David, Nehemiah, Obadiab, Mordecai, Hester and Daniel, retayned their sincerity and integrity, though they liued in the wicked and profane courts of Pharaoh, Saul, Artaxerxes, Ahab, Ahasuerus and Nebuchadnezzar. And the Apostle sendeth salutations from the Saints that liued in Nero his household, though like the master it abounded with all manner of outrageous wickednesse. And the reason is, because those who are regenerate, haue a new nature begun in them, which being spirituall & heauenly, cannot suffer, or receiue alteration from things which are of an inferiour nature, no more then spirituall substances can suffer of corporall, or heauenly bodies, of those that are elementary. And though the flesh and part vnregenerate lyeth open to the tentations of the deuil and the world, & may easily be allured to any sinne, yet so farre forth as wee are renewed, wee resist them and cannot sinne, because it is contrary to this spirituall nature, and the Spirit of God dwelling in vs, which is the Author of it, according to that of the Apostle Iohn; Whosoever is borne of God, doth not commit sinne, for his seede remaineth in him, and he cannot sinne, because he is borne of God. And therefore as the fish retaineth his freshnesse in the salt waters, and the hot baths their warmth, though they be inclosed with the cold earth: so the faithfull, so farre forth as they are regenerate and renewed, retaine their piety and godlinesse of conuersation, even when they be encompassed on all sides with wicked worldlings, although their society and

Phil. 4. 22.

1. Iohn 3. 9.

and examples are exceeding dangerous prouocations vnto all sinne and wickednesse, in respect of their flesh and vnregenerate part; the one being like fire, the other like gunpowder, or some combustible matter; especially when such familiarity and society is not necessary, but of free choyce, seeing it is iust with God, that those who loue temptation should fall into it. Otherwise, the faithfull may retaine their sincerity and piety in the midst of a froward generation; yea if necessary, and not their voluntary election thrust them into such times and places; they may not only goe on in their Christian course, but euen in the most euill dayes redeeme the time, by redoubling their diligence in all pious duties of Gods seruice, as the Apostle implyeth. And this we see in the example of the holy Martyrs in the times of persecution, who haue redoubled their zeale and deuotion in Gods seruice, when none almost did beare them company, but all the world opposed against them, and did hold in their view a quite contrary course. Thus Elias his zeale was not cooled and quenched by the idolatry and prophaneesse of those times, but much intended and increased. And Dauid, when he saw the euill examples of transgressors, was not drawne hereby to imitate them, but was the more consumed with his zeale, because they had forgotten Gods Law. Thus Pauls seruency of deuotion was more inflamed, when hee saw the superstition of the Athenians. And thus was our Saviour Christ consumed with zeale of his Fathers glory, when as he saw his Temple prophaned, and true Religion neglected and contemned.

Act. 2. 40.

1. King. 18.

Psal. 119. 139.

Act. 17. 16.

Iob. 2. 17.

§. Sect. 4.

A note of difference betweene true zeale and deuotion, and that which is false and hypocriticall.

So that heere we may haue an vndoubted and infallible signe, whereby we may know whether our zeale and deuotion be true and sincere, or false and hypocriticall; for if they be vpright and in truth, they will not be lost in euill places and times; if they be substantiall, and (as it were a new nature) and not meere shewes and shadowes, they will still retaine it, and being of superiour vertue, will strue against and overcome these corruptions of the times, which are contrary to them. Whereas if they yeeld vnto them, and become prophane with the irreligious, neglecting all Christian duties, because they liue with those who doe neglect them; it is hereby manifest, that there was neuer any true change in their nature, but onely some accidentall alteration for worldly respects. Though cold water be made neuer so hot, yet the heat of it will soone be abated, when it is taken off the fire, and compassed about with the cold ayre, and becommeth more cold then it was at the first. And though the Iron being heat in the Forge, is much more hot and scorching then the fire in other combustible matter, yet being put into the water, or cast vpon the ground in the cold ayre, it becommeth more cold then either of them; because in this alteration there is no change of nature, but onely of the quality by outward accident. But contrariwise, the fire which is naturally hot, and the Bath which is naturally warme, are not cooled by the cold winter ayre which doth incompasse them. Yea by this antiparistasis and inclosure, their naturall quality being kept in and better compacted, is intended and increased, so that the fire which but moderately heateth in milde weather, scorcheth in cold frosts: and the Bath, which is but temperately warme in summer, euens smoketh and scaldeth with heate in the cold winter, because this heate is naturall, and no aduentitious quality. And so the religion and deuotion of hypocrites, being no kindly heate proceeding from a renewed nature, is quickly cooled in the company of the worldly and prophane, and returneth to more then natural coldnesse; whereas the seruor of true Christian deuotion is not abated, but rather increased, when they liue in corrupt times and sinfull places, because proceeding from a new nature, the inherent vertue and vigour of it, vniting it selfe together to withstand all contrary opposition, is better compacted and becommeth more strong and preualent. So that those euill examples which corrupt others, doe but the better arme their resolution to withstand them, and make them striue with more earnestnesse and deuotion, to fly such sinnes as they see committed, and to put in practice the contrary duties. And as the Ostrich turneth Iron it selfe, which would kill other creatures, into wholesome nourishment; and as some beasts and birds do conuert Spiders, and other poysons into cordials and and restoratiues, which are deadly and pernicious vnto other liuing things of a different nature: so Gods children, which are renewed and regenerate by his holy Spirit, are not onely nourished and strengthened with their ordinary food; as hearing the Word, prayer, holy conferences and good company; but through Gods Spirit assisting them, are able to turne euill Iron ages into good nourishment, and the poyson of euill examples into cordials and preseruatiues, to strengthen them the more against common corruptions and raigning sinnes. And therefore to excuse our neglect of Christian duties belonging to a godly life, because we liue in euill places and times, what is it, but to proclaime that we are like vnto them, and are not yet regenerate by Gods Spirit, nor changed in our natures, but still remaine in the state of corruption, and consequently lyable to death and condemnation?

CAP. XX.

Diuers other obiections made by the flesh against a godly life, propounded and answered.

§. Sect. 1.
That it is not enough to liue harmlesly, vnlesse we per-forme religious duties.

Nother obiection which the flesh maketh against the strict performances of Christian duties, is, that it is vnecessary, seeing if we be harmlesse, and not guilty of hainous sinnes; as idolatry, blasphemy, murther, adultery, drunkennesse, theft, and such like, but liue honestly amongst our neighbours, doing no man any hurt, and in good fame and name in the world, the Lord will accept of vs, and beare with our infirmities, though wee be not so precise as many others, in performing the duties of a godly life, as they haue been before described. To which I answer, that the Lord will neuer accept of vs as his seruants and children, if wee doe not at least desire, resolute and indeuour to yeeld vnto him intire obedience to his whole Law, as well by doing the duties which he hath commanded, as in leauing vndone the vices which he hath forbidden; and that this obedience chiefly consisteth rather in performance of that which is good, then in abstinence from that which is euil; & that if to be harmlesse and innocent, cent, were all that is required to Christianis, then were wee best Christians when we sit idly still, rather then when wee are in action, yea though we should sleepe out our whole liues, because then wee are furthest off from doing any hurt. But let vs consider that God requireth seruice at our hands, and he is counted but a sorry seruant, who receiuing meate, drinke, and wages, doth content himselfe if he doe his Master no harme, though he neuer indenuour to doe him any good. That the axe is set to the root of the tree, to cut it downe, that it may be cast into the fire, if it bringeth not forth good fruit, though it should beare none that is euill; and the barren trees must be hewne downe and cast out of the Lords Vineyard, because it doth but dumber the ground. That we must be not onely trees of innocency, but trees of righteousness, if we be of Gods planting, which are distinguished from euill trees destinated to the fire, not by bearing nothing, but by bringing forth good fruit. Let vs remember, that the Fig-tree was cursed by our Saviour, not because it had vpon it figs, like those in one of Jeremies baskets, which were so very naughty, that they could not be eaten they were so bad; but because it had none at all, when Christ purposely came to finde some vpon it. That the vnprofitable seruant is by his Lord reputed an euill seruant, and adiudged to punishment, for not increasing his Masters Talent, though he had not mis-spent it in riotous liuing. And that the sentence of condemnation shall passe against those, who neglect to doe the workes of mercy to Christs poore members, though they neuer oppressed or wronged them. Finally, let vs know that they deceiue themselves, who dreame of a meane betwene not doing good, and doing euill; for if we be not on Gods side, wee are against him; if we giue not with Christ, we scatter abroad: neither can wee sooner cease to doe euill, but presently we begin to doe that which is good.

Again, it is ready to object, that if it be not sufficient to abstaine from euill, and from grosse and hainous sinnes, but that wee must also performe the contrary duties, yet at least it is not necessary that we should be tyed so strictly vnto all duties of holinesse and righteousness which God requireth; or if to all, yet not at all times, but that it is enough, if wee performe some good duties, either towards God, or our neighbours, though wee neglect others, and that wee bee at some times zealous and deuout, though at other times we take our liberty, and ease our selues of this hard taske, by taking our pleasures, seeing as long as wee liue in this world wee cannot be Saints, but must liue like other men, as being alike fraile and full of infirmities. To which I answer, that euery in this life, we must be of the communion of Saints, if euer we meane to communicate with them in glory and happinesse; and howsoeuer corruption of nature and humane frailties hang vpon vs, yet we must not willingly nourish them, and cheerfully obey the flesh in the lusts thereof; for if we liue after the flesh, we shall dye; but we must labour through the Spirit, to mortifie the deeds of this body of sinne, that we may liue, as the Apostle teacheth vs. And although we cannot, by reason of the law of the members, and the sinne that hangeth vpon vs, yeeld vnto the Law that perfect and strict obedience which it requireth: for in many things we sinne all; yet if euer we would haue any sound comfort in the gracious promises of the Gospell, wee must yeeld

Math. 3. 10.

Luk. 13. 7.

Esa. 61. 3.

Luk. 8. 44.

Jer. 24. 2.

Math. 21. 19.

Math. 25. 30.

Mat. 25. 41, 42.

Luk. 11. 23.

Esa. 1. 16.

§. Sect. 2.

That it is not sufficient to serue God in some things, and at some times, and in other things, and at other times.

Rom. 8. 13.

1am. 3. 2.

vnto

Eph. 4. 22, 23, 24

Psal. 119. 6, 20.

1. Tim. 2. 2.

Amos 5. 21,

22, 24.

Amos 6. 6, 8.

1. Cor. 13. 3.

1. The. 2. 10.

Luk. 1. 74, 75.

§. Sect. 3.

Their obiection answered, who pretend that they haue outgone many others.

vnto God the obedience of sonnes, which consisteth in an earnest desire, full resolution, and diligent induour to please our heavenly Father, by framing our liues according vnto his will in all things, and at all times. We must put off (as much as in vs lieth) the whole old man, with all his corrupt and deceitfull lusts; and being renewed in the spirit of our mindes, we must put on the New man, which after God, is created both in righteousness and true holinesse. Wee must haue with David, respect vnto all Gods Commandements, and leade our liues both in godlinesse and in honestie. For though wee be neuer so deuoute and zealous in religious duties, yet if we doe not ioine with them the duties of charity and righteousness, God will reiect vs, as being no better then hypocrites; according to that of the Prophet, I hate, I despise your feast dayes, and I will not smell in your solemn assemblies. Though yee offer me burnt offerings, and meate offerings, I will not accept them; For But let iudgement run downe as waters, and righteousness as a mighty streame. So the Lord professeth, that hee would not be pleased with thousands of Rams, or ten thousand riuers of oyle, no, not with the first borne of their body, for the summe of their soules, vnlesse also they would doe iustly, and loue mercy. And though we be neuer so iust in our dealings, and so bountifull, that wee could bee content to giue all our goods to the poore, yet if it bee not ioined with piety and charity, and doe not proceed from sauing knowledge and a liuely faith; true obedience, and a good conscience, it is all worthe nothing, and no better then glorious sins in Gods sight. And therefore if we would haue our seruice accepted, we must, according to the Apostles example, liue both holily towards God, and iustly and vblameably towards men. If we would approoue our selues to be the redeemed of the Lord, we must serue him in holinesse and righteousness before him; and that not by fits and flashes, but all the dayes of our liues. But of these points I haue spoken before at large, when I intreated of integrity and constancy, the inseparable properties of a godly life; and therefore referre the Reader to that place.

Furthermore, being deluded with the flesh, we are ready to obiekt, that though we haue not attained to that perfection which were to be desired, yet we are forward enough in the course of Christianity, seeing wee haue outrunne many others, although there are many also who are farre before vs. For answer whereof we are to know, that he who thinketh that he hath proceeded farre enough, hath not as yet set one foot forward in the Christian Race; and though we had made some good progresse, yet if wee now stand still, and doe not continue running till wee come to the goale, wee shall neuer obtaine the Garland. And therefore, imitating runners who strue for a prize, we must not looke so much to those whom wee haue outrunne, as to those that are still before vs, that wee may overtake, and get before them to the marke; seeing if wee stand still, and rest in that which we haue already done, he that is furthest behind, & yet continueth running, will soone ouertake vs, & get the Garland from vs. We must not please our selues in our good proceedings, and runne no more; for in the wayes of Christianity, hee that goeth not forward, goeth backward; and when we cease to be better, we begin to be worse; neither must we looke how farre we haue proceeded, but how much of the Race remaineth still vnrune, and how farre we are yet from the Goale of perfection.

And

Phil. 3. 13, 14.

Psal. 49. 12.

§. Sect. 4.

Their objection answered; who affirme that Ministers only are bound to the strict performance of religious duties.

Apoc. 1. 5, 6.

1. Pet. 2. 9, 5.

And with the Apostle, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth to those things which are before, we must presse towards the mark, for the price of the high calling of God in Christ Iesus. Hee that is ambitious, is not pleased with his present honours; because hee is preferred before many others: but if there bee yet any about him, hee is not quiet in his minde, till hee haue marched on, exceeded him. O then, why should wee bee so sluggish about spirituall and heauenly preferments; which are incomparably of greater worth and excellencie? why should wee not be as religiously ambitious in aspiring, euen vnto the highest degrees of heauenly glory and happinesse, which is permanent and euerlasting; as in striving after worldly honours, which are contemptible in their worth, and momentany and mutable in their continuance; seeing man that is in honour, abideth not, but is like the beasts that perish, as the Psalmist speaketh?

Moreover, the flesh is ready to object, that howsoever this strict performance of Christian duties be required of Ministers, who haue more knowledge, and many helpes which many others want, and also fewer lets and distractions, hauing by reason of their small imployments about worldly things, little else to doe, then to attend vnto spirituall exercises; yet those who are of the common sort of people, as Trades-men, Artificers, and Husbandmen, cannot by the same reason be so strictly tied to religious duties, seeing they are simple, ignorant, and vnlettered, and haue much more businesse and imployment in the works of their calling. To which I answer first, that though Ministers be tied to exercise themselves, above all others, in those personall duties which belong to their speciall calling, as reading, Meditation, and studie in the Scriptures, and other religious duties, which are more proper and peculiar vnto them: yet the generall duties of Christianity, as Prayer, Thanksgiuing, receiuing the Sacrament, watchfulness, and such like, doe lye out in common, both to them and all other men that are true members of the Church. In regard whereof, there is no distinction or difference between one and another, seeing our Sauour Christ hauing with his precious Blood washed vs all from our sinnes, hath made vs all alike, Kings and Priests, vnto God and his Father. Neither hath he selected some onely from among the rest, vnto whom he hath appropriated the religious duties of Gods seruice, but hath made vs altogether indifferently, a chosen generation, a royall Priesthood, an holy Nation, a peculiar people, that wee should shew forth the praises of him, who hath called vs out of darkenesse into this marueilous light, and to offer vp spirituall sacrifice; acceptable to God by Iesus Christ. And howsoever the publike performance of these religious duties, doeth more peculiarly belong vnto them, in respect of their publike calling in the Church, yet priuate deuotions, and the duties of Gods seruice and a godly life, belong indifferently vnto all, without exception or exemption of any person. Neither are the admonitions and exhortations vnto these duties in the Scriptures directed onely vnto Ministers, as that they should keepe the spirituall watch, examine themselves, put on the Christian Armour, pray continually, and in all things giue thanks, but vnto the whole Church and people of God. Secondly, howsoever Gods Ministers ought to shine as lights in the world, to bee good examples vnto their flockes, ouer which which God hath made them overseers, to bee guides vnto the rest of the faithfull, that they may leade and direct them in the wayes of godlinesse; and to bee Captaines of the Lords Armies, to goe out and in before them; yet it is to this end, that the people should walke in their light, and no longer sit in darkenesse and in the shadow of death, that they should imitate their holy example, and propound them as good patternes and precedents for their imitation; that they should follow their guides, be directed by them, and tread in their footsteps, so long as they goe before them in the wayes of truth and godlinesse; and finally, that they should march after their spirituall Captaines and Leaders, and ioyne with them, in fighting against the enemies of their saluation. For it were as good for them to want these burning and shining Lights, if they sit idly still and doe nothing; to haue no such examples, if they neuer imitate them; to bee without guides, if they will not follow them; and these Captaines and Leaders, if they let them sustaine alone the brunt of the battell, and not like faithfull Souldiers, ioyne common forces against common enemies. Thirdly, I answer, that if the speciall imployments of our particular callings, might make vs dispencc with the generall duties of Christianity and Gods seruice; the Ministers calling, if we faithfullly walke in it, and diligently performe our duties, hath as much businesse and imployment, and not many fewer or lesse distractions from priuate religious duties, then those which are of other professions: As besides his priuate studies, Reading and Meditation, vnto which hee must seriously attend, that hee may prepare and fit himselfe for the publike seruice of the Church, and the government of his owne family, hee must also watch ouer his flocke, visit the sicke, strengthen the weake, comfort the afflicted, priuately admonish those that erre and goe out of the way, exhort those that are sluggish, and rebuke those who wilfully offend, and continue in their sinnes. All which, if they be performed with that conscionable care which they ought, will leaue them as little time as other men for their priuate deuotions, although vnder this pretence they must not bee neglected. Finally, though more bee required of Gods Ministers in respect of degree, seeing where the Lord bestoweth a greater measure of his gifts and graces, there hee requireth that they should in a greater measure bring forth the fruits of holy obedience; yet the same duties are to bee performed of all Christians, according to the proportion of their grace receiued, and both alike are tyed to yeeld vnto God, their common Master, religious seruice, although those who exceed in knowledge and other gifts, are bound to doe them in more perfection. And howsoeuer a greater measure of knowledge is required of the Minister then the people, because his lips must preserve it, as in a common Treasury, that they may haue recourse vnto him for the supplying of their wants; yet as all men must liue by their owne faith, so also they must walke by their owne sight, and haue such a measure of knowledge and illumination of the Spirit, as may be sufficient to direct them in all Christian and religious duties. For their soules being alike precious vnto them, as theirs are who are called to the Ministry, and the way and meanes the same which bring both to eternall life and happinesse,

1. Tim. 4. 15, 16.

Mal. 2. 7.

Habac. 2. 5.

happineffe, it behoueth them both alike to labour after this common saluation, in the performance of the same Religious duties, which are also required of both as common vnto them.

But here againe they are ready to object, that if they had such means of knowledge, and other sauing graces as others enioy, and such helpes and furtherances in the duties of a godly life as many abound with; then with some reason they were to be blamed, if they did neglect them. But alas, they are vnder some ignorant or idle minister, which cannot or wil not instruct them, or such vnconscionable guides, as shine not in the light of a good example, but rather lay stumbling stones of offence before them, by their enormous and scandalous liues, and neglecting all good duties themselues, doe dis-hearten and discourteage them who are carefull to performe them, rather then any wayes encourage them, either by their words or actions. In which regard they thinke that they may be excused, if they be not so zealous and forward in performing the Religious duties of Gods seruice and of a godly life. To which I haue in part before answered, namely, that if this be our case, first we must vse all good meanes to moue them to their dutie, & especially that we powre forth our hearty prayers vnto God for our Pastours and Ministers, intreating him that he will inlighten their mindes, and sanctifie their hearts and affections, and so make them as able, as willing to performe those high and holy duties vnto which they are called. And secondly, if the courses which they still hold, affoord vs no better hopes; then accounting the glorifying of God in the eternall saluation of our soules, that one thing necessary, which is farre to be preferred before all earthly commodities, wee must labour to place our selues vnder such Pastors and Teachers, as will carefully and conscionably breake vnto vs the bread of life, and shine before vs, not onely in the light of doctrine, but also of an holy life & conuersation. In the meane time, these outward wants must not make vs neglect the Religious duties of a godly life; or if they doe, they cannot be sufficient to excuse our negligence, which doth not so much proceed from the want of externall meanes, or those discouragements which are without vs, as from the secret corruptions that lie lurking within vs. Which if they were thorowly mortified, and our hearts inflamed with feruent zeale and true deuotion, we would not be moued by these publique defects and discouragements, to neglect the priuate duties of Gods seruice; yea, rather wee would vse them with more diligence, as being, through want of the other, pressed vpon vs with a greater necessity. For he that hath no friends or parents to looke vnto him, or such as greatly care not whether he feed vpon wholesome food, or famish for want of bread, findeth that he is the more bound hereby to prouide for himselfe. Whereas contrariwise, these corruptions which make vs neglect the duties of Gods seruice, still remayning in vs, and quenching in our hearts all zeale and deuotion, would make vs alike cold and negligent in our priuate exercises of Religion, although the publique meanes which we enioyed were neuer so excellent. Of the former, we haue an example in Dauid,

Ffff

who

§. Sect. 5.
Their obiection answered,
who pretend
the want of meanes.

who when he liued in the barren wildernesse, had his soule so watred with the dew of Gods grace, that it neuer brought forth more & better fruits of holines; and so inflamed with the fire of Gods Spirit, that he was neuer more deuout in religious exercises, nor more zealous in the priuate duties of Gods seruice, though being banished and exiled from the Tabernacle and the publike place of Gods worship, he was withall deprived of the ordinary means of his saluation. And the like we see in the example of the persecuted Martyrs, who neuer were more seruent in their priuate deuotions, then when they durst not shew themselves in open assemblies, but hid their heads fro their pursuers in secret corners and solitary places. And of many others in our owne times, who being necessarily debarred of all publique helpes, & discountenanced & discouraged in their godly courses, by those which should be their guides and leaders, yet being inwardly furnished with sauing graces, doe outwardly exercise them in all religious & holy duties. For howsoeuer the publike Ministry is the ordinary means to begin, as also to preserve and increase Gods graces in vs, and to giue vnto vs not onely birth and spirituall life, but also growth and strength, whereby wee are enabled vnto all duties of a godly life; so that whosoever neglect it, when they may haue it, can neuer looke to thriue in grace, or to haue any ability to serue God in any acceptable maner, because they despise his holy Ordinances, fancying vnto themselves alife which needeth no nourishment; yet we must hold it to be but a meanes and instrument, wherby God, who is the supreme cause & chiefe Agent, is pleased ordinarily to worke, but yet when he depriueth vs of them, can effect his owne good worke of grace and sanctification, either without them, or when they are weake and insufficient, as well as with them, and when they are most excellent & in greatest plenty. Of the other we haue an example in Iudas, who being full of inward corruption, could not thriue, no, not vnder Christs owne Ministry, and Demas, Ananias and Sapphira vnder the Ministry of the Apostles, who performed no acceptable seruice vnto God by all these helpes, because their hearts were not sincere & vpriight, but stil remained carnall & defiled with worldly loue. Yea, we may haue experience of it in many vnthriuing Christians of these times, who though they liue vnder a most powerfull and excellent Ministry, & abound in all the spirituall meanes of grace and saluation, yet remaine as worldly and carnall, as auerse and backward vnto all duties of a godly life, as those who are vtterly destitute of them.

Finally, men mis-led by carnall corruption, are ready to excuse themselves, for not entring into the course of Christianity, though their iudgements are conuincd of this truth, that it is aboue all others most excellent, profitable and necessary, by obiecing, that it is neither good nor safe to make greater profession then other men, or to be more strict in our liues, then ordinarie Christians; because we are not sure that we shall be able to hold out in our sincerity, and holy practice, and if we should relapse, our latter end would be worse then our beginning. Neither can we tell, in respect of humane frailty, whether we may not fall into some grievous and haynous finnes, or at least such as are

§. Sect. 6.
Their obiection answered,
who pretend,
that it is not safe to be more forward then other men.

are contrary to our strict profession; which if we doe, our faults will be more obserued in vs, though they would be little regarded in ordinary men, and more bitterly censured and condemned; yea, wee our selues shall be a wonderment to all, that know vs, and both shame our selues and our profession. To which I answer, first, that none can make any greater profession of strict performing all Christian duties, then that which we all make at our Baptisme, when we enter into couenant with God, that we will renounce the seruice of sin and Satan, the world and our owne sinfull lusts, and betake our selues wholly to the seruice of God, in all duties of holinesse and righteousnes. Which if we doe not all still make, and renue vpon all occasions; what doe we but disgrace our selues, by casting off our Lords liuerie, denying and renouncing our promise and profession, and returning into the ancient seruitude of sinne and Satan? Yea, what doe we else but dayly play the hypocrites, when as praying that wee may doe Gods will in earth, in that purity and perfection, which the Saints and holy Angels doe it in heauen, and that we may serue God in holinesse, righteousness and sobriety all the dayes of our liues, we are notwithstanding so farre from desiring, or going about it, that we are ashamed to professe that we haue any such meaning? Secondly, I answer, that wee are all bound, one as well as another, to make this profession of holinesse and sincerity; neither is it left vnto vs as a thing arbitrarie, and at our owne choyce, but expressely commanded and enioyned, that we should glorifie God, by professing our selues his seruants, and liuing according to this profession, which none refuseth to doe, but such as are destitute of a liuely Faith, whereby we are assured, that God is in Christ our gracious Lord and Father, and we his seruants and people; for as with the heart man beleeueth vnto righteousness, so with the mouth confession is made vnto saluation; According to that of Dauid, I beleued, therefore haue I spoken. Thirdly, I answer, that feare of falling away, or of being overtaken with some grosse finnes, must not hinder our profession and practice of piety; but rather this profession and practice must therefore be vnderaken, that we may hereby be moued more carefully to vse all good meanes of perseuering in all grace and godlinesse, and to obserue our wayes with greater diligence, and make straight steps vnto our feete, that wee doe not slippe, nor haule; nor turne aside out of the way. And if wee with these mindes take vpon vs the profession of Christianity, and indeuour to bring forth the fruits of it in our holy practice, the Lord, who hath begunne this good worke in vs, will also finish it; he will vphold vs that wee shall not greatly fall; or if wee doe, yet hee will not suffer vs to lie still and perish, but will so assist vs with his grace and holy Spirit, that wee shall rise againe by vnfeined repentance. In the meane time no man hath iust cause to wonder, if wee fall through infirmities, though it be into some greater finnes then many commit, who make little or no profession at all; if either he consider humane frailty common to all, the reliques of corruption remayning still in vs after regeneration; and the combat which thence ariseth betweene

Rom. 10. 10.

Psal. 116. 10.

Rom. 7. 20, 22.

the flesh and the Spirit; that, sometime preuailing, and this againe getteth the vpper hand; the malice of the deuill, who most fiercely assaulteth with his tentations, those who haue renounced his seruice, and in whom the Image of God most clearly shineth; or else the examples of the Saints in former ages, who haue beene subiect to like frailties and infirmities, though they were iust and vpright in all their waies, and men in their ordinary and common carriage, according to Gods own heart, and haue beene sometimes, though rarely, ouertaken with grosse sins, as Noah, Lot, Dauid, Peter and the rest. And therefore it is no maruaile if wee, likewise haue our slips and falls, yea rather, it is a great wonder, if we, who come so far short of them in grace and obedience, should stand in such slippery places where they haue falne, and be supported so with Gods grace and holy Spirit, notwithstanding our greater frailty and weaknesse, that we may challenge all the world to accuse vs of any grosse sin. If indeede he who hath professed himselfe the child of God, and approued himselfe to be so, by his sonne-like obedience, should, like the wicked, make sin his way and trade, defend it when he is reprocued, and continue in it without repentance, this were a matter of deserued wonder, but not so, if walking constantly in the wayes of Godlinesse, they sometimes slip & get a fall, especially when they plainly shew by their sorrow insuing, that they are not pleased with their sin, but hauing done the euill which they hated in the inner man, do not continue in it, but rise out of it by vnfeined repentance. But suppose for all this, that professing sincerity, we shall be wondred at of the world, if we hap to fall into any open and scandalous sinne; It is not better that with the godly wee should be wondred at for doing euill, then that with wicked men our good actions should cause wonder. For though it be our shame to sin, and thereby to expose our selues to wonderment; yet this wondring it selfe, is rather a grace then a blemish vnto vs; seeing men wonder not at matters common and ordinary, but at such only as rarely happen. We wonder not at profane rakehells, when they breake their word, lie, sweare & deale vniustly; but to see one that is reputed iust and honest to doe thus at any time, doth make all that know them, to maruaile at it; & the reason is, because it is common and ordinary in the one, but very rare and a thing seldome or neuer before scene in the other. And yet there is no man that is not gracelesse & desperate, who would not rather chuse so to carry himselfe, as that he may be reputed an honest man, though his faults are more obserued & wondred at, then so as to gaine the reproch of a wicked person, although their faults being ordinary, are little obserued and lesse maruailed at. Though euery man wonder, when he seeth a botching piece of work to come out of the hands of a cunning and curious artizan, and maruaileth nothing at all, if he should see such an one or worse come out of the hands of a bungler; yet euery one desireth rather to be a skilfull workman, and to be so reputed, then a bungling borchter. And though a spot be sooner scene in a beautifull face, then in one foule and deformed; or a blot and staine in a fine piece of Lawne or Cambricke, then in some common rag, or coorse canuas; and a faithfull seruant be more wondred at,

at, that is taken halting in some deceitfull action, then when a false fellow doth so, that maketh deceitfull dealing his vsuall trade; yet euery one preferreth beauty with some blemish, before foulness and deformity; fine cloth, though a little spotted, before filthy & worne-out rags; and a faithfull seruant with his seldom slips, before a dishonest fellow, whose worst dealing rayseth no wonder, because being his ordinary custome, no man that knoweth him, expecteth better fruits from such a bramble. And so, though our profession of godlinesse, and indeuour to bring forth ordinary fruits of it in an holy conuersation, should more expose vs to be wondred at, when we fall through humane frailty and infirmities; yet this should not hinder vs from entring into this Christian course, seeing it is a meanes to make vs stand more vpon our credit, to restraîne vs from all sin, whereby we might blemish it, and to keepe with David a carefull watch ouer our selues, that our hearts being found in Gods Statutes, there may be no cause why we should be ashamed. And howsoeuer, when we are ouertaken, our faults are more obserued and marrailed at, yet though our sinne shameth vs, this wonder at it, is rather our praise and commendation. And when wee are at the worst, yet our state is better, and we preferred in Gods estimate and in the opinion of all that feare him, before those who neuer tooke vpon them the profession of piety, nor cared to bring forth any fruits of it in a godly life, though their faults are little obserued or regarded, and not (like the others) matter of table-talk, because no man thinketh them to be any newes.

Psal. 119. 18.

The last obiection which the flesh maketh, is, that it is yet too soone to enter into this strict course of a godly life; seeing howsoeuer it may be necessary in due time and place to doe it, yet the present time of our youth and strength is not fit for such austerity. It cannot be denied, but that God must be religiously serued, but all in good time; wee haue the day before vs, and shall haue leysure inough to serue our selues and God too. After wee haue better settled our worldly estate, and attained vnto such a proportion of wealth for our owne maintenance and those that belong vnto vs, or haue delighted our selues with such and such pleasures, then it will be more seasonable to sequester our selues from the world, and to betake our selues vnto our deuotions. And thus, when the flesh cannot any longer hide from vs the profit and necessity of leading a godly life, then it moueth vs to make delaies, and to poast it off from time to time, till at last we be preuented with vnexpected death, and so perish in our sinnes. Of this Augustine propoundeth himselfe as an example: As no man (saith hee) is so sluggish, that will in his iudgement preferre perpetuall sleeping before waking, and going about his businesse, but yet when sloth hath seized vpon his members, deferreth to shake it off, though it be high time that he should rise: so I thought it better to yeeld my selfe rather to thy loue, then mine owne lust; but that pleased and ouercame me; this liked me and held me captiue. For I had nothing to answer, when thou saidst vnto mee, Arise, thou that sleepest, & stand vp from the dead, and Christ shall giue thee light, being conuincd

§. Sect. 7.
That the duties of a godly life must not be delayed.

Eph. 5. 14.

Modo, ecce modo, ſine paululum Sed modo & modo non habebant modum, & ſine paululum in longum ibat. Confef. lib. 8. cap. 5.

2. Cor. 6. 2.

Pſal. 95. 7, 8.

Eſa. 55. 6, 7.

Cant. 5.

Heb. 12. 14.

Cum vult improbus homo, non poteſt, quia quādo potuit, noluit. Ideo per malum velle perdidit bonum poſſe. Auguſt. in Epiſt. Iohan. Serm. 36. Chryſoſt. 2. Cor. 11. Homil. 22.

with the truth, but onely the words of the ſlothfull and ſleepie: Anon, be- hold by and by, let me alone yet a little. But a little and a little exceeded all meaſure: and, Let me alone a little, grew out to a great length. For the anſwering of which obiection, let vs know, that the ſervice of God in the duties of a godly life, is a matter of greateſt moment, profit and neceſſity; and therefore that it is great folly to put it off with delayes, ſeeing all our life is too little for it. For if God is ſo bountifull and rich in mercy, that he is content to reward our temporary and momentary ſervice, with the eternall wages of heavenly happineſſe, how vngratefull are we, if wee think that the ſhort time of our liues is too much to be ſpēt in his ſervice, who will reward our ſoone ending workes, with euerlaſting wages? Let vs conſider, that ſeeing the ſervice of God is of greateſt worth and excellency, moſt profitable and onely neceſſary; it is therefore ridiculous folly, not to giue it precedency and the firſt place, but to preferre before it euer y baſe triſſe; yea, things not only of no value, but alſo ſuch as are hurtfull and pernicious, as the ſervice of Satan, the world, and our owne luſts, for the contemptible wages of earthly vanities. Let vs remember, that wee haue onely the time preſent for our employement: for the time paſt is irrevocable, and the time to come vncertaine, which if we promiſe vnto our ſelues, we incroach vpon Gods right, ſeeing he hath giuen vnto vs no promiſe of it, and ſinne preſumptuouſly, by taking vpon vs to diſpoſe of that which is onely in the hand of God. That now is the acceptable time and day of ſaluation, and we doe not know whether it will laſt till to morrow, which if it be once paſt, can neuer be recouered. And therefore whileſt it is called to day, let vs hearken vnto his voyce, calling vs to repentance, and inuiting vs to ſerue him, and not harden our hearts: Let vs ſeek the Lord whileſt hee may be found, and call vpon him whileſt he is nigh; for if he depart in diſpleaſure, wee may long ſeek him with the Spouſe in the Canticles, ere wee ſhall finde him. Let vs conſider, that the leading of a godly life is neceſſary to ſaluation, for that time which remaineth after our calling. For as the Apoſtle ſaith, Without holineſſe no man ſhall ſee the Lord. And what madneſſe then is it, to caſt a thing of ſuch moment vpon all vncertainties? for it is vncertaine whether thou ſhalt liue one day longer; if thou liueſt, vncertaine whether thou ſhalt haue the meanes where- by thou maiſt bee inabled for Gods ſervice, and vncertaine if thou haſt them, whether God will giue thee will to uſe them, or power to profit by them, for the obtaining of ſpirituall life and ſtrength, where- by thou maiſt be inabled to ſerue him, ſeeing hee may iuſtly reſuſe to bee ſerued by thee in thy decrepit age, when thou haſt no ſtrength to ſerue the diuell, the world, and thine owne luſts, becauſe thou haſt reſuſed to doe it in thy flouriſhing youth, and chiefe ſtrength. To which purpoſe one ſaith, When the wicked man will, he cannot, becauſe when he could, hee would not: and ſo by an ill will, hee loſeth the power of well-doing. But thou wilt obiect, as he of whom Chryſoſtome ſpeaketh; That God hath giuen many this priuiledge, to confeſſe him in old age. To which I an- ſwere with him: What then? will hee therefore giue it thee? Thou wilt ſay, Perhaps he will? Why ſaiſt thou perhaps? Doth it but ſometime happen? Conſider, that the matter in deliberation, is the ſaluation or damnation damnation of thy soule. And therefore thinke with thy selfe of the contrary, and say; But what if God will not giue it? Doeſt thou yet say, And what if he will giue it? God grant he may. But ſure for all that, to lay hold on the time preſent, is both more certaine and more profitable. For if thou now beſinneſt, thou art ſure to get all that thou deſireſt, whether God grant or deny the former priuiledge; whereas if thou delayeſt, euen for this, oftentimes thou ſhalt not receiue it. When thou goeſt to the warres, thou doeſt not ſay, There is no need for mee to diſpoſe of mine eſtate; perhaps I ſhall returne. Neither doeſt thou ſay, when thou doeſt deliberate of marriage; I will chuſe a poore wife; for many in ſo doing haue growne rich beyond all hope. And going about to build an houſe, thou doeſt not ſay, I will lay a rotten foundation; for many houſes haue ſtood, though their foundations haue been weake. And yet when thou haſt to deale about the ſaluation of thy ſoule, thou layeſt hold on things more rotten, and putteſt all vpon vncertainties, ſaying, It often happeneth, it ſometimes commeth to paſſe. It is indeed vncertaine, wilt thou ſay; but I truſt to Gods mercy, for he is gracious. This I know and acknowledge; but know this alſo, that this mercifull God hath ſuddenly taken away, when they leaſt expected it, ſuch as thou art, who haue poſted him off with vaine delayes. And what though much time bee granted thee? how art thou ſure that thou ſhalt amend and become better, &c? For how doeſt thou thinke that God will then aſſiſt thee, ſeeing thou haſt ſo often reſuſed his helpe, when he hath graciously offered it? or how canſt thou hope of any ability without it? Now thou canſt not walke in the wayes of godlineſſe; and how wilt thou be able to doe it hereafter, when thou art more inthralled vnto Satan, more loaded with the intolerable waight of thy multiplied finnes, more clogged and hampered, fettered and hindred with the ſtrong chaines of thy corruptions, which are growne habituall, and haue doubled their force with long cuſtome? Finally, when as thou art more impotent to ſhake them off, and mortifie them, by reaſon of the infirmities of old age? Yet ſay, thou couldeſt then ſerue God in all Chriſtian duties: yet how much time in the meane while haſt thou miſſpent, not onely without gaine, but to thy incomparable loſſe, which if it had been employed in Gods ſeruiſe, would haue added much inestimable riches to the euerlaſting recompence of heavenly rewards? And therefore when as God requireth at our hands that preſent ſeruiſe which is due vnto him, let vs not put him off, like banquerupts and ill debtors, with words and promiſes, that wee will pay all hereafter, ſeeing the longer we liue, the more we ſpend on the ſtocke, and leſſe able we ſhall be to make ſatiſfaction. But ſeeing he requireth preſent and conſtant ſeruiſe, not becauſe hee needeth it, but that hee may take occaſion thereby of crowning our workes with richer rewards; let vs not bee ſo great enemies to our owne preferment, as by deſerring and ſcanting our worke, to cauſe the Lord to abate our wages; but laying aſide euery waight, and the ſinne which doth ſo eaſily beſet vs, let vs (as the Apoſtle exhorteth) runne with patience the race which is ſet before vs.

And thus haue I, through the gracious aſſiſtance of Gods holy Spirit, finiſhed this long worke, for which his bleſſed Name be praized and magnified.

Heb. 12.1.

§. Sect. 8.
The Concluſion of the whole Treatiſe.

nified; And haue not onely described the godly life, in all the parts and branches thereof, and the speciall duties required vnto it, but also the meanes both publike and priuate, whereby wee may bee inabled, and the arguments and reasons whereby wee may be moued and perswaded to performe them, and likewise haue shewed the greatest and most vsuall lets and impediments, whereby men are commonly hindred from entring into, and proceeding in the wayes of godlinesse, and how also wee may remoue and ouercome them. And now nothing remaineth, but that I intreat thee (Christian Reader) by the mercies of God, and as thou treatest his glory, and the eternall saluation of thine owne soule, that thou wilt resolue and indeuour to walke in this alone way that leadeth to heauenly happinesse, now that he hath so plainly discouered it vnto thee. For much better were it for thee neuer to haue knowne the way of truth and godlinesse, then after thou knowest it, not to walke in it; seeing the seruant that knoweth his Masters will, and doth it not, shall be beaten with many stripes. Heretofore thy ignorance might somewhat extenuate thy sinne, and neglect of Gods seruice in the duties of a godly life, and mitigate also thy punishment, because thou mightest pretend thy willingnesse to walke in this way, but that thou diddest want a guide to goe before thee: But now this pretence is taken away, and thou quite left without all excuse. For what can the Lord by his Ministers doe more for the saluation of thy precious soule, then to shew thee the way that leadeth to eternall blessednes, and to teach thee how thou maist walke in it; to make knowne vnto thee what thou must doe that thou maist be saued, and the meanes also whereby thou maist be inabled to doe it? to exhort and perswade thee, by effectual reasons, to vse these meanes, that so thou maist walke in this way, and to teach thee how to remooue all those impediments which might otherwise hinder and discourage thee in thy course? O let not therefore his so great grace be vnto thee, not onely in vaine, but also to thy losse. Let not, O let not these my poore, yet painfull labours, which I haue vnder-taken with cheeresulnesse, proceeded in with comfort, and finished with ioy, that I might glorifie God in thy saluation, rise vp as a witnesse against thee at that great Day, because thou hast onely read them, and after cast them into some corner, without further vse. If thou knowest these things, blessed art thou, if thou doest them. And happy, yea thrice happy shall I thinke my selfe, if being furthered by my poore meanes in the wayes of saluation, thou maist be my crowne and my reioycing. Frustrate not (I beseech thee) the maine end of my painfull labours, so much desired, so often and earnestly begged, and defraud mee not of my hope and ioy, and therewith thy selfe also of thine owne saluation. It is not my writing, nor thy reading, that can saue our foules in that great Day of the Lord, but the holy practice of those duties which I teach, and thou learnest, in the whole course of our liues and conuersations, which because wee are vnable to performe in our owne strength, but it is the Lord onely which inableth vs, both to will, and to doe, let vs (I intreat thee) pray one for another, desiring of the Lord, that we may not onely bee filled with the knowledge of his will, in all wisdom and spiritual vnderstanding, but also that in this light we may walke worthy of the Lord vnto all pleasing, being fruitful in euery good worke,

Luk. 12. 47.

Act. 2. 37.

Luk. 11. 28.
Job. 13. 17.

Phil. 2. 13.

Col. 1. 10, 11.

worke, and increasing in the knowledge of God, strengthened with all might, according to his glorious power, unto all patience and long-suffering with ioyfullnesse. And that we may not onely be perfect, and thorowly furnished vnto all good workes; but also that we may be stedfast, immoueable, and alwayes abounding in the worke of the Lord, for as much as we know, that our labour is not vaine in the Lord. But man knoweth not his owne wayes, neither is it in man that walketh, to direct his steps; and how much lesse is hee able in his owne strength to be a guide vnto others, or by his most powerfull perswasions to moue them to accompany him in the wayes of godlinesse? O thou therefore who art the Authour of light and life, and the rich Fountaine of all grace and glory, as thou hast graciously inlightened my mind with the knowledge of thy will, and inabled me also to reueale it vnto others, so inflame mine heart with the beauty and brightnesse of it, that I may loue and imbrace it; kindle in me, more and more, holy desires; confirme my resolutions, and strengthen all my good indeuours, that as I haue taught thy wayes vnto others, so I my selfe may walk constantly in them, that so I may shine before them, both in the light of doctrine, and also of a good and holy example, in the whole course of my life and conuersation. Ioyne also, I humbly beseech thee, with these my poore labours, which I haue wholly deuored to thy glory, and the good of my brethren, the inward assistance of thy grace and holy Spirit, and thereby adde such power and efficacie, vertue and vigour vnto them, that they may not onely reueale the way of saluation to the vnderstanding of the Christian Readers, but may also effectually moue and perswade them to walke in it sincerely and vprightly, constantly and continually, vnto the very end of their liues; to the glory of thy great Name, and the comfort and saluation of all our soules, through thine onely Sonne, and our blessed Sauiour Iesus Christ: to whom with thee and thy most holy Spirit, three persons, and one onely true God, most wise, glorious, gracious and blessed, be ascribed of vs, and thy whole Church, all glory, and praise, might, Majesty and dominion, both now and euermore. Amen.

2. Tim. 3. 17.

1. Cor. 3. 58.

Pras. 16. 9.

and 20. 24.

1st. 20. 23.

A PARAPHRASE VP- ON THE LORDS PRAYER.

Almighty and eternall God, Father of our Lord Iesus Christ, and in him our gracious Father, wee thy poore children by adoption and grace, heere acknowledge, that wee are vnterly vnworthy to be counted in the number of thy meanest seruants, and much lesse deserue that high title and priuiledge to be called thy sonnes and children. For wee haue not demeaned our selues as it becommeth children of such a Father, in all loue, reuerence, and obedience, nor approoned our selues to be like vnto thee, in wisdom, holinesse, and righteousness. We haue abased our selues, to doe seruice vnto sinne and Satan, for the trifling wages of worldly vanities; neuer considering that wee are the children of such a glorious Father, and heires to such an heavenly inheritance. We doe not like children securely rest vpon thy fatherly providence, and cannot with boldnesse approach to the Throne of Grace, to make our suits knowne vnto thee, by reason of our selfe-guiltinesse and ill deseruing, though thou art gracious and ready alwayes through Christ, to heare and helpe vs. Wee haue not duely feared thee, though thou art our heavenly Father, full of Majesty and power, neither haue we beene afraid to sinne against thee, though we stand alwayes in thy presence, who art able to cast body and soule into hell. We haue not glorified thy holy Name, by renouncing impiety and worldly lusts, and consecrating our selues wholly to thy worship and seruice, but haue serued sinne and Satan, for the base hire of worldly vanities. Wee haue not glorified thee in thy mercies by our vnfaigned thankfulnessse, nor haue beene encouraged by thy liberall wages, to performe vnto thee diligent and cheerefull seruice, but haue abused thy good gifts to thy dishonour, and haue set our mindes and hearts more vpon them, then vpon thee who hast graciously bestowed them vpon vs. We haue not sanctified thee in thy Iudgements, by humbling our selues vnder thy hand, nor haue profited by thy fatherly corrections for the amendment of our liues, and turning vnto thee from our sinnes by vnfaigned repentance. We haue not suffered thee to raigne and rule in our hearts and consciences by the Scepter of thy Word and holy Spirit, but haue often grieved it, by resisting and quenching the good motions thereof, and by subiecting our selues to be governed by our owne lusts. Wee haue not behaued our selues as it became subiects of thy Kingdome, denying vngodlinesse and worldly lusts, and liuing holily, righteously, and soberly soberly in this present world. Wee have not denied our selues and our own wils and affections, which are opposite to thy holy will, nor indeuoured as we ought, to performe vnto thee in all things, that absolute obedience which is due vnto thee our Creatour and Redeemer. Wee have not obeyed thee cheerefully and with delight, readily and without delays, sincerely and constantly, but haue deuided our selues betweene thee and the world, and haue serued thee but by fits and flashes. Wee haue not in all things submitted our selues vnto thy good pleasure, but haue murmured against thy prouidence, when wee haue beene crossed in our desires. Wee haue not restrained and mortified our carnall and worldly lusts of ambition, couetousnesse, & voluptuousnesse, but haue immoderately desired, and set our hearts too much vpon earthly and momentany things. We haue more hungred after the meate which perisheth, then after spirituall food which indures vnto life euerlasting. We haue not contented our selues with that portion which thou hast allotted vnto vs, nor cast all our care vpon thee for all things needfull, but haue turmoyled our selues with carking care, and trusted too much vnto our owne prouidence. Wee haue not so earnestly desired to bee freed from the corruption and pollution of our sinnes, as from the guilt and punishment, and haue beene more ready to haue them pardoned, then to leaue and forsake them. Wee haue not laboured after the fruits of sanctification, to be assured thereby that we are iustified and reconciled, or content our selues with a small measure, and thereby weaken our assurance. We are not pressed with our sins, as with an heauy burthen, nor haue (as we ought) seriously bewailed them, nor earnestly desired to be eased of them. Wee doe not carefully keep our watch, that we be not againe surprisid by sin, and so are apt to relapse againe into the same sinnes, after wee haue repented of them, and receiued pardon. We are negligent in the vse of the meanes whereby we might be assured of the remission of our sinnes, neither doe we sincerely and from the bottome of our hearts remit iniuries, but in profession and shew, forgiuing, but not forgetting them. We doe not approoue our sincerity in remitting iniuries, by our readinesse to performe all good duties to those who haue offended vs, and by ouercomming euill with goodnesse. We are too apt to take notice of euery iniury, and doe not passe by offences, approouing our wisedome, by our slownesse to anger; and our lone, by couering a multitude of sinnes, but are apt to retaine anger, and to seeke reuenge when we are wronged. We doe not as we should, resist the tentations of the flesh, world, and deuill, but though we pray against them, yet vpon euery slight occasion we run into them, and are easily inticed to fall into sinne, and to forfeit that liberty which Christ hath purchased for vs. We liue securely, as if we were free from all danger of enemies, and doe not duely consider their malice and subtilty, our owne weakenesse, and their power, that we might be moued heereby to pray with more seruenity to bee freed from tentations, or for thy assistance, that we might overcome them, and be deliuered from all euill: whereof it commeth to passe that we are often foyled by them, and led captiue vnto sinne. Wee are not daily prepared against the time of tentation, nor keepe the Christian Armour fast buckled vnto vs, that we might be able to resist our enemies. Wee doe not watch-fully

fully auoyd the occasions of euill, nor carefully obserue our hearts and senses, keeping them vnder Couenant, that they may not roue after worldly vanities, which are the visuall occasions whereby we are plunged into all euill. But wee beseech thee, good Lord, to be gracious vnto vs, in the forgiuenesse of all our sinnes, and wash them away in the precious Blood of Iesus Christ, that they may neuer bee imputed vnto vs, nor bring vpon vs that wrath which they haue deserued. Yea, Lord, we beseech thee for Christs sake, not onely free vs from deserued punishments, but being reconciled vnto vs in thy Sonne, multiply thy fauours and blessings vpon vs in all things pertaining to grace and godlinesse, glory and happinesse. Perswade vs by thy Spirit and a liuely faith, that thou art in Christ, our Father, and we thy children by adoption and grace. Let vs euer loue and feare thee, as our gracious Father, performe vnto thee the obedience of children, and labour to resemble thee in wisdom, holinesse, and righteounesse, that so we may walke worthy this high calling whereunto thou hast called vs. Let vs demeane our selues as Pilgrims on earth, and haue our conuersation in heauen, where our inheritance is, minding and affecting things aboue, where Christ sitteth at thy right hand. Let vs wholly rely vpon thy fatherly prouidence, who art both able and willing to helpe vs, and let vs with boldnesse and confidence haue recourse vnto thee in all our wants, and with assurance that thou wilt graciously heare and helpe vs. Let vs in our iudgements esteeme, in our hearts desire, and in all our actions seeke thy glory aboue all things, and let it euer bee more deare vnto vs then our owne saluation. Let vs giue glory to thy Name, in all our thoughts, words, and actions, and not onely doe it our selues, but also giue iust occasion to others of glorifying thee. Let vs sanctifie thee, both in thy mercies and iudgements, towards our selues or others; let thy rich wages make vs more faithfull and cheerefull in thy seruice, and thy fatherly corrections more fearefull to displease thee. Remouue all impediments of thy glory, and aduance the meanes whereby it is aduanced. Aduance thy Kingdome vniuersally ouer all; rule ouer thine enemies, and subiect all things vnto thy government, that nothing may resist thy power. Rule ouer thine owne seruants and Church after a speciall maner, in protecting and preserving them, and let them, like dutifull subiects, yeeld obedience vnto thee their Soueraigne in all things. Make vs in this life true members of the Kingdome of grace, that afterwards we may be triumphant members of the Kingdome of glory. Rule in our hearts effectually by thy Word and Spirit; worke in vs thine owne good worke of grace; make vs Citizens of the Saints, and meete to be partakers of thy Kingdome of glory. Pull vs more and more out of the kingdome of Satan, in which we naturally are subiects, and let him no longer raigne and rule in our hearts and minds to our perdition. Let vs no longer be ruled by the lawlesse law of sinne, neither let it raigne in our mortall bodies, by making our members the instruments of it; but be thou our King, and rule in our hearts by thy Word and Spirit. Ere the Kingdome of grace, where it is not yet begun, continue and increase it amongst vs, where it is established; blesse the meanes whereby it is furthered, and remoue the impediments which hinder it. Free vs from the remnants of the kingdome of darkenesse, Iudgemente, from our finnes and corruptions, lusts and concupiscences. Let vs not yeeld to the temptation of Satan, the world and our owne flesh, but gaine vs victory ouer them. Let vs first seek thy Kingdome and righteous-nesse, and let vs endeavour to be members of the Kingdome of grace; that afterwards we may be members of the Kingdome of glory. Let thy Kingdome of glory also come, hasten the comming of Christ to Iudgement, to this end, accomplish the number of thine Elect, and subdue thine enemies vnder thy feet. Let vs so liue alwayes, as if we were ready to meete Iesus Christ, and let vs labour to be true such, as we desire to appeare before his Iudgement seat; that so when he cometh, we may not depart from him ashamed. Hence appeare, O Lord, that thou reignest in our hearts by our humble subiection and submission in all things to thy will; and let vs see and bewaile our imperfect obedience to thy will, and let vs daily labour after more perfection. Give vs grace to deny our selves, and our owne wills and affections, which are opposit to thy will, and let vs labour to per-forme absolute obedience in thee in all things. Attune vs with patience in all our afflictions; that we may say with Christ, Not my will, O Father, but thine be done. Let vs seriously desire that thy will may be done concerning vs, and let vs not grieve when we see it done; because it crosseth our wills. Let vs not content our selves with a bare outward obedience, but let vs doe thy will after a spirituall manner, as the Angels doe it in heauen, with sincerity and vprightnesse of heart, with plenary and cheerfulnesse, with readinesse and speed without delay. Let vs doe thy will fully, and not by halves; constantly, and not by fits; faithfully and humbly, not assuming any glory to our selves, but yielding it wholly vnto thee. Let all our suites, which pester our selues, be referred to thy glory as their maine end. Give vs temporall benefits, so farre forth as they serue for thy glory and our spirituall good. Teach vs to moderate our desires, and not to covet after superfluities, seeing thou hast taught vs to aske for bread, and not for dainties. Let vs be contented with our allowance; if we haue but necessaries, as food and raiment, yes; bread to sustaine our liues, and if thou giuest vs more, make vs thankful vnto thee for it. Let vs haue a true desire and care to get our goods by good and lawfull meanes; that wee may be assured that we eat our owne bread, and that it is giuen vs of thee.

 Let vs walke diligently in our lawfull callings; that wee may eate the labours of our own hands, and working with quietnesse that which is good, let vs eate our owne bread. Let vs not set our hearts and desires vpon the things of this life, nor covet other mens goods, but be contented with our owne portion which in thy wise prouidence thou hast allotted vnto vs. Let vs haue a moderate care to provide that which is convenient; that we may not be burthensome, but rather helpfull vnto others, and let vs neither be careless and negligent, nor turmoile our selues with earking care to hoord vp for many yeeres. Let vs depend vpon thy blessing in the vse of good meanes for the obtaining of our desires, and expect it vpon the things themselves when we haue obtained them, and let vs sanctifie all thy blessings to our vse, by the Word, Prayer, and Thanksgiuing. Let vs not trust in our owne prouision, but in thee; and casting all our care vpon thee, let vs in all our wants flie vnto thee for supply. Give vs things necessaries; not onely for our nature; but also for our sinnes and falling places and persons. Give vs with thy blessings their right use; and give them vertue and strength to sustaine and nourish vs. Let vs when wee want these blessings, begge them from thee; and when wee haue receiued them, reme[m]ber thee thanks. Inflame our hearts with loue towards our brethren; and let vs not, through conceits and selfe loue, seeke onely our owne good; but let vs seeke the common good of our brethren, and pray for it as well as for our owne. Let vs know and acknowledge our frailty and mortality; who neede to be daily sustained by thee; and let this make vs like children, to resort daily vnto thee our heavenly Father, craving from thee all things needfull. Let vs not be distrustfully carefull for the time to come; but our depend vpon thy Fatherly providence; being assured that thou who hast provided for vs to day, wilt provide for vs to morrow.

 Let vs lay up goods to good ends; not onely that we may haue to supply our wants; and so provide for our families; but also to relieve the necessities of others. Let vs not be so addicted to the vanities of this life, that withall, wee doe neglect to labour for spirituall graces; and things pertaining to a heavenly life.
 Let vs as much desire to be freed from the corruption of sinne, as the guilt and punishment; and as we desire the forgiveness of our sinnes, so let vs earnestly labour to forsake them. Remit and pardon all our sinnes; and to this end giue vs a lively Faith to apply Christ for our iustification. Let vs pray for remission, not onely with words, but also with faith; stedfastly beleeuing that thou wilt pardon them; and seale this assurance in our hearts by thy good Spirit. Let vs see our sinnes, and heartily bewyle them; and be truly grieved because they are more grieuous. Let vs after reconciliation desire and endeavour in all things to please thee, and chuse rather to displease our selves and all the world; then thy Majesty. Let vs confirme our Faith in the assurance of pardon, by forgiving those who haue trespassed against vs; and that not in shew onely; but in truth and sincerity. Let vs not onely forgive injuries; but also forget them, and approue our sincerity in remitting, by our readinesse to perform all good duties vnto them, that wee may overcome euill with goodnesse. Let vs passe by offences; and shew our wisdom in our slownesse to Anger and Renenge. Let vs doe good to those that hurt vs; and pray for those that persecute vs. Giue vnto vs not onely the grace of iustification; and the Remission of our sinnes; but also of Sanctification; and the spirit of fortitude, whereby wee may mortifie sinne; and be enabled to resist the temptations of the flesh, the world and the deuill. Let vs not, when wee are washed with the blood of Christ, and freed from the guilt and curse of sinne, defile our selves againe, nor be intangled in the yoke of bondage; but let vs stand fast in the liberty which Christ hath purchased for vs. Let vs not abuse our liberty as an occasion to the flesh, and because we are freed from sin, sin the more freely; but being deliuered out of the hands of all our spirituall enemies, let vs worship and serue thee without feare, in holinesse and righteousnes before thee all the dayes of our liues. Let vs continually watch & pray, that we doe not enter into tentations, seeing our spirituall enemies are euer most busie & malicious in assaulting those, whom thou hast pulled out of the kingdome of darkenesse, and made subiects of thy Kingdome, and seruants of thy family. Let vs consider our owne weakenesse, and our enemies power, and let this mooue vs with more seruency to craue thy helpe and assistance. Establish vs (O Lord) by thy free Spirit, and so strengthen vs with thy wisdom and power, that we may be able to stand against the artificiall and cunning tentations of the deuill. Doe not giue vs ouer to the Tempter, nor leaue vs to our selues, but with the temptation giue an happy issue, that we may haue the vpper hand, and be preserved from all euill. We craue not to be freed from temptation, but that wee may not be tempted aboue our power; Yea, try vs, O Lord, as much as thou wilt, so that being tried, wee may be found approved. Let vs quench the fiery darts of the deuill with the shield of Faith, and not admit of his suggestions, but nippe them in the head, when they are first offered vnto vs. Leade vs not (O Lord) into temptation, giue vs not ouer to our owne lusts, to be hardened with the deceitfulness of sinne, nor to the world, to be carried away with the desires thereof, nor to the deuill, to be ouercome with his tentations, and to be carried away captiue to doe his will. Let those weakenesses which we discern in temptation, make vs to rest more entirely vpon thy power. Let vs in the sight of them be truly humbled; turne them to our good, and make vs more carefull in the vse of all good meanes to attaine vnto more strength. Let vs not fall away in the time of temptation, but enable vs to withstand our enemies in the euill day, and hauing finished the fight, let vs stand fast, and be kept by thy power through Faith vnto saluation. Let vs alwayes be prepared for the day of battell, and put on thy whole armour, that wee may be enabled to resist our enemies. Let vs not tempt thee by running into temptation, and expose our selues to Satans baytes and snares, before they be offered vnto vs. Let all our trials and tentations tend to our good, and the more enrich vs with Spirituall graces, and so further our euerslasting saluation. Doe not (O Lord) punish in vs one sinne, by giuing vs ouer to another, neither leaue vs to our owne lusts, to the hardnesse of our hearts, or to a reprobate minde, to commit sinne with greedinesse. Giue vs thy sanctifying Spirit, and enable vs thereby not onely to fight against the flesh, but also to subdue and mortifie our earthly members, our inordinate affections and euill concupiscence. Renew vs by thy Spirit, that we may no longer be carnall, but Spirituall, walking not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. Let vs not be carried away with the world, or ouercome with the tentations, either on the right hand, or on the left. But let vs ouercome the world by Faith. Giue vs the Spirit of Wisdom to preserve vs, that we be not ensnared with worldly wiles; keepe vs from being corrupted with rotten speeches, and the inticements and ill counsels of the wicked; let vs not stumble at their scandals and offences, nor be misled by their euill en-samples, preserve vs from the contagion of their company, and let vs not be conformed to their fashions, but notwithstanding all their tentations, let vs constantly perseuere in the course of holinesse and rightteousnesse. Giue vs grace to renounce all worldly lusts, ambition, couetousnesse and voluptuousnesse. Weane our hearts from earthly vanities, and let vs vse the world as not abusing it. Crucifie vs to the world, and the world vnto vs, and let vs liue as pilgrims and strangers vpon the earth, and Citizens of heauen. Let vs minde heauenly things, and contemne the things of the world as meere vanities, in comparison of Spirituall graces and heauenly glorie. Let vs not be overcome with worldly afflictions, but either in whole or in part release vs of them, or else arme vs with patience, that wee may beare them and indure temptation, that so being approued, wee may receiue the Crowne of life. Tread downe Satan vnder our feet, shew thy power in our weakenesse, and glorifie thy Name in our victory. Perfect the worke of our Sanctification & Redemption which is begun in this life, & not only free vs in part from our corruptions, but conforme vs wholy to the glorious Image of thy Son. Deliuer vs from euery euill thing, and preserve vs vnblameable to thy heauenly Kingdome. Let vs shew off security, and be vigilant and watchfull, & let vs about all obseruations looke to our hearts. Let vs keepe a narrow watch ouer our tongues and senses, let vs make a couenant with our eyes, and turne them away from beholding vanities. Let vs long after our full deliuerance, and finall victory ouer our spirituall enemies; and seeing we shall not absolutely be freed from sinne, and perfectly sanctified in this life, let vs earnestly desire to be dissolued & to be with Christ, that so being fully deliuered from the body of this death, wee may performe vnto thee such perfect seruice as thou requirest. Confirm our Faith in this assurance, that thou wilt heare our prayers, and grant our requests, seeing thine is the Kingdom, whereby thou hast right to giue whatsoeuer we desire, thine is the power & might, whereby thou art able to grant our requests, and thine also is the glory both of giuing all good things, and also of all good things giuen; and therefore thou wilt be willing to heare our suits, seeing they tend to the aduancement of thy glory.

 And so (Lord) we ascribe vnto thee vniuersall Kingdom, whereby thou rulest and gouernest all things, and acknowledge thy wilddome, power and prouidence, to thy prayse in disposing of them at thy pleasure. We acknowledge and ascribe vnto thee the glorie of being our King, who preservest and defendest vs, rulest and gouernest vs with the Scepter of thy Word & holy Spirit. We ascribe vnto thee all power, wher-by thou art able to doe whatsoeuer thou wilt, and magnifie thy Name for keeping & ruling vs with this power vnto saluation. We render vnto thee all glorie, and the deserved praise of all thy goodnesse, magnifying thee according to the multitude of thy mercies, and the ex-cellencie of thy gifts, wherewith thou hast enriched vs; desiring that wee may ascribe all the good wee haue done, or can doe, to thy glorie, as being the supreme end of all things. And this thy Kingdome, Power and Glory, wee doe not limit with the longest time, but

but ascribe them vnto thee from euerlasting, to euerlasting, euen as thou thy selfe art without beginning or ending. And thus, holy and heavenly Father, we testify our faith, and the truth of our desires, by saying Amen, and giue the assent of our hearts to the words of our mouthes in all our petitions; beleeuing that thou in thy good time wilt grant all our suites which we haue made according to thy will, as shall best stand with thy Glory, and our saluation; in which perswasion we conclude our prayers, and attend thy leisure, through Iesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

A priuate Prayer for the Morning.

Lord our God, most glorious in maiesty, and omnipotent in power; who fillest heauen and earth with thy presence, and yet in a more speciall manner vouchsafest to dwell with those who are of a broken heart and contrite spirit, to heare and helpe them in all their necessities; I thy poore humble seruant, in the mediation of Iesus Christ, doe make bold to approach into thy glorious and dreadfull presence, that I may lay open before thee my wretched estate and condition, by reason of my manifold and grievous finnes, and those fearefull punishments, both temporall and eternall, vnto which by their guilt they haue most iustly obliged mee. For though thou diddest create me holy and righteous, according vnto thine owne Image, yet I haue falne from that state of innocency and blessednesse, in the loynes of my first father Adam, and by beeing guilty of his sinne, am become also liable to his punishment. And as I am partaker of his sinne by imputation, as being one of his taynted posterity, so also of the corruption of his nature by propagation, the which like a fretting leprosie, or running canker, hath wholly ouerspred all the powers and parts of my soule and body, vterly disabling them vnto all duties of thy seruice, and making them the ready instruments of sinne and Satan. And whereas in their creation they were fit habitations for thine owne Maiesty to dwell in by thy Spirit, through this naturall corruption they became cages of vncleane birds, yea, noysome sinkes, exhaling and breathing out the lothsome sent, and poysonous vapours of carnall concupiscence and filthy lusts. Mine vnderstanding is so darkened with ignorance, that it is naturally vnacquainted with thy will and waies, and though it bee wise to euill, yet vnto that which is good, I haue no knowledge; my carnall reason and wisdom is enmity against thee, and vnderstandeth not the things of thy Spirit, but so foolish it is, that it iudgeth them foolishnesse. My iudgement is so corrupted, that it hath no spirituall discerning, being ready to mistake euill for good, falshood for truth, and wrong for right. My conscience is either feared or superstitious, either senselesse of sinne, or scared with shadowes, my minde and imaginations are onely and continually euill, rousing wholly after earthly things, and neuer minding spirituall and heauenly. My memory is become a storehouse of iniquity, with which it is so fully fraughted, that there is no roome for good instructions and the rich treasures of thy sauing Truth. My will is so corrupted, that it standeth in flat opposition to thine holy will, approuing and chusing that which thou dislikest and condemnest, and refusing and abhorring that which thou likest and commandest. My heart is wholly turned from thee, and cleaueth to world and earthly vanities, and is full of infidelity, security and impenitency, hardned in sinne, and vnflexible to all good. Mine affections are wholly corrupted and disordred, louing, fearing and trusting in the creature more then in the Creator, and all the members and parts of my body are sluggish and slothfull vnto all duties of thy seruice, but the apt and ready instruments of my sinfull soule for the acting of all manner of wickednesse. From which cursed fountaine of originall corruption, haue plentifully flowed those poisonous streams of actuall transgressions, whereby I haue violated & broken thy whole Law in thought, word and deede. For in stead of doing thy Law, I haue wholly transgressed it; in stead of obseruing the duties commanded, I haue committed the vices forbidden; in stead of continuing in obedience, I haue continually disobeyed it, from my tender infancy to this present day. A great part of my time I haue lien starke dead in trespasses and sinnes, not being able to thinke a good thought, or entertaine a good desire, because both my minde and will were enslaued vnto Satan in the chaynes of sin. And all this while my eares were deafe, mine eyes blinded, and my heart without vnderstanding, so as I could neyther heare, see, nor discern the things which concerned thy glory and mine owne saluation, but vtterly neglected thy many and gracious calls inuiting me to thy seruice. Yea, Lord, since the time that thou hast, through thy mighty power, and of thy mere grace, quickned and raysted me from this death of sinne, how haue I, like Lazarus, come out of the graue bound hand and foote, and still so fettered and hampered with the reliques of my corruptions, that I walke slowly and lamely in the wayes of thy Commandements, oftentimes neglecting, vpon every slight occasion, the duties of holinesse and righteousness, and oftentimes performing them with such weakenesse and imperfection, as it is hard to say whether they were not better vndon, then so done? O how often doe I forget euen the mayne end for which I liue, namely, that by glorifying thee I may liue eternally; and as though I were a citizen of the earth, how haue I my conuersation here, spending my thoughts and strength about worldly vanities which profit not, and not so much as minding spirituall and heauenly things! How slowly (alas) do I come to the duties of thy seruice, who art so infinitely bountifull in thy rewards! How coldly & carelesly, how dully & drowzily, how irreuerently and negligently do I performe them! How soone am I weary of these holy exercises, and desire to returne to my worldly employments! How little sweetnesse doth my aguish taste feele in thy loue, loue, though it be better then wine, and in feeding vpon thy spirituall delicacies in thy banquetting house, thy Word and Sacraments? How little delight haue I had in thy Sanctuary and Sabbaths, and how haue I consecrated the least part of them as an holy Rest vnto thee, and mispent the greatest part in thinking mine owne thoughts, in thinking mine owne words, and doing mine owne workes? How much and often haue I abused thine holy ordinances, through my worldlinesse and prophane-nesse, and after that I haue long inioyed them, how little haue I profited by them? Mine heart is still full of grosse infidelity, which is the cause that I am not much raised and comforted with thy sweet promises, nor deiected and humbled with thy terrible threatnings. It is full of impenitency, being vnapt to mourne for sinnes past, or to resolve vpon amendment for the time to come. It is full of carnall security, making mee to apprehend no danger, when as I walke in the midst of pernicious snares, which are in euery place laid in my way by my spirituall enemies, and to put the euill day farre from me, when as pulling it on with my sins, it approacheth neere, and is ready to seaze vpon me. It is much hardened through the deceiffulness of sinne, custome in sinning depriving mee of the sense of it. There is much spirituall pride that lyeth lurking in it, which maketh me ready to arrogate the good things I haue not, to ouerweene those I haue, and to attribute the praise of both vnto my selfe, and so to rob thee of the glory of thine owne gifts. Hypocrisie also still hangeth vpon me, being ready, like a flie thiefe, to steale in, when I open the doore of mine heart, to let in any grace or religious duty. I am still tainted and poysoned with carnall selfe loue, which maketh mee oftentimes to incurre spirituall hurt and damage, whilst I labour ouer-eagerly after worldly good, and earthly aduantage. Yea as hereby I am made apt to neglect my soule, for the seeming and present good of my body, defrauding it of all dues that belong vnto it, so likewise the duties of righteousness and loue which I owe to my neighbours, when as they are in my partiall affection ouer-balanced with some worldly profit, pleasure or preferment. O that my head were a fountaine of teares, that I might wash my defiled body and soule in the floods of vnfeined sorrow! O that I could mourne for my sinnes, as a man mourneth for his onely sonne, and be sorry for them, as a man is sorry for the death of his first-borne! O that I could looke vpon him whom I haue pierced with bitter griefe, and be thorowly displeased with my selfe, because I haue by my sinnes so much displeased thee, who hast been euer vnto me so gracious a God, and so louing a Father! O that thou wouldest come downe and strike my rocky heart, that out of it might flow wholesome streames of repentance! But alas, the filthy staines and deepe dye of my sinnes cannot bee washed cleane with these waters. It is onely that Fountaine which thou hast opened to the house of David, and the inhabitants of Ierusalem for sinne and for vncleannesse, that is sufficient to purge me from my ingrained filthinesse. It is those bloody streames alone which so plentifully flowed out of my crucified Saujour, that can cleanse me from all my sins. And therefore (O Lord) for thy mercies sake, and for thy Christs sake, wash my leprous body and soule in the streames of this thy Iordan. Yea

(Lord) seeing they are so deeply stained with the double double dye of imputed and inherent, originall and actuall finnes, that no slight and ordinary washing can purifie and restore them to their created cleanness, multiply thy washings; drench and diue me thorowly in the streames of this liuing Fountaine, that being cleansed from my Scarlet and Crimson finnes, both in respect of their guilt and punishment, I may become as white as Snow, and that no spot remaining of spirituall defilement, I may be iustified when thou iudget, and stand righteous in thy sight. And together with the staine of sinne, take away also the sting of conscience, and worke in it sound and secure peace, by perswading me, by the infallible testimony of thy Spirit, that my finnes are remitted, I reconciled through the death and satisfaction of thy Sonne, and that, of the child of wrath, and heire of perdition, I am now become thine owne child by adoption and grace. And to this end let me finde and feele it in mee, not only the Spirit of Adoption perswading me of thy fatherly loue, and sealing me vp vnto the Day of my Redemption, but also the Spirit of Sanctification, mortifying in me all my sinfull corruptions, by applying vnto mee the vertue of Christs death, and quickening mee in the inner man, vnto holiness and newnesse of life, by the power and efficacy of his Resurrection. Let me put off, concerning the former conuersation, the old man, which is corrupt, according to the deceitfull lusts; and being renewed in the spirit of my minde, let me put on the new man, which, after thine owne glorious Image, is created in righteousness and true holiness. Let me continually keepe a narrow watch ouer my selfe, that I bee not againe intangled in the snares of the diuell, nor circumuented and misled through the deceitfulness of my corrupt flesh, but being freed from sinne, let me now become the seruant of righteousness. Let mee make conscience of all my wayes, and shunne not onely open and notorious, but also secret finnes, yea, all the occasions of euill, and hate even the garment which is spotted of the flesh. Let mee put on daily the whole armour of God, that being weake in my selfe, I may bee strong in thee, and in the power of thy might, and bee inabled to withstand the wiles of the diuell, and resist all tentations in the euill Day; praying alwayes with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseuerance. Weane mine heart and affections more and more from the loue of the world and earthly vanities, and being a pilgrim on earth, let my conuersation be in heauen, from whence I expect a Saviour and Redeemer. Begin, and worke in me all spirituall gifts and sauings graces which yet are wanting, and daily increase and confirme those that are begun; and let me daily bring forth the fruits of them all, throughout my whole life and conuersation in new obedience, labouring to performe vnto thee faithfull seruice in all my thoughts, words and deeds. Let me delight in the wayes of thy Commandements, and performe all the duties of holiness, righteousness and sobriety, with all cheerfulness and inward ioy. Let me daily seeke thy face and fauour aboue all things, and reioyce in nothing so much, as in the assurance of thy loue, and when the light of thy countenance shineth vpon mee. Remove out of my way, all lets and impediments, which might hinder me in my Christian course, or so assist mee with thy grace, that I may overcome them. Establish me with thy free Spirit, that I may not onely begin well, but also continue in all grace and goodnesse vnto the very end of my life, and let me be stedfast, vnmoueable, and alwayes abounding in the worke of the Lord. And with these my prayers and supplications, I doe also inuoe my praises and thanksgiuing, lauding and magnifying thy great and glorious Name, for thine inestimable loue, and the fruits and testimonies thereof shewed vnto me, even from before all beginnings vnto this present day. For that thou hast, of thy free grace, choosen mee to life and saluation, created mee after thine owne similitude and likeness, in wisdom, holinesse and righteousness, redeemed me at so deare a price, out of the miserable bondage of my spirituall enemies, effectually called mee, by the sound of the Gospell, to the knowledge of thy truth, vniued me vnto Christ by thy Spirit and a lively faith, and made me partaker of all his benefits; for my iustification by his righteousness and obedience, and for some degrees of sanctification begun in mee, whereby thou hast subdued the power of sinne, that though it dwelleth, yet it doth not raigne in me, and hast wrought in me some desire, resolution and indeuour to serue and please thee. For that thou hast watched ouer me with thy providence, in the whole course of my life, and namely, this night past, and hast thereby preserved mee from all perils; from the terrours of the night, and the malice of mine enemies, and hast refreshed me with quiet rest, and now raised me vp in the strength thereof to doe thee seruice. O Lord, enlarge my heart, that I may duly consider of thy manifold and rich mercies, and bee thorowly inflamed with the apprehension of thy loue. What am I (my God) that thou shouldest be thus gracious vnto mee, who am altogether lesse then the least of thy mercies, yea worthy of thy greatest punishments! O that I could loue and praise thee according to thy bounty and goodnesse! And being so poore, that I haue nothing to repay; and thou so rich, that thou neither needest, nor requitest any thing else; O that I could euer remaine a gratefull debter, hauing mine heart filled with thankfulness, and my mouth with thanksgiuing! And now (Lord) I further beseech thee, to continue still my God and guide, to direct, leade and uphold mee in all the wayes of holinesse and righteousness. Take mee into thy gracious protection this day and euer, and watch so ouer mee with thy all-ruling providence, that I may be preserved safe from all enemies, worldly and spirituall, and from those manifold dangers which incompass me on every side. Giue mee grace so to spend this day, that some glory may redound vnto thee by my seruice, some profit and benefit vnto those with whom I liue, and some further assurance vnto my selfe (from the increase of lauing graces discerned in mee, and spirituall strength in all good duties) of my saluation and eternall happiness. Order and governe all my thoughts, that they may be religious and honest; my speeches, that they may bee wise, and seasoned with grace; and all my wordes and actions for the well performing both of the generall duties of Christianity, and the speciall duties of my calling, blessing so all my labours; that I may be cheered and comforted in them by my prosperous success.

In

Another private Prayer for the Morning.

in all my good intentions. Supply vnto mee all temporall blessings, and the necessary comforts of this life, and let mee liue at thy finding, and receiue whatsoever I inioy, as the gifts of thine owne hand, and pledges of thy loue, that I may returne the praise which is due vnto thee for them, and vse them as helpes to further mee in all duties of thy service. Finally, I beseech thee, good Lord, to vouchsafe these and all other benefits, not onely vnto mee, but also to thy whole Church and enery particular member thereof, especially to this in which I liue. Multiply thy fauours vpon our Soueraigne Lord the King, our noble Prince the Prince Electour Palatine, and the Lady Elizabeth his wife, with their issue, vpon the honourable Lords of the Primate Councell, the Magistrates and Ministers of thy Word and Sacraments, the afflicted members of Iesus Christ, my friends and benefactors, kindred and acquaintance, and especially vpon this whole family, giuing vnto vs grace, that wee may keepe the vnitie of the Spirit in the bond of peace, and so ioine together with our hearts and minds in all duties of thy service, as that we may ioynely inherit that eternall happinesse of thy Kingdome, through Iesus Christ our Lord: to whom with thee and thine holy Spirit, bee rendred all glory and praise, might, Majesty, and Dominion both now and euermore. Amen.

Another private Prayer for the Morning.

Almighty and eternall God, our most gracious and loue Father in Iesus Christ, I thy poore sinfull seruant, being my selfe utterly vnworthy to appeare in thy glorious presence, doe yet in the Name and mediation of Iesus Christ offer vnto thee my prayers and supplications, in obedience to thy Commandements, and in some assurance of thy gracious promises, rendering vnto thee from the bottome of mine heart, all humble and hearty thanks, for thy manifold mercies and abundant blessings multiplied vpon mee, both in respect of spirituall and heavenly pledges, which concerne my euermourning saluation, and of temporall earthly benefits appertaining to the good of this life, and my present estate in this place of my Pilgrimage. For that thou hast freely loosed mee from all eternitie, and of thy meere grace hast chosen mee vnto life and glory, without any respect of my workes or worthinesse. For creating mee according to thine owne Image, and redeeming me out of the estate of sinne and death. For calling mee effectually by thy Word and Spirit, and making mee a seruant of thine owne family, and a member of Iesus Christ, whereby thou hast giuen mee full title vnto him, and all his benefits. For making with mee the Covenant of grace, and putting mee in him to bee thy child, vnto a liuely hope of my heavenly inheritance. For instructing mee in his righteousnesse imputed vnto mee, and applyed by a liuely faith, and sanctifying mee with thy Spirit, giuing mee some power ouer my corruptions, and some desire and inclination to serue and please thee in the duties of a godly life.

Another private Prayer for the Morning

297

my ouer me; with thy providence: ever since I had my being, and daily shielding mee from dangers, delivering mee out of manifold evils, and providing for mee all things necessary both for my soule and body.
For preserving mee this night past from all perils; giving mee the rest; and bringing mee in safely to see the light; adding yet another day to my life, that therein I may doe thee service, and vie all good merits for the furthering and assuring of my salvation. O Lord, give me a true heart and feeling of thy love, that I may love thee againe; and truly apprehension and taste of thy rich mercy and goodnesse, that thy heart and voyce may resound into thee the praises that are due thee; so much the more; O Lord, increase my thankfulness, by how much the lesse worthy I am of the least of thy mercies, by reason of my manifold and grievous sinnes. For I confess myselfe by this miserable state in which I am by nature; both in respect of my original corruption in which I was conceived and borne, whereby all the powers and faculties of my body and soule have bene wholly defiled; and utterly disabled vnto all duties of thy service for which I was created; and that I have made my selfe much more obnoxious; by adding heretofore a small infringement; whereby I have broken all and every of thy Commandements in thought, word and deed; both by committing the duties which thou hast commanded; and committing the contrary vices; and sinnes which thou hast forbidden; the which, as they are for the quality of them sinfull; so doe they in number exceed the haire of mine head and the dust of the earth. Yea, Lord, I haue not onely thus sinned against thee in the dayes of my ignorance, when as I neither had any knowledge of thee and of thy will; nor so much as any desire to serue and please thee;
but also since the time that thou hast called mee to the knowledge of thy Truth; and by the good motions of thy Spirit, hast perswaded mee to embrace, profess, and practise it; since thou hast allured mee by thy precious promises to serue thee; and hast encouraged mee herunto by innumerable blessings; and large testimonies of thy fauour; I haue offended against thee through frailty and infirmity; and not seldom through my knowledge and conscience. Oftentimes I haue neglected thy service, to serue in the meane while mine owne sinfull lusts; and when I haue undertaken it, I haue performed it oftentimes after a cold and small manner; with much weakenesse and wearinesse; with a dull heart, and deadnesse of heart and spirit. By all which my sinnes thou hast charged against mee; I haue iustly deserved to bee deprived of all thy blessings and benefits; and to bee overwhelmed with all those sinfull punishments threatened in the Law, respecting both this life and the life to come. O Lord my God, affoord my heart with increased sorrow in remembrance of this my sinne and misery. And as it is a burden too heavy for mee to beare; so let mee haue such a feeling of it, that I may linger after the righteousness of Iesus Christ, and apply it vnto mee by a lively faith; and so make good the Covenant of grace, which thou hast made with mee: one speciall branch whereof is this, that thou wilt remember my sinnes no more. I confess that I haue offended thy law in my Sinnes; Christ hath satisfied it; by paying my debts for mee.

most satisfying: accept therefore of his satisfaction, and impute not to mee that debt which hee hath discharged: I haue defensed euill death and condemnation: but hee was condemned, that I might be acquitted, and hath suffered the bitter death of the Crosse, and the anger due vnto my finnes, that I might be freed from death and thy pleasure: and therefore, O Lord, I beseech thee for his sake, to take the guilt and punishment of all my finnes, that they may not be imputed vnto mee in this life, nor in the life to come. And being thus ius-tified by faith, and at peace with thee, let mee also obtaine peace of conscience, in the assurance of the remission of my finnes, and thy love and fauour in Iesus Christ. Give vnto mee thine holy Spirit, and deseale mee vp vnto the day of my Redemption, and make mee thine own Child by adoption and grace. Let mee approoue my selfe to thee as Child, by resembling thee my heavenly Father in holinesse and righte-nesse; by hating and forsaking all that is euill, and by louing and imitating all that is good: Sanctifie mee therewith in my soule and body, and let mee not onely make an holy profession with my mouth, but proceed from my heart; and be expressed in the whole course of my life.
 Encourage mee in this worke against all difficulties, by assuring mee thou wilt bring it to good effect, and let mee apply vnto my selfe thy gracious promises, which assure mee as well of my sanctification and victory ouer my corruptions, as of my iustification and freedom from the guilt and punishment of my finnes. Let mee see continually before me thy Law, as the rule of my life, and labour to conforme my obedience vnto all things thereunto, denying vngodlinesse and all worldly lusts, and liuing holily and religiously, in respect of thee; righteously and charitably, in respect of my neighbours; and temperately and soberly, in respect of mine owne person. Let mee labour to obseue thy whole Law, in forsaking all sinne; especially that which is most sweet and pleasing to my corrupt flesh, and in embracing all vertues and Christian duties which thou hast commanded, especially those vnto which my nature is most averse. Let mee not content my selfe with such an hypocritically holinesse as is destitute of righteousnesse, nor with such a merely morall righte-ousnesse as is without holinesse, but let mee approoue my piety to be true, by my iustice, charity, and mercy, and let these be sanctified by my true godlinesse and religious deuotion. Let mee not stand at a stay, contenting my selfe with that small measure of sanctification which is begunne in me, but let mee daily strue in the vse of all good meanes, whereby I may attaine vnto more perfection, and so sanctifie them more by thy holy Spirit, that they may be effectually to perfect that good worke which thou hast begunne. Enrich mee more and more with sanctifying and saving graces, with the knowledge of thy will, with a lively faith in Iesus Christ, vntained repentance for my finnes, firm faith and confidence in thee, sincere love of thee and my neighbours, yea, even mine enemies for thy sake, inflame mine heart with an ardent desire of thy glory, replenish it with thy grace, that it may neuer be separated from thee. Strengthen mine hope, in the assured expectation of all thy gracious promises, especially those which concerne my sanctifying pinelle, give mee patience in all thy troubles, thankfulness for all thy benefits, peace of conscience, spiritual joy in the assurance of thy love, and the grace of perseverance in the profession and practice of thy true Religion unto the end. Remove all stumbling blockes of offence out of my way, comfort me against all discouragements, and arme me against all the temptations of my spirituall enemies, that they may never prevail against me. Take me into thy gracious protection this day and ever, preserve me with thy providence from all dangers, uphold me with thy Spirit, that I fall not into sinne. Direct me with thy Wisdom, and strengthen me with thy power in all my thoughts, words and works, that they may be acceptable in thy sight. Bless and assist me in the generall duties of Christianity, and in the speciall duties of my calling, that they may have good success, and wholly tend to the advancement of thy glorie, the edification of my brethren, and mine owne spirituall and everlasting good. Bless thy whole Church and every member thereof, especially this in which I live, with all the Magistrates, Ministers and people, this Family, and all to whom I am bound in any speciall bond of duty, beseeching thee to give vnto vs all, according to our severall necessities, all those gifts and graces which thou in thy wisdom knowest needfull, euen for Iesus Christ his sake to whom with thee and thy Holy Spirit, I ascribe all glorie and prayse, power and dominion, both now and for euermore. Amen.

A Prayer for the Family in the Morning.

Lord our God, who by thine infinite wisdom and power hast created all things in heauen and earth, and by thy gracious and all-ruling providence dost continually preserve and preserve them, wee thine humble and unworthy seruants doe here, in the mediation of Iesus Christ, prostrate our senses before the Throne of Grace, acknowledging that vnto thee belongeth all glory and prayse, but vnto vs shame and confusion of face, for whereas thou diddest create vs according to thine owne Image, in wisdom, holiness and right conscience, we have fallen in the loynes of our first parents, from this blessed estate, by transgressing of thy Commandement, and thereby have defaced thy glorious Image in vs, deprived our selves of all happynesse, and become liable vnto death of Body and soule. Yea, wee have deriued from our first parents, not onely the guilt of our sinne, but also the corruption of their nature, which hath so overspread all the powers and parts of our soules and bodies, that they are utterly impotent and insufficient to performe any duties of thy seruice, for which end they were created, but most forward and cheerfull in the seruice of sinne and Satan. From which roote of original sinne, wee haue brought forth those cursed fruits of small transgressions, which we haue multiplyed against thy Maieſty, by breaking alband euery of thy Commandements in thought, word and deed, euen from the beginning of our dayes to this preſent time. Many haue bene our ſecret ſinnes, of which thou alone and our owne conſciences haue bene witneſſes; and many haue wee committed in the view of the world, to the diſhonour of thy bleſſed Name, and ſlander of our Chriſtian profeſſion. Many haue bene our ſinnes of ignorance, the which vnto vs are vnexcusable, becauſe thou haſt reueiled thy ſelfe and thy will ſo clearly vnto vs; and many likewise haue bene our ſinnes againſt knowledge and conſcience; and the good motions of thy holy Spirit. Oftentimes haue wee ſinned through frailty, being ſurprized vpon the ſudden, with the violent and ſubrill tentations of our ſpiritual enemies; and oftentimes wilfully, aduſedly and deliberately, after many vowes and promiſes of repentance and amendement. We haue ſinned againſt thee before our conuerſion, when as Satans throne being ſet vp in our hearts, wee performed vnto him in all things cheerefull obedience; and ſuffered ſinne to raigne and rule in vs, without any gaineſaying or reſiſtance; and ſince wee haue bene called to the knowledge of thy Truth, though wee haue ſubmitted our ſelues as ſubiects of thy Kingdome, to be gouerned by thy Word and Spirit, yet haue we much failed in yeelding that obedience which is due vnto thee, being ſo led captiue by our corruptions, that wee could neither doe the good we would, nor leaue vndone the euill we would not; and though by thy holy Spirit, wee haue caſt Satan out of his Throne, and vanquiſhed the fleſh with the luſts thereof, ſo as they could not reigne ouer vs, as in former times, yet theſe enemies of our ſaluation doe ſtill fight againſt our ſoules, and being not quite caſt out, are as thornes in our ſides, and as prickes in our eyes, diſturbſing continually our peace, wounding our conſciences, and leading vs captiue vnto ſinne. And hereof it is, that wee haue ſo often and vpon ſuch ſlight occaſions vterly neglected the duties of thy ſeruiſe; and when we haue ſet our ſelues about them, haue done them ſo coldly and careleſſly, and diſcouered therein ſo many wants and weakenesſes, imperfections and corruptions, that if thou ſhouldeſt deale with vs according to thy righteous Iudgement, euen the beſt duties that euer we performed, could not eſcape unpuniſhed. O Lord our God, make vs truly apprehenſiue of our ſinne and miſery, that we may humble our ſelues vnder thy mighty hand, and turne vnto thee by vnfained repentance, and not onely bewaile our ſins paſt with vnfained ſorrow, but amend our liues for the time to come; and ſo accept of vs in thy Beſt-beloued, and whileſt we are returning vnto thee, meete vs in the way, and like a tender Father embrace vs in the armes of thy mercie. Doe away all our ſinnes, and blot out all our iniquities; and ſo waſh and purge our defiled ſoules and bodies in the precious blood of thine innocent Sonne, from the guilt and puniſhment of all our ſins, that they may neuer be layd to our charge, neither in this world, nor in the world to come. Yea Lord let vs not only haue the benefit of thy grace in thy free pardon, but alſo the comfort and peace of it, by hauing it sealed through the inward testimony of thy Spirit in our hearts and consciences; and for our better assurance, let vs finde and feele the power and efficacie of Christs death and Resurrection thereby applied vnto vs, as effectuell for our Sanctification, as for our Iustification, and for our freedome from the corruption of sinne; that it may haue no longer dominion ouer vs, and spirituall renewing vnto newnesse of life, as well as from the guilt and punishment. It is enough, Lord, and too much, that Satan and sinne haue thus farre preuayled, not onely for the bringing of vs into the state of death and condemnation, but also for the condemning and crucifying of the Lord of life, the nailing of his innocent body to the Crosse, and the shedding of his precious blood. Now (Lord) reward them as they haue deserved, and pay them double into their bosome. Breake the head of the old Serpent, that though he hisse against vs with his tentations, yet he may not hurt vs; naye our body of sinne vnto the Crosse of Christ, and by verine of his death, crucifie our flesh and the lusts thereof, that they may no longer haue dominion ouer vs; but may like slaues be held in perpetuall subiection to our spirituall part. Yea, subdue the power of sin in all the faculties and parts of our soules and bodies. Mortifie the corruption of our mindes and vnderstandings, the wilddome of the flesh, and errors of our iudgements, our foolish phantasies and conceits, our earthly mindednesse, and all vaine and wicked thoughts, that we may checke sinne in the first motions, and kill this viperous brood, before they come to growth & strength. Mortifie the frowardnesse, and perversenesse of our wils, the corruption of our hearts and affections, especially our self-love and love of the world, vniust anger, and desire of reuenge, carnall concupiscence and vncleannesse, intemperance, ambition, pride, couetousnesse and voluptuousnesse. Let vs hold our eyes and eares, our tongues and taste, and all other our senses vnder covenant, and make all vaine and wicked sights, all rotten and vsauory speeches, all intemperance and in sobriety odious and loathsome vnto vs. Quickens vs in the inner man, and frame vs in all holy obedience vnto thy heavenly will; make vs such as thou wouldest haue vs to be, and renew thine owne Image in vs, in wisdom, holinesse and righteousnesse, and let vs no more defile and deface it with our corruptions. Let vs submit our selues in all things to be guided by thy good Spirit, and yeeld cheerefull obedience vnto all the motions therof, not grieuing it by checking and quenching them, or putting them off by delayes to another time. Let vs serue thee in holinesse, righteousnesse and sobriety, not deuinding those things which thou hast conioyned, and not by fits and flashes, but constantly and continually thorowout the whole course of our liues. Inrich vs plentifully with all the gifts and graces of thy sanctifying Spirit, as Faith, Hope, Humility, Patience and the rest; yea, let vs dayly thriue in Spirituall strength, and not stand at a stay, but grow vp towards perfection, from child-hood to a ripe age in Iesus Christ. And with these our prayers and suites, we doe with like humble heartinesse ioyne thy prayeses and our thanksgiuing, for thy manifold blessings and benefits, respecting our soules, bodies or estates. For thine undeserued loue, whereby thou hast of thy free and meeete grace elected, created, redeemed, called, iustified, sanctified and preserved vs vnto an heavenly inheritance, and hope of a better life. For our present peace and prosperity, health, food, apparell, sufficiency of all temporall benefits, and contentednesse in them, and especially for causing vs so long to enioy the Light of thy Gospell with such liberty and safety. For preserving vs from all dangers this night past, and this day hitherto, and enabling vs by our rest, and other comforts of this life, to doe thee seruice. O Lord, we prayle and magnifie thee for these and all other thy mercies, and are sorry and ashamed, that we can be no more thankfull, hauing nothing else to returne vnto thee for all thy benefits. And now, Lord, seeing in thee we liue, moue, and haue our being, wee beseech thee to continue thy grace and fauour still vnto vs in the whole course of our liues, and namely, this day receiue vs into thy keeping, watch ouer vs with thy providence, and preserve vs with thy grace and power from all dangers, both spirituall and temporall, and from all euils both of sinne and punishment. Let vs set our selues wholly to seek and serue thee, and propound thy glory vnto our selues, as the maine end of all our thoughts, words and actions, and so direct and order them by thy holy Spirit, that they may vpon all occasions further and aduance it. And for as much as if thou dost not build the house, wee shall but labour in vaine to build it, O Lord, blesse vs all in the duties of our seuerall places and callings, that they may tend to the ioynt good of the whole Family, and euery one of vs in particular, that finding thy blessing vpon the workes of our hands, wee may with more courage and comfort be faithfull and painfull in them. Set thy feare alwayes before vs, and let vs carry our selues in all our courses carefully and conscionably, as in thy sight and presence, that whatsoeuer wee doe, or take in hand, may be acceptable vnto thee. Blesse together with vs thy whole Church, this especially in which wee liue, our gracious King, and Noble Prince, the Prince and Princeesse Palatine, with all their issue, the Councell, Magistrates, Ministers, and the whole people of this Land, the afflicted members of Iesus Christ, and this whole Family, with all other our friends, kindred and acquaintance; beseeching thee to vouchsafe vnto vs all, and to euery one of vs in our seuerall places and callings, all things necessarie for our present comfort and future happinesse, euen for Iesus Christ his sake, in whose Name and words we conclude our prayers, saying as he hath taught vs; Our Father, which art in heauen, &c.

A Prayer for the Family in the Morning.

Answer

Lord our God, who art in thine owne nature glorious and full of maiesty, infinite in goodnesse, wisdom, power, bounty, truth, and all perfection, most iust in all thy waies, and holy in all thy workes, and our most gracious Father in Iesus Christ, wee thine vnworthy seruants, finding and feeling our selues loaded with the vnsupportable waight of our manifold and grievous sinnes, doe come vnto thee for ease, and being sicke in sinne, euen vnto the death, doe flee vnto thee the alone Physicion of our soules, that wee may be eased and cured, and doe here lay open before thee our miserable estate and condition, that thou mayest magnifie thy mercies in our recouery. Wee confesse our hereditary diseases, and that originall leprosie of our bodies and soules, whereby they were infected and corrupted, euen in our first conception, and so disabled vnto thy seruice, that we cannot of our selues thinke a good thought, nor so much as entertaine into our hearts a desire to come out of the miserable thraldome of sinne and Satan. Our wisdom is enmity against thee, and we are not capable of that knowledge which thy Spirit reuealeth. All the imaginations of the thoughts of our hearts are onely euill, and that continually; our consciences are loaded with dead workes; our wills crooked and rebellious, still resisting all good motions of thy Spirit; our hearts hardened through the deceitfulnesse of sinne; our affections, desires and passions so disordered and poisoned with naturall corruption, that they are become filthy and loathsome sinckes of sinne; and all the members of our bodies, the ready instruments of our defiled soules for the acting of all abominable wickednesse. So that being, through his naturall corruption, a sinfull generation and viprous brood, wee haue iustly deserved, that thou shouldest reiect and pursue vs with thy wrath, though wee were free from all other sinnes, sauing those alone whereof wee were guilty as soone as wee were borne. And yet (alas) we haue not stayed here, but haue added vnto this our originall sinne, innumerable numbers of actuall transgressions, by breaking thy whole Law, and euery Commandement thereof, in thought, word and deede, both in the omission of all duties therein required, and in the commission of the vices and sinnes therein forbidden; whereby wee haue made our selues liable to the fearefull curse thereof, and to all the plagues & punishments of this life, and the life to come. Neither is there any power in vs to helpe our selues out of this misery, being as vnable to renew our nature, as the Blackamore to change his skin, or the Leopard his spots. Yea, when by thy Spirit wee are regenerate, and haue some desires and iudgements to serue and please thee, wee are vnto thee vnable to satisfie thy Iustice for the least of our sinnes past, seeing, if thou lookest vpon vs with thy pure eyes, our best righteousnesse will appeare like a polluted cloth, so mingled with our imperfections, and stayned with our corruptions, that it cannot challenge any other reward as its due, but thy displeasure and everlasting death. O Lord, wee humbly beseech thee, let vs not securely rest and please our selues in this our wofull condition, but hauing a liuely sense and feeling of our sinne and misery, let vs labour about all things to be freed from it. And seeing there is no name in heauen or earth, whereby wee may bee saued, but by Iesus Christ alone, thine onely Sonne and blessed Redeemer, whom thou hast purposely sent into the world to saue sinners; O Lord, let vs renounce our selues and all creatures in heauen and earth, as being vtterly vn sufficient to satisfie thy Iustice, and saue our soules, and let vs rest vpon him alone, hungering and thirsting after his righteousness, and desiring about all things that wee may bee found in him. And for his sake we humbly beseech thee to magnifie thy mercies in the free forgiveness of all our sinnes: and as they in their waight and number doe exceedingly abound, so let thy grace abound much more in their forgiveness. Enter not into iudgement with thy seruants, for in thy sight shall no man liuing bee iustified. Wee are not able to answer vnto thy Iustice one of a thousand, but Christ our surety hath payed our debt, and now as our Aduocate pleadeth for vs, that by him thou hast thy due, and that thy Iustice shall sustaine no losse in setting vs free, seeing hee hath made full satisfaction for vs. Heare him then, deare God, thus pleading for vs; Heare vs, holy Father, in his meditation pleading for our selues; forgive vs all our debts, and cancell the hand-writing by which wee were obliged, that it may neuer bee produced in iudgement against vs. Contrariwise, wee beseech thee, write the new covenant of grace, not in tables of stone, but in the fleshy tables of our hearts, and not onely enrole the great Charter of our peace in the volume of the Booke, containing in it the glad tidings of the Gospel, but ingrosse and ingraue it in the booke of our consciences, by the finger of thy Spirit, that wee may with inestimable ioy dayly peruse it, when wee haue it in our owne custody. And not only worke in vs this peace, in our assured freedom from the guilt of all our sinnes, but also inward and outward purity in our soules and bodies, by bathing and washing them in the blood of Christ from all sinfull corruption: And sanctifie vs throughout, that our whole spirit, and soule, and body may bee preserved blamelesse vnto the comming of our Lord Iesus Christ: make vs in him more then conquerours ouer all the enemies of our salvation; and spirituall Kings raigning especially ouer our corruptions, that they may not by their might and malice disturbe our peace. Requeire vs more and more with the Spirit of Grace and power; that we may walke with cheerefulness in the waies of thy commandments, performing throughout the whole course of our liues, all Christian duties of holinesse, righteousness and sobriety. Indue vs plentifully with all sanctifying and sauing graces, and let vs bring forth the fruits of them all in our new obedience, with all sincerity & vprightnes of heart. Open our blind eyes, that we may see the wonderful things of thy law; increase our faith, that the gates of hel may not preuail against it;

Another Prayer for the Family in the Morning.

it; preferue vs from carnall security and hardnesse of heart; and as wee daily renew our sinnes, so let vs daily renew our repentance and sorrow for them. Confirme our affiance in the assurance of thy power and loue, strengthen our hope, worke our hearts to thy feare, inflame them with thy loue, and with seruent zeale of thy glory; giue vs humility, patience, and spirituall reioicing in the assurance of thy fauour, euen in our afflictions and tribulations. Make vs zealous of good workes, that wee may approoue our faith by the fruits of it, and let vs neuer bee weary of well-doing. Arme vs against all the assaults of our spirituall enemies, against the feare of death and iudgement; to which end let vs keepe alwayes our accounts euen, that we may not be loth to be called to a reckoning. Prepare vs for the dayes of affliction and persecution, that wee may be ready with wisdom, constancy and courage, not only to doe, but also suffer all things for thy sake. Accept, with these our suits and prayers, our praises and thankesgiuing for thy manifold blessings and benefits, both corporall, spirituall and eternall; for thy inestimable loue, and that singular pledge thereof, thy deare and onely Sonne, whom thou hast giuen vnto vs to worke that great worke of our Redemption; for our being, and well-being, all thy graces in this life, and assured hope of glory and happinesse in the life to come. For our continuall preservation in the whole course of our liues, this night past, and this day hitherto; for our quiet rest, and all other comforts of this life. For all which, and all other thy mercies, thy blessed name bee praised and magnified. Wee beseech thee (good Lord) continue thy mercy and loue towards vs in the whole course of our liues; and namely, in the residue of this day watch ouer vs with thy gracious providence, and thereby preferue vs from all sinne and danger, and so rule all our thoughts, words and deeds, that being holy and righteous, they may be acceptable in thy sight. Let vs so spend this day in thy feare, as though it were the last day of our liues; and let vs, with all care and watchfulnesse, so arme our selues against all the tentations of our spirituall enemies, as that they may not preuaile against vs to make vs slothfull in thy seruice. Finally, giue vnto vs all things necessary for our soules and bodies, and so sanctifie all thy blessings to our vse, that they may be helps and furtherances vnto vs in seeking thy glory, and our own saluation. Vouchsafe these, and all other blessings, not onely vnto vs, but also to thy whole Church, and every member thereof, as if particularly wee had named them, and so ioine vs in the holy communion of grace, as that we may for euer inioy the communion and fellowship of thy blessed Saints and Angels in the Kingdome of glory. Heare vs, and helpe vs, O God of our saluation, in all these our suits, for thy Sonne and our Sauiour Iesus Christ his sake; to whom with thee and thy holy Spirit, one true and euerlasting God, we ascribe the glory and praise of all goodnesse and perfection both now and euermore. Amen.

A Prayer for the Family in the Evening.

Lord our God, most high and holy, most dreadfull and glorious in thy might and Maiesty vnto all creatures, terrible and like a consuming fire vnto all impenitent sinners; but a most gracious and louing Father vnto all those, who are reconciled vnto thee in Iesus Christ. Thou hast commanded vs to call vpon thee in all our necessities, and hast encouraged vs hereunto by thy most gracious and free promise, that where two or three are gathered together in the name of thy Sonne, there thou wilt be present amongst them by thy holy Spirit; to heare their suits, and relieue their wants. In obedience to which Commandement, and in some assurance of thy gracious promise, we thy poore and vnworthy seruants, doe heere, in the mediation of Iesus Christ, humbly prostrate our selues before thy Throne of grace and mercy, acknowledging our selues guilty of innumerable sinnes, and thereby lyable to as many fearefull punishments; but yet in the merits of thy Sonne, and in the truth of thy promises, pleading for pardon and forgiuenesse. We confesse vnto thee, that wee were conceiued and borne in sinne, hauing all the faculties and powers of our soules and bodies so wholly defiled with originall corruption, that wee are vterly disabled for thy seruice, and prone vnto all manner of wickednesse; and haue, in the whole course of our liues, multiplied against thee our actuall transgressions, by breaking thy whole Law, and euery Commandement thereof, in thought, word, and deed. Wee are naturally full of ignorance and blindness of mind, neither knowing thee, nor thy truth, and after that thou hast caused the light of the Gospell to shine vnto vs for many yeeres, our minds are still full of darknesse. We content our selues with a small measure of knowledge, and continue children in vnderstanding, when we should be of ripe age, not struiuing after more perfection; neither according to the measure of our meanes, are we rich in knowledge, and in the fruits of new obedience. We are full of infidelity and doubting, and negligent in the vse of the meanes, whereby our faith should be confirmed and strengthened; and are full also of impenitency, security and hardnesse of heart, and doe both seldome and slightly bewaile our sinnes past, and but weakly and vnconstantly resolute and in deuour to amend our liues for the time to come. We are ready to trust in the creature, more then in thee the Creator, and cannot, as we ought, rest vpon thy power and promises in the absence of inferiour meanes. We are apt to forget thee, when thou most remembrest vs, and the more that wee abound with thy blessings, the lesse mindfull wee are of thee from whom we haue receiued them. Wee haue loued the world and earthly things, more then thee and heavenly excellencies, and haue preferred the pleasures of sinne, before thy loue and fauour, being ready to hazard these, rather then to forgoe them. We are full of selfe-loue, and haue been moued hereby to sow vnto the flesh, of which we can reape nothing but sin and punishment; and haue set our hearts so much vpon carnall vanities, that they easily draw them away from thee. We doe not patiently and constantly constantly hope and waite for the accomplishment of thy promises, though we haue great experience of thy power, truth and goodnesse towards vs. We are cold or hake warme in our zeale, and haue not with any seruency advanced the meanes of thy glory, not remoued the impediments whereby it is hindered. Our reioycing is more in the flesh then in the Spirit, in worldly things and the pleasures of sinne, more then in thee the Fountaine of all true ioy, in the fruition of thy present fauours, and expectation of heavenly happinesse. Wee are vngratefull vnto thee for thy manifold benefitts, and oftentimes when we praise thee, it is with our lips onely, and not with inward ioy and cheerefulness of our hearts. Wee doe not approoue our loue and thankfulness vnto thee by our fruits of obedience, but haue been negligent in the duties of holiness and righteousness, that wee might giue glory to thy holy Name, and all wee doe, is maimed and imperfect, full of wants and weaknesses, and stained with many corruptions. Wee are ready to murmur and repine in our least afflictions, and doe not beare thy fatherly corrections with patience and thankfulness, being more sensible of the smart, then of our sinnes which haue caused it; and looking more to the rod, then vnto thy hand, which thereby chastizeth vs for our amendment. Wee doe not feare to displease thee by our sinnes, nor auoyd thine anger as the greatest euill; or if we doe feare thee at all, it is not so much for thy mercies, as to auoyd thy Iudgements. We haue not adorned our selues with humility and meeknesse, in the sight and sense of our owne vilenesse and unworthinesse; but are full of spirituall pride, arrogating vnto our selues those gifts we haue not, and ouerweening those we haue, for ascribing the praise of them vnto our selues, which is onely due to thee. We are negligent in the duties of thy seruice, and doe not performe them in Spirit and truth, but either neglect them vpon every slight occasion, or doe them without due preparation, coldly and formally, without any seruency of zeale, respecting thy glory, or our spirituall good. We haue often taken thy holy Name in vaine, and abused thine holy ordinances, and prophaned thy Sabbaths, not doing thy will onely on thy holy Day, but speaking our owne words, walking in our owne waies, and seeking our owne carnall delights. We haue also neglected the duties of righteousness, charity and mercy towards our neighbours, and of temperance and sobriety towards our selues. By all which, and many other our sinnes, wee haue made our selues subiect to thy wrath and the curse of the Law, and haue iustly deserved to be deprived of all testimonies of thy loue, and to bee overwhelmed with all thy iudgements and punishments; both in this life, and the life to come. O Lord our God, affect our hearts with some like sorrow, because we haue so much and often displeased thee our gracious Father, and let vs be grieved in our soules, that wee are so little grieved for our sinnes, whereby we haue pierced our Saniour, and grieved thy good Spirit dwelling in vs. And further, wee beseech thee, in the multitude of thy mercies, to remit and forgive all our sinnes, and wash vs cleane from the guilt and punishment of them all, that they may neither deprime vs of thy loue and manifold blessings temporall and eternall, nor expose vs to thy wrath and fearful punishments. And not onely remie our sins, and heale

heale our soules, but speake comfortably to our consciences, by the secret voyce of thy Spirit; as once thy Sonne did to the sicke of the palsey, Sonnes, be of good comfort, your sinnes are forgiven you. Strengthen our weake faith in the assurance of thy loue, and the remission of our sinnes; and let vs labour earnestly in the vse of all good meanes, whereby it may bee more and more increased and confirmed; that so without waivering and doubting we may apply Christ vnto vs with all his benefits, and thy gracious promises made in him. Let vs not weaken and wound it with sinnes committed against our knowledge and conscience; but nourish it by bringing forth the fruits of obedience in a godly life. Affirme vs that wee are thy children by adoption and grace, and heires of that heavenly inheritance reserved for thy Saints; and let vs approoue our selues to be so, by demeaning our selues in all things as it becometh thy Sonnes. Let vs loue, reuerence, and obey thee our heavenly Father, and thinke all too little which wee can doe or suffer for thy sake, that thereby we may expresse our loue towards thee. Let vs, about all things, be zealous of thy glory, reioycing when it is magnified, and grieuing when it is neglected either by our selues or others. Let vs not hazzard our heavenly inheritance, by wilfull sinning for the gayning of the whole world, but let vs labour to make our calling and election sure, and worke out our saluation with feare and trembling. Giue vnto vs peace of a good conscience, and replenish our hearts with spirituall ioy in the assurance of thy fauour. Let vs vndoubtedly expect the performance of al thy gracious promises made in Christ, euen when thou seemest to delay them, especially that mayne promise of euerlasting life and happinesse; and hauing this hope, let vs daily purge our selues, as hee also is pure. But especially giue vs grace, that wee may bring forth the fruits of our faith, in true, hearty, and vnfeined repentance; bewayling our sinnes past, hating our present corruptions which still hang vpon vs, and both purposing and seriously endeavouring to leaue and forsake our sinnes, and to serue thee in holinesse and righteousnesse all the dayes of our liues. Let vs not deferre our repentance from day to day, but seeing the necessity thereof vnto saluation, let vs lay hold of the acceptable time, and whilest it is called to day, let vs not harden our hearts, but turne vnto thee with all our soules. Let vs, as we daily renew our sinnes, renew also our faith and repentance, and haue an earnest and serious study of pleasing thee in all things. Let vs not content our selues with a small measure of repentance, seeing our sinnes are many and grievous, but let vs aspire to the highest perfection, hating sinne with a perfect hatred, and bewayling it with bitter griefe. Finally, let vs constantly persevere in the practice of repentance, and hauing begun in it, let vs continue it to the very end of our liues. And as wee begge these benefits at thy hands, so wee yeeld vnto thee most humble and hearty thanks, for all thy mercies and fauours vouchsafed vnto vs, especially for all thy spirituall graces concerning eternall life, and about all, for that inestimable pledge of thy loue, thy deare and onely Sonne, whom thou hast given to the death, that hee might free vs from all our spirituall enemies, and purchase for vs euerlasting happinesse. Wee praise thee, for that thou hast watched ouer vs with thy gracious prouidence, in the whole course of our liues, and namely, this day past, preserving vs from all dangers, and furnishing vs with all necessaries, and blessing vs in all our labours and induours. Wee beseech thee, holy Father, to continue with our thankfulness, thy loue towards vs and care ouer vs. Take vs this night into thy gracious protection, and watch ouer vs with thy prouidence, waking and sleeping, and thereby preserve vs from all perils and dangers, and from the malice and fury of all our enemies spirituall and temporall, especially of that raging and roaring Lyon, the deuill, who seeketh all aduantages to worke our destruction. Let vs not sleepe, like others, the sleepe of sinne, which bringeth death, but let vs still keepe the spirituall watch, that wee may alwayes bee prepared for the day of death and Iudgement, and haue our accounts continually in readinesse, that when wee are called to a reckoning, wee may with comfort appeare before our Iudge. Preserve vs in the darke from the workes of darkenesse, and let vs day and night behaue our selues as in thy sight and presence, making no lesse conscience of secret sinnes, then of those which are open and manifest. Let vs, whilest our bodies rest, haue our mindes exercised with holy and heauenly Meditations, and let them bee so seasoned with thy grace, and guided by thy good Spirit, that they may not in our sleepe giue way to sinfull thoughts and vaine imaginations. Giue vnto vs such quiet and moderate rest, that our bodies may thereby bee refreshed, and their decayed strength repaired, and so blesse and sanctifie our sleepe vnto vs, that it may bee a meanes of preserving our health, and of making vs more fit for all duties of thy service. Heare vs, gracious God, in all these our suites, and vouchsafe these and all other blessings which in thy wisdom thou knowest needfull, not onely vnto vs, but also to all thy children and seruants, and especially such as bee of this Church, the Magistrates, Ministers, and whole people, euen for Iesus Christ his sake; In whose Name and words wee conclude our prayers, as hee himselfe hath taught vs, saying, Our Father, which art in heauen, &c.

Another Prayer for the Family in the Evening.

 Immortall, inuisible, and onely true God, most wise, mighty, iust, and mercifull, holy and infinite in all perfection, Father of our Lord Iesus Christ, and in him our most gracious and louing Father: Thou hast in thy Word invited sinners to come vnto thee, promising that if wee confesse and forsake our sinnes, wee shall finde mercy; if wee lay them open, thou wilt hide them; and if wee acknowledge and bewaile them, thou wilt shew thy selfe faithfull and righteous in forgiving them: wee thy vnworthy seruants, being loaden with sinne and misery, doe heere humble our selues before thee, and in the mediation of Iesus Christ, prostrate our selues before the Throne of grace, suing vnto thee for mercy and forgiveness. Wee confesse vnto thee, holy Father, that wee are, by nature dead in trespasses and and finnes, and the children of wrath as well as others, loaded with the guilt, both of that corruption in which wee were conceived, and of innumerable actual transgressions, whereby wee have violated thy whole Law, and so made our selues subiect to the curse thereof, and everlasting death of body and soule. The which our sinne and misery is much aggravated, in that wee haue long liued without any sense of it, or any desire to be freed from it, but took all our delight in displeasing thy Majesty, and in performing cheerefull seruice vnto sinne and Satan. Yea, Lord, after that thou of thy free grace hast giuen vs a sight of our misery, and hast pulled vs out of this wretched thraldome, working in vs some desires, resolutions, and indeuours to serue and please thee, wee confesse that the reliques of sinne doe still remaine in vs in great strength, and howsoeuer the old man and body of sinne, haue by thy holy Spirit receiued their deadly wound, yet haue they in them such life and strength, and are so animated and reuiued with the suggestions of our old aduicery the deuill, breathing (as it were) a new life into them, that they doe still much vex and trouble vs, making continuall warre against our soules, and oftentimes leading them captiue vnto sinne. Much blindness and vanitie doe still remaine in our mindes, so that we haue but a diemne sight of thee, and thy will and wayes. Our memories are weake and slippery, and, like riuen vessels, let the precious liquor of the Word of life and grace runne out, as soone as it is put into them. Our consciences are defiled and impure, loaded with the guilt of sinne, and yet oftentimes senseless of their burthen. Our iudgements are full of error and ignorance, and very weake in spirituall discerning. Our wills perterse and obstinate in euill, and very auerse and awke to good things, and doe not incline to the doing of thy will with cheerefulness and delight. Our hearts remaine still hard and full of carnall security, intractable and inflexible, and doe not relent and melt, either with thy mercies or iudgements. Wee are still assaulted with much doubting and infidelity, and our faith is often shaken with dangerous tentations. Our repentance is weake, and full of wants, our sorrow for sinne slight, and soone ouer, and our resolutions and indeuours to amend, subiect to much inconstancie, and broken off with euery small impediment. There is much poyson of corruption still remainyng in our affections, which draweth vs from thee, when we sell our selues to seeke and serue thee, vnto the world, and earthly things. Wee are still full of carnall selfe loue and loue of the world, which quencheth and cooleth in vs the loue of thee, and of spirituall and heavenly things; our affiance in thee is weake, and after much experience of thy power and sufficiencie, goodness and truth, we can hardly trust thee, vntill wee haue inferiour meates and helps, as pawns in our hands, and wee are too too prone to relie vpon the creatures, and our owne policies and strength, our hopes are faine and watering, one while inclining towards presumption, and soone after forsaking vs, in danger vs to despaire. Wee oftentimes feare men, and neglect thee, and hazard thy loue, to auoyd their displeasure. Our zeale is hote warme, in seeking thy glory, and our deuotion cold in holy duties. There still remaineth in vs, much pride, hypocrisie, impatience, vnjust anger, conuotousnesse, voluptuousnesse, doubtlesse, and all other sinfull lusts, which continually fighte and strive against the good motions of thy holy Spirit, and oftentimes overcome, and quench them. And how withstanding that the flesh and the corrupt lusts thereof doe still remaine so long in vs, yet we acknowledg to our shame, that we are farre from being diligent in fighting against them, and in using those good means, whereby we might be enabled to subdue them, and to purge our hearts from these car-nall corruptions; whereof it is our siding in vs in great vigour and strength, they disable vs in doing the good we would, and shall we do the will we would not, oftentimes wofully hindring vs in the duties of thy seruice, and oftentimes so disturbing and discomforting them, that we performe them with much weakness & weariness, with great dulnesse and deadnesse of heart and spirit; and whilst we are delighted in thy Law in the inner man, this Law of our members rebellling against the law of our mindes leadeth vs captiue to the law of sinne. O wretched men that we are, who shall deliver vs from the body of this death? Granting God, we beseech thee, giue vs more and more a lively sense and feeling of those our wants and imperfections, frailties and corruptions, that we may wholly deny and disclaime our felicitie and our own righteousnesse in the works of our iustification and edification, so that at last we may wholly trust upon thine infinite mercies and all sufficient merits and perfect obedience of Iesus Christ. For whose sake we most humbly beseech thee to pardon graciously all our wants and weaknesses, covering our imperfections with his most precious righteousness, & washing away all our sin-full corruptions in his most precious blood. Yes Lord, for we and for thee for his sake not only our sins and infirmities, but also those un-numberd and grievous finnes, which we haue committed against thee in the whole course of our liues, whether in the days of our ignorance, or since we attained the knowledge of thy truth, we will them all bury in the blood of Christ; and fill our consciences with that blood righte iudgement of sinne, which is as sufficient to pierce deepe and deathly wounds, as small sores with a slight touches of any deadly sinne; remitt and forgive vs all our finnes, which vs also thou dost pardon and pardon in our consciences in the assurance of our passing through the infallible testimony of thy holy Spirit; and thereby enable vs to throw out this wee may doubt and confound both our soules and bodies wholly to thy worship and seruice. Because our corrupt hearts with the lusts thereof and led them have no longer dominion in vs. Now holy Father, not only lay the burden of all corruptions, but pull them up in the very roots, and not only would and weaken the Old man and body of sinne, but kill and utterly destroy and abolish in thy goodness this no reliques of sinne remaine in vs, to disturb our peace, and distract vs in thy seruice. Enlarge vs with the Spirituall life of grace, that being made strong and vigorous, we may be able joyfully to overcome all Ies and difficulties, which oppose vs in our Christian course, and may performe vnto thee all duties of piety, righteousness and holiness all the days of our lines, with all choicefulnesse and delight. Let thy Spirit dwelling in vs, replenish our hearts and soules with all sanctifying and sustaining graces. Inlighten our mindes with a sound, saving and experimental knowledge of thee and thy Truth, and let vs draw whatsoever wee know into vs and practice. Take away from vs our naturall doubting and infidelity, and worke in vs a true, lively and iustifying faith, that wee may apply vnto vs all thy gracious promises made in Christ, and rest onely vpon his merits and thy mercies, for our iustification and salvation. Give vs hearty and vnfeined repentance for our sinnes, that wee may not onely bewaile them with godly griefe, but also leaue and forsake them, and serue thee in holiness and newnesse of life. Confirm our affiance in thee, and let vs firmly resolve, that though thou shouldest kill vs, yet we will still trust in thee. Let vs confidently expect the performance of all thy gracious promises with a lively hope, and still waite vpon thee when thou seemest to defer thy helpe. Let vs haue a sensible feeling of thy loue, shed abroad in our hearts by thy holy Spirit, that being inflamed thereby, wee may loue thee againe with all our soules and strength, and all others in and for thee. Let this fire of holy loue shew, and approue it selfe by the flame and heate of godly zeale, in seeking thy glory in and aboue all things, feruently, yet wisely and discreetly, opposing whatsoever hindreth it, and furthering all the meanes whereby it is furthered. Worke thy feare in our hearts, and let vs stand in awe of thee, not onely for thy Iudgements, but also for thy mercies, abhorring nothing more then thy displeasure, who hast ever bene vnto vs so gracious and good a Father. Give vs grace to yeeld vnto thee all sonne-like and true obedience, both by doing that which thou enioynest, and suffering that which thou imposest. Adorne vs with meekenesse and humility, and let vs be base in our owne eyes, that wee may be precious in thy sight. Replenish our hearts with Spirituall ioy in the assurance of thy loue and our salvation, that nothing may dunt or dampe it; and stablish vs with thy free Spirit, that we may neuer fall from thee, but may perseuer in the profession and practice of true godlinesse, till death summoneth vs to Iudgement. Let vs be iust towards all, and mercifull towards the poore and afflicted, still abounding in all good workes, and make vs temperate, sober and thankfull in the vse of all thy blessings, that they may further, and not hinder vs in all Christian duties. And as we implore thy goodnesse for those things which we want, so with thankfull hearts and voyces, we praise & magnifie thy great and glorious Name for all thy mercies and fauours vouchsafed vnto vs, respecting either this life or the life to come. And namely, for preserving our lines, and blessing our labors, for relieuing our wants, and defending vs from danger this day past. We beseech thee vnto the multitude of thy other graces, adde this with the rest, that we may make right vse of them, for the stirring vp of our thankfulness, and inflaming of our hearts with thy loue. O Lord, be still gracious vnto vs, and now receive our bodies and soules into thy hand this night, that they may be safe in thy keeping from all euill both of sinne and punishment; and as we cease from the workes of our callings, so much more let vs rest from all workes of darkenesse, with a full purpose neuer againe to vnder take them. Giue vs comfortable and quiet sleepe, that our spirits being thereby refreshed, and our strength renewed, wee may be the fitter to serue thee in the generall duties of Christianity, and the speciall duties of our callings. Let not our sleepe breake off our spiri-

 tuall watch, but let vs still be in readinesse for the glorious appearing of Iesus Christ. When we wake, let vs wake with thee, lifting vp our hearts and soules in holy and heavenly Meditations, and praying thee for all thy goodnesse. Together with vs, blesse thy whole Church, this in which we liue, our soueraigne Lord and King, our Noble Prince, the Prince and Princesse Palatine, the Councell, Magistrates, and Ministers, those which are afflicted, and thy whole people, beseeching thee in our seuerall places, to giue vs whatsoever thou knowest needfull for vs, for Iesus Christs sake: to whom with thee and thy holy Spirit, wee ascribe all glory and prayse both now and euermore. Amen.

A Prayer for the Lords Day in the Morning.

 Lord our God, glorious in Maiesty, omnipotent in power, infinite in all goodnesse & perfection, and our most gracious Father in Iesus Christ, who hast created all things of nothing for thine own glory, and man especially for thine own seruice, the which he is bound to performe both by the right of creation, wherein thou hast vouchsafed vnto him his being, & of Redemption, whereby thou hast given vnto him his wel-being, by restoring him to that estate of blessednes which he had lost by his sins. But yet in a more especiall maner ought this seruice to be performed on thine owne peculiar Day, which thou hast appropriated to thy worship, & consecrated to an holy rest, both by thy commandement, and also thine owne example. We thine vnprofitable seruants, and vtterly vnworthy of these high and holy priuiledges, doe here present our selues before thee, desiring, and in some poore measure endeavouring to sanctifie this Day of rest, and to glorifie thee by performing, as we are able, such duties of thy seruice as thou requirest. Howbeit, we must needs acknowledge, to thy glory & our own shame, that we haue vtterly disabled our selues vnto them by our manifold & grieuous sins. For through our naturall corruption, thy Sabbaths, which should be our delight, are become tedious & vnpleasant; thy seruice, which should be our meat and drinke, and euen the very life of our life, and ioy of our hearts, is become so lothsome and distastfull to our carnall appetite, that either we vterly neglect it, or else performe it after a cold and carelesse manner, with much dulnesse, drowzines, and irksome wearinesse. Our wisdom is enmity against thee, & our vnderstandings dull in conceiuing spirituall things, our thoughts & imaginations so wholly carried away with earthly vanities, that when they should be wholly intent vnto spirituall exercises, they roue and wander after worldly trifles. Our consciences are so loaded with dead works & the guilt of our sins, that they weaken our faith in applying thy promises, and deprive vs of that confidence and comfort which we should otherwise haue in our praying and hearing. Our memories are like riuen vessels, which suffer the precious-liquor of thy Word to run out without vse or profit. Our wils are so stubborne and rebellious, that we cannot submit to thine holy Ordinances, but resist both the outward ministry of thy Word, and the inward motions of thy holy Spirit. Our hearts are so hardened with the deceitfulness of sin, that they are not easily mollified with thy sweet promises and gracious benefits, nor terrified and broken with thy threatnings and righteous Iudgements. Our affections are so wholly corrupted and disordred, that they are wholly set vpon worldly things, and little loue and delight in thee and thy sauing truth, in thy seruice and Sabbaths; doe wee feele in our dead hearts, in comparison of that seruour of affection, which we sensibly perceiue in the pleasures of sinne, and worldly delights. And with this corruption of our sinfull soules, our bodies likewise are so tainted and infected, that they are altogether indisposed vnto thy seruice, and exceeding dead and lumpish in the performance of all holy and Religious duties. From which totall corruption of our natures, haue issued and sprung those innumerable numbers of actuall transgressions, whereby we haue broken thy whole Law, and euery Commandement thereof in thought, word and deed. But especially we acknowledge our fearefull neglect of the duties of thy seruice, and our weake & imperfect performances, when we haue vndertaken them; our profanation of thy Sabbaths, and abuse of thine holy Ordinances; our little profiting by those plentifull meanes of our saluation, which for a long time thou hast graciously afforded vs, either for the increasing of sauing knowledge, the strengthening of our faith, or bringing forth fruits of new obedience; our want of faith and seruency of spirit in calling vpon thy Name; our want of reuerence and attention in hearing thy Word, our many distractions and wandring thoughts; our want of care to treasure it vp in our hearts, and of conscience to make an holy vse of it in our liues and conuersations. By all which and innumerable other sinnes, we acknowledge (good Lord) that we haue iustly deserved to be deprived of all meanes of our saluation, and that thou shouldest take away from vs the food of our soules, and cause them to perish through Spirituall famine; or that thou shouldest turne our meate into poyson, and make it to become the saueur of death to our deeper condemnation, which in it owne nature is the saueur of life vnto life, and thine owne strong power vnto saluation. But wee beseech thee (good Lord) for thy Sonnes sake, to be gracious vnto vs in the free pardon of these and all other our sinnes; and seeing hee hath fully satisfied thy Iustice, by that all-sufficient sacrifice, which he hath once offered vpon his Crosse, be reconciled vnto vs in him, and cleanse vs thorowly from the guilt and punishment of all our sinnes, that they may not be as a wall of separation to stop from vs thy blessings, blessings, nor as strong chaines to pull downe vpon vs thy iudgements and punishments, either in this world, or in the world to come. And being thus freed from all our sinnes, let vs devote our felicity wholly to thy seruice: which that we may performe with greater cheerfulness, and diligence, let vs haue the comfortable assurance of this thy mercy in the remission of our sinnes, sealed in our hearts by thy good Spirit, witnessing vnto vs that we are thy children by adoption and grace. And thereby not only scale vs vp vnto the Day of our Redemption, but also sanctifie vs throughout in our bodie and soules, by the mortification of the flesh, and our spirituall quickning in the inner man, that wee may, in the whole course of our liues, serue and please thee. But in a more especiall manner we beseech thee (good Lord) to sanctifie vs, that we may sanctifie this thy Sabbath; and assist vs by thy grace and holy Spirit, that wee may so per-forme the religious duties of thy seruice, as that wee may bee made more holy, and inabled vnto the leading of such a Christian life as may bee acceptable in thy sight. Take away from vs the corruption of our faculties, whereby we are made backward and vntoward to the duties of thy seruice, and make vs willing to sequester our selues from all worldly affaires, that we may wholly be employed in them. Let vs reioyce in thy Sabbath, as being the time of our spirituall recreation, and the market of our soules, and let vs not rest in a formall keeping off them, but performe the duties required in them with all care and good conscience, not onely in the outward man, but with our hearts and soules, in spirit and truth. Free vs from carnall weariness, as thinking the time long till they be past; but knowing that time to be best spent which is employed in thy seruice, let vs take most comfort and contentment in it. Inable vs (good Lord) by private preparation to fit our selues for thy publick seruice, meditating on our wants, that we may vse all good means whereby they may be supplied, and on our speciall sins & corruptions, that we may get spirituall strength against them, and imploring the assistance of thy good Spirit, that we may be inabled thereby so to performe in an holy manner, all duties which thou requirest. Let vs keep an holy Rest vnto thee, and abstaine not onely from the ordinary workes of our callings and worldly affaires, but also from all car-nall pleasures and sensual delights. Suffer not our thoughts to be taken vp with worldly or wicked cogitations, but let our minds bee exercised in spirituall and heavenly meditations. Set a watch before our mouths, that we may not, on this holy Day, speak our owne words, nor utter any idle, vaine, worldly or wicked speeches; but let our tongues speak to thy praise, and be exercised in holy & religious conferences, tending to the mutuall edification one of another. Let vs not content our selues with a mere cessation from our labours, but refer this Rest to holinesse, as the maine end thereof, without which the outward rest is but vaine; and with the extennall, let vs ioyne the internall rest from sin, exercising our selues in repentance from dead workes. Make vs carefull in vsing all good means which thou hast ordained for the sanctifying of thy Day, both publicly and pri-uately, and let vs, with one hart and voyce, ioyne with the rest of the Congregation in all the parts of thy seruice. Inable all thy Ministers in all places, and him especially to whose charge thou hast committed vs, that they may break vnto vs the Bread of life, and rightly diuide thy Word for our spirittuall nourishment. Furnish them with all gifts and graces necessary for their high calling, and let them deliuer thy truth as in thy presence, faithfully and powerfully, truly and sincerely, and so assist them with the inward working of thine holy Spirit, that thy Word may be effectual for the conuersion, edification and saluation of their hearers. Inable vs by the same Spirit, to call vpon thee with faith & feruency, and with all loue and thankfulness to praise thee for all thy blessings vouchsafed vnto vs. Let vs with all due reuerence & attention heare thy Word, lay it vp in our hearts and memories, and bring forth the fruits of it in our liues and conuersations. Give vs grace also (O Lord) to sanctifie thy Sabbathis privately, by performing by our selues, and in our owne families, those private duties which are specially required on this thy Day. Let vs meditate on thy Word after we haue heard it, and apply it vnto our selues for our owne vse. Let vs meditate on thy marvellous works of Creation, Preservation and Redemption; but especially on the death and Resurrection of our Lord and Saviour, that they may be effectual to mortifie our sins, and to quicken vs vnto newnes of life. Let vs spend our time in religious exercises, and in the works of charity & mercy, as being those sacrifices wherein thou most delightest; but especially in those spirituall duties which tend to the saluation of our owne and others soules, taking care not onely to sanctifie thine holy Day our selues, but as much as in vs lieth, that it may be sanctified by all those who in any wayes belong to our charge. Accept of our praise and thanksgiving for all thy blessings and benefits, both spirituall and temporall, which thou hast multiplied vpon vs, and continue them vnto vs this day and euer, preserving vs from all perils, and furnishing vs with all necessities, that we may be the better with all cheerfulness to doe thee seruice: And vouchsafe all these blessings which wee haue craved for our selues, with all other things which in thy wisdom thou seest needful vnto every true member of thy Church, &c. euen for Iesus Christ his sake, to whom with thee & thine holy Spirit, we ascribe all praise and glory, power and dominion, both now, and for euermore. Amen.

A Prayer for the Euening of the Lords Day.

O Eternal God, who art glorious in Majesty and power, and of infinite goodnesse and mercy vnto all those who are reconciled vnto thee in thy Sonne; wee thine vnworthy seruants, having nothing else to returne vnto thee for the innumerable testimonies of thy loue, which with a bountifull hand thou hast multiplied vpon vs, doe here offer vnto thee the sacrifice of praise and thanksgiving for all thy blessings and benefits, which either respect our soules or bodies; this life, or the life to come. More especially, wee laud and magnifie thy great and glorious Name, for that thou hast loved vs from all eternity, and of thy mere grace, without any respect of our worthinesse, hast made vs vessels of grace by thy free election, created vs according to thine owne Image, redeemed vs out of the hands of all our spirituall enemies, by giuing thy dearly beloved Sonne to dye for vs, when when as we were strangers and enemies; for calling vs by thy Word and Spirit, to the saving knowledge, and effectual participation of him and all his benefits; for our iustification by his obedience, our sanctification by thy Spirit, and for that assurance which thou hast given vs of a better life in the world to come. For all temporall benefits, as health, wealth, peace, plenty, preservation from dangers, and protection from all our enemies, both worldly and spirituall. And especially, wee praise and glorifie thee for visitating vnto vs, in such a gracious manner, the means of our saluation; for our blessed opportunities and liberties, with peace and safety in sanctifying thy Sabbaths, publickly and priuately, by hearing thy Word, and calling vpon thy Name, and performing other duties of thy seruice, that thereby we may glorifie thee, and make our owne calling and election sure; and for giuing vnto vs hearts, wherein, by thy Spirit, thou hast wrought some poore desires and indeuours, to make vse of these thy benefits, for the enriching of our soules with all spirituall graces, as at other times heretofore, so namely, this day past. O that our soules could be ransomed with the sweet apprehension of such inestimable blessings! O that we could exceed all others in loue and thankfulness, as farre as wee exceed them in these high and holy priuiledges, and were able to expresse them in our carefull and confectionable indeuours to glorifie and please thee in all things, who hast been so gracious and good vnto vs! But alas, how vnworthy haue we made our selues of the least of these thy benefits, by our manifold and grievous finnes; both our originall corruption, which hauing ouer-spread all the powers and parts of our soules and bodies, hath utterly disabled them vnto all duties of thy seruice; and our manifold actall transgressions, which in number and waight exceed all things (but thy mercies, which are aboue all thy workes, and the merits and satisfaction of thy Sonne, which are of infinite worth and value). More especially, we humbly acknowledge our fearfull abuse of those great priuiledges and means of our saluation, which for a long time thou hast graciously granted vnto vs. For not onely haue we, in the dayes of our ignorance, utterly neglected all duties of thy seruice, spending our whole strength in the miserable slavery of sinne and Satan, and profaned and mis-spent thy Sabbaths, in pleasing our carnall lusts, and performing the workes of darknesse, in greater measure, and worse manner then any other dayes besides; but even since wee haue been called to the knowledge of thy truth, and haue consecrated our selues to thy seruice, wee haue either vpon slight occasions neglected those holy duties of thy publick and priuate worship, or performed them with many wants and weaknesses, discovering vnto thee who searchest the heart, many imperfections and great corruptions. For we haue not remembered thy Sabbaths, nor with seruent desires longed after thine holy Day. We haue not delighted in them, nor consecrated them vnto thee as an holy Rest; but though the spirit hath been willing, yet the flesh hath been weake, and soone tyred with spirituall exercises. We haue been much defective in our zeale and deuotion, and haue been too too cold and formall in religious duties, and haue not performed them with thine care and conscience, nor haue serued thee with our hearts and soules, in spirit and truth, in that degree which thou requirest; but externally and with the outward man, hauing in the meane while our minds and hearts carried away with many distractions and worldly imaginations. Our cogitations haue nor bin take wholly vp with spirituall and heavenly things, but we haue suffered them to moue & wander after earthly trifles. Our tongues haue not, in that measure as they ought, been exercised in setting forth thy praise, nor in such holy and religious conferences as tend to the edification one of another: but we haue spoken our own words on thine holy Day, and many of our speeches haue been idle and vaine, worldly and vsauoury. We haue not, as we ought, priuately prepared and fitted our selues for thy publike seruice, by prayer and meditation, & by renewing our faith and repentance; but haue come into thy glorious presence without due feare and reuerence; hating our hearts clogged and choked with many corruptions, which haue disabled them to the duties of thy seruice, and haue made them like unfallow and vnweeded grounds, vnfitt to receiue the seed of thy Word. We haue not called vpon thy Name with faith and feruency of spirit, nor giuen thanks vnto thee for all thy benefits, with such cheerfulness as becometh vs. We haue not, with due reuerence and attention, heard thy holy Word; nor laid it vp in our memories, nor applyed it to our hearts and consciences, nor made an holy vse of it, by putting it in practice in our liues and conuersations. We haue not meditated, as we ought, on thy Word which we haue heard, nor on thy maruellous works of Creation, Preservation & Redemption; nor diligently read and studied in thy holy Book, nor exercised our selues in the works of mercy and Christian charity towards our brethren, in that manner and measure which thou requirest, especially in those spirituall duties which tend to the mutuall edification of one another. In which, and many other kinds, as we haue often offended heretofore, so we cannot excuse our selues of many imperfections and corruptions which wee haue shewed this day past, in all the duties of thy seruice which we haue performed vnto thee. But seeing we doe acknowledge our wants and weaknesses, and doe bewaile them with vsfained sorrow, we beseech thee (deare God) accept of vs in Iesus Christ, according to thy gracious promises, couering all our imperfections with his most perfect obedience, and washing away our corruptions in that pure Fountaine of his precious blood. In him accept of our poore desires and endeouours to doe thee seruice; seeing what is wanting in vs, is abundantly supplied by his absolute and all-sufficient righteousness, which is made ours by faith. And that we may, for the time to come, performe seruice vnto thee with more diligence and cheerfulness, let thy Spirit witnesse vnto our spirit, that thou hast forgiven all our sins past, passed by and couered all our infirmities and frailties, and doest graciously accept of vs in thy Best-beloued. And with the same thine holy Spirit, prosper and perfect thine owne good worke of grace and sanctification which thou hast begun in vs. Thou seest (Lord) how we are hampered and fettered in the chaines of our corruptions, which so distract and hinder vs in all holy duties, that we performe them with much discouragement, and little ioy. Helpe vs, O God of our saluation, and breake in sunder these chaines of sin, that being set at liberty, we may, with all alacrity and delight, run the way of thy thy Commandements, and esteeme it our meate and drinke to doe thy will. To this end assist vs (good Lord) by thine holy Spirit, & thereby sanctifie vnto vs thine holy Ordinances and meanes of our saluation, that they may be effectuell for the effecting & perfecting of thine own good work of grace and sanctification in vs. Apply vnto vs powerfully thy Word, which either this day, or any other time we haue heard, that it may enlighten our minds with saving knowledge, sanctifie our hearts and affections, that they may be more and more weaned from the loue of the world & earthly vanities, and fixed vpon spirituall & heavenly things, and may be effectuell for the reforming of our liues and conuersations, and the strengthening of vs vnto all duties of a godly life, that so being not only hearers of thy Word, but also doers of it, we may be assured of eternall blessednesse. Let vs walke worthy our high and holy calling, and in all things adorne our Christian profession, that by our holy and vnblameable liues we may gaine others to thy Kingdome. Let vs exceed all others as much in spirituall graces, and in bringing forth the fruits of new obedience, as we are preferred before them, through thy free grace in outward priuiledges, and in the gracious meanes of our saluation, and as thou doest continually sow in our hearts the seed of thy Word, and water it with the dew of thine holy Spirit, so let vs answerably grow in grace from one measure to another, till we come to a perfect age in Iesus Christ. Do not only pardon graciously all our wants and weakneses, which either this day or heretofore we haue shewed in the duties of thy worship & seruice, but inable vs for the time to come to performe them daily with more & more perfection; and grant that we may so sanctifie thy Sabbaths heere vpon earth, as that we may be assured that we shal keep an eternall Sabbath with thee in thy glorious Kingdome. Finally, we beseech thee for thy Christ his sake, to take vs this night & euer into thy gracious protection, & thereby preserve vs from all perils, and from the malice of all our enemies spirituall and temporall. Leau vs not now vnto our selues, but still assist vs with thy grace & holy Spirit, that we may performe the duties of thy Sabbaths, which yet remaine in some good & acceptable manner. Season our hearts with those holy instructions and comforts, which thou hast imparted vnto vs this day past, & make them faithful treasures of these precious Iewels. Let our minds, whilst we are waking, be so wholly taken vp with heavenly Meditations, that even our dreames may fauour of them, & in our deepest sleep, let our minds and soules watch & waite vpon thee. Thou hast sowne good seed in our hearts: O let not the enemy steale it away, nor whilst we sleepe, sow in them the malicious rares of euill and vaine thoughts and imaginations, and so hinder the growth thereof. Give vs quiet & moderate rest, for the better refreshing of our bodies & minds, that so to morrow we may be inabled to performe such faithful seruice vnto thee in the generall duties of Christianity, & the speciall duties of our callings, as may tend to thy glory and the euermlasting saluation of our owne soules. And together with vs, blesse thy whole Church and every member thereof, &c. And vouchsafe both to them & vs, these and all other blessings which in thy wisdom thou knowest needful, euen for Iesus Christ his sake, to whom with thee & thy blessed Spirit, we acknowledge to be due, & fro our hearts desire to giue all glory and praise, both now & euermore. Amen.

A Prayer before receiving the Sacrament of the Lords Supper.

Lord our God, who art infinite in goodnesse, grace, and mercy; most true in all thy promises; and most iust and powerfull in performance; thou hast, when we were strangers and enemies; subiect to the curse of the Law, and liable to thy wrath, by reason of our manifold and grievous sinnes; and vtterly vnable to free our selues out of the state of death and condemnation, giuen vnto vs thine onely and deare Sonne, to worke the great worke of our Redemption, by his perfect satisfaction, death, and obedience. By whom, thy Iustice being fully satisfied, and thy wrath appeased, thou hast made with vs in him thy Covenant of grace, wherein thou hast promised the free pardon of our sinnes, and the saluation of our soules, grace in this life, and glory and happinesse in the life to come, vpon the alone condition of faith, laying hold vpon Christ and his righteousnesse, and bringing forth the fruits thereof in hearty repentance and amendment of life. The which, though it be in it selfe of most infallible truth, yet hauing respect to our weakenesse, doubting, and infidelity, thou hast bene graciously pleased to confirme it vnto vs, by adding thereunto thy Seales, the Sacraments. So that nothing hath bene wanting on thy part, either for the perfecting the great worke of our Redemption, or the effectuall applying of it vnto vs for our vse and benefit. But (O Lord) wee humbly confesse, that as wee haue shamefully broken the Covenant of workes, by sayling in the condition of perfect obedience, and haue made voyd thy promises of life and happinesse, by our grievous and innumerable sinnes, both originall and actuall; so also, as much as in vs lyeth, wee haue deprived our selues of the benefits which thou offerest vnto vs in the new Covenant of grace in Iesus Christ, by our manifold saylings, wants, and imperfections in performing our promises made vnto thee, if thou shouldest looke to the perfection of our graces and outward actions, and not vnto the inward truth and sincerity of our hearts. For wee haue not thorowly acquainted our selues with the knowledge of thy sauing truth, concerning this great mystery of our saluation, nor searched and examined these spirituall Euidences, for the cleere understanding of them; and much lesse for the bringing of them home to our hearts and consciences, that in them we might haue found peace and comfort in the assurance of thy loue and our owne saluation. Our faith hath bene exceeding weake in apprehending and applying Christ and thy gracious promises made in him; and wee too too negligent in using those blessed meanes which thou hast graciously afforded vs, for the strengthening of it. For we haue not onely bene exceeding negligent in hearing, reading, and meditating in thy Word, the great Charter of our peace, which containeth in it all our spirituall and heavenly priuiledges; but also in making right vse of thy Seales, the Sacraments, annexed vnto it, especially this of our Lords Supper, which thou hast ordained for the spirituall food of our soules, to nourish them vnto everlasting life. Wee
haue

have not highly esteemed of this holy banquet, but have often pretended excuses, and shew'd our selves, when as thou hast graciously invited vs unto it. We have not hungered and thirsted after this heavenly Manna and waters of life; but with cloyed appetites have carelessly neglected them, when as they have been set before vs. And when we have partaken our selves at this holy feast, we have come to thy Table, after a cold, careless and formall manner, without all due preparation, and have performed this holy action with prophane and unwashen hands, more for custome then for conscience sake. Wee have come in much ignorance of thee and thy truth, thy gracious Covenant, and the Seales annexed vnto it; and that little knowledge wee have had, hath bene more in our heads, then in our hearts and affections, in idle speculation, then in use and practice. Wee have not rightly discerned the body of our Lord, nor put that difference which wee ought, betwene these elements consecrated to this holy service; and those which are for common use. We have not duly considered, as became vs, the relation betwene the signes and the things signified, but have too much stucke in the outward elements and actions, not looking to the spirituall graces signified and sealed by them. We have not approved our selves as worthy guests by renewing carefully and conscientiously our faith and repentance, but have presented our selves before thee with much infidelity and great impenitencie, though since our last coming to thine holy Table, we have often renewed our sinnes; neither have we brought forth such plentiful fruits of charity towards our brethren for thy sake; as thou requirest, and as it becometh the true members of Iesus Christ; either by liberrall giving vnto those that want, or free forgiving those who have offended vs. Wee have not shewed our Saviours death in this holy action, nor thankfully remembered the great worke of our Redemption, by his precious death and blood shed. And though wee have professed our selves thy servants by wearing thy livery, yet wee have not endeavored to walke worthy this high calling; by glorifying thee our Lord and Master. O Lord our God, shame and confusion conceale our faces, not onely in the sight and sense of our manifold and grievous sinnes, both originall and actual; but also of our great impieties, sins and transgressions, which wee shew in the best duties of thy worship and service. Wee confesse, holy Father, that if thou shouldst ever againe be angry with vs, and deale with vs according to our desert, thou mightest lawfully make voyd thy Covenant with vs, deprive vs of these means of our salvation, or else make them vnesseful and of no service to which wee enjoy them. But seeing wee are heartily sorry for our sinnes; and not onely restrainedly bewaile our iniquities, but also desire and labour after more perfection, promising for the time to come, that wee will more carefully use all good means, whereby wee may be enabled to performe all duties of thy service in a more perfect manner; Good Lord, wee most humbly beseech thee, for Iesus Christ his sake, to pardon graciously all our sinnes and weaknesses, to accept, according to thy gracious promise, our will, for the deed; our poore labours, for perfect performance, and to cover all our imperfections, with

Christ

Christe perfect righteousness and obedience, and to wash away all our corruptions in his most precious Blood. And being thus prepared, intend to performe the holy duties of thy service, in saying thy Word, Prayer, and receiving of the Sacrament of this Lords Supper.
 Good Lord, sweeten my heart with thy grace, for thy Soulders sake, so vs. so with thy grace and holy Spirit, as that we may performe these actions of thy service, in some good and acceptable manner; for the advancement of thy glory; the comfort of our Soules; and the furthering and assuring of our owne salvation. More especially, we increase thee to enable vs with thy grace, that we may be ready prepared, and come as worthy guests to thy Table. Give us a lively sight and sense of our sinnes and imperfections, wants and weaknesses, and let us be and trust in Christ and his righteousness; and after the spiritual food of his Body and Blood, for the nourishment of our Soules unto eue-nill life. Let vs not coldly and formally performe this high and holy duty, but use all the powers of our Soules, to be doing of it, in some such manner as may be acceptable to thy sight. Enlighten our minds more and more with the saving knowledge of thee and thy truth; and effectually of the great worke of our Redemption; and thus infinite love shining in us, of the Covenant of grace; and Seal of annexed vnto it, and let this knowledge reside only in our hearts and affections; but let it also dwell in our hearts; that in us may be possible for them diligently to follow us tightly to discern our Lords Body and feelingly to understand the relation betwixt the Signs and the things signified, whereby both our selves in their right view. This end and we will be true and lively faith; that we may not only receive the precious Elements; but also may inwardly feed upon the precious Body and Blood of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, that thereby we may be filled with all saving graces, strengthened in all good things, and obtaine the everlasting life. Imbue us also with the fruits of this high and vntained repentance; bewailing our sin-nish; leaving those corruptions which still hang upon vs; and resolving to leave them for the time to come; and to serve thee in holiness and righteousness all the dayes of our lives. And thus we have daily received our sinnes; forgive us now; grace; that we may renew our faith and patience by turning our selves and bodies afresh, such as the fountain of thy righteousness. Blood; and in the heart of infinite Father, manning with thee perfect. Because we have sinned against thee, and therefore the Lord of life to be patient with us in our sinfulness. Instruct our hearts with thy truth; that we may not be lost in our sinfulness; and yet be careful to offend for thy sake; and let us be careful to be as holy. Communion with thee. Be patient with us in our sinfulness; and Christ. Be ye also prepared our hearts and bodies; and let us be the Lord of life and death; by forgiving and forgiving all our sin-nish; and let us be careful to be as holy. Communion with thee; and by performing upon us of mercy and Christ; and let us be those who need us; and let us be careful to be as holy. Communion in their hearts; and let us be careful to be as holy. Communion
 the

the eternall saluation of their soules. And being thus prepared, let vs when we come to this Table, performe that dutie of thy seruice in some good and acceptable manner, with all reverence, faith and inward feruour and deuotion. Let vs with the inward signes receiue the things signified, Iesus Christ and all his benefits, that bring more and more vnto him; we may receiue from him the Spirituall life of Grace, and those holy vertues of his diuine nature, that we may grow vpon him vnto a perfect man. Let vs bring with vs the hand and mouth of faith, and let it be more and more strengthened in the assurance of all thy gracious promises; by these scales of thy covenants communicated vnto vs. Make vs partakers of Christs merits, by impetration of his nature and essence by coniunction, and of his power and efficacy by thy holy Spirit; and let vs stay his death till he come, gratefully remembering this great worke of our Redemption by his blood; that we may be thankfull, and prayse thee the blessed Trinitie in vntity, all the dayes of our liues. Finally, as we doe by these meanes profess our faith in thy seruants taking vpon vs thy liuery and cognizance; so giue vs grace, that we may constantly strue and indouour to walke worthy this high calling; and to glorifie thee in the duties of holinesse and righteousnesse, whilst we haue any breath or being. Heare vs and helpe vs, O God of our saluation, and answer vs graciously in these our suits and petitions, for Iesus Christ his sake, to whom with thee and thine holy Spirit, be rendered of vs and thy whole Church, all glory and prayse, power and dominion, both now and euermore. Amen.

of thanksgiuing after the receiuing of the Sacrament of the Lords Supper.

O Lord our God, most glorious and most gracious, infinite in bountie and goodnesse vnto all thy children and thy seruants in Iesus Christ, we doe here offer vnto thee the sacrifice of prayse and thanksgiuing, and doe laud and magnifie thy great and glorious Name, for all thy mercies and fauours vouchsafed vnto vs; especially because thou hast loued vs with an euertasting loue; yea so loued vs, that thou hast, of thy meere grace and free good will, euen when we were strangers and enemies, giuen vnto vs thy Best-beloued and onely Sonne, to worke the great worke of our Redemption, and by his death and precious blood-shed to deliuer vs out of the hands of all our spirituall enemies, and to free vs from euertasting death and condemnation, that we might be heires through him of eternall glory and happinesse in thy Kingdome. We prayse thee also for the free covenant of grace and saluation which thou hast made with vs in him; whereby thou hast assured vs of the remission of our sinnet, our reconciliation with thee, and of endless happinesse in the life to come; and for confirming this covenant vnto vs, by annexing thereto the scales thy Sacraments, that thereby our weak faith might be strengthened and increased, and wee more and more freed from doubting and incredulity. We thanke thee (holy Father) for renewing this thy covenant with vs this day, and for confirming our vnion with Iesus Christ our head, and one with another, by giuing vnto vs his precious body and blood, as the Spirituall food of our soules, whereby they are nourished vnto euerlasting life. O Lord our God, it is thy great mercie, that thou nourishest our mortall bodies with food that perisheth, but how wonderfull is this thy bounty and goodnesse, in that thou feedest our soules with this bread of Life that came downe from heauen, and with this food that endureth to life eternall. If thou shouldst permit vs but to gather vp the crummes that fall from thy Table, we must needes acknowledge, that it were a farre more than our deserts. O then how should wee admire and magnifie thy mercie and bountie, in vouchsafing such vile and vnworthy wretches, this high and holy priuiledge, to be feasted at thine owne Table, not with ordinary cheare, but with such spirituall and diuine delicacies, euen the precious body and blood of thine onely deare Sonne, whereby he becommeth one with vs, and we with him, euen as thou holy Father, and he are one, in that holy and happie vnion. O that our narrow hearts were enlarged, that we might in some measure apprehend this thine infinite and incomprehensible goodnesse! O that being cold in themselues, they were warmed and inflamed with the fire and flame of this diuine loue, that with the liuely sense and feeling of it, wee might be moued to returne loue for loue, and expresse it by our seruent zeale and indeuour in all things, to please and glorifie thee throughout the whole course of our liues and conuersations! Which because it is not in our owne power, O thou the rich fountaine of all grace and goodnesse, inspire and inflame our cold and frozen hearts with the beames of thy loue, shed abroad in them by thine holy Spirit, that we may loue thee with vnfaigned loue, and contemning all things in comparison of thee, may long and labour after nothing so much, as to enioy thee in this life by grace, and the presence of thy blessed Spirit, and by full and perfect vision and fruition in the life to come. To this end, gracious God, blesse vnto vs thine holy Ordinances and meanes of our saluation, and by the inward assistance of thy good Spirit, make them powerfull and effectuall to the attayning of those ends, for which thou hast giuen, and wee received them. Let vs finde hereby our vnion with Christ strengthened and confirmed, by feeling the Spirituall life and sap of grace deuiued vnto vs, and increased in vs; from this roote of righteousness, not onely for our further assurance of our iustification, but also for the perfecting of our sanctification, and the strengthening of vs vnto all Christian duties of a godly life. Let vs by this Spirituall food of our soules, finde our selues nourished and enriched with all sauing graces, especially let vs feele our weak faith confirmed and increased, that wee may, without wauering, be perswaded of all thy gracious promises made vnto vs, and effectually apply vnto our selues Iesus Christ

A Thanksgiving after the Communion.

247

Christ and all his benefits, seeing thou hast not onely offered them in thy Word and covenant of grace, but also sealed, and thereby fully assured them vnto vs by thy seales the Sacraments. Giue vs grace, that we may approue this faith to be true and lively, by bringing forth plentifull fruits of it in repentance and newnesse of life, by leaving our sinnes, because they haue peaced our Saviour, and feared to offend thee for the time to come, seeing thine exact Iustice thou wilt not suffer them to goe unpunished, when thine onely and deare Sonne did beare them vpon his Crosse. Let vs not by sinne, hazard our soules againe to death for the wages of worldly vanities, seeing to redeeme vs from them, our Saviour and surety, payd vnto thy Iustice the ineffimable price of his precious blood; but being freed from sinne, let vs become his seruants that hath redeemed vs, serving him in the duties of holinesse and righteousnesse all the dayes of our liues. And as wee haue professed our selues to be of thy Family, by taking vpon vs and wearing thy liuerie, so let vs adorne our profession, and glorifie thee our Lord and Master, by hauing the light of our Christian conuersation shining before all men; in all things behauing our selues as it becommeth thy children and seruants. Let vs haue our Lords death in remembrance, vntill he come, not onely that it may stirre vs vp to vnfained thankfulnessse vnto thee, for giuing thy Sonne, and to him, for giuing himselfe vnto vs and for vs, but also that it may be as a shield of prooffe, to arme vs against all our spirituall enemies, thy wrath, the curse of the law, Satan, death, sinne and condemnation, that they may neuer preuaile against vs. Let vs also, as wee haue in this holy communion professed our selues members of the same body, approue our selues to be indeed so, by performing all duties of loue towards one another, both in releeuing those that want, and forgiuing those who haue offended vs. Finally, we beseech thee (deare Father) to enable vs by thy grace and holy Spirit, that we may performe our vowes and promises which we haue made vnto thee, especially in the time of preparation before wee came to thy Table; and seeing in the sense and feeling of our wants and weakenesses in thy Spirituall graces, required to the worthy receiuing of the Sacrament, as knowledge, faith, repentance and charity, wee were displeased with our selues, and promised that we would indeuour to haue them increased and strengthened for the time to come, good Lord, we beseech thee, giue vs grace to performe what we haue promised, and to labour carefully and conscionably in the vse of all good meanes, for the enriching of our soules with these and all other sauing graces of thy sanctifying Spirit, that so also wee may bring forth the fruits of them in our godly and Christian liues, to the glory of thy blessed Name, and the comfort and saluation of our bodies and soules through Iesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Kkkk 3

A Prayer

A Prayer for the Sicke.

Most glorious and mighty God, who are righteous in all thy wayes, and holy in all thy workes; most iust in all thy Iudgements, and infinitely gracious, and mercifull towards thy children in Iesus Christ, euen in thy chastizements and Fatherly corrections; who art the Author of health and sicknesse, and hast in thy hand the issues of life & death. For as much as thou hast commanded vs to call vpon thee; as at all times, so especially in the time of trouble and affliction, and hast encouraged vs herunto by thy most gracious promise, that thou wilt heare and helpe vs, that being deliuered, we may glorifie thee. We thy poore humble seruants, in obedience vnto this thy Commandement, and in confidence of this thy promise, doe here in the Name and mediation of Iesus Christ, humbly prostrate our selues before thee, acknowledging and bewayling our manifold and grieuous sinnes. For we were not onely conceived and borne in sinne, and thereby so defiled in all the powers and parts of our soules and bodies, that wee haue beene disabled vnto all good duties, and made prone to all wickednesse; but wee haue also from this bitter roore of originall corruption, brought forth continually those cursed fruits of actuall transgressions, by breaking all and euery of thy Commandements in thought, word and deede, from the beginning of our liues, vnto this present houre: And that not onely in the dayes of our ignorance, whilest we continued the vassals of Satan, and when as sinne raigned and ruled in vs, and wee performed vnto it voluntarie and cheerefull obedience, as vnto our King and Soueraigne; but euen since thou hast graciously called vs out of the kingdome of darkenesse, and hast wrought in our hearts some desires to serue thee: we haue often rebelled against thee, and for the base hire of worldly trifles, haue beene allured to commit many sinnes, not onely through frailty and infirmity, but euen against our knowledge and consciences; contrarie to our generall vow in Baptisme, and many speciall promises which wee haue made vnto thee vpon sundry occasions. And although thou hast giuen vnto vs our Being, and preserued vs in it by thy speciall and good prouidence, and hast redeemed vs by the death of thy deare Sonne, out of the hands of all our spirituall enemies, that wee might worship and serue thee, in holinesse and righteousnesse all the dayes of our liues; yet, Lord, wee humbly confesse, that wee haue beene too too forgetfull of these inestimable mercies, neglected the duties of thy seruice, and spent the greatest part of our liues in pursuing worldly vanities. These, these (deare Father) haue beene for the most part the subiect of our thoughts, the object of our desires, and the chiefe markes, at which we haue ay-med in our most earnest indeuours. And so haue wee in our vnderstandings minded earthly things, in our hearts affected them with such longing desires, and with all our strength pursued them in all our workes

workes and actions, as though we had no better hopes, and had forgotten that we are pilgrims on earth, and Citizens of heauen. As for the duties of thy seruice, we haue often, through this eager pursuit of worldly vanities, forgotten and neglected them; and often haue performed them with much coldnesse and formality, weaknesse and wearinesse, dullesse and drowzinesse of heart and spirit, whilst our minds and affections haue been distracted and carryed away, and our deuotion and zeale cooled and quenched, by our other much minding and loving of earthly things. And though thou hast assured vs to performe vnto thee more sincere and cheerfull seruice, by promising to giue vs the rich wages, and free reward of heauenly happinesse; yea for the present hast incouraged vs heretunto, by multiplying vpon vs many temporall blessings, as health, strength, peace, plenty, good, apparell, and such like; yet we haue abused these benefits, by taking occasion thereby to goe on in our sinnes with greater security, and haue been made by them more negligent in thy seruice. And therefore (O Lord) it were iust with thee, if thou shouldest deprime vs of them all, turning our strength into weaknesse, our health into sicknesse, and all our peace and comfort into tortures of body, and troubles of mind. But (deare Father) deale with vs, not according to our deserts, but according to thy wonted mercies in Iesus Christ. And seeing the end of thy chastisements is not destruction, but saluation; not to punish our sinnes, for which thy Sonne hath fully satisfied thy iustice by his all-sufficient sufferings; but to bring vs to repentance: we most humbly beseech thee, to giue vnto vs a true sight and sense of them; vnfaigned sorrow, and a perfect hatred of them; and a full resolution to leaue and forsake them for the time to come, and to serue thee in the contrary duties of holinesse and righteousnesse all the dayes of our liues. And thus returning vnto thee by vnfaigned repentance (O Lord) we beseech thee turne vnto vs, and be reconciled vnto vs in Iesus Christ. Forget and forgiue our manifold and grievous sinnes, whether of omission or commission; of frailty and infirmity: or those which wee haue wittingly and willingly faile into; and wash them all away in the blood of thy Son, that they may neuer be imputed vnto vs, either in this world, or in the world to come. Seale also our pardon vnto vs in our hearts and consciences, by the gracious testimony of thy holy Spirit, and thereby sanctifie vs thorow out in our soules and bodies, that being freed from the guilt, punishment, and corruption of all our sinnes, we may be found vnblameable and without spot in the Day of our Lord Iesus Christ. Replenish our empty soules with all sanctifying and saving graces, and strengthen vs vnto the performance of all Christian and holy duties, with all zeale, cheerfulnessse and vprightnesse of heart. More especially, we humbly intreat thee to extend thy grace and fauour vnto this thy sicke seruant, and sanctifie this thy fatherly chastisement vnto him, that it may be an effectuall means of increasing his sanctification, and furthering his eternall saluation. And seeing by sickness, thou puttst vs in mind of our approaching end, and by death, summonest vs to appeare before thee in Iudgement: O Lord, giue him grace, to prepare himselfe against the day of death, that he may be ready to render vp his accounts, when thou shalt call him to giue vp his reckoning, and so with ioy and cheerfulness may commend his soule and body vnto thee, as into the hands of a faithfull Saviour, who wilt crowne them both with ioy and glory. Let him continually indeuour to suppress the power of death, and to take away the sting of it, by mortifying the flesh, and the lusts thereof. Giue him grace to renew his couenant with thee, by renewing the condition of it, which is, embracing thy promises by a lively faith, and bringing forth the fruits thereof by vsained repentance. Let him confesse his sinnes, bewaile, and forsake them, resolving to amend his life, if thou shalt prolong his dayes. Comfort him with the comforts of thy Spirit, and as his bodily griefes abound, so let thy consolations abound and exceed them. Giue him patience to indure what thou inflictest, and tempt him not aboue his power, but either lessen his griefes, or increase his strength. Moderate and mitigate his bodily paines, with the inward feelings of thy loue, peace of conscience, and ioy in the holy Ghost. If it will stand with thy glory, and his saluation, prolong his dayes, and restore his health, that he may yet againe praise thee, as for all thy mercies, so especially for his recovery, and blesse vnto him all meanes of physick and dyer, which are fit for this purpose. And being raised from his bed of sickness, giue vnto him a right vse both of thy fatherly chastisements, and of thy gracious deliuerance, that by the one, he may be moued to feare thee, and to hate sinne, hauing tasted the bitter fruits of it; and by the other, to loue and glorifie thee, who hast heard his prayer in the day of his tribulation, and by them both, to serue thee with greater zeale, and with more earnest indeuour then euer heeretofore. Heare vs, deare Father, and answer vs graciously in these our suits, euen for Iesus Christ his sake; to whom with thee and the holy Spirit, wee acknowledge to be due, and desire to giue all glory, praise and thanksgiving, both now and for euermore. Amen.

But if the sicke party be a child, and so not capable of the outward and ordinary meanes of saluation, then pray for him after this manner:

More especially, we humbly intreat thee, to extend thy grace and fauour vnto this thy sick seruant; and seeing thou art not onely the God of the faithfull, but also of their seed, and lonest and tenderest not onely the sheepe of Christ, but euen the tender lambes; wee earnestly beseech thee, make good thy gracious Couenant with this thy weake and sicke seruant. And because hee is not capable of outward meanes, supply graciously the defect of them by thine holy Spirit. Vnite him thereby vnto Iesus Christ, that becoming a lively member of his body, he may be made partaker of his righteousness, death and obedience, for his iustification; and so hee may stand righteous in thy sight. Free him from the guilt and punishment of all his sinnes, and sanctifie him in his soule and body, that either he may bee fit to glorifie thee on earth, or to be glorified by thee in heauen. If it bee thy blessed will, restore him to his health and strength againe, that he may liue to be a comfort vnto his friends, and a profitable instrument to set forth thy glory in the Church and Common-wealth; but if thou art purposed to put an end

end to his dayes, so fit and prepare him for thy Kingdome, as that he may liue with thee eternally in glory and immortality, through Iesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

If the party be irrecoverably sicke, ready to depart out of this world, then we may, in stead of praying for his restoring to health, make, in his behalfe, these following petitions:

ANd seeing (O Lord) thou hast smitten thy sicke seruant (as wee conceiue) irrecoverably, and doest now purpose to put an end vnto the dayes of his pilgrimage; we most humbly beseech thee, to prepare him for thine owne Kingdome. Weane his mind and affections from the world and earthly vanities, where he is but a stranger, and fix them wholly vpon spirituall and heauenly things, as it becommeth a Citizen of thy Kingdome. Let him earnestly desire to bee dissolued and to be with Christ, seeing that is best of all, and let him long after the vision and fruition of thee, in whose presence is fulnesse of ioy for euermore. To this end (O Lord) reueale thy selfe vnto him more cleerly then euer heretofore, that seeing thy beauty, goodnesse and excellency, his heart may be thorowly inflamed with thy loue. Giue him, euen whilst hee liueth, an entrance into thy Kingdome, not onely by the assurance of faith and hope, but also by letting him haue a liuely taste of those heauenly ioyes, which thou hast prepared for him. Moderate his griefes and paines, that they may not hinder his soule from mounting aloft in diuine contemplations; and secretly whisper vnto his heart sweet comforts by thy Spirit, when as he is, through weaknesse, insensible of outward consolations. Inflame his heart with seruent loue towards thee and his brethren; yea euen his enemies for thy sake, that he may bee assured, that his sinnes are forgiven of thee; because thou giuest him grace to forgive all men. Strengthen him against the tentations of all his spirituall enemies, and manifest thy power in his weaknesse, by giuing vnto him a full and finall victory ouer them. Frustrate the malice of Satan, defeat his policies, and confound his power, that he may not preuaile against him in this last conflict. Arme him against the feare of thy wrath and seuerer iustice, by assuring him that Christ hath appeased the one, and satisfied the other. Comfort him against the feare of death, by perswading him, that Christs death hath swallowed it in victory, pulled out the sting thereof, and made it harmelesse; yea exceeding profitable, as serving now for a passage to glory and happinesse; and by strengthening him, to apply vnto himselfe these consolations, by a liuely faith. Weane his heart from worldly cares, that they may bee no distractions to hinder him in his heauenly iourney; and let the assurance, and taste of immortall ioyes, take away all lothnesse to leaue earthly comforts. Set a guard of thy blessed Angels about him, and let them serue as thy Messengers and Ministers, to conuey his soule, as soone as it is separated from his body, into thy Kingdome, that it may bee there crowned with glory and immortality. Finally, wee beseech thee, giue vs all heere present, an holy vie of these examples of our mortality, that thereby our hearts being weaned from the world, we may collect it our chief desire to prepare our selves against the day of death and iudgement, that in wee may with ioy and comfort stand before thee, when thou shalt bee pleased to call vs to giue vnto thee an account of our Stewardship. Heare vs, we beseech thee, in these our humble supplications, for thy Sonne and our Saviour, Iesus Christ his sake, to be with thee, and thy holy Spirit, be ascribed all glory and praise, power and dominion, both now and for euermore. Amen.

to the days of his old manhood we must turn to find the concrete) irreconcilable; and still now Europe is put and vi-

(87) showing how the black servant (as

O Almighty God, and thy most gracious Father in Iesus Christ, I humbly confesse, that I am a most wretched sinner, and altogether unworthy to be in the Covenant of grace and salvation. For I was not onely conceived and borne in sin and corruption, whereby thy glorious Image was defaced in me; but I haue added thereto many actuall finnes, by breaking thy Commandements, in thought, word and deed; whereby I haue deserved thy lightning in this life, and eternall death in the world to come. But seeing thou hast vouchsafed to receiue me into thy Covenant, of thy free mercy, giuing me the signe thereof, the Sacrament of Baptisme; and hast sent thy Sonne Iesus Christ to dye for, and by his death to redeeme the young as well as the old; I beseech thee, for his sake, to pardon all my finnes, and to wash them all away in his most precious blood; to receiue me into thy love and fauour, and to make mee thine owne child by adoption and grace. Giue me thine holy Spirit to sanctifie, rule and gouerne me; that according to my age and small ability, I may labour to serue thee. Make me daily to increase in grace, as I increase in yeeres; enlighten my mind with the knowledge of thee, and thy Sauiour Christ and his truth. Sow in me the seeds of faith, and let it growe it selfe alfoone as I am capable thereof, in expectance and true obedience. Make mee louing, dutifull and awfull to my Parents and Gouernours, and let mee learne by obeying them in my tender youth, to obey thee in my riper age. Giue me grace to hearken to their good admonitions and instructions, and to profit and amend by their reproofes and chastisements. Make me humble, courteous and meeke, modest and sober, diligent to please in all good things, and victorious in my whole course of life, that so I may increase in fauour with thee and all good men. And as I beg these benefits at thy hands, so I yeelde vnto thee all humble and hearty thanks and praise, for all benefits, both spirituall and temporall vouchsafed vnto me; and specially, for that it hath pleased thee to giue mee quiet rest and sleepe this night past, and hast safely preserved mee from all perils and dangers to which my fragile life is daily subiect. Continue (O Lord) thy love and fauour towards mee for ever, and especially this day take mee unto thy heavenly protection; preserve mee from sinne and perill, and grace, being diligent and industrious in learning such good things as are taught me, I may increase in knowledge, and profit by instruction in such vertues and good qualities, as are fit for me. O Lord, bleesse and preserve my father and mother, my brethren and sisters, with all other my kindred and friends, together with thy whole Church: and grant that we may live in thy favour, dye in thy faith, and after death therein the ioyes of thine everlasting Kingdome, through Iesus Christ our Lord: to whom with thee and thy holy Spirit, be all honour and glory, both now, and for evermore.

Amen.

FIN IS.

Pauls escaped in Printing.

line, thus, and most from mine and yours; therefore, I pray you, to be diligent in keeping such good things, as I have committed unto you, in the sight of God, and in the sight of men, and in the sight of your own consciences, and in the sight of all other Christians, and friends, and neighbours, and in the sight of the whole Church, and in the sight of the world, and in the sight of the Lord, and in the sight of the Father, and in the sight of the Holy Spirit, and in the sight of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, Amen.

And thus, I pray you, to be diligent in keeping such good things, as I have committed unto you, in the sight of God, and in the sight of men, and in the sight of your own consciences, and in the sight of all other Christians, and friends, and neighbours, and in the sight of the whole Church, and in the sight of the world, and in the sight of the Lord, and in the sight of the Father, and in the sight of the Holy Spirit, and in the sight of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, Amen.

Amen

Faults escaped in Printing.

Page 27. line 23. reads, be in the Church. p. 29. l. 12. r. internal booke. p. 30. l. a fin. 8. r. be bath made. p. 33. l. 5. r. The will of God. and l. 7. r. will and most free. p. 38. l. 11. r. and make men. p. 42. l. 12. r. Summe. p. 50. l. 17. r. Strong corruptions. p. 52. l. 7. r. act of. p. 57. l. a fin. 11. read end, that we may. p. 62. l. 23. r. turne to their. p. 66. l. 30. r. for the scanning. l. 36. r. yet it neuer. l. 39. r. bare all. 41. Theb. p. 71. l. 3. r. Strong wind. l. 37. r. freed from. p. 73. l. 4. r. when ceasing. and l. 38. r. upon vs. p. 74. l. 5. r. carry it quietly. p. 75. l. 35. r. in a storme. p. 85. in Margine l. 15. 16. r. boni viri. p. 95. l. 24. r. not denied. and line 25. r. Chap. 2. Of piety, which is the summe of the first Table. S. Sect. 1. page 125. line 17. reads, dominion any all. p. 125. l. 17. r. one lawfully. and l. 33. r. not men. p. 128. l. 16. r. God and we. p. 138. in Margine l. 2. r. The manner. p. 140. l. 13. r. damps it. p. 142. l. 4. r. in our neighbours. p. 150. l. a fin. 2. r. Frier like affectation. p. 179. l. last. r. any intercession. p. 181. l. 7. r. in the face. p. 183. l. a fin. 4. r. stopped from him. p. 188. l. 9. r. whole ropes. p. 189. l. 4. r. our selues. p. 197. l. 27. 28. r. tentation. p. 200. l. a fin. 4. r. and Sales of. p. 203. l. the last. r. good guidance. p. 267. l. a fin. 6. r. misbestowing. p. 286. l. 2. r. digestion of. p. 314. l. 21. r. to be preferred. p. 350. l. 35. r. with naming. p. 373. l. 31. r. no more. p. 374. l. a fin. 4. r. yet by this. p. 383. l. 36. r. compounding of contentions. p. 429. l. 3. r. could not make. p. 433. l. 35. r. furious anger. p. 438. l. 22. r. confidence in. p. 454. l. 11. 12. r. faith inableth vs. p. 468. l. 10. in Marg. r. leuare & vigilare. p. 469. l. 24. in Marg. r. ad suriam. p. 493. l. 2. r. sealed vnto vs. p. 496. l. 4. r. our selues. p. 497. l. a fin. 5. r. initiation and. p. 498. l. 23. r. gratefulness. p. 499. l. 3. r. discharge? p. 506. l. 11. r. when as thereby. p. 544. l. 25. r. to purge out. p. 551. l. a fin. 4. r. at all times. p. 563. l. a fin. 8. r. also profitable. p. 608. l. a fin. 3. 2. r. that is contained. p. 614. l. 32. r. of examination. p. 616. l. 9. r. of examination. p. 643. l. a fin. 3. r. by digesting. p. 644. l. 11. r. For as there. p. 714. l. 7. r. often after, and l. 13. r. acts of sinnes, and l. 29. r. faith is assured of. p. 716. l. 31. r. cleansing. p. 727. l. 40. r. some proprieties. p. 730. l. 38. 39. r. reads vs for them, our for their, and we for they. p. 749. l. 27. r. will soone. p. 804. l. 10. r. comfortable use. p. 812. l. 4. r. our market. p. 821. l. 1. r. not worthy. p. 841. l. 9. r. their intrusion. p. 848. l. 11. r. most delighted. p. 855. l. 4. r. service, and line 25. p. 878. l. 2. r. getting, and l. 25. r. is it not.

A TREATISE OF SECVRTIE:

Diuided into two Bookes.

THE FORMER, INTREATING OF CARNALL SECVRTIE AND HARDNES OF HEART;

Wherein the Nature, Originall and Causes of it are displayed and described, the Kinds of it distinguished, and the Differences betwene them expressed, the Signes whereby it may be knowne, shewed, with the Preseruatiues and Remedies, whereby we may be kept from falling into this dangerous disease, or recovered if we be already fallen.

THE LATTER, INTREATING OF SPIRITVALL AND CHRISTIAN
SECVRTIE;

Whercin is shewed what it is, the Causes and Effects of it, and the Meanes whereby it may be obtayned and preserued.

Published as an Antidote against the dangerous Securitie of these last Times :

By IOHN DOWNAME, Batchelar in Diuinitie, and Preacher of Gods Word.

ZEPH. 1. 12.

And it shall come to passe at that time, that I will search Ierusalem with Candles; and punish the men that are settled on their lees; that say in their heart, The Lord will not doe good, neither will doe euill.

L O N D O N

Printed by WILLIAM STANSBY.

1622.

THE TREATISE OF SECURITIES

Divided into two Books.

THE FORMER, INTREATING OF CARNALE SECURITIES AND HARDNES OF HEART;

Wherein the Nature, Original, and Causes of it are displayed, and described, the Kinds of it distinguished, and the Differences between them explicated, the Signs whereby it may be knowne, the way with the Preventions and Remedies, whereby we may be kept from falling into the dangerous snare, or be brought out of it, as follows.

THE LATTER, INTREATING OF SPIRITUAL AND CHRISTIAN SECURITIES;

Wherein is shewed what is the Cause and Effect of it; and the Means whereby it may be attained.

Published at an Intreatie against the dangerous Securities of these last Times:

By Iohn Downham, Bachelor in Divinitie, and Minister of Gods Word.

As this Treatise is published in this time, when I will leave London, and go to the new that are said to have been, that by it their hearts, they may not be good, neither will they be.

LONDON:
Printed by WILLIAM STANLEY.

1652.

TO THE RIGHT
HONORABLE,

Sir Henrie Mountagu,

KNIGHT,

Baron of KIMBOLTON, Viscount MANDEVILLE,

Lord President of his MAJESTIES most

Honorable Privie Counsell;

And to the truly Noble and Vertuous Lady, the Lady

MARGARET his Wife.

I. Desireth all temporall happines, with the confluence of all spirituall Graces in this life, and eternall blessednesse in the life to come.

Right Honorable, and my most honored Lord and Lady,

As long peace and prosperitie, are the common causes of carnall securitie and hardnesse of heart, so these the vsuall forerunners of fearefull punishments, seeing in this desperate Disease (which we may fitly call, the stone in the heart)
more gentle Medicines will not effect the cure.
For when mens hearts are come to brassy or flin-ty hardnesse, nothing will melt them (without some extraordinary worke of the Spirit) but the fiery furnace of Affliction; nothing will bruisse and breake them, but the heavy hammer of Gods dread.

THE EPISTLE

dreadfull iudgements. And this is manifest in the examples of all Ages, which are left vnto vs in the Scriptures, to giue vs warning. As of the old world, Sodome and her bordering Cities; and of the Israelites, Gods owne best beloued people, all which, as they were lulled asleepe in the Cradle of carnall Security, with the pleasing and bewitching tunes of peace and pleasure; so were they alwayes, when they least suspected it, surprised vpon the suddaine in their lethargie of sinne, with some remarkable plagues and punishments. And therefore considering with my selfe, that our long peace, plenty and prosperity hath infected the most that liue in our land, with deepe security and retchlesse carelesnesse, and caused them to dreame, that this Sun-shine will neuer set: I could not chuse but suspect, and daily expect the neer approaching of the other, and that the darke night of affliction and calamity will ere long surprize vs, vnlesse the loude cries of Gods Ministers doe speedily awaken vs out of our lethargie, and moue vs to meet the Lord and preuent his iudgements, by turning vnto him in vnfeigned repentance. In which regard, being appointed and called by God to bee one of his (though least worthy) watchmen, whose office requireth, that we should not only our selues keep the spirituall watch, but also, as much as in vs lieth, awaken others: I thought it my duty, by giuing warning of these approaching dangers, to

DEDICATORIE.

rowze vp as many as I could out of this sleepe, or rather lethargie of securitie. And because my voyce were farre too weake (though I could, as the Lord requireth, lift it vp as a Trumpet) to be heard of all the people of this Land, I haue indououred to conuay the sound thereof (as it were) by these paper Pipes, euen vnto the most remote places; and to those especially, where the lively voyce of Gods faithfull watchmen, is rarely heard, either because the meanes of their maintenance by sacriledge and Church robbery, or symoniacall fraud is taken away, or because dumbe, or idle and sleeping watchmen doe hold their places, without any care to performe their duty, as neither keeping the watch themselves, nor being either able or willing to keepe others waking. The which my labours I haue made bold to dedicate vnto your Honors: To you, my Lord, I confesse, not without some presumption, as not being hitherto known vnto you, yet herein not vnexcusable, in that it proceedeth from a desire to shew how much I honor you, for your profession and protection of Gods true and sincere Religion, in that Honourable place vnto which God hath called you; your loue to Learning, and fouour towards the Learned. But to you Noble Ladie, in whose notice and vnderfuered respect, I haue beene more happie, I haue deuoted this poore part and mite of my worthlesse VWorkes, that liuing in these Paper Monuments

THE EPISTLE, &c.

ments, as it were, in my longest lasting posterity, I may, euen after death hath imposed silence, still testifie vnto the world mine humble loue and vnfaigned thankfulnesse, for your manifold and great fauours vouchsafed vnto me; and how much I honor you for those singular vertues and graces, wherewith God hath enriched you, especially your piety towards him and loue of his truth, much approoued, as by many other fruits, so especially by your loue to his Ministers and Ambassadors. The which were ample matter for a larger discourse, to incourage others of your ranke to imitation, did not your modesty and humility attending and adorning all the rest, admonish mee that such praises of you, vnto you, will bee thought vnneccessary, if not vnpleasing and distastfull. The Lord infinitely rich in all goodnesse and perfection, more and more multiply, all Christian Vertues and sauing Graces in you both; in the light and lustre whereof you shall be euer more truly honorable in the sight of God and all those that feare him, then in the highest dignities and noblest advancements that the world can yeeld vnto you.

Your Honors most obliged in all Christian duetie and humble service,

JOHN DOWNAM.

Faults escaped in the Treatise of Securitie.

Page 4. l. 3. r. his mercies. p. 64. l. 9. r. idle spectator. p. 85. l. 11. r. opinion of our. p. 86. l. 6. r. against them in. p. 68. l. 22. r. by inuring. p. 70. l. 28. r. let vs watch. p. 81. l. 13. r. in the vte.
p. 89. l. 14. r. for a spurt. p. 92. l. 8. r. peace and securitie. And l. 20. r. God infinite.

The Contents.

CHAP. VI.

Of the signes of carnall securitie arising from the causes of it.

- Q. 1. That the causes of carnall securitie doe argue and shew the effect. pag. 32.
- Q. 2. The first signe of carnall securitie, is ignorance of God and his Attributes. pag. 33.
- Q. 3. The second signe is, when wee are forgetfull of God & his attributes. pag. 33.
- Q. 4. The third signe, pride and selfe-confidence. pag. 34.
- Q. 5. The fourth signe, abuse of prosperitie. pag. 34.
- Q. 6. The fift signe, customeable sinning. pag. 35.
- Q. 7. The sixth signe, abuse of Gods patience and impenitency. pag. 36.
- Q. 8. The seventh signe, presumption on Gods mercy. pag. 36.
- Q. 9. The eight signe, contempt of the meanes of saluation. pag. 36.
- Q. 10. The ninth signe, hearing the Word without Faith. pag. 38.
- Q. 11. The tenth signe, not applying of the Word. pag. 39.
- Q. 12. The eleventh signe, mis-applying of the Promises. pag. 39.
- Q. 13. The twelfth signe, is to delight in a flattering Ministerie. pag. 39.

CHAP. VII.

Of eight other signes of carnall securitie, arising from the effects and other arguments.

- Q. 1. The first signe is, not to profit by afflictions on others. pag. 40.
- Q. 2. Secondly, such as are inflicted on our selues. pag. 41.
- Q. 3. The second signe, is to haue no desire to keepe Gods Commandments. pag. 43.
- Q. 4. Secondly, when we yeeld obedience but by fits. pag. 43.
- Q. 5. Thirdly, when we doe not yeeld obedience to the whole Law, but some parts onely. pag. 44.
- Q. 6. Fourthly, when our obedience ariseth not from spirituall causes, nor is directed to right ends. pag. 44.
- Q. 7. The third signe, delaying of Repentance. pag. 45.
- Q. 8. The fourth signe, is Hypocrisie. pag. 46.
- Q. 9. The fift, is to feare Man more then God. pag. 46.
- Q. 10. The sixth signe, immoderate feare in time of danger. pag. 47.
- Q. 11. The seventh signe, is to run from God, and to rest on inferiour meanes in danger and affliction. pag. 47.
- Q. 12. The eighth signe, is contempt of Gods Ministers. pag. 48.

The Contents.

CHAP. VIII.

Of such reasons as may mooue vs to abhor carnall securitie, and to vse all meanes either to preuent it, or to bee freed from it.

- ¶ 1. That it is necessarie to haue our hearts wrought vnto the haired of this Vice. pag. 49.
- ¶ 2. That Christ hath giuen vs speciall warning to flee securitie.
pag. 50.
- ¶ 3. That the examples of securitie, fearefully punished in others, ought to be warnings vnto vs. pag. 51.
- ¶ 4. That Christs holy Apostles, haue giuen vs many warnings, to take heed of it. pag. 52.
- ¶ 5. That carnall securitie is a most dangerous sicknesse of the soule.
pag. 52.
- ¶ 6. That it is a disease hardly cured. pag. 53.
- ¶ 7. That it is the cause of all sinne. pag. 54.
- ¶ 8. That it emptieth the heart of all grace, and prepareth and ma-keth it fit to receiue Satan and all his tentations. pag. 54.

CHAP. IX.

Whercin is shewed, that carnall securitie is the cause of many fearefull punishments.

- ¶ 1. That carnall securitie deprineth vs of Gods fauour and protection, and dispoyleth vs of spirituall grace. pag. 56.
- ¶ 2. Of some speciall graces whereof it deprineth vs. pag. 57.
- ¶ 3. That Gods Spirit will not dwell in a secure heart. pag. 57.
- ¶ 4. That carnall securitie deprineth vs of eternall happinesse. pag. 58.
- ¶ 5. That it exposeth vs to positive euills, and, first, to all dangers.
pag. 58.
- ¶ 6. That it exposeth vs to Gods fearefull Iudgements. pag. 59.
- ¶ 7. The former point illustrated by Examples. pag. 60.
- ¶ 8. That it plungeth men into euerlasting condemnation. pag. 60.
- ¶ 9. That carnall securitie is a fearefull punishment of other sinnes.
pag. 61.

CHAP. X.

Of the meanes whereby we may be preserued from carnall securitie. As first, auoyding and taking away
the causes of it.

- ¶ 1. The first remedie is to auoid ignorance, and to labour after knowledge. pag. 63.
2. The

The Contents.

- ¶ 2. The second remedie, is to consider and meditate often on Gods Attributes. pag. 63.
 ¶ 3. The third meanes is, to cast off all selfe-confidence. pag. 65.
 ¶ 4. That it is a notable meanes to weaken selfe-confidence, if we consider the strength of our spirituall enemies. pag. 65.
 ¶ 5. The third remedie, is to vse well our prosperitie. pag. 67.
 ¶ 6. The fift remedie, is to shun customable sinning. pag. 68.
 ¶ 7. The sixt remedie, is to make precious account of Gods grace and forbearance. pag. 68.
 ¶ 8. The seventh remedie, is to shun presumption. pag. 69.
 ¶ 9. The eighth remedie, is to vse carefully the meanes of saluation.
pag. 69.
 ¶ 10. The ninth remedie is, to heare the Word with Faith. pag. 71.
 ¶ 11. The tenth remedie is, to apply the Word vnto our selues. pag. 71.
 ¶ 12. The eleuenth remedie is, not to misapply the promises. pag. 71.

CHAP. XI.

Wherein are set downe diuers other remedies, whereby we may be preserued from carnall
securitie.

- ¶ 1. THe first remedie is, to withstand securitie in the first degrees of it. pag. 72.
 ¶ 2. The second remedie is, to nourish in our hearts the true feare of God. pag. 74.
 ¶ 3. The third remedie is, to make great account of a soft and relenting heart. pag. 75.
 ¶ 4. The fourth remedie is, examination of our estate. pag. 76.
 ¶ 5. The fift remedie is, to esteeme much of priuate admonitions.
pag. 77.
 ¶ 6. The sixt remedie is, to visit those who are in affliction. pag. 79.
 ¶ 7. The seventh remedie is, to meditate on the tentations and sufferings of Christ. pag. 80.
 ¶ 8. The eighth remedie is, to consider that securitie in this life is vnreasonable. pag. 81.
 ¶ 9. The ninth remedie is, to meditate often on the last iudgement.
pag. 82.
 ¶ 10. The last remedie is, frequent and fervent prayer for Gods blef-sing vpon all the former meanes. pag. 83.

THE CONTENTS OF THE SECOND BOOKE:

Intreating of Spirituall and Christian Securitie.

CHAP. I.

Wherein spirituall securitie is defined, and the definition explained.

- ¶ 1. That all securitie is not to be condemned, but that it is in some kind commendable; and to be desired. pag. 85.
 ¶ 2. The description of spirituall Securitie. pag. 86.
 ¶ 3. That God is the author of spirituall Securitie. pag. 87.
 ¶ 4. That the Regenerate onely are the subject of spirituall Securitie. pag. 88.
 ¶ 5. The grounds of spirituall Securitie, on which it resteth. pag. 88.
 ¶ 6. Of the continuance and perpetuities of spirituall Securitie. pag. 89.

CHAP. II.

Of the Causes and Effects of spirituall Securitie.

- ¶ 1. The causes of spirituall Securitie respecting God. pag. 90.
 ¶ 2. The causes of spirituall Securitie, respecting God. pag. 91.
 ¶ 3. Of the particular causes of spirituall Securitie, first, saving knowledge. pag. 92.
 ¶ 4. The second cause, a lively Faith in Christ. pag. 93.
 ¶ 5. The third cause, Charitie. pag. 93.
 ¶ 6. The fourth cause, the true feare of God. pag. 94.
 ¶ 7. The last cause, is new obedience. pag. 94.
 ¶ 8. Of the effects of spirituall Securitie. pag. 95.

OF CARNALL SECVRITIE.

THE FIRST BOOKE

CHAP. I.

The Preface. Of Securitie in generall: and more specially of securitie in the state of Innocency; and of that which is in vs after the Fall.

S it is the nature and propertie of the supreme Goodnesse, to make all things like vnto it selfe, and euen out of euill to produce that which is good: so is it the nature of sinne and corruption; so to poison and taint whatsoever it toucheth, that though it bee of an indifferent nature, yea originally good, it maketh it like it selfe euill and unfull. Of the former wee haue God himselfe, the best example; who being infinite in wisdom, power and goodnesse, doth not onely effect his good ends by good meanes and instruments; but is able to bring light out of darknesse, good out of euill, and to make the worst instruments fit tooles for the perfecting and polishing his best works. And thus he ordinarily vseth the euill of punishment, as crosses, calamities and afflictions of all kinds corporall and spirituall, not onely for the iust punishment of the wicked, but for the triall of his owne Seruants, the purging and purifying of them from their corruptions, the exercise, and by exercise the manifesting and increasing of their spirituall graces, and the furthering and assuring of their saluation. Thus he vseth the wicked for the chastizement of his Children, and the Deuill himselfe and his malicious tentations, for the strengthening of them in Faith, Love, Patience,

B

d. I.

That God the supreme goodnesse turneth
all, euen euill
it selfe into good.

Rom. 8.28.

2. Cor. 4.17.

Gen. 45. 5, 7, 8.

2. Sam. 12. 5, 1.

Ch. 16. 10.

A. 2. 23. Ch. 3. 28.

2. Cor. 12. 7.

Matt. 26. 33, 34.

p. 2.

That it is the nature of sinne and corruption to turne all into euill.

Ezech. 33. 10, 11

Esa. 22. 12, 13.

1. Cor. 15. 32.

Christian Wartare,
2. Part.

tiencie, and all other sauing graces, after they haue had experience of Gods power and goodnesse, assisting and giuing them victorie in these spirituall conflicts. Yea, this chiefe Goodnesse can make euill sinne it selfe in others, to serue as a meanes to execute his wise and iust Counsailes, as the malicious practises of Iosephs brethren, the meanes of his advancement, and their owne preservation: the sinne of Absolon, Achitophel and Shemei, for his rod to chastize Dauid, and to humble him for his grieuous falls; the sinne of Iudas, the Scribes, Pharisees and Deuill himselfe, to set forward the worke of our Redemption by the death of our Saniour. Yea, he can make of sinne in the same partie, an Antidote against sinne, and, as it were, smother it in its owne smoke, and by letting his Seruants slip into lesser sinnes, hee can preserve them from falling, or being fallen, can pull them out of those which are greater. As when by the pricke of other sinnes, he letteth out the wind of pride, which is most hatefull vnto him, and pernicious vnto our selues; and when by leauing vs, he suffereth vs to slip into sinne to make vs cast away selfe-confidence, that wee may more firmly cleaue vnto him, who alone is able to support vs by a liuely Faith.

Of the other wee haue lamentable experience, not onely in Satan, but principally in our owne sinfull corruptions, which make vs apt and readie to abuse all things vnto sinne; and out of the best premises to inferre the worst conclusions. And thus our wicked flesh abuseth Gods sauing attributes vnto sinne, as his infinite mercy which should cause vs to feare him, to moue vs thereby to goe on in our wicked courses, more sinning that grace may more abound. His Patience and long suffering, which should leade vs to repentance, to worke in vs hardnesse of heart, and by deferring our repentance to treasure vp wrath against the day of wrath. His Iustice and righteous Iudgements, which should about all things make vs afraid to displease him, because he is a consuming fire, and it is a fearefull thing to fall into the hands of the liuing God, the flesh abuseth to make men to despaire of all grace or future good, and therefore to lay hold of the present delights of sinne, saying with the Epicures, Let vs eat and drinke, for so morrow wee shall die. But especially and most ordinarily our sinfull corruption abuseth Gods temporall benefites vnto euill, which being originally good, are vnto vs in respect of their vse of an indifferent nature; good to those who vse them well; and euill vnto those that abuse them vnto sinne. And of this kind is worldly prosperitie, with all earthly benefites which doe accompany it, as health, wealth, peace, plentie, immunitie from dangers, and such like; the which our sinfull flesh abuseth, for the robbing of our soules of all grace, and the replenishing of them with all vice and sinne, as forgetfulnesse of God, pride, prophaneesse, neglect of Religion, and contempt of Gods Ordinances, tyrannie, oppression, crueltie, with innumerable others of this hellish broode, as elswhere I haue more fully shewed.

But especially among and about the rest, doth our fleshly corruption

tion abuse this worldly prosperitie, as a meanes to beget in vs carnall securitie, which is the Mother and Nurse of all other wickednesse; whereby mens hearts being emptied of all feare of God, which is the head and beginning of true wisdom, are made capable and fit to receiue all manner of wickednesse, and to run in a head-long course into all kinds of horrible and hellish impieties. Of which we haue too lamentable experience in these our dayes; wherein few make conscience of any sinne, not punishable by humane Lawes, which offereth vnto them either pleasure or profit; as neglect of Religion, and duries of Gods Seruice, bitter Cursing, blasphemous Swearing, profanation of Gods Sabbaths, Crueltie, Oppression, Briberie, Extortion, Whoredome, Drunkennesse, Fraude, Vsurie, deceitfull Dealing, and matchlesse Pride, shewed especially in shamelesse and monstrous fashions of Apparell, whereby Women are transformed into Men, and Men into Women. And what is the cause of all these mischiefs, but carnall securitie? whereby Men blesse themselues in their wicked courses, and put farre from them the Iudgements of God and the euill Day, and together with them their Repentance and amendment of life? And from whence doth this securitie arise and spring, but from our abundance of Gods temporall Blessings, long Prosperitie, Peace and Plentie, abused by our carnall corruption, which maketh Men to forget God, because they find no need of him; to neglect and contemne his fearefull Iudgements, because they haue not felt the smart of them; and because they haue long escaped punishment in their euill courses, they continue still securely in them, promising impunitie vnto themselues, vpon their former experience, for the time to come, and also the continuance of all their worldly prosperitie, concluding, that to morrow will be like this day, and much more abundant, as the Prophet speaketh.

And therefore seeing this carnall securitie is a capitall sinne, and most odious in Gods sight; and a mother Vice which in her fruitfull wombe breedeth and nourisheth all other kinds of wickednesse; and seeing it is the Sinne of the Times and of the Countrie, which hath wholly corrupted and poysoned the greatest number of our Nation, and somewhat tainted the very best; I thought it a fit Subiect to write vpon (For a word spoken in due season how good is it?) and to encounter this mother Sinne with the Sword of the Spirit, and to strike at this Roote of all Vice with the Axe of Gods Word; knowing, that if it be vanquished, all other Vices that depend vpon it will easily bee put to flight; if it bee mortified and killed, the cursed offspring of this hellish Monster, will either bee abortiues in her dead wombe, or die for want of nourishment, if alreadie they bee bred and borne; when as her poysonous breasts can yeeld vnto them no further foode.

But that we may not mistake our Friends for our Enemies, and because they haue some resemblance of the same names and colours, fight against both alike; and so as much endamage our selues by ¶ 3.

That fleshly corrupt on a-buseth prosper-itie, to the begetting in vs carnall secu-
ritie,
Psal. 111. 10.
Pro. 1. 7.

Ez. 56. 12.

¶ 4.
The moriue which induced me to the writing of this Treatise.

Pro. 15. 23.

¶ 5.
That it is necessary to distinguish secu-ritie into its seuerall kinds.

2. King. 10.

¶ 6.
Of securitie
in the state of Innocency.
*Aquin. 2. 2.
quest. 129 art. 7.
in Etymolog.*

wounding those that are of our owne partie, as get aduantage by subduing those that are against vs : It shall not bee amisse in the first place to marshall them in their seuerall rankes, and by due distinctions to separate the one from the other, as Iehu the Priests of the Lord from the Priests of Baal; that so wee may with more courage and confidence assault our Enemies, and afterwards comfort and cherish our Friends, which will, if they bee rightly and kindly vsed, bee seruiceable vnto vs, and after victorie adde vnto our triumph much ioy and contentment.

Securitie, generally taken, is (as Aquinas defineth it) a perfect tranquillitie and freedome of the mind from feare. In which sense it is opposed to feare as the priuation thereof. And from hence it hath it Etymologie and Notation, as Isidore noteth; Securus quasi sine cura; a Man is said to be secure, who is without care or feare. More specially securitie is taken either for that which is naturall, or that which is supernaturall, diuine and holy. Naturall securitie is that which proceedeth from naturall causes, as safetie from all dangers, and assurance of the constant fruition of all the good things which we desire. The which is to be considered. as it was originally in vs by creation, in the state of innocency and perfection, or as it is now in vs in the state of corruption after the fall. Securitie in the state of innocency, was a perfect tranquillitie of the mind without the encounters of any feares, which was wrought in our first Parents by the Lord our Creator, and was a fruit of their full assurance of Gods protection and prouidence continually watching ouer them, whereby they were assured of freedome from all euill, and of the fruition of all good; and of that inward peace of conscience with God, and that outward peace which they had with all the visible Creatures, none of which could hurt them, all of which were vsfull and seruiceable vnto them. The which securitie was lost by the fall of our first Parents, whereby they became guiltie of sinne, obnoxious to Gods wrath, and as out-lawes, cast out from vnder the priuiledge and safe-guard of his protection, which was accompanied with horror and feare, proceeding from a dreadfull expectation of deserved punishment. And this feare was continually increased by the consideration of Gods exact iustice, which will not let sinne escape vnpunished, from our enmitie with God, appearing in the opposition of his goodnesse and puritie, against our wickednesse and corruption; and that inward warre of the conscience, against our passions and carnall concupiscence, and that outward warre betweene vs and all the Creatures. For no sooner became we rebels against our Lord and Creator, and broke the peace betweene vs and him, but they also rebelled against vs, and breaking the peace betweene vs, became our professed Enemies, and readie instruments of executing Gods wrath against vs for our sinnes.

¶ 7.
Of securitie in the state of Corruption
and the origi-
nall of it.

Now because being in this case, we could not doe chearfull seruice, vnto Satan, who when wee were cast from vnder Gods protection had taken vs captiue to doe his will, but out of feare and discontent were

were likely to endeaour the bettering of our estate, and to seeke some meanes to free our selues from this dreadfull miserie; therefore this subtle Enemy of our saluation, laboured to make vp this breach, whereby we did lye open to all dangers, and in stead of the firme wall of Gods protection, which like an impregnable Bulwarke secured vs from all euill; hee built about vs a Wall of rubbish and vntempered Morter, or rather of straw and seare wood, which in stead of preserving vs from outward perils, was readie to betray vs to all assaults of Enemies, to be set on fire with Gods wrath and the wild fire of Hell, the tentations of the Deuill, and so to become, in stead of a Wall of defence, fuell for our execution, and meanes of our greater torment. To all which euills wee were more desperately exposed; because by this seeming shelter, and ayerie wall of defence, we were made wholly negligent, as though there were no euill approching, nor any Enemy able to disturbe our peace. The which weake Fort and vaine Defence, was wholly framed of Satans errours and lies, whereby hee made vs either to apprehend, by a false conceit things that were not, or to misse-apply vnto our selues things that are, as though they were neare and on our side, when as they are farre off from our defence, and rather against, then for vs, so long as we are in the state of impenitencie and vnbeliefe. In the former respect he maketh vs secure by telling vs of our naturall excellencies, our good meanings and intentions, our iustice and loue to God and Men, whereby we fulfill the Law, and merit from God by our good liues his protection and defence; when as there is nothing in vs but ignorance and vnbeliefe, worldlinesse and prophanenesse, sinne and corruption, which so defileth euen those actions which wee thinke most glorious, that they are abominable in Gods sight. And also by telling vs that we haue peace with God, and are highly in his fauour; and peace with all the Creatures, so as nothing will doe vs any harme; when as all things in Heauen and Earth are at enmitie with vs, and (when God doth but giue the signe of battaile) will set vpon vs with all their furie. In the other respect, hee secureth vs, by setting before vs the infinite mercies of God, inferring thereupon, that we may safely goe on in our sinnes, because God is so mercifull, that few or none shall bee condemned, and that though wee deferre our repentance to the last houre, yet euen then wee shall haue pardon, if we haue but leisure to say, Lord haue mercy vpon me; the all-sufficient merits of Christ which are a full price of redemption for the whole World; the gracious and indefinite Promises of the Gospell made vnto all Men without exception; the impunitie of sinners, and namely of themselues, hauing long continued in their sinfull courses; the prosperitie of the wicked who glut themselues with the pleasures of sinne, the afflictions of the faithfull who are precise and strict in all their wayes, and diuers other motiues, of which wee shall speake more fully hereafter: from all which hee concludeth, that wee may lay aside all feare, and take libertie to satisfie our carnall lusts, because there is no danger at all, of either present or future punishment.

And thus in stead of that securitie, which we had in our creation, and in the state of innocencie, accompanying the assurance of Gods loue and protection, whereby wee should haue beene made more chearefull and couragious in the duties of Holinesse and Righteousnesse, because wee serued such a gracious and powerfull Lord, as was bothable and willing to protect vs from all perils, and to safe-guard vs from all enemies; Satan laboureth to worke in vs this carnall securitie, whereby wee are encouraged to performe seruice vnto himselfe with all confidence and chearefulnesse; perswading vs that we are safe from all danger, though we be daily obnoxious to Gods wrath, liable to his fearefull Iudgements, and in the very jawes of Death and Hell. With which securitie, hee bringeth more to destruction then with all his terrors and feares, whereby hee indeauoureth to plunge men into desperation, yea in truth, then with all other tentations, though neuer so vgly and terrible in their outward appearance. In which regard it behooueth all Christians as they loue their soules, and would either escape Death and Hell, or attaine vnto saluation and euerlasting happinesse, that they keepe a narrow watch ouer themselues; and that being wounded by this viperous Serpent with the sting of sinne, they doe not thereupon fall into this pleasing slumber, or rather dead sleepe of carnall securitie, the which bringeth all, ouer-taken with it, into destruction and condemnation of Body and Soule.

C H A P. II.

Of carnall securitie, and what it is.

§. I.
Of the general
Parts of this Treatise.

TO which purpose let vs now speake more specially of it. And for our more orderly proceeding, I will first shew what it is, that so knowing, wee may the better auoid it. Secondly, the causes of it and meanes, which Satan and our owne corruption vse to worke it in vs. Thirdly, the diuers sorts and kinds of this Vice. Fourthly, how we may know the one from the other. Fifthly, the signes whereby we may discern, whether and how farre forth we are tainted and infected with this deadly poyson: and lastly, the meanes whereby we may either be preserued from falling into it, or recovered, if we be alreadie ouer-taken.

§. 2.
Carnall securitie defined.

Concerning the first, wee will make it plaine, not onely by a Definition or Description, but also by Testimonies and Examples of it recorded in the holy Scriptures. It may best bee defined, if in all things we oppose it to that Vertue whereof it is the priuation, namely, the true feare of God, after this manner. Carnall securitie is a Vice or vicious habit, whereby forgetting or neglecting both the iustice and power of God in punishing sinne, and also his infinite Loue and Goodnesse in Christ, his Merits and Iudgements, his Promises and Threatnings, with the manifold benefits which we haue receiued from him, we doe cast off all feare of him, and so quietly and securely

goe

goe on in sinne without repentance, promising vnto our selues immunitie from all punishment, and not onely for the present the constant fruition of our carnall delights, but also euerlasting saluation in the World to come. Vnto this description, for the better clearing of the point in hand; we may adde that of Bernards, describing an hard or secure heart: It is that (saith he) which is not rent with compunction, nor softened with pittie, nor moued with prayers, nor yeeldeth to threatnings, and is hardened with stripes. It is ungratefull for benefitts, unfaithfull for counsailes, fierce in respect of iudgements, shamelesse in regard of things filthy and dishonest, vndaunted in dangers, inhumane in humane actions, rash in diuine, forgetfull of things past, neglectfull of things present, improuident for things to come. It is that which remembreth nothing past but injuries, loseth the benefit of all things present, and fore-casterh and prouideth for nothing to come but reuenge. And that I may in a word comprehend the euills of this horrible Vice; it is that which neither feareth God nor respecteth Man. So that if we would haue a brieue definition of this Securitie, it is nothing else but the absence and priuation of the feare of God; for as securitie generally considered, is the freedome of the mind from all feare; so this speciall kind of it carnall securitie, is that horrible Vice which emptieth the heart wholly of the true feare of God. And thus the wise Man opposeth them the one against the other. Happy is the man (saith he) that feareth alwayes, but he that hardneth his heart shall fall into mischiese.

And this is that securitie of which Dauid speaketh: The transgression of the wicked saith within my heart, that there is no feare of God before his eyes: For he flattereth himselfe in his owne eyes, untill his iniquitie be found out to be hatefull. And describing the prosperous estate of the wicked; he saith, That continuing in their corruption, and being couered with violence, as with a garment; They speake loftily, and set their mouthes against the Heauens; saying, How doth God know? and is there knowledge in the most High? And Iob discoursing of the same subiect, namely, wicked men flourishing in worldly prosperitie, saith, that their houses are safe from feare, neither is the rod of God vpon them. They take the Timbrel and Harpe, and reioyce in the sound of the Organs; they spend their dayes in wealth, and in a moment goe downe to the graue. Therefore they say vnto God, depart from vs, for we desire not the knowledge of thy wayes. What is the Almighty, that wee should serue him? and what profit should we haue if we pray vnto him?

The examples of this Vice, recorded in the holy Scriptures, are very many. It was one of the first sinnes which tainted our first Parents; who vpon the Devils word promised vnto themselues, in the transgression of Gods Commandement, not onely impunitie for their sinne, but also a great addition to their present happinesse. The old World was drowned in deepe securitie, before it was drowned with the generall Deluge. For though Noah, the Preacher of Righteounesse, denounced Gods Iudgements; that hee might bring them to repentance, yet they securely went on in their sinnes without feare of

Bernard. de Con-
sol. ad Eugenium
lib. 1.

Pro. 28. 14.

Ps. 3.
Testimonies of Scripture, shewing what it is.

Psal. 36. 1, 2.

Psal. 73. 8, 9, 11.

Iob. 41. 9.

Ps. 4.
Examples of carnall secu-
ritie.

Lut. 17.27,28.

Psal. 10.11.

Esa. 47.7,8.

Apoc. 18.7.

Esa. 28.15.

Ezech. 8.12. &
9.9.

Zeph. 1.12.

of danger, eating and drinking, marrying and giuing in marriage, vntill the day that Noah entering into the Arke, the Flood came and tooke them all away. It was a chiefe sinne of Sodom and Gomorrah, accompanying their Ease and Plentie, Peace and Prosperitie, which made them to blesse themselves in all their abominable wickednesse; to stop their cares to righteous Lot, fore-telling their imminent plagues; and to run on in their sinfull courses, as though they were obnoxious to no danger. For as our Sauour noteth, They did eate, they dranke, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded, vntill the day that Lot departing out of Sodom, it rayned Fire and Brimstone from Heauen and destroyed them all. Thus Dauid complaineth of the great Ones of his time, who grieuously oppressed the Poore, presuming of Gods conniugency and their owne impunitie: Hee hath said in his heart, God hath forgotten, hee hideth his Face, hee will neuer see it. This was the sinne of old Babylon, who hauing lifted vp her selfe by blood and crueltie aboue all other Nations, neuer laid her sinnes to heart, but dwelled carelessly and gaue her selfe to pleasure, and concluded, That shee should be a Lady for euer, and neuer sit as a Widdow, nor know the losse of Children. And such is the carnall securitie, of the new Babylon and the Romane Antichrist, as the Apostle Iohn describeth it, who hauing multiplied her Idolatries, and made the Kings and Nations of the Earth drunke with the golden cup of her Fornications, and her selfe with the blood of the holy Martyrs, securely goeth on in her sinnes without repentance, and presumeth notwithstanding of impunitie, and the long continuance of her worldly prosperitie. Such was the securitie of those desperate sinners, of whom the Prophet Esa speaketh, who made a covenant with Death, and were at an agreement with Hell, and so securely went on in their sinne, promising vnto themselves, that when the ouer-flowing scourge should passe through, it should not come vnto them; because they had made lyes their refuge, and were hid vnder falsehood. For this the Ancients of the House of Israel are condemned, who hauing committed many and great abominations in the darke, were out of all feare of punishment, saying, The Lord seeth vs not, the Lord hath forsaken the Earth. And finally, this was the securitie of the people of the Iewes, who were settled on their lees, and resolved to goe on in their wicked courses, saying in their hearts, The Lord will not doe good, nor will hee doe euill.

C H A P. III.

Of the manifold causes of carnall securitie.

¶ I.
The first cause
of Securitie,
ignorance of God, and his sauiing attributes.

WE haue seene what this carnall Securitie is; and now in the next place wee are to consider of the causes and meanes, whereby it is wrought in vs. The first whereof is ignorance either naturall or affected, which like a thicke cloud or foggie mist, doth hide from the eyes of our our minds all the motions of Gods feare, and maketh vs secure in the midst of dangers, because we doe not see the euills that encompasse vs round about. Like vnto silly Birds which sit singing on the boughs, when the vnscene Archer hath his Bolt vpon the string, readie to shoote and smite them off; or which feed securely on the Bait, within the compasse of the Net, because it lyeth hidden from their sight. For we are beset on all sides with innumerable dangers, but yet remaine secure, euen when they are readie to seaze vpon vs, because we see onely the baits that delight vs, but doe not behold, by reason of our ignorance, the Nets and Snares which are readie to catch vs. We see and taste the pleasures of sinne, and the bewitching allurements of worldly riches and preferments; but because we neither know nor acknowledge the iustice of God in punishing sinne, his hatred of it, and inflamed wrath against it, which nothing could quench, but the streames of Christs precious Blood, his all-seeing Eye, which taketh notice of all sinnes though neuer so secretly committed, and omnipotent Power in punishing them; nor the malice of the Deuill in tempting vs vnto sinne, nor the manifold miseries into which wee plunge our selues, when wee yeeld to his tentations; therefore wee blesse our selues in this cursed estate, and securely goe on in sinne without repentance.

The second cause of securitie is, when as knowing these things, for want of consideration we cast them negligently behind our backs; and make no vse of that we know. For therefore doe men securely goe on in their sinne and feare no danger; because they doe not meditate and consider, that the eye of their Iudge is alwayes vpon them, who will execute righteous Iudgement without respect of persons; of the day of Iudgement, when the secrets of all hearts shall be disclosed, and all hidden things brought to light. Of that strict account, which is then to be given, and the eternall miseries and hellish torments into which they shall be irrecoverably plunged, who come short in their reckonings, and are not able to pay their debts. Because they doe not consider that the pleasures of sinne, which they presently inioy, are short and momentanie, and may euery day bee taken from vs or wee from them; but the punishments of them great and endlesse, euen the finall losse of eternall happinesse; and the intollerable torments of hellish condemnation.

The third cause of carnall Securitie, is selfe Confidence, arising from an erroneous opinion of our owne power and sufficiency, for the fruition of our desires, and freedome from all dangers. For therefore are men secure, because they thinke themselves so wise, that they can with their policie either preuent all dangers, or quit themselves out of them, if they be fallen into them. Because they haue an opinion of their owne strength, as though thereby they were able to protect themselves from all euills, to withstand all enemies which may attempt the disturbing of their peace; and to safe-gard both their owne persons, and all that belong vnto them, from all perills; and that by their

§. 2.
The second cause, want of consideration of that wee know.

§. 3.
The third cause, selfe confidence.

Ier. 49. 16.

Psal. 20. 7.

Ier. 7. 4.

¶ 4.
The fourth cause, abuse of worldly prosperitie.

Psal. 49.

Ezech. 9. 9.

Psal. 50. 21.

Psal. 10. 4, 5, 6.

Iob 21. 13, 14.

their owne absolute power, or by the aide of their friends, or the situation of their Countrey farre remote from Entmies, or inuironed with the Sea, or the strength of their Fortifications, which they thinke impregnable, or their Munition and warlike preparations, wherein they excell all their neighbour Nations. So also this carnall securitie ariseth in many from confidence in those spirituall priuiledges, wherein they are preferred before others, as that they are members of the true Church, and inioy the Word, the Sacraments, and the rest of Gods holy Ordinances, as wee see in the example of the Israelites, who went on in their sinnes with great securitie, because they had the Temple of the Lord, the Arke and Law of God amongst them. And finally, many nourish this securitie in them, out of an opinion of their owne worthinesse and merits, and supposing themselves to bee much more holy then others, they imagine that God is bound to them for their well-deseruing, to watch ouer them in more especiall manner, that no euill may happen vnto them.

The fourth cause of carnall Securitie, is worldly Prosperitie, which maketh men beleene that it is a sure Friend, and will neuer leaue them, though in truth it is but a fawning Flatterer, which is as vnconstant as the Moone, the Wind, or Aprill weather. It promiseth that they shall still drinke their delicious pleasures out of a full Cup, that their Tables shall ouer-flow with dainties, and their Riches long continue, of which when they haue spent their fill, there will be enough to leane vnto their Children. And as it promiseth vnto them the long continuance of all their worldly good, so also protection from all dangers, causing them to feare no euill, because they feele none. It blindeth also their eyes with folly, and so puffeth vp their hearts with pride, that they cannot see their sinnes, with those fearefull iudgements which doe attend them, but maketh them thinke their vices vertues, and their outrageous wickednesse, small slips and humane frailties. It maketh them to forget God, and to remoue his Iudgements farre out of their sight, and to presume that he either seeth them not, or if he doe, is not displeased with their wicked courses. To this purpose the Psalmist speaketh: The wicked (saith he) through pride of his countenance will not seeke after God; God is not in all his thoughts. His wayes are alwayes gracious; thy iudgements are farre aboue out of his sight; as for his enemies, he puffeth at them. He hath said in his heart, I shall not be moued, for I shall neuer be in aduersitie. Yea, this worldly prosperitie maketh men to forget God, not onely through infirmitie, but also wilfully to banish all remembrance of him out of their minds. So Iob saith, that the wicked flourishing in all plentie and prosperitie, and spending their dayes in wealth and pleasure, doe therefore say vnto God; Depart from vs, for we desire not the knowledge of thy Wayes. What is the Almighty, that we should serue him? and what profit shall we haue, if we pray vnto him? or if they come not to this height of impietie, but that they liue ciuilly amongst men, and performe vnto God some cold, heartlesse, and formall seruice; then their great prosperitie maketh keth them thinke that they are Gods speciall Darlings, seeing they haue in their hands so many pledges of his loue, and that because for the present they haue receiued so much good from him, there is no reason why they should feare any euill for the time to come. And thus Babylon from her present prosperitie, securely concludeth, that shee should bee a Lady for euer, and know neither Widdow-hood nor losse of Children. And the rich Foole in the Gospell, securely gaue himselfe ouer to ease and pleasure, because hee had stored vp much goods for many yeeres. Yea, euen Dauid himselfe was lulled with this prosperitie into the sleepe of securitie. For in his prosperitie hee said, that hee should neuer be moued. And Iob in his prosperitie, concluded, That he should die in his nest, and should multiply his dayes as the Sand.

And as this securitie is caused by selfe Prosperitie, so also it is much nourished and strengthened by the consideration of the flourishing estate of others, who goe on in their sinnes without repentance. For men are not afraid to take those wicked courses, which they see to thrive so well with others; and will feed securely on those pleasing dainties, which cause others to be in such good liking. They will not be perswaded that sinne is so vgly and ill as men make it, when as the fruits and off-spring of it are so much to bee desired; nor that God so much hateth it as Preachers beare them in hand, seeing he bestoweth vpon those that commit and continue in it, so many testimonies of his loue. On the other side, they see small reason, why they should be ouer strict in Gods Service, when as they see those who are most forward and diligent in it, most afflicted in the World, or why they may not take their fill of the pleasures of sinne, when as they see those that most scrupulously shun it, thrive no better.

The first cause of carnall Securitie, is customable sinning, not renewing our repentance, as soone as we are fallen into it, but committing it againe and againe, and making it an ordinarie practise, and familiar vnto vs by common vse. What (saith one) doth not custome invert? what is not hardned by assidue? what is it that giueth not way to vse? vnto how many doth vse make that sweet and pleasant, which at first they abhorred as bitter and distastefull? so as they may say of their sinnes, as Iob of his sorrowes; The things which my soule refused to touch, are become my daily food. For sinne which at first seemed intolerable vnto thee, if thou accustomest thy selfe vnto it, in processe of time thou wilt iudge it not so heauie; and within a while, thou wilt feele it light; and soone after, not feele it at all: or if there be any sense, it will be not of griefe and sorrow, but of pleasure and delight. And if we still giue way vnto it, and doe not breake it off by serious repentance, it will bring vs not onely to securitie and hardnesse of heart, but to impudencie and desperate boldnesse, which will not onely make vs to commit sinne without feare and blushing in the sight of the same, but to defend it as though it were lawfull; yea, to glorie in it as if it were commendable; as wee see in the example of Doeg, who not onely did abominable wickednesse, but also boasted himselfe

Esa. 47. 8, 9.

Luk. 12. 19.

Psal. 30. 6.

Iob. 29. 18.

¶ 5.

The first cause of Securitie, is customable sinning.

Quid non inueriat consuetu-do? quia non assiduata deter-ius? q. Berinde consider. 10
 Eugenib. 1.
 Iob 6. 7.

Psal. 52. 1.

*Minus autem dolens sed magis infectus; quia
dum minus diuini adherent;
aridus sunt minus pauendi quanti magis assueti. Gregor.
Moral. lib. 24.
cap. 7.*

Matth. 13.

*6.
The sixt cause of Securitie, is the present im-punitie of sinners,*

Rom. 2. 4, 5.

himselfe in his mischiefe, as the Psalmist speaketh. For sinne as oft as it is committed, leaueth a blot and poysonous taint behind it in the heart and conscience, which if wee doe not labour to wash away with the precious blood of Christ, applyed afresh vnto vs by a liuely Faith, and by bathing them in the teares of vnfayned repentance, it will make them readie to receiue the infection of the next tentation, and at last so wholly corrupt and sinfull, that they will bee sensible of no wickednesse, because it is of the same nature and temper with them. To which purpose, one saith, that these pricks of tentations, coming into common vse, are made more large and wide, though not more sharpe and sensible. They grieue lesse, but infect more; because sticking long vnto the minde, they are by so much the lesse feared, by how much they are become the more familiar. For out of many acts of sinne, at last, it commeth to an habite, which, as it is long in getting, so it is not easily lost. And whilest it continueth, sinne is committed at ease without any reluctation of minde or checks of conscience, and liued in with great securitie; these euill habites producing actions like themselues with as great facilitie as the eye seeth, or the eare heareth. Againe, this often sinning groweth vnto a custome, which being euill, is the greatest Tyrant, hauing in it the nature of a Law, which bringeth an vrgent necessitie with it that cannot bee resisted: yea, it becommeth a second Nature, and causeth men to sinne as familiarly and easily; as the Riuer runneth, the stone descendeth, or the sparks flye vpwards. It hardneth the heart and seareth the conscience, making it like vnto the path-way which is much trampled vpon, in which the seed of the Word can take no roote, but as soone as it is cast vpon it, the Fowles or Fiends of hell come and take it away, as our Sauour speaketh. It maketh the heart like vnto the hand which by much labour getteth such a callum or thicke skin vpon it, that it is almost insensible; and the Conscience like vnto the Backe, which is at first sensible of the smallest stripe; but with much whipping, becommeth so stupid and benumbed, that the greatest lashes cause little smart.

The sixt cause of this carnall Securitie, is impunitie of sinners, after much wickednesse committed by them. For although God out of his goodnesse, patience and long suffering, differreth the execution of his righteous Iudgements, and after sinners haue often deserved Death and condemnation, doth giue vnto them many Repriuals, that in the meane time they may sue out their Pardon and escape punishment, by turning vnto him by vnfayned repentance; yet the vessells of wrath ordayned to destruction, through the hardnesse of their hearts which cannot repent, take occasion vpon this Mercy and Patience of God, of liuing securely in their wicked courses, and so by multiplying their sinnes, treasure vp vnto themselues wrath against the day of wrath, and reuelation of the righteous Iudgement of God, as the Apostle speaketh. Like herein to desperate Malefactors, who because they haue often escaped, securely goe on in their wickednesse, as though though they were free from all danger; or rather to such as being apprehended, arraigned and adiudged to die, are through the fauour of the Iudge repriued for a while, that they may vse meanes to procure their pardon. But they, because day of Execution is a little deferred, conclude with themselves, that all the storme of perill is ouerblowne, and (with Agag) that the bitterneesse of death is past, and therefore spend their whole time in Pleasures and Delights, in Dancing and Reuellling, Drinking and Whoring; yea, securely returne to their former wicked courses, Stealing and Robbing, Quarrelling and Killing, till the Iudge seeing his Mercy and Patience thus abused, doe giue out his Warrant for their speedy Execution. So the wise Man telleth vs, that because sentence against an euill worke, is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sonnes of men is fully set in them to doe euill. An example whereof wee haue in the Israelites, who because God held his peace for a long time, therefore they feared him not. Yea, it grew to a wicked prouerbe amongst them; that the dayes were prolonged, and euery vision fayled, that is, because the Iudgements of God, threatned by the Prophets, were deferred, therefore their prophesies were worthy no credit, as being neuer likely to be fulfilled. So Scoffers of these latter times, securely walke after their owne lusts, and say, Where is the promise of Christs comming to iudgement? seeing since the Fathers fell asleepe, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation, as the Apostle Peter hath fore-warned vs. And what is the cause of all this, but the abuse of Gods patience and long-suffering, and a false and blasphemous conceit of his Nature and Actions arising from it. For when hee delayeth to inflict his Iudgements vpon the wicked for their sinnes; they conclude, that there is no God, or no Prouidence, that hee sitteth in Heauen, and either seeth not, or regardeth not what is done on Earth; yea, that hee is like them, allowing and approving of their wicked courses, as the Psalmist speaketh; and therefore they may securely proceed in their sinnes without feare or danger.

The seuenth cause of carnall securitie, is presumption on Gods mercy, whereby men conceiue, that though they liue as they list, and daily prouoke his wrath against them, by wilfull sinnes committed against knowledge and conscience, yet hee is so pittifull and tender in compassion, that hee will not at all, or but very slightly punish them for their wickednesse, or though they doe make them lyable to his displeasure by their sinnes, yet they may continue in them, for a time, and not deprive themselves of the pleasure and profit of them, seeing whensoever they repent, they shall haue pardon, and bee receiued to Grace and Mercy. The which they may doe time enough hereafter, when God beginneth to execute iudgement; which if hee deferre to doe vntill the houre of their death, euen then it will bee time enough to repent, seeing hee offereth his Grace to all whatsoever, at all times whensoever, that forsake their sinnes and call vpon him for mercy and forgiveness. And thus doe wicked

Ecclef. 3. 11.

Esa. 57. 11.

Ezech. 12. 12.

2. Pet. 3. 3, 4.

Psal. 50. 21.

¶ 7.
The seuenth cause, presumption on Gods
mercy.

p. 8.

The eight cause, the neglect or contempt of the meanes of grace and sal-uation.

Zach. 7. 11, 12.

p. 9.

The ninth cause, hearing
the Word
without Faith.
Heb. 4. 2.

2. Cor. 2. 16.

Esa. 55. 11.

ked men make an Idoll of a mercy, in God falsely fancied, vnto themselves, whilst they seuer it from his Iustice, which will not let the sinnes of such presumptuous wretches goe unpunished; and from his Truth which hath denounced fearefull Iudgements against them, who securely abuse his patience and long suffering, which should leade them to repentance, and make them sorry and ashamed, that they should offend so gracious and mercifull a God, as an encouragement to hearten them on in their course of wickednesse, and to make them contemne his Iudgements and Threatnings.

The eighth cause, is the neglect or contempt of the meanes of spirituall grace and eternall saluation, as of hearing the Word; the vse of the Sacraments, Meditation, Prayer, holy Conferences, and such like. For as these are the meanes of working our hearts to the true feare of God, repentance and spirituall watchfulnesse; so the neglect of them causeth carnall securitie, hardnesse of heart, and boldnesse in sinning. And as all other Vices get head and strength, by forsaking the vse of the meanes, whereby the contrarie Vertues are wrought, because they are the priuation of them, and therefore the remouall of the one from that subiect, which is capable of them, is the placing of the other, as wee see Light succeed Darknesse; and Darknesse, Light; Rest Labour, and Labour Rest: so is it in these, the putting away of the feare of God, by neglecting the meanes whereby it is bred and nourished in vs, is the cause of entertayning carnall securitie. And so likewise, as all other Vices, being admitted, doe mutually strengthen one another, that they may keepe firmer and surer possession against the Vertues which they oppose; so is it betweene these, for the more we neglect the Word, Sacraments, and the rest, the more secure wee shall be in all sinfull courses; and the more strong wee grow in carnall securitie, the more negligent wee waxe in those holy Exercises. And therefore the Prophet ioyneth them together, as mutuall causes of one another: They stopped their eares that they should not heare, and made their hearts as an Adamant stone.

The ninth cause, is the hearing of the Word without Faith, giuing no credit either to the threatnings of the Law or promises of the Go-spell. For as the Word is vnprofitable, if it bee not mixed with Faith in those that heare it, as the Apostle speaketh: so it becommeth in this respect, by accident, through our corruption, dangerous and hurtfull.
Either it is the saour of life vnto life, or the saour of death vnto death.
Either it weakneth and killeth Vice, or giueth more strength and vigour to it; either it softneth our hearts like Waxe, or hardneth them like Clay; either it worketh them to Gods feare, when we beleue his Promises and Threatnings, or maketh them more carnally secure when wee giue no credit to them. For the Word of God proceeding out of his mouth, shall not returne vnto him void, but shall accomplish that which pleaseth him, and prosper in the thing whereto hee sends it; as the Prophet speaketh. And as oft as we heare it, either it setteth vs forward in the right way that leadeth to saluation, or through our

cor-

corruption and vnbeliefe, it maketh vs to goe faster and more securely in the wayes of death and destruction. It will make our hearts melt like the heart of good Iesiah, or to become more hard like the heart of Pharaoh; and wee shall receiue Gods Ambassadors with feare and trembling, as the Corinthians did Titus; or with proud neglect, and scornfull censures; fore-stalling preiudice, and resolu'd obstinacy, as the Athenians did the Apostle Paul. So the Lord speaketh of some, who should take occasion vpon hearing the curses of the Law, to blesse themselves in their hearts, saying, I shall haue peace, though I walke in the imagination of my heart to adde drunkennesse to thirst. And the Prophet from the Lord, saith of the people of the Iewes, that whilest they heard and vnderstood not, and seeing perceiued not, their hearts were made more far, their eares heauie, and their eyes more blind; which is not caused by any naturall propertie of the Word, but by accident through mans corruption that doth abuse it, and so maketh that a curse which was ordayned for a blessing. Like the weake and tender eye, that is made more blind by the bright beames of the Sunne, which cause stronger sights to see and discerne the better; or the weake eare, which is made more deafe by too much hearing of loud sounds; or the sicke stomacke, which becommeth more sicke by receiuing holosome nourishment, whereby one strong and healthy would bee confirmed in health, and by well digesting of it; minister vigour and strength to the whole body.

The tenth cause, is the not applying of the Word preached or read vnto our selues, for our owne vse and benefit, but putting it off to others as though it concerned them and not vs, especially admonitions and reprehensions for sinne, and the threatnings of Gods Iudgements against those that continue in them without repentance. For so are men blinded with pride and selfe loue, that they can see no faults in themselves, or if they doe, yet they seeme so small and veniall, that they are scarce worth the reproving; and so defectiue are they in charitie towards their Neighbours, that they can easily spie the least Motes in their eyes, and make of euery Moll-hill a huge Mountayne. And this maketh them to shift all rebukes for sinne, and denunciations of punishment from themselves vnto others, to whom they thinke they more fitly belong, and so blesse themselves and securely liue in sinne, as though they were free from all danger. Yea, though they be neuer so faultie in those Vices that are reprov'd, yet if in truth they can find out any that in the iudgement of the World, doe goe beyond them in those kinds; then can they heare them sharply rebuked without any sting of conscience, or sense of the smart of their owne sinnes, yea, with much pleasure and delight. And thus haue I often heard, after some powerfull Sermon against couetousnesse, a greedie Muck-worme, nothing moued for his owne auarice, because hee hath beene able to picke out of a whole Citie or Countrey some one, supposed to bee more wretched then himselfe, vnto whom hee hath applyed all that was spoken. And so when pride hath beene re-

2. Cor. 7. 15.

Apl. 17. 18, 32.

Deut. 29. 30.

Esa. 6. 9.

10.
The tenth cause, the not applying the Word preached.

buked, or profanenesse, or worldlinesse, or any other sinne; I haue noted, that those who haue highly offended in these kinds, in the iudgement of all others, haue like innocents securely blessed themselves, applying nothing spoken to their owne vse, because they could point at others that haue exceeded them in faultinesse. As if the Cutpurse should thinke himselfe safe and secure from danger of Law; because there are other greater Theeves, that breake Houses and rob by the high Way; or the common Whore-master, should thinke himselfe in no danger of Gods or Mans Lawes, because there are others that liue in Incest and filthy Sodomie; or the Man-slayer, should flatter himselfe with a secure hope of escaping at the day of Affize; because there are some in the Iayle that haue committed parricide.

¶ 11.
The eleuenth cause is the misle-applying of the promises of the Go-spell.

The eleuenth cause of carnall Securitie, is the misle-applying of the promises of the Gospell vnto those, who haue no part or interest in them. For when as there is no promise so generall and indefinite, which is not limited and restrayned to the condition of the Covenant of Grace, Faith in Christ bringing forth the fruits of vnfayned repentance; yet wicked men resolving to goe on in the course of sinne, no sooner heare the Promises of Gods mercy, the pardon of their sinnes, and eternall life and saluation, for the righteousness and obedience of Iesus Christ, which haue alwayes the former condition expressed or vnderstood, but presently with great confidence, or rather presumption, they lay hold of the Promises, but haue no care at all of performing the Condition. Thus when the Lord saith: As truly as I liue I will not the death of a sinner; that they make vse of for the nourishing of their carnall securitie, neuer regarding what followeth; but that he repent and liue. So when Christ saith, that he came not to call the Righteous, but Sinners; with that they comfort themselves in their sinfull courses, but obserue not to what he calleth them, namely, to repentance, before they can haue any part with him in glorie. And when they heare the Apostles speech; that God will haue all men to be saved, they make a bolster of it whereon they sleepe securely in their sinnes; but leaue out the following condition, which would helpe to keepe them waking, namely, that hee will haue all, whom hee would haue saved, come first to the sauiug knowledge of his Truth, which is neuer secured from the fruits of obedience. And thus these Spiders out of the fragrant flowers of Gods promises, sucke most deadly poyson; and make no other vse of the sweet tunes of the Gospell, but to bring and continue them in the deepe sleepe of carnall securitie; the which serue vnto the faithfull as effectuell meanes and motiues to make them leaue their sinnes, and turne vnto the Lord by vnfayned repentance.

Exech. 33. 41.

Matth. 9. 13.

1. Tim. 2. 4.

1. Iob. 2. 3, 4.

¶ 12.
The last cause,
is a flattering Ministerie.

The last cause of this carnall securitie, is a soothing and flattering ministerie, and when those who are sent as Gods Ambassadors, to denounce his Iudgements against impenitent sinners, either for feare or fauour, for hope of gayne or auoyding of displeasure, doe their message vnfaithfully, proclayming peace to them, against whom God hath hath denounced warre, and applying vnto them the gracious promises of the Gospel, to whom nothing belongeth, but the terrible threatnings of the Law. Of such Prophets the Lord often complayneth. They say still (saith he) vnto them that despise mee; The Lord hath said, yee shall haue peace; and they say vnto euery one, that walketh after the imagination of his owne heart; No euill shall come vpon you. And againe, They haue healed the hurt of the Daughter of my People slightly, saying, Peace, peace, when there is no peace. Of such the Prophet Ezechiel speaketh thus from the Lord. They haue seduced my People, saying, Peace, and there was no peace; and one built up a Wall, and loe, others dawbed it with vntempered mortar. If the pride of great Ones will display it selfe in its colours, and in wearing garments of strange and euen vnnaturall fashions, they encourage them in it, because these things being of an indifferent nature, are left to their free choise, and there is no difference to be made betweene Yellow and Blew, French and English. Yea (if they will so haue it) whether being Men or Women, they disguise themselves in the habite of the contrarie Sexe. If being their Benefactors, they liue vpon vsurie, that they may be more bountifull towards them in their mind, and more able in their purse; they soothe them in this sinne, by telling them that whatsoeuer is spoken of it in the Scriptures, to shew how haynous it is in Gods sight, is to be vnderstood onely of byring vsurie, and of that which is exacted of those who are miserably poore. If they haue a mind to enrich themselves with bribes, they secure them in their course as being a matter full of equitie, that those who doe good vnto others, should againe receiue from them answerable gratuities. If Naboths Vineyard so please them, that by right or wrong they will wring him out of it; they hold them excused, if they desire it on a price; and if oppression and blood follow vpon his denyall, not they, but poore Naboth, is to be blamed, who would bee so wilfull and churlish, as to denie men of their greatnesse and worth, a thing so conuenient and necessary for them. And thus doe they, as the Prophet speaketh, put cushions vnder their elbowes, that they may sinne at their ease, and pollute Gods Name among the People for handfulls of Barley and peeces of Bread, to slay the soules that should not dye, and to saue the soules aline that should not liue, by lying vnto them who will giue them the hearing. Yea, with this false and flattering Doctrine, many ioyne their wicked example, bearing them company, who are vnder their charge, in all their sinfull courses, yea, rather as Captaines and Precedents, they goe before them and leade them the way. The which when it hapneth (O would it did not happen too often) it giueth double strength to mens carnall securitie; there being few that feare to follow their Guides, or to goe as farre as they in the fruition of their sinfull pleasures or profits, who are by their Calling and Profession bound to restrayne themselves and others from all that is euill and sinfull. But contrariwise, tread securely in those Pathes, which they see their Teachers tread before them, supposing that if there were any great danger in walking these

Ier. 23. 17.

Ier. 6. 14.

Ezech. 13. 10.

Ezech. 13. 18, 19.

wicked wayes, they who farre exceed them in learning and knowledge, would not with the hazard of their owne soules so ordinarily trauaile in them.

CHAP. IIII.

Of the diuers kinds of carnall Securitie.

¶ I.
Of naturall securitie, which is in all men.

Having spoken of the causes of carnall Securitie, it now followeth that we shew the kinds thereof. And first it may bee distinguished by the diuers degrees of it. In which respect carnall securitie is either naturall, or affected and voluntarie. Naturall, is that which euery one bringeth into the World with him, and is a fruit or branch of originall corruption, and one kind of hardnesse of heart, whereby forgetting Gods Power and Prouidence, his Iustice and hatred of Sinne, and not obseruing his fearfull Iudgements executed vpon the wicked, nor his Mercies extended towards those that serue him, mens hearts are emptied of the true feare of God, and so without checke and remorse of conscience, or griefe of heart, quietly and securely goe on in their sinfull courses to their eternall destruction. And this is naturally bred and borne in all men alike without exception, although nourished and increased diuersly by those causes of securitie before spoken of, according to that predominancy which they feuerally haue, in one more then in another. And continueth and wholly possesseth all the powers and faculties of Heart and Mind, as it were a spirituall Lethargie, till the Lord awakneth them out of it; as he doth euen the wicked sometimes, by the thundering threatnings of the Law and sense of his heauie Iudgements for their sinnes, striking horror and despaire into their mindes, hearts and consciences, whereby it commeth to passe, that they who slept securely and neuer awaked, can now take no rest at all. And the godly alwayes whom he first rowseth out of this dead sleepe, partly by Legall comminations, and partly by some sharpe Afflictions, so as like the Iaylor suddenly awakned, they crie out to Gods Ministers; Men and Brethren, what shall we doe that we may be saued? and afterwards by the preaching of the Gospell, whereby the true feare of God is wrought in them, which maketh them to watch ouer their wayes that they may not, being ouer-come by tentations, doe any thing displeasing in the sight of God. So that euen naturally, this vaile of securitie is spread ouer the eyes of all men, whereby they see not, or seeing (like men asleepe with their eyes open) consider and regard not, the all-seeing Eye of God looking vpon them, yea, euen into all the secret corners of their hearts and reynes, the Iustice and Power of God, whereby hee is ready and able to punish sinne, nor his Loue, Mercy, and Goodnesse, towards all those that seeke and serue him, vntill by the preaching of the Word, and inward operation of the Spirit, applying vnto them the vertue of Christs death, this vaile is rent

rent in sunder, whereby they come to a sight of Gods sauing attributes; which worke in vs a reuerent and filiall feare of him, which is alwayes accompanied with a holy care and watchfulnesse ouer our selues, that we doe not any thing displeasing in his sight.

The carnall securitie which is affected and voluntarie, is when as men purposely vse all meanes to harden their hearts against Gods feare, and to stop their eares, that they may not heare any thing which may awaken them of their pleasing sleepe of sinne, that so they may without any disturbance commit all manner of wickednesse with delight and greedinesse; whereby they much strengthen and increase their naturall securitie, vntill by custome it becommeth habituell. They adde Arte to Nature, and thinking that they cannot sleepe soundly enough, and without feare of disturbance in their naturall slumber of securitie, they stupifie their senses (as it were with opium) till they are brought into an vnrecoverable Lethargie and sleepe of death. They doe not onely draw ouer their alreadie hard hearts and seared consciences, a callum or thicke skin, which will not be pierced with the pricke of a pin, but (as one saith) euen a treble plated armor, which is high prooffe against the Sword of Gods Spirit, the Word of God; yea, euen the Musket shot of his Iudgements and Punishments. They doe not onely quench all good motions of Gods Spirit restrayning them from sinne, but quite put out those small sparkes of the light of Nature, which remayne in them. They doe not alone stop the voyce and crie of their consciences, with the lowder clamour of their tumultuous lusts and passions; but put to silence all that would admonish them of their wicked courses, with their impudency in sinning. They harden their fore-heads against all reproofes, and flye in their faces who reprehend their wickednesse. They shut their eyes that they may not see Gods Iudgements, and stop their eares that they may not heare of them, either as they are threatned in the ministerie of the Word, or inflicted on impenitent sinners like vnto themselves; yea, they stupifie their senses, that they haue no feeling of them, but can out-face their owne punishments, and euen laugh, when they are lashed with Gods whip. And though all these outward Sconces were batterd and beaten downe, so as sinne dare no longer abide in the countenance, Words and externall Actions, yet they haue an inward Fort, vnto which, being impregnable, it may safely retyre, euen an heart of Rocky and Adamant hardnesse, whereas it may sleepe in great securitie, there being no engine or shot which will batter this Hold.

Secondly, this carnall securitie is to be distinguished according to the diuers subiects in which it is. For it is to be considered, as it is in the vnregenerate before conuersion, who are wholly ignorant and forgetfull of God, destitute of Faith and the feare of God, or as it doth remayne in the faithfull, after they are in part regenerate and truly conuerted. In the vnregenerate it continueth in it full strength, wholly possessing and corrupting the mind and heart, and depriving them

vnterly

¶ 2.
Of carnall securitie which is affected and voluntarie.

Triplex circa præcordia seruati.

*Esa. 6. 9.
Zach. 7. 11, 12.*

¶ 3.
Of carnall securitie which is in the vnregenerate.

Luk. 11. 21.

vttterly of Gods feare, of the fight and sense of their sinnes, and of the Iudgements and Punishments due vnto them, either threatned and imminent, or else already inflicted and imposed. In these it raigeneeth and rulerth without resistance as a King and Soueraigne, vnto whom they yeeld peaceable and quiet obedience, keeping all in peace without any feare or disturbance; and as Satans Vice-Roy subiecteth all the powers of the Mind and Soule vnto his rule and gouernment, so as quietly and without feare they doe his will, according to the saying of our Sauour; When a strong Man armed keepeth his house, all that hee possesseth is in peace. Or if the conscience being awakned and affrighted with the threatnings of the Law and apprehension of Gods Iudgement, doth check their lusts and passions, and disturb this quiet peace; Carnall securitie soone pacifieth these tumults, by stopping the voyce of the Conscience, and casting it into a deepe sleepe, whilst it causeth it to be lulled in the lap of carnall pleasure, and singeth vnto it the sweet and bewitching tunes of worldly delights, with the dittie of earthly profits and preferments. In which they continue, till they come to sleepe that last sleepe of death, and are summoned to appeare before Gods Iudgement Seate, to giue an account of all their former courses; vnlesse in the meane time the Lord hastening his Iudgement, doth strike the conscience with such horrors and feare, and so vexeth and tormenteth it with the guilt of sinne, and apprehension of his wrath, that securitie is not able, by all the former meanes, to bring or keepe it asleepe, or to stop and quiet the lowd cryes thereof. In which case it is forced to giue place, and to yeeld ouer the Regencie of such tormented wretches to his aduersarie and opposite hellish desperation, which is like vnto it in nothing but this, in that it is alike faithfull seruant to their great Gouvernour Satan, holding men firmly, though after a rougher manner, as his Vassalls and Slaues to doe his will, till hauing finished their worke, they receiue the wages of Hell torments, and endlesse destruction.

¶ 4.
Of that carnall securitie which remayneth in the regenerate;
and how it groweth vpon them.
Gal. 5. 17.

In the fourth part of the Christian warfare.

The carnall securitie of the faithfull, is those reliques that remayne of naturall securitie, in the part vnregenerate, and one especiall fruit of the Flesh, which is but in part mortified by the Spirit. For our regeneration and sanctification being vnperfect in this life, the Christian Man is partly Flesh and partly Spirit, both which are accompanied with their seuerall fruits, as the Apostle sheweth, the which continually fight and lust one against the other; and sometime the Flesh and its Corruption, sometime the Spirit and its sauing Graces, preuaileth and giueth the aduerserse part the foile; as elswhere I haue more fully shewed. Thus the part vnregenerate retaineth and nourisheth carnall securitie, forgetfulnesse of God and his all-seeing Wisedome, his omnipotent Power, and seuerer Iustice in punishing sinne, his Mercy and Goodnesse towards those that feare and serue him, and thereby becommeth carelesse and secure, and goeth on in sinne without repentance. And contrariwise, the part regenerate, remembring these holy Attributes, still retaineth and cherisheth the true feare of God, and thereby thereby is made carefull and watchfull to please him in all things, and consequently to auoid sinne as the greatest euill, or hauing beene overtaken with it through frailtie and infirmitie, not to continue in it, but to arise againe out of it by vnfeigned repentance. And these continually make warre one against the other, and sometime the feare of God preuaileth and bringeth securitie in subiection, and then the Christian maketh conscience of all sinne, and with all care and watchfulnesse auoydeth all tentations, causes and occasions, that might allure or draw him vnto wickednesse; then he daily reneweth his repentance, and laboureth diligently in the vse of all good meanes, whereby hee may make his calling and election sure, and as the Apostle speaketh, worketh out his saluation with feare and trembling, and by his owne and others fals, is made more carefull to looke vnto his standing. Sometimes securitie getteth the vpper hand, and giueth Gods feare the foyle, so that in respect of sense and feeling it groweth cold and languishing, and very faintly and remissly exerciseth it selfe in its actions and operations. And then the Christian presuming on his owne present strength, and of his former progresse in the wayes of godlinesse, beginneth to stand at a stay, supposing that he is now rich enough in spirituall grace, and therefore may leaue gathering, and spend vpon the stocke, that hee is out of all danger of declyning and going backe; and that God will keepe him safe in his greatest negligencie, and howsoeuer hee carryeth himselfe, make good vnto him his gracious promises of life and saluation. And then forgetting Gods Iustice and Iudgements, and his Mercy and Goodnesse towards him, hee beginneth securely to glut himselfe with worldly pleasures, and to pursue earthly profits and preferments; he groweth timorous to be teene in any course of Godlines, which may crosse him in their fruition, and willing to strayne his conscience, in vsing all meanes whereby he may obtayne and securely inioy them. Then he sticketh not to quench the good motions of Gods Spirit, inciting him to returne to his former holy courses, and restraining him from sinne wherby he grieueth this holy Ghest, and were he not most gracious, without respect of desert, would soone make him wearie of his lodging. Then he beginneth to neglect the exercises of mortification, which tend to the subduing of the Flesh, and his former care in often renewing his Couenant with God, by renewing the condition thereof, Faith and Repentance. Then he groweth carelesse and negligent in the meanes of Grace and Saluation, as hearing the Word, receiuing the Sacrament, Prayer, communion with the Faithfull, and holy Conferences, whereby they are mutuall helps to stirre vp Gods graces in one another; not caring much whether he vse them or no, and therefore taking slight occasions as lawfull and sufficient excuses of their neglect; or when he doth performe these duties, it is after a cold and formall manner, dully and drowisly, negligently and wearily, without any taste or spirituall feeling of ioy and comfort in the vse of them. And in a word, is little or nothing affected either with Gods Promises or Threatnings, either with his Mercies or with his Iudgements,

2. Pet. 1. 10.
Phil. 2. 12.
1. Cor. 10. 12.

¶ 5.
Of insensible and sensible se-curitie in the faithfull.

2. Sam. 12.

Apoc. 3. 17.

Cant. 5. 2.

Psal. 51. 10.

Psal. 119. 25. 33.

Psa. 63. 17.

ments, either with loue and delight, in that which is good, or with hatred and dislike of that which is euill; and therefore securely lyeth snorting in his sinnes, as though there were no feare of danger, and taketh no care to better his present estate, by rising out of them, by vnfayned repentance.

And this is that carnall securitie which is incident to Gods dearest Children; the which neuerthelesse may bee distinguished, in respect of the diuers degrees of it; for either it is insensible and not perceiued, or else sensible and discerned. The former, like a deepe sleepe, doth stupifie for the time of the continuance of it, all their senses, and abuseth their mind and imaginations with deceiuing dreames and false apprehensions, whereby they conceiue that they are in good estate, highly in Gods fauour, and free from all danger, and therefore securely goe on in their sinfull courses without repentance, and neglect the meanes whereby the feare of God might bee renewed and repayed in them, or else vse them after a cold and formall manner. And this was the case of holy Dauid himselfe, after his fearefull fall into those grievous sinnes of Adulterie and Murther, till he was awakned out of this dead sleepe, by that message, which God by Nathan sent vnto him; and of the Angell of the Church of Laodicea, who in his carnall securitie blessed himselfe with a false opinion, that his estate was in such a degree of excellency and perfection, that nothing was wanting vnto him, whereas in truth he was exceeding miserable, poore, blind and naked, as our Sauour testifieth. The other securitie which is sensible, bringeth the faithfull but into an heauy slumber, so as they may say with the Spouse in the Canticles, I sleepe, but my heart waketh, or like vnto the sleepe (or rather diseale in sleepe) which Physicians call Ephialses, wherein they feele this waight of carnall securitie, lying heauy vpon their hearts, and strue with all their might to shake it off, but are notable, till God assist them by his Spirit, and thoroughly awaken them by his Word. For the faithfull, in this securitie, doe carefullly and conscionably vse the meanes, whereby they may be freed from it, as the diligent hearing of the Word, Meditation, Prayer, and such like; and are much grieued in themselves, that they performe these duties with so much dulnesse and drowlinesse, and that they so little profit by them. And this was the case of Dauid, who being somewhat awakned by Nathan, doth flye vnto God by Prayer, desiring to bee awakned more thoroughly, and to be more and more quickned by Gods Spirit, and to recouer the operations and feelings of it, which were so much abated in him. Create (saith he) in me a cleane heart, O God, and renew a right Spirit within me. Cast me not away from thy Presence, and take not thy holy Spirit from me. Restore vnto me the ioy of thy saluation, and uphold me with thy free Spirit. And againe; My soule cleaueth vnto the dust; quicken thou me according to thy Word. Quicken mee after thy louing kindnesse, so shall I keepe the testimonie of thy mouth. So the Church complayneth vnto God of this securitie and hardnesse of heart. O Lord, why hast thou made us to erre from thy Wayes, and hardned hardned our heart from thy feare. Returne for thy seruants sake, the Tribes of thine Inheritance.

Now the causes of this carnall securitie in the Faithfull, are principally these. First, their abuse of worldly prosperitie and temporall benefits; with which God hath blessed them; when as being in themselves common gifts, which hee bestoweth as often, and in as great plentie, vpon the wicked as the godly, they notwithstanding esteeme them as speciall Testimonies and Pledges of his loue, and so out of this false ground conclude, that hee will watch ouer them with his Providence, and keepe them still in this flourishing estate, safe and sure from all afflictions and troubles: which moueth the Lord, that hee may waken them out of this securitie, in which they were more apt to rest vpon his gifts then vpon the Giuer, or at least vpon the Giuer for the gifts sake, to deprive them of this prosperitie, in which they trust, and to hide his Face from them in respect of those earthly pledges of his loue. As wee see in the example of Dauid. I said (saith he) in my prosperitie I shall neuer be moued, thou Lord, of thy fauour hast made my Mountayne to stand so strong, that is, Thou hast so established my Kingdome, euen as Mount Sion, the seate thereof which cannot be removed: But thou diddest hide thy Face, and I was troubled. In which securitie Dauid was, when he numbred the people, trusting ouer-much in the arme of Flesh, and multitude of his Subiects; but was awakened out of this sleepe by the message of the Prophet, and that grievous plague whereby so many of them were destroyed. Yea, sometime this carnall securitie in them, is caused through their spirituall prosperitie, and the ioyfull feelings of Gods fauour in the pledges of sauing graces; which maketh them to thinke these comforts will alwayes last, and that in the strength of them, they shall hold out in the profession and practise of true godlinesse vnto the end; and so rest more vpon the Springs or Streames of these sanctifying Graces, then vpon God himselfe, who is the Fountayne of them. Which moueth the Lord to stop the course, by spirituall desertions, as it were, at the head of the Riuer, and to giue them ouer to their owne strength without any flow of fresh supply, whereupon these streames in their sense and feeling are soone wasted, with the scorching heate of tentations, so as they returne to their naturall drynesse. And to this securitie, new Conuerts are most subiect, who like fresh-water Souldiers, thinke that they haue wholly conquered all their spirituall Enemies, because they haue gotten the better of them in some light skirmishes; and that they are sure and firme for euer falling, because they haue such feelings of Gods assistance, and the ioy and comfort that doth accompany it; whereas in truth, God tending their child-hood and weaknesse, doth hold them vp in their wayes, because hee would not at their first venturing to goe, haue them discouraged by their falls; and knowing that like vntried Souldiers, they are faint-hearted, and easily discouraged from fighting in the spirituall warfare, he giues them victorie in some small skirmishes, that they may be heartned to indure constantly

¶ 6.
Of the causes of carnall se-curitie in the faithfull. First,
prosperitie,
worldly or spi-
rituall.

Psal. 30. 6.

2. Sam. 24.

Quidam dulcedinem inchoationis putant sublimitatem confirmationis: & sed cum tentatio sequitur derelictos se à Deo putant. Greg. in Moral. lib. 24. cap. 7.

¶ 7.
The second cause is spirituall pride.

ly and courageously in forer conflicts. The which they misse-constructing, and attributing too much vnto their owne strength and valour; the Lord to driue them from this ill-grounded securitie, doth leaue them to themselves, and suffereth them to fall, and to bee overtaken with some danger, vpon which they become oftentimes in the sight and sense of their weaknesse, as cowardly and fearefull, as they were before confident and couragious, and vncomfortably complaine as men forlorne and forsaken of all hope. And this an ancient Father well obserued. Some (saith hee) thinke the sweetnesse of their imitation, the height of their confirmation, and therefore when a temptation followeth, they iudge that they are vtterly forsaken of God. And againe, For the most part euery one, newly conuerted, herein slippeth and fayleth; that whilest hee is entertayned with the sweet sense of some gifts of grace for his initiation or entrance into the course of Christianitie, hee thinketh that hee hath attayned vnto the confirmation of perfection, and esteemeth it the consummation of full measure; not knowing that they are but the allurements of inchoation: whereof it cometh to passe, that whilest he is touched and shaken with the tempest of some temptation, he suspecteth himselfe to bee despised of God, and in the high way to vtter destruction; whereas if hee would not giue too much credit to the comforts of his first entrance; he would in his prosperitie, prepare his mind to indure aduersitie, and would afterwards so much the more firmly resist Vices, comming to incounter him, by how much hee had more wisely fore-seene them.

Another cause of carnall securitie in the faithfull, much like vnto the former, is spirituall Pride, whereby they ouer-weene their owne abilities, and the measure and strength of their gifts and graces receiued. And so leauing their onely sure dependancy vpon Gods power and all-sufficiency, goodnesse, promises and prouidence; they begin to depend vpon their owne strength, and to put confidence in their owne graces and gifts, as though they were sufficient to preserue them in all good, and defend them from all euill. And hereupon they grow secure, presuming that they haue a staffe of strength in their owne hands, which is able to support them from falling into sinne, to beate backe the violence of any temptation, to protect them against all enemies, and so to assist them in all their good indeauours, that they shall be able to hold out without faynting in the wayes of Righteousnesse, which moueth the Lord oftentimes to withdraw his grace and assistance from them, to leade them into temptation, and giue them ouer to their owne strength, the which fayling them, when they most relye vpon it (so as they fearefully fall into grieuous sinnes) they learne by lamentable experience to giue all glorie vnto God, by whose strength alone they stand, and in all humilitie to acknowledge their owne frailtie; to cast away all-selfe-confidence and presumption of their owne strength, and to build their securitie on a surer foundation, euen Gods power, promises, and prouidence, which will neuer fayle.

Austine

Austine speaketh well to this purpose. God (saith he) sometime taketh from thee that whereof thou art proud; that so knowing that it is not thine but his, thou mayest learne not to bee lifted up with pride. An example whereof we haue in the Apostle Peter, who through spirituall pride ouerweening his owne abilities, and resting securely vpon the strength of his owne courage and resolution, and on the great measure of his loue towards his Master, vowed that he would neuer forsake him, but would adhere vnto him in all dangers. Yea, so confident and presumptuous was he, that when our Sauour (who better knew him then he himselfe) fore-told his fearefull fall, he contradicted Truth it selfe, and would not from his Mouth take notice of his frailtie and infirmitie, vntill he had found and felt it by his owne experience.

Deserit aliquando Deus unde superbis, ut sciam non tamen sed eius esse, & discas superbus non esse. De Natur. & Grat. cap. 28 c. 7. c. 743.

Matth. 26. 33.

C H A P. V.

Of the differences betweene the carnall securitie of the Vnregenerate and the Regenerate.

WE haue shewed diuers kinds of carnall securitie, as they are distinguished by their diuers Subjects and Degrees. Now, because those who are possessed with these diuers kinds, are apt to mistake the one for the other, the Regenerate being ready, especially in the time of temptation, to make their state worse, and the Vnregenerate better then it is; It is necessary in the next place, that we set downe the differences, whereby the one may be knowne from the other, for the comfort of the godly, and humiliation of such as are lifted vp in their owne conceits. The which, I confesse, is a thing hard to doe, if we consider the securitie of the Faithfull, as it is in them in the highest degree, and that which is in the Vnregenerate, somewhat abated and weakened with the accusations of conscience, and the common motions of Gods restraining Spirit, stirred vp in them at sometimes by the ministerie of the Word and afflictions; especially if in this case we iudge according to present sense and feeling. For they are for the time both alike destitute of the operations of the spirituall Life of grace, and so both alike dead in outward appearance. Both alike without the vertue and vigour of the sauing Knowledge, Remembrance, and consideration of those sauing Attributes, which worke in our hearts the true feare of God, both taken vp alike with selfe-confidence, and drunken with worldly prosperitie. Both vsually sinning, and abusing Gods Patience and Mercy, vnto presumption and deferring of repentance, and both alike neglecting, yea, loathing the meanes of saluation. Both neglecting to apply by Faith, or misse-applying the Word which they heare preached vnto them; and delighting rather in a flattering Ministerie which will soothe them, then in a faithfull Ministerie which will reprove and checke them in their euill courses. Both abusing as well

¶ I.
That the carnall securitie of the venerate and regenerate, are in many things alike.

Apoc. 3. 1, 2.
17, 18.

¶ 3.
Of the differences between the carnall securitie of the viregenerate, and that which is in the regenerate in the highest degree.

1. Job. 3. 9.

the Mercies as the Iudgements of God, and neither profiting by his benefitts nor corrections. Both alike negligent in the seruice of God, and in obseruing his Commandements, or in formalitie and outward shew only. Finally, both alike senselesse and without all feeling of their miserable estate, and so without any desire or indeauour to come out of it, because they thinke themselves well, and that they haue need of nothing, as wee see in the example of the Angell of the Church of Laodicea, and of Sardis; who had a name that she liued, but was dead, that is, in a deadly swound, as appeareth in the Epistle sent by Christ vnto him.

But yet howsoeuer in many things they agree, notwithstanding in some things they differ. For the securitie of a Christian, though in the highest degree, springeth from the flesh, as it is in part mortified, and so together with it hath receiued a deadly wound by the Spirit of God, of which it shall neuer recouer, although like a Man mortally wounded, it may for a while performe some actions in as great strength, as when it was in perfect health and vigour, and like a Candle giue as great a blaze, when it is ready to goe out, as euer it did before: but the securitie of a Worldling is a fruit of the Flesh in its full vigour, and as it were the child of his strength, and therefore like the Father, vigorous and long liued, and daily increasing and growing in force and might, as it increaseth in age. The securitie of a Christian is the fruit of his worst part, euen of the old Man and part viregenerate, and so like an old mans child, decrepit with age, hauing almost quite spent his naturall heate and moysture, it is weaker in his constitution, and shorter of life, though for a while it may seeme in all things to match a child gotten in maturitie of age and full strength; but the securitie of a Worldling is the fruit of the whole Man, and in his full vigour, without any abatement. That like Esaú, is but a Twin in the wound, resisted by one that is stronger then he, and will preuayle, and howsoeuer it hath the prioritie of Birth and Age, and for a time may seeme stronger, and to carry all before it with force and violence; yet it is matched and resisted by the true feare of God, which (like Isaac) in wrastring with it will preuayle, and in the end supplant it and get the vpper hand. In the Christian, euen in the height of his securitie, there is the roote of Gods feare, though in the winter of tentation it lyeth hid and bringeth forth no fruits; and there is a seed of Gods grace and holy Spirit euer remayning in him, though hidden vnder the clods of sinne and corruption, which being watered with the dew and fruitfull showres of Gods Word and Spirit, will sprout vp and bring forth plentifull fruits: But in the Worldling there is a roote of bitterness, and his heart had neuer the seeds of Gods grace and holy feare sown in it; and therefore nothing is to bee expected to spring out of it, but the Thornes and Thistles of carnall and sinfull actions. The carnall securitie of the Faithfull, doth but take away from them the comfort of their present condition, but not of times past, when as they haue had the sweet feelings of Gods loue, shed abroad in their hearts, and working them to his feare, vpon which which grounds they may bee recovered out of this sleepe with some comfort, when as they know that their state is not desperate. But the securitie of Worldlings deprieth them of all true consolation, past and present, and abuseth them with false comforts, which will end in Horror and Despaire. The securitie of the regenerate is at the worst but a syncope, and casteth them for a time into a swound or trance, leauing no apparance of spirituall life in respect of motion and outward actions; but it will not be long ere they recover, and shew that life was onely hid, but not quite taken away, by the functions and operations of it in holy and Christian duties: But the securitie of the vnregenerate is the swound of death, out of which they neuer recover, till by their last summons they are awakned to come vnto iudgement. The securitie of Beleeuers in the highest degree, is but like the frost, which worketh them for the time to a stony hardnesse; but the Sunne-shine of the Word, heate of Gods Anger, and fire of Afflictions thaweth them, bringeth them againe to their wonted softnesse, and causeth them to resolue and melt in the teares of true Repentance; but the securitie of the wicked maketh them (like Bricke-bats) the more hard the more they are heate by the former meanes, yea, of more then adamantine hardnesse, so as nothing will soften them, and cause them to relent. Finally, the securitie of Gods Children, when it is at the worst, doth onely like ashes hide and coner vnder it the true feare of God, so as it yeeldeth for the time no light or heate; and yet it liueth in them, and will reuiue when Gods Spirit bloweth vpon it, and giueth a fresh supply of grace, as it were, of more fuell. But the securitie of the vngodly, like water doth quite extinguish it, or rather it could neuer bee kindled in them, because there is containd in their hearts a mayne Flood or Sea of carnall corruption.

And thus wee see, that how soeuer the carnall securitie of the wicked and godly, are alike in many things, yet there are diuers mayne differences betweene them, though it be considered in the regenerate in the highest degree, and so insensible that it deprieth them of all sense and spirituall feeling of their dangerous estate and condition. But if we compare that carnall securitie, which is ordinarily in the regenerate, and is more subdued and abated by the Spirit of God, with that which is in the vnregenerate Worldlings, we shall find that the differences betweene them are many, and much more perspicuous and easie to bee discerned: For first, they differ in respect of their causes from which they spring, not so much because they are diuers in their nature, for, for the most part, they are the same, euen the same flesh and naturall corruption, and the same fruits which arise from it, but in respect of their diuers measure and degree. For the securitie of the vnregenerate, is a fruit of flesh in its full strength and vigour; but that of the regenerate, as it is mortified, weakned and subdued to the spirituall part. That proceedeth from palpable ignorance, from vtter forgetfulnesse, and totall neglect of God in his sauing Attributes, which are the onely causes that worke Gods feare in our hearts; and so

§. 3.
Of the differences betweene carnall securitie in the Faithfull and Wicked: and first, in respect of their causes.

reigneth and ruleth in them without opposition and resistance, like a King in his Throne: But this ariseth from these causes as they are abated, opposed, and in part subdued by their contrarie vertues, the Knowledge, Remembrance and Consideration of God and his Attributes, of Wisedome, Iustice, Power, Mercy and Goodnesse. And therefore being much weakned in its naturall strength, like the causes of it; it doth not vsually in Hostile manner assault vs in the open Field; but like a Tyrant deposed from his Regency, or a slye Rebelle that wanteth force, it secretly and cunningly stealeth vpon vs, insinuateth and windeth it selfe into our hearts at vnawares, when wee least suspect it, and fighteth against the feare of God out of ambushments and vpon aduanrages, and sometimes giuerh it the foyle, and for a time maketh it giue place; but being renewed and strengthened by the Spirit of God, it re-encountreth carnall securitie, driueth it from its Holds, and againe bringeth it vnder subiection. And the like might be said of all other causes of securitie before mentioned, were it not ouer long to stand seuerally vpon them; all which in the vnregenerate are in their vigour strength and sole Regency, hauing no opposites to moderate and weaken them, but in the regenerate they are in part mortified by Gods Spirit, subdued, and deposed from their Rule by those Graces which are contrarie to them, and answerably their securitie is either totall, or but in part, stronger or weaker according to the qualitie and nature of the causes from which they spring.

¶ 4.
The second difference in their effects.

Esa. 56. 10.

Exod. 5. 2.

Mar. 6. 19.

Act. 24. 25.

Pro. 6. 10.

Secondly, they differ in their effects, which in the one are more strong and permanent, in the other more weake and momentanic. For the securitie of the vnregenerate, striketh with a deadly blow all the powers of the soule, and bringeth them into a deepe Lethargie, which depriueth them of all sense and feeling of their disease, and consequently, of all desire to be cured of it; yea, it maketh them (like the blind and dumbe Shepheards of whom the Prophet speaketh) to delight in sleeping, vnwilling to be awakned, and angrie with those who vse any meanes to rowse them vp. So that the more they sleepe the more they may, till at last they are brought to eternall death and destruction, or if by the Trumpet of the Word, sounding loud in their eares, they bee somewhat disturbed in their carnall rest, either with Pharaoh they will not at all acknowledge the voyce of the Lord, nor haue any desire of reconciling themselves vnto him by vnfeigned repentance, but vse all meanes to quiet their minds, that they may fall into their deepe sleepe againe, as shunning the hearing of the Word, Musicke, merry Companie, and making themselves drunke with carnall and worldly pleasures and delights: or if they acknowledge Gods voyce, they harden their hearts against it with Herod, and betake themselves to sleepe still in their beloued sinnes; or with the secure Jewes, they inioyne silence to Gods Prophets, that they may sleepe still and not be disturbed in their rest; or with Felix, they desire to be respited till they haue better leisure, not being as yet willing to bee awakned, but saying with the Sluggard in the Prouerbs, Yet a little more

more sleepe, a little more slumber, and a little more folding of the hands together, till at last their Lethargie haue as deeply seized vpon them as euer it had done before. But the securitie of the faithfull bringeth them onely into a spirituall slumber, in which they partly sleepe and partly wake, so as they may say with the Spouse in the Canticles, I sleepe, but my heart waketh. It causeth them not to lye downe quietly on the bed of rest, but onely as they are sitting vp to nod and take a short nap, and one while drowsinesse preuailling, they nod and sink downe the head, and soone after rowze vp themselves againe, and awake out of their slumber. Neither are they so much ouer-taken, but that euery small cause and noyse will recouer them out of their sleepe, and make them start vp; as the sound of Gods Word rebuking their sloth, the admonitions and exhortations of their friends, afflictions, and such like. Their senses are not benumbed and stupified, and so vterly disabled to execute their functions, but onely dulled and blunted. And therefore with the Spouse, they heare the voyce of Christ their Beloued, they acknowledge it, and are able to put a difference betweene it and the voyce of a Stranger, they are affected with it, and haue a desire to be more and more awakned by it, that they may heare it with more reuerence and attention. They are not with carnall worldlings ordinarily so soundly asleepe, as that they know not of it, and so like them dreame that they are waking, and exercised as they ought in all Christian imployments; but haue a sense and feeling of their drowsinesse, know that their imaginations are deluded with vaine dreames, and can complayne of them, and not onely desire to shake off their drowsinesse and to be thoroughly awakned, but also vse the meanes which God hath sanctified for this purpose. All which doe shew that they are more awake then asleepe; for it is the action of wakefulness to feele our drowsinesse, and not the sleeper, but he that waketh is able to tell his dreame: yea, finding themselves vnable to hold vp their heads and shake off their drowsinesse, they craue the helpe of those who are more watchfull, and desire that they will stirre and rowze them vp with their admonitions and exhortations; but especially they complayne of their spirituall sloth vnto the Lord, and desire him to quicken their deadnesse, and to free them from this slumber of securitie, by putting into their hearts his true feare. Whereby it appeareth that the deepe sleepe of seculars can not ordinarily seaze vpon them, because they desire and labour to shake it off; and to this end stirre vp the Graces of God in them; as also because the vapours of carnall corruption are not so grosse in them as in the ynregenerate, but somewhat rarified with the beames of Gods Spirit, and so more easily dispelled with the warmth of Gods sauing Graces, especially the true feare of God. Or if through so much sloth and negligence they bee ouer-taken with it, yet it is not in them a Lethargie which bringeth death, as it is in wicked men; but onely a sleepe, wherein though there be for a time a cessation of vitall functions and actions, yet diuers infallible signes of life remayne, as the pulse, breathing, and

Cant. 5.2.

Cant. 5.2,3,4.

*Quare vitia sua nemo conficturi
quia etiam nunc in illis est. Somnium narrare vigilantis est: de vitiis suis confiteri, sanctis indicium est. Senec. Epist.*

34.

Esa 63.17.

naturall heate. For the Christian in this sleepe of securitie, breatheth out some holy desires of being awakned, and not onely uttereth in his words his profession of godlinesse, and by his speeche discovereth that he is a Citizen of the heauenly Canaan, but also approueth his profession by his practise, so that by feeling the pulse and motion of the vitall spirits in his hand, it is easie to ghesse at the holy Affections of his heart. And euen in this sleepe the Spirit of God is not idle in him, but like the vitall heate is still in working, and neuer ceaseth to consume and dissipate the grosse vapours of carnall corruption, till being vanished, the Christian awakneth as a man out of sleepe, that is, more fresh and vigorous then before, being now willing to redeeme his time lost through negligence and sloth, by being more watchfull, diligent and zealous in the performance of all Christian duties.

¶ 5.
Another difference in their effects.

So that hence also appeareth another difference betweene the carnall securitie of Worldlings, and that which is incident to Gods Children; seeing that vterly disableth them to the performance of all good duties, euen as a man that is dead, or in a deepe sleepe of Lethargie, is vterly vnable to doe the actions of the Liuing; yea, it causeth them to abhorre them as irksome and troublesome: but this onely worketh a temporarie neglect of such duties, as they afterwards performe with so much the more care and diligence, after they are recovered out of this sleepe of securitie. That causeth Worldlings to hate and abhorre the meanes, whereby they might be recovered out of their Lethargie, because they are in loue with their disease, as the consideration of Gods Iustice, Power, Goodnesse, and the rest of those Attributes which serue to implant Gods feare in our hearts, the hearing of the Word, Prayer, and such other helps, of which wee shall speake hereafter: but the other which is in the Christian, being sensible and discerned by him, doth worke in his heart an hatred of it, a desire to be freed from it, and an indeauour in the vse of all good meanes, where by his desire may be satisfied.

¶ 6.
That they differ in respect of the subiect.

Thirdly, they differ in respect of their subiect; for the carnall securitie of the vnregenerate possesseth the whole heart; but this of the faithfull onely that part which remaineth vnregenerate, and at the same time the true feare of God keepeth possession of the regenerate part, continually making warre against carnall securitie, vntill in the end it haue gotten the victorie, subdued it, and drisen it out of its strong hold.

¶ 7.
That they differ in their properties.

Fourthly, they differ in their properties; for the carnall securitie of Worldlings is vn sensible, and in the midst of their deepe sleepe and dangerous Lethargie, they suppose themselves waking in their perfect health, and so compleate in respect of their spirituall estate, that they need nothing, as being highly in Gods fauour, strong in Faith, rich in all Grace, and most assured of eternall saluation. But the securitie of the faithfull is discerned by them, and no sicknesse vexeth them more, then the stone in their hearts; so that they are neuer at ease till they haue voyded it. To which purpose they vse carefully all the

the good medicines prescribed in Gods Word, for the effecting of the Cure; and flee daily to the heavenly Physician, by their frequent and fervent Prayers, for his counsell, direction and assistance in this behalfe. And when they see themselves eased by these meanes in part, they so reioyce in the Cure begun, as that withall they cease not to bewaile the dregs and reliques of their disease, which they see still remainning in them. Secondly, the securitie of the vnregenerate is voluntarie and affected, because through it they quietly live in the pleasures of sinne without any disturbance. In which regard they nourish their sloth, and vse all meanes both to fall into it, and to continue in it without molestation. They compose themselves with a settled purpose to take their carnall ease, they make choise of such places and companie, where they may not bee disturbed with any noyse; either of Gods Word in the publique Ministerie, or of the admonitions and rebukes of priuate Friends. They put out all light, both the outward light of the Word, and the inward light of Nature and Conscience; and if these disquiet them by giuing some glimpses into their darkned minds, whether they will or no, they wilfully shut their eyes, and euen blind-fold themselves by the interposition of worldly vanities, that they may not see them. They lay them downe to rest, and make vnto themselves soft Pillowes and Beds of downe, that they may sleep at ease. Yea, that they may sleepe the more soundly, they cast themselves into the cradle or lap of prosperitie, and desire to be rocked and sung asleepe with the bewitching tunes of carnall pleasures. And so from a sound sleepe they fall into a deepe Lethargie, out of which they haue neither will nor power to be awaked; yea, they shun the companie of such as in deauiour to disturbe them of their carnall rest, and if any seeke by admonitions and exhortations to awaken them out of their sleepe, that they may saue that labour and not disquiet them, they are ready (with the Sluggard) to say vnto them, that they are awake already. But aboue all they hate the very sight of their spiritual Physician, because they abhor nothing more then to bee cured of their disease, which bringeth vnto them such ease and pleasure. Contrariwise, the true Christian affecteth not this sleepe of securitie, but is ouer-taken by it vnwillingly and at vnawares. Hee doth not out of a settled purpose and resolution, compose himselfe vnto it, but through his natural infirmie it creepeth and stealth vpon him, when he thinketh not of it, and desiring to watch with the Disciples, he findeth the Spirit willing, but the Flesh weak. When he feelth sluggishnesse to creepe vpon him, he laboureth to shake it off, either by entertayning religious Discourses and holy Conferences, or by harkning to the shrill Trumper of Gods Word, or by employing himselfe in honest and vertuous Actions. He doth not voluntarily giue himselfe to carnall ease, but that he may be watchfull as the Apostle exhorreth, he watcheth and standeth vp. And when he findeth all these meanes too weak to shake off his drownesse, he desireth the helpe of others to keepe him waking. Especially he prayeth vnto the Lord

Matthew.

Ephes. 5. 14.

¶ 8.
That they differ in time of continuance.

to quicken him with his good Spirit, and to open his eyes that he may not sleepe the sleepe of death.

Finally, the securitie of the vnregenerate and the faithfull differ in time. For they liue alwayes in carnall securitie, and their whole life is a continuall sleepe, vnlesse now and then they be awakned and molested with some outward afflictions, and inward pangs of conscience; and then they doe what they can to compose themselves againe to their carnall rest. Yea, in truth, they are neuer thoroughly and truly awakned, but euen in their waking they are spiritually asleepe; and the pinches and nips of conscience make them to moue but like those that are in a Lethargie, who know not what they doe; nor to what end. They walke sometimes in some seeming good wayes, which in respect of the deed done, might well become the watchfull; but it is like those who talke and walke in their sleepe, for though their eyes be open and their legs and tongues moue, yet their hearts are possessed with drowfie deadnesse, so that they speake they know not what, and walke they know not whither. But the faithfull, after their conuersion, doe continually keepe the Christian watch; inwardly waking in their hearts, when they seeme to sleepe in some outward actions: or if they be indeed ouer-taken with carnall drowsinesse, by reason of some reliques of carnall corruption remayning in them, yet it is rather a nod or nap, then a deepe sleepe; or if also they fall into this through the violence and strength of their naturall sluggishnesse, yet they doe not liue and die in it like secure Worldlings, but by the outward sound of the Word, and the inward voyce and power of the Spirit they are awakned and rowsed vp, and renewing their repentance, they doe afresh betake themselves to the practise of all Christian and holy duties.

CHAP. VI.

Of the signes of carnall securitie, arising from the causes of it.

¶ 1.
That the causes of carnall securitie doe argue and shew the effect.

And thus we haue shewed the many differences, which may be obserued betweene that carnall securitie which is in the vnregenerate, and that which after regeneration remayneth in the faithfull: And now according to our order propounded, we are to set downe some signes of this Vice, according to which if we examine our selues, we may discern whether it reigneth and ruleth in vs or no. To the end, that if after due triall and examination of our estate, we find that it doth, we may not content our selues with this fearefull condition, and so continue in it, but may labour earnestly to come out of it, and to this purpose carefully vse the meanes of which I shall speake afterwards. The first sort of signes are, when we find the causes of this securitie in vs, of which I haue before spoken. For as Effects argue the Cause, so the Cause the Effects; especially in Vices of this nature, which being diuersly considered, are mutuall Causes and Effects one of another. Euen as the fire causeth the wood to burne; and the wood burning encreaseth and preserveth the heat of the fire. For so these Causes produce securitie; which is no sooner bred, but it presently giueth life and vigour to that which bred it. Euen as wee see in some Herbs and Flowers, the Roote giueth life to the Leaues and Branches which spring from it; and they being growne, the Roote againe liueth in them, and dyeth when they are plucked from it. As for example, contempt of Gods Word, causeth Securitie, and Securitie being entred into the heart, causeth the Word to be the more contemned.

The first signe then of carnall securitie, is when men are grossly ignorant, either through blindness of nature, or affectation. So that we may vndoubtedly conclude, that if Ignorance be seated in the head, Securitie holdeth his residence in the heart. For were they not secure they could not content themselves to liue in this damnable estate, quite destitute of all sauing Grace, or sound assurance and hope of eternall saluation, but would vse all meanes to come out of it, and to attayne vnto the sauing knowledge of God and his will. Again, of contraries there is the same reason. But the true feare of God is caused by sauing Knowledge, and this Knowledge is an infallible signe of Gods feare. Yea, these are mutuall causes one of another; for Knowledge is the cause why we feare God, and the feare of God is (as the wise Man saith) the beginning of Knowledge. Whereof it is, that the Law of God is called the feare of God, because this feare is wrought in vs by the knowledge of it. So Moses is commanded, to gather the people together, that they may heare and learne the feare of the Lord their God. As therefore the light of sauing Knowledge discovereth the habitation of Gods true feare, so the fogs of Ignorance, which blind the mind, plainly shew to them who haue spirituall discerning, that carnall securitie lodgeth in that heart. Neither is there any meanes to be freed from that securitie, which is naturally borne and bred with vs, till we know and acknowledge our manifold sinnes, whereby we haue grievously transgressed Gods Law, and made our selues subiect to the curse thereof, as also the Iustice, Power and Truth of God, whereby he is both able, willing and resolute, to punish them who continue in their sinnes without repentance.

The second signe of carnall securitie, is forgetfulness of God and his Attributes; when as we seldome or neuer remember, or thinke of his Omnipresence, and all-seeing Wisdome beholding vs at all times, and in all our actions; his Iustice and hatred of sinne, and those that liue in it; his Mercy, Goodnesse and loue of Holinesse and Righteousnesse, extended to those that feare and serue him: or finally, of the last Indgement, when as we must giue a strict account of all which we haue done in the flesh, before a iust and vnpartiall Iudge which will not let Vertue goe vnrewarded, nor Sinne unpunished. For as we

p. 2.

The first signe of carnall securitie, is ignorance of God and his Attributes.

Psa. 1. 7.

Psa. III. 10.

Psa. 19. 9.

Deut. 31. 12. & 4. 10.

p. 3.

The second signe, is when we are forgetfull of God and his Attributes.

would thinke that Malefactor most secure and retchlesse, who being liable to the Law, guiltie of haynous crimes, and bound ouer to giue an account of all his offences the next Assizes before an vpright Iudge, should spend his time in drinking and reuelling, pleasure and delight, and neuer thinke of the day of his Arraignment, nor how he may so answer for himselfe, that he may escape the sentence of death, or procure his Pardon: so much more is he to be thought not onely asleepe, but euen starke dead in his securitie, who neuer calleth to mind either his owne sinnes, or Gods Iustice and righteous Iudgements; or those eternall Punishments vnto which he is liable, and shall neuer escape if in this life he hath not procured his Pardon by Faith in Christ, and bringing forth the fruits of it in vnfeigned repentance.

¶ 4.
The third signe
Pride and self-Confidence.

The third signe, is Pride and self-Confidence; For as the true feare of God and Humilitie, are alwayes ioyned together, and are mutuall causes one of another, so that the more humble we are the more we feare God, and the more that we feare him the more we humble our selues in his sight, because they both proceed from the same Roote and are streames of the same Fountayne; namely, the sauing Knowledge of Gods Wisedome, Power, Iustice, Goodnesse, Truth, and our owne vilenesse and vnworthinesse: So Securitie and Pride accompanie one another, neither could we euer be secure, if Pride did not possesse our hearts, making vs to ouer-weene our gifts, and to thinke our estate better then it is. Neither could we euer be lifted vp with pride, if Securitie did not shut out eyes, and stupifie our senses, so as we cannot see or discerne, how little cause we haue of being exalted, and how great and manifold of deiection and humiliation. So confidence in our selues, as in our owne wisdome, strength, merits and worthinesse, is a notable signe of carnall securitie, euen as diffidence in our selues, and affiance in God, is a sure signe of his feare; and therefore they are ioyned by the Psalmist, Ye that feare the Lord, trust in the Lord. For who would not thinke him most deeply secure, who being assaulted by a mightie Enemy armed at all points, should trust in a Reede and paper Buckler, presuming that they are sufficient not onely for defence, but also obtrayning victorie; especially, if at the same time he should refuse Armor of prooffe, and approued weapons being offered vnto him. But such and farre greater is their securitie, who being to fight against, not onely worldly Enemies, but spirituall, euen the wrath of God, the curse of the Law, and the tentations of the Deuill; trust in the bruised Reede of their wisdome and strength, and in the paper Buckler of their owne works and worthinesse; refusing in the meane time, the sure defence of Gods wisdome, power and gracious assistance, and the all-sufficient Shield of his free Grace and Mercy, and Merits and Obedience of Iesus Christ.

Psal. 115. 11.

¶ 5.
The fourth
signe, abuse of prosperitie.
Psal. 10. 6.

The fourth signe is, when being in worldly prosperitie, we abuse it to pride and carnall presumption, saying with the Wicked, Wee shall neuer be moued, nor euer see aduersitie. For what greater securitie then to presume of standing in such slippery places, in which we haue scene

so

so many fall before vs? to thinke that we can keepe the Sea in one settled course, whose nature is to ebbe and flow: to keepe the Moone constant and alwayes at the full, whose nature is to change, encrease, and wane? or to thinke that we shall haue for a long time firme fruition of these earthly vanities; when as both they and we are so mutable and momentanie, as that euery day we are in danger to be taken from them, or they from vs? what greater securitie then to be proud of a flitting shadow, and to presume of our safetie, which is no better backed then with the strength of a bubble? To thinke that we can constantly hold Gods gifts which in their owne nature, are the wages of those that feare and serue him, when as by multiplying our sinnes, and especially our pride and presumption, we daily prouoke his wrath and moue him in his iust displeasure to take them from vs? Finally, what greater signe of extreme securitie, then to be proud of our Masters wealth committed to our keeping, as if it were our owne? and because we are more indebted, and haue a greater account to make then other men; as though we should neuer be called to a reckoning?

The fift signe, is custumable sinning without renuing of repentance; especially if these sinnes be committed, not through frailtie and infirmitie, but against knowledge and conscience. For howsoeuer, he that feareth God may fall into sinne; yet the secure person alone committeth commonly knowne sinnes, which either wound or feare the Conscience. Though he may fall often, as the wise Man speaketh (for in many things we sinne all;) Yet he maketh not a custome of it, neither is it his way, but his slips and errors; but it is the secure man onely that maketh sinne his vsuall trade, that walketh in the counsaile of the ungodly, as his way, that standeth in the way of sinners, as his place of abode, that sitteth in the seate of the scornfull, as in the place of his rest and chiefe repose. Finally, though the faithfull through his owne wickednesse, and strength of Satans tentations, may grievously fall into haynous sinnes; yet it is not his, but a propertie of a secure Worldling, to continue in such sinnes without repentance. It is a great signe of carnall securitie, to commit a knowne sinne, for the base hire of earthly vanities, seeing (if God take him with the manner and lay it to his charge) it is the bane of his Soule, the losse of Heauen, and purchase of euerlasting torments in Hell fire. And who not blinded with securitie, could run these hazards for things of such small value? But how much more, if hauing often hardly eleaped these dangers, we make a common practise of thrusting our selues into them by our ordinary course of sinne; and by carelesse living in these sinnes without repentance? For who, not drowned in securitie, could imagine himselfe to be in any safety, that hath the halter about his necke, and the knife at his throat, and is euery minute in danger of execution? yea, who can cast himselfe vpon the Pikes, and take deepe draughts of this deadly poyson of sinne, and yet presume of health and safetie?

The sixth signe of securitie, is when a Man taketh encouragement by Gods

6.
The fift signe is custumable sinning.

Ecclesi. 7. 20.
Iam. 3. 2.
Psal. 19. 1.

p. 7.

The first signe, abuse of Gods Patience to impenitency.
Rom. 2. 4.

Rom. 2. 5. 6.Apoc. 18. 7.

p. 8.

The seventh signe, presumption on Gods
mercy.

Psal. 130. 4.Hos. 3. 5.

p. 9.

The eight signe, is the contempt of the meanes of saluation.

Esa. 66. 2.
Phil. 2. 12.

Gods patience and long suffering, and his owne impunitie for his former offences, of multiplying his transgressions, and of going on in sin without repentance. For the riches of Gods goodnesse, and patient forbearance, should (as the Apostle saith) leade vs to repentance, filling our hearts with sorrow, and our faces with shame, because we haue so long and so often offended a God so gracious and mercifull. And besides, it is a notable incouragement to make vs hasten our repentance, seeing vpon it we are sure of pardon. For we shall surely find him gracious in our returning, whom we haue found so gracious in our backsliding; he will vndoubtedly shew mercy, and pardon our sinnes vpon our repentance, who hath so long time patiently wayted, that he might take occasion vpon our true conuersion, to haue mercy vpon vs. But if we abuse and despise so great a mercy and vnspeakable goodnesse, and take occasion of Gods patience and loue, the more to provoke him; and to goe on more carelesly in our sinfull courses, what doth this argue but an hard and secure heart, which cannot repent, but treasureth vp vnto it selfe wrath against the day of wrath, and reuelation of the righteous Iudgement of God, who though now he be patient, yet shall at that day, render vnto euery man according to his deeds; rowling him vp with greatest torment and smart, who hath lived in his sinnes with greatest securitie; and inflicting vpon him the sorest punishment, who hath most contemptuously abused his greatest patience.

The seventh signe, is presumption on Gods Mercy, whereby the impenitent sinner perswadeth himselfe, that signe he neuer so much, yet God is so gracious that he will forgiue him, and so taketh occasion hereby to giue liberty vnto his carnall lusts, that they may glut themselves with their sinfull delights, and imbrace all wicked objects without feare of danger. Now, this argueth an heart destitute of all grace, and desperately hardned with carnall securitie. For though Gods mercy be great and infinite, yet he hath none for them who thus grossly abuse it, but for those alone who take occasion thereby to reuerence his goodnesse, and to shun with greater care his displeasure, according to that of the Psalmist: There is mercy with thee, that thou mayest be feared; and they onely are his true Israel and Vessels of Grace, in whose saluation he will glorifie and set forth the prayse of his rich Mercies; who returne and seeke the Lord their God, and David their King, that is, the sonne of David, and his holy anoynted Iesus Christ, and feare the Lord and his goodnesse, as the Prophet speaketh.

The eight signe, is the contempt and vtter neglect of the meanes of Grace and Saluation, as the Hearing, Reading, and meditating in the Word, Prayer, the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, communion with the Faithfull and the rest, or the cold and carelesse, formall and negligent vsing of them, without any desire or indeauour to profit by them. For they whose hearts are seasoned with any true feare of God at all, doe feare and seeke his Face, and fauour in his holy Ordinances; they tremble at his Word, as the Prophet speaketh, they worke out their saluation, saluation, in the vse of all good meanes, sanctified for this purpose, with feare and trembling, as the Apostle teacheth vs; their hearts long after the Waters of Life, like the thirstie Lands; and as the chased Hart bray after the Riners of Water: and if they bee restrayned from coming into Gods holy Assemblies, passionately crie out with David, O how amiable are thy Tabernacles; O Lord of Hosts! my Soule longeth, yea, euen fainteth for the Courts of the Lord! my heart and my flesh cryeth out for the living God! And when they heare the Law, their hearts melt, as did the heart of good Iosiah, they are astonyed in the sight of sense of their sinnes, and heare the Word with trembling, like Ezrah and his Companions. They receiue Gods faithfull Ministers with all respect and reuerence, though neuer so meane in their owne persons, yet because they are Gods Ambassadors and doe his message; according to that of the Prophet: Who is among you that feareth the Lord, that obeyeth the voyce of his Seruant? herein like vnto dutifull subiects, who reuerencing their King, receiue a message from him by his meane Officer with awfull feare. On the other side, it is an euident signe of a heart possessed with carnall securitie, and destitute of all feare of God, when wee contemne, neglect, or carelessly and coldly vse these meanes of our saluation; vainly presuming that we can come with ease to our iournyes end, and neuer goe in the way, nor vse the meanes which may bring vs vnto it; and that we can attayne vnto life and saluation, and despise the Word of life and saluation, which is appointed of God as the onely ordinarie meanes of attayning vnto them. When our eares are heavy, that we cannot heare; and our eyes shut, that we cannot see: It is a signe, that we haue also a fat heart which cannot understand, that wee might bee conuersted and healed; seeing God by the Prophet ioyneth these together. When with the captiue Iewes wee refuse to harken, and pull away the shoulder, and stop our eares that wee may not heare; it is apparant, that we haue also with them, made our hearts as an Adamant stone. When we contemne and euen rebell against Gods Word and the Prophets that bring it, and say with the Iewes vnto the Seers, see not; and to the Prophets, prophesie not vnto vs right things, speake vnto vs smoothe things, prophesie deceits; If with the men of Anathoth, Wee seeke the Prophets lines, because we thinke them over-sharpe in reproouing our sinnes, and say, Prophesie not in the Name of the Lord, that thou die not by our hand. Yea, though we goe not so farre, but onely neglect the Word, saying to Gods Ministers, as Felix to Paul: Goe thy way for this time, when I haue a conuenient season I will send for thee, and take euery slight occasion to absent our selues, when the Word is preached; or when we haue heard, say with our mouthes with the wicked Iewes, or in our actions (which is all one) with many carnall Protestants. As for the Word that thou hast spoken vnto vs in the Name of the Lord, wee will not harken vnto thee, but we will certainly doe whatsoeuer goeth out of our owne mouth. If we esteeme Gods Ministers the worfe, because of their Calling, and giue them more neglectfull intertaynement, because they doe Gods message. If we heare

E

their

Psal. 42. 1.

Psal. 84. 1, 2.

Ezra. 9. 4.

1. Thes. 5. 13.

Esa. 50. 10.

Aek. 13. 26.

Phil. 3. 16.

Esa. 6. 9.

Zach. 7. 11, 12.

Esa. 30. 30.

1er. 45. 21.

Aek. 24. 25.

1er. 44. 16, 17.

their Ambassage coldly and carelesly, drowily and wearily; yea, proudly and scornefully, like the Courtiers and Gallants of these times, who will out-face Gods Ministers when they labour to discountenance their sinnes, and heare their Pride, Vanitie, Whoredome, Briberie, Oppression, and other such sinnes, with geeres and smiles, euen then laughing it out, when they are lashed with the whip of seuerer reproofe, and haue deepe galhes made in their Consciencs by the Sword of the Spirit; it is a manifest signe, that wee are deeply plunged into this Lethargie of carnall securitie, that our hearts are come to Adamantine hardnesse, our senses stupified, and our consciences feared and euen gangrened, so that our diseases are almost desperate and euen past cure, vnlesse the Lord the all-sufficient Physician take them in hand, to whose power and skill nothing is impossible.

∅. 10.
The ninth signe, hearing the Word without Faith.

Math. 11. 21.

2. Chron. 20. 20.

Luk. 10. 16.

Heb. 11. 7.

Exod. 9. 20.

The ninth signe of carnall securitie, is when we heare the Word without Faith; neither giuing credit vnto the Promises of the Gospel, whereby wee are encouraged to serue God, nor to the Threatnings of the Law, whereby wee are discouraged in the wayes of sinne. An example whereof wee haue in the people of the Iewes, who by Christs melodious musicke, preaching vnto them Gods mercies to the Penitent, were not allured to obedience: nor by Iohn the Baptists mournfull threatnings of the Law, were moued to shed the teares of heartie repentance. For to heare the Word without Faith, is (as it were), to receiue meate into our hands, wanting a mouth to feede vpon it. And as it is a signe of the true feare of God when wee belecue his Word, not onely that which is spoken by his owne mouth, but that also which from him is deliuered vnto vs by his Ministers, which is all one in substance, like the Water which is the same in the Fountayne, with that which is conueighed vnto vs by the Conduit pipes, as Iehosaphat implyeth in that speech to the People: Belecue in the Lord your God, so shall you bee established: belecue his Prophets, so shall you prosper; and our Sauour plainly sheweth, saying, Hee that heareth you heareth mee, and hee that despiseth you despiseth mee, and hee that despiseth mee despiseth him that sent me; because as hee was the Angell or Messenger of the Couenant sent by God, so his Ministers are his Messengers sent by him: So is it a signe of the want of this feare and of carnall securitie, when we doe not heare with Faith the Word of the Lord spoken vnto vs by his Ambassadors. And as it was an euidence of Noahs Faith, when hee tooke warning by Gods Word, before the Flood came, to build the Arke, as the Apostle sheweth; and that those Egyptians feared God, who hearing the threatnings of grieuous hayle by the mouth of Moses, were warned by it, and made their seruants and cattell flee into the houses: so is it a signe of the greatest securitie, when as hearing Gods Word, we giue no credit vnto it, but carelesly goe on in our sinfull courses without repentance, as though wee had neuer heard of either Promise or Threatning.

The

The tenth signe is, when hearing the Word, wee doe not apply it vnto our selues, to make vse of it for our owne good; but that it may lose its effect and haue no operation in vs, put it off and apply it vnto others. O, this was a good lesson; would such an one had beene here that he might haue heard it. That was an effectuell reproofe for such a sinne; would such an one had beene present who is guiltie of it. Wherein these secure Worldlings are onely charitable, wishing better to their Neighbours then vnto themselves; and sparing food from their famished Soules, that others wants may be supplied; if at least that may be called charitie, which beginneth not at home; or he may be said to loue his Neighbour, who neuer truly loued himselfe. Now what doth this argue but deepe securitie, when as men haue no sense of their ownewofull estate, nor any desire to come out of it? What doth it shew; but that their hearts are frozen in the dregs of sinne, when like a stone wall they beate backe all reproofes? What doth it proue, when being full of wounds and festred sores, from the head to the foot, they pull off and cast away the salues which are applyed by the skilfull Chyrurgeon for their cure, thinking that they haue no need of them; but that they are rotten in their corruption, and their sores gangrened, which maketh them secure and carelesse; because they haue no sense of smart?

¶ 11.
The tenth signe, not applying of the Word.

The eleuenth signe is, when as we misse-apply the Promises of the Gospell vnto vs, which doe not at all belong vnto vs, because we doe not performe the condition of Faith and Repentance. For as the eager longing of the sicke patient, after vnholosome meates and drinks, doth shew vnto the skilfull Physician what humour aboundeth, because it is the nature of euery one of them, to affect that food whereby it is chiefly nourished: so the Worldlings delight in feeding vpon the Promises of the Gospell, doth argue his securitie, seeing this spirituall Manna receiued into a carnall stomacke, doth nourish and much increase this disease, not in it owne nature, but through the malignant propertie of the stomacke that receiue it, and the grosse abuse of these foolish Patients, who will feed vpon these Cordials of comfort, before their grosse humours are purged by Faith and Repentance, and so are not helped at all of their diseases; but haue the heat of their Feauer much increased.

¶ 12.
The eleuenth
signe, misse-applying of the Promises.

The twelfth signe is, when as men delight in a pleasing and flattering Ministerie, who will soothe them vp in their sinfull courses, and let them sleepe securely in their wickednesse without any disturbance. So the secure and hard-hearted Iewes, being resolu'd to walke on still in their euill wayes, would either haue the Prophets saue their labour and not prophesie at all; or if they would needs take the paynes, they condition with them to speake vnto them, not right but smooth things, and to prophesie deceits. So the Prophet Michah, out of the experience of his time, saith: If a man walking in the Spirit and falshood, doe lye; or walking with the wind, that is, bee so vaine and ambitious of mens prayses, that he will be carried any way with the breath of their ¶ 13.

The twelfth signe, is to delight in a flattering Ministe-rie.

Esai. 30. 6.

Mic. 2. 11.

1. King. 22.

mouthes, to speake falshood and vnt ruth, saying; I will prophesie vnto thee of wine and of strong drinke, bee shall euen bee the Prophet of this people. And secure and hard-hearted Ahab could not indure the sharpe, though holosome, reproofes of Elias; nor to bee crossed in his courses by Micahias; but is well pleased with the lyes of the foure hundred false prophets, because they spake according to his appetite, and fitted their words and matter according to his humour. The reason is, because being fully resolved to continue impenitently in their sinfull courses, and euen to hazard their soules to extremest perils, rather then to leaue delighting of themselues with the pleasures of sinne, they are willing to be free from all outward checkes of the Word, and inward checkes of Conscience, and to preferue as much, as may be, their minds in peace and securitie, that they may take their fill of carnall delights, when as they are not embittered with any disturbance. Wherein they are like vnto foolish Patients, who preferring their ease before their health, will not haue their festred sores searched to the bottome by the skilfull Chyrurgeon, because they will not indure the payne of the cure, but rather entrust themselues into the hands of some Mountebanke and Impostuor, who will take vpon him to cure them with a healing plaister. Or like those who are sicke of the Lethargie, who being insensible of their estate, had rather continue in it without disturbance to their destruction; then to be awakned out of it by any vnpleasing meanes, though they are fit and necessary for their recovery.

C H A P. VII.

Of eight other signes of carnall securitie, arising from the effects of it, and other Arguments.

¶ I.
The first signe,
not to profit by afflictions.
First, on others.

And these are the signes of carnall securitie, arising from the causes of it. Other signes there are which arise from the effects, and some other Arguments. As first, it is a signe of a secure and hard heart, when as wee doe not profit in Gods feare and obedience by afflictions, and Gods iudgments and punishments inflicted, either vpon other men or our selues. Vpon others; for euery wise Man is made more wary and watchfull by other mens harmes. If wee see another man fall that goeth before vs; when we come to the same place, we doe more carefully looke to our footing. If our Neighbours house be on fire, we make it our owne case, and labour all we can to auoyd the like mischief. When Malefactors are seuerely punished, those that be guiltie of the same crimes, if they haue any grace in them, doe take warning; and are moued thereby to desist from those wicked courses, which bring vnto the Offenders such shame of smart. On the other side, we account him a most foolish, retchlesse and secure person, who taketh no warning by other mens euills. We thinke him a carelesse child, who seeing seeing his brother disinherited for his vaine, loose and riotous courses, doth tread in the same steps, and yet promise vnto himselfe to succeed his Father in all his possessions. And we esteeme him a desperate Malefactor, who seeing his Fellow executed for felony, doth at the same time cut purses. But yet much more secure and desperate is he to be accounted, who goeth on in his sinnes against God, when he seeth his fearfull Iudgements executed vpon others for the like wickednes. For whereas one Malefactor may escape the hands of the Iudge, when another is taken, or being apprehended, may make better friends, and find more fauour then another, that is weaker in friends and meanes; God is of such power, and his hand guided by his all-seeing eye stretcheth out so farre, that no man either by secret acting of his sinne, or speedy and farre flying can escape his Iudgement seate; and he is such an vnpartiall Iudge, that he executeth righteous Iudgement vpon all men without respect of persons. Now this securitie is much aggravated, when wee will take no warning by those Iudgements which wee see executed, not onely on those that are farre off, but such as are neere vnto vs; as vpon those that haue beene Partners and Companions with vs in that wickednesse which wee see punished, in our Neighbours or neere Friends, on those who are of the same Family or Kindred, and most especially when they are inflicted vpon our owne Children or Parents. In which respect Daniel aggravateth the carnall securitie of Belshazzar, who hauing scene Gods Iudgements in fearfull manner executed vpon his Grand-father Nebuchadnezer, for oppressing Gods people, spoiling the Temple, and sacrilegious taking and retayning the holy Vessells; tooke no warning by it, but liued in the same sinnes, adding this further vnto them, that he abused those holy Vessells in his prophane and drunken feasts. And thou his sonne, O Belshazzar (saith he) hast not humbled thine heart, though thou knowest all this; But hast lifted up thy selfe against the Lord of Heauen; and they haue brought the Vessells of his House before thee, and Thou and thy Lords, thy Wines and thy Concubines, haue drunke wine in them, &c.

Esa. 28. 15.

Dan. 5. 2. 11.

But much more doth it argue an heart full of carnall securitie, when as we make no good vse for our repentance and humiliation; of those afflictions which are inflicted vpon our owne persons. For, sedm piscator sapit, the burnt child dreads the fire; Et sero sapiunt phryges; euen those that are most dull of conceit, wax wiser by many warnings. And it is a signe, that we are more senselesse through this securitie, then the Horse or Asse, if we are nothing moued with the Rod and Spur of Gods chastizements and punishments. Euen many of the Iewes, though very negligent and secure in their prosperitie, haue this Testimonie giuen vnto them by the Prophet, that they were awaked out of their dead slumber by afflictions, and sought vnto God in the day of their aduersitie. O Lord (saith he) in trouble they haue visited thee, they haue powred forth a prayer when thy chastning was vpon them. Though there were others of them more senselesse in their 2.

Secondly, such as are afflicted on our selves multitudine peccatorum.
Quae nocent docent.

Esa. 28. 16.

Ier. 2. 30.

Esa. 9. 13.

Esa. 1. 35.

securitie, of whose stupiditie the Lord complayneth! In vaine haue I smitten your Children, they haue receiued no correction. And the Prophet: Thou hast stricken them, but they haue not grieved; thou hast consumed them, but they haue refused to receiue correction, they haue made their faces harder then a Rocke, they haue refused to returne. And againe, The people turneth not vnto him that smiteth them; neither doe they seeke the Lord of Hosts. But who were these? euen such as were more brutish then the Oxe and Asse, as he saith in the beginning of his prophesie, whom the Lord giueth ouer as a desperate cure, because they grew worse by his corrections. And yet many carnall Protestants; who are so deeply asleepe in this securitie, that they doe not know that they are in this Lethargie, being nothing touched with Gods Iudgements; doe blesse themselues in this state, because they can couer all ouer with a conceit of patience, saying, Gods will be done, without thinking any more of it to lay it to their hearts. But these men will haue their victorie before any conflict; they will at the first step leape to the top of perfection in patience, and not ascend vnto it by any degrees. They thinke that they can in all things submit themselues vnto Gods will, and yet neuer care in any thing to doe his will. They would seeme strong in this grace alone, being weake or nothing in any other, which is impossible; seeing they are linked one with another, and either are begun or not begun, thriue or decreafe, liue or die altogether. And therefore this is not patience wherewith they delude themselues. For wee cannot possesse our soules in patience, till wee possesse them in peace, peace with God and peace of Conscience. Neither can we haue this peace after our combat with afflictions, till wee haue renewed our Couenant with God, whom wee haue by our sinnes displeased, and moued to correct vs, by renewing the condition on our part, Faith and Repentance: without which our patience is nothing but stupiditie and blockishnesse, not in obedience to God, but out of our senselesnes of his stripes; nor springing from the loue of God, which maketh vs to yeeld in all things vnto him; but out of selfe loue which causeth vs to put off all griefe as much as may bee, and to this end to cast our selues into this Lethargie, that wee may with more ease sleepe out our payne. Finally, it is no fruit of Faith and affiance in God, but of our carnall securitie and hardnesse of heart, which make vs that we cannot be affected either with Gods Mercies or Iudgements. But much more doth it argue, that mens hearts are deeply and desperately besotted with this Vice, when they are not onely Stoicall and blockish in apprehending Gods Iudgements, but also vse all meanes to stupifie their senses, that they may not feele their smart, and to intoxicate their minds that they may not consider of them, making themselues drunke with pleasures, that they may haue no sense of payne, and casting themselues into this dead sleepe of securitie, that no griefe of sorrow may pierce their hearts. And when God by his chastizements calleth them with the Israelites to weeping and mourning; to baldnesse and to girding with Sack-cloth; they spend their time in ioy and gladnesse, nesse, feasting and reuelling, musicke and merry companie, eating and drinking, because to morrow they shall dye.

The second signe of carnall securitie is, when as we haue no desire and indeauour to serue God and keepe his Commandements, either in doing the good which he requireth, or in departing from the euill which he hath forbidden. For the true feare of God doth alwayes stir vs vp to obedience, whereof it is that they are vsually ioyned together and often taken the one for the other: Thou shalt feare the Lord thy God, and serue him. And now Israel, what doth the Lord thy God require of thee, but to feare the Lord thy God, to walke in all his Wayes, and to laue him, and to serue the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soule; to keepe the Commandements of the Lord and his Statutes. So the wise Man saith, that the feare of the Lord is to depart from euill. Hence it is, that the Law is called, the feare of the Lord; and all other vertues and obedience are comprehended vnder it alone. The feare of the Lord is the head or beginning of wisdom. And, blessed is euery one that feareth the Lord, that walketh in his Wayes. And contrariwise, the want of all grace, and neglect of dutie and obedience, is comprised vnder the want of Gods feare. So the Apostle hauing set downe a large Caralogue of haynous sinnes, comprehendeth all in this one, as the cause of all the rest. There is no feare of God before their eyes. For securitie bringeth men to an utter contempt of Gods Law, and neglect of obedience, preparing and making them fit for all wickednesse. And therefore when wee see disobedience, impietie and neglect of all good duties in the life and outward actions; we may take it as an vndoubted signe, that Securitie hath thrust out all feare of God from lodging in the heart and affections, according to that of the Psalmist: The transgression of the Wicked saith within my heart; that there is no feare of God before his eyes.

But though this signe, where it is to bee seene plainly, sheweth the grossest securitie, yet there are other sorts of it more subtil and refined, which cannot be discerned by it, seeing there are many men carnally secure, who seeme to make conscience of many sinnes, and of performing many duties. And if we looke vpon them in some fits of their deuotion, especially in the time of affliction, wee would thinke that they had in them a great measure of Gods feare. And therefore in the next place, for discouering of them, we are further to know, that it is a signe of carnall securitie, when as we yeeld obedience but by fits, and are vnconstant in our good desires, indeauours and actions, no longer fearing and seruing God; then whilest his Iudgements are imminent or inflicted vpon vs. For as it is the propertie of the feare of God to be constant it selfe, and to make vs constant in our obedience; according to that in the Prouerbs: Blessed is the man that feareth alwayes. So is it a signe, that our hearts are destitute of Gods feare, and possessed by carnall securitie, when wee are fickle and vnconstant, seruing God, shunning sinne, and doing that which is good onely, when the good moode is vpon vs, or when wee are driuen thereunto either by some

§. 3.

The second signe, is to haue no desire to keepe Gods Commandements.

Gen. 22. 14.
Deut. 5. 13.
Deut. 10. 12.
Ex. 8. 6.
Pro. 9. 13 & 16.
6.

Psal. 19. 9.
Eccl. 12. 13.
Psal. 111. 10.
Pro. 1. 7. & 9. 10.
Psal. 128. 1.

Rom. 3. 18.

Job 15. 4.

Psal. 36. 1.

§. 4.

Secondly, when we yeeld obedience but by fits.

Pro. 28. 14.
Deut. 4. 10.
1. Pet. 1. 17.
1. Cor. 13. 39.

some approaching or present punishment. For euen the negligent Steward looked about him, when his Master called him to giue an account of his Stewardship. And the most carelesse Slaue that securely neglects all his Masters commands, will begin to feare him, when hee seeth him take the Cudgell into his hand to beate him, or when hee feelerth the smart of the whip: whereas hee that feareth God with a sonne-like feare, is alwayes constant in his durie (although not continually in like measure) because the Arguments inciting to this feare, are continually the same in themselves, and he doth constantly consider of them.

¶ 5.
Thirdly, when we doe not yeeld obedience to the whole Law, but some parts onely.

Deut. 26. 37.
Gal. 3. 10.
1am. 2. 10.
Psal. 119. 6.

1er. 17. 10.

¶ 6.
Fourthly, when our obedience ariseth not from spirituall causes, nor is directed to right ends.

Gen. 22. 5.

Againe, it is a signe of carnall securitie, when as we doe not make conscience of yeelding obedience to the whole Law of God, but thinke it enough, if wee haue respect to some part onely, though wee neglect the rest, as the first Table without the second, or the second without the first. And that wee shall escape well enough, if wee leaue some sinnes, though we retayne some other, and performe some good duties, though wee cast others behind our backs. Neuer considering that the curse of the Law is denouneed against all, who continue not in all that is written in the Booke of the Law to doe it. That hee who breaketh one Commandement, is guiltie of all. That he who truly feareth God, hath respect, with David, to all his Commandements, because hee is equally the Author of them all, and requireth obedience to one as well as another. Finally, that some few sinnes retayned can keepe possession for the Deuill as well as many, wound the conscience, harden the heart, and on all occasions make an easie entrance for all their fellowes. So also it is a signe of this securitie, when as wee doe not yeeld obedience with the whole Man, inward as well as outward; with the heart as well as with the tongue and hand; secretly in our Closets as well as in the Church and open Streets. For this sheweth, that we doe not thinke of Gods all-seeing Eye, which beholdeth vs as well in the darkest Night as in the brightest Day, and searcheth and examineth not onely our actions subiect to the view of Man, but also our hearts and reynes. Now, what is this but like foolish and secure Malefactors, to bee carefull to hide our faults and crimes from our Fellowes and Companions, who are liable to the same condemnation, and to commit them without feare in the presence of the Iudge.

Finally, it is a signe of securitie, when wee content our selues with such a kind of obedience, as ariseth not from spirituall causes, nor is directed to right ends, but is done out of carnall motiues and sinister respects. As when we leaue sinne and performe good duties, not out of Faith, and the true loue and feare of God, but out of selfe-loue and loue of the World. When as we are moued hereunto by pleasure, rewards or punishments; and ayme rather at our owne then Gods glorie; and are guided and directed in all our actions, not by the Word of God, but by carnall reason, proceeding, staying and turning backe, as it suggesteth vnto vs, worldly inducements or discouragements. For as it was a signe, that Abraham truly feared God, when as hee yeelded yeelded absolute obedience to Gods Command and Word, without taking any aduice from carnall reason; so is it a signe of carnall securitie, when as we only so farre forth take counsaile and direction from the Word of God, as will stand with our carnall reason and affection, performing those good works, and forsaking those Vices, which we would doe or leaue vndone, though there were no immortalitie of the Soule, no Iudgement; yea, no God to behold vs, and to reward our good, or punish our euill actions.

The third signe of carnall securitie, is the delaying of our repentance, thinking that we can repent when we list, and that we may doe it time enough in our old age, or on our sicke beds. For as the true feare of God moueth vs continually to renew our repentance, as we renew our sinnes; and still to keepe our Accounts euen, that we may alwayes be in readinesse against that vnknowne and vncertayne Day, when as we shall be called to render them before Gods tribunall Seat of Iudgement; so securitie maketh vs to carry our selues, like worldly men, whose estate, by reason of debt and danger, is forlorne and desperate; who neuer looke vpon their bookes of Accounts to summe them vp; yea, rather keepe no account at all, because they are resolved to take their pleasure securely, and to riot it out as long as they may, and neuer crosse their delights, nor checke their ioyes, by calling to their mind and remembrance their after reckonings. Now what can argue greater securitie, then through our want of consideration to mistake our repentance, as a thing being in our owne power, and therefore at our command whensoever wee call for it, whereas it is the free gift of God, and therefore to be receiued with all care and diligence, whilst the acceptable Time and Day of saluation iasteth, wherein the Lord graciously offereth this gift vnto vs. What can more conuince vs, that our hearts are in this dead sleepe, then carelesly to put off a thing of such importance as our repentance is, which concerneth vs no lesse then our eternall Saluation or Damnation, vnto after-times which are most vncertayne, we hauing no assurance, no, not so much as of one minute? What sheweth more evidently our carelesse retchlesnesse, then with the old World and the filthy Sodomites, to liue impenitently in our sinnes, Eating and Drinking, Buying and Selling, Building and Planting, till wee bee swept away with the Deluge of Gods Iudgements, and be consumed with his inflamed Wrath. Or with Belshazzar to feast and carowze, till the Finger vpon the Wall writ downe the sentence of our condemnation? Finally, if securitie did not beset vs, how could we be so be-fooled, as to conceiue that we may more fitly and conueniently repent long hereafter, then at the present; when we haue, by abusing Gods patience, incensed his wrath, and moued him to withdraw his gifts and graces? When wee haue hardened our hearts with customable finning, so as neither Gods Word nor Works, Mercies nor Iudgements, can pierce into them? When as we are distracted with infirmities of body and cares of mind; sense of present euills, and feare of worse? How could we be perswaded to imagine,

§. 7.
 The third
 signe, delaying of Repentance.

Luk 17.

Dan. 5.

Zach. 5. 2.

imagine, that wee shall more easily make vp our reckonings betweene God and vs, when they are growne so great as they are sufficient to fill Zacharies large roll, then when they are in Day-bookes and short Scrowles? that we can better come out of Satans bondage, when he hath long held vs in his captiuitie, and worne vs out, and lamed vs with his gyues and fetters of sinne, then when wee are first come into his thralldome? Or that we can pull vp sinne, when by time and continuance it is like an growne Tree rooted in vs, then when it was newly planted, and as it were, in the tender twigs, if our hearts were not hardned, and the eyes of our vnderstanding quite blinded with this carnall securitie?

¶ 8.
The fourth
signe, is hypo-cristie.

Pro. 14. 2.
Iob 1. 1.

The fourth signe, is Hypocrisie, when as we make outward shew of holinesse, and nourish corruption in our hearts; tipping our tongues with a golden and glorious profession; and angling for prayse and commendations, by presenting vnto the sight of men, some seeming good actions, that wee may more cunningly hide and disguise our secret sinnes. For as sinceritie and Gods feare accompanie one another, according to that of the wise Man; He that walketh in his vprightnesse feareth the Lord, as wee see in the example of Iob, who is said to haue bene a man perfect and vpright, and the cause thereof is rendred, because he was one that feared the Lord: So Securitie and Hypocrisie are neuer seuered, but as the Cause and Effect goe still together. For if we were not blinded with securitie, we could neuer be so foolish as to imagine, that we may please God with outward shewes, that being a Spirit he will be content with outward and bodily seruice, that he can be satisfied with the seruice of the outward Man, and that in the Church onely, and when we are in good and religious Companie, and let the Deuill and the World haue the heart at all times, and the whole Man in places secret and vnscene? How could we hope to be out of danger, when wee are in the darke, and doing the works of darknesse, seeing Night and Day are to God alike, and his piercing eye searcheth and seeth euen the hidden secrets of the heart and reynes, if our carnall securitie did not make vs beleue, that as wee regard not God, but haue remoued him farre from our thoughts, so hee as little respecteth and thinketh of vs. Like the foolish Lapwing, who hauing hidden his head, becommeth secure, thinking that hee is no more scene, then hee himselfe seeth others.

¶ 9.
The fifth signe,
is to feare Man more then God.
Matth. 10. 28.
Exod. 1. 17, 18.
Heb. 11. 23.
Dan. 3. and 6.

Act. 5.

The fifth signe, is when we feare Men more then God, being more carefull to please, and more loath to displease them, then his Maiestie. For as the true feare of God maketh vs to neglect men, in comparison of him, according to the commandement of our Sauour; Feare not them that kill the body, &c. and the example of the good Midwives, and the Parents of Moses, who feared God more then Pharaoh, of Daniel and the three Children who regarded not the Kings Edict, either commanding Idolatrie or forbidding Gods true worship, and the Apostles who professed, that they feared God more then Men: So it is the nature of carnall securitie, to make vs feare and respect spect men, because their rewards and punishments, like vnto it selfe are carnall; worldly, present and subiect to the senses; and to neglect God, though his be vnspeakable and euermlasting, because being future and for the time to come, and as yet not to be scene or felt, we neuer consider nor thinke of them. Herein, much like vnto foolish children, who feare more the Schole-master, threatning to whip them, because of the present smart; then the deserued threats of their iust Father, though they concerne them no lesse, then their reiection out of his fauour for the present, and dis-inheriting from their patrimonie in time to come.

The sixth signe of carnall securitie, is immoderate feare in time of danger. For it is an ordinarie thing with Vices, when they are a litle checked and crossed, to turne into their contrarie extremes; As of presumption into despaire, prophane mirth into deepe melancholy, insolent pride into most abiect basenesse; as wee see in the example of Benbadad, who being exalted in the opinion of his vnresistable forces, gloriously boasterh that the King of Israells silver and gold, wines and children, were already his before the battaile, because the dust of Samaria could not suffice for handfulls for all the people that followed him; but being put to the worse in the battaile, hee becommeth cowardly base, sending his seruants with halters about their necks, to acknowledge his seruice, and to beg for life. And thus it fareth with carnall securitie, which in the time of prosperitie and safetie, is bold and confident, but when danger approacheth entertayneth all feares, and is presently daunted and dismayed with the shaking of a leafe. As wee see in the example of the Apostle Peter, who was most confident and secure in his owne strength before hee was tried; but when hee seeth himselfe in some perill, euery skar-crow maketh him afraid. And as the true feare of God expelleth other feares (like that winde which is strongest in a whirlwinde where diuers meete) according to that of the Apostle, We haue not receiued the spirit of bondage to feare againe, but the spirit of adoption; and because as Saint Iohn saith, perfect loue casteth out feare, as the ayre giueth place to the good liquor when it is powred into a vessell, and all other lights vanish at the appearing of the Sunne: So contrariwise carnall securitie, which is most contrarie to feare, when it is vpheld with worldly safetie and peace; doth giue place in the time of danger vnto it; which being entred causeth vs to feare shadowes as well as substances; and not onely that which hath being in truth, but such false dangers as wee giue being vnto by imagination and fearefull apprehension. According to the saying of the Psalmist; There were they afraid where no feare was; and that of the wise Man; The Wicked fleeth when no man pursueth, but the Righteous are bold as a Lion.

The seuenth signe is, when we run from God in the time of danger, vnto secundarie causes and inferiour meanes, which sayling, we wholly distrust God as not able or willing to helpe vs, and being forsaken on all sides, we are wholly possessed with feare, and so by it are plunged into ¶ 10.

The sixth signe, immoderate feare in time of danger.

1. King. 10. 3.
10. 32.

Matth. 26. 33.

Pro. 28. 1.

Rom. 8. 15.
1. Ioh. 4. 98.

Psal. 53. 5.

Pro. 28. 1.

¶ 11.

The seuenth signe, is to run from God, and to rest on inferiour meanes, in danger and affliction.

Es 43. 13, 14.

Zeph. 1. 12.

¶ 12.
The eight
signe, is contempt of Gods Ministers.

Exe 20. 4.

Job 20. 23.

into despaire. For as hee that truly feareth God for his Goodnesse, All-sufficiency, Iustice, Mercy, Power and Providence, is moued by the same Attributes to put his trust and affiance in him in all dangers, like the louing child who the more he feareth and reuerenceth his Father, the more readie he is to flee vnto him in confidence of his helpe when any perill approacheth, because the same motiues serue for both; and as they who sanctifie the Lord of Hosts by letting him to be their feare and dread, may bee assured that hee also will be their Sanctuarie, vnto which when they flee in time of danger, they may be in safetie, as the Prophet Esay speaketh: So he whose heart is destitute of Gods feare, and taken vp with carnall securitie, neuer thinketh of those Attributes which seeme to worke in vs both feare and affiance; but thinketh that God sitteth in Heauen, not regarding what is done vpon the Earth; and saith in his heart, the Lord will doe neither good or euill. The which as it taketh away from him all feare of God, so also all affiance; neither will hee who hath neglected to reuerence him as his Father, flee vnto him in time of danger with any confidence, as his Patron and Protector; but will rather cast himselfe vpon inferior meanes, wherein he trusteth, and flee any whither then vnto God, from whom his heart being wholly estranged, he expecteth no helpe at his hands in the time of trouble.

Lastly, it is a signe of carnall securitie, when as in our hearts we doe not reuerence his Ministers and Ambassadors, who in the worke of their ministerie represent his Maiestie, and in an especiall manner beare in them his Image. For as he that truly feareth his King, doth in the execution of their Office reuerence not onely the Lord Chancellor and Chiefe Iustice, but euen the meanest Major or Bayliffe, who represent his person, and come in his name, to inioyne that which he hath commanded; so he that feareth the King of Kings, reuerenceth also not onely the person of Kings and Princes, because they beare in them the Image of his Power and Soueraigntie, but also his Ambassadors, who bring vnto vs his Word of Truth, which hath no lesse power in spirittual and heavenly things, then the word of the greatest Monarch, speaking on Gods behalfe about things that are earthly and temporall; for they haue authoritie giuen them to iudge the people, as the Lord speaketh to the Prophet; and they haue a large Commis- sion giuen them for the execution of their Office and ministeriall Fun- ction, both for absoluing the penitent Beleeuer, and condemning the vnbeleeuing and impenitent sinner; not in their owne authoritie (which the Popes challenge as belonging inseparably to their Sea and Place, which inableth them to binde and loose absolutely without re- spect of persons, penitent or impenitent, or any condition to be ob- served by the partie, sauing such as respect the Popes profit;) but de- claratiuely as Gods Messengers, speaking in his Name; according to that of our Sauour: Whose soeuer sinnes ye remit, they are remitted vnto them; and whose soeuer sinnes ye retayne, they are retayned. In which respect it is an euident signe of a secure sinner, whose heart is destitute destitute of Gods feare, when as he sheweth no reuerence and respect to his Ambassadour, sent vnto them on so waightie a message, which concerneth them as much as their eternall life or death. Besides, it argueth plainly, that their heart is still possessed with carnall securitie, who shew no reuerence vnto the Preachers of the Gospell; for they are the onely meanes of awakning and rowling men vp out of this spirituall Lethargie, wherein otherwise they would sleepe to their euermolting perdition; and therefore it is not possible that any, who haue receiued this great benefit by their meanes and ministerie, but that for euer after they should respect and reuerence them, who vnder God were and are the alone instruments and meanes of conferring and preserving this benefit vpon them. And so much for the signes of carnall securitie, according vnto which if we carefully examine our selues, we may cleerly know in what case wee stand, and whether our hearts are possessed with the true feare of God; or being quite destitute of it, they be wholly taken vp with carnall securitie. To the end, that if we find our selues infected with this dangerous poyson, wee may vse the meanes following as spirituall Antidotes, to overcome and drive it from our hearts; or if we find our hearts purged alreadie in some measure from it, and indued with Gods feare, wee may vse them notwithstanding, that we may be more and more cleansed from this securitie, and that the feare of God may be still preferred and increased in vs.

CHAP. VIII.

Of such Reasons as may moue vs to abhor carnall securitie, and to vse all meanes either to prevent it, or to be freed from it.

IN the practice of physick it is a thing of greatest difficulty, to discouer truly and thoroughly the disease of the Patient, and the state of his body; and yet this skill is most necessary, seeing they who faile in this point alone, must needs faile in all the rest, applying vnfit, if not hurtfull medicines, which weaken the body and strengthen the disease. But yet it is not enough that the sicknesse by the symptoms and signes be plainly discerned; and the causes and effects, properties and qualities of it well knowne; if the learned Physician and sicke Patient proceed no further; but it is also required for the effecting of the cure, that there be first a willingnesse in the Patient to be healed of his infirmitie, and with a resolution to vse the medicines which shall be prescribed; and then skill and faithfulness in the Physician, to prescribe such as are effectually for his recouerie. And thus it fareth with the spirituall diseases of the soule, the Patient and Physician. For wee must first labour to know what the sicknesse is by the signes thereof, and then be careful in prescribing & applying the best remedies. And therefore hauing plainly discovered this dangerous disease of carnall securitie by the signes of it, it remaineth now that we come to the cure, and shew the meanes whereby he who findeth himselfe sicke of this pernicious disease, may be recouered to spiritual health. And first, because the skill in the physician

¶ I.
That it is necessary to haue our hearts wrought vnto the hatred of this Vice.

cian is nothing in prescribing the best means, except there be also a will in the Patient to vse & apply them; I wil vse some motives to perswade all that find themselves affected with this sicknesse, to desire with all earnestnesse that they may be cured, that so they may be made willing also to apply the remedies. And because all phylick, both for body and soule, is in it selfe, or at least in conceit vnpleasant to the Patient; and none are willing to vse it, but those who feele the payne or see the danger of their disease; therefore it is fit that wee set downe the nature, properties and effects of this carnall securitie, that so a desire may be wrought in those who are subiect vnto it to be cured of it. The which is more necessarie in that this sicknes is not painfull to the Patient, but insensible, like the lethargie or dead pallsie; yea, in truth most pleasant and delightfull to the most, so that he who hath it, is naturally loth to be cured of it, because he liueth at ease without disturbance, inioyeth quietly all his worldly comforts, and goeth on to his destruction with a cheerfull heart & merry countenance. And therefore the lesse he feeleth the paine, the more he needeth to see the danger; and seeing himselfe cannot apprehend it, because this disease affecteth the mind and taketh away the vnderstanding, so as it cannot naturally be discerned by the partie that hath it; I will shew how desperate and pernicious it is vnto all those, who doe not vse the meanes wherby to be recovered.

¶ 2.
That Christ hath giuen vs
speciall warning to flee
securitie.

Matth. 25.

Matth. 24. 45.
Luk. 12. 42.

The danger of this disease hereby appeareth, in that Christ the great and chiefe Physician of our soules, doth so carefully giue warning of it; vsing all meanes to let all those that are his to see the danger, and to take such courses as they may preuent it, or being tainted and ouer-taken with it, may be awakned and rowsed vp out of this sweet, yet pernicious slumber. And this he doth both by Parables, Examples, and Admonitions, and Exhortations, which he presseth and enforceth from them. For first, this is the mayne scope of the Parable of the wise and foolish Virgins, of which, they being possessed with the true feare of God, stood carefully vpon their watch, expecting the vncertaine coming of the Bridegroom, and so when hee came, were receiued with him into the bridall Chamber of eternall blessednesse; but the other being secure and retchlesse, spent their time in ease and sloth, not vsing any meanes to bee prepared against the time of his approching, who being taken vpon the sudden, vnprovidd and vnfurnisshd of the oile of sauing grace, and the light of an holy life, were excluded from the marriage feast, and deprivd of the fruition of heauenly happines. To this end also tendeth the Parable of the wise and faithfull, and the euill and vnfaithfull Seruant; the one expecting daily his Masters coming, carrieth himselfe in all his affaires, and towards his fellowes, so wisely and honestly, as if his Master were already present, and he is for his reward pronounced blessed, and made Ruler of all his Master hath, for his fidelitie and care at his comming. The other being made secure, because his Lord delayeth his comming, behaueth himselfe so as though he thought he would neuer come, smiting his fellow seruants, and eating and drinking with the drunken, who is taken vpon a sudden by his Master, and in a day when he looketh not for him, and for his reward is cut off and appointed to haue his portion with the Hypocrites, where shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. Finally, at this our Sauour also sayeth in the Parable of the rich Man, who abounding in all prouision, and hauing more Corne and Fruits then roome to bestow them in, giueth himselfe to secure rest and ease, saying to his Soule, Thou hast much goods laid vp for many yeeres, take thine ease, eat, drinke, and be merry. But out of this secure slumber hee is quickly awaked with Gods voyce, saying; Thou Foole, this night thy soule shall be required of thee, and then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided for thy selfe?

Luk. 12. 18, 19.

To this purpose our Sauour also produceth examples, mouing vs to bee wise by the experience of others harmes. As the example of those who liued before the Flood, and of the people of Sodom and Gomorrah, who liued securely in their sinnes, eating and drinking, buying and selling, planting and building, marrying and giuing in marriage, as though they had beene free from all danger, and sure that those pleasures would haue euer lasted. But the issue of this sinfull securitie was, that they were surpris'd with Gods fearefull Iudgements at vnawares; For no sooner was Noah entred into the Arke, but the Flood came and drowned them all; and presently after that Lot was gone out of Sodom, those sinfull and secure Cities with all their Inhabitants, were terribly consumed with fire and brimstone. And from both these Parables and Examples, the Lord raiseth admonitions and inforceth exhortations, mouing vs to shake off carnall securitie, and being affected with Christian feare, to stand carefully vpon our watch, and to be instant in prayer, that we may be found readie at Christs appearing. Watch therefore, for you know not what houre your Lord doth come. And againe, Let your loynes be girded about, and your lightis burning. And ye your selues like vnto them that wait for their Lord when hee will returne from the wedding, that when hee commeth and knocketh, they may open vnto him immediately. Blessed are those seruants, whom the Lord when he commeth, shall find watching, &c. And this know, that if the good man of the house had knowne what houre the Thiefe would come, he would haue watched, and not haue suffered his house to be broken thorow. Be therefore readie also; for the Sonne of Man commeth at an houre when ye thinke not. And elsewhere: Take you heed, watch and pray, for ye know not when the time is, &c. lest comming suddenly, he find you sleeping. By all which wee see the necessitie of an holy and religious feare, stirring vs to watchfulnesse, and the extreme danger of carnall securitie. For if that bee not without much hazard and perill, and ought to bee carefully shunned of vs, whereof our Sauour giueth vs once warning, then how ieopardous and full of extreme danger is this carnall securitie, and with how great care to bee auoyded of vs, of which Christ giueth vs so many warnings, as of nothing else more oft and earnestly, in so many and such great varietie of Parables, Examples and Admonitions. And withall, thus much is implied hereby, that as this sinne of securitie is great and dangerous, so we are naturally most prone to be ouer-taken by it, which moueth our Sauour

8. 3.
The examples of securitie in others secretly punished, ought to be warnings vnto vs.
Luk. 17. 16.

Math. 24. 42.

Luk. 12. 35, 36.

Mark. 13. 35, 36.

p. 4.
That Christs holy Apostles haue giuen vs
many warnings, to take heed of carnall
securitie.
Rom. 13. 11, 12.

Eph. 5. 14, 15.

1. Thes. 5. 6.

Eph. 6. 11.

1. Pet. 5. 8, 9.

p. 5.
That carnall
securitie is a most dangerous sicknesse of the soule.

Psal. 29. 4, 5.
& 114. 8.
Num. 20. 11.

1. King. 13.

to vse so many and effectuell meanes to preserue vs from it, or to awaken vs out of it, if wee bee already fallen into this spirituall Lethargie.

With like care and earnestnesse, doe Christs holy Apostles admonith and warne vs, to take heede of this dangerous and pernicious sinne of carnall securitie. The Apostle Paul telleth vs, that now it is high time to awake out of sleepe, because now our saluation is neerer then when wee beleued, that is, then at our first conuersion, when as wee began to beleue. And therefore as Runners for a prize, make most speed when they come neere vnto the Goale: so should we be most carefull in shaking off all securitie and sloth, and in running swiftly in the Race of godlinesse, when we approch to the Goale of blessednes:
and exhorteth vs, that seeing the Night is farre spent, and the Day is at hand, we doe therefore cast off the works of darknesse, and put on the Armour of light. And againe: Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead; and Christ shall giue thee light. See that yee walke circumspecti-ly, not as fooles but as wise, redeeming the time, because the dayes are euill.
And elsewhere: Let vs not sleepe as doe others, but let vs watch and be sober, &c. And because we are alwayes in danger, he would haue vs to be at no time retchlesse and secure, but seeing we haue innumerable enemies euer readie to assault vs, he exhorteth vs to haue continually the whole Armour of God fast buckled vnto vs, that we may be able to stand against the wiles of the Deuill. So the Apostle Peter vpon the same ground, exhorteth vs to shake off carnall securitie, and to stand still vpon our guard with all care and watchfulnesse. Be sober (saith he) be vigilant, because your aduersarie the Deuill, as a roring Lion walketh about, seeking whom he may deuoure; whom resist steadfast in the Faith.

But that wee may bee moued to abhor this sinne of carnall securitie with greater hatred, let vs further consider, that it is a most fearefull and pernicious vice, which hath in it all relations of ill, being not only in it selfe exceeding euil, but also the cause of many & grievous euils. In it selfe it is a disease of the soule most dangerous and desperate, vnlesse it be cured by vnfayned repentance; for there is no disease more pernicious to the spirituall Patient, sicke in sinne, then the stone in heart, or if you will an heart of stone; no stone so hard and hardly broken. For though the voyce of the Lord bee so powerfull and full of Maiestie, that it breaketh the Cedars, shaketh the earth and maketh it to tremble; yea, renteth the Rocks, turning them into a standing water, and the Flint it selfe into a Fountaine of waters, as the Psalmist speaketh; yet it moueth not the secure and stonie heart, nor resolueh it into the teares of repentance; and therefore we reade that when the Word of God by the Prophet was so mightie, that it claue insunder the stonie Altar, yet the more hard and stonie heart of Ieroboam, was not at all affected and pierced with it; but notwithstanding all Gods terrible Threatnings he goeth on securely in his sinne. It is (as the Prophet calleth it) that Spirit of deepe sleepe, which closeth up mens eyes, and deprieth

priueth them of the spirituall vse of their senses and vnderstanding, making the Vision and Word of the Lord, as the words of a Booke which is sealed; so as Gods Ministers may complayne of such, as hee doth in the same place, that they are drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drinke. Neither is it an ordinarie sleepe, but that dangerous Lethargie of the soule, which maketh men as vnfit to all holy duties and spirituall exercises, as death it selfe makes them vnapt and vnable to performe any naturall or morall actions. It is the Devils cradle, in which he lulleth men asleepe, so as he may do with them what he pleaseth; that deadly stinging Viper which bringeth them into the deepe slumber of death and destruction; and that Cart of Hell, which in the darke night of Ignorance, carrieth quietly and without noyse, huge multitudes into the Pit of euerlasting death. Finally, it is that Circes, that Siren, that Witch, which transformeth men into brut beasts, and deprieth them not onely of all grace, but euen of naturall reason and vnderstanding. It is a seeming peace, more dangerous then any warre; and in outward appearance a quiet calme, but in truth the most perillous tempest, in which many millions of soules doe suffer shipwracke, and sinke into the gulfes of endless perdition.

And as this securitie is a dangerous and grieuous disease, so in this respect it is the more pernicious, because it is hardly cured, and that in a double respect; first, because insensible diseases are in themselves most desperate, as the Lethargie, dead palsie, apoplexie. And euen in acute sicknesses, as Feauers and burning Agues, we account the patient most hopelesse and helpelesse, when as he is past feeling of his sickness. Thus also the wounded members are most hardly cured, when by much effusion of blood and spirits they are become stiffe and benumbed. And whereas greene wounds, which are most sharpe and painfull to sense, are soone healed; those which are full of dead flesh, gangrened or turned into Cankers, as they are freest from payne, so are they furthest from curing. And thus it also fareth with those who are spirituallly sicke, and wounded with the sores of sinne; the more sensible they are of their griefe, the more hope there is of their recouerie; and contrariwise, the more senselesse and stupid, the more hardly can they be restored to their spirituall health. For as Augustine saith, that wound which payneth not, is not to bee esteemed sound, but dead. Secondly, because he who is not sensible of his disease, thinking himselfe alreadie well enough, doth vse no meanes whereby hee may be recovered; the which is also the condition of those who are sicke of this senselesse securitie; they thinke they are in good case, rich in all things, and haue need of nothing, as we see in the example of the Angell of the Church of Laodicea; and therefore seeke not to better their estate till God open their eyes, and giueth them the sight and sense of their pouertie and wretchednesse. In which regard we may fitly say to those who are sicke of this securitie, as Bernard to Eugenius; there is no greater cause of feare, then such peace and quiet.

Esa. 29. 9, 10, 11.

Nimis securitas
mentis compassio
est. Gregor. in Moral.

¶ 6.
That carnall
securitie is a disease hardly cured.

Quod non dolet non pro sano, sed pro mortuo computandum. August.

Apoc. 3. 17.

Nihil plus metuo
tibi pax ista,
lib. 3. de Con-
sil.

¶ 7.
That carnall
securitie is the cause of all sinne.
Pro. 13. 14.

Psal. 94. 4, 5, 6.

Isa. 49.

Gen. 20. 11.

Rom. 3. 18.

¶ 8.
That securitie emptieth the heart of all grace, and pre-pareth and mak-eth it fit to receiue Satan, with all his tentations.

Mat. 12. 43, 44.

Iud. 18. 7, 10.

But as this securitie is in it selfe euill and sinfull, so is it the cause of all euill, and that both the euill of sinne, and also the euill of punishment. For as the feare of God restrayneth those who are indued with it from all wickednesse, and as the wise Man speaketh, is like the Well-springs of life to make vs flee from, and escape the snares of death; so this carnall securitie keepeth open house for all impietie and sinne, whilest the secure person presumeth not onely of impunitie, notwithstanding that he fatteth himselfe with the pleasures of sinne, but also promisseth vnto his soule the long fruition of his present prosperitie, and afterwards the perpetuall possession of euerlasting happinesse. So the Psalmist saith, that the workers of iniquitie boasted themselves in their wickednesse, broke in pieces the Lords people, and afflicted his heritage, murdered the Widdow, Stranger and Fatherlesse, saying, the Lord shall not see, neither shall the God of Iacob regard it. And the Prophet telleth vs, that Babylon liued in all voluptuousnesse, securely presuming that there should be a Queene for ever and see no euill. Thus Abraham concludeth, that the Egyptians were fit for Rapes, Murther, and all outrageous wickednesse, because there was no feare of God in the Land. And the Apostle hauing set downe a Catalogue of many grieuous sinnes; setteth downe this as the mother sinne and cause of all the rest, that there was no feare of God before their eyes.

For securitie which emptieth the heart of all feare of God, not onely encourageth the flesh to goe on in all sinful courses, which will yeeld vnto it delight, profit or preferment, because there is no feare of danger, and entercayneth all the tentations of the World, which bring with them any carnall contentment, but also setteth the doore of our hearts wide open to let in Satan, and maketh way for all his tentations. For when this euill spirit and enemy of our saluation, would lay more firme and sure hold of such as he already possesseth, hee departeth for a time, as though by the power of Gods Word and Spirit, he were cast out and vanquished. But when hereby he hath made them secure and retchlesse, he returneth againe, and finding his house (that is their hearts) emptie and cleane swept, with this beesome of carnall securitie, of all spirituall graces, and garnished with all vices, which are the ornaments in which hee most delighteth, Hee taketh with him seven other spirits, more wicked then himselfe, and they enter in and dwell there, and so the last state of that man is worse then the first. So that if securitie hath first taken vp the roome, Satan may at his pleasure make an entrance and get an easie victorie. For as in ciuill affaires, nothing doth more expose a state to desperate danger, then when through prosperitie and ease it becommeth secure, fearing no enemy, nor suspecting the approach of any euill, as the stories of Troy, Babylon, Carthage, Rome, and many others, doe make it manifest; so nothing doth more endanger our soules, to be sacked and spoyled of all grace, by our spirituall enemies, then when being taken vp with sloth and securitie, we feare no danger. So that the Deuill, World and Flesh, intending to assault vs (as the Danites, the men of Laish) may encourage rage one another with assured hope of victorie, because they are to fight against such as are quiet and secure, and therefore easie to be overcome. For this securitie is the mother of Sloth and Negligence, making men not to regard their enemies strength and malice, nor their owne danger; and consequently, to omit all meanes of their owne safetie. Yea, not onely doe our spirituall enemies thus finally vanquish the vessells of wrath prepared to destruction; but oftentimes foyle and leade captiue vnto sinne Gods dearest seruants, as wee see in the example of Noah, who persisted in his iustice and integritie in time of danger, but when the Flood was past, and he secured from all feare, he is foyled by Satan in his owne familie. So Lot who stood in his vp-rightnesse, when he liued in danger among the Sodomites, fell shamefully in the sole companie of his owne daughters. And Dauid, who in the time of his persecution by Saul, was a patterne of pietie, when hee walked securely on the Rooofe of his Kingly Palace, was tempted and overcome. But yet this securitie arising from outward causes, doth not so much endanger vs, as that which ariseth from an opinion of our owne strength, and the weaknesse of our spirituall enemies; because we haue gotten the better of them in some conflicts. For it maketh vs to neglect the chiefe pillar of our strength, the power and providence of God, and all good meanes, whereby wee might bee enabled to stand in the day of battaile; and so encourageth our enemies to assault and set vpon vs, and weakneth our hands in making resistance. Whereby (as one saith) oftentimes it commeth to passe, that he whom the conflict of tentation could not overcome, is shamefully foyled by his owne securitie. And the mind becoming loose and negligent in securitie of its owne vertue, is pierced and wounded with the weapon of an vnexpected fault by our treacherous enemy. And this is the cause, why the Lord continually exerciseth his seruants in the spirituall warfare, and suffereth the enemies of their saluation to skirmish with them, that they may bee preserved from securitie, which is farre more dangerous then any warre. And as Scipio wisely aduised in the Senate, that Carthage should not vtterly bee destroyed, lest the Romanes with too much peace and securitie, should become slothfull and effeminate, and so bee easily subdued by some other enemies: so the Lord would not giue vs a full victorie ouer our spirituall enemies, but suffereth them (though with ouer-ruled and abated forces) to skirmish with vs, that we may not become slothfull and secure, and so exposed to more danger. And thus wee see, that carnall securitie is in it selfe a dangerous euill and grieuous sinne, the which should moue vs with vnreconciliable hatred to abhor and make warre against it; neuer being at rest, till by the vse of those good meanes which God hath sanctified for this purpose, wee haue banished it out of our hearts, and in stead of it, established in them the true feare of God.

*Ad vniuersam corruptionem nu-dat semina quae per 600. annos
falsitate con-stiterat. Hieron. ad Ocean.*

*Sape quem tentationis certamen superare non valuit, sua deterius securitas fra-git. Or. Greg.
in Moral.
Sape mens dum
virtutem sua se-curitate resolu-
tur infidante aduersario inopinata culpe telo perforatur. ibid.*

CHAP. IX.

Where is shewed that carnall securitie is the cause of many fearefull punishments.

p. 1.
That carnall
securitie depri-ueth of Gods faour and protection, and dispoyleth vs
of all spirituall
grace.

BVt that we may be moued to pursue this Vice with more deadly hatred, and more carefully vse all good meanes to be armed against it; let vs now further consider, that as it is the euill of sinne, and the cause thereof, as hath beene shewed; so also it is the cause of the euill of punishment; yea, it selfe is also a punishment of other sinnes. Concerning the former: This securitie exposeth vs to many euills both priuatiue and positieue. For it depriueth vs of Gods assistance in the day of tentation, whilst it blindeth our eyes, that we cannot see the want of his helpe, hardneth our hearts that we cannot desire it, and shutteth our mouthes that wee cannot craue it by our seruent prayers. It dispoyleth vs of the rich furniture of Gods sauing graces, by causing vs to neglect, or formally and coldly to vse the meanes whereby they should be nourished and increased; as hearing the Word, Reading, Meditating, Prayer, and the rest, presuming that we are well enough, safe, and in good estate without them; whereupon must needs follow their languishing and decaying, if this securitie be still cherished in vs.
For the strongest bodies will waxe faint and weake, if they bee depri-ued of their food whereby they should bee nourished. The greatest flame and fire will soone goe out, if it be not fed with a new supply of fuell and kept in by blowing. The greatest state will soone bee consumed, if men lauishly spend vpon the stocke, and vse no meanes to adde vnto it. The best Vines will grow wild, and bring vnripe and sowre Grapes, if they be neglected and be not pruned and well ordered. The most fruitfull ground, will in stead of good Graine, bring forth weeds, Thornes and Thistles, if it be not husbanded and manured. And thus it fareth with vs in our spirituall estate, our strength of grace will turne vnto weaknesse, if in our securitie we thinke our selues so strong, that wee need not to cherish them with the spirituall Manna, and meanes of grace and saluation. The fire of the Spirit will bee extinguished, if wee cast vpon it this cold water of securitie, and doe not continually re-entline it by blowing vpon it, and stirre vp the gifts and graces of God in vs, as Paul exhorteth Timothy. Wee shall soone breake and bee banke-rupted in our spirituall state, if thinking with the Laodi-ceans, that we are rich enough and haue need of nothing, we neglect the meanes whereby the mayne stocke of Gods graces may be preserued and increased in vs. Wee shall like degenerate Vines, in stead of sweet, bring forth nothing but sowre Grapes, if we neglect the continuall purging and pruning of our selues from our superfluous lusts, and doe not preserue our hearts well ordered and in the feare of God.
Finally, in stead of the fruits of Vertue, we shall breed and bring forth nothing but the weeds of Vice and Sinne, if we neglect our spirituall husbandrie,

2. Tim. 1. 6.

Apoc. 3. 17.

husbandrie, breake not vp the fallow grounds of our hearts, weed them not of thornie cares, manure them not by the vse of all good meanes, whereby they may bee made rich and fertile, and sow not in them the good seed of Gods Word, which will bring forth in vs the fruits of Holinesse and Righteousnesse.

More particularly, our light of knowledge will soone grow dimme, if we securely content our selues with that we haue, and doe not more illuminate our vnderstanding by the light of Gods Word, from which (as the light of the Moone from the Sunne) it was first borrowed. Or else, if it remayne quicke and sharpe in theorie and speculation, it will waxe vaine and vnprofitable in respect of vse, and no way further but rather hinder vs in the wayes of godlinesse. Our faith will become faint, if through securitie we carelesly neglect the meanes of Hearing, Reading, Praying, &c. seeing it is nursed and cherished by the same meanes, by which it was bred and borne in vs. Our loue will waxe cold and fruitlesse, if wee grow secure and sluggish with the Spouse in the Canticles, neglecting to see and seeke the face of our Beloued in the vse of his holy Ordinances, to harken to his Voyce, not meditating on his infinite loue, wherewith hee hath loued vs: vpon which cooling of our affection towards him, he will withdraw himselfe, and hide from vs his louing Countenance (as it is in the same place) and so wee shall also lose the sweet and comfortable sense and feeling of his loue in our hearts, till wee haue shaken off our carnall securitie, and haue diligently sought his face and fauour by renewing our faith and repentance. Our affiance in God will soone languish, if we either securely flatter our selues with a conceit that wee are out of danger, or haue strength in our owne hands to preuent or ouer-come it, neither can we catch sure hold of this staffe of our strength, till wee see what need we haue of it, and haue cast out of our hands the brittle Reede of our owne abilities. Our feare of God will quickly fayle and giue place, if wee nourish securitie, which is an vtter enemy and opposit vnto it; for contraries, without meane, cannot be in their strength and vigour in the same subiect at the same time; and if wee neglect, through this securitie, the meanes and causes of Gods feare, as the meditating on his Power, Prefence, and Prouidence, his Mercy, Iustice, Goodnesse, Truth; it must needs follow, that it selfe will decay in vs. Our patience will be enfeebled, when as wee presume that wee are safe from all trialls and tentations, or securely resting on our owne strength, as sufficient to ouer-come them, we haue neglected to gather Arguments of comfort and consolation against the day of affliction. Finally, our prayers will grow cold and formall, vncheerfull and heartlesse, when by our securitie wee are made insensible of our wants, and are in no feare of approaching euils.

And as this securitie depriueth vs of all sauing grace: so also of the good Spirit of God, which is the author and fountaine of them. For it causeth vs, through sloth and negligence to quench the good motions of the Spirit, either perswading vs to the preformance of good duties,

p. 2.

Of some special graces whereof carnall securitie depriueth vs.

Rom. 10. 17.

1. Tim. 1. 5.

Cant. 5. 1. 2.

p. 3.

That Gods Spirit will not dwell in a secure heart.
1. The. 5. 19.

Eph. 4. 30.

duties, or to shunne and auoide vice 2nd sinne, whilest wee neglect to put in practice, the things vnto which it moueeth vs. And so vexing and grieuing this holy guest, wee make him weary of his lodging, and willing to depart from vs. For, as securitie maketh way for the euill spirit to enter into our hearts, when as it sweepeth it cleane of all vertue, and garnisheth it with vice and sinfull corruptions: so it maketh the good Spirit to remoue and depart, being in all things most opposite vnto it. And as the fire is extinguished when as we doe not blow and cherish it, or if wee stop the vent so as it cannot flame out, and smother it in its owne smoke; so we doe extinguish the fire of Gods Spirit, when through securitie we neglect to vse the meanes whereby it is nourished, or will not let it blaze and flame out in the actions of holinesse and righteousnesse.

p. 4.

That Carnall
securitie depri-
ueth vs of eter-
nall happines.
1. Cor. 9. 23. 24.
Apo. 2. 10.
p. 3. 11.

Matth. 7. 13.
p. 11. 12.

Phil. 2. 12.

Matth. 25. 10.

Nemo duri cor-dis salutem vn-quam adeptus
est. &c. Bernard. ad Eugen.
lib. 1.

Ezech. 11. 29.
p. 36. 26.

p. 5.

That Carnall
securitie expo-seth vs to posi-tiue euils, and first to all dangers.

Neither doth it only depriue vs of grace in this life, but also of glorie and happinesse in the life to come. For this crowne and garland of euerlasting blessednesse, is not promised to slothfull loyterers, but vnto them that strue for it, to wrastrlers that contend for masterie, to runners that runne in the Spirituall race, that hold out to the end, to those that fight in the Christian warfare, and neuer giue ouer the field till they haue obtained victorie. This gate of life is not opened to those that slothfully sit still, and securely content themselues with their present state, not caring whether they goe in or no; but vnto those that strue to enter into it, and vse a kind of holy violence, that they may presse in, and not be in danger of being put backe. Saluation belongeth not to those, who are carelesse and secure in the vse of the meanes whereby it may bee had, but to such as worke it out with feare and trembling. These mariage joyes are not prepared for such foolish virgins as sleepe in securitie, and take no care to bee found in readinesse; but for the wise, who not knowing when the Bridegroomme will come, doe stand vpon their watch, and haue their lampes of Faith clearely burning, and giuing out the light of a godly life. And therefore (as one sayth) there was neuer any of an hard and secure heart that obtained saluation, vnlesse God hauing mercy vpon him, hath taken away his stonie heart from him, and giuen him an heart of flesh, as the Prophet speaketh.

And thus we see that Carnall securitie depriueth vs of all good in this life and the life to come. But besides this priuation of good, it doth also expose vs positiue to all euill. As first, it maketh vs subject to all dangers, and that in diuers respects. First, meritoriously and deservedly it being just with God, that they should not bee shaded vnder the wings of his prouidence, who haue no awfull respect of his presence, but are carelesse and vnconscionable in all their wayes. Secondly, because they are improuident and negligent in the vsing of any meanes, whereby they may be preuented, either prayer vnto God for his protection, or repentance for sinne, which hath indangered them to Gods Iudgements, or Christian prudence, in fore-casting what euils may befall them, or if they happen, how they may preuent them. In which regard, it is no more strange for secure men to fall into mischiefe, then to see a man, who hauing blind-folded himselfe, and runneth he careth not whither with head-long haste, or that walketh in his sleepe, to stumble at blocks in his way, or to fall into Pits and Ditches. Thirdly, because they alwayes lye open vnto their spirituall enemies, and encourage them with their secure carelesse to set vpon them, because before the assault they are sure of victorie. Fourthly, because giuing themselves to sloth and ease, they neglect to buckle the Christian Armour vpon them, whereby they might be inabled to resist their enemies in the day of conflict. And lastly, because they who through securitie are destitute of the feare of God, endanger themselves to all things else which are to bee feared; and howsoeuer they are void of all feare in the time of prosperitie; yet when the things they neuer feared fall vpon them, they are so amazed and astonished with approaching dangers, and so deprived of all courage to resist, or counsaile to auoid them; that they doe through excessiue feare inuitably fall into many of them, which they might haue escaped, if they had feared seasonably, and prouidently fore-seene them before they hapned. In which respect, one saith, that our prosperitie ought neuer to bee secure; because securitie is more dangerous to our mind, then aduersitie to our body. For things prosperous doe first corrupt vs, before those which are aduerse, can breake and hurt vs. And another Father giueth the reason of this danger, Because he that securely presumeth feareth not, and so is lesse cautelous and prouident, and thereby more apt to fall into danger. Feare is the foundation of health and safetie; and presumption the impediment of feare. And therefore it is more profitable if we feare that we may fall, for by fearing we shall take heed, and taking heed we shall escape.

which

Secondly, this carnall securitie bringeth vpon vs Gods fearefull Iudgements, as appeareth by many testimonies of Scriptures, wherein they are denounced, and many examples of secure sinners, vpon whom they haue beene inflicted. So the Lord threatneth, that if any hearing the words of the Curse recorded in the Booke of the Law, doe blesse himselfe in his heart, saying, I shall haue peace though I walke in the imagination of my heart, so adde drunkenesse vnto thirst; hee will not spare him, but then his anger and iousie shall smoke against that man, and all the curses that are written in that Booke shall lye vpon him, and the Lord shall blot out his name from vnder Heauen; and the Lord shall separate him vnto euill. Thus, because the Rulers of Ierusalem said, We haue made a couenant with Death, and with Hell are wee at agreement, when the ouerflowing scourge shall passe through, it shall not come vnto vs; for wee haue made lyes our refuge, and vnder falshood haue wee hid our selues; therefore the Lord threatneth, that their couenant with Death shall be disannulled, and their agreement with Hell shall not stand, and that when the ouerflowing scourge shall passe through, they should be trodden downe by it. So because the residue of Israel, liuing in great iniquitie, blood and peruerse, said in their securitie; The Lord hath forsaken the Nunquam secura debet esse felicitas, quia periculosa sunt animo secura, quam corpori aduersa, &c. Aug. in Sent. T. 3. c. 1059.

Qui presumit minus veretur, minus et cauet, plus periclitatur, &c. Tertul. de cultu Forn. pag. 407.

2. 6.

That carnall securitie exposeth vs to Gods fearefull Iudgements. Deut. 19, 19, 20, 21.

Isa. 28, 15, 18.

Ezech. 9, 9, 10.

Zeph. 1. 12, 13.

Esa. 47. 8.

Apoc. 18. 7, 8.

Rom. 2. 5, 6.

p. 7.

The former point illustrated by examples.

Luk. 17. 25, 28.

1st. 6. 14:

Dan. 5.

1. Thes. 5. 3.

Pro. 23. 34.

p. 8.

That carnall
securitie plungeth men into euerlasting condemnation.

the Earth and seeth not; the Lord threatneth that his eye should not spare them, and that he would haue no pittie, but would recompence their way upon their head. Thus the more carelesse and secure the Jewes were in examining their wicked works and wayes, saying in their hearts; The Lord will doe neither good nor euill, the more curiously he threatneth to search them out, and to punish them with greater seueritie; the which hee implyeth by that borrowed speech, that hee would search Ierusalem with Candles, and punish the men that were sesled on their lees, making their goods to become a booty, and their houses a desolation. So, because Babylon liued in her sinnes with great securitie, and promised vnto her selfe impunitie, and the continuance of her prosperitie, the Lord, denounceth those iudgements against her, from which specially shee blessed her selfe, euen losse of Soueraigntie, slaughter and desolation: the which is also threatned against the Anti-type, the Romish Babylon, and in Gods good time shall be inflicted. And thus doe secure sinners, who through hardnesse of their hearts cannot repent, treasure up for themselves wrath against the day of wrath, and the reuelation of the righteous iudgement of God, who will render vnto euery man according to his deeds.

This also is cleere and euident by the examples of former times; for thus the old World, and Sodom and Gomorrah, liuing securely in their sinnes without repentance, eating and drinking, buying and selling, building and planting, marrying and giuing in marriage; were destroyed with Gods fearefull Iudgements of Fire and Water. So the Jewes, when they securely blessed themselves in their prosperitie, and drowned the voyce of the Lords Heralds; denouncing warre, with their lowder crie of peace, peace, were vanquished by their enemies, and led into a miserable captiuitie. Thus Belsazzar was attached in the midst of his cups, and bring in his chiefe jollity, feasting his Princes and Concubines, and farre off from all danger, his ruine is written by a finger vpon the Wall; and soone after executed and accomplished. And as this hath beene the condition of secure men in time past; so is it now, and shall be to the end of the World, and euen at the end of it; For when they shall say peace and safetie, then sudden destruction shall come vpon them, as trauaile vpon a Woman with child, and they shall not escape, as the Apostle telleth vs. In which regard the estate of secure men, flourishing in prosperitie, is like the state of the fatted Oxe that is led to slaughter, who is as secure and far from feare, as he was in fore-times, when he was led to the pasture; or of the silly Bird, which feedeth securely on the bait, when the Net is readie to bee pulled vpon her; or of the Drunkard, of which the wise Man speaketh, who sleepeth securely in the midst of the Sea, or as hee lyeth vpon the top of the Mast, readie to bee blowne ouer Hatches in euery Tempest.

But most fearefull is the estate of secure men, in respect of that fearefull condemnation, which they plunge themselves into, in the WWorld to come. When as they shall not onely be deprived of heavenly ioyes, but but be also for euer tormented with hellish torments. As we see in the example of the retchlesse and secure seruant, whose Lord came in a day when he looked not for him, and in an houre that he was not aware of, and not onely deprivied him of the reward giuen to the faithfull seruaut, whom hee found well imployed, but also cut him off, and appointed him his portion with hypocrites, where shall bee weeping and gnashing of teeth. Neither shall they bee subiect onely to ordinarie punishments and tortures in this hellish condemnation (though the least in this kind bee fearfull and intolerable) but as they haue more securely wallowed themselves in carnall and worldly pleasures, presuming that they should alwayes last, the more exquisitely shall they bee tormented; as we see by that fearfull sentence pronounced against the Whore of Babylon, the Antichrist of Rome. How much she hath glorified her selfe and liued deliciously, so much torment and sorrow giue her: For shee saith in her heart, I sit a Queene and am no widdow, and shall see no sorrow. For if the Lord obserueth such a iust proportion in executing iudgement, according to the Law of requitall in this life: How much more may shee, and all other of her condition, expect it in the last iudgement, when there shall be no further day of vengeance taken, but euery sinner shall be punished to the full, according to the qualitie and quantitie of his sinnes?

Finally, as this carnall securitie is in it selfe sinfull, the cause of sinne and the cause of punishment: so (that we may know that there is no relation or respect of euill wanting in it) it selfe also is a fearful punishment of other sinnes. For when we not onely put out the small sparks of the light of nature remayning in vs, and put to silence our owne consciences, accusing vs for sinne; but also strue against Gods Spirit, and quench the good motions thereof, either mouing vs to good or restraining vs from euill; then it is iust with God to giue vs vp vnto our owne lusts, seeing we will needs serue them, and not let his spirit alwayes strue with vs; to blind our minds and vnderstandings (not by putting out our eyes, but) by with-holding the light of his holy Spirit, whereby alone they are illuminated; to harden our hearts (not by infusion of corruption) but leauing them to their owne naturall hardnesse, and denying to giue the Oyle of his grace, whereby they might be softned, and to cause the many wounds which we haue giuen vnto our consciences, to take away the sense and feeling of it, and so turne vnto a deadly Gangrene or incurable Canker. So Augustine saith, that it is a iust punishment from God, that hee who knoweth to doe well and doth it not, should also be deprivied of the knowledge of well-doing. Thus when the Gentiles sinned in the highest kind against their consciences, and knowing the true God by the light of nature, and by reading in the great Booke of the Creatures, did not worship him as God, but fell into grievous Idolatrie, and committed spiritual Whoredome with all the Creatures; the Lord (as the Apostle saith) that they might receiue (τὸ ἀποδοῦναι τὸ ἕδος τῆς χάριτος) that recompence of reward which was due vnto their willfull error, gaue them ouer to

Mat. 24. 50, 51.

Apoc. 18. 7.

Lex talionis.

p. 9.

That carnall securitie is a fearful punishment of other sinnes.

Gen. 6. 3.

*Iustissima pena ut qui scientia rectum non facit, amittat scire
quod rectum.
De lib. Arbit.
lib. 3.*

Rom. 1. 27.

Esa. 1. 5.

Esa. 6. 9, 10.

Zach. 1. 10, 11, 12.

Zeph. 1. 17.

Esa. 26. 16.

Heb. 3. 12.

Apo. 3. 19.

2. Tim. 2. 12.

E. 3. 12.

Apo. 14. 22.

2. Cor. 4. 17.

their owne vaine imaginations, to become Fooles, to the vncleane lusts of their owne hearts and vile affections, and to a reprobate mind, to commit sinne with greedinesse, and without any sense or feeling. So when the Iewes would take no warning neither by Gods Words nor Works, but wearied his Prophets with speaking vnto them, and himselfe with smiting and correcting them; so that he excuseth his neglect of fatherly chastisements, because hee found them vnprofitable and bootlesse: Wherefore should you be stricken any more; seeing yee will reuolt more and more. At last, as a reward and iust punishment of their impenitency, hee giueth them vp to their blindness of mind, carnall securitie and hardnesse of heart. Goe, and tell this people; heare yee indeed, but vnderstand not; and see yee indeed, but perceiue not. Make the hearts of this people fat, and make their eares heavy, and shut their eyes; lest they see with their eyes, and heare with their eares, and vnderstand with their heart, and conuert and be healed. Thus when they liued in vniustice and oppression; and would shew no mercy, nor harken to Gods Prophets calling them to repentance, their hearts also became as hard as the Adamant stone. And thus the Lord threatneth, that hee will bring distresse vpon them, and make them to walke like blind men, without light of comfort, or sight of vnderstanding, because they had sinned against him. And this of all other punishments, inflicted in this life, is most grievous and fearfull, and therefore with greatest care to bee auoyded. For other punishments, being sanctified by Gods Spirit to our vse, doe open our eyes, but this shutteth and maketh them starke blind; others make vs to flee vnto God, and draw neere vnto him for ease and comfort, but this maketh vs to flee further from him, as though we needed not his helpe. Others bruise our hearts and make them contrite, causing them of stone to become flesh, but this doth more and more harden them (as frost doth the water which it conuerteth into Ice) and of flesh maketh them to become stone. Other afflictions doe helpe to cure our spirituall sores, and to draw out the Core of our corruptions, but this makes them to rot and fester, by neglecting those holesome salues, whereby they should be healed. Others refine vs, like good mettall, in the fiery furnace, and like Files doe scowre away our rust, but this maketh vs to rust the more, and couereth vs ouer with filth and drosse. Others make vs crie out vnto God by prayer, and more diligent in his seruice, this shutteth our mouthes that wee cannot, and hardneth our hearts that wee will not call vpon him, and maketh vs to neglect all good duties. Others correct vs and make vs better, this corrupts and makes vs worse. Finally, they are the way to Gods Kingdome, for we must suffer with Christ before we can raigne in him; yea, they helpe vs forward in the way of Righteousnesse, that leadeth vnto Happinesse, and so, as the Apostle saith, cause vnto vs a farre most excellent and eternall weight of glorie; but this punishment of carnall securitie and hardnesse of heart, doth make vs vnterly to neglect this way, and thrusteth vs into the broad way that leadeth to destruction.

CHAP. X.

*Of the meanes whereby we may be preserued from carnall securitie.
As first auoyding and taking away the causes of it.*

BY that which hath beene said in the former Chapter, it may manifestly appeare, that the sinne of carnall securitie is out of measure sinfull, a capitall euill, and most dangerous disease of the soule, which is more heartily to be abhorred, and more carefully to be auoided, then the plague, leprosie, or corporall lethargie. But, for as much as it is not sufficient that we see the manifold mischiefs of this Spirituall sicknesse, and thereby bee moued to hate it, and earnestly to desire to be freed from it; vnlesse wee also know by what meanes our desire may be satisfied: I will in the next place propound the preseruatiues, which may keepe vs from this disease, and the medicines which may cure and recouer vs if we be alreadie fallen into it. First, then if we would be cured of this Spirituall lethargie, we must imitate skilfull Physicians, who to effect a perfect cure, doe labour chiefly to take away the causes of the sicknesse, and withall to strengthen and confirme the affected part, that being expulsed they may be able to keep them from re-entring. Which not being obserued, there can be no perfect cure, but the Patient will be readie, vpon the next distemper of heat, cold, or misdiet, to relapse dangerously into his former disease. And if we would take away these malignant and poisonous streames of carnall securitie, it will be to little purpose to lade and emptie them in the current, vnlesse we damme and stop vp the Well-head and Fountaine from which the Spring. To which end, we will propound them in the same order wherein they were formerly handled. And first, if wee would be freed from carnall securitie, wee must labour to come out of our naturall ignorance, and to haue our minds illightned with the knowledge of God, and of those attributes, whereby his true feare is wrought in our hearts, as his omnipotent power, omniscient wisdom, omnipresence, iustice, trueth, mercie, goodnesse, and the rest. For there are scarce any that are ignorant of these, who are not wholly possessed with carnall securitie; neither doth it make them watchfull and fearefull to be compassed about with desperate dangers, because liuing in the blindness of ignorance, and in such palpable darkness as obscureth all things, they want both light and sight to see and apprehend them.

The second meanes and remedie against securitie, is not onely to know God and his attributes, but also often to meditate and consider of them. As still to thinke and remember, that hee who seeth all things, seeth and beholdeth our most secret actions, yea, searcheth our very hearts and reines, discerning euery turning and winding in this Labyrinth, much better then we our selues. So Salomon, The §. 1.

The first remedie, is to auoid ignorance, and labour after knowledge.

Ibi maxime oportet obseruare peccatum ubi nasci solet. Hieronym.

§. 2.

The second remedie, is to consider and meditate often on Gods attributes.

a Deus totus est
sensus, totus vi-sus, totus auditus Plin. hist.
nat. l. 1. c. 7.
b Sphæra cuius
centrum ubique.
circumferentia iniquam. Empedocles.
Psal. 139. 8. 9.
c Magna tibi
custodia necessaria est qui ante oculos iudicis vinitis cuncta cernentis. Bernard.
medit. c. 6.

2. Cor. 5. 10.

Heb. 12. 31.

eyes of the Lord are in euery place, beholding the euill and the good. Prouerb. 15. 3. And Iob, I know that thou canst doe euery thing, and that no thought can be with-helden from thee. Iob 42. 2. And therefore David setteth God continually before him. I haue (saith he) set the Lord alwayes before me, because he is at my right hand, I shall not be moued. Psal.
16. 8. and Psal. 119. 168. Yea, ^a that he looketh not thus vpon vs as farre off, he being in heauen and we on earth, but being in all ^b places alike, is present with vs, and standeth by to see how in all things we carrie our selues; and not as an idle speculatur, only to gaze on our actions with either liking or dislike of them, but as our ^c Iudge, who will either acquit and reward vs if we doe well, or condemne and punish vs if we doe euill. And not such a corrupt Iudge who may be blinded with rewards, and taketh more care to weigh the bribe then the cause, or a respecter of persons; who may easily be mis-led by fauour or friendship; or one so weake in authoritie, or confined in his iurisdiction to such narrow limits, or of such small power and strength, that we may appeale from his sentence to an higher Court, flee out of his dominions, or by our owne wisdom and strength, or helpe of our friends, deliuer our selues from his iust doome, by mayne force.
But let vs remember, that the Iudge who standeth by and looketh vp-on our actions, is most vp-right and vnpartiall, who accepteth no mans person, and so all-sufficient in himselfe that hee needeth no rewards, and supreme Lord of all, so that wee cannot giue him any thing which is not his owne already. That his dominion lasteth vnto all ages, and extendeth vnto all creatures, and his presence filleth all places, so that, if we could ascend into heauen, he is there; if we should make our beds in hell, he is there; if we should take the wings of the morning, to flee from his presence, and dwell in the vsmost parts of the sea, euen there the hand of his power and prouidence would find vs out.
that his sentence and decrees are much more firme and irreuocable then those of the Medes and Persians, and his truth so inuiolable and vnchangeable, that what hee hath spoken cannot bee disanulled, but shall surely be accomplished. That he is so omnipotent in power, that all the creatures in heauen and earth cannot resist his will. That hee is a God that hateth iniquitie, and is a consuming fire to burne vp impenitent sinners as stubble, in which regard it is a fearefull thing to fall into the hands of this iust, true, powerfull, and euerliuing God.
Finally, let vs consider, that hee who looketh vpon vs, and standeth by vs, is infinitely good and gracious, our deare Father in Iesus Christ, who hath bestowed on vs all the benefits which wee enioy in present possession and future hope; and therefore, that it is great impietie and foule shame, to abuse such infinite mercie and inestimable benefits, by neglecting his eye and presence, and sleeping through carnall securitie quietly in our sinnes, without any desire to come out of them by vnfaigned repentance. And if thus considering and meditating on Gods nature and attributes, we set him continually before our eyes, and ourselues and all our actions in his presence, it is not possible that there

there should be any place to lodge securitie in our hearts. For if the eye of the louing and wise Father, of the iust Iudge and soveraigne King, doe make Children and Subjects to shake off securitie, and to carrie themselves in their presence with awfull reuerence, and with a desire to approue their words and workes vnto them; how much more shall we thus doe, if we continually set God before vs, the King of Kings, the supreme Iudge of men and Angels, and our most gracious Father in Iesus Christ?

The third meanes is to cast off all selfe-confidence, and opinion of our owne wisdom and strength, as being altogether insufficient to preserve vs from the least dangers. Which that wee may doe, let vs consider, that we are neuer neerer falling, then when we rest vpon the broken staffe of our owne strength; and neuer further from it, then when vtterly despayring of all our owne abilities, we cast these brittle reeds out of our hands, which doe but trouble vs and hinder our hold, and releye our selues vpon the Lord, the sure and neuer fayling pillar of our strength. And this we see in the example of Dauid, who in the strength of his prosperitie growing confident, that hee could not be moued, was presently troubled and foiled: But when finding his foot to slip, he despaired of standing in his owne strength, then the mercie of the Lord did hold him vp. But especially, let vs wholly denie and reiect our owne worth and merits, the opinion our good natures, good meanings, and intentions; yea, of the strength of our spirituall graces, as though they were sufficient to deserue Gods protection, or to vphold and defend vs against all perils. For this maketh vs much the lesse to respect God and reuerence his holy Maiestie, and to sleepe more deadly in our carnall securitie, when wee lodge in the castle of our owne strength and abilities, and haue the keyes of our safetie and protection in our owne keeping. Whereas if we see and acknowledge our owne insufficiencie, our want of wisdom and power to keepe vs from any danger, and defend vs against tentations; our frailty to fall into sinne, and inability to any good actions; our pronenesse to fall into perils, and want of power to recouer out of them; our vnworthinesse of Gods least fauour, and worthinesse of his greatest Iudgements: this would make vs to shake off all securitie, and so worke out our saluation with feare and trembling, as the Apostle exhorteth; because of our selues, wee are able to doe nothing, but it is God onely which worketh in vs both to will and to doe, of his good pleasure. This would keepe vs from being secure, as though we were possessed of all we desire, and were alreadie perfect; and make vs with the Apostle, to forget those things which are behind, and to reach forth vnto those things which are before, and with all our care and endeauour, to presse toward the marke for the price of the high calling of God in Christ Iesus; lest, hauing the promise of the garland of blessednesse, through our sloth and securitie, wee come short of it, as the Apostle speaketh.

But much more effectually would it be for the shaking off this carnall securitie, if wee would weaken our selfe-confidence by our often con-

¶ 3.
The third meanes is, to cast off all selfe confidence.

Psal. 30. 6, 7.

Psal. 94. 18.

Phil. 3. 12, 13.

Phil. 3. 12, 13, 14.

Heb. 4. 1.

¶ 4.
That it is a notable meanes to weaken self-confidence, if wee consider the strength of our spirituall enemies.

sideration not onely of our trailetie and weakenesse, which make vs prone to fall in the least trials and tentations, but also of our many and mightie, politike and most malicious enemies, who incessantly assault vs, and will easily get the victorie, if the Lord, for a iust punishment of our selfe confidence, leaue vs to our selues; or if wee securely neglect to stand vpon our guard, to fight against that in the power of Gods might, and to keepe the Christian armour still, buckled vnto vs. For wee can bee no more readie to giue them aduantage, then they to take it, and to make the most spitefull vse of it for our ouerthrow; we can be no more feeble to stand, then they strong and malicious to cast vs downe, and to tread vs vnder foot when they haue gotten vs at their cruell mercie. Yea, let vs consider this humane frailtie not onely in our selues, and the strength and malice of our enemies in their assaults against vs; but in those who haue gone before vs, who haue farre exceeded vs in grace and spirituall strength, and yet haue beene fearefully foyled, by giuing them aduantage through their securitie, as of Noah, Lot, David, Peter, and many others. And so may we easily conclude, that wee, who are weake and fresh-water Souldiers, haue little reason to be secure, when the Lords greatest Worthies haue through the might and malice of their enemies, and their owne heedlesse recciued such foiles; and that wee poore shrubs may easily be troden vnder the feet of these Wolves and Lions; when such tall Cedars could not stand before them. Whereby wee shall not onely bee made more warie and watchfull ouer our footing by the example of their slips; but also distrusting in our owne strength, we shall rest with full affiance vpon Gods gracious power and promises, who is alone sufficient to preserue vs in these dangers. Finally, adde to the power and malice, the diligence and watchfulnesse of our spirituall enemies; for Sathan (as hee confesseth) exerciseth himselfe in compassing the earth to and fro, that he may spie out his best opportunities to doe vs mischief. And the Apostle perswadeth vs to sobrietie and watchfulnesse by this argument, because our aduersarie the Deuill goeth about continually like a roaring Lion seeing whom he may deuoure. And therefore if this great Fowler still watcheth to catch vs in the nets of destruction, much more should wee watch for our preseruation, that we may escape them; if hee layeth snares and grinneth to entrappe vs in euery place, at home and abroad, in our beds, and at our tables, in our recreations, and the labours of our callings, yea in our most holy exercises, hearing, reading, praying, what place is there for securitie, if we haue any desire to escape them, and to be kept from falling into ruine? If this great thiefe watch to breake in into the houses of our hearts, and to rob vs of the treasures of spirituall grace, and lead vs captiue vnto sinne: O why should wee giue place to securitie in the midst of these desperate dangers, and not rather stand vpon our watch, that we may preuent them? yea, seeing wee are apt to slumber and sleepe, why should wee trust to our owne watchfulnesse, and not rather put our whole affiance in the great Watch.

Job 1.7.

1.Pet.5.8.

Math.24.43.

Watchman of Israel, desiring him continually to watch ouer vs, and when we are readie to slumber in securitie, to awaken vs out of it by his Word and Spirit, lest wee sleepe the sleepe of death, and become a prey to our spirituall enemies.

The fourth meanes is, that we abuse not our prosperitie to the nourishing of our securitie, nor suffer our selues to be abused by it; but if God send it, that we make such holy and right vse of it, as that it may encrease in vs the true feare of God, and make vs more diligent and spirituall watchfull vnto all religious and honest duties. And to this end let vs not suffer our iudgements to be blinded with a false conceit, that it is an infallible signe of Gods loue, and that therefore because we enioy it, we are highly in his fauour, and consequently out of the gun-shot of any either present or future danger, so as wee may be secure and feare nothing. For these worldly things are but of an indifferent nature in respect of their vse; good or euill, as they are well or ill vsed, and no sure testimonies of Gods loue, seeing these outward things happen alike to all, as the Wise-man speaketh. Yea, in regard that (by reason of our corruption) they are seldome well vsed, but contrariwise abused to sinne, forgetfulnesse of God, pride, ambition, couetousnesse, and many other vices; therefore the Lord ordinarily bestoweth them in greatest abundance vpon wicked men, as Turkes, Infidels, and carnall Christians, that surfeiting of their plentie (as the Psalmist speaketh) their Table may become a snare; and giueth them to his best and dearest children with a sparing hand; or if liberally, yet hee seasoneth and tempereth them with many crosses and afflictions, that their hearts may not be too much set vpon them. Which being rightly considered, our prosperitie will not nourish securitie, but rather feare, lest we should be in the greatest and worst number. Secondly, let not our hearts trust in these earthly things, wisdom, strength, riches, friends, or any other thing, wherein men place their worldly happinesse, and so bee secure, as though they could free vs from all danger; for these earthly things are weake and vaine, vnable to helpe vs in time of trouble, and momentany and mutable, readie to forsake and leaue vs when we most relye vpon them, or though they could do vs some pleasure, in being meanes of our freedom from small perils; yet they will nothing profit vs, if we liue securely in our sinnes for the appealing of Gods wrath, or satisfying his iustice; they will doe vs no good when wee shall most need it, namely at the day of death, or the day of Iudgement. Lastly, let vs consider that these worldly benefits are not absolutely bestowed on vs, to doe with them what we list, but are the Lords Talents, entrusted vnto vs, as his Stewards, to be employed for our Masters aduantage, and good of our Fellow-seruants. So that the more wee haue receiued, the more wee are indebted, and the greater account we haue to make at the day of Iudgement, and to sustaine the greater condemnation if we haue wasted our Masters goods, and so come short in our reckonings. In which respect our great prosperitie should not nourish in vs pride and securitie,

p. 5.
The third reme-die, is to vse well our pro-peritie,

Eccle. 9. 1. 24

p. 6.

The first reme-die is to shun customable
sinning.

*Omne peccatum vile est consue-tudine, & fit ho-mini quasi nul-
lum. Aug. in aduent. Dom. ser. 4.
c. 10.*

Esa. 11. 3.

Heb. 3. 13.

p. 7.

The first reme-die is to make precious account of Gods grace and forbearance.

securitie, but rather humilitie and feare, care and watchfulnesse, that wee may so take the present comforts of these worldly blessings, as that they may not hinder but rather further vs, to the euerlasting fruition of heavenly happinesse.

The first meanes to auoide carnall securitie, is to shunne customable sinne, and howsoeuer through infirmitie wee sometime slippe into it, yet let vs take heed we doe not choose it for our common way, and by much vse and often acting of it, make it as familiar as if it were our ordinarie Trade and Occupation. For custome of sinning doth take away all sense of sinne, and whereas at the first it seemed notorious and hainous, and therefore affrighted the conscience with guilt and horreur, after that men haue often committed it, it seemeth little or nothing, and therefore they continue in it without feare. So those that are often flesht in bloud and crueltie, make no more account of killing a man, then of killing a beast: those that inure their tongues to oathes and blasphemies, vent them as securely and without feare, as yea and nay; they that haue often stolen their neighbours goods, could as securely continue their theft, as other men their Trades and Occupations, were they not endangered hereby to humane lawes. And in a word, sinners of all kinds, by much custome in sinning, doe make this deadly Serpent so tame, that they dare without feare put it into their bosomes. And by iniuring themselves to drinke of this mortall poison by degrees, they make it so familiar to their stomackes, that they are not sensible of any hurt it doth them. Yea, by much acquaintance, sinne (which at first terrified the conscience like an enemy) becommeth their play-fellow, and they account it but a recreation of their youth, and euen a sport to doe euill; herein like through their impietie, vnto little children in their simplicitie, who securely play at the Cockatrice hole, as the Prophet speaketh to another purpose. In which regard, let vs carefully take heed, that wee be not hardened with the deceitfulnesse of sinne: which, though it bee a malicious enemy, by much conuersing with vs, will so insinuate, that wee shall securely entertaine it as a welcome Guest. Let vs in respect of our great frailtie, take occasion by our former falls to become more carefull and fearefull, that we doe not fall againe, auoiding all meanes of sinne which draw and entice vs to it; or if we be overtaken, let vs not lye in it still, lest we fall into this sleepe of securitie, but let vs rise out of it presently by renewed repentance. And as soone as wee feele our selfe stung with this poisonous Viper, let vs without delay applye the Antidotes and remedies which are fit to cure the wound; for else this poison will disperse it into all the parts of our heart and soule, and so bring vs into this deadly sleepe of carnall securitie, in which we shall perish without sense or feeling.

The first meanes is, that we make precious account of Gods grace and forbearance; his patience and long suffering, and labour to haue our hearts so affected with them, as that they may bee wrought to Gods loue and feare, whereby we shall be made carefull and watchfull, that that we doe not displease this gracious and good God, who so loueth vs, and whom we so loue; or if through frailtie wee haue incurred his displeasure, that we doe with vnwearied diligence seeke his face and fauour by renewing our repentance. For we may be assured that wee shall not lose our labour, seeing he is so patient and slow to wrath, that he will receiue vs to grace if we turne vnto him. And contrariwise, let vs take heed of abusing this patience and long-suffering of God; by taking occasion and encouragement thereby to continue impenitently in our sinnes; seeing hereby wee shall become so secure and hardhearted in our sinfull courses, that whereas before we refused or delayed to repent, now repentance will refuse vs, so as either it will neuer come into our thoughts, or else not be able to pierce into our hearts, they will be so hardened through Gods righteous Iudgement for our grosse abuse of his grace and goodnesse.

The seuenth meanes is, carefully to take heed that we doe not presumptuously abuse Gods mercies, as an occasion and encouragement vnto sinne, but contrariwise, feare and reuerence him the more, by how much we find him more louing and gracious, according to that of the Psalmist; There is forgiveness with thee, that thou mayest be feared. For there is nothing more that doth beget and nourish this carnall securitie (as the miserable experience of former Ages and our owne times doth lamentably prooue) then this conceit, that God is so mercifull, that he will pardon all our sinnes, whensoever we turne from them by repentance, although it bee euen at the houre of our death. And consequently, nothing would more weaken and cause it to languish, then if we plucke this weapon from it, and turne the edge and point of it against it selfe; taking occasion thereby the more to loue God who is so gracious, and out of this loue the more to feare his displeasure. To which end let vs alwaies consider that the Lord is no lesse infinite in iustice then in mercie, and that he is as readie to glorifie himselfe in manifesting the one by punishing of presumptuous and impenitent sinners, as the other in sparing and forgiuing those that turne vnto him by vnfeined repentance. That those whom he cannot allure and draw vnto him with the hand of his mercie, hee will thrust from him with the hand of his iustice; and that the greater mercie he hath shewed to moue vs to repentance, the more fearefull iudgements will he inflict vpon vs if we neglect it through our carnall securitie; and because wee haue not onely wilfully wounded our soules with sinne, but also haue despised our heavenly Chyrurgeon by casting away the plaisters which hee hath applied for our cure, hee will let vs rot in our corruptions, laugh at our destruction, and mocke when our feare cometh.

The eighth meanes is, that wee diligently vse the meanes of saluation, seeing they are also the meanes of implanting the feare of God in our hearts, and so remoouing and rooting out of this carnall securitie. As first the carefull and conscionable hearing of the Word, which is that Plow and Harrow that breaketh vp the fallow grounds

Rom. 2.4.5.

¶ 8.
The seuenth
remedie is to shunne presumption.
Psal. 130.4.

Asa. 22.17.
Prov. 1.24.26.

¶ 9.
The eighth remedie is to vse carefully the meanes of sal-uation.
Ier. 3.4.

of

1st. 23. 29.

Matth. 24. 42.

Mar. 13. 33.

Luk. 12. 35, 36.

Eph. 5. 14.

Rom. 13. 11, 12.

1. Theff. 5. 6.

1. Cor. 10. 12.

Phil. 2. 12.

Heb. 3. 12, 13.

2. Kings 22. 10.

of our hearts, and that bruise and maketh them contrite, so as they are fit to receiue the seeds of all spirituall graces; that Hammer which breaketh these rockes in pieces, and that Fire which melteth and dissolueth those mettals that cannot be broken, as Ieremie speaketh: and finally that Sword of the Spirit which giueth a deadly wound to carnall securitie, whilst it layeth open the hainousnesse of sinne, the wrath of God, and curse of the law due vnto it, the rewards promised vnto those who feare the Lord, and the punishments denounced against those who liue in their securitie, both in this life and the life to come. Neither is it possible that we should long sleepe in carnall securitie, if we leaue our eares open to receiue the voyce of these sonnes of thunder speaking vnto vs. Especially, let vs withall diligence hearken vnto those admonitions and exhortations which are purposely vsed by the holy Ghost, to rouse vs vp out of this sleepe of securitie. As that admonition of our Sauour. Watch therefore, for yee know not what houre your Lord doth come. And againe, Take yee heed, watch and pray, for yee know not when the time is. Let your loynes be girded about, and your lights burning; and yee your selues like vnto them that wait for their Lord, when he shall retorne from the wedding, that when he cometh and knocketh, yee may open vnto him immediatly. Blessed are those Seruants, whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching. So let vs hearken vnto, and with all care meditate vpon those admonitions and exhortations of the Apostles. Awake thou that sleepest, and stand vp from the dead, and Christ shall giue thee light. It is now high time to awake from sleepe, for now is our saluation nearer then when wee beleueed. The night is farre spent, and the day is at hand; let vs therefore cast off the workes of darkenesse, and let vs put on the armour of light. Let vs not sleepe as doe others, but let watch and be sober. He that thinketh he standeth, let him take heed lest hee fall. Worke out your saluation with feare and trembling. Take heed lest there be in any of you an euill heart of unbelieve, in departing from the liuing God. But exhort one another daily, whilst it is called to day, lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sinne. Be sober, be vigilant, because your aduersarie the Devil, as a roaring Lion, walketh about seeking whom he may deuoure. So also meditating in Gods law, which in it selfe is sufficient to cause our hearts to melt, like the heart of Iosias, with true compunction and contrition, so as the frozen dregs of securitie can haue no harbour; and in the Gospell, which will implant in them the feare of God arising out of faith and loue. To this purpose serueth also the often receiuing of the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, whilst labouring to come prepared, that we may receiue it to life and saluation, and not to iudgement and condemnation, it giueth vs occasion to examine our estate, and to call our selues to a strict account before Gods Tribunal, and to renew our couenant with him by renewing the condition of faith and repentance. And finally, holy conferences whereby wee stirre vp Gods graces in one another, keepe and vphold them from falling, and raise them vp being fallen, exuscitate and re-enline the gifts of Gods

Gods Spirit, which are readie to be cooled and quenched; and by mutuall exhortations preserue one another, that wee bee not hardened through the deceitfulnesse of sinne.

Heb. 3. 13.

The ninth meanes is, that we receiue the Word with faith, without which it cannot profit vs for the shaking off this carnall securitie. For, as vngracious Children and Seruants proceed in their euill courses, though they heare their Parents and Gouvernours encouraging them to obedience by many promises, and indeauouring to terrifie them by threatning punishment, if they giue no credite to their word; so vnlesse we belecue Gods gracious promises, made to those that feare him, and his threatnings against those who securely neglect him, his mercies and judgements; wee will neither entertaine this feare, nor banish securitie out of our hearts. Whereas contrariwise, if wee giue credite to the things wee heare, namely, that there is a iust God who beholdeth all our workes, who will call all that we doe to judgement, euen our vnknowne actions and secret thoughts, either to crowne them with euerlasting rewards, or to punish them with intolerable and endlesse torments, it is not possible that we should be secure. For if no man can liue in securitie who is perswaded, that being liable to the Law, his necke is daily in danger of the halter, or that a sword hangeth ouer his head in a weake thread; though these are but temporall euils, which when they haue done their worst, doe but hasten that death, with nature would bring vnto vs, with a little slower pace; much lesse could they bee secure, if they thought themselves indeed endangered to hellish torments, and euerlasting death, and condemnation.

¶ 10.
The ninth remedie is, to heare the Word with faith.

The tenth meanes is, that we doe applie vnto our selues the Word which we heare, and not, if we dislike it, shift it off from our selues to others; saying vnto our soules, when wee heare reproofes, this is my sinne which is reprooued, seeing I haue either committed it, or hauing the seeds of it in me, may bring forth the fruits of it in outward act, if God by his Word and holy Spirit nippe and restraîne them not. This admonition belongeth vnto me, and I will take warning and grow wiser, and more watchfull by it. This instruction is mine, for my better direction in auoyding sinne, and embracing godlinesse; and this judgement threatned will light vpon me, if I securely goe on in my sinnes, and doe not preuent it by vnfeigned repentance. For, as our meat will not nourish vs, if we giue it to be eaten by others, nor our clothes keepe vs warme, vnlesse wee put them on, nor medicines and salues cure our sicknesses and sores, vnlesse they be taken and applied; no more will this food and phyicke of our soules doe vs any good, if we put it off vnto others, and doe not make it our owne by application.

¶ 11.
The tenth remedie is, to applie the Word vnto ourselues.

The eleuenth meanes is, that we doe not make the Word vnprofitable by misapplying it, as when we arrogate vnto our selues the gracious promises of the Gospell, not performing the condition of faith and repentance; but that wee learne rightly to applie it as our state and ¶ 12.

The eleuenth remedie is, not to misapplie the promises.

and condition duely examined and considered doth require. As wee must applie vnto our selues the threatnings of the Law, reprehensions and admonitions, when we find that we securely goe on in our sinnes, and the comforts of the Gospell, when as we find and feele the weight of our sinnes, and are truly humbled vnder the burthen of them. O-therwise the Word will haue the same effects that physicke and salues haue being misapplied, as cordials to a strong bodie nor well purged from grosse humours, and strong medicines to a weake and feeble Patient; healing plaisters applied to festred sores, which haue more need of the lancer and strong corrasiuues, and these to small and greene hurts that would be healed with some gentle salue; that is, it will cast those who are dejected and hopelesse into deepe despaire, and make the presumptuous and hard-hearted the more retchlesse and secure.

Finally, it is a speciall meanes to be preserued from securitie, when as taking no pleasure in being soothed and flattered in all our courtes, especially by our Teachers and Guides, we doe affect and submit our selues vnto a faithfull Ministerie, who will tell vs plainly of our sinnes, and rouze vs vp by their exhortations and rebukes, when as wee are readie to lie and sleepe in them through carnall securitie. And this was Dauids choise, who desired not to eate of the Wickedes dainties; but (sayth he) let the righteous smite me, and it shall be a kindnesse; and let him reprove me, it shall be an excellent oyle, which shall not breake my head. So Salomon: Open rebuke is better then secret loue, and the wounds of a friend, because they are faithfull, are better then the kisses of an enemy, which are deceitfull. For, wee are naturally blinded with selfeloue, which hideth and extenuateth our sinnes, and causeth vs to continue in them without feare, making vs beleue that all is well: but a faithfull Minister will put off these fig-leaues, and pulling off the maske of vaine pretences and excuses, will lay them naked before vs, so as we may see their vgly deformitie. And when wee are readie to sleepe in them through carnall securitie, they being our spirituall Watch-men appointed by God to watch ouer our soules, will awaken vs out of our slumber, by sounding in our eares the threatnings of the Law against the impenitent and secure, and the promises of the Gospell to those who acknowledging their sinnes, doe rise out of them, and forsake them by vnfeined repentance.

Psal. 141. 5.

Pro. 25. 5, 6.

CHAP. XI.

Wherein are set downe diuers other remedies whereby we may be preserued from carnall securitie.

p. I.
The first reme-die is, to withstand securitie in the first degrees of it.

Esides those meanes of preseruing and deliuering vs from carnall securitie by remoouing the causes of it, of which I haue entreated in the former Chapter; there are diuers others remaying, which are now to be spoken of. And first, if we would auoid securitie and hardnesse of heart in the highest degrees, we must shunne the first beginnings of it, and and carefully foresee and feare it long before it comes. For then wee may prevent it, by vsing those good meanes, which are fit for this purpose, of which I haue spoken in part, and shall more fully handle them in the following discourse. But if it haue once seized vpon vs, then it will be too late, by any thing that our selues can doe to come out of it, because it taketh away all spirituall sense and feeling, so as wee shall haue neither will nor power to vse any meanes to bee freed from it. Wee must with all care and prouidence hunt this Viper, that it may not come neere vs, or presently apply remedies as soone as wee are stung, seeing it will bee too late when as the poyson hath ouer-spread our soules, and hath made vs to bee altogether stupid and senselesse. It is the sleepe of the soule, and therefore it will bee too late to come out of it, when we are fallen deeply into it, seeing it deprieth vs of the vse of our spirituall senses, so as we know not our estate, but rather dreame that we are waking, and exercised in such duties as God requireth; but as soone as we feele it approaching by our stretching and yawning, when we are about good duties, our coldnesse and dulnes, our slacknes and negligence in holy exercises, which we haue formerly performed with pleasure and cheerfulness; or when we are falling into a slumber, and (as it were) nod in our sinceritie and zeale, so as we haue some sense of our estate, and are so much waking, as that we know that we are readie to sleepe; so as we may say with the Spouse in the Canticles; I sleepe, but my heart waketh; and are able to heare the voyce of our Bridegroom, Christ calling vnto vs in his Ordinances; Open vnto mee my Sister, my Lone, my Dove, then let vs not giue way to sloth, but presently start vp and shake off this drowsinesse, and vse all good meanes that we be not ouer-taken of it. Yea, it is the Lethargie of the soule, and therefore must be prevented before it approacheth; for after it hath seized vpon vs, it taketh away all sense and feeling, and so benummeth and deaddeth all the spirituall faculties, that the partie is not onely vnable and vnwilling to helpe himselve, but is also scarce recoverable by all meanes that can bee vsed by the most skilfull Physicians. In which regard the faithfull doe feare this disease of carnall securitie more, then any outward afflictions; yea, then any other sicknesse of sinne, because it is scarce capable of any meanes whereby it may bee cured. And they who feare it not, nor vse any meanes to preserue themselves from this dreadfull and deadly Lethargie, doe evidently shew, that it hath already seized on them, and brought them past sense and apprehension of the danger. To which purpose Bernard speaketh excellently. Doe not (saith he) ouer-much inquire after this hardnesse of heart, to know what it is. For if thou fearest it not, thine heart is such an one; for it is onely the hard heart which is void of feare; and hath no feeling of it owne hardnesse. But those that most feare it are farthest from it, seeing they vse all their care and best indeauour, in the vse of all good meanes, whereby they may bee preserued from so great an euill; and thinke it not enough to fight against it, when it appeareth in

H

it

Nec pergas quere quid illud sit, si non expauescit, si tunc hoc est. Solum est cor durum quod seipsum non exhorret, quia nec sentit. Ad Eugenium lib. 1.

Heb. 3. 13.

*Plaga recens dolore non caret ;
neque enim iam
occlusit vulnus
nec in tam breui versum in insensibile est. Berni.
ad Eugen. lib. 1.*

¶ 2.
The second remedie is, to nourish in our hearts the true feare of God.

it height and strength, or rather appeareth not vnto them because it is so; but will auoid all occasions, and withstand and ouer-come this mischief in its first beginnings and least degrees. Neither doth this euill seaze vpon vs all at once in its full growth and greatnesse, but stealth and creepeth vpon vs by degrees; as the Apostle intimateth, where he exhorteth vs to take heed, lest we be hardened through the deceitfulness of sinne. And as the hand doth not at first get a callum and brawnie hardnesse, but by much labour and exercise it groweth vpon it by little and little: so this thicke skin of carnall securitie, doth not at first ouer-grow the heart, but increaseth by degrees, by often sinning and much sloth and negligence. Wee doe not at first fall into a dead sleepe, but by degrees it commeth on vs; first we are drowisie and sluggish, we reach and stretch, and giue our selues to ease and rest, leauing off our bodily labour, and then wee slumber slightly, being not quite depriued of the vse of our senses, so that if a word be spoken we easily heare it and are awakned; and from slumbring wee fall to sleeping, which in the first entrance is more shallow, and afterwards more thoroughly seazeth on the senses, and so becommeth more deepe and dead: and thus it is with this spirituall sleepe of carnall securitie. It commeth not to the full depth at the beginning; But first wee become drowisie and sluggish in holy duties, we are soone wearied when we set our selues about them, and long to haue them ended; then wee giue our selues to carnall ease and begin to neglect them altogether, or to performe them coldly and formally, as though wee were neither waking nor sleeping, but falling into a slumber; but euen then wee may be raysed and recovered, if God in his Word doe rowze vs vp, and teach vs the meanes whereby we may shake off our sloth. Which if we neglect to heare, either by absenting our selues or by carelesse contempt, then from slumbring wee fall to sleeping; and from shallow sleepe, to sleepe so deeply and soundly, that wee cannot heare Gods Ministers and Watch-men, though they lift vp their voyces like a Trumpet, to tell vs of our sinnes, and by sounding a lowd alarme, doe giue vs warning of a whole Armie of approaching euills. A greene wound (as one saith) is not without sense of payne, nor is it presently full of dead flesh, and gangrened so as it is quite past all feeling; and so these wounds of sinne are not insensible at the first, but are made to be so in time, when the meanes are neglected, whereby they might be cured. And let vs follow the same course for the healing of our soules, which we take for helping of our bodily diseases, that is, preuent them if we can, before they come, by our care and prouidence, or if they haue tainted vs at vnawares, let vs withstand them in their first beginnings; and set vpon them in their weaknesse, before they are settled, and so shall we get an easie victorie.

The second meanes is, that wee nourish in our hearts the feare of God, which is the Antidote that expelleth the poyson of carnall securitie; and considering our great frailtie, and the might and multitude, malice and policy of our spirituall Enemies, let let vs follow the counsaile of the Apostle, and worke out our saluation with feare and trembling; assuring our selues that as our state is blessed, when wee nourish this feare, so it is fearefull, when as our hearts are hardned with carnall securitie. For as wee are neuer further from falling, then when fearing that wee may fall, wee doe with all care and watchfulnesse looke to our footing; so we are neuer neerer to be overtaken with euill, then when thinking it farthest off, we feare no danger, nor vse any meanes whereby wee may preuent it; according to the saying of the wise Man; Blessed is the man that feareth alwayes; but hee that hardneth his heart shall fall into mischief. For this feare will cause vs to keepe a narrow watch ouer our hearts, that they doe not entertayne, as other sinnes, so especially this carnall securitie, which will make way for all the rest, yea, and cherish and strengthen them after they are entred, so as they will neuer depart nor bee thrust out till this securitie bee expelled with them. It will set before vs the examples of Gods chiefest Worthies, which haue beene assaulted and foyled with this vice; and therefore inforce our greater care and watchfulnesse, seeing wee who are weake and feeble in comparison of them, may much more easily be surprized, if wee doe not continually expect the approach of it, and so with all diligence arme our selues against it.

Phil. 2. 12.

Pro. 28. 14.

The third meanes is, that we make great account of a soft and relenting heart and tender conscience, when wee haue them, which will make vs tremble at the hearing of Gods Word, and euen melt like the heart of Iosias, and strict and scrupulous in auoyding all appearance of euill. To which end we must thin all causes and occasions of sinne, as well as the sinne it selfe. Especially let vs auoid, as much as may be, the companie of such as are hard hearted and carnally secure, who are apt to infect vs with their contagion. For as bodily drowsinesse goeth from one to another, and when wee see our Companion yawne we are readie to yawne also, being infected with his sluggishnesse; and the long fetching of his breath that sleepeth, is a meanes to draw sleepe on others that lye with him: so is this sloth of securitie alike contagious. Wee see that those who are fearefull and cowardly, are much emboldned to affront dangers, when being in the companie of such as are vndanted and desperate, they see them often escape many perills, into which they haue rashly aduentured and thrust themselves; and so doth it make those that are fearefull to commit sinne, in respect of the manifold euills that doe accompanie it, to become more bold and aduenturous to run into it, and more secure and carelesse after it is committed, when wee haue before our eyes, the examples of those who daily commit greater sinnes with greater securitie, because for the present they liue in impunitie, and are not by God called to a reckoning. Againe, if we would preserue our hearts and consciences soft and tender, we must walke with God, and set our selues in his presence, as Enoch did; and so shall wee make scruple not onely of open and manifest, but of secret and vnknowne sinnes, because he being al-

p. 3.

The third remedie is, to make great account of a soft and relenting heart.

wayes present, they are seene and knowne of him. Not onely of such sinnes as are great and haynous, but euen of the least and first degrees of wickednesse; thinking no sinne small which will lesse those sweet ioyes and comforts we haue in our communion with God, and change his gracious smiles and influences of his fauour, into an angric and frowning countenance. For if we doe without feare fall often into lesser sinnes, we shall in a while liue securely in those which are greater; and as Sheepe and lesser Cattle, though lighter of body, yet by their multitude trample a path-way, as soone as greater and heauier beasts, that come more seldome and in lesser droues; so will these lesser and lighter sinnes, in respect of their multitude and often hapning, harden the heart and cause it to become like a beaten path, vnfit to receiue the seed of Gods Word, or to bring forth any fruits of godlinesse. Finally, wee must attentiuely harken to the voyce of conscience, when it checketh vs for sinne, or approueth vs for well-doing; restrayneth vs from euill, or inciteth vs to good; and not suffer the voyce thereof to be drowned with the clamour of our lusts, which will make it wearie of speaking and admonishing, when it admonisheth and speaketh in vaine, and willing to let vs goe on securely in our courses, seeing wee refuse to take counsaile and direction from it. And we must take heed of knowne and voluntarie sinnes which wound the conscience, and being often reiterated make it seared and benumbed, and casteth it (as it were) into a trance, in which it hath no sense and feeling. For if this bee our case, needs must wee sleepe in deepe securitie, when as our Watch-man sleepeth, that should awake vs; needs must we, like desperate Malefactors, be without feare of Law and punishment, when wee see no witnesse to giue euidence against vs. Our care therefore must bee, that wee may auoid this fearefull estate, to keepe the conscience pure from the defilements of sinne, or if it bee defiled to purge it presently by renewing our faith and repentance. To preserue it in as much life and sense as wee can, or if wee perceiue that it beginneth to grow stupid and benumbed, we must quicken and stirre it vp by meditating in the Law, and by summoning it often to giue an account, before the supreme Iudge, of its neglect of dutie, and deadnesse and backwardnesse in giuing euidence.

¶ 4.
The fourth remedie is, examination of our estate. •
Psal. 4. 4. 119.
59.

The fourth meanes is, that wee often and seriously examine our estate in the Audit of conscience, and as in Gods presence, how it standeth betweene him and vs, and whether it thriue and groweth better, or decayeth and waxeth worse in spirituall graces, and in the practise of Christian and holy duties. As whether sinne and corruption increaseth in strength, or whether it is daily more and more mortified and subdued in vs. Whether wee profit or thriue in our spirituall growth, by the meanes of our saluation, and the vse of Gods holy Ordinances, and waxe richer in all spirituall graces, or whether we spend of the stocke and grow more faint and poore in them. With what appetite we feed on the food of our soules, and how wee are strengthened and increased thereby in knowledge, faith, affiance, loue and the feare of

of God, and with what alacritie and cheerfulness we serue God in all holy duties. Whether wee get or lose ground in the spirituall Warfare, or haue the better, or goe by the worst in the conflict of tentations against the Enemies of our saluation. Whether wee goe forward, or backward, or stand at a stay, in our owne conceit, in the spirituall Race; and whether we be in such an estate, as that we could be content to heare our last summons, to giue an account of our Stewardship before Gods Tribunall. How wee haue and doe spend and imploy his Talents committed to our keeping, whether to the honour or dishonour of our Lord and Master, and the profit or hurt of our fellow seruants; and whether wee in these respects keepe our accounts so euen, as that we are daily readie to giue vp our reckoning, if our great Lord and Soueraigne doe call vs to it. And if we exercise our selues much and often in such trialls and examinations, wee shall daily grow in Gods feare, and leaue no place in our hearts for carnall securitie to lodge in; wee shall like those that doe often looke their faces in the glasse, keepe our soules and consciences from these sinfull spots, and from being besmeared and ouer-growne with this dirt and filth of carnall securitie; and like good Factors, wee shall become warie and carefull in managing our Masters businesse, if with them wee often looke vpon our Bookes of account, and summe vp our reckonings betweene him and vs. But if with the Elephant being guiltie of our owne foulness and deformities, we shun drinking in such cleere waters as will discouer them vnto vs; if (like Helen in her age) wee will not looke our faces in the glasse of Gods Law, because we would not see our spirituall wrinkles; if like vnthrifs and banke-rupts, we will keepe no Bookes of reckoning, or if we haue any, doe cast them into the furthest corner of our memorie, and seldome or neuer looke vpon them; then may wee well keepe our consciences spotted, and our hearts defiled, and our liues vnreformed, and bee vtterly ruined in our spirituall estate, and yet continue long in this miserable condition with much securitie.

The fift meanes is, that wee much esteeme the priuate admonitions and reprehensions of our godly and faithfull friends. For in nothing more then this, is the saying of the wise Man verified; Two are better then one, for if they fall, the one will helpe vp his fellow: but woe to him that is alone when hee falleth; for hee hath not another to helpe him vp. When men are apt through their drowsie sloth to neglect their waightie businesse, or to forslow their iourney by ouer-sleeping themselves, they hold it a great kindness in those that will awaken them, and call them vp betimes, though it bee not pleasant for the instant to be broken of their sleepe. But what businesse so waightie, as to make our election and calling sure? what iourney more important then to trauaile towards our heavenly Countrey? and wherein are wee more sluggish and apt to lose our best oportunities, by ouer-sleeping our selues in carnall securitie, if wee bee not rowzed vp and awakned with the admonitions, exhortations, and necessarie reproofes of our faith-

8. 5.
The fift reme-die is, to e-steeme much of priuate admonitions.
Eccles. 4. 9, 18.

full friends? Those that are falling into a Lethargie, being vnable to reſtrayne ſleeping, doe thinke themſelues beholding after their recouerie to ſuch about them, as by their pricking and nipping them, haue kept them waking, though it may bee for the preſent, it was a thankleſſe office, being ſo diſtaſtefull to their humour and appetite; but we are prone to fall into this ſpirituall Lethargie of carnall ſecuritie, which is more dangerous and pernicious then ten thouſand bodily deathes; and therefore by ſo much more are wee to eſteeme the kind office of ſuch a faithfull friend, who by the nips and pricks of admonitions and reproofes, doth keepe vs from falling or continuing in this ſleepe of death. When our bodily fores begin to feſter at the bottome, and to breed dead fleſh, and when our bodies abound with hurtfull humours, we not onely voluntarily ſend for the Chyrurgeon and Phyſician, but thanke and reward them, though to our ſmart and payne, they vſe, to cure vs, corraſiues and ſtrong potions. And ſhall we not be as carefull for the recouerie of our ſoules, and as thankful to thoſe who vſe theſe good meanes to effect the cure, although they bee diſtaſtefull; yea, painfull and lothſome to our carnall ſenſe and appetite? But it is not enough that we highly eſteeme thoſe Chriſtian duties, for our ſpirituall good; if our friends bee not alſo willing to perſorme them. Now to an ingenuous nature, it is in this cure as painfull and vnpleaſant to bee the Phyſician as the Patient; to admoniſh and reprove our friends, as to heare them admoniſhing and reproouing vs; becauſe it ſauoureth of needleſſe curioſitie and cenſorious buſineſſe. And therefore it is neceſſarie for vs to vſe all good meanes, to moue one another to the performance of this dutie. And this wee ſhall doe if wee perſorme it mutually as there is need on either ſide, and watch ouer one another by turnes, either partie being readie to awaken the other, when hee ſeeth him falling into this deadly ſleepe. For this libertie of loue being vſed on both ſides, will make both more willing, both to ſpeake and heare, provided that it bee not by way of reſeration, and by retorting the admonition at the ſame time; which ſauoureth of ſome ſpleene, and argueth a willingneſſe to requite, and a kind of impatiencie to be in debt, or by our faultineſſe to be obnoxious vnto our friend, vnleſſe he be as deeply engaged vnto vs. And ſecondly, if our friend bee miſtaken in vs, and we are able to excuſe and defend our innocency by a iuſt apologie; yet this muſt bee done ſo, as it may not giue any diſtaſte or diſcouragement vnto him, in performing the like dutie another time; not by harſh conteſtations, but with great mildneſſe and loue, thanking him much for his care in the generall, although it cauſeth an error in this particular. And to this end let vs remember that it was an error of loue, which as it is not ſuſpicious, and hideth a multitude of ſinnes, that they may not bee diſcouered to our hurt and ſhame; ſo it is ſometimes iealous when it commeth to play the part of the Chyrurgeon, and whileſt it ſearcheth our fores to the bottome, it may at vnawares goe ſomewhat too deepe and touch the quicke, fearing to leaue any of the dead fleſh or core behind.

The

The sixth meanes is, often to visite those who are afflicted, either outwardly in bodie and estate, or inwardly in mind; as those who are ruined in their estates, or haue lost their neereft and needfull friends, vpon whom they chiefly depended; or lie groning vpon the bed of sicknesse, or being afflicted and troubled in conscience in the sight and sense of their sinnes, doe pitifully complaine of their wretched and disconsolate condition. The which we are principally to doe in the time of our health, wealth and prosperitie, when as we are most apt to forget God and our selues, and so to be ouertaken of carnall securitie. For, we may vse such distressed soules as glasses, to represent vnto vs our owne condition, and as lively pictures, in which we may see resembled our owne frailtie and mortalitie. They may serue vnto vs as visible Lectures, teaching and calling to our remembrance, both our owne sinnes, whereby we haue deserued the like or greater punishments, the iustice of God, in his righteous iudgements, and our owne danger in respect of both, to be attached with the like or more grieuous afflictions, if we doe not make vse of these examples in others, and by waxing wiser by their harmes, doe not preuent them from falling on vs, by turning from our sinnes by vnfeined repentance. And as it is profitable for young Gallants that are giuen to wastfulness, to looke vpon such Vnthrifts as themselves, not in their ruffe and riot, when they are adored by Parasites, and seeme to carry the world with them in a string, for that will but make them the more secure in their wastfull courses; but when, hauing spent all, they haue lost all their credit and esteeme with their wealth, are forsaken of all their friends, censured for their prodigalitie, euen by those who for the time that the streames thereof did flow, did quench their thirst, and supplied their wants by sucking from them; finally cast into prison without hope of deliuerie, and not able to supplie themselves with the ordinarie necessities of food and apparell; seeing in them they may easily learne what will be the end of their iourney, if they hold on in the way of their excesse and prodigalitie: So is it behoofesfull for those who flourishing in worldly prosperitie, are readie to fall into the slumber of carnall securitie, to acquaint themselves with such pitifull objects, not onely that they may hereby be put in mind of the bountie of God towards them, who haue receiued, though not deserued better then these in affliction, and so may be mooued to be more thankfull vnto him, and more cheerfull in his seruice, being encouraged with the present pay of more liberall wages; but also considering that they are alike fraile, and all worldly things momentanie and mutable, they may not sleepe in securitie, but prepare themselves against the day of triall and tentation. In which regard the Wise-man sayth, that it is better to goe into the house of mourning, then the house of feasting; because that is the end of all men, and the living will lay it to his heart, namely, not onely to be mooued hereby to a worke of mercie, in mourning with those that mourne, and partaking with them in some of their griefe, that it may be easier when as wee beare a part of their burthen, euen

¶ 6.
The sixth reme-dic is, to visite those who are in affliction.

Eccl[esi] 7.2.

p. 7.
The seuenth
remedie is, to meditate on the tentations and sufferings
of Christ.

Eph. 6. 10, 11.

Luk. 22. 31.

Math. 10. 24, 25.
Ioh. 13. 16.

Rom. 8. 29.

Act. 14. 22.

2. Tim. 3. 12.
© 2. 12.

Heb. 12. 6, 8.

cuen as wee communicate vnto them some comfort and refrelhing; but also that vsing them wisely as examples whereby we may be warned to shake off securitie, and to enioy our present prosperitie with temperance and sobrietie.

The seuenth meanes is, to remember and meditate often on the tentations, afflictions, and sufferings of Christ. For what place is there for carnall securitie, if wee consider that the spirituall enemies of our saluation, durst set vpon Christ our Head, in whom there was no matter of corruption to worke vpon, and from whom they receiued so many foiles? If they spared not to cast their darts of tentations against this impregnable Fort and Pillar of strength; how much more against vs, who are but flesh and blood, and apt to be pierced, through our weakenesse and corruption? And if they presumed to cast their hellish wild-fire against him, whose pure nature it could not touch nor taint, but was presently extinguished, as if it had fallen into the sea; what are wee to expect, whose corruption like vnto touch-wood or tinder is easily set on fire? what assaults, what wounds and foiles, are we to feare if we be not alwaies prepared, strengthening our selues in the Lord, and in the power of his might, and keeping the Christian Armour close buckled vnto vs? Besides, meditation vpon Christs Passion and Sufferings is a notable meanes to preserue vs from securitie. For if Gods Iustice be so exact, and if his most pure nature so abhorred sinne, that he punished it thus seuerely in his onely begotten and dearely beloued Sonne; how shall wee escape, if by a liuely faith wee be not vnited vnto Christ, and so made partakers of his satisfaction and obedience, bringing forth the fruits of this faith in hearty repentance and amendment of life? Againe, if Chsist our Head were exposed to so many dangers, and in his whole life indured so many and grieuous afflictions, what place of securitie is there vnto vs who are members of his bodie? For, if they haue done these things to the greene tree, what shall be done to the drie? If they haue thus vsed our Lord and Master, they will not spare the poore seruants of his familie; for, as our Sauour sayth, The Disciple is not above his Master, nor the Seruant is not better then his Lord. Yea, what securitie can we haue, as though we were in no danger of crosses and troubles, when as the Scriptures plainly teach vs, that as Christ our Head hath thus suffered, so likewise we his members must suffer with him: That wee are predestinate by God to be conformed to the image of his Sonne, first in his sufferings, and then in his glorie. That by many tribulations we must enter into the Kingdome of God. That if we will liue Godly in Christ, we must suffer persecution. That if we will reigne with Christ, we must first suffer with him. That whom the Lord loueth, hee chasteneth, and scourgeth euery sonne whom he receiueth; and if we be without chastisements, whereof all are partakers, wee are bastards and no sonnes. In which regard we haue no reason, no not in our greatest prosperitie to be secure, seeing wee are daily in danger of these crosses and afflictions; which if wee altogether escape, and passe all our dayes in peace and ease, ease, plentie and prosperitie, then haue wee least cause of all to be secure, for it is the greatest affliction not at all to be afflicted, seeing wee may iustly feare, that wee are bastards and no sonnes; in that our heauenly Father correcteth vs not; that with the wicked wee haue our portion in this life, and with the well fed Oxe are fatted for the slaughter.

The eighth meanes is, to remember and consider, that in this life there is no time nor place for securitie, but we are then to expect true securitie when we are come safe to our heauenly home. For wee are now Pilgrims and Trauellours, that continually are in danger to fall into the hands of Theeues, who will robbe and spoile vs, not only of temporall blessings, but of the rich treasures of spirituall graces. Wee are not yet in the Hauens but in a dangerous Sea, tossed and turmoiled with the tempests of trouble, and therefore wee must not giue our selues to securitie and rest, but bee alway preparing against a storme. Wee are now Exiles among strangers that loue vs not, and therefore are readie to spie all aduantages to doe vs hurt; in which regard wee had need not to sleepe in securitie, but to keepe a good watch, and to stand vpon our guard, that we be not surprized at vnawares. Wee are in the Christian warfare, fighting against the many and mightie politique and malicious enemies of our saluation, and therefore in the putting on of our Armour, wee must not take vnto vs that securitie which is onely fit and seasonable when we put it off, wee must not carrie our selues in the day of battaile as in the day of triumph; nor blesse our selues as though we were free from all dangers, when as wee are on all sides encompassed with them. There is no place to sleepe in securitie, when the old Serpent is so neere vnto vs; for, in this case, the greater securitie the greater danger. And though, as one sayth, wee haue by our conuersion passed the Red-sea, yet in the Wildernesse of this present life, wee shall not want enemies to set vpon vs. Wee haue left behind vs our sinnes past, as it were the Egyptians drowned vpon the Shoare; but yet, hurtfull vices and corruptions (as it were) other enemies encounter vs, and seeke to stop our passage, as wee are trauellling towards the Land of Canaan. Now our former faults, like pursuing enemies, onely by the Diuine vertue assisting vs are slaughtered, but the prickles of tentations, as it were, other enemies come in the front, which cannot be vanquished without our diligence and labour. No man (sayth Austine) ought to be secure in this life which wholly is called a tentation: lest hee, which of worse might become better, of better become worse. There is but one hope, one trust, one firme promise and assurance, euen thy mercies. And againe, Where (sayth he) is securitie? no where in this life, but onely in the hope of Gods promises: but when wee shall attaine to heauenly happinesse, there shall we enioy perfect securitie; when the Gates of the new Ierusalem shall be shut and made sure with strong barres, there shall be full reioycing and exulting with great ioy. And therefore, let vs not by a false securitie, which is an abortiue brat, and borne before

Psal. 17. 14.

Luk. 16. 25.

p. 8.

The eighth remedie is, to consider that securitie in this life is vnseasonable.

2. King. 3. 11.

Quousque vicino serpente tua male secunda dormitat industria? Bernard. Epist. Nulla est securitas vicino serpente dormire. Hieronym. Vbi est maxima securitas, ibi maximum est periculum. August. in Psal. 99 Iam quidem per conuersionem rubrum mare transitum est. Eccl. Gregor. lib. 24. cap. 7. August. confes. lib. 10. cap. 32. col. 178. Vbi est securitas? Hic nusquam, in ista vita, nusquam. Eccl. in Psal. 99. cap. 8. c. 1116.

fore the time, expose our selues to greater danger, especially to the hazard and losse of that heauenly securitie, which shall bee disturbed with no trouble; but let vs stay our time; and watch till the Bridegroom doth come, and open the dore for vs to enter into the wedding Chamber; and now prepare our selues to fight against our spirituall Enemies, that hauing gotten the victorie in this life, wee may triumph ouer them with ioy, peace, and endlesse securitie in the life to come.

¶ 9.
The ninth remedie is, to meditate often on the last iudgement.
Sine Comedam, sine bibam, sine aliud aliquid faciam, semper vox illa terribilis auribus meis insonare videtur. Surgite mortui, & venite ad iudicium. Hieron. in Matth. 24. 46, 47, 48, 51.

Matth. 25. 21, 26, 27, 30.

Matth. 25. 1, 2, &c.

The ninth meanes to shun carnall securitie is, often to meditate on the day of Iudgement, the all-seeing Wisedome, omnipotent Power, and the exact Iustice of our Iudge, the greatnesse of our reckonings, and strictnesse of that account which will then bee required; and will be impossible for vs to set euen, if wee seldome or neuer thinke of them here, but passe our time in sloth and securitie. Let vs remember how happy their condition will bee, who like faithfull seruants haue beene carefull to performe their dutie, watching daily for the comming of their Lord, when they shall be reputed blessed, and bee made Ruler of their Masters substance; and the miserable plight of those who haue not expected his comming nor prepared for it, but haue spent their dayes in riot and pleasure, in oppression and cruelty; when comming suddenly hee shall take them at vnawares, cut them off, and giue them their portion with Hypocrites, where shall bee weeping and gnashing of teeth. Let vs thinke with what ioy wee shall heare that happy sentence; Well done, good and faithfull servant, thou hast beene faithfull ouer a few things, I will make thee Ruler ouer many things, enter thou into the ioy of thy Lord; and with what tormenting griefe and bitter anguish, those who haue beene vnprofitable and vnfruitfull, shall heare that fearefull saying; Thou wicked and slothfull servant, &c. Take the talent from him, and giue it vnto him that hath ten talents, &c. And cast the vnprofitable servant into outer darknesse; there shall bee weeping and gnashing of teeth. Let vs consider, with what cheerfulness and ioy wee shall meete the Bridegroom, the Lord of glorie and happinesse, if wee haue watched for his comming, and are found in readinesse, hauing our Lamps of Faith and a godly life cleerly burning, when wee shall enter with him into the bridall Chamber of eternall blessednesse, to bee feasted with vn-speakable pleasures, and to solace our selues perpetually in his loue; and with what terror and dismayednesse they shall be possessed, who by his comming shall be awakned out of their sleepe of carnall securitie, and being vnreadie shall be shut out of dores, and when they desire to enter shall heare that fearefull and dreadfull speech; Goe your wayes, I know you not. Finally, let vs remember with what inestimable ioy and reioycing, we shall heare that happy sentence; Come yee blessed Children of my Father, inherit the Kingdome prepared for you from the foundation of the World; and with what horror and howling the Wicked shall heare their last doome; Depart from mee, yee cursed, into euermlasting fire, prepared for the Deuill and his angels. And withall, let

vs

vs set before vs the execution of this righteous sentence, which shall be, not the momentanie or onely long continuance of these rewards and punishments, but eternall life and happinesse to the godly and faithfull, and euerlasting death and condemnation to the wicked and vnbeleeuers.

The last meanes, which sanctifieth and giueth efficacie vnto all the rest, is frequent and feruent prayer, that it will please the Watch-man of Israel, who neither slumbreth nor sleepeth to watch ouer vs, and to preserue vs in watchfulnesse, that we fall not into this sleepe of carnall securitie, or being readie to slumber that hee will awaken and rowse vs vp with the good motions of his Word and Spirit. And when wee feele our hearts enclining to hardnesse by their neglect, or slothfull, cold, and sluggish vse of the meanes of our saluation, wee must with the Church, expostulate with God, and crie out vnto him: O Lord, why hast thou made vs to erre from thy wayes, and hardened our hearts from thy feare? And earnestly desire him with Dauid, that hee will create in vs a cleane heart, and renew a right spirit in vs; and that according to his promise, he will take the stonie hearts out of our-bodies, and gine vs hearts of flesh, which will tremble at his Word, and feare him for his Mercies and Iudgements. Finally, let vs pray vnto him, that he will giue vs grace with all care and good conscience, to vse the meanes before spoken of, and so blesse them vnto vs by his holy Spirit, as that they may be effectuell for our preseruatiue from carnall securitie, for the suppling and softning of our hearts, for the replenishing of them with his true feare, and for the stirring of vs vp to Christian watchfulnesse; that we may be in readinesse against the day of the appearing of our Bridegroom, our LORD and SAVIOUR IESVS CHRIST, and so may enter into that dore of heavenly happinesse, and communicate with him in those vnspeakable and euerlasting ioyes, which with his precious death and bloodshed, hee hath purchased for vs.

Matth. 5. 46.

ps. 10.

The last remedie is, frequent and feruent prayer for Gods blessing vpon all the former meanes

Esa. 63. 17.

Psal. 51. 10.

Ezech. 11. 19.

OF SPIRITVALL AND CHRISTIAN SECVRITIE. THE SECOND BOOKE.

CHAP. I.

Wherein spirituall securitie is defined, and the definition explained.

Having spoken of that Securitie, which is naturall, in all the kinds of it: it is now in the last place remaineth, that we briefly intreate of that Securitie which is supernaturall, diuine and holy. For as all Securitie is not commendable, but onely when a man, as he ought, layeth aside all care; so on the other side, all Securitie is not to be condemned, but when hee assumeth it as hee ought not; namely, such a Securitie as is built on an ill foundation, and vpon false and deceitfull grounds; which as it proceedeth from euill causes, so it alwayes produceth euill and pernicious effects, as hath sufficiently beene shewed in the former discourse. But besides this, there is a Securitie which is good and warrantable, commendable, and to be desired and imbraced of vs, grounded on iust causes, and rightly assumed of those vnto whom of due it appertayneth; namely, the securitie of the faithfull, hauing its foundation not vpon any thing in themselves, or any inferiour meanes and secundarie causes, but vpon God alone his Power, Prouidence and Promises, made vnto them in Iesus Christ. For after that wee are regenerate by the Spirit of God, and being reconciled, are become his Children by adoption and grace, and so like Children in the fauour of our heavenly Father, and receiued vnder the couert of his protection, then be-

 I highest

¶ 1.
 That all securitie is not to be condemned, but that it is in some kind commendable, and to be desired.
Non quolibet securitas est laudabilis: sed quando deponit aliquis curam prout debet. Th. Aquin. 2. 2. quæst. 129. art. 7.

Rom. 11. 29.

highest perfection in this life, because our knowledge, faith and loue, which should cast out all feare, are imperfect; yet is it much firmer, surer, and more permanent, then that of our first Parents, because that rested on the condition of their obedience, and this vpon the freedom of their will, which was mutable and changeable; but this renewed securitie, resteth vpon the covenant of Grace made in Christ and his Righteousnesse and Obedience, which are vnchangeable and eneralasting, and hath no condition on our part, but a liuely faith, bringing forth fruits of vnfeigned repentance; and these Graces also are the free gifts of God, which after he hath once bestowed, he neuer againe taketh from vs. And this securitie euery Christian ought to labour after, and so much the rather, because we shall neuer be freed from that carnall securitie which is so dangerous and pernicious, before we haue giuen entertaynement vnto this other in our hearts. For some shelter Man naturally desireth and will haue, vnder which shrowding himselfe, he may be safe either in Truth or in Opinion, and so freed from horrors and feares, which otherwise, like hellish Furies, would haunt and vex him. Which was the cause, (as I haue shewed) why our first Parents being deprived, through their fall, of their created securitie, grounded vpon the knowledge and remembrance of God, and his sauing Attributes; were so apt to be abused by Satan, imposing in stead thereof a false and counterfeit securitie, contrariwise grounded on ignorance and forgetfulness; which, whilst through the blindness of their minds it freed them from feare, because the causes of their feare could not be discerned by them, it did expose them to much the greater danger, because they were in the case of those, who are in the time of their sleepe assaulted with many, mightie, and malicious Enemies, and doe not so much as dreame of their approaching. But yet such is mans nature, that he had rather be couered with Fig-leaues, then haue no clothing, and haue in his hands a Reed and paper Buckler, which haue no strength to defend him, but what he giueth them by a false opinion, rather then no weapons at all; and will choose rather a counterfeit securitie, which may serue for the present to preserue him from true horrors and feares, that he may not be tormented before the time, rather then hee will haue none at all. In which respects it is the onely way, when we would perswade men to cast off carnall securitie, to offer them in stead thereof Christian securitie, which deliuereth from all dangers, not onely in shew and opinion, but also in Deed and Truth; excelling the other in worth, more then massie gold a rotten gilded post, and in strength more then Armour of prooffe, a painted shadow; or an impregnable Fort, a paper Wall.

¶ 2.
The description of spirituall
Securitie.

And to this purpose, I thought it necessary to adde something of it to the former discourse, hoping that men wil with more ease be moued to cast away that intoxicating and pernicious poyson, which maketh them to sleepe out the tortures of an euil conscience, & deprineth them of their senses, that with them it may take away their feares; when in stead thereof I offer vnto them this soueraigne Cordiall, which will expell

expell them, and arme the heart with true Christian courage and resolution. In speaking whereof I will first shew what it is, the nature, causes, and effects of it; and then the meanes whereby wee may be enriched with this inestimable treasure. Concerning the first, it may be thus described. Christian securitie is a grace of God, following our regeneration, iustification, and peace with him through Iesus Christ; whereby acknowledging, beleeuing, and remembering the all-seeing wisdom, omnipotent power, infinite goodnesse and mercie of God towards vs in Christ, wee doe without carnall and seruile feare, in all estates and at all times, rest quietly and contentedly vpon his promises and providence, for the supplying of all our wants, protection from all dangers, and deliuerance from all euils.

In which description, I shew first the Fountaine from which it springeth; not from nature, whose poisonous breasts doe now giue no such milke; not from our owne wisdom, power, endeauours, or any worldly causes, or secundarie meanes; but from God himselfe the Author and Fountaine of euery good and perfect gift, who of his free grace bestoweth this blessing vpon those that feare and serue him. And as it proceedeth from him, so vpon him, as the only sure foundation, it resteth and relyeth, and not on humane pollicie and strength or any creature, or earthly thing whatsoeuer. So the Lord propoundeth this ground of Christian courage and securitie, and no other. Feare thou not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee, yea, I will helpe thee, yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness. I the Lord thy God will hold thy right hand; saying vnto thee, feare not, I will helpe. And vpon this alone, holy David securely resteth: I layd mee downe and slept, I awaked for the Lord sustained mee. I will not be afraid of ten thousand of people that haue set themselves against me round about. And againe: I will both lay me downe in peace, and sleepe; for thou Lord onely makest mee dwell in safetie. Yea, though I walke through the valley of the shadow of death, I will feare no euill, for thou art with mee, thy rod and thy staffe they comfort mee. And elsewhere: The Lord is my light and my saluation, whom shall I feare? The Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid? Though an host should encampe against mee, my heart shall not feare; though warre should rise against mee, in this will I be confident. And in another place: What time I am afraid I will trust in thee; In God I haue put my trust, I will not feare what flesh can doe vnto mee. Thus the Church triumpheth ouer all her troubles, and remaineth secure in cases of greatest feare, in sole confidence of Gods protection. God is our refuge and strength, a very present helpe in trouble; therefore will wee not feare though the earth be remooued; and though the mountaines be carried into the midst of the sea, &c. And so likewise the Apostle Paul. What shall we say then to these things? if God bee for vs, who can bee against vs? who shall lay any thing to the charge of Gods Elect? it is God that iustificeth, who is hee that condemneth? &c. Who shall separate vs from the loue of Christ? shall tribulation, or distresse, or persecution, or famine, or nakednesse,

p. 3.

That God is the author of spirituall secu-
ritie.

Iam. 1. 17.

Esa. 41. 10. 13.
Ier. 30. 10. &
46. 27. 28.
Heb. 13. 5. 6.
Psal. 3. 5. 6.
& 4. 8.

Psal. 23. 4.

Psal. 27. 1. 3.

Psal. 56. 3. 4.

Psal. 46. 1. 2. 3.

Rom. 8. 31. 40. 39.

nesse, or perill, or sword? nay in all these things we are more then Conquerours through him that loued vs: and thereupon he concludeth: I am perswaded that neither death nor life, nor Angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate vs from the loue of God which is in Christ Iesus our Lord. Yeas so solely and wholly doe the faithfull ground their spirituall securitie vpon the Lord, that when they excell and abound in wisdom, strength, and all earthly helpes, it is not encreased; and when they are depriued of them all, it is no whit lessened and abated; because the Lord in himselfe is all-mightie and all-sufficient, and hath by all these meanes no strength added vnto him, nor yet is any whit weakned, when all these inferiour comforts and encouragements are taken away. And this the Lord requireth of Abraham, that hee should be secure in his sole protection; Fear not Abraham, I am thy shield, and thy exceeding great reward. And againe, I am the almightie God, or the God all-sufficient, walke before me, and be thou vpright: And of the Church; Fear not thou worme Iacob and yee men of Israel; I will helpe thee, sayth the Lord, and thy Redeemer the holy One of Israel. Intimating thus much, that though the Church were so sensible of her owne weaknesse, that shee was as vnable in her owne strength to resist the malicious rage of her cruell enemies, as a feeble worme; yet shee had cause enough to bee secure and without feare, because the Lord (who is all-sufficient, and taketh delight to manifest his power in weakenesse) had promised his helpe.

Thirdly I say, that this Christian securitie followeth our regeneration, iustification, and peace with God; because there is no true securitie to those who are ynregenerate, vnder the guilt, and obnoxious to the punishment of sinne; and who haue God for their enemy, who is able and readie euery minute to consume and destroy them. There is no sound securitie to those, who by hellish charmes haue rocked conscience asleepe, which is euery day in danger to be awakened, and being rowzed vp, will catch them by the throat, and hale them to answer for all their crimes at the vnpartiall Barre of Gods fearefull Iudgement. In which regards, I may conclude with the Prophet, that there is no such peace to the wicked; for when they are once awakened out of this sleepe of carnall securitie, they are like the troubled Sea when it cannot rest, whose waters cast vp mire and dirt. But it is the faithfull only, who being truly conuerted from their wicked wayes, iustified and reconciled vnto God, and hauing peace with him, haue also peace of conscience, that are capable of this grace of spirituall securitie.

Fourthly, I lay downe the grounds of Christian securitie wherevpon it resteth, namely knowledge, beliefe, and remembrance of God and his sauing attributes. Wherein it is quite contrarie to carnall securitie, which is grounded on the ignorance, not beleeuing, and forgetfulness of them; which the greater they are, the greater is the carnall mans securitie; euen as contrariwise spirituall securitie encreaseth in

Gen 15.1.
& 17.1.

Esa 41.14.

2. Cor. 12.9.

¶ 4.
That the regenerate onely are the subiect of spirituall securitie.

Esa. 57.20, 21.

¶ 5.
The grounds of spirituall securitie, on which it resteth.

in strength, as we doe more and more encrease in the contrarie graces. Fifthly, I shew what feare spirituall securitie expelleth, namely that onely which is carnall and seruile. For, as for that holy, filiall, and spirituall feare of God our gracious Father in Iesus Christ, it is no way opposit to this Christian securitie, yea, they are mutuall causes one of another; and so, the more the one encrease, the more vigour and strength it ministreth to the other. The more happie we find and feele our selues in our secure resting vnder Gods protection, the more we feare to displease so gracious a Father, vnder the wings of whose providence we enioy such sweet securitie; and the more wee feare to offend him, the more secure wee are in his loue and fauour. For, as one sayth, nothing can be more safe and secure, then to commit all things vnto him, who knoweth how to giue most fitly all things profitable to those that feare and serue him.

Sixtly, I adde the continuance and perpetuities of the Christians securitie, not for a spint alone like carnall securitie, till the conscience be awakened with the threatnings of the Law, or the smart of Gods seuerer Iudgements; but in all estates; and at all times, though not alwayes alike and in the same proportion, in his sense and feeling. In which respect the Christian findeth it to encrease or diminish, as hee thriue or decayeth in those graces which are the causes, which both breed and nourish it, and as he is more diligent and carefull, or more negligent and remisse in vsing the meanes whereby it is obtained and preserved. But when the Christian thriue in spirituall grace, is watchfull ouer all his wayes, and endeauoureth in all things to please and serue God, and so preserveth inwardly peace with him and peace of conscience, then is there no outward thing that can disturbe his peace, or deprive him of his spirituall securitie which he hath in the assurance of Gods fauour and protection, but he constantly retaineth it at all times, and in all estates, and enioyeth secure peace in the midst of warres and troubles, and a quiet calme in the greatest stormes and tempests of worldly calamities. As for example, in the time of extremest dangers he is secure and safe, as though there were no perill approaching; so as he can say with Dauid; I laid mee downe and slept; I awaked, for the Lord sustained me; I will not be afraid for ten thousands of people, that haue set themselves against mee round about. The Lord is my light and saluation, whom shall I feare? the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid? Though an host should encampe against mee, my heart shall not feare; though warre should rise against me, in this I will be confident. And with the Church: God is our refuge and strength, a very present helpe in trouble: therefore will wee not feare, though the earth be remooued, and though the mountaines be carried into the midst of the sea. So in the time, not onely of worldly prosperitie, when God hedgeth him in on all sides with the pledges of his loue, but also of affliction, trouble, and persecution, hee is secure in the assurance of Gods fauour; because he knoweth that these are signes of his adoption, and that all things worke together for good to them that loue

Nil potest esse securus, quam illi omnia committere qui moris suis cultoribus congruis proutura prestare. Cassian. in Pla. 74.

¶ 6. Of the continuance and perpetuities of spirituall securitie.

Psal. 3. 5, 6.

Psal. 37. 1, 3.

Psal. 46. 1, 2.

Rev. 8. 13.

Vers. 35.

A. 14. 32.

2. Tim. 2. 12.

2. Cor. 4. 17.

Psal. 94. 13.

Pet. 2. 14.

Iam. 1. 12.

Matth. 5. 10, 11.

Rom. 5. 1, 3.

Pro. 14. 32.

Iob 13. 15.

Rom. 8. 38, 39.

Psal. 16. 11.

God, to them that are the Called according to his purpose. That Afflictions, Tribulation, Distresse, Persecution, Famine, Nakednesse, Perill or Sword, shall not bee able to separate him from the loue of Christ. That they doe not hinder, but further him in the way to euertlasting happinesse; For by many tribulations we must enter into the Kingdome of God; wee must first suffer with Christ, that afterwards wee may raigne with him; and these short and momentanie afflictions shall cause vnto vs, a farre most excellent and an eternall waights of glorie. That they are not vnto them effects of the Legall curse; but assurances of euertlasting Blessednes; according to that of David; Blessed is the man whom thou chastenest, O Lord; and teachest him out of thy Law. And of the Apostle Peter; If yee suffer for Righteousnesse, happy are yee, and bee not afraid of their terror, neither bee yee troubled. And of the Apostle James: Blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for when he is tried he shall receiue the Crowne of Life, which the Lord hath promised to them that loue him. And finally, that of our Sauour: Blessed are they that are persecuted for Righteousnesse sake; for theirs is the Kingdome of Heauen. Blessed are yee when men reuile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of euill against you falsely for my sake; reioyce and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in Heauen. In which respects, they that are iustified by Faith and haue peace with God, through our Lord Iesus Christ, not onely reioyce in hope of the glorie of God, and beare their afflictions with patience, but euen glorie in tribulation, as the Apostle speaketh. In a word, hee loseth not his spirituall securitie, no not in the agonie of death it selfe; because the Righteous hath hope in death, and when hee is killed, euen by Gods owne hand, can say with Iob; Though hee slay mee, yet will I trust in him. And because hee knoweth, that though Death bee able to separate his soule from the body, yet it is not able to separate him from the loue of God in Christ. Yea, contrariwise it shall serue as a passage conducting him into Gods presence, and hasten the fruition of this glorious Majestie and supreme goodnesse, In whose presence is fulnesse of ioy, and at whose right hand there are pleasures for euermore.

CHAP. II.

Of the Causes and Effects of spirituall Securitie.

¶ I.
The causes of
spirituall secu-ritie respecting God.
Deus nobis hec otia fecit. Virgil.
Eclog. 1.

Having shewed what spirituall Securitie is, it now followeth that wee intreate of the Causes of it; which are of two sorts, the first respecting God, the other our selues. The chiefe and principall cause of it is Gods free grace, working this spirituall securitie in our hearts, that wee may with greater ioy and cheerefulnesse, performe vnto him faithfull seruice, when as wee are assured, that though wee haue many enemies which oppose vs in it, yet none shall bee able to doe vs any hurt, nor hinder hinder vs from receiuing the recompence of reward, which the Lord of his free mercy and grace hath promised vnto vs. And thus Dauid acknowledgeth that it was no wisdom, power or prouidence of his owne, but the Lord onely that did make him dwell in safetie. And that he who dwelleth in the secret place of the most High, shall abide safe from all danger under the shadow of the Almighty. Secondly, we haue this securitie by the free donation and legacie of Iesus Christ, who at his comming in the flesh, brought this peace with him, and caused it to be proclaimed by his holy Angels: Glorie to God in the Highest, and on Earth peace, good will towards men. And leauing the Earth, bequeathed vnto the faithfull, and left this peace behind him. Peace I leave with you, my peace I giue vnto you, not as the world giueth giue I vnto you (that is, a worldly and outward peace, for in the World ye shall haue tribulation; but a spirituall peace with God, and peace of Conscience, by which yee shall haue inward tranquillitie of mind, and securitie from all danger, in the midst of earthly troubles, and therefore) let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid. The fruit of which peace is the securitie of all the faithfull, following their regeneration and change of their nature from sauage crueltie, vnto a Doue-like simplicitie and Lambe-like meeknesse one towards another, according to that prophesie of Esay, foretelling the state of Christs Kingdome. The Wolfe shall dwell with the Lambe, and the Leopard shall lye downe with the Kid, and the Calfe, and the yong Lion, and the Fasling together; and a little Child shall leade them, &c. And the suckling Child shall play on the hole of the Asse, and the weaned Child shall put his hand on the Cockatrice Den. They shall not destroy in all mine holy Mountaynes, for the Earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the Waters that couer the Sea. Thirdly, we enioy this securitie by vertue of the Covenant of grace, which God hath made with vs in Iesus Christ. Wherein the Lord hath freely promised that he will be our God and King, and we his peculiar People and Subiects of his Kingdome; whom he will therefore receiue vnder his protection, and preserve safe and secure from all danger; and that he will be our Shepheard, and we his Flocke and the Sheepe of his pasture, whom he will keepe safe in his Sheepe-fold from the Wolfe, Lion, Beare, and all other rauinous Beasts, which shall attempt to hurt vs, according to that of the Prophet: I will saue my Flocke, and they shall no more be a prey. And I will set one Shepheard ouer them, and he shall feede them, even my seruant Dauid (that is, Iesus Christ the Sonne of Dauid) hee shall feede them, and he shall be their Shepheard. And I the Lord will be their God, and my seruant Dauid a Prince among them; I the Lord haue spoken it. And I will make with them a covenant of peace; and I will cause the euill beasts to cease out of the Land; and they shall dwell safely in the wilderness, and sleepe in the Woods, &c.

The causes of this spirituall securitie on our part, are those vertues and graces receiued from God, which haue the promise of it, and make vs fit and capable to receiue and apprehend it, when as the Lord

Psal. 4. 1. & 92. 1.

Luk. 2. 14.

Ioh. 14. 27.

Ioh. 16. 33.

Esay. 11. 6. 7.

Ezech. 34. 23, to 31.

¶ 2.

The causes of spirituall securitie respecting our selues.

Rom. 8. 15, 16.

of his free gracedoth offer it vnto vs. The principall whereof is the Spirit of adoption, crying in our hearts, Abba Father; which sealeth vp in our hearts the assurance of Gods loue, and beareth witnesse with our spirit, that we are children of God. And if Children, then Heires, and Heires of God and Co-heires with Christ, who as we suffer together, so shall we be glorified together. The which Spirit of adoption is opposed to the Spirit of bondage, and freeing vs from all seruile feare, doth inuest vs with the priuiledge, and together with it the peace of securitie of the Children of God. And this Spirit also is accompanied with an whole Armie of spirituall Graces, which taking vp, and (as it were) manning the Fort of our hearts, doe keepe them and vs safe and secure in all assaults of danger, and the spirituall encounters of tentations, so as they shall neuer bee able to make vs fall away, or alienate vs from Gods vse. So the Apostle Peter telleth vs, that if we give all diligence to make our Calling and Election sure, by adding one Grace and Vertue to another; this golden Chaine will so keepe and strengthen vs, that we shall neuer fall, that is, neither from the estate of Grace in this life, into the state of sinne and death; nor from our assurance of the state of Glorie, in the life to come, into that miserable condition of condemnation and destruction.

2. Pet. 1. 5, 6, 10.

¶ 3.
Of the particular causes of spirituall securitie, first, sauing knowledge.

But besides these Graces in generall, there are speciall Graces, which are the causes of this spirituall Securitie, both because the promise of it is made by God vnto them, and because in this respect wee become capable of it, and fit to apprehend and receiue it when the Lord in mercy bestoweth it vpon vs. The first of these, is the sauing Knowledge and remembrance of God and his sauing Attributes, of Wisedome, Power, All-sufficiency, Mercy, Goodnesse, Loue and Truth; not onely as they are infinitely in God, and of his Essence and Nature; but as they extend and are exercised towards vs. For when we acknowledge and remember, that God is infinite in all goodnesse and perfection, is our God, and we his Seruants and Children; that he is infinite in wisdome, and knoweth what is best for vs, how to prevent all dangers, to supply most fitly and fully all our wants, and to deliuer vs most seasonably from all euill both of sinne and punishment; that he is infinite in power and able to doe whatsoever he will, and can at pleasure destroy our Enemies, and defeat all their projects and purposes, and arme vs with strength in our greatest weaknesse, so as we shall be able to ouer-come them, and withstand all their tentations; that he is al-sufficient, and by himselfe able to supply all our wants, as well without as with meanes; and a rich portion, which is sufficient to make them who inioy him happy, in the absence of all earthly good and presence of all temporall miseries; that he is infinite in mercy, goodnesse and loue towards vs in Christ, and therefore as willing, as able to doe that for vs, which he knoweth to be best, and most fit to make vs eternally happy, and that he is also infinite in truth, most infallibly verifying and accomplishing his Word and gracious Promises, made vnto vs of Grace and Glorie, temporall protection and euerlasting saluation; saluation; then doe wee cast our selues securely vpon his providence, for supply of all our wants, protection from all dangers, and deliuerance out of all miseries and afflictions. So that as carnall securitie is caused through the ignorance and forgetfulness of God and his Attributes; so Christian securitie, which is opposite vnto it, is caused by the knowledge, acknowledgement, and remembrance of them.

The second cause which produceth this spirituall securitie, as the fruit and effect of it, is a lively faith in Christ, and firme affiance and confidence in God. For being iustified by Faith, we haue peace with God, and peace of Conscience, and with them inward securitie and spirituall ioy, euen in afflictions and tribulations. So being by Faith ingrafted into Christ, and become members of his body, we may be secure in his power and protection, assuring our selues that hee will preserve his owne members from all euill, provide for them all necessities, and defend them from the malice and power of all Enemies, so as they shall not be able to hurt and destroy them, which were to suffer a mayme in his owne blessed Body. If we by Faith relye our selues vpon this Rocke of strength, then though the Rayne descend, and the Floods come, and the Winds blow and beate vpon vs, yet we are secure from all danger, because wee cannot sinke or fall being founded vpon a Rocke. If wee beleue Gods Promises of preservation and protection, there is no cause of feare in the greatest extremities, because we are sure of helpe and deliuerance, which is certainly promised to all the faithfull, according to the saying of Iehosaphat; Beleeue in the Lord your God, so shall yee bee established; beleue his Prophets and yee shall prosper. If beleueing in God we put our affiance in him, and cast our selues wholly vpon his providence and protection, this will worke in vs this spirituall securitie. For he that dwelleth in the secret of the most High, shall abide vnder the shadow of the Almighty. Hee that maketh the Lord his refuge, fortresse and trust, shall bee deliuered from the snare of the Fowler, and from the noysome pestilence. Hee will couer him with his feathers, and vnder his wings shall he trust, his Truth shall be his shield and buckler. He shall not be afraid for the terror by night, nor for the arrow that flyeth by day, &c. because hee hath made the Lord his refuge, and the most high his habitation. There shall no euill befall him, neither shall any plague come neere his dwelling. For hee will giue his Angels charge ouer him, to keepe him in all his wayes, &c. If with David we put our trust in the Lord, wee shall not need to feare what flesh can doe vnto vs. If wee trust in the Lord wee shall bee blessed, and like a Tree planted by the Waters, that spreadeth out her Rootes by the Riuer, which shall not see when heate commeth, but her leafe shall bee greene, and shall not bee carefull in the yeere of drought, neither shall cease from yeelding fruit.

The third cause of spirituall securitie is Charitie; for (as the Apostle telleth vs) there is no feare in loue, but perfect loue casteth out feare; and if wee doe aboue all things put on charitie which is the bond of perfectnesse, then also will the peace of God rule in our hearts, and worke in ¶ 4.

The second cause, a lively Faith in Christ.
Rom. 5.1, 3.

Math. 7.26.

2. Chron. 20. 30.

*Psal. 91. 1, 2, 3,
&c.*

*Psal. 56. 4.
1er. 17. 7, 8.*

¶ 5.
The third cause, Cha-
ritie.
*1. Ioh. 4. 18.
Col. 3. 14, 15.*

in

1. Ioh. 4. 19.

Rom. 8. 38, 39.

p. 6.

The fourth
cause, the true
feare of God.
Psa. 34. 9.

Psal. 112. 3, 6, 7.

Pro. 10. 9, 10.
& 12. 21.

Psal. 34. 15.
1. Pet. 3. 12.

Esa. 32. 17.

Esa. 54. 14.

Pro. 28. 1.

Eph. 6. 14.

p. 7.

The last cause is new obedience.

in them this Christian securitie. For if wee truly loue God, it is an euident signe vnto vs that he loueth vs; for as the Apostle sayth, Wee loue him because he loued vs first; and being assured of Gods loue, wee need not to doubt of his protection, whereby hee will keepe vs from all euill; and of his prouidence watching ouer vs, which will prouide for vs all things necessarie. And finally, if wee vnfaignedly loue the Lord, then may we be secure in all dangers, and in the midst of all troubles and crosses, because the Lord through his infinite wisdom and power will cause all things, euen afflictions themselves, to worke together for good to them that loue him; and will so weaken the strength of them, that they shall neuer be able to separate vs from the loue of Christ.

The fourth cause is, the true feare of God, for this feare remooueth all other feares whatsoever, and if with filiall affection wee feare God as Sonnes, we may thereby be freed from the seruile feare of Slaues. So also this feare of God will free vs from feare of Men, and the feare of our Creator will quite expell the feare of the Creature. It will free vs from feare of all danger of euill, seeing nothing shall be able to hinder our happinesse. For, Blessed is the man that feareth the Lord; hee shall not be mooued for euer, but shall be had in everlasting remembrance. He shall not be afraid of any euill tidings, his heart is fixed trusting in the Lord. His heart is established, he shall not be afraid, vntill he see his desire vpon his enemies.

The fift cause is, Iustice and righteousnesse both in our hearts, words and actions: because, as the Wise-man sayth, He that walketh vprightly walkeith surely: for, the righteous shall neuer be remooued, and there shall no euill happen vnto the iust. And that because the Lord watcheth ouer them, to deliuer them in the time of danger, and prouide for them in the time of want. For, as the Psalmist saith, The eyes of the Lord are vpon the Righteous, and his cares are open to heare their crie; so that, none shall bee able to harme vs, if we follow that which is good. And vnto them hee hath made his promises of peace and protection. The worke of righteousnesse shall be peace, and the effect of righteousnesse quietnesse and assurance for euer; and my people shall dwell in a peaceable habitation, and in sure dwellings, and in quiet resting places. And againe: In righteousnesse thou shalt be established; thou shalt be farre from oppression, for thou shalt not feare, and from terror, for it shall not come neere thee. In assurance of which promises, the righteous is bold as a Lion, and disdaineth to goe out of his way of iustice and godlinesse, though he be affronted with many dangers, because being armed with this brest-plate of righteousnesse, he is assured they cannot hurt him.

The last cause of this spirituall securitie is new obedience. For when like dutifull and louing children, we doe desire and endeaour to doe the will of our heauenly Father, at all times and in all things, and perform as much as we are able, that obedience which his law requireth, not onely in our outward actions, but also in our hearts and inward affections; and bewaile our wants and imperfections, when we come short

short of that measure and degree which wee desire to attaine vnto, it will worke in our hearts a child-like confidence in the loue of our God, and make vs securely to repose and cast our selues in all estates and conditions vpon his gracions prouidence, for the supplying of all our wants, protection from all dangers, and deliuerance out of all afflictions. And so much the rather, because wee are hereby strengthened in our Faith, and enabled to applie vnto our selues all those sweet and comfortable promises which God hath made vnto those who bring forth these fruits of new obedience; especially those which concerne spirituall peace and tranquillitie of mind, and this holy and Christian securitie. So the Lord promisseth, That if wee will keepe his Statutes and Iudgements, wee shall dwell in the Land in safety. And in another place, That if we keepe his Statutes, and walke in his Commandements to doe them, the Lord with all other temporall benefits, promisseth peace and safetie; and that wee shall lie downe and none shall make vs affraid. And Zophar telleth vs, that if wee prepare our hearts to seeke God, and stretch out our hands towards him, that then we shall be steadfast and without feare, lie downe securely, and be freed from the feare of all things. So Wisedome promisseth, that who so hearken vnto her, and obey her voice, they shall dwell safely, and shall be quiet from feare of euill. Yea, the Lord hath not onely said, but sworn it, that all his redeemed shall worship and serue him without feare, in holinesse and righteousnesse before him all the dayes of their life.

And these are the causes of this spirituall securitie. The effects of it are quite contrarie to those of carnall securitie; for it doth not make vs more slothfull and sluggish in the seruice of God, but more watchfull ouer all our wayes, that wee may doe all things which are acceptable vnto God, from whom wee enioy so great a blessing; and not commit any thing against knowledge and conscience, which may disturbe our sweet peace, or depriue vs of the inward ioy of this spirituall securitie. It doth not make vs more negligent and backward in holy duties, but to performe them with all diligence and chearfulness, seeing wee walke in this way of godlinesse without feare; and haue part of our heavenly wages in present pay, peace of conscience, spirituall securitie, and ioy in the holy Ghost, which are the preludes and first beginnings of euerlasting happinesse. For, as the Apostle sayth, The kingdom of God is not meat and drinke, but righteousness, and peace, and ioy in the holy Ghost. It freeth vs from the bondage of the Law, which presseth from vs the obedience of slaues, out of seruile feare of smart and punishment, and restoreth vs to the glorious libertie of the sonnes of God, yeelding ingenuous and voluntarie obedience, out of meere loue to our heavenly Father. It taketh away all painfulnesse and displeasantesse in yeelding seruice vnto God, by taking away Legall feare, which (as the Apostle sayth) hath torment, and maketh Christs yoke easie, and his burthen light, when we feelee his promise accomplished of giuing vnto our soules this spirituall rest. It preferueth vs from all iniquitie, especially from speaking lies, which

Leuit. 25. 18, 19.

Chap. 26. 3, 5, 6.

Iob 11. 13, 15, 19.

Prov. 1. 33.

Leu. 1. 74, 75.

§. 8.
Of the effects
of spirituall
securitie.

Rom. 14. 17.

Rom. 8. 15.

1. Iob. 4. 12.

Matth. 11. 29.

is

Zeph. 3. 13.

Psal. 145. 19.

Eph. 3. 12.

Heb. 4. 16.

is a base vice grounded on seruile feare, either of losing some benefit, or sustayning some euill or inconuenience, by incurring mans displeasure in speaking truth. From which feare, Christian securitie freeing vs, doth also keepe vs from the vice of lying, which is the effect of it. According to that of the Prophet, The remnant of Israel shall not doe iniquitie, nor speake lies, neither shall a deceitfull tongue be found in their mouth: for they shall feed and lie downe, and none shall make them afraid. It maketh vs also with more constancie and patience, to indure afflictions and all troubles, when as wee are secure of the euent, and are assured that they shall all of them aduance our spirituall good and heavenly glorie. It worketh in vs Christian courage and resolution, in resisting all the assaults of the enemies of our saluation, when as securely resting vpon God his wisdom, power, and providence, wee are assured for the present, that they shall not bee able by all their might and malice to doe vs any hurt, and that the issue of this spirituall warfare will be our victorie here, and our triumph in glory in the life to come. Finally, it causeth vs to bee more frequent and feruent in prayer, when as without seruile feare wee may approach into Gods presence, and with the libertie, boldnesse, and confidence of sonnes, make our suits and supplications vnto him, in the mediation of Iesus Christ, with confidence that he will heare vs graciously, and bountifully condescend vnto our desires. According to that of the Apostle, In whom we haue boldnesse, or free libertie of speaking, and acceffe, with confidence by the faith of him. The which he vseth as an effectual argument, to make vs more frequent and diligent in performing of this dutie: Let vs therefore come boldly vnto the Throne of grace, that we may obtaine mercie, and find grace to helpe in time of need. And thus much of the causes and effects of spirituall Securitie.

CHAP. III.

Of the meanes of spirituall Securitie, whereby it may bee obtained, or preserued and increased.

§. I.
The first meanes is, highly to e-steeme it, and to seeke it from God and in him.

OW it followeth in the last place, that we set downe the meanes of obtayning and preseruing this grace of Christian securitie. And first, if we would attaine vnto this rich gift (which maketh vs with ioy and comfort to enioy all other blessings, because it secureth vs of their fruition, quieteth our minds in the midst of all dangers, comforteth vs against all afflictions, as a rich treasury supplieth all our wants, and is vnto vs an impregnable Fort to keepe off all our spirituall enemies, and Armour of proofe to beate backe the darts of their temptations) wee must in our iudgements esteeme it according to the worth and value, in our hearts and affections loue and desire it, and so resolve, with all care and good conscience, to endeavour in the vse of all good meanes whereby we may attaine vnto it, and preserue and cherish

riske it when we haue gotten it. As first, if wee would haue the effect wrought in vs, we must labour that the causes of it may bee effectuell in vs to this purpose. And seeing God is the authour of this excellent gift, and that rich fountaine of all grace and goodnesse, from which flow these sweet and still streames of Christian securitie, let vs begge it at his hands by feruent prayer, who is no niggard of his gifts, but hath promised to giue them plentifully to all that aske them in the name of his Sonne. Yea, let vs not only seeke this securitie from him as the fountaine, but ground it on him onely as the alone foundation of it. For there is nothing in our selues or any creature, whereupon it may safely and surely rest, but onely vpon Gods infinite wisdom, beholding vs and all things, with all meanes and oportunities to preserve vs from all euill, and to conferre vpon vs all good; and his omnipotent power, whereby hee is able to doe whatsoever in his wisdom hee knoweth to be best; vpon his all-sufficiencie, whereby hee sufficeth vs by himselfe alone without all other helpe; his mercie and goodnesse, whereby he is as willing and readie, as able to helpe vs; and his promises and truth, which assure vs of his fauour, with all the fruits of it, and that he will neuer faile those who by a liuely faith doe rest vpon them. And if wee ground our securitie on this immooueable Rocke, then though wee be neuer so weake in our owne strength, neuer so much encountered with dangers; and mightily assaulted with our many, strong, and malicious enemies, yet may we retaine our securitie, notwithstanding all these difficulties, because hee alone is able to support vs by his owne strength, to preserve vs from and in all perils, and to giue vs victorie ouer all our enemies.

Iam. 1. 17.
Matth. 7. 7.
Iob. 16. 23.

Secondly, if wee would haue this Legacie of spirituall securitie which Christ hath left vs, we must labour to be in the number of his Disciples, vnto whom alone it is bequeathed; to bee sheepe of his flocke and fold, ouer whom he watcheth and taketh care, to protect them from all enemies, and to preserve them from all dangers; and then we may be secure, seeing wee haue his promise, that he will giue vnto vs eternall life, that wee shall neuer perish, and that no man shall plucke vs out of his hand. And if we haue the Lord for our shepheard, then may we with David rest securely vpon his providence, assuring our selues that if we liue at his finding, we shall want nothing. Then may we safely lie downe in the greene pastures, and be led by him by those still waters of peace and securitie; yea, though he lead vs into places of feare and danger, euene through the valley of the shadow of death, yet may we be secure and feare no euill, seeing hee is with vs, and with his rod and staffe doth comfort vs. Yea, wee must labour after a neerer vnion with Christ, and to be espoused vnto him, and then wee being his Spouse, and hee being our Bridegroom, wee may rest securely vnder his powerfull protection; seeing by the institution and law of marriage, he is bound both to defend and provide for vs; and because hee that toucheth vs, toucheth him; hee that offereth any iniurie vnto vs, doth offer it (as it were) to his owne person: then may

p. 2.

The second meanes is, to labour to be in the number of Christ Disciples, and of his flocke.

Iob. 10. 28.

Psal. 13. 7.

Ps. 34. 10.

Gen. 2. 25.

Zech. 2. 8.

p. 3.

The third meanes is, that we labour to be in the Couenant of Grace.

Gen. 4. 14.

Apoc. 7. 3.

p. 4.

we with the Spouse in the Canticles, sit downe securely under his shadow with great delight, and sleepe in safetie, when his left hand is vnder our head, and his right hand doth embrace vs. Or if we would be nearer vnto him for our greater safetie and securitie, let vs labour to become members of his blessed body, vnited vnto him by his holy Spirit and a liuely faith; seeing then there will be no place for feare, because hee that toucheth vs, toucheth the apple of his eye; hee that doth vs any hurt, hurteth and offereth violence against his owne bodie; and he that seeketh to plucke vs from him, shall goe about an impossible worke, euen to plucke a member from the bodie of Christ, which he tenderly loueth, seeing he hath all power in heauen and earth committed vnto him, so as no creature is able to preuaile against him.

Thirdly, if wee would obtayne this spirituall securitie, wee must labour to be within the compasse of the couenant of Grace, which God hath made with vs in Iesus Christ. For such onely as are in the Couenant, haue right vnto the Promises of Gods grace and prouidence, watching ouer them, for the endowing them with all good, and of his power and protection to shield and defend them from all euill. Such onely haue God for their Lord and King, and are the peculiar People and Subiects of his Kingdome, ouer whom hee hath taken charge, and receiued them vnder the safegard of his protection. As for others, they are strangers vnto him, whom he respecteth not; yea, they are no better then Rebels and Out-lawes, who haue no benefit by his protection, and therefore can haue in them no true securitie, but may well feare with Cain, that being exiled out of Gods presence, they shall be like Fugitives and Vagabonds vpon the earth, and that it shall come to passe, that every one that findeth them shall be ready to slay them. Whereas if we haue the Seale of the Couenant stamped vpon vs, we are thereby secured from all euill; for when the destroying Angell is purposely sent from God to spoile and make hauocke of all, yet his commission is restrayned, so as hee may not hurt those which are in the Couenant, but thoſe onely who haue not the Seale of God in their forehead. Now the meanes to be in this Couenant with God, is to performe the condition of Faith, bringing forth the fruits thereof in heartie repentance and amendment of life; which wee must therefore aboue all things labour after, that we may haue interest in the former priuileges. And because through our frailtie and infirmitie, we are apt to wound and weaken our Faith by our sinnes; and this shield is oftentimes shrewdly battered, with beating backe the fierie darts and bullets of Satans tentations: And our repentance also is ready to grow faint and languish, both in respect of our griefe for sinne past, and resolution to leaue and forsake it for the time to come; and so by weakning the Couenant, not in it selfe, but in our apprehension, wee are ready to lose our inward peace, and to haue our securitie disturbed with feares; therefore as we often sinne, so doth it become vs often to renew our Couenant with God, by renewing the condition of Faith and Repentance, that so also with them wee may renew our securitie, according to

to that in Iob; If iniquity be in thine hand, put it farre away, and let not wickednesse dwell in thy Tabernacles: For then thou shalt lift up thy face without spot; yea, thou shalt be steadfast, and shalt not feare. And thou shalt be secure because there is hope; yea, thou shalt digge about thee, and thou shalt take thy rest in safesie. Also thou shalt lye downe and none shall make thee afraid; yea, many shall make suite vnto thee.

Fourthly, if we would haue spirituall securitie, we must indeauour by all meanes to haue those causes of it in our selues, of which I haue spoken. As first, the Spirit of adoption, whereby being assured that we are Gods children through Christ, we may securely rest vpon the prouidence and promises of our heauenly Father, for the prouiding of all things necessarie, for the supplying of all our wants, preservation from all dangers, and protection from all enemies. For if earthly Parents, according to their power, performe all these things to their children, so as they are secure and without feare; when they are in the sight and presence of their able friends; how much more will our heauenly Father, who infinitely exceeds them in power and loue? For if he be so infinitely gracious, that he preserveth those which are strangers vnto him, how much more those who are of his owne Family? if hee doth good vnto all, how much more to those who are of the house-hold of Faith? if he prouideth for the yong Lions and Rauens that call vpon them, and richly clotheth the Lillies and Flowres of the Field, how much more will hee defend and preserve, feede and clothe his owne Children, whom hee hath loued so dearly, that hee hath not spared to giue his best beloued and onely begotten Sonne to the death for their redemption and saluation? So also we must labour after the gifts and graces of the Spirit, which haue the promises of Gods protection made vnto them; so that if we haue them, we may be secure in his helpe and assistance, because if he be with vs, it mattereth not who oppose against vs; if we are destitute of them, then being hopelesse and helplese, there is no place for peace and securitie. Again, these sauing graces are the only meanes whereby we may make our Calling and Election sure; which if we doe, no worldly thing can disturbe our peace, or dampe our ioy; but if for want of them wee want also this assurance, how can wee haue any roome in our hearts for securitie to lodge in, seeing they are wholly taken vp with feares and doubtings? or at least with carnall securitie which keeps all quiet, because it shuts our eyes, and benummeth all our senses, so as we cannot see nor feele our danger? Finally, these vertues and spirituall graces are our Christian armour, which being buckled vnto vs, is of high prooffe, to preserve vs in safetie against all assaults of enemies, that would disturbe our peace; but if they be wanting, then like the Israelites we are naked, dis-armed of Gods assistance, dis-furnished of all munition and weapons, wherby we might make any resistance against the encounters of our spirituall enemies, and so an easie prey to be seized on, and led captiue by them.

More especially if we would vse the meanes, whereby wee may in-

Iob 11. 14. 15.

Isa. 26.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

Psalm 125.

5.
The first meanes is, to labour to be indued with these special sauiug graces, which are the causes of, first, knowledge and remembrance of God and his Attributes.
Secondly, A
liuely Faith:

Thirdly, Affiance in God.

Psal. 18. 1. 2.
Ps. 144. 2.

Fourthly, Loue of God.

Fifthly, The fear of God.

Ioy this Christian securitie, wee must labour to know, acknowledge and remember Gods sauiug Attributes, as he exerciseth them towards vs for our good, as his Wisedome, Power, All-sufficiencie, Mercy, Goodnesse, Truth and the Rest. For these are the foundation and ground of this securitie, vpon which it is built and resteth; of which if we are ignorant or forgetfull, it is no more possible for this Fort of securitie to be erected in vs; then to set vp a goodly building without a foundation, or to make it durable, if it be seated without other support, vpon the Moores or Sands. In the second place, let vs labour after a liuely and iustifying Faith, which is the condition of the Couenant, vpon which alone all our safetie and securitie resteth and relyeth; the alone instrument which vnitheth vs vnto Christ, and the only hand by which we receiue all Gods promises, and the fruits and benefites which doe accompanie them. Finally, that impenetrable shield which repelleth all the fierie darts of Satan, and maketh vs vndanted and without feare, when wee are encountred with his tentations. And therefore if we be indued with Faith, there is cause enough why we should be secure, seeing we are in Couenant with God, and by vertue thereof, vnder his protection, the members of Christ who is so armed with power, that all the malice of the Deuill and power of Hell, are not able to vanquish or doe vs any hurt; and haue all our vitall parts couered with a shield of prooffe, which cannot be pierced with all the Darts of Satans tentations. Thirdly, let vs vse all good meanes, to haue our hearts comforted and confirmed, with firme affiance and confidence in God, which is a fruit of the former grace, wherewith if we be indued, the Lord will be the Rocke of our refuge, our Sanctuarie and Castle of strength, vnto which if we flee in the time of danger, we may inioy safetie and securitie. For the God in whom wee trust is able to supply all our wants, to preserue vs in the day of danger, and to defeate and bring to nought all the plots and practises of all our enemies; and if we make him our hope and confidence, he will be our strength and tower, and he will so watch ouer vs with his providence, that we may sleepe securely vnder the shadow of his wings. Fourthly, let vs seeke with all earnestnesse, to haue our hearts inflamed with that heavenly fire of Gods loue, which being but a reflection or little sparke of his diuine loue towards vs, will be an euident signe to assure vs of it. And this loue of God in vs and towards vs, will worke in vs spirituall securitie in the assurance of Gods protection, who so loueth vs and whom we so loue; and this filiall affection, when we finde and feele it in vs, will cast out all seruile feare, and make vs bold and confident in the sense and apprehension of his fauour towards vs, knowing that hee who so deerey loueth vs is all-sufficient in wisedome and power, to turne all things to our good, and to make all our afflictions and tentations, our Enemies power and our owne weaknesse, to become helpees and furtherances to our saluation. Fifthly, if wee would haue this spirituall securitie, we must by all meanes cleanse our hearts from carnall securitie, and nourish in them the true feare of God. For

as

as well may we accord Light and Darknesse, Fire and Water, Good and Euill, as spirituall securitie with that which is carnall. Whom contrariwise, the true feare of God dwelling in vs, will banish all other feares, and make vs secure in those gracious Promises, which the Lord hath made vnto all that feare him: as namely, that there shall bee nothing wanting vnto them, and that hee will fulfill the desire of them that feare him, and will heare their crye and saue them. So that if they be not short in desiring safetie and securitie, the Lord will not be slow to grant it, or though they should be wanting vnto themselves in this regard, yet the Lord will not be wanting vnto them, seeing he is both willing and able to doe exceeding abundantly, above that wee can either aske or thinke. Sixty, if we desire this securitie, we must labour, that wee may be alwayes found clothed with the garment of righteousness, both the imputed righteousness of Christ applied by faith, which doth perfectly free vs from all danger, and bring with it peace of conscience and ioy in the holy Ghost; and inherient righteousness and holinesse wrought in vs by vertue of Christs death and resurrection, whereby wee are entitled vnto all the promises of Gods grace and protection made vnto the righteous, and among the rest vnto them especially which concerne our safetie and securitie, of which I haue before spoken. Seuenthy, (which is like vnto the former) wee must studie and indeauour to performe vnto God, in lieu of thanknesse for all his benefits, new obedience; not that of the Law which is impossible, but Euangelicall which is the obedience of faith: when hauing respect vnto all Gods Commandements wee labour to walke in them with sincere and vpright hearts, and with constancie and perseverance vnto the end. And if wee thus seeke out this old and good way, it will bring vs to this rest of spirituall securitie which we labour after. If we take this sweet and easie yoke of Euangelicall obedience, and hating all Pharisaicall pride, learne of Christ to be mecke and lowly in heart, we haue his gracious promise for it, that wee shall find this rest for our soules. If we approue our selues to be the children of our heauenly Father, by hauing his image of holinesse and righteousness stamped on vs, and by yeelding in all things obedience to his Will, that so we may be acceptable in his sight, then will hee giue vs the spirit of adoption, which will cast out all seruile feare, and giue vs much confidence, boldnesse and securitie in the assurance of his loue.

The sixt meanes to enioy this spirituall securitie is, to cast out of our hearts all carnall loue of earthly things, and so to contemne the world and worldly vanities, as that we can be content, if God so pleaseth, to leaue them as well as enioy them. For if hauing our desires mortified to the world, wee haue learned with the Apostle Paul, In whatsoeuer state wee are therewith to be content: If wee know how to bee abased, and how to abound, and bee euery where, and in all things instructed, both to be full and to be hungrie, both to abound and to suffer need: then may we in a great part be freed from all carnall feare, and both securely enioy these transitorie things when God giueth them, because

Psal. 119.
v. 145. 19.

Ep. 3. 10.

Sixty, Christian righteousness.

Rom. 5. 1.

Seuenthy, New obedience.

Psal. 119. 6.
145. 18.

Matt. 11. 28, 29.

2. 6.
The sixt meanes, contempt of the World.

Phil. 4. 12.

Diffus timore, si sperare desine-rit. Seneca.

Pro. 23. 5.

*Nemo securus est in his horis que potest inutas amittere.
August. de lib.
arbit.*

*¶ 7.
The seventh meanes, to keepe our hearts vp-right, and our conscience pure.
Hic inquit abeneus esto nil consire sibi, nulla
pallere culpa.
Horat. epist. 1. 1.
Epist. 1.*

*Exemplo quod-cumq; malo conmittitur, ipsi dissoluitur auctori:
prima hoc est ul-
tim quod se iudice
nemus nocens absoluitur improba quamuis gratia fallacis prioris
vicerit verba.
Iuvenal. Satyr.
13.*

1. Job. 4. 20, 21.

*Quid prodesse condere se & o-culos hominum
auersi, vitare?
bona conscientia
curam aduocat, mala etiam in solitudine apax sine sollicita est honesta conscientia facit.*

*¶ 8. Si turpia, quid refert penitem scire, cum tu scias? O te miserum si contemnas hunc reprim. Senec. Epist. 43.
¶ 9. Regatue qui secum vixerent? qui inquit nihil sibi conscientiam mali. Max. in serm. de Curios. Securitati cause it will not much trouble vs if it bee his pleasure to take them away: and also securely want them, when God scatterth vs of them, because our desires and hopes are moderate after their fruition. For our feares hold a proportion with our loue and hope, neither can they be little if these be great, nor contrariwise excessiue and immoderate, if these tempered and ouerruled with reason and religion. And therefore if our hearts be weaned from the loue of earthly things, then may we hold them (as children their birds which they are wearie of) in our open hands, being secure and carelesse, whether they stay with vs, or (as Salomons speaketh) like the Eagle betake themselves to their wings and flee away. But if our affections and loue bee still fixed and fastned on them, then will wee be vnwilling to leaue them, and so alwayes in feare, lest they be taken from vs. For (as one sayth) no man can be secure in the fruition of that, which he is altogether vnwilling to lose and forgoe.
¶ 10. Si nihil inquit facere, &c. Senec. Epist. 105.*

The fift meanes of spirituall securitie is, to keepe our hearts vp-right, and our consciences pure and vndefiled from sinne; especially from such sinnes as are committed, not through ignorance and infirmitie, but against knowledge and conscience. Or if we haue fallen into any such, our second care must bee to arise out of them and forsake them, and to purge our consciences by bathing them in the blood of Christ by Faith, and in the teares of vnfeigned repentance. For the conscience is of the nature of the eye, it must be kept cleane, and then it will be cheerfull and quiet; but if we nourish in it willingly the least sinnes (as it were little Motes in our sight) it will smart and rage, and neuer bee quiet till they bee cast out. And so long as we doe thus pre-serue the peace of a good conscience, wee may bee secure and without feare, because we haue also peace with God, For if our hearts condemne vs not, then haue wee confidence towards God (as the Apostle speaketh) and whatsoever we aske we receiue of him, because we keepe his Commandments, and doe those things which are pleasing in his sight. But if our hearts condemne vs (then will not God acquit vs) for hee is greater then our heart, and knoweth all things. So that onely the pure conscience can be the secure conscience; for sinne is the onely cause of feare, and therefore if it be purged away, there is no place for feare to lodge in. But if sinne remayne and defile the heart and conscience, there is no roome for securitie; for how can a man be secure, that by guilt of sinne is liable to Gods displeasure, and hath broken the peace with him? how can he not be full of feare, that is daily in danger to be attached with his iudgements; and to beare the deserued punishment of his sinne? And this the Heathens saw by the light of nature, namely, that Guilt and Feare, Innocency and Securitie, like inseparable companions accompanie one another. For one being asked who they were that liued securely, answered, They onely who were not conscious vnto themselves of any euill. And another affirmeth, that it is a great portion of securitie to doe nothing vniually; in which regard many of might lead a life confused and disturbed, because looke how much they hurt, and so much also they feare. For though a man may be safe for the present, hauing an euill conscience, yet hee can neuer bee secure; and though when he sinneth he be not taken with the manner, yet he is alwayes in feare of being taken. He is troubled in his sleepe, and whilest any mans wickednesse is spoken of, he thinketh of his owne; and though the guiltie may haue the hap to bee hid, yet cannot they haue the confidence of it.

The last meanes of securitie is, to keepe a narrow watch ouer all our wayes, and often to examine our estates, & to cast vp our accounts betweene God and vs, and when we find that we are cast behind hand, to plead Christs payment by a liuely Faith, that so wee may get our Quietus est, and haue the Hand-writing of the Law cancelled and nayed to his Crosse. For this securitie is not caused like that which is carnall, by negligence and sloth, but by care and watchfulnesse; For then may wee securely expect our summons to come to Gods Audit, when like the wise Steward we find the Booke of our reckonings iust and straight. Then may we with much peace and cheerfulness be called to giue vp our accounts, when wee find, that wee haue profitably imployed our Masters talents, and haue encreased them five or ten fold, by putting them out to the vse of our Lord; that is, the aduancement of his glorie, and good of our fellow seruants. Then may wee with the wise Virgins securely expect the coming of our Bridegroom, though through naturall heauiness, we be sometimes overtaken with drowsinesse, and take a nap, if we doe in our vsuall course stand vpon our watch, and haue the Lamps of a Christian profession, replenished and trimmed with the inward oyle of Faith, and all other sauing Graces, and the outward light of good works and a godly and righteous life; seeing when hee commeth wee shall enter with him into the bridall Chamber, and there solace our selues in his loue, and in the fruition of those inestimable and eternall ioyes which he hath prepared for vs; the which he grant vnto vs, that hath deerly bought them for vs, Iesus Christ the Righteous; to whom with the Father and the holy Spirit, three Persons, and one Immortall, Inuisible, onely wise and infinitely good God, be ascribed al glorie and prayse, power, maiestie and dominion, both now and for euer more.

AMEN.

Tri-uni Deo gloria.

FINIS.

p. 3.
The last meanes is, Christian watchfulnesse and often examination of our char.

Charitie

Humilitie

A GVIDE TO GODLYNESSE
Or a Treatise of a Christian Life

Shewing the duties wherein it Consisteth, the helps Inabling & the Reasons perswading vnto it & Impediments hindering y^e Pea-tise of it, and the best meanes

to Remoue them

Whereunto are added diuers Prayers

And

a Treatise of Carnall Securitie

By JOHN DOWNHAM

Batcheler in Divinitie

Phil. 2. 2. To him y^e ordereth his coun-sail: and he will shew y^e salvatⁱon of god.

2 Chron. 16. 9. The eyes of the Lord were to and fro throughout the whole earth;

to shew himself strong in y^e behalf of them whose heart is perfect towards him.

Printed at London by R.K. for Phileas Stephens & Christopher Merdith dwelling at y^e golden Lyon in Pauls Churchyard 1629

56...540

TO THE MOST RE-VEREND FATHER IN GOD,

GEORGE, BY GODS PROVIDENCE, ARCHbishop of CANTERBURY his Grace, Primate of all England, and Metropolitane, and one of his

Majesties most Honourable Prive Councill,

I. D. wisheth all happinesse, temporall and eternall.

Seeing there is nothing (most Reverend) so highly to bee esteemed, or so much to be desired of all Christians, as the glory of God in the saluation of his people; as being the principall and chiefe end of our creation and being; of our preservation and continuing in the world; therefore it behoueth all men, who would not falle of their end, and to liue in vaine, in their seuerall callings wherein God hath placed them, to haue this alwaies in their eye, as their chiefe marke, and to propound it as the principall scope of all their actions, vsing all good meanes whereby it may be furthered and aduanced.
As Princes and Magistrates, by enacting good lawes, and secing them duely executed, making their owne liues (as it were) rules of that obedience which they require of the people, and liuely examples and patternes for their imitation. Ministers, by leading those which are committed vnto their charge, in the waies of truth and godlinesse, not onely by their preaching and writing, instruction, admonition, perswasion and exhortation, but also by practizing those duties which they teach others, and shining before them in the light of a godly life. Finally, the people, by yeelding their cheerefull obedience to the godly lawes of Governours; and by imbracing the sound and profitable doctrine, and

The Epistle Dedicatory.

imitating the Christian and religious examples of their godly Teachers. The consideration whereof hath moued me to imploy my talent both by preaching and writing, for the aduancing (as much as in me lieth) the glory of my great Lord and Master, and the good & saluation of my fellow seruants; or rather, to cast my mite into the Churches treasury, hoping that he will accept it, though not in its own value and worth, yet because I haue desired to be faithful in a little, and willing in my penury to offer vnto him all that I haue. And studying how I might best imploy my paines and indeuours for the aduancing of the former ends, I could finde no one part of Diuinity more profitable, in these times, for me to spend my strength vpon, then that which consisteth more in experience and pra^tice, then in theory and speculation; and more principally tendeth to the sanctification of the heart, then the informing of the iudgement and the increasⁱng of knowledge; and to the stirring vp of all to the pra^tice of that they know in the duties of a godly life, and in bringing forth the fruits of faith in new obedience; then to fit them for discourse. For as in the ciuill state wee neede not so much to haue new lawes enacted, as to haue the old executed, and obserued; nor to haue these cleared to the vnderstanding by the learned in that Science, as to haue them obeyed and pra^tized by all estates and conditions; so in the Church, knowledge so far exceedeth our obedi^ence (not that which is sauing and experimental, which is neuer seuered from vse & pra^tice, but that which is curious and vselesse) that we more neede all good helpes to worke that we haue into our hearts, for the inflaming of them with feruent zeale and true deuotion, then to haue a greater measure of this light infused into our heads, which beeing destitute of feeling and pra^tice, in which the power of godlinesse chiefly consisteth, doth (as the Apostle speaketh) but puffed vs vp, and maketh vs rather more learned, then more godly and religious. Againe, seeing the Lord, aboue all other parts, requireth the heart, as being the first mouer and chiefe agent in this little world of man, which ordreth and disposeth of all the rest, me thinks, his Ambassadors cannot better spend their paines, then in wooing

The Epistle Dedicatory.

wooing and winning, espousing and vnitng them vnto him in those inuiolable and inseparable bonds of feruent loue and deuout zeale; and in perswading and enabling men to approue the sincerity of these holy affections, in their godly liues and vertuous actions. Finally, these discourses of practicall Diuinity tending to stirre vp deuotion, and to excite men to the duties of a godly life, are most fit and necessary for these times. First, because the world is already full of such bookes as doe fully handle the Doctrine of Di-uinity in all the points and parts of it, and also of learned controuerfies wherein the truth is sufficiently defended, and all errors, which doe oppose it, refuted & refelled. Secondly, because our long peace and prosperity haue much cooled and quenched the feruour of our zeale and deuotion, and haue caused vs (contenting our selues with some cold formalities, and slight profession) to neglect the sincere practise of those substantiall duties which are required to a godly and Christian life. Lastly, because in these declining times, wherein many men waxing weary of the Truth, and being glutted with long feeding on the spirituall Manna, do desire to returne to the fleshpots of Egypt, and for carnall respects doe fearefully relapse into Popery and superstition;
there is no meanes more effectuall to stay them from apostat-ic and backsliding, then that first, by catechizing they should be soundly grounded in the knowledge of the Truth which we professe (In which regard wee haue iust cause to praise God for our Soueraignes care in reuiuing this holy exercise, which hath long languished in many places through carelesse neglect) And secondly, that being by this meanes inlightned in the knowledge of the Truth, they haue it by powerfull perswasions wrought into their hearts and affections, that they may also practise it in their liues and conuersations, without which, all other meanes will be vneffectuall, either for the inlightning of the minde with sauing knowledg, or the inclining of the wil to imbrace it, and to continue firme and resolute against errors and heresies. For whereas sound and sauing knowledge of the truth, and the constant acknowledgement and profession of it, are the gifts of God,

The Epistle Dedicatory.

Psal. 119. 100.

Iohn 7. 17.

2. Thef. 2. 10, 11

which none can attaine vnto, but those vpon whom he pleaseth to bestow them; he vouchsafeth these graces vnto those alone who loue his Truth, and bring forth the fruits of it in their holy practice. To these only this rich talent of truth is intrusted; to these it is doubled and redoubled, who make best vse of it for the glory of him that gaue it, by causing it to shine in their liues and conuersations. As we see in the example of Dauid, who became wiser and of greater vnderstanding then the Ancient, yea then his Teachers, because hee kept Gods Precepts. Vpon these alone is bestowed the gift of discerning betweene the sauing Truth, and the traditions and precepts of men; according to that of our Sauour, If any man will do his will, he shall know the doctrine; whether it be of God, &c. As for them, who hide this rich talent without vse, the Lord will depriue them of it, and giue them ouer to their owne ignorance and errours. And those who allow a place for it onely in their heads, and will afford it no roome in their hearts, by louing, imbracing and practizing it, it is iust with God to send them strong delusions, that they should beleue lies, that they all might be damned who beleue not the truth, but had pleasure in vnrightheousnesse. As we see in the example of many in these times, who hauing beene inlightned with the knowledge of true Religion, haue become a prey to Priests and Iesuites; and (though otherwise of good vnderstanding) haue beene seduced and perswaded to beleue the most foolish absurdities in all Popery, of which there can be giuen no other reason then this, that they did not loue the light of Gods Truth, nor were carefull to walk by it in an holy conuersation, but resolu'd to continue in such profane & wicked courses, euen against knowledge and conscience, as would suffer them to finde no shadow of peace and comfort in the Doctrine of the Truth; and therefore they haue sought it in popish dispensations, and absolutions, which allow them, after that they haue, with the harlot in the Prouerbs, wiped their mouthes, to returne againe to their former vncleanenesse; in which regard I doubt not to affirme, that whereas error and ignorance do make one Papist; loose licenciousnesse and resolu'd profanenesse doe make many. Finally, whereas

The Epistle Dedicatory.

as those who haue the knowledge of the truth only seated in their braynes, and haue no feeling of the power and efficacy of it, for the sanctifying of their hearts, and the reforming of their liues, are easily seduced with cunning sophistry, when as they are puzzled with subtil arguments which they are not able to answer: they contrariwise who haue sound and felt in themselves the efficacy of truth, for the changing of their mindes and hearts, and the renewing of their liues, will neuer forsake it, but will imbrace and professe it vnto the death, and cheerefully seale it with their blood, when for want of learning and Art, they are not able to defend it against the subtil obiections & cunning sophistry of their aduersaries; As we see in the example of many of the holy Martyrs, who being vnlettered, haue maintained the truth in the impregnable fort of their hearts, when their heads haue beene too weake to preserue it from violence. In which regard it were much to bee desired, that all Ministers, who haue the charge of soules committed vnto them, would be carefull, after that by catechizing they haue thoroughly grounded their people in the sound knowledge of the truth, in the next place, to worke it into their hearts and affections, and to perswade them vnto an holy practice of it in their liues and conuersations, both by shining before them in their light of doctrine, and also of an holy example; by the one, shewing vnto them the way of truth, and by the other, leading them in it like good guides, as it were by the hand. At which marks as I haue aymed in the whole course of my Ministry, both by preaching and writing; so especially in these my present labours; the which I haue made bold to dedicate vnto your Grace; that they may remaine vnto the world, as a testimony how much I loue and honor you, as being in these perillous times, a chiefe pillar vnder his Maiesty, to vphold the sincere truth of Religion, against all errors, nouelties and heresies which otherwise were likely to grow too fast amongst vs; and also a principall Patrone of sound and solid preaching, which you are ready vpon all occasions to countenance both with your authority, and also by your painefull practice; as on the other side, to decry, as much as in you lyeth, that vaine or vane-

The Epistle Dedicatory.

tie of such Preachers, which only seeke to preach themselves, by making ostentation of their wit, learning and reading, without any care to speake vnto the capacity of the people; as though their maine end were rather to make the excellency of their gifts knowne, for their owne praise or preferment, then to communicate them vnto others, to the Glory of God that gaue them, or the good of their fellow seruants, for whose sake they were entrusted vnto them. The Lord long continue your Grace to be a singular instrument of his glory, by maintaining the purity and practice of his true Religion in his Church, to the ioy of all that wish well to Sion, and the increasing of your owne glory and happinesse in the life to come.

Your Graces humbly deuoted in all Christian duty and seruice,

IOHN DOWNAME.

TO THE CHRISTIAN READER

It is the duty (Christian Reader) of all who desire to approve themselves faithfully subjects and servants to our great Lord and Sovereigne, that they consecrate themselves wholly unto his service, not only in a spiritual Warfare, by fighting his battels, even unto the death, against the many and mighty enemies of his glory and our salvation; but also in the time of peace, by doing his will, and performing all his duties of his service, which in his Word he requireth of them. And therefore as I have endeavored heretofore (according to the measure of grace bestowed) to prepare and fit all those who vouchsafe to peruse my poore labours, that they may performe the duties of valiant Souldiers in my Bookes of the Christian Warfare: so perceiving that those my paines have much abounded their worth and good acceptance with all those that feare God; I have now also beene encouraged to undertake the other, and not only to describe the duties of a godly life, in which we ought to serve our Lord and Master, but also to shew the means whereby we may be enabled hereunto, and how we may remove the impediments which otherwise might hinder us from entering into, or proceeding in the wayes of godlinesse. The which my labours, if they prove as profitable to those that readeth them, as they have beene painefull unto me in framing and composing them; I shall thinke my selfe abundantly recompenced, and much more rejoyce where I see the fruit of my hopes, then ever I had cause to sigh and grieve, through wearinesse in my laborious second time. Of which, though I should faile (as I hope I shall not) yet, as it is said of Perseus, that it alwayes bringeth a reward with it; so may I truly say of these my labours: out of which, so much profit, comfort, and contentment have accrued unto my selfe, that I should have no iust cause to repent for the faintnesse of my reward; although no other fruit should spring from them. But if I be not deceived, as we are apt to be, we lesse blinded in iudging of our spiritual and mental, then of our naturall and corporeall things; these my present labours will prove no lesse profitable unto all that peruse them, then any of the former. For, if my affection corrupting my iudgement, doth not cause me to looke upon them (like Fathers, upon the children of their age) with an over partiall eye; they are in some respects to be preferred before any of the other, both because the subject on which they intimate hath the privilege of excellency and necessity, as being the maine duties of Christianity, which are to be performed thorowout the whole course of our lives; and also because they generally concerne all sorts of men, who thinke themselves bound to doe God any service, or to carry themselves so, as that their works and wayes may be accepted of him. If any man shall thinke that I have described the duties of a godly life with more strictnesse, and in greater perfection, then any can attaine unto in this state of imperfection, and so have required more of others, then I can any wayes be able to performe my selfe; let him know, that the worke must be fitted to the rule, and not the rule to the worke, and that this must be straight and perfect, although by reason of

To the Christian Reader.

Phil. 3. 13, 14.

of the crookednesse of the matter or stuffe, no worke-man is able to frame it so, but that it will in many places decline and swaue from it. And though the marke of perfection be so small, and so farre out of our reach, that none in this life can hit it; yet must it be set before vs, and we must strine to shoot at it, as neere as we can; seeing they are more likely to haue the prize of the best game, who aime at it, then those who looke another way. For my selfe; none can accuse me of so many and great imperfections in my course and practice of these duties, as I am ready to charge my selfe within the court of mine own consciences; yet if I would not belie the grace of God in me, I must professe, that I doe labour to performe that my selfe which I propound vnto others; and though I cannot attaine to the goale of perfection, as I haue here described it out of Gods Word; yet bewayling my stiffenesse and lamenesse in running the Race, I indouour and presse (in some measure) towards the marke, for the price of the high calling of God in Iesus Christ; and no more then this doe I require of others. Now, because wee cannot grow in grace and godlinesse, without the assistance of Gods Spirit, and this cannot be had, vntill wee sue and seeke for it; and because also godlinesse in a great part consisteth in pouring forth our faulces before God in humble and hearty, frequent and feruent prayers, therefore lest any thing which is necessary, should be wanting to this Treatise, I haue in the end of it set downe diuers formes, which may serue either for the use of weak Christians who cannot fit themselves with better, or for some direction to guide them in composing or conceiuing others, according to their owne particular occasions. If any man thinke them ouer-long and tedious, to him, I confesse, they are so, (though there is scarce two amongst them that may not be treatably vntered in a quarter of an houre) and therefore I would not torture his deuotion, by perswading him to racke and stretch it aboue its due length and strength; but rather I would aduise, if hee meet not with shorter Prayers, which better please him, that hee deuide both the Confessions and Petitions, with some marke of a Pen, so as he may vse one halfe at one time, and the rest at another. And so (Christian Reader) I leaue thee to the Lord, and his good blessing vpon all thy studies and indouours, only requesting these two things at thine hands; First, that as I haue laboured much in giuing thee directions for the leading of a Christian life; so thou wilt also strine with all thine indouour, to walke in this way reuealed vnto thee. And secondly, that if thou reape any fruit of my paines (as I doubt not thou wilt, if thou reade to profit by them, constantly vnto the end, and not heere and there, by fits and snatches) thou wilt be pleased to afford me the benefit of thy Prayers, that together with thy selfe, I may continue and hold out vnto the end, in the profession and practice of all Christian and holy duties; vntill hauing finished our course with ioy, we doe both of vs receiue the Crowne of righteousness, which God of his free grace hath laid up for vs, and for all those who loue his appearing.

O Tob. the 16.

1622.

Thine in the Lord Iesus
our Head and Sauour,

I. D.

A TABLE CONTAINING IN IT THE CONTENTS of the Chapters and Sections in the Treatise following.

The Contents of the first Booke.

CAP. I.

Containing the Preface to the following Treatise, which sheweth the excellency, profit and necessity of the subject matter therein handled.

pag. 1.

SECT. I. That the end of every thing is to be preferred before the meanes which are destinated vnto it.

- 1.
- 2 That the practice of Religion and godlinesse, is to bee preferred before the theory and bare knowledge of it. 2
- 3 That the practice of godlinesse is an infallible signe of the sincerity of our knowledge and profession. 3
- 4 That the practice of godlinesse is the touch-stone of our faith. 3
- 5 That though a godly life is not the cause, yet it is the way to euerlasting happinesse. 4
- 6 That all Gods Ministers should inforce this doctrine and practice of a godly life. 4

CAP. II.

Containing the definition of a godly life, whereby we may know what it is, and wherein it consisteth.

5

SECT. I. What a godly life is, both according to the Law, and the Gospell.

- 5
- 2 That a godly life chiefly consisteth in Euangelicall and filiall obedience, and what it is. 5
- 3 That the regenerate onely can leade a godly life. 6

- 4 That the Spirit of God is the Authour of spirituall life. 7
- 5 That the Spirit inlighteneth vs in the wayes of godlinesse. 7
- 6 That we must be ingrafted into Christ, before we can leade a godly life. 8
- 7 That onely those can leade a godly life, who are in the couenant of grace. 9
- 8 That a liuely faith is necessarily required to a godly life. 10
- 9 That the duties of a godly life must spring from the fountaine of loue. 10
- 10 That the duties of a godly life must proceed from thankfulnesse. 11
- 11 That the duties of a godly life must be done in humility. 11
- 12 That we must propound Gods glory, as the end of all our actions. 13

CAP. III.

Of the maine matter of a godly life, namely, that it must be framed according to Gods will, in holinesse, righteousness and sobriety.

14

SECT. I. That we can no otherwise please God, then by framing our liues according to his will. 14

- 2 That not Gods secret, but reuealed will must be the rule of our liues and actions. 15
- 3 Reasons prouing that wee can no otherwise please God, then by doing his will. 15
- 4 Of the speciall duties wherein a godly life chiefly consisteth. 18

CAP.

The Table.

CAP. III.

Of the forme and manner how all Christian duties ought to be performed, namely, with feruency of desire, a settled resolution, and earnest indeuour to please God in all things. 19

- Sect. 1 That these desires, resolutions and indeuours are required of all those who will serue and please God. 19
- 2 That all Euangelicall obedience consisteth chiefly in these desires, resolutions and indeuours. 20
- 3 That they must not be faint and weak, but feruent and earnest. 21
- 4 That they must be intire and totall, both in respect of the subiect, and object. 22
- 5 That our desires, resolutions and indeuours must aime at the meanes, as well as at the end. 23
- 6 That they must not be lazic and idle, but diligent and painfull. 23
- 7 That they must not bee by fits and flashes, but constant and durable. 24

CAP. V.

Of sauing knowledge, which is the first maine ground of a godly life. How necessary it is, and the causes of it. 25

- Sect. 1 Of the maine grounds of a godly life. 25
- 2 That sauing knowledge is the prime vertue, and mother grace, from which all others haue their beginning. 25
- 3 That ignorance estrangeth vs from God, and the life of grace and glory. 27
- 4 That God is the chiefe Authour and efficient cause of sauing knowledge. 28
- 5 Of the instrumentall causes of sauing knowledge. 29

CAP. VI.

Of the object of sauing knowledge, namely, God himselfe and his attributes, his Word, and workes. 30

- Sect. 1 That there is a God, and how we may know it. 30
- 2 Who this God is, and how he may be described. 30

- 3 Of Gods attributes, and how they are ascribed vnto God. 30
- 4 Of Gods primary attributes, and how they may be described. 31
- 5 Of Gods secondary attributes, and how they differ from those shadowes of them which are in the creatures. 31
- 6 What Gods secondary attributes are, and how they may be described. 32
- 7 Of the persons in Trinity. 33
- 8 Of the knowledge of Gods workes, and first, of his decree. 34
- 9 Of the execution of Gods decree in mans Creation, fall and misery. 34
- 10 Of our recouery out of our misery. 35

CAP. VII.

Of the quantity and quality of sauing knowledge, and how necessary it is to a godly life. 36

- Sect. 1 Of the quantity of knowledge, and the diuers degrees of it. 36
- 2 Of the quality of our knowledge, that it may be effectually. 38
- 3 That this sauing knowledge is necessary to a godly life. 38
- 4 Of the meanes of sauing knowledge. 39

CAP. VIII.

Of a lively and iustifying faith, which is the second maine ground of a godly life. 40

- Sect. 1 That without faith wee cannot performe any duty of a godly life. 40
- 2 That faith and a godly life are inseparable companions. 41
- 3 That they deceiue themselues, who dis-ioyne faith from a godly life. 42
- 4 Of a generall faith. 43
- 5 Of iustifying faith, what it is, and what is required vnto it. 43
- 6 Of the degrees of faith, and how they are wrought in vs. 45
- 7 That the duties of a godly life hold a proportion with our faith, whether it be weake or strong. 46

CAP. IX.

Of the meanes whereby wee may obtaine a lively faith, and daily increase it, from the least, to the highest degree. 47

- Sect. 1 Of five speciall meanes whereby we

The Table.

we may obtaine a liuely faith.	47
2 Of the sixth meanes.	48
3 Of the meanes whereby wee may attaine vnto fulnesse of perswasion.	49
4 Of that speciall faith whereby we apply Christ for our sanctification.	50
5 Of the meanes whereby wee may strengthen our faith in the assurance of our sanctification.	50
CAP. X.
Of the third ground of a godly life, which is a pure heart.	52
Sect. 1 Of a pure heart, what it is, and from whence it ariseth.	52
2 That all true fruits of godlines spring from a pure heart.	52
3 That God chiefly desireth the heart, aboue all other parts.	53
4 That God respecteth no duty, vnlesse it proceed from a pure heart.	54
5 That all sound repentance must begin at the heart.	55
6 Wherein purenesse of heart consisteth.	55
7 Of the causes of the hearts purity.	57
CAP. XI.
Of the signes of a pure heart, and of the mean whereby wee may obtaine and preserve it.	58
Sect. 1 Of the inward signes of a pure heart.	58
2 Of the outward signes of a pure heart.	59
3 That it is a good meanes of a pure heart, highly to esteeme it.	59
4 Of the manifold euils which accompany a polluted heart.	61
5 That faith is a chiefe meanes of a pure heart.	61
6 Of the meanes to preserve the purity of our hearts; the first whereof is, to watch ouer them.	62
7 The second meanes is, to preserve them from all sinne.	63
8 The third meanes is, to auoyd the occasions of sinne.	64
9 The fourth meanes is, often to examine our hearts in the sight of God.	64
10 The fifth meanes is, to be continually taken vp in holy exercises.	65
		CAP. XII.
		Of Conscience in generall, the nature, properties and effects of it.	65
		Sect. 1 That the nature of conscience may partly be knowne by the name.	65
		2 What conscience is, being generally considered.	66
		3 Of the diuers offices of conscience.	67
		4 That conscience hath all its power and authority from God onely.	68
		CAP. XIII.
		Of a good Conscience, which is a maine ground of a godly life: what it is, and the causes of it.
			69
		Sect. 1 What a good conscience is, and what is the efficient cause that worketh it in vs.	69
		2 Of the meritorious cause of a good conscience.	69
		3 Of the instrumentall causes.	70
		4 That a good conscience springeth from a liuely faith.	71
		CAP. XIII.
		Of the actions and effects of a good conscience; of the peace which it truly speaketh, and how it differeth from the false peace of secure worldlings.
			72
		Sect. 1 That a good conscience speaketh goodnesse and peace onely.	72
		2 That it speaketh peace according to the truth of Gods Word.	73
		3 The differences betweene the peace of a good and bad conscience; as first, that the peace of the wicked proceedeth from ignorance of their estate.	73
		4 That the peace of a good conscience proceedeth from spirituall life; of an euill, from senselesnesse and deadnesse.	74
		5 That the peace of the wicked proceedeth from carnall security.	75
		6 That the peace of an euill conscience proceedeth from worldly employments.	76
		CAP. XV.
		Of the good things which a good Conscience witnesseth to the faithfull. 77
		Sect. 1 That it witnesseth, first, pardon of	(b)

The Table.

of sinne, and reconciliation with God.

- 2 Secondly, it witnesseth our sanctification. 77
- 3 Thirdly, that we are in all estates blessed. 78
- 4 That a good conscience maketh vs cheerefull in Gods seruice. 79

CAP. XVI.

Of the signes and properties of a good conscience.

- Sect. I The first signe, and the causes of it. 81
- 2 The second is taken from the manner of working it in vs. 81
- 3 The third is the effects of it. 81
- 4 That it is knowne by the properties of it; and first, that it is pure and peaceable. 82
- 5 That it keepeth it selfe cleere before God and men. 82
- 6 That a good conscience knoweth it selfe to be so. 83
- 7 That a good conscience maketh vs merry and cheerefull. 84
- 8 That it may bee knowne by the integrity and constancy of it. 85

CAP. XVII.

Of the meanes whereby wee may get a good conscience, and preserve it being gotten.

- Sect. I The first meanes is, highly to esteeme it. 86
- 2 The second meanes, to know Gods reuealed will, and apply it for vse. 87
- 3 The third meanes is a liuely faith. 88
- 4 The fourth meanes are the exercises of repentance. 89
- 5 Of the meanes whereby a good conscience may be preserved. 90

THE SECOND BOOKE
of a godly life, containing the maine parts and principal duties of it, which wee ought generally to performe at all times, and vpon all good occasions,

CAP. I.

Of the maine duties wherein a godly life consisteth.

- Sect. I That a godly life consisteth in doing all those duties which God hath commanded. 92
- 2 Of that Euangelicall obedience wherein a godly life consisteth. 93
- 3 That this obedience must bee performed after an Euangelicall maner. 94
- 4 That we must ioine in it the duties of piety, righteousnesse and sobriety. 94

CAP. II.

Of piety, which is the summe of the first Table.

- Sect. I Of piety, comprizing in it all the duties of Gods seruice. 95
- 2 3, 4, 5. Reasons mouing vs to imbrace piety, taken from the excellency, profit and necessity of it.

CAP. III.

Of our adhering and cleauing vnto God, with full purpose and resolution of our hearts.

- Sect. I Of the summe of the first Commandement. 99
- 2 Of adhering vnto God, what it is, and the necessity of it. 100
- 3 The properties of sound resolution; as first, that it must be vniuersall. 101
- 4 The necessity of our adhering vnto God, proued by diuers reasons. 102
- 5 Of the meanes whereby we may confirme our resolution of adhering vnto God. 103

CAP. IIII.

Of trust, affiance, and hope in God.

- Sect. I Of affiance in God, and wherein it consisteth, and of the reasons which may moue vs vnto it. 105
- 2 Of the meanes of affiance. 106
- 3 Of hope in God, what it is, and wherein it consisteth. 107
- 4 Of the meanes of Hope. 108

CAP. V.

Of the loue of God, and diuers vertues which spring from it.

- Sect. I Of the loue of God, what it is, and

The Table.

and wherein it consisteth, and of the measure and meanes of it. 109	6 Of the administration of the Sacra- ments. 127
2 Of the zeale of Gods glory, what it is, and wherein it consisteth. 110	CAP. VIII.
3 Of reioicing in God, what it is, and the meanes whereby wee may attaine vnto it. 111	Of the duties required in the third and fourth Commandments. 129
4 Of thankfulness vnto God, what is re- quired vnto it, and the meanes of it. 112	Sect. 1 Of the sanctifying of Gods Name, and how it ought to be done. 129
5 Of obedience vnto God, what it is, and wherein it consisteth, and of the properties of true obedience. 113	2 Of the sanctifying Gods Name in lawfull oathes. 130
6 Of the meanes of obedience, whereby we may be enabled to performe it. 114	3 Of the sanctifying Gods Name, by making and performing our vowes. 131
7 Of passiue obedience, and patience in afflictions. 115	4 Of the sanctifying Gods Sabbath, and what is required vnto it. 131
CAP. VI.	5 Of the spirituall sanctification of the outward reft. 132
Of the feare of God, and humility which ariseth from it, ioyned with his loue. And of Gods external worship with the body. 116	CAP. IX.
Sect. 1 Of the feare of God, what it is, and the causes of it. 116	Of the summe of the second Table. 133
2 That this feare of God is commended vnto vs in the Scriptures, and of the profit of it. 117	Sect. 1 Of the duties of righteousnesse towards our neighbours. 133
3 Of the meanes of obtaining this feare of God. 118	2 Of the dutie of sobriety towards our selues. 134
4 Of humility, what it is, and the causes of it. 119	3 Of the duties of charity. 135
5 Of the excellency and vtility of hu- mility. 120	4 Of the meanes and manner of work- ing charity in vs. 135
6 Of the meanes whereby wee may at- taine vnto humility. 121	5 What charity is, and the properties of it. 136
7 Of externall worship with our bo- dies. 122	6 Of the object of charity, which is our neighbours. 137
CAP. VII.	7 The manner of louing our neighbors, namely, as our selues. 138
Of the duties which are required in the second Commandment: as prayer, hearing the Word, and administration of the Sacra- ments. 123	8 That naturall selfe-loue is not the rule of charity, but that which is holy and spirituall. 138
Sect. 1 Of the things generally requi- red in the second Commandment. 123	9 The properties of lawfull selfe-loue. 139
2 Of prayer and imprecation. 124	10 That wee must loue our neighbours, as Christ hath loued vs. 139
3 Of the duties of Gods Ministers. 125	CAP. X.
4 Of the duties of hearers, and first, such as respect their preparation. 125	Of the reasons which may mooue vs to embrace charity. 140
5 Of the duties required in hearing, and after we haue heard. 126	Sect. 1 Of the excellency of charity. 140
	2 Of the profit of it, in respect of our neighbours. 141
	3 Of the profit of it, in respect of our selues. 141
	4 Of the necessity of charity. 142
	(b 2)
	CAP. XI.

The Table.

CAP. XI.

Of the duties required in the fifth Commandement.

- Sect. 1 Of the generall duties required in the fifth Commandement. 144
- 2 Of the duties of superiours in excellencie, and of inferiours towards them. 144
- 3 Of the duties of superiours in authority in generall, and of inferiours towards them. 146
- 4 Of the duties of superiours and inferiours in the family; and first, of man and wife towards one another. 147
- 5 Of the duties of husband and wife towards the rest of the family. 148
- 6 Of the duties of parents and children. 148
- 7 Of the duties of Masters and servants. 149
- 8 Of the duties of Ministers and people. 149
- 9 Of the duties of Magistrates and subjects. 150

CAP. XII.

Of the duties required in the sixth Commandement.

- Sect. 1 Of the summe of this Commandement, and of anger and hatred. 151
- 2 Of the inward duties and vertues here required. 152
- 3 Of outward duties, respecting the person of our neighbours. 152
- 4 Of the duties which wee owe to our neighbours soule. 153
- 5 Of duties belonging to our owne persons. 153

CAP. XIII.

Of the duties required in the seventh, eighth, ninth, and tenth Commandements.

- Sect. 1 Of the summe of the seventh Commandement. The duties which it inioyneth, and vices which it forbiddeth. 154
- 2 The meanes of preserving chastity. 155
- 3 Of duties required in the right getting of our goods. 156

- 4 Of the duties respecting the right vse of our goods. 157
- 5 Of the ninth Commandement, and of that truth which is required in it. 158
- 6 Of the preservation of our neighbours good name, and the meanes of it, respecting our inward disposition. 158
- 7 Other duties respecting outward profession. 159
- 8 Of the preserving our owne good name. 159
- 9 Of the tenth Commandement, and what is required in it, to wit, originall righteousness, and spirituall concupiscence. 160
- 10 Of the Spirit lusting against the flesh. 161
- 11 Of the meanes inabling vs to the obedience of this Commandement. 161

THE THIRD BOOKE OF
a godly life, contayning in it those duties which are required in our daily exercise, both generally at all times of the day, and vpon all occasions, and specially in the seuerall parts of it. p. 163

CAP. I.

That the duties of a godly life ought daily and constantly to be performed, and not by fits and starts onely.

- Sect. 1. That we must performe these duties daily and constantly vpon euery fit occasion. 163
- 2 That no time is exempted from Gods seruice, prooued by Scripture. 164
- 3 Diuers reasons proouing the necessity of the daily exercise of a godly life. 166
- 4 Of the many great dangers which follow the neglect of this daily exercise. 167
- 5 Another reason taken from our calling and profession. 168
- 6 The last reason taken from the vncertainty of our liues. 169

CAP. II.

Of some speciall duties of a godly life, which are to be performed in our daily exercise.

The Table.

ercise. And first, of the renewing of our repentance. 169

- Sect. 1. Of the daily renewing of our Covenant with God, by the renewing of our faith and repentance. 169
- 2 Of the daily renewing of our repentance, & what is required vnto it. 171
- 3 Of the daily confession of our sins, and iudging our selues for them. 173
- 4 Of our detestation and hatred of sinne. 174
- 5 Of the benefits which would arise of this exercise of renewing our repentance. 175

CAP. III.

Of our daily exercise in renewing our faith. 176

- Sect. 1. That the daily renewing of our faith is very profitable & necessary. 176
- 2 What this renewing of our faith is, and the meanes whereby we may be enabled to doe it, which consist first, in diuers Meditations. 177
- 3 Of the second sort of meanes which consist in the performance of diuers actions. 179
- 4 Of the manifold benefits which would arise from the daily renewing of our faith. 179
- 5 Of diuers other benefits which follow the daily renewing of our faith. 181

CAP. IIII.

Of our daily exercise in seeking God, and of the things which are required vnto it. 183

- Sect. 1. That our seeking God daily, is a necessary duty. 183
- 2 What it is to seeke God. 185
- 3 What is required to our seeking God. First, that we daily labour more perfectly to know and remember him. 185
- 4 The second thing is, that we adhere vnto him with our hearts & affections. 186
- 5 That we must cleaue vnto God by fervent loue. 187
- 6 That we must labour daily to haue our communion with God increased. 188
- 7 That vnto the seeking of God is required, that wee daily renew our repentance. 190
- 8 That wee must seeke to haue and hold Gods grace and fauour in Iesus Christ. 188

CAP. V.

Of the right manner of seeking God, so as we may be sure to finde him; and of the benefits which arise from it. 189

- Sect. 1. That we must seek God first and principally, seasonably & constantly. 189
- 2 That wee must seeke God in Iesus Christ, sincerely, zealously, and with all diligence. 193
- 3 Of the fruits and benefits which we enjoy by our daily seeking God. 194
- 4 Of the euils which follow the neglect of seeking God. 195

CAP. VI.

Of the Christian armour which we must put on daily, and of the benefits which wee shall reape thereby. 196

- Sect. 1. Of the seuerall parts of the Christian Armour. 196
- 2 That the putting on of the Christian Armour is very necessary. 198
- 3 Of the manifold benefits which arise from being thus armed. 198
- 4 That euery seuerall part of Armour bringeth speciall profit. 199

CAP. VII.

Of the fourth mayne dutie, which is, to arme our selues against all sin, and to demote our selues wholly to Gods seruice. 200

- Sect. 1. That wee must necessarily arme our selues against all sinne, and the reasons of it. 200
- 2 Of the meanes to worke in our hearts. 203
- 3 Of the meanes whereby we may be strengthened against sinne. 203
- 4 That we must imbrace all vertues and Christian duties. 204

CAP. VIII.

Of the fifth and sixth daily duties, which are to conforme our selues to Gods Law, and to submit our selues to his good pleasure. 205

- Sect. 1. That wee must conforme our thoughts, words, and actions, according to Gods Law. 205
- 2 Of the right ordering of our tongues, and

The Table.

- and the meanes of it. 205
- 3 Of the right ordering of our workes and actions. 206
- 4 Of the sixth mayne duty, which is to submit our selues to Gods good pleasure in all things. 207

CAP. IX.

Of the last maine duty of the daily exercise, which is Prayer. 208

- Sect. 1. That wee must pray daily and continually. 208
- 2 Of ordinary prayers at set times, and how often to be performed. 209
- 3 Of extraordinary prayers vpon euery good occasion. 210
- 4 Quiers motiues vnto the daily exercise of prayer. 211

CAP. X.

Of the daily exercise of thanksgiuing, and how it ought to be performed. 212

- Sect. 1. What things are required in the duty of thanksgiuing. 212
- 2 That we must giue thanks in all things. 213
- 3 That we must giue thanks at all times. 213
- 4 Reasons which may moue vs to daily thanksgiuing. 214
- 5 Of the meanes whereby we may be stirred vp to thankfulnessse. 215

CAP. XII.

Of the duties of the daily exercise in euery generall part of the day. And first, of awaking with God by Prayer and Meditation. 216

- Sect. 1. Of lifting vp our hearts vnto God as soone as we awake, that wee may offer vnto him our first seruise. 216
- 2 Of lifting vp our hearts by some short prayers. 217
- 3 Of the subiect matter of our Morning Meditations. 218
- 4 That in our first Meditations, wee must renew our faith and repentance. 219
- 5 Of the manifold benefites which will arise from these religious Morning exercises. 220

CAP. XIII.

Of prayer in the Morning, how profitable it is and necessary, and of our preparation vnto it. 221

- Sect. 1. Of the fruit and profit of prayer. 221
- 2 Their obiection answered, who pretend want of leasure to pray. 222
- 3 That before we pray, we must vse preparation, and what is required vnto it. 223

CAP. XIII.

Of such things as are required as essentiall vnto prayer. 225

- Sect. 1. That we must pray in truth, with attention, and not with wandring thoughts. 225
- 2 The meanes hereof. 226
- 3 That wee must pray with our understandings. 227
- 4 That wee must pray in faith. 228
- 5 That we must pray in humility, with reuerence and feruency. 229

CAP. XV.

Of the circumstances of Prayer, their quantity and quality. 230

- Sect. 1. Of our gesture and voyce in prayer. 230
- 2 That we must not affect prolixity and superfluity of words in prayer. 231
- 3 Of the quality of our prayers. 233

CAP. XVI.

Of the forme and methode which are to be used in our Prayers. 233

- Sect. 1. Of formes of prayer set downe by others. 233
- 2 Of formes of prayer inuented by our selues. 234
- 3 Of conceiued prayers, and how farre forth they are commendable. 235
- 4 What methode is best in disposing the parts of our prayers. 236
- 5 What duties are to be performed after we haue prayed. 237
- 6 Of the time in the Morning when wee are to vse our priuate Prayer. 238

The Table.

7 Of prayer with the rest of the family. 239

CAP. XVII.

Of singing Psalmes, and reading the Scriptures in the family. 240

Sect. 1. That singing of Psalmes is inioyned in the Scriptures, and practised by the faithfull. 240

2 How we may sing Psalmes in a right manner. 241

3 That wee must diligently reade the Scriptures, and the great profit of this exercise. 242

CAP. XVIII.

Of our daily exercise in the duties of our callings, and of diuers vertues required in them. 243

Sect. 1. That wee must make choyce of lawfull callings. 243

2 That wee must be regenerate, before we can serue God acceptably in our callings. 244

3 That wee must performe the duties of our callings in faith. 245

4 That the duties of our callings must proceed from loue. 245

5 That they must bee directed to right ends. 246

6 That they must bee done in a right manner, and first, with heavenly minds. 246

7 That they must bee sanctified by the Word and Prayer. 247

8 Of the vertues which must accompany vs in the duties of our callings. 248

CAP. XIX.

Diuers reasons to perswade vs to bee faithfull and diligent in the duties of our callings. 251

Sect. 1. That God hath ordained man to labour, and in many places of the Scriptures hath stricktly inioyned it. 252

2 That it is Gods Ordinance that wee should labour in our callings. 252

3 That God blesseth the diligent with many benefits. 253

4 That the Lord abhorreth idlenesse and negligence, and seuerely punisheth

it. 254

5 That idlenesse is the cause of innumerable sinnes. 254

6 That it maketh vs liable to many punishments. 256

CAP. XX.

That all persons without exceptions are bound by Gods Law, to walke painefully in the workes of their callings. 257

Sect. 1. That the former reasons bind all men to painefulnesse in their callings. 257

2 That Gentlemen haue no priuiledge to bee idle, and how they should spend their time. 258

3 That the poorer sort must labour painefully in their callings, notwithstanding that the badnesse of their Trades afford small earnings. 259

4 That the impotent are not bound to labour, but they with good confidence take their ease. 261

CAP. XXI.

8 Of Recreations, which are not onely lawfull, but also profitable and necessary, if wee be exercised in them according to Gods word. 262

Sect. 1. That we cannot continually be exercised in the workes of our callings. 262

2 What lawfull recreation is, and that it may be used with good confidence. 263

3 That recreations are profitable and necessary. 264

4 That wee must make choyce of such recreations as are lawfull, and what they are. 265

5 Whether it be lawfull to play at games which stand vpon hazard and chance. 269

CAP. XXII.

8 Of diuers cautions which bind vs to be sedulous in our callings. 269

Sect. 1. That recreations must be used with moderation, in respect of our loue of them. 269

2 That moderation must be used in respect of time. 270

(b 4)

3 That

Dioscor. l. 7. c. 2.

Psal. 114 27, 28
or 145 16.

Esa. 1. 3.

§. Sect. 4.
Of some short meditations
before we eate.

earnest repentance. Among others he penitently confessed, that this punishment was iustly inflicted vpon him for his abuse of Gods good creatures, especially because he would neither of himselfe, nor by the perswasion of his friends, giue thanks vnto God when hee receiued his food, which he conceiued to be the cause why now God would not suffer him to haue the vse of his creatures, which he had so often abused by his grosse ingratitude; and earnestly desired that hee might bee an example vnto all men in this fearefull iudgement, that they might escape the like by shunning his sinne. The which being so notorious, I thought fit in this place to insert, though no man is more sparing in such particular relations. Neither let any man here say, that all this might proceede from some naturall causes, and that there might be some such like reason giuen of it, as of that disease which Physicians call id est canis mors, when one bitten by a mad dog, feareth the water, like the dog that did bite him. For howsoeuer it was an example strange and wonderfull, yet doe I not say nor thinke, that any thing in it was supernaturall and miraculous. But let vs not for this cause neglect to make an holy vse of it, in auoyding this sinne, which God by this fearefull iudgement brought home to this poore mans conscience, vnlesse we would proclaime, that nothing but miracles can affect vs. For howsoeuer God bringeth these things to passe by naturall causes, yet because they are so farre out of the ordinary course of nature, and doe so rarely happen; and seeing by a speciall providence, God causeth a concurrence of seldome meeting causes; that they may produce such strange effects after a wonderfull and vnwonted manner; such examples should not bee much lesse effectuell to worke vpon our hearts and consciences, then miracles themselues, seeing they are purposely sent of God for this end. And as God may iustly for our vnthankfulness vtterly deprive vs of the vse of his creatures; so doth he often in their vse turne his blessings into curses, making them through our abuse the causes of all diseases, yea of death it selfe, as common experience sheweth; yea, he may iustly cause the least bit of meate or crum of bread to choake in stead of nourishing vs, the which also hath sometime happened. Again, let vs consider that it is brutish and swinish vngratitude, if when God openeth his hand, and filleth vs with plenty of his good pleasure, we doe not by the eye of faith looke vp to the Author of all our good, to render vnto him thanks for all his blessings; yea, heerein we shall be much worse then beasts, in that diuers of them acknowledge their masters, and recompence their care and cost, by their profitable labour, according to that of the Prophet, The Oxe knoweth his owner, and the Asse his masters crib; but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider.

Vnto this prayer and thanksgiuing, let vs adde in the next place, as opportunity will serue and our company and occasions permit, some short meditations, before we eate, or in the beginning of our meale; as first of Gods infinite goodnesse and bounty, who preserueth and nourisheth all his creatures, especially vs by a more speciall providence, prouiding for vs sufficient plenty of all good blessings, and causing vs to inioy them with peace and safety. Whereas there are many afflicted and poore seruants of God, who would be glad to feede vpon our reuerfions and leauings; and are in danger before they rise from their table, to haue their throats cut, and their meates mingled with their blood. Yea, consider that thou inioyest from God, not onely this plenty with peace and safety of body and state, but also with it the light of the Gospell, and the food of thy soule, whereby thou mayest be strengthened in all grace, and nourished vnto life euerlasting, which many poore soules haue not at all, or secretly and by stealth, with extreme hazzard of their states and liues. Vnto which meditation of Gods mercy and bounty, let vs ioyne the consideration of our owne vilenesse and vnworthinesse, in which, if God should looke vpon vs, he might iustly deprive vs of all his benefits, and not suffer vs to haue a bit of bread to satisfie our hunger, nor a drop of drinke to quench our thirst. Let vs remember that at our meales we are to nourish two ghests, the soule as well as the body, and let our chiefe care be to giue best welcome to our best ghest; the which will bring vnto vs chiefest comfort. For what food our body receiueth, it keepeth not, but within a few houres is againe vexed with hunger; but the foode of the soule shall still remaine, and wee shall haue the fruit and benefit of it in this life and the life to come. Let vs consider, that as we feed in great part vpon mortall and corruptible creatures, so our bodies like our meates are mortall and corruptible; and therefore following our Sauours counsell, let our chiefe care be for our immortall soules, and to labour, not for the meate that perisheth, but for that which endureth to euerlasting life. Finally let vs remember, that this our food is part of that allowance which our heauenly Father giueth vnto vs as his household seruants, that being strengthened heereby, we may more cheerefully doe him seruice, in performing those duties which he requireth of vs; and therefore as God maketh his creatures to serue vs, so let vs dedicate and deuote our selues wholly to the seruice of our great Lord and Creatour, vsing so his blessings, as that they may bee helps and furtherances, and no impediments and lets, vnto the well-performing of all Christian duties.

are

Ioh. 6. 27.

And these are the duties which we are (as much as conueniently wee can) to performe before or at the beginning of our meales. The duties which we are to practise whilst we are eating and drinking, are diuers. First our care must be, that wee vse the creatures of God with temperance and sobriety, so as they may serue for the satisfying of our hunger, and the sustentation and strengthening of our fraile nature (which if it be not misguided by our corruption, is in it selfe content with a little) and not tend to their weakning and disabling vnto all good employments; for the feeding and refreshing of our bodies, that they may bee fit seruants for our soules in all Christian duties, and not the filling and glutting of them, whereby they become till they be emptied, vnprofitable burthens to the soule, and good for nothing but sloth and sleepe. Now this temperance must shew it selfe in two kinds; first, in our prouision; and secondly, in the applying of it to our owne vse. Our prouision of meates and drinckes ought not to be ouer-costly and curious, excessiue and superfluous, which becommeth not Christians which professe sobriety, but rather heathens, epicures, and belly-gods, who place a great part of their happinesse in pampering their flesh with all kinds of voluptuousnesse. But ordinarily our prouisions ought to be competent, not excessive and curious; and rather fauour of frugality, then of lauish, waste, and prodigall superfluity. Yet that our Christian moderation and frugality may not be pretended and abused of any as a maske, to hide vnder it, their bale and sordid auarice and niggardlinesse, we are in this temperance of our prouisions to obserue these cautions. First, that therein we haue respect to our place and calling, our meanes and ability, making our prouision for our tables so, as it may be fitting and suteable in these respects; on the one side not exceeding our meanes, seeing frugality is the nurse and fountaine of true bounty, and on the other, that it doe not come much short of them, our charge and other necessary expences being considered. And thus Dauid a King numbred it among Gods speciall fauours, that he had not only giuen him sufficient maintenance and conuenient food, but had thorowly furnished his table as becomed a King, and had not onely filled his cup, but caused it also to ouerflow. Secondly, that we haue respect to the times: for howsoeuer ordinarily our moderation must be bounded with parcimony, yet at times extraordinary, as at our solempne feasts, and when we giue entertainment, either to strangers, or our superiour friends much respected of vs; it must enlarge it selfe euen vnto liberality and large bounty. And thus Abraham feasted his friends at the weaning of Isaac; and Leui is said to haue made a great feast to giue our Sauour Christ entertainment; and our Sauour himselfe at the marriage-feast turned the water into wine by miracle, that there might be sufficient plenty. Thirdly, wee must take heed, that our moderation in our prouisions tend to the maintenance, and not the decay of good hospitality, which is so much commended vnto vs in the Scriptures. Neither doth one vertue or Christian duty, if it be right & true, exclude another, but contrariwise are inseparably linked, giuing to each other mutuall support and ayde; and they which seeme to be in this number and doe not thus, are but shaddowes, false and counterfeit. Fourthly, we must be carefull that it be no hindrance to the poore, and to the workes of mercy and Christian charity, but contrariwise what we saue by this moderation in prouision, from that which our state and ability might wel afford to spend, we must not hoord it vp for our priuate vse, but liberally bestow it in almes-deeds and other religious and Christian vses, knowing that our riches are not absolutely our owne, but lent vnto vs of God, to be employed for the glory of our Master, and good of our fellow-seruants.

§. Sect. 5.
Of the duties which ought to bee performed at our meales; & first, that wee vse Gods creatures with temperance and sobriety.

But especially our temperance and Christian moderation must shew it selfe in our eating and drinking, and that both in respect of the quantity and also the quality of our food. First, for the quantity, our care must be, that we at least ordinarily eate and drinke no more then is fit for the sufficing of nature, and the preserving of our health and strength. For howsoeuer some may lawfully haue their tables thorowly furnished, yet none may rise from them with full and glutted bellies; though our cups with Dauids, may be filled till they runne ouer, yet the ouerflow must not bee into our owne bellies, and much lesse mount so high as to our heads, but like Salomons cisternes, they must haue their waste into the streets, and serue as fountains to water and refresh the thirsty lands. Though it be a blessing of God promised vnto the faithfull, that they shall eate in plenty; and be

Psal. 23. 5.

Luk. 5. 29.

Job. 2. 7.

Heb. 13. 2.

§. Sect. 6.
That we must be temperate and moderate, in respect of the quantity of our meates and drinkes.

Pro. 5. 15, 16.

Isa. 2. 26.

be satisfied, that they may take occasion thereby to praise the name of the Lord for all his bounty and goodnesse; yet it is a fearefull curse and heauy iudgement, to be giuen ouer vnto our owne carnall appetite, and a grievous sinne to minde to our bellies, as that we take more care and paines to please them, then to please God; which is to be a right belly-god indeed, to be transformed from men to beasts, who are led more by their sense and appetite, then by reason and Religion, and haue their gluttonous panch the chiefe seate of their soules, and not in their head and heart; herein like as Clemens compareth them to the sea-Asse, which onely among all other liuing and sensible creatures hath his heart in his belly, as the Philosopher hath obserued. It is true that we may lawfully vse the creatures, not only for the necessity of nature, but also for our comfort and seasonable delight; and that we may at some times more then other, take our liberty to feed vpon them more liberally, as at the time of our feasting and reioycing one with another; for it is one chiefe end of the blessing of plenty, that wee should haue the fruition and benefit of it; and a punishment which God threatneth for sinne, that the people should be scantied in their food, and haue only sufficient for necessity of nature, to hold life and soule together, but not enough to satisfie the appetite and strengthen the body. But to exceede in gluttony, and to pamper the belly with superfluous excesse; to surcharge the stomacke, and to oppresse the minde and heart; to make the body with too much eating and drinking heauy and lumpish, and the minde dull and blockish, is neuer seasonable at any time, nor suiteable for any person. For this is expressely forbidden in many places of Scripture, and of our Sauour Christ himselfe by a speciall Mandate and Memento; Take heede to your selues, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkennesse, and so that day come vpon you at vnawares, &c. So that we are with equall care to auoyd excesse in meates as well as drinckes; for howsoeuer drunkennesse aboue gluttony exposeth to worldly shame, because it hath not so many colours and excuses to hide and couer it, and hath not, like the other, the wits at home to make apologies in its owne defence; yet is it no lesse to bee auoided, as being a sinne alike odious vnto God; and pernicious and hurtfull vnto vs, and our poore neighbours. For it is a shamefull abuse of Gods rich bounty; when wee take occasion thereby to disable our selues vnto the duties of his seruice; and a miserable seruitude which we bring vpon his good creatures, when as we make them serue our filthy lusts. It is a notable meanes to weaken our bodies, and fill them with diseases, to impaire our strength, and shorten our liues. It filleth them with crudities, noysome humours, and dangerous obstructions, quencheth the naturall heate, dulleth the senses, and deaddeth both the vitall and animall spirits. And consequently, it disableth all the faculties of the soule vnto their functions and operations, seeing it worketh by the body as by its instrument, and so maketh it vnfit and vnable, slothfull and sluggish vnto all good duties. It maketh vs slaues vnto our meates and drinckes, ouer which God hath made vs Lords and rulers, and hurtfull and iniurious vnto the poore, whilest we deuoure that portion of our superfluity, which God as their right hath allotted vnto them. It maketh vs foolishly, for a short delight, which lasteth no longer then

Clem. Alex. pedagog. l. 2. c. 1.

Gen. 43. 34.

Iob. 2. 10.

Psal. 104. 15.

Esa. 5. 18, 19.

Hag. 1. 6.

Pro. 23. 29, 30.

& 25. 16. &

31. 4, 5, 6, 7.

Luk. 21. 34.

Plures quippe sunt (scilicet virgines) que cum vino sint sobrie, ciborum largitate sunt ebriæ, &c. Hier. ad Eufrob. de custod. virg.

Cum Græci gulosos auidos appellauerint, tunc mihi videntur eorum finem significasse, ut qui eos auidos h. e. a salute alienos intellexerint. Clemens, pedagog. lib. 2. cap. 1.

then the meate is in eating and swallowing downe, to indure many houres grievances through the distension of the belly, the oppression of the stomacke, the paine of the head, yea oftentimes dangerous surfets and sicknesses accompanying them which hazzard life it selfe. Yea in truth, for a forced and false delight (for what true pleasure is there in eating and drinking, when hunger and thirst are fully satisfied?) it forfeiteth that pleasure of the meale following, making vs to forgoe our meate, or to eate it with loathing, which would be equally delightfull with that which went before, if wee came vnto it with like appetites. Finally, this worse then brutish delight, which is so short and momentany, depriueth vs of those heauenly ioyes which are euerlasting, and plungeth vs into woes and miseries which neuer haue end, whilest it armeth the flesh against the Spirit, and inableth it to foyle and cast vs head-long into many sinnes, as our Sauour hath implied in the parable of the rich glutton, who tooke his chiefe pleasure in going richly apparelled, and faring deliciously euery day.

Luk. 16. 19.

§. Sect. 7.
Other directions concerning the quantity of our meates and drinkes.

Now for the quantity of our food which euery one ought to eate and drinke, no certaine rule can be giuen, no more then wee can appoint any one size of apparell to fit men of all statures, seeing one mans stomacke, health, and strength, requireth more, and another mans lesse, and that which is but sufficient to satisfie one, is excessiue and superfluous to another, and would cause him to surfet with too much fulnesse. And therefore the proportion of our meates and drinkes is to bee measured vnto euery one by Christian prudence, which we may helpe by obseruing these generall rules. As first, euery man must carefully obserue out of his owne experience, how much is ordinarily sufficient for the nourishing of his body, and the preserving and increasing of his health and strength, and keepe himselfe vnto this proportion as neere as hee can, not pleasing his greedy appetite, by adding to this sufficiency that which by experience he findeth to be superfluous & more then enough. Secondly, that being defective in health and strength, or troubled with such infirmities, which cause greater appetite then good digestion, they doe not fully satisfie hunger, nor eate so much as the stomacke craueth, seeing this fulnesse within a few houres will turne to a superfluous burthen, and this enough will proue too much, but they must (as we say) rise with an appetite, and not make such a churles feast as we can eate no more. For heerein Christian temperance is exercised, when we stint the stomacke of its desire, and teach it good manners, following heerein the direction of reason, and not (like brute beasts) of sense and appetite. In which respect, one giueth this rule, that our ordinary diet should be a daily abstinence, and our refection without all glutting satiety; for it profiteth not to goe two or three dayes with empty bellies, if afterwards we surcharge them with too much fulnesse, and recompence our fast with saturity and excessse. Lastly, seeing the end of our eating and drinking is, that we may bee fitted and better inabled for the seruice of God, in the common duties of Christianity, and the particular duties of our callings, wee must therein respect grace as well as nature, the glory of God, as well as the preserving of our health and strength, and the thriving of our soules, as well as the nourishment of our bodies. In which regard, regard, the best rule of Christian moderation in our diet is, that we eate and drinke so much onely, as may make vs fit to serue God in religious duties, as hearing, reading, conferring, praying, and in the duties of our callings, that we may, hauing our spirits refreshed, and our strength repaired, more cheerefully and vigorously vndertake and performe them; and not so much as dulleth our spirits, and maketh our bodies heauie and sluggish, whereby we faile of our ends, and become lesse fit for any good duties. And this the wise Salomon requireth euen of Princes themselues, that they eate in due season, for strength, and not for drunkenesse. And our Saviour Christ would haue vs so to eate and drinke, as that thereby we should not be disabled vnto continuall watchfulnesse and prayer. To which purpose one saith well, that when we rise in the night to prayer, our stomakes should rather vpbraide vs with their emptinesse, then with their crudities and indigestion. And as we must auoide excesse in quantity, so also in variety; not that it is vnlawfull to eate of diuers dishes, so farre soorth as it will stand with our health and strength; but that we doe not too much affect it, and pitch our studie vpon it. For if wee doe, it will be a notable meanes to draw vs on to excesse and gluttony, when as hauing eaten enough, we will still feede on new and more dainty dishes then the former, because we would please our taste with this variety. It is a notable meanes, vnlesse we haue Ostridge stomacks, to disturbe concoction, and impair the health, when we make them like a Noble mans kitchin, furnished and fraughted with all varieties which land and sea can yeeld vnto them, iumbling together (like wares in a Brokers shop) things of a farre different nature, some whereof are of easie digestion, and some of hard, and some also of a middle nature; as if herein also they would make this Microcosme and little world of man, like vnto the greater world, containing in it, at least, some small fragments of innumerable creatures. Finally, as it is hurtfull for the body, so not good for the soule, the which is wained from spirituall comforts, whilest it is too much affected with these carnall delights. For as one saith, When the body is resolu'd, and as it were, melteth in this pleasure of refection, the heart is loosened vnto vaine ioy and sensuall delight.

Sint tibi quotidiana ieiunia, & refectio satietatem fugiens, &c. Hier. ad Euseb.

In respect of the qualitie of our meates and drinckes, Christian temperance and moderation must be vsed, in bridling our appetite and taste, that they doe not licourously long after, at least in our ordinary dyet, such as are curious and costly, daynty and delicious, which was the sinne of the rich Glutton, who in the parable was condemned vnto hell, and tormented in that part wherein he had chiefly offended. For howsoeuer it is lawfull for all men at some times to feede vpon the choysest of the creatures, if the cost exceede not their state and meanes, and if they bee not much affected, but come into their way without any great care or trouble; and though it be lawfull at all times for those that are weake and sickly, and cannot safely eate courser and and ordinarie meates, to prouide, if they be able, such dainties and meates of good nourishment and easie concoction, as will agree with their stomacks; yet for those that are healthy and strong, it is not lawfull that they should, with the rich Glutton, euery day fare deliciously, nor conuenient, though it were lawfull;

Ecc. 10. 17.

Luk. 21. 34, 36.

Ad orationem tibi nocte surgenti non indigestio nullam faciat, sed inanitas, Hier. ad Eusloeb. Non est ergo omnino a varijs cibis abstinendum: Sed in ijs non est studium ponendum. Clemens pedag. l. 2. c. 1.

Cum corpus refectionis deletionis resolutionis resolvitur, cor ad inane gaudium relexatur. Gregor.

§. Sect. 8. Of moderation in respect of the quality of our meates. Luk. 16. 19.

1. Tim. 5. 23.

Cito enim adducuntur ut ea faciant que non licent, qui faciunt omnia que licent. Clemens pad. l. 2. c. 1. Solus in illicitis non cadit, qui se aliquando et à licitis cautè restringet. Greg. in Moral. Exod. 19. 12.

Clem. Alex. pad. l. 2. c. 1.

Plutarch. de garrulitate.

to doe it often and ordinarily, seeing he who will doe all that is lawfull, will within awhile doe also that which is vnlawfull; he that will walke vpon the brinke, is still in danger of falling into the water, though yet he be vpon firme ground; and hee that will stretch his desires to the extreme borders of vertue, is within one step of vice, the which was typically implied at the giuing of the Law, where the Lord forbiddeth the people, not only to come into the Mount, but also to touch the borders of it. And therefore if we would shun intemperance in diet which is vtterly vnlawfull, we must moderate our appetite euen about those things which are lawfull; and auoide carefully all meanes that tend vnto it. Among which, one of the chiefeft is delicacie of meates, which draweth on the appetite vnto excessse, with the strong Cable of bewitching delight. And not much lesse dangerous are pleasant sawces curiously cooked; both which are to be ordinarily shunned of all who would be temperate in their diet. For as wee cannot attaine vnto Iustice by coueting much wealth, nor vnto temperance by the meanes of intemperancie; so neither (as one saith) can we be brought vnto a Christian-like course in our diet by curious-cooked cates, and alluring delicacies. In which regard the same author saith, and Socrates long before him, that we are to take heede of those meates, which allure vs to eate when we are not hungry, and of those drinckes, which intice vs to drinke when we are not thirsty, because like witchcrafts they delude our appetites, the deuill the great deuourer of mankind, hauing a great hand in them. For howsoeuer all things were made for man, yet it is not good for him to vse all things, nor at all times, but the circumstances of time, occasion, manner, and other relations and respects to the things vsed, are of great moment to make them profitable or hurtfull. Adde heereunto that these dainty cates require much expence of time, and trouble both of body and mind in those that prouide them, which made Epicurus the Philosopher himselfe, who placed mans chiefe felicitie in voluptuous pleasure, in teaching rules of diet, which might bring with it most delight, to appoint notwithstanding vnto his disciples for their ordinary diet, herbes, rootes, fruits, and common fare, because these were at hand and easily cooked, whereas the tedious trouble in prouiding dainty fare is so great, that the short delight of fruition will in no sort recompence it. And how much more then should we, who profess Christianity, restraints our appetite from affecting these delicacies, euen for conscience sake; seeing, if not we our selues, yet some other for vs (which charity maketh much alike) doe spend the strength of their minds and bodies, in making and cooking these curious prouisions, and waste and mispend their precious time, for the base purchase of these voluptuous pleasures? And as they require great labour and expence of time in him that prouideth them; so also excesssiue cost in him who payeth for them; in which respect I appeale vnto their consciences, with what comfort they can hope to appeare before their Iudge, calling them before his Tribunall to giue vp their accounts; when as it shall appeare that they haue consumed so many of his Talents entrusted vnto them, in riotous and dainty cheere; and haue bestowed so little vpon the poore members of Iesus Christ, to supply their necessities and keepe them from famishing. Now how little profit doe they purchase

vnto

vnto themselves at these deare rates? If indeed by bestowing treble cost vpon their diet, they could but double their strength, health, and all their abilities both of body and minde, and so become twice themselves, and as much outstrip other men in these things, as they exceede them in these costly curiosities, they should haue laid out their moneys vpon a reasonable good purchase; but wee see the cleane contrary in daily experience; namely, that those who ordinarily feede on courser fare, haue good complections and sound temperature, and are healthy and lusty, strong and vigorous for all manly employments; whereas the other looke pale and thin, as though they had but single nourishment by their double cost, and are so effeminated in their mindes with luxury and excesse, and disabled in their strength, that they are more fit for venereall courtings, and to combat before a Carpet, then for any manlike exercises or martiall archievements. Yea oftentimes by glutting them with these dainties, they fill their bodies with diseases, as gowts, pallsies, stone, collicke, and sicknesses of all sorts, from which a more spare diet, which commonly accompanieth courser fare, would haue priuiledged and exempted them.

CAP. XXV.

Of diuers other duties which wee ought to performe at our meales.

Ther duties there are which at our meales ought to bee performed, in which I will be more brieft and sparing, because I haue bene larger in the other then I purposed, the excesse of diet in these times drawing me on, and making me also exceed in prescribing rules of moderation. The next duty then which we are to obserue at our meales, is, that we bee contented with our cheare, as being that portion which God in his wise prouidence hath thought fitting for vs; and not suffer our mindes to surfet by feeding on idle wishes of better cheere, when our sensuall appetites are stinted with ordinary fare and short commons. Neither let vs murmur and repine because we haue such meane allowance, nor enuie others their full tables; much lesse let vs (as it is the manner of many nice wantons) excuse our too little or too meane fare, when even their owne consciences tell them that they haue too much, yea, when they are so proud of their cheare, that their dispraises serue but (as their salt meates to their drinckes) to draw on their ghests to giue more commendations. Nor yet let vs (like the same persons vpon other occasions) fret and fume when as our meate is not so curiously cooked as standeth with our nice appetite, chafing as much at the small errors of the Cooke, as if the good of the Common wealth, and our owne safetie and saluation wholly rested on it. But let vs that professe Christianity leaue these vanities, and learne of the Apostle to be contented with such food as sufficeth nature, and is fit to preserve our health and strength; for if we would but consider how vnworthy wee are of the least part of our prouisions, and how farre the smallest of Gods fauours doe exceede our greatest deserts: and how many of Gods deare children come farre

Cc

Qui esca vtuntur vilissimis, sunt robustiores, saniores & generosiores; ut famuli domini, agricolae possessoribus; & non solum fortiores, sed etiam prudentiores, ut Philosophi diuitibus. Clem. pa. dog. l. 2. c. 1.

§. Sect. 1.

That we ought to be content with our allowance.

*1. Tim. 6. 6. 8.
Phil. 4. 13.*

§. Sect. 2.
That we may be merry at our meales.

Eccles. 2. 24.

Psal. 104. 15.

Act. 2. 46.

Eccles. 2. 3.

farre short of vs in these his blessings and testimonies of his loue, we should finde iust cause of turning our murmuring and repining into prayes and thanksgiuiings.

Thirdly, so farre as will stand with Christian grauity and the occasions that shall be offred, wee must be merry at our meales; for seeing then the Lord conferreth his blessings vpon vs, and giueth vnto vs these testimonies of his loue, shewing that hee watcheth ouer vs with his prouidence to preferue and nourish vs, it is a time of reioycing in the fruition of his fauours. And this is one speciall end for which the Lord giueth vs his benefits of meate and drinke, that in eating and drinking wee should delight our soules in inioying the fruit of our labours; and therefore hee hath bestowed vpon man, not onely bread and meat to nourish and strengthen him, but also wine to make his heart glad, and oyle to make him looke with a chearefull countenance. Which liberty and comfort of reioycing at their meales, the holy Saints of the Primitiue Church tooke vnto themselues, and breaking bread from house to house, did cate their meate with gladnesse and singlenesse of heart, praying God in the fruition of his benefits. Againe, the chiefe end of our eating and drinking is, that being thereby refreshed, we may be made more fit for the duties of Gods seruice; now the body is no more cheared with wholesome meates, then the heart and mind with honest mirth, and consequently the one is no lesse profitable then the other. Neither is it onely necessary for the soule, whose refreshing and recreation consisteth in delight, but also for the body and preferuing of health; and therefore mirth is worthily esteemed one of the chiefe doctors amongst Physicians, because if it be seasonable and moderate, it cheareth the spirits, and so causeth better concoction; whereas contrariwise, melancholy and lumpish heauinesse, damping and dulling them, doth turne much of our nourishment into the same humour. But yet our care must be, that as wee season our meate with mirth, so our mirth with the salt of grace, that wee may glorifie God in it, who is the chiefe cause of our reioycing; and mutually profit one another. In which regard, we must take heede that our liberty burst not out into licenciousnes, and that wee doe not make our selues merry with prophane iests, by abusing the Scriptures, and taking Gods holy name in vaine; nor with ribauldrie and scurrilous conceits, which tend to the corrupting of manners, and the poysoning of our owne hearts and theirs that heare vs; nor with biting and bitter gibes and frumps, which wound the good name of our neighbour, and as much vexes his heart with anger, griefe and discontent, as wee are delighted with the salty wittinesse of the conceit. Finally we must be carefull (because here going with the winde and tide, we may easily ouer-shoote our selues) that wee bee not immoderate in our mirth, but keepe our selues within the bounds of sobriety, lest our mirth degenerate into phrensie, and so iustly incurr the Wise mans censure, I said of laughter, It is madde; in which respect it is fit, that wee bee carefull to keepe the reines still in our hand, that we may checke and curbe in our mirth when it beginneth to gallop, lest it giue vs a fall, and cause vs to discouer much weakenesse and infirmitie. But as the Lord is the cause of our mirth, so hee must bee the chiefe end of it; and as our reioycing reioycing is of and from him, so it must bee for him and in him; according to that of the Apostle, Reioyce in the Lord alwayes, and againe, I say, Reioyce; so that wee may reioyce, euen with a double ioy, not onely in spirituall, but also in ciuill and temporall things, if our ioy and mirth be honest and harmelesse, witty, without the froth of vanity; and so ingenuous and charitable, that it tend not onely to make our selues merry, but to delight them also that beare vs company.

The fourth Christian duty to be done at our meales, respecteth our speeches and conferences, vnto which is required that they be profitable, tending to make vs more holy and religious, or more wise and morally vertuous; or more liuely and cheerefull vnto the performance of all good duties. The first kinde of Colloquies and discourses are chiefly to bee preferred, seeing wee must first seeke the Kingdome of God and his righteousness, and worldly things in an inferiour place, which are incomparably of lesse worth. Of which conferences wee may reape more fruit and benefit then of our bodily nourishment, seeing that preferueth the outward man onely, but these are the spirituall food and repast of the soule, which is by much the more excellent part; that is but perishing food which corrupteth, and wee with it, but this food of our soules will indure to life eternall. Now because, our hearts being barren in good meditations, wee cannot easily finde out vpon a sudden, fit matter for these discourses, and when wee doe, are easily put out, and drawne vpon euery occasion to fall againe to worldly and idle talke; therefore it were good for vs to thinke before-hand on some profitable subiect whereon wee may discourse and conferre; or at least, that wee doe lay hold on the best opportunities that for the present are offered vnto vs, and slightly passing ouer things which are impertinent and vnprofitable, as wee doe those meates which doe not please vs, pitch vpon that which best maketh for our purpose, and make our spirituall meale of it, as beeing that wholesome and well-relishing dish, for which, putting all the other backe, wee haue all the while reserued our stomackes. But though these religious conferences at meales bee most profitable, yet may wee also lawfully talke of ciuill and morall points; yea, euen of our owne affaires and ordinary businesse, or things some way pertinent to the bettering of our selues, or some in our company, either for the increasing of our wisdom and prudence, or the fitting of vs for action and employment, especially when wee obserue that our company cannot bee easily drawne to entertaine such speech as wholly tendeth to piety and Religion. Yet may wee, as occasion serueth, powder euen these discourses with piety, and lying (as it were) at the spirituall lurch, take all good aduantages to insert and interlace into these discourses something profitable for the soule, and to bring, as much as wee can, ciuill premises to pious conclusions. Finally, it is neither vnprofitable nor vnseasonable, if our speeches at our meales doe sometimes tend to the refreshing of our wearied mindes after serious studies, with pleasant conceits and honest mirth, because though these bee of no great worth in themselues, yet they looke to things of more value, and serue as helps and meanes to fit and prepare vs for employments of an higher nature.

Phil. 4. 4.

§. Sect. 3.
Of our conferences and discourses at our tables.

Matth. 6. 33.

The which, being a thing which wee chiefly ayme at in taking our repast, and in refreshing thereby both our mindes and bodies, I dare not exclude all pleasant discourse from such meetings; for though wee may not make our spirituall meale of such light meates, yet may they well serue as sawce to quicken our appetite; and though wee may not dwell in such merry conceits; yet when our wits are dulled and blunted with more serious discourses, wee may vse them (as the Israelites did the Philistines forges) for our necessity, and descend vnto them for a while to sharpen our tooles. The which course in our conferences I doe not commend as most excellent in it owne nature: for it were to be wished that wee were so spiritually and heavenly-minded, that our hearts might be at all times euen rauished with delight, when wee are exercised in high and holy meditations and speeches, or bringing them to their full effect in our workes and actions; but I onely allow it as lawfull and well agreeing and suteable to our present estate full of frailty and infirmitie. Vnto which, hauing respect, I will conclude this point with this one caueat; that neither in matters appertaining to Religion nor ciuill wisdom, we doe in these table-conferences, either propound or admit knotty and hard questions, or polemicall disputes, and difficult and subtil controuersies, both because these often-times through pride and ouer-eager handling, doe heate the heart, and cause wrangling and contention; and also because they are not suteable and seasonable to the time and the ends at which wee ayme. For it is a time of refection and refreshing, and not of toyle and labour either to body or mind, and we must let our bowes stand vnbeent, that they may afterwards be more fit for shooting, and not be still drawing our arrow to the head. It is a time to recouer our spent spirits, & not to consume and waste them; which will not onely make our mindes vnfit for employment (for if we toyle them when they should rest, they will bee dull and slothfull when they should labour) but also much hurt our bodies and impeach our health, whilst these ouer-earnest discourses about points of great difficultie, doe disperse the naturall heate, and dissipate the spirits, calling them away from the worke in hand, to assist the soule in the exercise of the braine, and so cause ill concoction and indigested crudities.

§. Sect. 4.
Of the choyce
of our company at our meales.
Iob 31. 16, 17.

The last duty in our eating and drinking respecteth the choyce of our company: for if we be of ability, it were to be wished, that we would follow Iobs practice, who would not eate his morsels alone, making to this end choyce of fit company to consort with vs. Neither is it commendable in a Christian to keepe open house for all commers, and so to make it worse then a common Inne, a cage of vncleane birds, and a place of all misrule and disorder, which was the hospitality of able men in the dayes of ignorance, who are more to be praised for their bounty and zeale to house-keeping, then for their piety and prudence. But seeing our ghests must be our companions for the time, of which there ought to be made great choyce; therefore besides those whom bonds of society, kindred, trading and commerce, and such like respects; and those that resort vnto vs as strangers, or by some casuall and extraordinary accidents; wee are in our common course, as neere as we can, to make choyce of such only, as are knowne vnto vs (at least in the iudgement of charity) to be vertuous and religious; and among among these, such especially as are most fit for our spirituall trading, either to make vs more rich in knowledge, faith, obedience, and all spirituall graces, or at least to be enriched of vs. By which kind of meetings we might receiue singular comfort and benefit, seeing this good society and kind familiarity between Christians, is a notable bond of loue, and an excellent and effectual meanes for the mutual stirring vp of Gods graces in one another, and for their strengthening & encouraging vnto euery good duty. In which respect it were much to be desired, that that ancient custome in the Primitive Church, of loue-feasts among Christians, were more in vse in these dayes, that we might not so deseruedly lye open to that aspersiō of worldlings, namely, that where Religion is planted, there all good neighborhood and friendly meetings are almost quite laid aside. To which end let vs take notice of the causes of this decay, that so they being remoued, this communion and fellowship among the faithfull may be restored. And first, when men are wholly carnall, and set altogether on fleshly delights, it is no maruaile if they take pleasure in one anothers company, seeing they are mutual helpers in this worldly ioy; and so if we were in any perfection spirituall minded, we would take much more delight in conforthing together, because it would tend much to the increasing of our Christian comfort; but when by the preaching of the Gospell those carnall ioyes and vnlawfull pleasures are so cryed downe, that some forbear them out of conscience, and some, to auoyd the shame of profanenesse; there followeth a breach of society and familiarity, because the bond is broken that held it together. The which is not repaired and re-vnited, till in stead thereof there be a spirituall bond to linke vs together; and this being so weake among Christians, which still remaine more flesh then Spirit, it is no maruaile, if there be seldome any good meetings, seeing the bond is no stronger of such society and familiarity; whereas if they were more spirituall, they would finde in them more spirituall ioy, and so entertaine them with more ardencie of affection. Another cause, which is but a branch of the former, is, that in the time of the Gospell, carnall loue, which was of old a strong bond of fellowship, is not so hot and strong as it was, neither to mens persons, nor yet to the pleasures of sinne and delights of the flesh; nor spirituall loue so feruent as it should be, either vnto our neighbours themselves, or yet to Christian conferences, religious duties and exercises, and those sweet comforts which we should take in mutuall society, and should be the chiefe motiue to bring vs together; for were we inflamed with this ardent loue, it would make vs greatly delight in one another, and to seeke all good occasions of such sweete society.

Vnto these we may adde the many abuses of these meetings, which are notable meanes of their dissolution; as because we faile in the maine ends of them, not chiefly ayming at our spirituall good, and that we may mutually stirre vp Gods graces in vs by Christian conferences, edifie and strengthen one another vnto all good duties, and reioyce together in the Lord by setting forth his praises, the which were the ends that the Saints in the Primitive Church propounded to their feasts of loue; but for the most part inuiting one another to pamper the belly with good cheere, and to please the flesh with carnall pleasures, which leauing behind them a

Act. 2. 46.

§. Sect. 5.
Of the manifold abuses of our feasting one another.

1. Cor. 13. 17.

Phil. 3. 15, 16.

sting of conscience, it is no maruaile if we take small comfort to meete after this manner often together, seeing the sweete is exceeded by the sowre; and keepe our hand from tasting of the honey, which indangereth vs to be wounded with the sting of sinne; and though it be sweete in the mouth, yet is turned in the digestion into bitter choller. And as wee faile in our ends of meeting, so also in our carriage, when wee are met together, in which regard we iustly deserue the Apostles censure, that wee come together not for the better, but for the worse. For either the time is spent in idle and vaine talking, vnprofitable discourses, hurtfull inuitations, to excesse in eating and drinking. Or if some religious conference bee admitted, yet through pride and want of charity it is often crossed of the mayne ends. For not being, as we ought, fast linked together in the bond of loue, euery difference in opinion disioynteth our affections; and wanting charity to beare with one another, and humility to thinke that we may erre as well as our brethren, or patience to waite vpon Gods leasure till he be pleased to reueale the truth vnto them as well as vnto vs; and vnanimity to walke by the same rule, and minae the same thing, whereto we haue already attained; we commonly take delight to spend our speech in questions and controuerfies, and in shewing wherein we dissent, rather then wherein we agree, which oftentimes draw men to heate and contention, yea to wrangling and hard speeches, which alienate their hearts, and make them part more cold in loue, and remisse in friendship, then when they met together. Whereas if selfe-loue did not wed them to their own opinions, and pride made them not impatient that any should dissent from them, but that in charity and Christian humility, they desired to edifie one another, not so much desiring to make them their schollers in imbracing their priuate opinions, as the Disciples of Christ, by knowing better the mayne points of Christian Religion, or more conscionable in imbracing holinesse and righteousnesse in their liues and conuersations; there would bee much more fruit and benefit of such conferences, and much more encouragement vnto our often meetings. Finally, the great cheere, and excessiue cost, and trouble to provide it, which is commonly vsed at these meetings, is one speciall cause why we meete so seldome. Which though all mislike and speake against, because they cannot meete often that meete so chargeably, their state and meanes being not able to beare it, yet it fareth heerein as in the case of braue apparell; all complaine of it because of the cost, but none will reforme it because of their pride; whereby in their mutuall entertainment, one seeketh to out-vie another, till at length it come to that height of excesse, and groweth so ouer-chargeable to their purse, that they leaue off such meetings altogether. Let no man therefore complaine of the hardnesse of the times, which will scarce afford meanes of necessary maintenance, and much lesse of entertaining our friends to eate and drinke together. For howsoeuer it may bee true that these times will not beare vs out, if wee bee resolved to bee still excessiue in our cheere and cost; yet if wee would chiefly ayme in our meetings, at the maintaining of loue, comfort and ioy in one anothers company, stirring vp Gods graces in vs, and our building vp vnto all good duties; I see no cause why wee should not, to inioy these Christian comforts

forts and spirituall benefits, be contented with lesſer cheare in our neighbours houſe, then when wee eate our meate ſolemnely at home; and conſequently, no reaſon why the hardneſſe of the times ſhould bee pretended, vnleſſe our hearts bee more hard then they, and will by no meanes be reclaimed from this fault of exceſſe. Now as we are for theſe ends to inuite one another, ſo are wee eſpecially according to our ability to make the poore our ordinary gheſts, becauſe therein wee ſhall doe a worke of mercy acceptable vnto God, who hath giuen vnto vs our greater prouiſion, that wee may impart it vnto thoſe who haue leſſe, and out of our plenty miniſter vnto them that want neceſſaries. And thus our Sauour requireth, that when wee make a dinner or ſupper, wee ſhould not inuite our friends, brethren, kinſmen and rich neighbours, namely, not to theſe ends, eyther to receiue recompence by the like inuitation, or to approue our charitie, ſeeing men out of naturall ſelfe-loue or carnall affection, may doe the like; but the poore, maymed, lame and blind, becauſe they being vnable to make any recompence, it will bee a good ſigne, that wee doe it out of ſimple charity, and pure reſpect vnto Gods Commandement, and not out of ſelfe-loue, and ſuch reſpects as are naturall and worldly. And this was Iobs practice, who as hee did not eate his morſels alone, ſo the gheſts whereof hee made choyce, were the poore, widdow and fatherleſſe, as he profeſſeth. Which example if wee imitate, we ſhall in them feede Ieſus Chriſt himſelfe, and be richly rewarded at his appearing. Or if wee cannot inuite all to our table whom wee deſire to relieue; our care muſt be to ſend, according to our ability, ſuch reliefe as wee can ſpare from our ſelues and families, vnto thoſe whom we know doe ſtand in neede; for though God alloweth vs to eate the fat, and drinke the ſweete, yet withall hee requireth, that wee ſend portions vnto the poore for whom nothing is prepared; according to the example of the Iewes at their feaſts of Purim, who ſent portions one to another, and giſts to the poore. To which end wee ought to vſe all good prouiſion and frugality, not ſuffering any thing to bee loſt, though we haue neuer ſo much; for if our Sauour, after that hee had fed the poore by miracle, though he was able as eaſily to haue done it againe, yet would not let any thing bee loſt of his prouiſion through negligence, but would haue all the remainder reſerued for another time; then how much more ſhould wee be prouident, whoſe bounty is limited by our meanes, that we may releue thoſe poore, who are ſtill hungry, and neede our help for their comfort and reliefe?

And theſe are the duties which ought to bee performed at our meales. The dutie to bee performed afterwards, is true thankfullneſſe in the heart, and outwardly expreſſed both by our words and actions. Vnto inward thankfullneſſe of the heart is required, that wee know and acknowledge that wee haue receiued our foode at Gods hand, and that by his bounty and gracious prouiſion we are fed and nourished, and not by our owne policy and power, induſtry and labour. The which Moses preſſeth vpon the Iſraelites to make them thankfull; for if wee know, that God of his rich mercy hath beſtowed theſe bleſſings vpon vs, and hath fed and nourished vs with his good creatures, it is a notable meanes

Luk. 14. 12, 13.

Job 31. 16, 17.

Mat. 25. 35, 36.

Nehem. 8. 18.

Eſth. 9. 22.

Iohn 6. 12.

§. Sect. 6.

That after our meales we muſt ſhew our thankfullneſſe by praying God.

Exod. 16. 15.
Job. 6. 31.

vs, although we cannot pray with hope to be heard, vnlesse we pray in faith, as the Apostle Iames teacheth vs, and we cannot ordinarily haue faith, till first it be wrought in vs by the preaching of the Word. And therefore let vs not set these meanes of grace, to contend together for eminence and excellency, and much lesse magnifie one of them to exclude another, but acknowledging all to bee excellent and necessary in their place and time, let vs carefully ioyne them all together, that being nourished in our soules with this plenty and variety of food, we may grow vp the faster in all grace and godlinesse.

§. Sect. 4.
What is required in the Minister, that by his preaching he may further the people in the duties of godlinesse.

Mal. 2. 7.

2. Tim. 4. 1, 2.

Ezek. 33. 8.

1. Pet. 5. 1, 2.

Now that the Ministry of the Word may be an effectuall meanes of grace, and of strengthening vs vnto all holy duties of a Christian life; there are some things required, both to the right preaching and hearing of it. Vnto the former, there are some things necessary in the person of the Preacher, and some things in the act and execution of his Ministry. In the person, there must be skill to diuide the Word aright, not onely giuing a true sense of it to all, but to apply a fit portion vnto all sorts of hearers; and a great measure of wisdom and vnderstanding, through the outward helpes of study and learning, and the inward illumination of Gods Spirit, that he may bee able to instruct those which are ignorant; according to that in the Prophet Malachy; The Priests lips should keepe knowledge, (namely, as Iosephs corne in the store-houses for the common vse, and not a close Prisoner, with whom none may bee admitted to conferre, sauing his Iaylour) and the people should seeke the Law at his mouth. Vnto which knowledge and skill, there must bee added industrious diligence, whereby he is ready to preach the Word in season, and out of season, reprouing and rebuking, with all long suffering and doctrine, although hee seeth small fruit of his labours. For though the Minister be neuer so rich in the spirituall treasures of learning and knowledge, yet if miser-like, he doe not communicate them, but locketh them vp in his owne braine; the poore people are neuer the better, but may perish in their ignorance, euen as he shall doe in his sloth and vnfaithfulness. Thirdly, he must haue his heart affected with sincere loue of the people, whereby hee is mooued in all things to seeke their good, and to preferre their saluation before his owne priuate profit. The which loue in the teacher, will make way in the hearts of his hearers, not onely for his instructions and comforts, but also his admonitions and reproofes, seeing they come not out of any spleene, but out of meere loue, and seruent desire of sauing their soules. In the act and execution of his Ministeriall function, he is to speake nothing but Gods Truth, as from him, and as before him, in his pure sight, which discerneth all error, and in his glorious presence, who hateth and abhorreth all vanity and hypocrisie: And that not after his owne manner, chiefly ayming to magnifie himselfe in the ostentation of his owne learning and gifts, but in the demonstration of the Spirit, aboue all desiring and indeuouring to glorifie God in the saluation of his hearers.

§. Sect. 5.
That the word must be preached powerfully and plainly.

Whereunto these two things are required; namely, that he preach the Word powerfully & plainly; powerfully to the consciences of all, & plainly to the capacity (as much as in him lieth) of those which are most simple. Of both we haue the Apostle Paul for our patterne, who though he were most most learned about all other the Apostles, both in arts and tongues; and all other learning of the Jewes, yet came not in excellency of speech, nor the enticing words of mans wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power; desiring to know nothing (that is, to make shew of no other knowledge) sauing Iesus Christ and him crucified; and preferring five words spoken to the vnderstanding of his hearers, aboue ten thousand in an vknownne tongue. Yea, we haue heerein our Sauour Christ himselfe, as our Precedent, who preached the Word, not like the Scribes and Pharises (after a ieiune and Scholasticall manner) but with all power and authority. And though hee were the wisdom of his Father, in whom all treasures of knowledge and learning were hid; and the word of his Father, exceeding in sound eloquence both men and Angels, yet preached the Word in a plaine phrase and humble manner of speech, not respecting what hee was able to speake, but what his Disciples were able to heare, conceiue, and carry away; like a louing and carefull nurse, chawing the harder and stronger meate in his mouth, that they might the better receiue it, whilst he explained more difficult points, by easie and familiar similitudes. Neither had hee onely care of more thorowly informing those who were men growne in knowledge, by teaching them the high and hidden mysteries of his Kingdome, but also of instructing his little children and yong novices in the first principles of true Religion, as it was prophesied of him by Esayas, All thy children shall be taught of the Lord, and great shall be their peace. And like a faithfull and carefull Shepheard, hee did not onely apply himselfe to feed his whole flock, but extended his care and loue chiefly to his yonglings, gathering his Lambes with his arme, and carrying them in his bosome, and gently leading those which were great with yong. The which care and charge, when hee was to ascend on high, hee deputed to the Apostle Peter, and in him to all the whole Ministry, that they should feed his tender Lambes, as well as his older and stronger Sheepe. And therefore though the ouer-wise Grecians account the simple preaching of Christ crucified, foolishnesse; and the learned Doctours of the world make themselues sport with this easie plainenesse: Let all that truly feare God, chuse rather to imitate Christ and his Apostles in their course of preaching, labouring to speake vnto the capacity of the meanest and simplest, seeing the charge of their soules is commended vnto them by our great Shepheard, as well as theirs who are of greatest vnderstanding, and the soules of all being alike deare vnto God, they shall giue account of one as well as of another, of the little Lambes, as well as of the Rammes of the flocke. And seeing we must not only take care for our selues, that wee may goe to heauen alone, but are appointed Captaines and Leaders of Gods Armies, wee must not skorne plaine wayes, wherein all our company may goe with vs, the weake and sicke, as well as the strong and healthy; and mount aloft in learned discourses and Scholasticall speculations (as it were vpon the Alpes) which are no lesse high about their capacity, then cold and heartlesse, giuing no warmth to their zeale and deuotion; or trauell in the craggy and rough wayes of knottie controuersies, needlesse genealogies, and abstruse difficulties, where wee shall leaue all our hearers as farre off behind vs: but chuse rather such faire wayes and beaten paths, as will bring vs and our company with vs,

1. Cor. 2. 1, 2, 4.

1. Cor. 14. 19.

Col. 3.

Mar. 4. 33.
Iob. 16. 12.

Iob. 3. 3, 4, 5.

Esa. 54. 13.
Iob. 6. 45.

Esa. 40. 11.

1. Cor. 1. 23.

Dan. 1. 15.

§. Sect. 6.
Of the duties
of the people, respecting the Ministry of the Word.
1. Cor. 5. 22.

Mat. 9. 38.

Luk. 10. 42.

with most speed and safety to the end of our journey. For though heereby we cannot commend our strength and swiftnesse, though we outrun others that haue set out before vs, because they go in mountainous wayes, & farre about, yet we shall commend our wisdome and prudence, in that we haue chosen the fairest and neereſt way. And surely if an vnpartiall view were taken of ſeueral congregations, and iuſt tryal made, whether thoſe haue beſt thriuen in the Chriſtian growth, who haue bin diligently fed with ordinary food and daily bread, or thoſe who are ſometimes feaſted with a banquet of delicate diſhes; I doubt not but it would be found, that as ſometime Daniel and his fellows, that fed vpon plaine pulſe, which God had ſanctified to their uſe, were fatter and in better liking then they that did eate the portion of the kings meate: ſo thoſe people and Pariſhes would be found more thriuing Chriſtians, both in knowledge & practice, who are fed with the pulſe of plaine Preaching, & with whoſome, though homely food, becauſe they can feed vpon it, and better diſgeſt it, then others that haue a kingly portion of abſtruſe learning, wit, and eloquence, ſometimes (though rarely) allowed vnto them, ſeeing they are meates of too hard diſgeſtion for their weake ſtomakes, cauſing crudities, humorous and ill-concocted conceits, and ſeldome affording any wholeſome nourishment.

The conſideration whereof, as it ſhould effectually moue Gods Miniſters to take ſuch a courſe in their preaching, as is moſt fit and profitable for their hearers, and denying themſelues, and the praiſe of their great learning and gifts in the worke of their Miniſtery, to become as weak to thoſe that are weak, that they may gaine them to Chriſt; ſo alſo ſhould it moue the people, who deſire to bee built vp in ſauing knowledge, and in the practice of all holy duties belonging to a godly life, to affect ſuch teachers, as being learned and ſufficient, doe conſcionably apply themſelues to their capacity, for their inſtruction and edification. To which purpoſe, they muſt ſtrive with God in their ſeruent prayers, that he will ſend ſuch labourers into his harueſt; and in humility and ſubmiſſiue obedience, as their place and calling wil permit, labour by earneſt ſuite with ſuperiour Magiſtrates ouer Church and Common wealth, and eſpecially with Patrones and diſpoſers of Church-preferments, that they will prouide and ſet ouer them ſuch faithfull and painefull Paſtours, as will feed them with food conuenient for the preſeruing of their ſoules in ſpirituall life, and the nourishing and increaſing of Gods graces in them; not fooliſhly affecting and admiring (as it is common with thoſe that are moſt ignorant) ſuch teachers, as deſiring the praiſe of their great learning, more then the ſaluation of their peoples ſoules, doe moſt exceed the ſhort reach of their ſhallow capacities; like vnto cold ſtomacks, which haue a greedy appetite after meates of hard diſgeſtion, but when they haue receiued them, for want of naturall heate turne them into wind, which affecteth their braine with noyſome vapours, and are not able to conuert them into any wholeſome nourishment. Secondly, their care muſt be, as much as in them lyeth, and the neceſſary preſeruation of their ſtate will ſuffer them, to place themſelues vnder ſuch a Miniſtery, as will helpe them forward in their ſpirituall thrift and growth of grace, and counting (according to Maries choyce, and our Sauours approbation) this one thing neceſſary, let them preferre it before all worldly things; things; as fertile soyles, good ayre, well-seated houses and shops fit for trading, delightfull walkes and prospects, and plentifull prouision for house-keeping; which without the other, may make full purses and Barnes, but hearts empty of all grace and goodnesse; healthy and well-liking bodies, but hunger-starued, leane and sickly foules. Thirdly, they must ioyne their cost with their care, and like the wise Merchant, esteeme this precious pearle and hid treasure, aboue all other their possessions; they must, if it be in their power, purchase it at any rate, seeing it only can make them truly rich, according to the counsell of the Wiseman; Buy the truth, and sell it not; thinking that part of their wealth well spared, which serueth as a meanes to bring them vnto the right vse of all the rest, and to enrich their soules with the incomparable treasures of Gods sauing graces, whereby they are strengthened to the wise performance of all Christian duties. Fourthly, hauing Ministers, though not eminent and excellent in their gifts, yet of some good towardlinesse and willingnesse to grow vnto more perfection, they must giue them no discouragements, by their bitter censures, awke and froward carriage, backwardnesse to pay vnto them their right, or running from them vpon euery slight occasion to heare others; but rather they must nourish and cherish the good things which they see in them, that they may increase more and more, by shewing all loue and kindnesse, due reuerence and respect; especially by regarding them in the worke of their Ministry, and hearing them with all diligence, constancie, and attention. For by thus drawing the breasts of their spirituall nurseries, they shall bring downe their milke, and cause it to increase and abound, at least, to a sufficiency of nourishment, whereas if it be not sucked, it will curdle in the breast, and make them heart-sicke to be thus neglected, or else in short time turne backe, and quite drying vp, leaue vnto them no nourishment at all. Finally, when God hath prouided for them such as are eminent in their gifts, and painefull in their Ministry, labouring in word and doctrine, and going out and in before them as good guides in their gouernement, and holy example, they must not grudge to giue them the double honour of reuerence and maintenance, and together with the heavy waight of their Ministry, suffer them to lye gasping and groning vnder the burthen of pouerty and contempt, but giue them all good incouragement, not thinking much, that those who impart vnto them heauenly treasures, should be partakers with them of their earthly blessings: but especially, they must labour to profit by their paines, in knowledge and fruitfull obedience, which is the ioy of their hearts, the life of their life, and the Crowne of their Ministry; lest when they see that they sow all their good seed in barren soyles, and with the Prophet, and our Saviour Christ himselfe, haue iust cause to complaine, that they haue laboured and spent their strength in vaine, they be forced to make choyce of better and more fruitfull grounds, and to imploy their labours in some other place, where they may more glorifie God, and receiue more ioy and comfort to their owne hearts.

Mat. 13. 44, 45.

Pro. 23. 23.

1. Cor. 9. 11.

2. Cor. 3. 1.
Phil. 4. 1.

Esa. 49. 4.

CAP. VI.

Of the duties of the people in hearing of the Word; and first, of such as are to be performed in their preparation.

6. Sect. 1.
That we must use preparation before the hearing of the Word, and wherein it con-sisteth.

Eccles. 5. 1.

Jam. 1. 21.
1. Pet. 2. 1.

And these are the things which are required vnto the right preaching of the Word. Vnto the right hearing of it, that it may be a powerfull meanes to enrich vs with Gods graces, and to strengthen vs vnto all Christian duties of a godly life, some things are required before wee heare, some things in hearing, and some things after we haue heard it. Before we heare, we must use due preparation; vnto which is required first, that we enter into a serious consideration of Gods glorious presence, before whom we are to present our selues, that we may heare him speaking vnto vs, not of ordinary matters of small importance, but such as meerey concerne his glory, and the euerlasting saluation of our owne soules. Whereby we shall be preserved from rushing rashly into the holy assemblies, and be made carefull to looke vnto our feet, before we enter into the House of God. For if worldly men, duely considering that they are going into the presence of an earthly King, to heare him speake of the waightry affaires of the Common wealth, or such things as neerey concerne them in their owne particular, prepare themselves accordingly, that they may bee fit to come into such a royall presence; how much more should wee use the like and greater care, when we are to come into the presence of the King of Kings, and to heare him speaking vnto vs of such things, as much more concerne vs and the euerlasting good of our soules and bodies? Secondly, being to come vnto this spirituall feast, we are to prepare our selues by getting a good appetite, that we may not idly sit by and looke on, when others feed on these spirituall delicacies, for the refreshing and strengthening of their soules. To which end, wee must, by renewing our repentance, purge and cleanse our soules from sinfull corruptions (as our stomacks from clogging and hurtfull humours) which otherwise will take away our appetite, and make vs lothe and refuse, or eating against stomacke, not able to digest our spirituall nourishment. Of which kinde are wrath, maliciousnesse, guile, dissimulation, hypocrisie, preiudice, and forestalled opinions, and such like; seeing if these beare sway in vs, it is not possible that the Word of God should take any effect, or become profitable nourishment for the preserving and increasing of our spirituall health and strength. So also wee must banish out of our minds worldly cogitations about our pleasures or profits, which will distract vs from hearing the Word with any attention, and out of our hearts earthly cares, which like thornes, will choake the seed of the Word, and make it vtterly vnfruitfull in vs. Moreover, we must stirre vp our appetite, by considering our spirituall wants, which can no otherwise be supplied, then by comming vnto this feast; for as hunger, and sense of our emptinesse, maketh vs to long after our bodily food, so if we duly consider how empty we are of all Gods graces, and feeble vnto all good duties, it will much increase our appetite to the food of our soules; and wee shall goe to this Market with all cheerefulnesse, if we consider, that heere, and no where else, wee may fit and furnish our soules with all necessaries. Againe, we must examine our sinnes which beare sway in vs, that repenting of them, we may receiue the assurance of pardon in the publike ministry, to our inestimable comfort, and may also bee strengthened against the power of them, that we may subdue them, and not suffer them to raigne in vs, as in former times; being armed against them, and the tentations of our spirituall enemies, alluring, or forcibly drawing vs into them, with the whole armour of God, and especially the sword of the Spirit. And this will also prouoke our appetite, and make vs goe with cheerefulnesse to the hearing of Gods Word, like the malefactor to receiue his pardon, or the Souldier that hath beene often wounded and foyled, by reason of his nakednesse, to put on sufficient armour, and to receiue from his Commander defensiu and offensiu weapons. Finally, we must prepare our selues, and stirre vp our appetite, by considering the properties of the Word; which we goe to heare. As first, the excellencie of it, as being the Word, not of man, but of God, the Word of truth, life, and saluation. Secondly, the power and efficacie of it, as being the power of God himselfe to our saluation, sharper then any two-edged sword, pearcing euen to the very deniding of the soule and the Spirit, the ioynts and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart. A Word that hath alwayes its operation, and returneth neuer in vaine, but bringeth that to passe for which it is sent, and is either the sweete sauour of life vnto life, or of death vnto death. Thirdly, the great vtility and profit of it, being a perfect and pure Law, that conuerteth the soule, a light that shineth vnto vs who sate in the shadow of death, and guiding our feete into the way of peace; heauenly wisdom, that giueth vnderstanding vnto the simple, and maketh the wise more wise; our Counsellor to aduise vs, our food to nourish vs, our weapon to defend vs and repell our enemies, an effectuell meanes to worke in vs all sauing graces, and the way that bringeth vs to eternall blessednesse. Finally, let vs prepare our selues, and whet our appetite, by considering the necessity of it, seeing without it wee can attaine vnto no good, nor escape any euill; in which regard, our Saviour saith to Martha, that this one thing is necessary, as though there were no necessity of any other thing in comparison of it. The which necessity lyeth not only vpon weakelings, and those who are simple and ignorant, that they may learne the truth, but also vpon those who haue made greatest progresse in Christianity, and are richest in knowledge, that they may bee moued to praïse what they know, and bring it to holy vse, and that the graces of God may be confirmed and preserued in them. Vnlesse any man would foolishly imagine that he is so strong in grace, that he needeth not to eate any more food, for the restoring of that spirituall strength which is daily abated and impaired through our corruption, and the assaults and tentations of our neuer-resting enemies, Satan & the world. The last duty to be performed in our preparation, is, that we seruently pray vnto God for his grace, and the assistance of his holy Spirit, both to his Ministers in speaking, & our selues with the rest of his people, in hearing, that he may be so inabled therby to speak the Word truly, sincerely, powerfully & profitably, and we to heare in a Christian and holy maner, that God may be glorified, and we edified in our holy faith, and strengthened more and more vnto all the duties of a godly life.

Rom. 1. 16.

Heb. 4. 12.

Esa. 55. 11.

2. Cor. 2. 15, 16.

Psal. 19. 7, 8.

Luk. 1. 79.

Luk. 10. 42.

In

§. Sect. 2.
Of duties to be performed in the hearing of the Word.
Afl. 10. 33.
¶ 1a. 66. 2.
1. Ths. 2. 13.

2 Cor. 5. 20.
Luk. 10. 16.
1. Pet. 2. 1, 2.

Luk. 4. 20.
and 10. 48.
Nehem. 8. 3.
Afl. 20. 7.

Heb. 4. 2.

Heb. 2. 1.

§. Sect. 3.
Of duties to be performed
after the hearing of the Word.

In the hearing of the Word, diuers duties are to be performed. As first, we must set our selues in Gods presence, that we may heare all things that are commanded vs of him, according to the example of good Cornelius; in which regard we must not heare the Word after a carelesse and cold manner, but with fear and trembling, if we would haue God that speaketh, take any delight in vs. Secondly, we must heare it, not as the word of man, but as it is the Word of God, by which wee shall one day bee iustified or condemned. Thirdly, wee must hunger after the sincere milke of Gods Word, without the mixture of humane traditions, carnall eloquence, and worldly wisdom, that we may grow vp thereby. Fourthly, wee are to heare with all attention, hauing our eyes fastened vpon the Teacher, and hanging vpon his lips, as the child vpon the mothers brest, like the hearers of our Saviour Christ; to which end wee must carefully banish all worldly cogitations and wandring thoughts, and also all drowzinesse and sleepinesse, seeing we would not so heare our equals, and much lesse our superiours. Fifthly, we must heare with alacrity and cheerfulness, and shake off all dulnesse and carnall wearinesse, which makes no part of the Sermon pleasing but the conclusion onely. Sixthly, wee must heare with all due reuerence, the Word, as being the Word of God, and not of man, as from him, and before him, in whose presence the hills and mountaines shake and tremble. Seuenthly, with all humility, submitting our selues vnto it, as vnto the Scepter of Gods Kingdome, to bee ruled and directed, instructed and reprobued by it, and not rebell against Gods holy ordinance, and repine and rage against our Teachers, when they touch our consciences to the quicke, and sharply reprove vs for our finnes. Lastly, we must heare the Word with faith and a good conscience, giuing credit vnto all the parts of it, as well threatnings as promises, and applying all to our owne vse; with an earnest desire to profit by it, and to lay it vp in the closet of our hearts, that we may not be forgetfull hearers, and like lea-king and riuen vessels that will hold nothing.

After the hearing of the Word, two duties are to be performed. The first is, that publicly in the Church we ioyne with the Minister in giuing praise and thanks vnto God for his mercy towards vs, in feeding our soules with the bread of life, and for the liberty he hath giuen vs to come in peace and safety into his holy Assemblies, to heare vs speake vnto him in our prayers, and to speake vnto vs by his Minister and Ambassadour; and that priuately at home, at least in some short manner, wee renew our thanksgiuing, and desire the Lord to write that which we haue heard, in our hearts, by the finger of his Spirit, and to make it effectuell for the enriching of our hearts with sauing grace, and the strengthening of vs to all holy duties. And if our memory, ability and gifts will serue, it is profitable for vs, and acceptable to God, if we can frame our prayer according to that which we haue heard, confessing those finnes which haue been reprobued, bewailing those wants which haue been discovered, desiring those graces which haue been commended vnto vs, or praising God if we already haue them, and desiring grace and spirituall strength, that we may performe those duties, vnto which wee haue been perswaded and exhorted. The second duty is, that we lay vp that which we haue heard, in our hearts and memories, that we may practise them in our liues. For as it is not enough to haue good seed sowne in our grounds, if wee doe not couer it that it may take root, but let the fowles of heauen take it away, nor to feed vpon wholesome meate, vnlesse we retaine it in our stomackes that it may be digested, and like good nourishment applied to all the parts of the body; so it will little auaille vs to heare many Sermons, and neuer thinke more of them after we are gone out of the Church, and to receiue this spirituall food with greedy appetites, if we keepe it not, but presently cast it vp againe, out of hearts surfettted with worldly cares, and clogged and cloyed with the grosse humours of our sinfull lusts. The which (as I am perswaded) is one chiefe cause why the most, euen amongst diligent hearers, haue, after so long inioying the light of the Gospell, so little profited either in knowledge or holy practice; namely, because they haue been so carelesse in keeping what they haue heard, and haue put this spiritual treasure into broken bags, and this precious liquor into riuen vessels. Now the meanes to retaine and imprint the things which we haue heard in our hearts and memories, is first to loue, regard, and set our hearts vpon them; for euen old men (as we say) who are weake in memory, doe yet retaine those things which they most affect. The second is, that wee heare the Word with diligent attention, obseruing the method of the Teacher, and how he proceedeth from poynt to poynt, fastening the former poynt in our mindes, by casting our eye backe vnto it, when as hee is leauing of it, and proceeding to another. For as it is not possible that the fault of the first concoction, should be amended in the second, seeing euery part and faculty is wholly taken vp about its owne proper worke; so is it no more possible that we should remember that which wee neuer minded, or that the memory should bring forth that, which the vnderstanding neglected to lay vp by due attention and obseruation. And therefore the Apostle telleth vs, that we ought to giue the more earnest heed to the things wee heare, lest at any time we should let them slip. Thirdly, this may make vs rub our memories, and make vs carefull to imprint in them the things which we heare, if we consider that our diligent hearing of the Word will not make vs happy, vnlesse we also retaine it in our memories, and practise it in our liues: for so the Apostle James saith, that if we looke into the perfect Law of liberty, and continue therein, being not forgetfull hearers, but doers of the worke, we shall be blessed in our deed. And the Apostle Paul limiteth the promise of saluation made vnto the preaching and hearing of the Word, to the condition of retaining it in our memories. I declare (saith hee) vnto you the Gospell which I preached, and ye receiued; by which also ye are saved, if you keepe in memory that which I preached vnto you. Fourthly, wee must vnto our hearing, adde meditation, which is a notable meanes of imprinting it in our hearts and memories. Fifthly, wee must conferre with others, that they may helpe vs where we are wanting, and we them, where they haue failed. Sixthly, Gouvernours of families may helpe themselues, and those which are committed to their charge, for the better vnderstanding and remembering of what they haue heard, by repeating the chiefe poynts of the Sermon after they are come home, by strength of their memory, or helpe of their notes, and examining their children and seruants, and putting them

and

to

Heb. 2. 1.

Jam. 1. 25.

1. Cor. 15. 1, 2.

Luk. 11. 28.
Iob. 13. 17.
Iam. 1. 25.

Christian warfare, 1. part.
lib. 2. cap. 26.

to giue an account of what they haue heard and learned. Lastly, we must make what we haue heard, our owne, by applying it to our owne vse, and bringing it to practice in our liues and conuersations; whereby we shall intitle our selues to that blessednesse which is promised to all those who both heare the Word and keepe it. And so much of the first meanes of inabling vs to the duties of a godly life, the ministry of the Word, and the things that are required vnto it. The which I haue the more briefly passed ouer, because I haue touched diuers of the poynts before, and more fully handled some of them in another Treatise.

CAP. VII.

Of the second publike meanes of a godly life, which is the administraction of the Sacraments.

§. Sect. I.

That the Sacraments further vs much in a godly life, as they are seales of the Couenant.

THe second meanes of enriching vs with all sauing graces, and strengthening vs vnto all the duties of a godly life, is the right vse of the Sacraments, Baptisme, and the Lords Supper, both which doe much conduce hereunto, and each of them seuerally. For the Sacraments are seales annexed to the Couenant of grace, purposely instituted of God to strengthen and confirme our faith in this assurance, that Christ and all his benefits doe belong vnto vs; that in him, and for his righteousness, death, and full satisfaction vnto Gods Iustice, he hath pardoned and forgien vnto vs all our sinnes; that in him he is well pleased with vs, and hath giuen vnto vs iust title and interest to all his promises both of grace in this life, and glory and happinesse in the life to come; that hee will giue vnto vs his holy Spirit, and thereby write his Law in our hearts, that we shall not depart from him, mortifie our corruptions, and quicken vs vnto new obedience. Of all which benefits, the Sacraments are not onely significant signes, but also infallible seales, annexed purposely by God vnto his Couenant, to assure vs that he will performe all his promises, and to giue vnto vs (like a bond and conueyance legally signed and sealed) iust title and interest vnto all those blessings, euen before we sensibly haue them in possession and fruition. Yea not onely so, but they also serue like instruments and conduit pipes to conuey to the worthy receiuer, Christ, and all his benefits. Now what can more forcibly perswade, or more powerfully inable vs to the duties of a godly life, then the representing, assuring, and exhibiting of all these inestimable benefits, in the right vse of the Sacraments? What can more inflame our hearts with most seruent loue towards God, then the consideration, yea sense and feeling of this admirable loue of God towards vs, in giuing vnto vs when wee were sinners, strangers and enemies vnto him and his grace, Christ Iesus, and with him all these vn-speakable benefits? and what more then loue can effectually moue vs to an holy desire in all things to glorifie and please him, and to walke worthy his loue in all holinesse of life and conuersation? What can more lighten the burthen of our labour, and make vs to thinke all too little which we can doe and suffer for him? Againe, the Couenant of grace sealed sealed vnto in the right vse of the Sacraments, doth singularly encourage vs to lay aside all doubts and difficulties, seeing God thereby assureth vs that he will, yea hath giuen vnto vs his holy Spirit, to direct and assist vs in all our good indeuours, in the mortifying of all our sinfull corruptions, seeme they neuer so strong and vnresistable, and strengthening vs to the performance of all good duties, seeme they neuer so difficult and vnpleasing vnto flesh & blood. And what can more effectually moue vs to go on in the worke of sanctification, then to haue such an assistant to ioyne with vs, vnto whom nothing is difficult, being infinitely able to performe and perfect whatsoeuer he vndertaketh? What can more powerfully perswade vs to doe Gods faithfull seruice, then to haue the pardon of our sinnes put into our owne hands, signed and sealed, so dearly purchased, and so freely giuen? then to haue the present pledges and pawnes of Gods loue and fauour, the earnest of his Spirit, the first fruits of his graces, and the conueyances of our heavenly Inheritance, sealed and deliuered into our own keeping. For who would be so sluggish, as not to doe faithfull and diligent seruice to such a glorious and gracious Master, for such liberall and bountifull wages? Finally, seeing in the right vse of the Sacraments wee doe really and truly, though spiritually and by faith, receiue Christ, that he may dwell in vs, and we in him, and not onely communicate with him in his diuine graces imputed by God, and applyed by faith, but also by vertue of his Spirit assisting this ordinance, haue all sanctifying and sauing graces confirmed and increased in vs, whereby wee are strengthened vnto all the duties of a godly life: hence also it appeareth how much they conduce and further vs in them; seeing we haue Christ himselfe a co-worker with vs, who by his holy Spirit sustaineth the greatest part of the waight of that his easie yoke, and light burthen, which he layeth vpon vs; in which respect we may take courage vnto vs, and say with the Apostle, that we are able to doe all things, through the power of Christ which strengtheneth vs; and seeing also they cherish and increase his gifts and graces in vs, whereby we are moued and enabled to worke together with him, in all holy duties of Gods seruice, and of a godly and Christian life.

Secondly, the Sacraments are helpes vnto vs for this purpose, as they are solemne testifications of our seruice and obedience vnto God, seeing they are his liveryes and cognizances whereby his seruants are knowne from others; and the sacramentall oath which he causeth all his souldiers to take, when he entertaineth them into his spirituall warfare; and the pres-money which he putterh into their hands, whereby hee obligeth and firmly bindeth them to continue constant in this warfare, and to fight courageously vnder his colours. Now this may mooue vs to doe faithfull seruice vnto our great Lord and Master, partly because hee hath so innobled vs by giuing vs entertainment into his Family, and graced vs, by letting vs weare his liuery and cognizance, seeing it is a farre greater aduancement and dignity, to be one of his meanest seruants, euen a doore-keeper in his House, then to be the greatest Monarch in the earth; partly because he encourageth vs to faithfull and diligent seruice by such bountifull wages and inestimable rewards; and partly because wee shall otherwise dishonour our Lord and Master, & weare his liuery to do him shame;

Phil. 4. 13.

§. Sect. 2.

That the Sacraments further vs in godlineffe, as they are testifications of our seruice to God.

Psal. 84. 10.

yea also disgrace our selues, whilest we doe discover our grosse hypocrisie, in not answering to our profession, nor performing such holy duties as are sutable vnto it; whereby we shall moue the Lord, in his iust displeasure, to pull our liueries ouer our eares, and so vncasing vs, to lay open our hypocrisie to our shame, and to turne vs out of doores. This may moue vs also to fight courageously vnder his Standard, against the spirituall enemies of our saluation, seeing if we slip out of his Campe, after we haue receiued this pres. money, and runne away, wee deserue death by our apostasie; or if we cowardly yeeld vnto the assaults and tentations of our spirituall enemies, and doe not fight valiantly, and performe faithfull seruice to our grand Captaine, euen vnto the death, wee are well worthy to bee cashiered, to haue no part in the glory of his victory, nor any portion of ioy in his heavenly triumph.

§. Sect. 3.

That the Sacrament of Baptisme furthereth vs in godlinesse, as we are thereby ingrafted into Chr. st.

Gal. 3. 26, 27.

Ioh. 15. 5.

Gal. 2. 20.

Ioh. 15. 6.

More specially, the Sacrament of Baptisme is to the worthy receiuer, a notable meanes to inable vs vnto the duties of a godly life. First, because thereby we are sacramentally ingrafted into the body of Christ, and made members of his body spiritually by faith, as wee are outwardly initiated, entred and admitted by the Congregation, as members of the visibible Church, according to that of the Apostle, Ye are all the children of God, by faith in Iesus Christ; for as many of you as haue been baptized into Christ, haue put on Christ. By vertue of which incision, we are inabled to bring forth the fruits of holinesse and righteounesse; according to that of our Sauour; I am the Vine, ye are the branches; he that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit, (namely, by that life and sap of grace which hee receiueth of me) for without me ye can doe nothing. For as the Impe or Cion liueth not by his owne life, but being cast out of the stocke, dyeth and withereth; so being ingrafted into Christ, we liue not our owne life, but by vertue of that liuely sap of grace which wee receiue from him, according to that of the Apostle; I liue, yet not I, but Christ liueth in me; and the life which I now liue in the flesh, I liue by the faith of the Sonne of God, who hath loued me, and giuen himselfe for me; whereas he that abideth not in the true Vine Iesus Christ, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered, and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned. More specially, being baptized into Iesus Christ, we are baptized into his death and Resurrection, from which such vertue and vigour is deriued vnto vs, that wee are not onely thereby washed and purged from the guilt and punishment of all our sinnes, but also inabled to mortifie and crucifie the old man, the flesh, with the sinful lusts therof, & raised from the death of sin, to holinesse and newnesse of life. The which is not onely sacramentally signified by the outward washing and sprinkling with water, which serueth to cleanse vs from our bodily defilements, by our stay, and (as it were burying) vnder it, representing our mortification, death and buriall to sinne, and our rising out of it, signifying our spirituall Resurrection to a new life, but also certainly sealed and assured, and powerfully conueyed to the worthy receiuer, that is, to little children elected to saluation, potentially, the inward vertue lying hid in them, till being come to age, it be produced into act by a liuely faith; and to those of yeeres actually, who with the outward washing, apply by faith the blood of Christ for the purging of them them from the guilt, punishment and corruption of their sinnes, and the vertue of his death and Resurrection, for the killing and crucifying of the flesh with the lusts thereof, and their spirituall quickening vnto holinesse and new obedience. And hereof it is, that the Apostle draweth from our Baptisme effectuell arguments to perswade vs vnto, and worke in vs sanctification and holinesse of life. How shall we (saith he) that are dead to sin, liue any longer therein? Know ye not, that so many of vs as were baptized into Iesus Christ, were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by Baptisme into death, that like as Christ was raised vp from the dead, by the glory of the Father; euen so we also should walke in newnesse of life; for if we haue bin planted together in the likenesse of his death, we shall be also in the likenesse of his Resurrection; Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sinne might bee destroyed, that henceforth wee should not serue sinne, &c.

Secondly, Baptisme doth inable vs vnto the duties of a godly life, as it is the Sacrament of our Regeneration and new-birth, not onely signifying, but sealing and assuring, yea powerfully conueying to the worthy receiuer (by the inward operation of Gods Spirit, which powerfully worketh together with his holy ordinances) the spirituall life of grace, potentially to the elect Infants, as they potentially haue faith, and by Gods Decree are ordained to beleue, and actually to those who by faith apply vnto themselues Christ and all his benefits. By which spirituall life and quickening power, they are inabled, according vnto their age and growth in Christ, to moue and worke in the duties of holinesse; euen as the child which is new-borne moueth as soone as it liueth, first more weakly, and afterwards more strongly, as it increaseth in age and growth, in strength and stature. Neither is the vertue of Baptisme thus quickening vs to newnesse of life, to be limitted and restrained to the time past, or to the present act of administration, as though it did no more but purge and cleanse vs from the guilt and punishment of our sinnes past, and mortifie our originall sinne in which we were borne, or raise vs who were dead in trespasses and sinnes, vnto the first beginnings of spirituall life and motion, bringing vs (as it were) to the birth, and then vnto the leauing vs to be nurled and nourished by other meanes; but the power and vigour of it continueth and extendeth it selfe to the whole course of our liues; and is an effectuell meanes, being recalled to our minds, and afresh applied by faith, both to assure vs of the pardon of all our sinnes, as it is the seale of the Couenant, whose vertue continueth not onely at the first act of sealing, but as long as the tearme specified in the writing, and therefore must continue in full vertue for euer, to our vse, seeing it is a seale affixed to an euerlasting Couenant; and also with no lesse efficacy to mortifie daily more and more, all our sinfull corruptions, and to quicken vs vnto holinesse and new obedience, when vpon any occasion wee apply vnto vs the death and Resurrection of Christ, signed and sealed vnto vs, and for our perpetuall vse in our Baptisme; and doe renew our spirituall evidences, and the great Charter of Gods Couenant, wherein he hath not onely giuen Christ vnto vs, and all his benefits, but also hath promised and assured vs that he will giue his holy Spirit to continue with vs vnto the end

§. Sect. 4.
Secondly, as it is the Sacrament of our new-birth.

of the world, who will apply vnto vs the efficacie of Christs death and resurrection, not onely for the pardon of our sinnes, in respect of the guilt and punishment, but also for the washing away daily of the pollution of it, and subduing of the flesh and the lusts thereof, and for our continuall quickning and further growth in all duties of holinesse and righteousness.

§. Sect. 5.

Thirdly, as it is our restipulation in the Couenant of grace.

Thirdly, it is a meanes to helpe vs forward in all duties of godlinesse, as it is our restipulation in the Couenant of grace, whereby hauing receiued from God the promise of the remission of our sinnes, grace and glory, we for our part promise vnto God againe, that wee will receiue Christ and all his benefits by a true and liuely faith, bringing forth the fruits thereof in vnfeined repentance and amendment of life, and that vtterly renouncing Satan, the world, and our owne sinfull flesh with the lusts thereof, we will wholly dedicate and consecrate our selues, or soules and bodies to the seruice of him who is our Creatour and Redeemer. The which our vow and Couenant made vnto God, is a powerfull bond to restraine vs from all sinne, and to tye vs vnto the performance of all duties of Gods seruice, seeing if we doe not performe the condition of the Couenant betwene him and vs, we can haue no true ioy and comfort in our liues, because we can haue no assurance that we haue any right and interest vnto any of Gods gracious promises made vnto vs in Iesus Christ. So often therefore as we haue occasion to call to our remembrance, our vow and promise made vnto God in baptisme, and especially when wee are present at the celebration of this holy Sacrament, and heare it againe repeated and made in the name of infants admitted vnto it; if wee conscionably labour to make a right vse of our Baptisme, it will put vs in mind of our Couenant then made with God, and renew our desires, resolution, and endeavour of performing that seruice in the duties of a Christian life, which we haue vowed and promised vnto him, lest wee should be found Couenant-breakers, and dalliers with God, who will not bee mocked, thereby deluding our selues of all blessings and benefits, respecting this life and the life to come, which in the Couenant of grace are promised vnto vs. Where, by the way we may obserue, that those who withdraw themselves, and depart out of the assembly when the Sacrament of Baptisme is administered, doe not only thereby sinne against God, the Church, and the party baptized (as I haue before shewed) but also are very iniurious vnto themselves, in that they lose a good opportunity of calling to minde and renewing their Couenant with God, and depriue themselves of one speciall helpe, whereby they might bee inabled to performe the duties of a godly life.

§. Sect. 6.

That the Sacrament of the Lords Supper is a powerfull meanes to further vs in Christian duties, first, because thereby our Communion with Christ is confirmed, and secondly, our faith strengthened.

Ioh. 6. 54, 56.

So likewise the Supper of the Lord, rightly celebrated and vsed, is a powerfull meanes to inable and helpe vs forward in the performance of all Christian duties. First, because thereby our vnion and Communion with Christ, is more and more strengthened and confirmed; seeing God doth offer and giue, and we take and apply vnto our selues by the hand of faith, vnder the visible signes of Bread and Wine, Christ and all his benefits; his Body crucified, and his Blood shed, that they may nourish our soules vnto euerlasting life; according to that of our Sauour; He that eateth my flesh,
and

and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him; and againe, He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternall life, and I will raise him vp at the last day. Now the more that this our vnion with Christ is strengthened and confirmed, the more powerfully doe we performe all Christian duties, seeing from him all grace is communicated vnto vs, and all vertue and quickning life, whereby we are inabled to bring forth the fruits of holinesse and righteousnesse. Secondly, it strengtheneth vs vnto all good duties, as it is a speciall meanes for the strengthening and increasing of our faith, which was the chiefe end for which it was ordained. For seeing the Lord hath not onely committed his Couenant to writing, but for the further ratification of it, hath annexed vnto it his scales, the Sacraments, there is now no place left to doubting; seeing it is impossible that the Lord, who is Truth it selfe, and his promises, Yea, and Amen, should faile in any of them; being thus established and confirmed. In which regard, the Apostle calleth the Sacraments, the scales of the righteousnesse of faith, because as scales, amongst men, are annexed to writings, to giue them security, and better assurance of the performing of Couenants agreed on betweene them: so the Lord hath instituted his Sacraments, and annexed them to his Couenant, not to confirme it, which is so infallible, that it needes no confirmation, but to strengthen our feeble and weake faith, which needes all helpes and meanes to keepe it from wauering. Now the more our faith is confirmed, the more rich wee grow in all sauing graces, seeing it is the fountaine from which they flow, and the more we abound in all holy duties, and fruits of new obedience, seeing it is the roote from which they spring.

Thirdly, because the Sacrament of the Lords Supper is the spirituall food of our soules, whereby they are nourished and strengthened in life and grace vnto eternall saluation, euen as our bodies are nourished with corporall food, and thereby strengthened and inabled for all actions and imployments: So our Sauour saith; My flesh is meate indeed, and my blood is drinke indeed; not to feed the body, but to comfort the soule, to preferue our spirituall life, and to strengthen vs vnto all duties of holinesse and righteousnesse. And as the bodily life languisheth, and strength decayeth, if we refuse our corporall nourishment; so the vigour and life of our soules cannot continue, if we feed not vpon Christ by faith; according to that vehement asseueration of our Sauour; Verily, verily, I say vnto you, except ye eate the flesh of the Sonne of man, and drinke his blood, ye haue no life in you. Yea, this Supper of the Lord is not such a spare meale, and bare Commons, as onely holdeth life and soule together, and doth not reuiue the spirits, increase the strength, and fit vs for action and imployment; but it is a plentifull feast for our soules, which maketh vs grow in grace and spirituall strength and stature, vnto a perfect age in Christ, making them strong and vigorous vnto all Christian duties of Gods seruice. Whereof it is, that as Baptisme is called the Sacrament of our imitation and new birth, so this of our augmentation and growth in grace; affording vnto vs plentifull nourishment for this end. For as God is so bountifull in affording man meanes for the preferuing his bodily life, that he alloweth him such things, not onely which are absolutely necessary, but also for delight;

2. Cor. x. 20.

Rom. 4. 11.

§. Sect. 7.
Thirdly, because it is the spirituall food and nourishment of our soules.
Ioh. 6. 55.

Ioh. 6. 53.

Psal. 104. 14.
E 115.

Cant. 1. 2.

Cant. 2. 4. 5. 6.

2 Sam. 12. 13.

1. Pet. 1. 18.

§. Sect. 8.

Fourthly, because it is an action which we doe in remembrance
of Christ.

and not bread alone to strengthen mans heart, but also wine to make it glad, and oyle, to expresse this ioy in the face and countenance. So hee hath dealt much more bountifully for our soules, providing for their nourishment a plentiful feast, the strengthening Bread of Christs Body, and the cheering and gladding Wine of his precious Blood, the delicious viands and dithes of his spirituall benefits, and sauing graces, and sweet comforts of his holy Spirit; and not onely setteth these things before vs to looke vpon, but giueth vnto vs gracious entertainment, inuiting vs to feed vpon them, not onely vnto necessity, but also to delight. So that our welcome is no lesse worth then our cheere, and (as the Spouse speaketh) his loue better then wine. Yea, vnto his feast he addeth a banquet of spirituall comforts, embracing vs with the armes of his loue, cheering vs with the consolations of his Spirit, and rauishing our soules with the sweet feelings of his fauour, and such inward ioy; that being with the Spouse thus brought into his Banketting-house, and hauing for a Canopie ouer our heads, his Banners of loue, we are ready, as it were in an extasie to cry out, Stay me with flagons, comfort mee with Apples, for I am sicke of loue. Now how can our poore soules, being thus royally feasted and cherished at the Supper of the great King, but bee inwardly replenished with all thankfulness towards God for his so rich mercies? What can they doe lesse, then enter into a serious consideration with themselves, what they may returne vnto God, that they may expresse their loue and gracefulness, for so many and inestimable fauours, without any desert vouchsafed vnto them; saying with the Prophet Dauid, What shall I render vnto the Lord for all his benefis towards mee? And finding themselves to be vnto the Lord, what can they doe lesse then conclude with him, that they will take the cup of saluation, and call vpon the Name of the Lord, praising and magnifying his mercies in the sight of all the people? And finding our selues preserved in spirituall life, growne in Gods graces, and strengthened and fitted for all good imployment, by the royall bounty of our heavenly King, feasting vs with such cordiall restoratiues, and delicious food, aboue the price of siluer or gold, or any other corruptible thing; how vngratefull should we be, if we did not imploy this strength which he hath giuen vs in the duties of his seruice, that we may glorifie his holy Name, and bee accepted of him, by doing that which is pleasing in his sight?

Fourthly, the right vse of the Lords Supper much conduceth vnto a godly life, as it is an action which we doe in remembrance of Christ, and are thereby put in minde how much he hath done and suffered for vs. For who can lightly esteeme of any sinne, which cost Christ no lesse then the price of his precious blood? Who will not bewaile his sinnes past with bitter griefe, abhorre his present corruptions with mortall hatred, and vnto the Lord, what can they doe lesse then renounce and forsake them for the time to come, who duly considereth that they were the nayles which fastened our Saviour Christ to the Crosse, and that vnsupportable waight, which made his soule heavy to the death, pressed out of his innocent body that bloody sweate, and extorted from him that lamentable complaint, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? Who will bee hired with the base wages of worldly vanities, to defile his his soule againe with the filth of sinne, which could no otherwise be clen-sed and purged then by the precious blood of Iesus Christ, of infinite more value then ten thousand worlds? And so on the other side, who can bee slacke in the seruice of so gracious a Sauour? or bee sparing in his paines to glorifie him, who for his redemption hath not spared his dearest blood? Who would not worship him in all the duties of holinesse, who hath purchased his happinesse at such a rate as men and Angels were not able to discourse? who is so vnthankfully slothfull, that will not spend his sweate in his seruice, and his teares, because he cannot spend so much as he should, and euen his blood to make vp what is wanting in them both, for him and his sake, that hath clenfed our bodies and soules from the ingrained spots, and vncurable leprosie of sinne, with his bloody sweate, yea full streames of his precious blood? Who will now grudge to doe works of mercy, or to feed the poore members of Iesus Christ with his spare food, & to clothe them with his cast apparell; which remembreth that this bread of life came downe from heauen to be our food, and hath not spared to feast vs at his owne royall Table, with his owne body and blood for our spirituall nourishment vnto eternall life? that he who is the liuely and expresse Image of his Father, and equall vnto him in glory and Maiefty, disroabed himselfe of this glorious garment, and tooke vpon him the shape of a seruant, yea was content to be stripped of those poore clothes he had suiting with his meane condition, and whilest he bore our sinnes, to beare our shame, hanging naked vpon the Crosse, that he might clothe vs that were spirituall naked, with the rich and glorious robe of his righte-ousnesse and obedience?

Finally, the Lords Supper rightly vsed, is a notable meanes, to confirme and strengthen vs vnto all duties of a godly life; because it giueth vs occasion in our preparation, (that we may come as worthy ghests to the Lords Table) to renew our Couenant with God, by renewing our faith in Christ, our repentance for our sinnes, our loue towards God and our neighbours, and all other sauing graces in vs. We renew our faith, by meditating vpon Gods infinite mercies, and Christs all-sufficient merits, the gracious and indefinite promises of the Gospell, and the truth and omnipotencie of God, whereby he is willing and able to performe them; vpon Gods Commandement, inioyning vs to beleeue, and his bounty and goodnesse, in giuing his Word and Sacraments made effectuell by his Spirit, whereby he inableth vs to doe that which he commandeth. Wee renew vpon this occasion our repentance also, by bewailing our sinnes past, and strengthening our resolution, to leaue and forsake them for the time to come, and to serue God in the contrary duties of holinesse and righteousnesse. And seeing our great wants and imperfections in all Gods graces and Christian duties, we promise and vow in our selues, and vnto God, that wee will carefully vse all good meanes whereby we may attaine vnto them in more perfection. So likewise after the receiuing of this Sacrament, wee take occasion to examine our selues, how we haue profited and increased in spirituall strength and growth of grace, by being feasted at the Lords Table with this food of our soules; and being mindfull of our promises made before we come to the Lords Table, we become more diligent in vsing the §. Sect. 9.

 Because thereby we are occasioned to renew our Couenant with God.

meanes whereby Gods graces may be persited in vs, and we strengthened vnto all good duties. And that we may not appeare to be Couenant-breakers with God, and to haue receiued his grace in vaine, we are made more carefull and conscionable in looking to all our wayes, for the auoyding of all those sinnes wherewith formerly we haue beene ouertaken, and practizing those duties which we haue heretofore neglected, and so to carry our selues in the whole course of our liues, that we may at all times and in all things please the Lord, whom we haue found and felt so gracious vnto vs. In all which respects, who doth not plainly see, that the often resorting to the Lords Table, if we come vnto it duely prepared, is a most effectuall meanes to enrich vs with all Gods graces, and to strengthen vs vnto all good duties of a godly life? And therefore they are most iniurious vnto their owne soules, who seldome come to this spirituall feast, and take euery slight occasion of defrauding them of their due food, seeing heereby they make them droope in their spirituall life, to languish and waxe faint in all sauing grace, and to become vtterly, both vnable and vnwilling, to performe vnto God any sincere and cheerefull seruice.

CAP. VIII.

Of the third publike meanes of a godly life, which is Prayer.

§. Sect. I.
That prayer is Gods ordinance to obtaine his gifts and graces.

2. Cor. 3. 5.
Phil. 2. 13.

1. Cor. 4. 7.
1am. 1. 17.

Rom. 10. 12.
Psal. 145. 18.

He third meanes whereby we may be enriched with all sauing grace, and strengthened vnto all the duties of a godly life, is Prayer; Of which I shall not need to say much in this place, hauing before intreated of it at large. Onely it shall suffice to shew, that it is a singular meanes ordained of God, for the obtaining of grace and strength to serue God in all Christian duties. For of our selues we haue no ability vnto any thing that is good, no not so much as to thinke a good thought, or to entertaine into our hearts a good desire, but whatsoeuer we haue in this kind, it is the gift of God, according to that, What hast thou that thou hast not receiued? and that of the Apostle James; Every good and perfect gift is from above, and cometh downe from the Father of lights. Now the meanes which God hath sanctified for the obtaining of all those gifts and graces which he hath promised, is feruent and effectuall Prayer; for though he be most bountifull and ready to bestow all good things, yet not to the idle and slothfull, but to such as acknowledging them to be his gifts, doe sue and seeke vnto him for them; and though he infinitely abound with all blessings, yet he communicateth them onely to those that craue them at his hands; according to that of the Apostle; The same Lord ouer all, is rich vnto all that call vpon him: and that of the Psalmist; The Lord is neere vnto all those that call vpon him, to those that call vpon him in truth. And the reason is, because such onely doe glorifie him in his gifts, seeing those alone, who haue obtained his blessing by Prayer, will acknowledge him the Author of them, and returne vnto him to giue him thanks. Hence it is, that being willing to bestow all good things vpon his children, and vnwilling that they should neglect their duty, or haue them without suite; and taking delight to conuerse with them, them, he withholdeth his gifts till they aske them, that they may haue this occasion to resort vnto him. And because through their negligence, hee would not keepe from them any thing, which he knoweth good and necessary, ouer-long; like a most louing, yet wise Father, he leaueth not the matter to our own foolish and wayward will, but by expresse commandement inioyneth vs to call vpon him, & encourageth vs in these our suites by promising before-hand, that he wil heare and grant them. Aske (saith he) and ye shall haue, seek and ye shall find, knocke and it shall be opened vnto you. And againe; Whatsoeuer ye shall aske the Father in my Name, he will giue it you. Aske, and ye shall receiue, that your ioy may be full. So the Apostle telleth vs, that this is the confidence which we haue in him, that if we aske any thing according to his will, he heareth vs; and if we know that he heares vs whatsoeuer we aske, we know also that we haue the petitions that we desired of him. In which regard, the Apostle exhorteth, that we should be carefull for nothing (namely, with a carking and distrustfull care) but that in euery thing, by prayer and supplication with thanksgiuing, we should make our requests knowne vnto God. In which regard, the Lord may be truly said to be the Author of all good gifts, and Prayer, the hand whereby we knocke at the dore of his grace, and when it is opened, receiue his blessings from him. He the liuely and inexhaustible fountaine of all good; and Prayer, the bucket whereby wee draw it from him. He, a rich treasury of all grace and desireable riches; and Prayer, the key that openeth it vnto vs, in the Name and mediation of Iesus Christ. To this purpose, one of the Ancients speaketh firly; Prayer (saith he) in an admirable manner conduceth to a holy life, and worthy Gods seruice, and being begun, doth much improoue it, and like a treasure, storeth it vp in our mindes. For if any man indeuoureth to doe any thing belonging to a right course of life, Prayer being his guide, and preparing the way before him, hee shall bee sure to finde a commodious and easie passage, &c. And it is a signe of madnesse, not to bee perswaded that it is the death of the soule, if wee doe not often cast downe our selues at Gods feete. As the body without the soule is a dead carrion: so the soule, if it flee not to God by Prayer, is dead, miserable, and lothsome.

More specially, Prayer is the chiefe meanes on our part, whereby wee obtaine his spirituall gifts and graces, by which wee are inabled to performe the duties of a godly life: For by it we obtaine the Spirit of God, who is the Author of all grace and godlinesse, seeing, as our Sauour hath taught vs, the Lord will giue his Spirit to those that aske it. And if wee want the graces of the Spirit, the Scriptures admonish vs to vse Prayer, as a speciall and chiefe meanes whereby we may obtaine them. So the Apostle James; If any man want wisdom, let him aske of God, that giueth to all men liberally, and vpbraideth not, and it shall be giuen him. And the Apostle to the the Hebrewes, setteth vs in this course for the obtaining of all grace; Let vs (saith he) come boldly to the throne of Grace, that we may obtaine mercy, and finde grace to helpe in time of need. Yea, these spirituall graces, whereby we are inabled to serue God in all holy duties, are things absolutely good for vs in some degree and measure; and therefore we may absolutely pray for them, without interposing any condition; first, because our heauenly Father

Mat. 7. 7.

Iob. 16. 23.

1. Iob. 5. 14, 15.

Phil. 4. 6.

Chrys. de orando
Deum. l. Tom. 5.
Col. 692.

§. Sect. 2.

That by prayer we obtaine Gods Spirit and the graces thereof.

Luk. 11. 13.

1. Iam. 1. 5.

Heb. 4. 16.

Matth. 7. 11.

Luk. 18. 1, 7.

*Quamdiu Deus non tollit a te orationem tuam, non amouebit a te misericordiam suam,
&c.*

Psal. 25. 4, 5.

and 119. 32, 33.

1. Thes. 3. 13.

and 5. 23.

§. Sect. 3.

That publike prayer is most effectuall for the obtaining of all Gods graces.

Exod. 32. 10.

ther is so infinitely gracious and true of his promise, that he will deny nothing vnto vs that is good; and therefore much lesse these things which are most necessary, and in an high degree of goodnesse. For if wee being euill, know how to giue good gifts vnto our children, how much more shall our Father which is in heauen giue good things to them that aske him? Secondly, because he hath commanded vs to pray for these spirituall graces; and therefore it is not to be imagined, that the God of all bounty and goodnesse, would cuer haue inioyned vs to aske those things, which hee is vnwilling to giue: neither will any wise father draw his children to come with suits vnto him, by giuing them repulses; onely it may be, that the Lord, to inlarge our hearts, and to make our desires more seruient and earnest, doth for a time with-hold these graces, at least in respect of our sense and feeling; but if we perseuere in prayer, and continue importunate suiters, we are sure to obtaine them in the end, and that in greater measure, seeing he that by holding his hand backe hath enlarged our desires, and made vs more empty and hungry, hath promised also to fill and satisfie vs. To which purpose Augustine speaketh excellently; So long (saith he) as the Lord doth not take away from thee thy prayer, he will not remoue from thee his mercy; for he that giueth thee his Spirit, that thou maist pray, will also giue vnto thee that, which by helpe of the same Spirit thou doest desire. By all which it appeareth, that prayer is a principall meanes to obtaine all grace and strength at Gods hands, for the well performing of all holy duties. Whereof it is, that the Saints in all ages haue to ordinarily vsed it for this end, in the behalfe both of themselves and others. So Dauid, in many places of the Psalmes: Shew mee thy wayes, O Lord, and teach me thy paths. Leade me in thy truth, and teach me. Teach mee, O Lord, the way of thy Commandements, and I shall keepe them vnto the end. And the Apostle Paul; The Lord make you to increase, &c. to the end he may stablish your hearts vnblabelle in holinesse before God; And the very God of peace sanctifie you wholly, and I pray God your whole spirit, and soule and body, may be preserved blamelesse vnto the comming of our Lord Iesus Christ. Whereas without prayer there is no hope of any growth in grace; for as in nature all things that grow haue in them an appetite and attractiue force, wherewith they draw that nourishment vnto themselves, whereby they come to growth and augmentation: so in the spirituall growth, none receiue any increase of grace, but they who haue an appetite and spirituall desires, which they expresse by the attractiue force of prayer, whereby they draw from God, the fountaine of all goodnesse, spirituall nourishment, and all things needfull to the furthering of their growth in Christ.

Now as prayer generally is a notable means to further vs in all duties of a godly life; so especially that which is publike, when as many of Gods Saints and seruants being met together in his holy Assemblies, doe ioyntly with one heart and voyce, implore the gracious assistance of his good Spirit, whereby they may be inabled to serue him in all Christian duties. For if the prayers of one alone doe offer vnto God an holy kind of violence, (as we see in the example of Moses) so as he seemeth vnable to deny and reiect them, because he hath graciously bound himselfe, by his free and infallible promises, to heare and grant them; how powerfull must the prayers prayers of the whole Congregation needs bee to preuaile with God, in any suit made according to his will, seeing he hath tyed himselfe to heare and helpe them by more speciall promise; according to that of our Sauiour, If two of you shall agree on earth, as touching any thing that they shall aske, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heauen. For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them. So the Lord hath promised that he will cause his seruants to reioyce in the granting of their suits by speciall fauour, which they shall make vnto him in his owne House: I will bring them (saith he) to mine holy Mountaine, and make them ioyfull in my House of prayer; their burnt offerings and sacrifices shall bee accepted vpon mine Altar; for mine House shall be called an House of prayer for all people.

Mat. 18. 19, 20.

Esa. 56. 7.

1. King. 8. 30, 33

Vpon which promises made by God, Salomon, at the consecration of the Temple, groundeth his prayer, that the Lord would in speciall manner heare the suits and supplications of his seruants publicly assembled in his Temple to call vpon him. And hereof it is that the Apostle contenteth not himselfe with his owne prayers, or the priuate suits of others, that he might still be preferred for the seruice of God, and of his Church, but desireth that the Church of Corinth should ioine together in prayer for him, that the gift bestowed vpon him by the meanes of many persons, might giue occasion vnto many, of giuing thanks also in his behalfe. For as much fuell and fire laid together, doth make the flame and heate so much the more vehement; and many small streames meeting in the same channel, grow great and vnresistable: So the fire and fuell of our zealous and seruent prayers ioyned together in the publike Congregation, maketh a flame that scorning all stop, mounteth vp to heauen; and when we ioynly powre out our soules before God, like many waters met in one current, they haue the force of a great torrent and vnresistable flood, which beare downe all before them, and neuer stay, till falling into that infinite Ocean of all mercy and goodnesse, they are graciously receiued and accepted of him. And therefore let no man proudly attribute so much vnto his priuate deuotion, that he should be moued thereby to neglect the publike prayers of the Congregation, as needlesse and of lesse efficacy; seeing they are a much more principall and potent meanes to preuaile with God, then our priuate and proud deuotions, scorning such excellent helpes, which may well kindle in vs that elementary and flashing flame of blind and vngrounded zeale, which lasting but a while, serueth for no vse, but to set the Church on fire with hurtfull Schismes and furious contentions, but will neuer kindly warme our hearts with that heauenly heate of seruent zeale, which maketh vs fit and forward vnto all Christian duties, and the substantiall parts of Gods seruice. In which regard I may well say to such, as proudly presuming of the strength of their owne deuotions, thus single themselves from the Congregation by their priuate duties; as the Wise man in another case; Woe vnto him that is alone; for if hee falleth, and faileth in this duty, through want of attention, and wandring thoughts, faintnesse of faith, and lacke of seruency, there is none by to helpe him; whereas praying in the Congregation, wee mutually supply one anothers defects, one being deuoutly diligent, when another groweth cold and remissely negligent, and he

2. Cor. 1. 10, 11.

Eccles. 4. 10.

he rising againe, as ashamed of his foyles and falls, and recovering the feruor of his zeale and deuotion, requiteth the other with his assistance, when he beginneth to faint and grow weary. Herein like vnto souldiers, who being singled from one another, are easily ouercome, but ioyned in a battell, doe mutually second and succour one another, one fighting, when the other fainteth, and he with renewed strength giuing a fresh charge, bringeth of the other farre engaged, when through weaknesse and wearinesse he is able no longer to beare the brunt. And thus much of the third publike meanes of a godly life, to wit, prayer. Concerning the fourth and last, which is the reading of the Scriptures, I will speake when I come to intreat of priuate reading, because many things to be spoken are coincident to both, and I would not distract them in my Discourse. Onely let it be remembred, that whatsoeuer can be said of the benefit and efficacy of priuate reading, is in a higher degree of excellency verified in that which is publike, because being a ministeriall function, ordained of God, for the common good of the whole Church, and euery particular Congregation, it is more powerfull to all good vses then priuate reading, Gods more speciall blessing by the inward operation of his holy Spirit, alwayes more effectually accompanying his more excellent and publike ordinances, then such as are priuate, and of an inferiour nature. And therefore as the Word publicly preached is more powerfull and profitable, then a Sermon priuately read in our owne houses (as I haue shewed) not in regard of the substance or matter contained in both, nor onely in respect of elocution and action (wherein preaching excelleth reading) but chiefly because Gods blessing accompanyeth more effectually that ordinance vnto which he hath giuen the preeminence; so by the same reason, publike reading is to be preferred before priuate, not onely because the Minister ordinarily readeth with more iudgement and vnderstanding, more plainly and distinctly, giuing euery word and sentence their due waight, emphasis and accent, and thereby giuing such light to the vnderstanding, and life to the affections of the hearers, that such reading is not much inferiour to a meane comment; but chiefly and principally (as I said) because it is a ministeriall function, vpon which we may expect a larger blessing then vpon our owne priuate actions. The which I touch by the way, to shew vnto those their error in iudgement, and fault in practice, who highly esteeme, and diligently exercise themselues in their owne priuate reading of the Scriptures, and yet so despise publike reading in the Congregation, that they will hardly, or not at all vouchsafe their presence, or if that, yet not their reuerent and diligent attention.

CAP. IX.

of the priuate meanes of a godly life : and first of Christian watchfulnesse.

DVthowsoever, we are to ascribe to the publike meanes, the chiefe preeminence, as being of greater vertue and efficacy, for the enriching of our soules with all sauing grace, and strengthening of them vnto all Christian duties of a godly life: yet wee must in any case take heed, that wee doe not (as it is the custome of many cold and carelesse Christians) content our selues with them alone, and rest vpon them as being alone sufficient for all purposes. But we must also with no lesse diligence, care and good conscience, adioyne vnto them the vse of priuate meanes to helpe vs forward in our spirituall growth. First, because God hath inioyned vs the vse of them as well as of the publike, and the Saints from time to time, yeelding obedience herein vnto God, haue made them their daily exercise, as wee shall see when we come to speake of them in particular. Secondly, because they adde strength to our faith, and fuell to our deuotion, whereby we are inabled to performe vnto God publike seruice with more life and zeale, delight and profit: whereas if we neglect priuate duties all the weeke, and suffer our hearts to be taken vp with worldly things, they will be quite out of frame for spirituall exercises, and hardly brought vnto any religious duties of Gods seruice. But when we present our bodies in the Congregation, we shall leaue our hearts at home, about our earthly affaires, and drawing neere vnto God with our lips, shall in the meane time haue our hearts farre removed from him; offering vnto him a dead and formall, cold and heartlesse seruice, wherein he taketh no delight. Thirdly, because Gods publike seruice cannot sometime be inioyed at all, as in the dayes of persecution, and is alwayes stinted and limited to one or few dayes in the weeke, when as our soules, no lesse then our bodies, need their daily bread, and to be refreshed continually in their spirituall strength, which is abated through our naturall corruption, and many slips and falls into sinne, as also with the daily and hourelly tentations of the diuell and the world. In which respect these priuate meanes haue this preeminence aboue the publike, that though they are not so powerfull, and yeeld lesse nourishment; yet we may haue them at our pleasure, and feed vpon them as oft as we will, supplying what is wanting in their vertue and efficacy, by their daily and continuall vse. Finally, by the priuate meanes we are fitted and prepared for the well performing of the publike; as by reading, prayer, meditation, &c. we are inabled to heare the Word preached, with profit, seeing they not onely enlarge our hearts, that wee may heare it with delight, reuerence and attention, but also fasten it in our minds and memories, and make it fruitfull in our liues, and not onely helpe our vnderstanding, that we may better conceiue of what is spoken, being well acquainted with the holy Scriptures, but also inflame our affections with the loue

§. Sect. I.

That we must not rest vpon the publike meanes onely, but vse the priuate also.

Esa. 29. 13.

CAP. XXII.

Of diuers speciall meanes whereby the poynt meditated is wrought vpon the hearts and affections.

§. Sect. 1.
Of Examination.

And now (my soule) that thou seest what is required in this duty of repentance, examine thy selfe how thou hast performed it. Hast thou had a true and thorow sight and sense of thy naturall impotency and auersenesse to this duty; of thy security, impenitency and hardnesse of heart, and hast thou had seruent desires to bee freed from them? Hast thou sought and sued to thy God, the Author and fountaine of this grace, desiring the assistance of his holy Spirit, for the suppling and softening of thy hard and stony heart, that it might relent and resolute into the teares of vntained repentance? And hast thou by faith applyed vnto thee the blood of Christ, for the working of thine heart to sound humiliation and contrition? Hast thou been carefull, as thou oughtest, in vsing all those good meanes which thy God hath giuen thee, for the effectuell working of this grace in thy heart? Hast thou diligently heard the Word of God, and applyed it vnto thy selfe for this end, the threatnings of the Law for thy humiliation, and the sweet and gracious promises of the Gospell, assuring thee of the pardon of thy sinnes, and of Gods loue and fauour, that thou mightest loue God againe, who hath so loued thee, and forgiven thee so great a debt, and testifie this loue by bewailing thy sinnes, whereby thou hast displeased so gracious a Father? Hath Gods mercy, patience and long-suffering drawne thee to repentance, and hast thou bene offended with thy selfe, because thou hast offended thy God, who hath multiplied vpon thee so many testimonies of his loue? Hast thou made right vse of Gods blessings and benefits, to be made thereby more carefull to please him; and of his chastisements and fatherly corrections, to be made thereby more fearefull to offend him? Hath thy sorrow in any good measure been sutable to thy sinnes, and hast thou more bewailed thy sins then the punishment, the guilt then the smart; and in this respect chiefly, because thou hast by them dishonoured thy God, rather then for the miseries which they haue brought vpon thy selfe? Hast thou bewailed all thy sinnes, and those most of all whereunto thy corrupt nature is most inclined; and not onely thy sinnes of grosse commission, but also thy sinnes of omission, and the wants and imperfections of thy best actions? Hast thou been affected with Gods Iudgements, and with those most of all which are spirituall, and touch thee rather then thy sinfull flesh? Hath the smart of thy sores been such, that nothing would ease them but the balme of Gilead, the blood of Christ, applyed by faith, and haue camall sports rather increased then abated thy griefe? Hast thou so washed thy selfe in the waters of repentance, as that thou hast thereby been cleansed from thy sinnes? and hast thou, being freed from sinne, become the seruant of righteousness? Hast thou been earnest in thy repentance, and taken occasion from thy former negligence and vnprofitablenesse, to redeeme thy lost time, by redoubling thy diligence in Gods seruice? Hast thou found plentifull fruits in thee, worthy repentance and amendment of life? And as thou thou hast increased in yeeres, hast thou increased in fruitfulness, bringing forth most in thine older age? Hast thou found in thee those speciall fruits of care, clearing, indignation, feare, desire, zeale and holy reuenge, before spoken of?

Esai. 1. 16.

Alas (my soule) how defective hast thou been in all these things? Alas (my God) how should I, without much shame and confusion of face looke vpon thee, seeing when I come to pay that debt and duty which I owe thee, my siluer is turned into dross, my medicine is become a poison, my repentance, which should be the salve for my other sinnes, is so full of wants and imperfections, that it selfe needeth to bee repented of? and if this bath wherein I should wash my polluted selfe, were not it selfe bathed and cleansed in a pure fountaine, the precious blood of Iesus Christ, so foule it is through the filth of my corruptions, that it would but the more defile me, and make me lothsome in thy sight. It is true (my God) and I acknowledge it to thy glory, that through thy grace I haue repented, and doe desire to repent still more and more. And that small measure which I haue receiued, and which I returne vnto thee, is not false and counterfet, but in sincerity and truth. But (alas my Lord) it is so maimed with imperfections, and defiled with corruptions, that it is utterly vnworthy thine acceptance. And seeing thou hast forbidden in thy Law that any sacrifices should be offered vnto thee, which were maimed or vncleane, how should I presume to offer this sacrifice of my sighes and teares which are so imperfect and defiled, were it not that thou hast told me, that the sacrifice wherein thou chiefly delightest, is a broken heart, and humble and contrite spirit? And because thy perfection can indure no imperfection, thou hast appoynted another sacrifice pure and perfect, euen that which thy deare Sonne hath offered vnto thee vpon the Crosse, to cleanse and couer the impurity and imperfection of mine, that it may be acceptable in thy sight. These waters of thy grace (O my God) were pure and perfect, as they came from thee the Fountaine of all purity and perfection; but alas, they are now defiled by running thorow the polluted channell of my filthy heart. But being againe cleansed by running thorow the pure Fountaine of my Sauours blood, they are restored to their purity, and fit for thine acceptance. From my selfe immediately I dare not offer vnto thee my repentance; for it is wholly stained and defiled with my corruption, and mingled with much impenitency, carnall security and hardnesse of heart. And though it be most imperfect, yet haue I been too too slothfull in vsing any of those good meanes whereby I might attaine vnto more perfection; or when I haue vsed them, it hath been so formally and negligently, that they haue had little efficacie to worke this grace in me. Thy legall threatenings haue not humbled me, thy Euangelicall promises haue little affected mee, the good motions of thy Spirit haue been quenched in me, thy blessings and benefits haue not allured me, thy chastisements and corrections haue not drawne me; but notwithstanding all these helps, I haue continued in my sinnes with much impenitency, or laboured to come out of them with much weakness. My sorrow for sinne hath been very small, and ioyned with much hardnesse of heart; my desires of amendment exceeding feeble and faint;

my §. Self. 2.

Of Confession.

Exa. 1. 22.

Rom. 7.

§. Self. 3.
Of Complaint.

my resolutions weake and vnconstant, and my actions and indeuours impotent and imperfect, and when to will is present with me, I finde no power to performe that which is good, so that I cannot doe the good I would, nor leaue vndone the euill I would not.

Alas (my soule) how farre hath thy carnall security preuailed with thee? How hath it rocked thee in such a deepe slumber, that thou hast little or no sense of thy sloth, but when thou art asleepe, dreamest that thou art waking? How is thine heart hardened through the deceitfulnesse of sinne, that it is scarce sensible of its owne hardnesse? yea when thou dost discern it, how art thou hampered and fettered with the giues of thy corruption, that thou hast neither power nor will to better thine estate? Repentance is the meanes of curing thine infirmities and sicknesse of sinnes. But thou searest the medicine, more then the disease, and neglectest, or formally vnest all good meanes whereby it might be obtained and applyed. Thou thinkest no care or cost too much for the compassing of worldly vanities, and thou canst in pursuing them, keepe thy desires within no bounds, but the more thou drinkest, the more thou thirstest. But how soone art thou tyred in working thy heart to sorrow for thy sinnes, and how little of this dost thou thinke enough? In bodily smart and worldly griefe for the losse of things little to be esteemed, how many arguments of comforts (as it were) bridles, needest thou to curbe in, and moderate thy sensuall sorrowes? and yet how often doe they get head, and (as it were) catching the bridle betweene the teeth, carry thee away in a full carreer? But how many strong motiues and forcible reasons (as it were) sharpe spurres in thy sides, dost thou need, to make thee sorrow for thy sinnes? and how soone, like a dull hackney, art thou tyred in this vnusuall way, so that no spurres nor stripes will make thee mend thy pace? How cold and quiet is thy hatred against thy sinnes? and vpon what easie tearmes and small submission art thou content to let them liue, when the Lord hath giuen them into thy power, and put the sword of the Spirit into thy hands wherewith thou mightest slay them? How little hast thou profited in the amendment of thy life? how small and insensible are thy proceedings in the wayes of godlines? and after long time spent, and many means vsed, how small is thy progresse, and how neere art thou still to the place from whence thou diddest sit out? How faint are thy desires (O slothfull soule) after good things? How farre from earnest longings which breake the heart, and from hungry and thirsting, which are impatient of delay, and neuer at quiet till they be satisfied? How often dost thou faile in thy good resolutions, and how seldome dost thou bring them to any good effect? How easily art thou discouraged in thy best indeuours, desisting, or at least often intermitting them, before thou bringest them to any perfection? And yet this is all thou canst doe towards that perfect obedience which the Law requireth; and all that thy God in the Gospell doth require of thee. Vngratefull soule, if thou dost not answere his demands; when hauing done so much for thee, hee desireth, in lieu of all, to haue so little returned vnto him.

§. Self. 4.
A hearty wish to haue all wants supplied.
Jer. 9. 1.

O that thou couldest performe this duty in that manner and measure which thy God requireth! O that thy head were a fountaine of teares, that that thou mightest with Dauid cause thy bed to swim, and water thy couch with them; and with Ieremy, weepe day and night for thine owne finnes, and the finnes of thy people. O that God would smite thy hard heart, as he caused Moses sometime to smite the Rocke, that there might gush out of it teares of vnfaigned repentance! O that I could thorowly waken my selfe out of my slumber of security, that continually expecting my Iudge, I might prepare my selfe for his comming, and lament my sins, as though it were the last day of my life! O that I could be more displeased with my selfe, because my finnes no more displease me, and lament the hardnesse of my heart, because I can no more heartily bewaile them! How should I inwardly reioyce in this sorrow! How should I haue more iust cause of delight in bathing my selfe in these floods, then Naaman had, when washing in Iordan, he perceiued himselfe cleansed from his Leprosie! How should these teares be my meate and drinke, and more refresh me then my corporall food! O that turning from my sins with implacable hatred, I could returne to my God with all seruency of affection, and that I could expresse and approue my loue vnto him who hath so loued me, by bringing forth plentifull fruits of new obedience! O that my wayes were so directed, that I might keepe his Statutes! O that thou couldest (my soule) set thy selfe perfectly to seeke and serue him, and that thou mightest neuer erre from the wayes of his Commandements! O that it were thy meate and drinke to doe the will of thy heauenly Father; and that thou couldest loue it better then thy daintiest food! O that thou couldest doe Gods will in earth, as the blessed Angels doe it in heauen, with all ioy and cheerfulness, speed and diligence! But alas, so impotent thou art in thine owne strength, that thou art altogether vnable in thy selfe to performe this duty in any such manner or measure as thou desirest.

Thou seest thy sores, and feelest their smart, but hast no skill to cure or ease them. Thou art sensible of thy defects, but art so poore and beggerly that thou canst not supply them. Yea, thou art within the sight of the waters which haue vertue in them to cure thy lamenesse, and lyest desolate bemoaning thy misery, but art so impotent that thou canst not step into them. Thou seest and acknowledgest that thy sorrow for sinne is too too small, and it grieueth thee that thou canst bee no more grieued, but hast no more ability to draw from thy head plenty of teares, or from thy heart vnfaigned sighes and grones for thy finnes, then to command the clouds to raine, or the windes to blow. Thou seest the miseries and dangers which attend vpon thy carnall security, but canst not rowze thy selfe vp out of this dead slumber. Thou feelest the mischiefes of an hard heart, but art not able by any meanes of thine owne to supplie and soften it. Many defects and imperfections there are in thy new obedience, but thou hast no ability to supply the one, or amend the other. Rest not therefore (my soule) vpon thine owne strength, which will faile thee in this, as well as in all things else, of any waight or worth, but flee vnto him that is both able and willing to pardon thy imperfections and wants, and also to supply them. Cry vnto him (O my soule) who is ready and All-sufficient to heare and helpe thee. Lift vp thy heart vnto him, and say:

Psal. 6. 6.

Psal. 119. 5.

S. Sect. 5.
Acknowledgement of impotency.

§. Sect. 6.
Petition.

Psal. 119. 37.

Ezek. 11. 19.
and 36. 26.

Iob. 15. 8.

§. Sect. 7.
Inforcement.

Luk. 18. 1. 8.

Psal. 119.

Law. 5. 21.
Cant. 3. 3.

O thou, who art alone able to perfect that good worke of repentance which thy selfe hast begun, amend in it what is amisse, and supply all that wherein it is defectiue. I haue desired to turne vnto thee by vnsained repentance, but my corrupt flesh opposeth me in this work, so as I can bring it to little effect; put to thy helping hand, and supply by thy Spirit what is wanting in me. The reliques of my corruption doe still remaine in mee, and pull me backe as I am returning vnto thee; but thou who hast deposed them from their regency, and weakened them in their full strength, canst deliuer me fully from their power and tyranny, and preserue mee from the danger of those secret ambushments, out of which these scattered forces, vpon all aduantages doe assault me. My carnall security opposeth my repentance, and maketh me apt to slumber in my sinnes; but thou canst awake me out of this sleepe, who was able to rowze me out of the sleepe of death. My heart is hard, and I bewaile great sinnes with small sorrow; but if thou finite this stony rocke, there will issue from it, as from a fountaine, streames of repentant teares. I am now slow and dull in returning vnto thee, by bringing forth the fruits of new obedience; but I shall be able to better my speed, and to runne the way of thy Commandements, when thou shalt inlarge my heart. O thou therefore who chiefly delightest in the sacrifice of an humble heart, and contrite spirit, create in me a soft and tender heart, and renew in me a right spirit. Frame me according to thine owne will, that thou maist delight in me, and dwell with me; yea, according to thine owne couenant, for thou hast promised to giue me a new heart, and a new spirit, and that thou wilt take away from me my stony heart, and giue vnto mee an heart of flesh. Thou art glorified in me, when I bring forth much fruits of new obedience. O be not wanting vnto thine owne glory, by suffering me to be defectiue in fruitfulnessse; but after I haue brought forth some, purge me againe and againe, that I still bringing forth more fruits, thou maist be more glorified.

Yea Lord, my wants are not small, and therefore my suit must not bee slight. I must still wastle with thee by my prayers and strong cries, and not let thee depart, without a blessing. I am weake to preuaile, but I haue thy truth to support me, who hast promised that I shall obtaine, if I follow my suit without fainting. O then make good thy word vnto thy seruant, wherein thou hast made me to put my trust: Giue me a melting heart, which will relent and resolute easily into teares of repentance. I am much defiled with the filthinesse of my sinnes, and a little washing will not make me cleane; Purge me thorowly therefore (O my God) and multiply my washings, first and chiefly in the blood of Christ, which will cleanse mee from the ingrained guilt of my crimson and scarlet sinnes; and wash mee in the lauer of Regeneration, and in the waters of vnsained repentance, which will, by vertue of the former washing, helpe to purge mee from the filth of my corruptions. Turne me, O turne me vnto thee (my God) and so shall I be turned; draw me, and I will runne after thee. Rectifie and fructifie my more then ordinary barrennesse, with the extraordinary showres of thy grace, and warme my heart with the beames of thy loue, that whatsoever good seed of thy Word shall fall into it, may take deepe roor, and bring forth plentifull fruits of holinesse and righteousnesse; that as I

haue

haue heretofore, more then many others, dishonoured thee by my sinnes, so also I may now glorifie thee in some good degree, by bringing forth, in more then an ordinary manner and measure, plentifull fruits of new obedience.

And now comfort thy selfe (O my soule) for thy God hath granted what thou hast so feruently craued. Yea, it is the end why hee would haue thee to aske, because he hath a desire to giue, and that by discovering thy beggery and pouerty, he might take occasion to discover the riches of his bounty. He that hath enlarged thine heart with these feruent desires, hath done it purposely to this end, that hee may fill it, and satisfie them. Thou couldest not so much as aske this grace of repentance, if the Spirit of God did not helpe thine infirmities, and inable thee to pray with sighes and grones which cannot be vttered; and how can thy God reiect that prayer which his Spirit inditeth, and is made according to his owne will? Yea, be confident, my soule, for thou canst receiue no repulse in this suit; seeing he himselfe hath commanded thee to aske it, and promised to giue it. He, who is true of his promise, and omnipotent in performance, hath bound himselfe by his gracious Couenant, that hee will take away thy stony heart, and giue thee an heart of flesh; that thou shalt looke vpon him whom thou hast pierced, and shalt mourne for him, as a man mourneth for his onely sonne, and be in bitternesse for him, as one is in bitternesse for his first-borne. That he will write also his Law in thine heart, that louing and obeying it, thou maist neuer depart from him. And his Word is yea and Amen; his promises as good as present payment. Yet (my soule) to helpe thy weakenesse, he hath giuen vnto thee already some first beginnings of repentance, as an earnest of the rest that yet is wanting. Hee hath begun this worke of grace in thee, and therefore (his gifts being without repentance) he will surely perfect it. Wait vpon him then (O my soule) by faith, yea, wait vpon him, not onely with patience, but also with ioy and comfort; for he that hath promised, will come, and will not tarry, and will worke in thine heart such sorrow for thy sinnes, as he himselfe shall accept as sufficient; and cause thee to bring forth such plentifull fruits of new obedience, as shall glorifie him, and seale vp in thine heart the assurance of thine owne election and saluation.

Thrice happy then (my soule) art thou now in thy God, who wast in in thy selfe wretched and miserable: for he hath not onely made with thee the Couenant of grace, wherein hee hath assured thee of the pardon of thy sinnes, and of his fauour, in which consisteth thy life and blessednesse, but also hath inabled thee to performe the condition, of faith and repentance, whereby thou art assured, that thou hast thy part and interest in all his promises. Reioyce therefore in the Lord, and againe, reioyce. Praise and magnifie his great and glorious Name, who hath been so good and gracious vnto thee. Thou wast in wofull misery by reason of thy sinnes, and the punishments due vnto them, but hee hath deliuered and made thee happy, and hath both offered vnto thee ioy and blessednesse, and also the meanes whereby thou maist attaine vnto it. Hee hath shewed vnto thee the way of life, and hath giuen vnto thee both will and ability to walke in it. What wilt thou now returne vnto him (O my soule) for all the

§. Sect. 8.
Confidence.

Rom. 8. 26.

Zach. 12. 10.

Ier. 31. 33.
and 32. 42.

Phil. 1. 6.
Rom. 11. 29.

Habak. 2. 3.

§. Sect. 9.
Congratulation and thanksgiving.

Phil. 4. 4.

Psal. 116. 11.

*Psal. 116. 12.
& 150. 3.*

Psal. 103. 1.

Psal. 116. 7.

Psal. 4. 8.

Psal. 46. 1.

Psal. 126. 5, 6.

Psal. 103. 22.

good that hee hath done vnto thee? Yea, what canst thou returne that is worth acceptance, but that which thou hast receiued from this fountaine of all goodnesse? yet though hee hath giuen all vnto thee, something there is which he will be pleased to receiue from thee, as though it were thy gift, even the sacrifice of praise and thanksgiuing. Nothing else canst thou giue but this free-will offering; nothing else doth he require, who is so absolute in all perfection, that hee needeth nothing. A fit oblation (my soule) frō such a child to such a Father; from so meane & poore a subiect, to so rich and high a Soueraigne. Take then into thine hand the Cup of saluation, and praise him who is so worthy to be praised. Praise him in his noble acts, praise him according to his excellent greatnesse. Praise him in his power and truth; praise him for all his grace and goodnesse. Blesse and magnifie him for all his former benefits, and his Christ, through whom they are all conferred vpon thee. And especially, as by present occasion thou art bound, for that he hath giuen vnto thee the grace of repentance, and renewed and increased it by this present exercise, graciously assisting and inabling thee by his holy Spirit to bring it to good issue. Praise therefore the Lord (O my soule) and all that is within me, praise his holy Name. And now with these praises, offer and recommend thy selfe into the hands of thy gracious God and faithfull Sauour, who is all-sufficient to keepe thee vnto the end, and in the end. Thou art not worthy (worthlesse soule) his receiuing and owning, but so much the rather offer thy selfe vnto him who is able to make thee worthy. Deuote and consecrate thy selfe wholly vnto his seruice, and resolute to glorifie and please him in all things for the time to come. And because thy resolutions are weake, thy power small, and thy best indeuours full of imperfections, make thy seruice as acceptable as thou canst, by offering thine heart with it, and doing all that thou canst doe, willingly and cheerfully. Desire the assistance of his good Spirit, to direct and guide, rule and ouer-rule thee in all thy thoughts and desires, words, and workes, that they may in some measure answere vnto thy resolutions, and bee pleasing and acceptable in his sight. Especially desire his helpe, that the praetice of thy repentance may be suteable to thy Meditations, in the whole course of thy life; that more and more sorrowing for thy sinnes, thou mayest haue daily more cause to reioyce in the assurance of his loue, and thine owne saluation, and that turning from them, and returning to thy God, thou mayest more and more glorifie him, by bringing forth better and more fruits of new obedience. And now returne vnto thy rest (O my soule) for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee. Repose thy selfe securely vnder the shaddow of his wings who is able to defend thee, and to cause thee in the midst of garboyles and desperate dangers, to dwell in safety. God is thy refuge and strength, a very present helpe in trouble. He hath made thee to heare ioy and gladnesse, that the bones which he had broken might reioyce. Thou didst sow in teares, but he hath caused thee to reape in ioy. Thou didst goe forth weeping, bearing precious seed, but thou art come againe reioycing, bringing thy sheaves with thee. Blesse therefore the Lord, all his workes, in all places of his dominion. Blesse the Lord, O my soule.

CAP. XXIII.

*of the third priuate meanes of a godly life, which is consideration
and examination of our estate.*

THe third priuate meanes of a godly life, is consideration and examination, both which are in truth but branches of Meditation. Yea the former, if we take it in the largest extent, differeth little or nothing from it, seeing we may be said either to meditate or consider of any thing, when we thorowly and deliberately ponder and waigh it in our mindes, with all the circumstances belonging to it. But heere we will take it in a more strict sense, as it pondreth those things which neerely concerne our estate; and so it is much like vnto examination, although if we speake properly and distinctly, there is some difference betweene them. For consideration is yet, as we heere handle it, more generall, extending to all things that concerne vs, past, present, and to come; but examination properly meddleth not with things to come, but searcheth out those things which are past or present; bringing them to be tryed by the rule, according to which wee doe examine them, whether they bee true or false; good or euill. Consideration waigheth and deliberateth before-hand what wee are about to doe, and whether it be lawfull or vnlawfull, expedient or vnecessary, profitable or to our losse, and accordingly mooueth vs either to doe it, or to leaue it vndone: But in examination we consider of that which is done already, whether it be well or euill done, wisely and to our good, or vnaduisedly and to our hurt. If the former were thorowly performed, the latter would not be much necessary, ynesse it were to reuiue our good actions (as God did the workes of creation) that we might approue them, and reioyce in the conscience of our well-doing. But because we often faile in it, and doe things rashly and without due aduice, therefore wee are necessarily to vse the latter, and to examine what before wee considered not (our after-wit being better then our fore-wit) that so we may reforme what is amisse, and returne into the right way out of which wee haue erred. Yet because I would not make this already long Treatise ouer-tedious to the Reader, but chiefly because many points and proofes are coincident, belonging to them both, I will not diuide them in my Discourse, but handle them together; and the rather, because I haue already spoken of the generalities of consideration, in which it chiefly differeth from this other of examination, in the former tract of Meditation.

This examination or consideration, is nothing else but a serious waighing, and pondring of those things which neerely concerne vs in our spirituall estate; or the diligent searching and triall of our estates, how they stand between God and vs, in matters concerning his glory and our owne saluation. The which examination is held after a solemne manner in the Court of Conscience, and in Gods presence; wee sitting as Iudges vpon our selues, to giue sentence according to the Law of God, and the euidence of our owne consciences, either with or against our selues, concerning those things which we haue done or left vndone, good or euill. In

§. Sect. 1.
How consideration and examination differ.

§. Sect. 2.
Of examination, what it is, and wherein it consisteth.

which triall, by helpe of memory and conscience, our Register and Witnesse, we reuiew and take a suruey of all that wee haue done in the flesh, of all our parts and faculties of soule and body, examining how we haue imployed them to the glory of him that gaue them; our vnderstandings in knowing and acknowledging him; our memories in remembring him; our hearts and affections in adhering and cleauing vnto him, by louing, fearing, trusting in him, and so in the rest. Of all our thoughts also, words and actions, how wee haue by them glorified or dishonoured God. Of all our course and carriage in our whole life and conuersation, and how wee haue therein answered the end of our Creation and Redemption, which was to glorifie him, who hath made and saued vs. More especially, wee may examine our selues, how wee haue performed or broken our vowes and promises made vnto God, and principally our promise in Baptisme; how we haue shaken off the seruice of sinne, Satan, and the world, and deuoted our selues wholly to the seruice of God. How wee haue profited in mortification, and what corruptions wee haue subdued and weakened, which formerly were potent and strong in vs; how wee haue mastered and abated our pride, anger, ambition, couetousnesse, voluptuousnesse, impatiencie, euill concupiscence, and the rest of our corrupt affections and vn-ruly passions. How we haue profited in newnesse of life, both inwardly in our minds and hearts, and outwardly in our words and actions; how wee haue ruled that vn-ruly member our tongues, and haue made them instruments of Gods glory, and of the edification of our neighbours and our selues. How we haue growne in Gods graces, waxing daily stronger in our faith, and assurance of his loue and our saluation, more feruent in our loue and zeale, more firme in our affiance, and how we haue renewed and increased our sorrow for sinne, our hatred of our corruptions, especially of our beloued finnes, and how we haue in our indeuours and actions answered our resolutions of seruing God in newnesse of life. How we haue furnished our selues with all the parts of our Christian Armour, and kept it fast buckled vnto vs in the whole time of our warfare. How wee haue kept our spirituall watch, and how wee haue resisted or beene ouercome with the tentations of our spirituall enemies. How we haue performed the generall duties of Christianity, and the speciall duties of our callings; and how we haue obserued or neglected the duties of our daily exercise, as they haue before beene described vnto vs. How wee haue profited by Gods Iudgements vpon our selues or others, for the mortification of our sins, and weaning our hearts from the loue of the world; and how his mercies and blessings, his patience and long-suffering, haue beene auailable with vs, to leade vs vnto repentance, and to make vs diligent and cheerefull in his seruice. Whether wee haue beene made more carefull by our former falls, to looke better to our footing, and whether the remembrance of our lost time, hath not made vs double our diligence, that wee may redeeme it, by performing vnto God more faithfull seruice for the time to come. Whether we are daily carefull to renew our Couenant with God, and to preserue our selues from sliding backe in the breach of our promises. Whether we decay not in our first loue, but nourish it and all other sauing graces in their first seruency, yea increase in them daily more and more. Finally,

nally, whether wee are prepared to beare afflictions, and to meete death with a cheerefull and willing heart; and whether our accounts bee in that readinesse, that we doe with comfort and ioy expect and wish for the coming of our Sauour Christ vnto Iudgement.

But the chiefe things wherein we must most often and seriously examine our selues, are our sinnes, and the miseries and punishments which attend vpon them. And first, our originall corruption, whereby we haue defaced Gods Image in vs, and defiled all the powers and faculties of our soules and bodies, whereby being vtterly disabled vnto all good duties of Gods seruice, they are prone vnto all euill, and to performe seruice vnto sinne and Satan. So that there is naturally no sound place in vs, but from the crowne of the head, to the sole of the foot, nothing but wounds and bruises, and putrifying sores. Nor any sinne and wickednesse, how abominable so euer, the seeds whereof doe not remaine in vs, wanting nothing but the tentations of the deuill, the world, and our owne flesh, to make them sprout vp and come to their full growth, as oft as we get fit opportunity. Neither is this the case of some alone, but of all without exception, one as well as another, being ready to commit any outragious wickednes, David as well as Cain, Lot as the Sodomites, Peter as well as Iudas. Or if they doe not, it is not from the benefit of nature, which is equally corrupt in all (all being alike the children of wrath and dead in their sinnes) but from the Spirit of God, which either sanctifieth and changeth the nature of the Elect, or restraineth the wicked, by giuing them some common and Morall gifts, for the good of humane society, which otherwise could not stand, if they were let loose to their naturall impiety. Of which restraint, if they be once freed and left to themselues, they burst out with Nero, Hazael, Iudas, and many others, into such outragious wickednesse, as in the time of the Spirits restraint, their owne iudgements, who are best acquainted with their owne hearts, would haue thought, that their natures could not possibly be inclined to such abominations. Heere then is matter enough for our triall and examination to be exercised about, if wee will rake in this noysome sinke of all vncleannesse, and rip these old sores to the bottome. Which though it be vnpleasant to corrupted nature, because being full of selfe-loue, it fleeth the sight of its owne deformities, and being willing to flatter it selfe with a false opinion of some natiue beauty, doth abhorre the discouery of its vgly filthinesse, and with the Elephant wilfully muddeth the cleere waters, which would giue it a view how monstrously it is misshapen; yet is it a consideration most necessary; seeing this is the roote and fountaine of all our other sinnes, whereof wee should most seriously repent, bewayling, and reforming this inbred corruption; which if wee neglect, and spend all our time about our actuell sinnes, it is all one, as if we should bee still chopping at the branches, and let the roote liue and grow, or be wholly taken vp in clensing of the streames, and neuer take care for the purging of the fountaine, which being polluted, defiles them with its filthinesse.

Secondly, in this examination, we must call our selues to an account for our actuell sinnes, which we our selues haue committed against Gods Majesty, by breaking his Law, and all and euery of his Commandements, in

§. Sect. 3.

That we are chiefly to examine our selues in respect of our sinnes; and first, our originall corruption.

Esa. 1. 6.

Eph. 2. 1, 3.

2. King. 8. 13.

§. Sect. 4.

Secondly, we must examine our selues concerning our actuell transgressions, according to the Law.

thought, word, and deed. The rule of which examination, by which we are to come to our triall, is the Law of God it selfe, which by our sinnes we haue transgressed; for as the Apostle saith, By the Law commeth the knowledge of sinne, being that straight rule which best discouereth the crookednesse of our actions, and wherein, and how many wayes we haue swarued from it. In which course, the best manner of proceeding is, that we begin where God beginneth, and so proceed with him, from one Commandement to another, examining our selues, how often and many wayes we haue offended against euery one of them, both by neglecting the duties which they command, and committing the sinnes which they forbid. Whereof I shall not need heere to set downe the particulars, according to which, triall is to bee made, seeing I haue done it already in the former part of this Treatise, vnto which I referre the Reader, who desireth to make vse of it for this purpose. Only let vs know, that the Law of God, being a most perfect abstract of his will, doth containe in it all vertues which he commandeth, and vices which he forbiddeth, and though it be brieue in words, yet as David saith, it is in the sense and meaning, exceeding large. And therefore when we goe to examine our selues according vnto it, we must not looke so much to the bare words of euery Commandement, as to their sense, being enlarged according to the rules of extension, which are grounded vpon the Scriptures, and euen vpon reason and common equity. As first, where any vice or sinne is forbidden, there the contrary vertue or duty is commanded, and contrariwise. Secondly, where one particular vice is forbidden, or duty commanded, there all vices or duties of the same nature and kinde, are forbidden or commanded, as our Sauour hath taught vs in his exposition of the Law. Thirdly, the Law being perfect, doth require perfect obedience of the whole man, and euery part inward and outward, soule and body; so also whole obedience vnto all and euery Commandement: for hee that breaketh one of them, is guilty of all; and not onely that our obedience bee whole and totall in respect of the parts, but also in respect of degrees, that it bee in that perfection which this perfect Law requireth. Fourthly, the Law being spirituall, and hauing a spirituall sense and power, doth binde not onely the outward man to externall obedience, but also the soule and secret thoughts, the heart and conscience. Yea, the first and last Commandements haue a large extent aboue all the rest, reaching euen to our thoughts and first motions, which haue not the consent of will ioyned with them. Fifthly, where any vertue or vice is commanded or forbidden, there also all the meanes and occasions are commanded or forbidden. Sixthly, where any duty is commanded, or vice forbidden, there also the signes of them both are also inioyned or prohibited: for wee must haue a good conscience, both before God, and also before men, and auoyd not onely the euill it selfe, but also all appearance of it. And lastly, the common rule of charity, binding vs to loue our neighbours as our selues, and that God may be glorified in their obedience, as well as our owne, the Law of God requireth, that wee should not onely obserue all that is contriued in it, our selues, but also prouide, as much as in vs lyeth, that it bee likewise obserued by our neighbours, yea euen by our enemies.

And

Psal. 119. 96.

Mat. 5. 21, 22.

Iam. 2. 10.

Rom. 7. 14.

Act. 24. 16.

Psal. 119. 139.

And if by helpe of these rules we enlarge the Law of God, according to the true sense and meaning of it, and examine our selues answerably in all the duties which it commandeth, and all the vices and sinnes which it forbiddeth, we shall heereby come to a cleere and liuely sense and feeling of our sinnes in all the sorts and kinds of them; vnto which, when we haue in some measure attained, we must then further examine our selues, how often and innumerable times we haue reiterated and multiplyed the same sinnes, against euery of Gods Commandements, in thought, word, and deed. And then wee shall plainly see, that our sinnes in number exceed the haire of our head, and the starres of heauen. Which when we haue done, we must in the next place consider, how haynous they haue many of them beene, in respect of their quality and degree. Where we are carefully to take heed that we doe not (as corrupt nature, pride, and selfe-loue perswade the most) excuse, minse, and extenuate our sinnes; but that wee looke vpon them in their naturall vgliness and outragiousnesse, and aggravate them by all their circumstances of persons, manner, time, place, and the meanes which God hath giuen vs, to preserue vs from committing them, or of raising vs out of them by repentance. As that wee haue thus and thus sinned, not onely when wee were the vassals of Satan, vncalled, and vnregenerate, with full consent of will, and with all delight and cheerefulness, but since wee were called, regenerate and inlightened by Gods Spirit; and since we haue giuen our names to Christ, and professed our selues to be his seruants, we haue oftentimes done seruice vnto Satan his arch-enemy, by committing many sinnes, not onely through frailty and infirmity, either through ignorance, or because we were taken vpon the sudden and at vnawares; but oftentimes wittingly and willingly against knowledge and conscience, yea sometime wilfully, being transported with the violence of our carnall lusts and passions, and (as it were) with an high hand against God. That we haue thus sinned, not onely in secret, committing that wickednesse in Gods presence, which wee would haue forborne in the presence of a mortall man, but also openly and scandalously, to the dishonour of God, and slander of our profession. That wee haue not seldome fallen into these sinnes, but often and many times; yea euen after that we haue repented of them, and haue resolved, vowed, and promised, that we would leaue and forsake them. That we haue committed these sinnes, not against an enemy, a stranger, or one of meane condition, like vnto our selues, but against God, omnipotent in power, and glorious in Maiesty; and vnto vs so infinite in grace and mercy, that with all other blessings which we inioy or hope for, he hath giuen the Sonne of his loue vnto vs, and for vs, that he might by his death worke that great worke of our Redemption, and giue vnto vs life and happinesse, who were the slaues of Satan, dead in our sinnes, enemies to God and our owne good, and the children of wrath as well as others. That we haue not by strong inducements beene drawne to offend so great and gracious a God, but for meere trifles, and the contemptible wages of worldly vanities. That wee haue committed these sinnes, being the members of Iesus Christ our Head, and so (as much as in vs did lie) haue defiled him with the taint of our sinnes, and drawne him (as much as we could) into communion with

vs

§. Sect. 5.
How we must aggravate our sinnes, in respect of circumstances.

vs in our wickednesse, that shed his precious blood to purge and purifie vs, that we might be holy, and without all blemish of sinfull pollution. That we haue by our sinnes grieued the good Spirit in vs, vexing him who is our Comforter, by quenching his good motions, and obeying the suggestions of Satan, and the lusts of our sinfull flesh. That we haue thus sinned, and hauing false, haue lien in our sinnes without repentance, notwithstanding the plentifull meanes which God hath granted of grace and sanctification. As the light of the Gospell and preaching of the Word, whereby we haue been instructed, counselled, admonished, reproued, comforted in all good courses by his gracious promises, and withdrawn from sinne by the denunciation of his curse and terrible threatenings. Yea notwithstanding the Lord hath encouraged vs to serue him cheerfully, with the liberall wages of present blessings, and disheartened vs from going on in sinne, by causing vs to feele the smart of his chastisements and corrections.

§. Sect. 6.

That it is a profitable course to keep a Catalogue or Register of our speciall sinnes; and the manifold fruits which will arise of it.

And thus we are to examine our selues, both in respect of the number and quantity, and the hainousnesse and quality of our sinnes. But because our obseruation is slight, our memories short, and not able to recount and recall them, when we most need to haue them in our sight, and because we oftentimes are interrupted in this exercise by many distractions: It should be a profitable course, if we would, when wee are best at leisure, and most fit for this exercise, and especially in the day of our affliction and humiliation, examine our selues thorowly and seriously, according to euery one of the Commandements, in the order before prescribed; and as we goe, take a Catalogue of all the sinnes that we can with deliberate study call to our remembrance, which we haue committed in the whole course of our liues, not in the particular acts, which being often reiterated, are innumerable, but in their seuerall kinds. And for our more distinct and orderly proceeding herein, we may consider how we haue carryed our selues in our seuerall ages, states and callings, in our childhood, youth, mature, and old age, how towards God, our neighbours, and our selues; how before we were called, in the dayes of our ignorance; and how since wee were called and enlightened with the knowledge of God and his truth; how in this, and how in that passage of our liues; how when we were children vnder gouernment of our parents; and how since we were parents and gouernours of others. Which when we haue at once or sundry times drawne, and enlarged, as afterwards vpon occasion our sinnes come to our remembrance, it will be a notable helpe, not onely for the beginning of sound repentance, but also for the renewing of it, as oft as we goe about it: and minister vnto vs matter plentifully, for the confession of our sinnes before God, and deprecation, when we haue thus humbled our soules in his sight; and much strengthen our faith in the assurance of their remission, when as we haue thus specially repented of them, confessed them, and craued at Gods hands mercy and forgiveness. But especially we must remember in this our Catalogue, to set down our most grievous and hainous sinnes, whereby wee haue most dishonoured God, and prouoked his displeasure against vs, whether they haue been committed before, or after our calling. For though God hath forgiven them, wee must must not forget them, but must retain them in memory, and daily repent of them, vsing them as a chiefe motiue to worke our hearts to hearty sorrow, both for them, and all our other sinnes, and as goades and prickes in our sides, to make vs with more zeale to goe on in the contrary course, and in bringing forth to Gods glory the fruits of new obedience. And thus the Lord required of the Israelites, that they should alwayes remember their stiffe-necked rebellion in the Wildernesse, whereby they prouoked him to wrath against them. And thus among their other sinnes, they specially remembre and acknowledged their vngratitude in reiecting Gods gouernment, and desiring of a King. Thus Dauid repenting of all his other wickednesse, doth specially call to minde his adultery and murder, euen after God by his Prophet had assured him of forgiuenesse. And the Apostle Paul, vpon all occasions remembreth his grieuous sinne of persecuting the Church, both for his humiliation, and to stirre vp his zeale in Gods seruice. And thus hauing set downe our accounts with God for the time past, it will be a good course for the time to come, that our reckonings may be kept continually euen, to keepe a iournall or day-booke, wherein we are to set downe what sinnes of note wee can obserue in our selues euery particular day, either in the committing of any euill which God hath condemned, or in omitting, or negligent performing any speciall and necessary duties which he hath commanded, respecting himselfe, our neighbours, or our owne persons, which if it haue beene hainous and grieuous, we may well register and write it in our Catalogue (as it were) in capitall or red letters, as a sinne to bee repented of in the whole course of our liues. For if Merchants and Trades-men finde it profitable and necessary, to haue not onely bookes of accounts, which containe the maine matters of their estates, what they haue, and what they haue parted with; what they owe, and what is owing to them; but also their day-bookes, wherein they write what they buy, and what they sell; what they haue laid out, and what hath come in; and yet all this paines is taken for the preserving and increasing their worldly and temporall riches, which are momentany, vncertaine, mutable and sure to perish: Why should wee thinke such care too much, and paines too great, for the good of our soules, and the preserving or increasing of our spirituall and eternall riches, the discharge and cleering of our debts vnto God, which if they bee found vpon our account at the great Audit of Gods last Iudgement, shall neuer be forgiuen, but make vs liable to euerm-lasting punishments? Besides, we shall receiue for the present, diuers benefits, by keeping and registering this strict account. For heereby we shall be more watchfull ouer our selues, that we let no enemy enter in the day, which will trouble vs at night, and will not let vs rest till we haue thrust it out by vnfained repentance; we shall be freed from carnall security, and be made more carefull in obseruing our sinnes, either to preuent or reforme them, and more able to remember them when they are committed, that we may bewaile them, and take better heed for the time to come. And finally, we shall not so easily be overcome of euery temptation, and inticed vnto sinne, when as we know before-hand, that it shall come into account, and vnder the censure of conscience, awarding vs to shame or sorrow,

Dent. 9. 7.

1. Sam. 12. 19.
Psal. 51. 14.1. Tim. 1. 13.
1. Cor. 15. 9.
Act. 26. 10.

sorrow, and to lose the sweetnesse, which we haue tasted with some carnall delight in sinning, by the smart and paine of speedy repentance. And as no wise man will runne vpon the score, or haue his name in the shop-book, for euery needlesse trifle which may well bee spared, because one thing draweth on another vntill it come to a round summe; nor for a greater matter, when he purposeth present payment, as soone as the wares are brought home, because the crossed booke, as it sheweth his honesty in paying his debts, so at least it seemeth to argue defect of present meanes, in that for the time he was indebted: so much lesse would any come vpon the score, or into the booke of conscience for euery small bait of worldly pleasure or profit, seeing here especially one thing pulls on another, and many litle make a great reckoning; nor yet for matters of greater moment, if they considered that payment must bee made, the score cleered, and the booke crossed, before they can betake themselves to quiet rest. Which when it is done, though it sheweth their faith and piety in repenting, yet withall their frailty and imperfection in their spirituall estate, in that by falling into sinne they needed repentance.

§. Sect. 6.

Of the consideration of our misery and punishment.

Heb. 10. 31.

And thus we must examine our selues in respect of our sins; which when we haue done, we must not rest there, but enter also into the consideration of the misery and punishments, which not being repented of, they bring vpon vs. As that they make vs subiect to the wrath and displeasure of Almighty God, who being a consuming fire, and we as stubble or combustible matter, it must needs be a fearfull thing to fall into his hands. To the curse also of the Law, denounced against all that continue not in all that is written therein to doe it, and to all the plagues and punishments threatened therein, which respect either this life, or the life to come: that they are a wall of separation betweene our God and vs, stopping from vs the sweet influences of his grace and loue, and hindring vs of many testimonies of his fauour in temporall things, which otherwise hee would graciously bestow vpon vs. And contrariwise, that till we repent, they in danger vs to euerlasting condemnation, which though we doe hereafter auoyd, by turning from our sinnes vnto God, yet in the meane time they expose vs to temporary afflictions, which God vseth as a meanes to bring vs to repentance; crossing vs in our euill courses, and setting thorny hedges in our way, to stay vs from running too farre from him. They moue him to meet with vs at euery turne, and to bring vs to a true sight and sense of our sinnes, by fitting his punishments in some proportion or likenesse vnto them; because so brutish wee are in obseruing our sinnes, and the iudgements of God inflicted for them, that (like the dog before the sheepe that he hath worried) wee need to be taken with the manner, and to haue our fault laid before vs, when he taketh vs in hand to beate vs for it. For because sinne is too sweet to our carnall appetite, therefore the Lord imbittereth it with the wormewood and gall of afflictions, which oftentimes much more vexing vs, then wee tooke delight in the pleasure of sinne, doth make vs afterwards, when wee remember this lothsome after-taste, to restraîne our appetite, and not to giue way to our carnall concupiscence alluring vs to wickednesse.

And thus we see the subiect matter and manner of our examination, with

Hos. 2. 6.

Lam. 3. 19.

§. Sect. 7.

Of the end of this examination, and time when it is to be performed.

with the helpes and meanes whereby we may be furthered in it. Now the maine end of it is, that it may serue as an effectuall meanes to bring vs to repentance; for therefore we labour to come vnto a true sight of our sinnes, that we may vnfaignedly bewaile them with bitter griefe. Therefore doe we take a thorow view of our sinnes, and the Iudgements of God, miseries and punishments, which doe accompany them, that seeing the vgly deformities of the one, and feeling or foreseeing the smart of the other, we may be moued, either not to sinne, or being ouertaken, to leaue and forsake them, and to preuent our owne woe by speedy repentance. The time of this examination is alwayes in season, because repentance is neuer vnseasonable. For seeing the score is seldome cleere, and our frailty such, that conscience is occasioned to hold the pen still in hand, and euery hand while writeth vp our debts; therefore we must be still examining, cleering and crossing of our bookes, that nothing may stand vpon account, when we shall be called to Iudgement; which being most certaine, and the time most vncertaine, it would be our wisdom to be alwayes in readinesse. In which regard it were to be wished, that we would spend some little time, euery night before we goe to sleepe, in examining our selues, and cleering our accounts for the day past, the which I here passe ouer, hauing spoken of it before in the daily exercise. But most solemnly and seriously are wee to set our selues about this duty of examination, when as wee haue some speciall cause of renewing our repentance. As when wee desire any extraordinary benefit which vve greatly vwant, when we vndertake any waighty businesse; vwhen vvee humble our selues in any solemne manner before God, either publikely or priuately, in the sight and sense of our sinnes, vvhich vve desire should be pardoned, or of some imminent and approaching iudgement, vvhich vvee vould preuent, or some present affliction vvhich vve vould haue remoued; or vwhen vvee prepare our selues that vve may come as vworthy ghests to the Lords Table. Then is this examination most seasonable, as being the best preparatiue for humiliation, feruent prayer, and serious repentance.

1. Cor. 11. 28.

§. Sect. 8.

A complaint of the neglect of this duty, and the causes thereof.

But alas, howv is this excellent duty generally neglected? and howv seldome doe the most that professe Christianity, call themselves vnto this account, multiplying their sinnes from day to day, and neuer making any reckoning of them? And although almost all men hold it to be most necessary, to be still reuiewing their vworldly estates, and to keepe a strict account of their debts, and meanes to discharge them of their disbursements and expences, and of their profits and commings in; yet howv fewv are they vvho seriously examine their debts to God, or of the meanes vwhereby they may discharge them? howv they thriue and increase, or howv they decay and goe backvvard in their spirituall estate, till at last they prooue Banquerupts in all grace and goodnesse, and so desperate in their estates, that they onely thinke howv they may runne further in debt, and neuer take care howv it may be discharged? Of vvhich neglect there are many causes. First, because they are so farre in loue vvith their sinnes, that they loath all meanes vvhich might vvorke any dislike, or conuince them of the necessity to leaue and forsake them. So our Sauour saith, that when light is come into the world, men loue darknesse rather then light, be-

Ioh. 3. 19, 20.

Ggg

cause

cessarie, not onely for our nature, but also for our states and callings, places and persons. Giue vs with thy blessings their right vse, and giue them vertue and strength to sustaine and nourish vs. Let vs, when wee want these blessings, begge them from thee, and when wee haue receiued them, returne thee thanks. Inflame our hearts with loue towards our brethren, and let vs not, through couetousnesse and selfe-loue, seeke onely our owne good, but let vs seeke the common good of our brethren, and pray for it as well as for our owne. Let vs know and acknowledge our frailty and mortality, who neede to be daily sustained by thee, and let this make vs like children, to resort daily vnto thee our heavenly Father, craving from thee all things needfull. Let vs not be distrustfully carefull for the time to come, but euer depend vpon thy Fatherly prouidence, being assured that thou who hast provided for vs to day, wilt provide for vs to morrow. Let vs lay vp goods to good ends, not onely that we may haue to supply our wants, and to provide for our families, but also to releue the necessities of others. Let vs not be so addicted to the commodities of this life, but that withall, wee doe most principally labour for Spirituall graces, and things pertayning to a better life. Let vs as much desire to be freed from the corruption of sinne, as the guilt and punishment, and as wee craue the forgiuenesse of our sinnes, so let vs earnestly labour to forsake them. Remit and pardon all our sinnes, and to this end giue vs a liuely Faith to apply Christ for our iustification. Let vs pray for remission, not onely with seruencie, but also with Faith, stedfastly beleeuing that thou wilt pardon them, and seale this assurance in our hearts by thy good Spirit. Let vs see our sinnes, and heartily bewaile them, and be truely grieved because they no more grieue vs. Let vs after reconciliation desire and endeavour in all things to please thee, and chuse rather to displease our selues and all the world, then thy Maiesty. Let vs confirme our Faith in the assurance of pardon, by forgiuing those who haue trespassed against vs, and that not in shew onely, but in truth and sincerity. Let vs not onely forgiue iniuries, but also forget them, and approue our sincerity in remitting, by our readinesse to performe all good duties vnto them, that wee may overcome euill with goodnesse. Let vs passe by offences, and shew our wisdome in our slownesse to Anger and Reuenge. Let vs doe good to those that hurt vs, and pray for those that persecute vs. Giue vnto vs not onely the grace of Iustification, and the Remission of our sinnes, but also of Sanctification, and the spirit of fortitude, whereby wee may mortifie sinne, and be enabled to resist the tentations of the flesh, the world and the deuill. Let vs not, when we are washed with the blood of Christ, and freed from the guilt and curse of sinne, defile our selues againe, nor be intangled in the yoke of bondage, but let vs stand fast in the liberty which Christ hath purchased for vs. Let vs not abuse our liberty as an occasion to the flesh, and because we are freed from sin, sin the more freely; but being deliuered out of the hands of all our spirituall enemies, let vs worship and serue thee without feare, in holinesse and right-

righteousnes before thee all the dayes of our liues. Let vs continually warch & pray, that we doe not enter into tentations, seeing our spirituall enemies are euer most busie & malicious in assaulting those, whom thou hast pulled out of the kingdome of darkenesse, and made subiects of thy Kingdome, and seruants of thy family. Let vs consider our owne weaknesse, and our enemies power, and let this moue vs with more seruency to craue thy helpe and assistance. Establish vs (O Lord) by thy free Spirit, and so strengthen vs with thy wisdome and power, that we may be able to stand against the artificiall and cunning tentations of the deuill. Doe not giue vs ouer to the Tempter, nor leaue vs to our selues, but with the temptation giue all happy issue, that we may haue the vpper hand, and be preserued from all euill. We craue not to be freed from temptation, but that wee may not be tempted aboue our power; Yea, try vs, O Lord, as much as thou wilt, so that being tried, wee may be found approued. Let vs quench the fiery darts of the deuill with the shield of Faith, and not admit of his suggestions, but nippe them in the head, when they are first offred vnto vs. Leade vs not (O Lord) into temptation; giue vs not ouer to our owne lusts, to be hardned with the deceitfulnesse of sinne, nor to the world, to be carried away with the desires thereof, nor to the deuill, to be ouercome with his tentations, and to be carried away captiue to doe his will. Let those weakenesses which we discern in temptation, make vs to rest more entirely vpon thy power. Let vs in the sight of them be truly humbled; turne them to our good, and make vs more careful in the vse of all good meanes to attaine vnto more strength. Let vs not fall away in the time of temptation, but enable vs to withstand our enemies in the euill day; and hauing finished the fight, let vs stand fast, and be kept by thy power through faith vnto saluation. Let vs alwaies be prepared for the day of battell, and put on thy whole armour, that wee may be enabled to resist our enemies. Let vs not tempt thee by running into temptation, and expose our selues to Satans baytes and snares, before they be offered vnto vs. Let all our trials and tentations tend to our good, and the more enrich vs with Spirituall graces, and so further our euerlasting saluation. Doe not (O Lord) punish in vs one sinne, by giuing vs ouer to another, neither leaue vs to our owne lusts, to the hardnesse of our hearts, or to a reprobate minde, to commit sinne with greedinesse. Giue vs thy sanctifying Spirit, and enable vs thereby not onely to fight against the flesh, but also to subdue and mortifie our earthly members, our inordinate affections and euill concupiscence. Renew vs by thy Spirit, that we may no longer be carnall, but Spirituall, walking not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. Let vs not be carried away with the world, or ouercome with the tentations, either on the right hand, or on the left: But let vs ouercome the world by Faith. Giue vs the Spirit of Wisdome to preserue vs, that we be not ensnared with worldly wiles; keepe vs from being corrupted with rotten speeches, and the inticements and ill counsels of the wicked; let vs not stumble at their scandals and offences, nor be mis-led by their euill en-samples, preferue vs from the contagion of their company, and let vs not be conformed to their fashions, but notwithstanding all their tentations, let vs constantly perseuere in the course of holinesse and righteousness. Giue vs grace to renounce all worldly lusts, ambition, couetousnesse and voluptuousnesse. Weane our hearts from earthly vanities, and let vs vse the world as not abusing it. Crucifie vs to the world, and the world vnto vs, and let vs liue as pilgrims and strangers vpon the earth, and Citizens of heauen. Let vs minde heavenly things, and contemne the things of the world as meere vanities, in comparison of Spirituall graces and heavenly glorie. Let vs not be overcome with worldly afflictions, but either in whole or in part release vs of them, or else arme vs with patience, that wee may beare them and indure tentation, that so being approued, wee may receiue the Crowne of life. Tread downe Satan vnder our feet, shew thy power in our weakenesse, and glorifie thy Name in our victory. Perfect the worke of our Sanctification & Redemption which is begun in this life, & not only free vs in part from our corruptions, but conforme vs wholly to the glorious Image of thy Son. Deliuer vs from euery euill thing, and preferue vs vnblameable to thy heavenly Kingdome. Let vs shake off security, and be vigilant and watchfull, & let vs about all obseruations looke to our hearts. Let vs keepe a narrow watch ouer our tongues and senses, let vs make a couenant with our eyes, and turne them away from beholding vanities. Let vs long after our full deliuerance, and finall victory ouer our spirituall enemies; and seeing we shall not absolutely be freed from sinne, and perfectly sanctified in this life, let vs earnestly desire to be dissolued & to be with Christ, that so being fully deliuered from the body of this death, wee may performe vnto thee such perfect seruice as thou requirest. Confirm our Faith in this assurance, that thou wilt heare our prayers, and grant our requests, seeing thine is the Kingdom, whereby thou hast right to giue whatsoeuer we desire, thine is the power & might, whereby thou art able to grant our requests, and thine also is the glory both of giuing all good things; and also of all good things giuen; and therefore thou wilt be willing to heare our suits, seeing they tend to the aduancement of thy glory. And so (Lord) we ascribe vnto thee vniuersall Kingdom, whereby thou rulest and gouerneest all things, and acknowledge thy wisdom, power and prouidence, to thy prayse in disposing of them at thy pleasure: we acknowledge and ascribe vnto thee the glorie of being our King, who preservest and defendest vs, rulest and gouerneest vs with the Scepter of thy Word & holy Spirit. We ascribe vnto thee all power, whereby thou art able to doe whatsoeuer thou wilt, and magnifie thy Name for keeping & ruling vs with this power vnto saluation. We render vnto thee all glorie, and the deserved praise of all thy goodnesse, magnifying thee according to the multitude of thy mercies, and the excellencie of thy gifts, wherewith thou hast enriched vs; desiring that wee may ascribe all the good wee haue done, or can doe, to thy glorie, as being the supreme end of all things. And this thy Kingdome, Power and Glory, wee doe not limit with the longest time, but

but ascribe them vnto thee from euerlasting, to euerlasting, euen as thou thy selfe art without beginning or ending. And thus, holy and heauenly Father, we testify our faith, and the truth of our desires, by saying Amen, and giue the assent of our hearts to the words of our mouthes in all our petitions; beleeuing that thou in thy good time wilt grant all our suites which we haue made according to thy will, as shall best stand with thy Glory, and our saluation; in which perswasion we conclude our prayers, and attend thy leisure, through Iesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

A priuate Prayer for the Morning.

O Lord our God, most glorious in maiesty, and omnipotent in power, who fillest heauen and earth with thy presence, and yet in a more speciall manner vouchsafest to dwell with those who are of a broken heart and contrite spirit, to heare and helpe them in all their necessities; I thy poore humble seruant, in the mediation of Iesus Christ, doe make bold to approach into thy glorious and dreadfull presence, that I may lay open before thee my wretched estate and condition, by reason of my manifold and grievous sinnes, and those fearefull punishments, both temporall and eternall, vnto which by their guilt they haue most iustly obliged mee. For though thou diddest create me holy and righteous, according vnto thine owne Image, yet I haue falne from that state of innocency and blessednesse, in the loynes of my first father Adam, and by beeing guilty of his sinne, am become also liable to his punishment. And as I am partaker of his sinne by imputation, as being one of his taynted posterity, so also of the corruption of his nature by propagation, the which like a fretting leprosie, or running canker, hath wholly ouerspred all the powers and parts of my soule and body, vtterly disabling them vnto all duties of thy seruice, and making them the ready instruments of sinne and Satan. And whereas in their creation they were fit habitations for thine owne Maiesty to dwell in by thy Spirit, through this naturall corruption they became cages of vncleane birds, yea, noysome sinkes, exhaling and breathing out the lothsome sent, and poysonous vapours of carnall concupiscence and filthy lusts. Mine vnderstanding is so darkened with ignorance, that it is naturally vnacquainted with thy will and waies, and though it bee wise to euill, yet vnto that which is good, I haue no knowledge; my carnall reason and wisdom is enmity against thee, and vnderstandeth not the things of thy Spirit, but so foolish it is, that it iudgeth them foolishnesse. My iudgement is so corrupted, that it hath no spirituall discerning, being ready to mistake euill for good, falshood for truth, and wrong for right. My conscience is either seared or superstitious, either senselesse of sinne, or scared with shadowes; my minde and imaginations are onely and continually euill, rousing wholly after earthly things, and neuer minding spirituall and heauenly. My memory is become a storehouse of iniquity, with which it is so fully fraughted, that there is no roome for good instructions and the rich treasures of thy sauing Truth. My will is so corrupted, that it standeth in flat opposition to thine holy will, approuing and chusing that which thou dislikest and condemnest, and refusing and abhorring that which thou likest and commandest. My heart is wholly turned from thee, and cleaueth to world and earthly vanities, and is full of infidelity, security and impenitency, hardned in sinne, and vnflexible to all good. Mine affections are wholly corrupted and disordred, louing, fearing and trusting in the creature more then in the Creator; and all the members and parts of my body are sluggish and slothfull vnto all duties of thy seruice, but the apt and ready instruments of my sinfull soule for the acting of all manner of wickednesse. From which cursed fountaine of originall corruption, haue plentifully flowed those poisonous streams of actuall transgressions, whereby I haue violated & broken thy whole Law in thought, word and deede. For in stead of doing thy Law, I haue wholly transgressed it; in stead of obseruing the duties commanded, I haue committed the vices forbidden; in stead of continuing in obedience, I haue continually disobeyed it, from my tender infancy to this present day. A great part of my time I haue lien starke dead in trespasses and finnes, not being able to thinke a good thought, or entertaine a good desire, because both my minde and will were enslaved vnto Satan in the chaynes of sin. And all this while my eares were deafe, mine eyes blinded, and my heart without vnderstanding, so as I could neyther heare, see, nor discerne the things which concerned thy glory and mine owne saluation, but vtterly neglected thy many and gracious calls inuiting me to thy seruice. Yea, Lord, since the time that thou hast, through thy mighty power, and of thy mere grace, quickned and raysed me from this death of sinne, how haue I, like Lazarus, come out of the graue bound hand and foote, and still so fettered and hampred with the reliques of my corruptions, that I walke slowly and lamely in the wayes of thy Commandements, oftentimes neglecting, vpon euery slight occasion, the duties of holinesse and righteousnesse, and oftentimes performing them with such weakenesse and imperfection, as it is hard to say whether they were not better vndon, then so done? O how often doe I forget euen the mayne end for which I liue, namely, that by glorifying thee I may liue eternally; and as though I were a citizen of the earth, how haue I my conuersation here, spending my thoughts and strength about worldly vanities which profit not, and not so much as minding spirituall and heauenly things! How slowly (alas) do I come to the duties of thy seruice, who art so infinitely bountifull in thy rewards! How coldly & carelesly, how dully & drowzily, how irreuerently and negligently do I performe them! How soone am I weary of these holy exercises, and desire to returne to my worldly imployments! How little sweetnesse doth my aguish taste feele in thy loue,

loue, though it be better then wine, and in feeding vpon thy spirituall delicacies in thy banquetting-house, thy Word and Sacraments? How little delight haue I had in thy Sanctuary and Sabbaths, and how haue I consecrated the least part of them as an holy Rest vnto thee, and misspent the greatest part in thinking mine owne thoughts, in speaking mine owne words, and doing mine owne workes? How much and often haue I abused thine holy ordinances, through my worldlinesse and prophane-nesse, and after that I haue long inioyed them, how little haue I profited by them? Mine heart is still full of grosse infidelity, which is the cause that I am not much raised and comforted with thy sweet promises, nor deiected and humbled with thy terrible threatnings. It is full of impenitency, being vnapt to mourne for sinnes past, or to resolute vpon amendment for the time to come. It is full of carnall security, making mee to apprehend no danger, when as I walke in the midst of pernicious snares, which are in euery place laid in my way by my spirituall enemies, and to put the euill day farre from me, when as pulling it on with my sins, it approacheth neere, and is ready to seaze vpon me. It is much hardened through the deceitfulness of sinne, custome in sinning depriving mee of the sense of it. There is much spirituall pride that lyeth lurking in it, which maketh me ready to arrogate the good things I haue not, to ouerweene those I haue, and to attribute the praise of both vnto my selfe, and so to rob thee of the glory of thine owne gifts. Hypocrisie also still hangeth vpon me, being ready, like a flie thiefe, to steale in, when I open the doore of mine heart, to let in any grace or religious duty. I am still tainted and poysoned with carnall selfe-loue, which maketh mee oftentimes to incurre spirituall hurt and damage, whilest I labour ouer-eagerly after worldly good, and earthly aduantage. Yea as hereby I am made apt to neglect my soule, for the seeming and present good of my body, defrauding it of all dues that belong vnto it; so likewise the duties of righteousness and loue which I owe to my neighbours, when as they are in my partiall affection ouer-ballanced with some worldly profit, pleasure or preferment. O that my head were a fountaine of teares, that I might wash my defiled body and soule in the floods of vnfeined sorrow! O that I could mourne for my sinnes, as a man mourneth for his onely sonne, and be sorry for them, as a man is sorry for the death of his first-borne! O that I could looke vpon him whom I haue pierced with bitter griefe, and be thorowly displeased with my selfe, because I haue by my sinnes so much displeased thee, who hast been euer vnto me so gracious a God, and so louing a Father! O that thou wouldest come downe and strike my rocky heart, that out of it might flow wholesome streames of repentance! But alas, the filthy stains and deepe dye of my sinnes cannot bee washed cleane with these waters. It is onely that Fountaine which thou hast opened to the house of Dauid, and the inhabitants of Ierusalem for sinne and for vncleannesse, that is sufficient to purge me from my ingrained filthinesse. It is those bloody streames alone which so plentifully flowed out of my crucified Sauour, that can cleanse me from all my sins. And therefore (O Lord) for thy mercies sake, and for thy Christs sake, wash my leproous body and soule in the streames of this thy Iordan. Yea

(Lord) seeing they are so deeply stained with the double double dye of imputed and inherent, originall and actuall finnes, that no slight and ordinary washing can purifie and restore them to their created cleanness, multiply thy washings; drench and diue me thorowly in the streames of this liuing Fountaine, that being cleansed from my Scarlet and Crimson finnes, both in respect of their guilt and punishment, I may become as white as Snow, and that no spot remaining of spirituall defilement, I may be iustified when thou iudget, and stand righteous in thy sight. And together with the staine of sinne, take away also the sting of conscience, and worke in it sound and secure peace, by perswading me, by the infallible testimony of thy Spirit, that my finnes are remitted, I reconciled through the death and satisfaction of thy Sonne, and that, of the child of wrath, and heire of perdition, I am now become thine owne child by adoption and grace. And to this end let me finde and feele it in mee, not only the Spirit of Adoption perswading me of thy fatherly loue, and sealing me vp vnto the Day of my Redemption, but also the Spirit of Sanctification, mortifying in me all my sinfull corruptions, by applying vnto mee the vertue of Christs death, and quickening mee in the inner man, vnto holiness and newnesse of life, by the power and efficacy of his Resurrection. Let me put off, concerning the former conuersation, the old man, which is corrupt, according to the deceitfull lusts; and being renewed in the spirit of my minde, let me put on the new man, which, after thine owne glorious Image, is created in righteousness and true holiness. Let me continually keepe a narrow watch ouer my selfe, that I bee not againe intangled in the snares of the diuell, nor circumvented and misled through the deceitfulness of my corrupt flesh, but being freed from sinne, let me now become the seruant of righteousness. Let mee make conscience of all my wayes, and shunne not onely open and notorious, but also secret finnes, yea, all the occasions of euill, and hate euen the garment which is spotted of the flesh. Let mee put on daily the whole armour of God, that being weake in my selfe, I may bee strong in thee, and in the power of thy might, and bee inabled to withstand the wiles of the diuell, and resist all tentations in the euill Day; praying alwayes with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseuerance. Weane mine heart and affections more and more from the loue of the world and earthly vanities, and being a pilgrim on earth, let my conuersation be in heauen, from whence I expect a Sauour and Redeemer. Begin, and worke in me all spirituall gifts and fauing graces which yet are wanting, and daily increase and confirme those that are begun; and let me daily bring forth the fruits of them all, throughout my whole life and conuersation in new obedience, labouring to performe vnto thee faithfull seruice in all my thoughts, words and deeds. Let me delight in the wayes of thy Commandements, and performe all the duties of holiness, righteousness and sobriety, with all cheerefulness and inward ioy. Let me daily seeke thy face and fauour aboue all things, and reioyce in nothing so much, as in the assurance of thy loue, and when the light of thy countenance shineth vpon mee. Remove out of my way, all lets and impediments, which might hinder me in my Christian course, or so assist mee with thy grace, that I may overcome them. Stablish me with thy free Spirit, that I may not onely begin well, but also continue in all grace and goodnesse vnto the very end of my life, and let me be stedfast, vnmoueable, and alwayes abounding in the worke of the Lord. And with these my prayers and supplications, I doe also ioyne my praises and thanksgiuing, lauding and magnifying thy great and glorious Name, for thine inestimable loue, and the fruits and testimonies thereof shewed vnto me, euen from before all beginnings vnto this present day. For that thou hast, of thy free grace, chosen mee to life and saluation, created mee after thine owne similitude and likeness, in wisdom, holinesse and righteousness, redeemed me at so deare a price, out of the miserable bondage of my spirituall enemies, effectually called mee, by the sound of the Gospell, to the knowledge of thy truth, vnited me vnto Christ by thy Spirit and a liuely faith, and made me partaker of all his benefits; for my iustification by his righteousness and obedience, and for some degrees of sanctification begun in mee, whereby thou hast subdued the power of sinne, that though it dwelleth, yet it doth not raigne in me, and hast wrought in me some desire, resolution and indeuour to serue and please thee. For that thou hast watched ouer me with thy providence, in the whole course of my life, and namely, this night past, and hast thereby preserved mee from all perils; from the terrours of the night, and the malice of mine enemies, and hast refreshed me with quiet rest, and now raised me vp in the strength thereof to doe thee seruice. O Lord, enlarge my heart, that I may duly consider of thy manifold and rich mercies, and bee thorowly inflamed with the apprehension of thy loue. What am I (my God) that thou shouldest be thus gracious vnto mee, who am altogether lesse then the least of thy mercies, yea worthy of thy greatest punishments! O that I could loue and praise thee according to thy bounty and goodnesse! And being so poore, that I haue nothing to repay; and thou so rich, that thou neither needest, nor requirest any thing else; O that I could euer remaine a gratefull debter, hauing mine heart filled with thankfulness, and my mouth with thanksgiuing! And now (Lord) I further beseech thee, to continue still my God and guide, to direct, leade and vphold mee in all the wayes of holinesse and righteousness. Take mee into thy gracious protection this day and euer, and watch so ouer mee with thy all-ruling providence, that I may be preserved safe from all enemies, worldly and spirituall, and from those manifold dangers which incompass mee on euery side. Giue mee grace so to spend this day, that some glory may redound vnto thee by my seruice, some profit and benefit vnto those with whom I liue, and some further assurance vnto my selfe (from the increase of sauing graces discerned in mee, and spirituall strength in all good duties) of my saluation and eternall happinesse. Order and gouerne all my thoughts, that they may be religious and honest; my speeches, that they may bee wise, and seasoned with grace, and all my workes and actions for the well performing both of the generall duties of Christianity, and the speciall duties of my calling, blessing so all my labours, that I may be cheered and comforted in them by my prosperous successes

in

in all my good indeuours. Supply vnto mee all temporall blessings, and the necessary comforts of this life, and let mee liue at thy finding, and receiue whatsoeuer I inioy, as the gifts of thine owne hand, and pledges of thy loue, that I may returne the praise which is due vnto thee for them, and vse them as helpes to further mee in all duties of thy seruice. Finally, I beseech thee, good Lord, to vouchsafe these and all other benefits, not onely vnto mee, but also to thy whole Church and euery particular member thereof, especially to this in which I liue. Multiply thy fauours vpon our Soueraigne Lord the King, our noble Prince, the Prince Electour Palatine, and the Lady Elizabeth his wife, with their issue; vpon the honourable Lords of the Priue Councell, the Magistrates and Ministers of thy Word and Sacraments, the afflicted members of Iesus Christ, my friends and benefactors, kindred and acquaintance, and especially vpon this whole family; giuing vnto vs all grace, that wee may keepe the vnity of the Spirit in the bond of peace; and so ioyne together with our hearts and minds in all duties of thy seruice, as that we may ioyntly inherit that eternall happinesse of thy Kingdome, through Iesus Christ our Lord; to whom with thee and thine holy Spirit, bee rendred all glory and praise, might, Maiesty, and Dominion, both now and euermore. Amen.

Another priuate Prayer for the Morning.

Almighty and eternall God, our most gracious and louing Father in Iesus Christ, I thy poore sinfull seruant, being in my selfe vnto thee vnworthy to appeare in thy glorious presence, doe yet in the Name and mediation of Iesus Christ, offer vnto thee my prayers and supplications, in obedience to thy Commandements, and in some assurance of thy gracious promises; rendring vnto thee from the bottome of mine heart, all humble and hearry thanks, for thy manifold mercies and abundant blessings multiplied vpon mee, both in respect of spirituall and heauenly priuiledges, which concerne my euerlasting saluation, and of temporall and earthly benefits appertaining to the good of this life, and my present estate in this place of my Pilgrimage. For that thou hast freely loued mee from all eternity, and of thy meere grace hast chosen mee vnto life and glory, without any respect of my workes or worthinesse. For creating mee according to thine owne Image, and redeeming me out of the estate of sinne and death. For calling mee effectually by thy Word and Spirit, and making mee a seruant of thine owne family, and a member of Iesus Christ, whereby thou hast giuen mee iust title vnto him and all his benefits. For making with mee the Couenant of grace, adopting mee in him to bee thy child, vnto a liuely hope of my heauenly inheritance. For iustifying mee in his righteousnesse imputed vnto mee, and applyed by a liuely faith; and sanctifying mee with thy Spirit, giuing mee some power ouer my corruptions, and some desire and indeuour to serue and please thee in the duties of a godly life. For watching

ing ouer mee with thy prouidence euer since I had my being and birth, shielding mee from dangers, deliuering mee out of manifold euils, and prouiding for mee all things necessary both for my soule and body. For preserving mee this night past from all perils, giuing vnto mee quiet rest, and bringing mee in safety to see the light, adding yet another day to my life, that therein I may doe thee seruice, and vie all good meanes for the furthering and assuring of my saluation. O Lord, giue mee a true sense and feeling of thy loue, that I may loue thee againe, and a liuely apprehension and taste of thy rich mercy and goodnesse, that mine heart and voyce may retourne vnto thee the praises that are due. Yea, so much the more, O Lord, increase my thankfulnesse, by how much the lesse worthy I am of the least of thy mercies, by reason of my manifold and grievous finnes. For I confesse vnfeignedly that miserable estate in which I am by nature; both in respect of my originall corruption in which I was conceived and borne, whereby all the powers and faculties of my body and soule haue become wholly defiled, and vtterly disabled vnto all duties of thy seruice, for which I was created; and that I haue made my selfe much more miserable, by adding heereunto actuall transgression, whereby I haue broken all and euery of thy Commandements, in thought, word, and deed, both by omitting the duties which thou hast commanded, and committing the contrary vices and finnes which thou hast forbidden; the which, as they are for the quality of them haynous, so doe they in number exceed the haire of mine head and the starres of heauen. Yea, Lord, I haue not onely thus sinned against thee in the dayes of my ignorance, when as I neither had any knowledge of thee and of thy will, nor so much as any desire to serue and please thee, but euen since the time that thou hast called mee to the knowledge of thy Truth, and by the good motions of thy Spirit, hast perswaded mee to imbrace, professe, and practise it; since thou hast allured mee by thy gracious promises to serue thee, and hast encouraged mee heereunto by innumerable blessings, and large testimonies of thy fauour, I haue often sinned against thee through frailty and infirmity; and not seldome against my knowledge and conscience. Oftentimes I haue neglected thy seruice, to serue in the meane while mine owne sinfull lusts; and when I haue vndertaken it, I haue performed it oftentimes after a cold and formall manner, with much weakenesse and wearinesse, vnchearefulnessse, and deadnesse of heart and spirit. By all which my finnes thus multiplied against thee, I haue iustly deserued to bee depriued of all thy blessings and benefits, and to bee ouerwhelmed with all those searefull punishments threatned in the Law, respecting both this life and the life to come. O Lord my God, affect my heart with vnfeigned sorrow in the sight and sense of this my sinne and misery. And as it is a burthen too heavy for mee to beare, so let mee haue such a feeling of it, that I may hunger after the righteousness of Iesus Christ, and apply it vnto mee by a liuely faith; and so make good the Couenant of grace, which thou hast made with mee: one speciall branch whereof is this, that thou wilt remember my finnes no more. I confesse that I haue offended thy Iustice, but my Sauour Christ hath satisfied it, by paying my debt to the vttermost most farthing: accept therefore of his satisfaction, and impute not vnto mee that debt which hee hath discharged. I haue deserued eternall death and condemnation: but hee was condemned, that I might bee acquitted, and hath suffered the bitter death of the Crosse, and thine anger due vnto my finnes, that I might bee freed from death and thy displeasure: and therefore, O Lord, I beseech thee for his sake, to take away the guilt and punishment of all my finnes, that they may neuer bee imputed vnto mee in this life, nor in the life to come. And being thus iustified by faith, and at peace with thee, let mee also obtaine peace of conscience, in the assurance of the remission of my finnes, and thy loue and fauour in Iesus Christ. Giue vnto mee thine holy Spirit, and thereby seale mee vp vnto the day of my Redemption, and make mee thine owne Child by adoption and grace. Let mee approoue my selfe to bee thy Child, by resembling thee my heauenly Father in holinesse and righteousnesse; by hating and forsaking all that is euill, and by louing and imbracing all that is good. Sanctifie mee thorowout in my soule and body, and let mee not onely make an holy profession with my mouth, but let it proceed from my heart, and bee expressed in the whole course of my life. Encourage mee in this worke against all difficulties, by assuring mee that thou wilt bring it to good effect, and let mee apply vnto my selfe thy gracious promises, which assure mee as well of my sanctification and victory ouer my corruptions, as of my iustification and freedome from the guilt and punishment of my finnes. Let mee set continually before mee thy Law, as the rule of my life, and labour to conforme my obedience in all things thereunto, denying vngodlinesse and all worldly lusts, and liuing holily and religiously, in respect of thee; righteously and charitably, in respect of my neighbours; and temperately and soberly, in respect of mine owne person. Let mee labour to obserue thy whole Law, in forsaking all sinne; especially that which is most sweet and pleasing to my corrupt flesh, and in imbracing all vertues and Christian duties which thou hast commanded, especially those vnto which my nature is most auerse. Let mee not content my selfe with such an hypocriticall holinesse as is destitute of righteousnesse, nor with such a meerely morall righteousnesse as is without holinesse; but let mee approoue my piety to bee sincere, by my iustice, charity, and mercy, and let these bee sanctified by my true godlinesse and religious deuotion. Let mee not stand at a stay, contenting my selfe with that small measure of sanctification which is begunne in me, but let mee daily striue in the vse of all good meanes, whereby I may attaine vnto more perfection, and so sanctifie them vnto mee by thy holy Spirit, that they may bee effectually to perfect that good worke which thou hast begunne. Inrich mee more and more with all sanctifying and sauing graces, with the knowledge of thee and thy will, a liuely faith in Iesus Christ, vnfaigned repentance for my finnes, firme assurance and confidence in thee, seruent loue of thee and my neighbours, yea, euen mine enemies for thy sake. Inflame mine heart with an ardent zeale of thy glory, replenish it with thy feare, that it may neuer depart from thee. Strengthen mine hope, in the assured expectation of all thy gracious promises, especially those which concerne my euertlasting happiness, pinesse; giue mee patience in all my troubles, thankfulness for all thy benefits, peace of conscience, spirituall ioy in the assurance of thy loue, and the grace of perseuerance in the profession and practice of thy true Religion vnto the end. Remoue all stumbling blockes of offence out of my way; comfort me against all discouragements, and arme me against all the tentations of my spirituall enemies, that they may neuer preuaile against me. Take me into thy gracious protection this day and euer, preserue me with thy providence from all dangers, vphold me with thy Spirit, that I fall not into sinne. Direct me with thy Wisdome, and strengthen me with thy power in all my thoughts, words and workes, that they may be acceptable in thy sight. Blesse and assist me in the generall duties of Christianity, and in the speciall duties of my calling, that they may haue good successe, and wholly tend to the aduancement of thy glorie, the edification of my brethren, and mine owne spirituall and euerlasting good. Blesse thy whole Church and euery member thereof, especially this in which I liue, with all the Magistrates, Ministers and people, this Family, and all to whom I am bound in any speciall bond of dutie, beseeching thee to giue vnto vs all, according to our seuerall necessities, all those gifts and graces which thou in thy wisdome knowest needfull, euen for Iesus Christ his sake: to whom with thee and thy holy Spirit, I ascribe all glorie and prayse, power and dominion, both now and for euermore. Amen.

A Prayer for the Family in the Morning.

Lord our God, who by thine infinite wisdome and power hast created all things in heauen and earth, and by thy gracious and all-ruling providence dost continually sustaine and preserue them, wee thine humble and vnworthy seruants, doe here, in the mediation of Iesus Christ, prostrate our selues before the Throne of Grace, acknowledging that vnto thee belongeth all glory and prayse, but vnto vs shame and confusion of face; for whereas thou diddest create vs, according to thine owne Image, in wisdome, holinesse and righteousness, we haue sinned in the loynes of our first parents, from this blessed estate, by transgressing of thy Commandement, and thereby haue defaced thy glorious Image in vs, deprived our selues of all happinesse, and become liable vnto death of body and soule. Yea, wee haue deriued from our first parents, not onely the guilt of their sinne, but also the corruption of their nature, which hath so ouerspred all the powers and parts of our soules and bodies, that they are vtterly impotent and insufficient to performe any duties of thy seruice, for which end they were created; but most forward and cheerefull in the seruice of sinne and Satan. From which roote of originall sinne, wee haue brought forth those cursed fruits of actuall transgressions, which we

Hh h h

we haue multiplyed against thy Maieſty, by breaking all and euery of thy Commandements in thought, word and deed, euen from the beginning of our dayes to this preſent time. Many haue beene our ſecret ſinnes, of which, thou alone and our owne conſciences haue beene witneſſes; and many haue wee committed in the view of the world, to the diſhonour of thy bleſſed Name, and ſlander of our Chriſtian profeſſion. Many haue beene our ſinnes of ignorance, the which vnto vs are vnexcusable, becauſe thou haſt reuiled thy ſelfe and thy will ſo clearly vnto vs; and many likewise haue beene our ſinnes againſt knowledge and conſcience, and the good motions of thy holy Spirit. Oftentimes haue wee ſinned through frailty, being ſurprized vpon the ſudden, with the violent and ſubtil tentations of our ſpirituell enemies; and oftentimes wilfully, aduiſedly and deliberately, after many vowes and promiſes of repentance and amendement. We haue ſinned againſt thee before our conuerſion, when as Satans throne being ſet vp in our hearts, wee performed vnto him in all things cheerefull obedience, and ſuffered ſinne to raigne and rule in vs, without any gaineſaying or reſiſtance; and ſince wee haue beene called to the knowledge of thy Truth, though wee haue ſubmitted our ſelues as ſubiects of thy Kingdome, to be gouerned by thy Word and Spirit, yet haue we much failed in yeelding that obedience which is due vnto thee, being ſo led captiue by our corruptions, that wee could neither doe the good we would, nor leaue vndone the euill we would not; and though by thy holy Spirit, wee haue caſt Satan out of his Throne, and vanquiſhed the fleſh with the luſts thereof, ſo as they could not reigne ouer vs, as in former times, yet theſe enemies of our ſaluation doe ſtill fight againſt our ſoules, and being not quite caſt out, are as thornes in our ſides, and as prickes in our eyes, diſturbſing continually our peace, wounding our conſciences, and leading vs captiue vnto ſinne. And hereof it is, that wee haue ſo often, and vpon ſuch flight occaſions vtrly neglected the duties of thy ſeruiſe, and when we haue ſet our ſelues about them, haue done them ſo coldly and careleſly, and diſcouered therein ſo many wants and weakenesſes, imperfections and corruptions, that if thou ſhouldeſt deale with vs according to thy righteous Iudgement, euen the beſt duties that euer we performed, could not eſcape vnpuniſhed. O Lord our God, make vs truly apprehenſiue of our ſinne and miſery, that we may humble our ſelues vnder thy mighty hand, and turne vnto thee by vnfaigned repentance, and not onely bewaile our ſins paſt with vnfaigned ſorrow, but amend our liues for the time to come; and ſo accept of vs in thy Beſt-beloued, and whileſt we are returning vnto thee, meeete vs in the way, and like a tender Father embrace vs in the armes of thy mercie. Doe away all our ſinnes, and blot out all our iniquities; and ſo waſh and purge our defiled ſoules and bodies in the precious blood of thine innocent Sonne, from the guilt and puniſhment of all our ſins, that they may neuer be layd to our charge, neither in this world, nor in the world to come. Yea, Lord, let vs not only haue the benefit of thy grace in thy free pardon, but alſo the comfort and peace of it, by having it sealed through the inward testimony of thy Spirit in our hearts and consciences; and for our better assurance, let vs finde and feele the power and efficacie of Christs death and Resurrection thereby applied vnto vs, as effectually for our Sanctification, as for our Iustification, and for our freedome from the corruption of sinne, that it may haue no longer dominion ouer vs, and spirituall renewing vnto newnesse of life, as well as from the guilt and punishment. It is enough, Lord, and too much, that Satan and sinne haue thus farre preuayled, not onely for the bringing of vs into the state of death and condemnation, but also for the condemning and crucifying of the Lord of life, the nayling of his innocent body to the Crosse, and the shedding of his precious blood. Now (Lord) reward them as they haue deserued, and pay them double into their bosome. Breake the head of the old Serpent, that though he hisse against vs with his tentations, yet he may not hurt vs; nayle our body of sinne vnto the Crosse of Christ, and by vertue of his death, crucifie our flesh and the lusts thereof, that they may no longer haue dominion ouer vs, but may like slaues be held in perpetuall subiection to our spirituall part. Yea, subdue the power of sin in all the faculties and parts of our soules and bodies. Mortifie the corruption of our mindes and vnderstandings, the wisdom of the flesh, and errors of our iudgements, our foolish phantasies and conceits, our earthly mindednesse, and all vaine and wicked thoughts, that we may checke sinne in the first motions, and kill this viperous brood, before they come to growth & strength. Mortifie the frowardnesse, and peruersenesse of our wils, the corruption of our hearts and affections, especially our self-loue and loue of the world, vniust anger, and desire of reuenge, carnall concupiscence and vncleannesse, intemperance, ambition, pride, couetousnesse and voluptuousnesse. Let vs hold our eyes and eares, our tongues and taste, and all other our senses vnder couenant, and make all vaine and wicked fights, all rotten and vsauory speeches, all intemperance and in sobriety odious and loathsome vnto vs. And quicken vs in the innerman, and frame vs in all holy obedience vnto thy heavenly will; make vs such as thou wouldest haue vs to be, and renew thine owne Image in vs, in wisdom, holinesse and righteousnesse, and let vs no more defile and deface it with our corruptions. Let vs submit our selues in all things to be guided by thy good Spirit, and yeeld cheerefull obedience vnto all the motions thereof, not grieuing it by checking and quenching them, or putting them off by delayes to another time. Let vs serue thee in holinesse, righteousnesse and sobriety, not deuinding those things which thou hast conioyned, and not by fits and flashes, but constantly and continually thorowout the whole course of our liues. Inrich vs plentifully with all the gifts and graces of thy sanctifying Spirit, as Faith, Hope, Humility, Patience and the rest; yea, let vs dayly thriue in Spirituall strength, and not stand at a stay, but grow vp towards perfection, from child-hood to a ripe age in Iesus Christ. And with these our prayers and suites, we doe with like humble heartinesse ioine thy prayes and our thanksgiuing, for thy manifold blessings and benefits, respecting our soules, bodits or estates. For thine vnderferued loue, whereby thou hast of thy free and meere grace elected, created, redeemed, called, iustified, sanctified and pre-ferued vs vnto an heavenly inheritance, and hope of a better life. For our present peace and prosperity, health, food, apparell, sufficiency of all temporall benefits, and contentednesse in them, and especially for causing vs so long to enioy the Light of thy Gospell with such liberty and safety. For preserving vs from all dangers this night past, and this day hitherto, and enabling vs by our rest, and other comforts of this life, to doe thee seruice. O Lord, we prayse and magnifie thee for these and all other thy mercies, and are sorry and ashamed, that we can be no more thankfull, hauing nothing else to returne vnto thee for all thy benefits. And now, Lord, seeing in thee we liue, moue, and haue our beeing, wee beseech thee to continue thy grace and fauour still vnto vs in the whole course of our liues, and namely, this day receiue vs into thy keeping, watch ouer vs with thy prouidence, and preserve vs with thy grace and power from all dangers, both spirituall and temporall, and from all euils both of sinne and punishment. Let vs set our selues wholly to seek and serue thee, and propound thy glory vnto our selues, as the maine end of all our thoughts, words and actions, and so direct and order them by thy holy Spirit, that they may vpon all occasions further and aduance it. And for as much as if thou dost not build the house, wee shall but labour in vaine to build it, O Lord, bleesse vs all in the duties of our seuerall places and callings, that they may tend to the ioynt good of the whole Family, and euery one of vs in particular, that finding thy blessing vpon the workes of our hands, wee may with more courage and comfort be faithfull and painfull in them. Set thy feare alwayes before vs, and let vs carry our selues in all our courses carefully and conscionably, as in thy sight and presence, that whatsoeuer wee doe, or take in hand, may be acceptable vnto thee. Bleesse together with vs thy whole Church, this especially in which wee liue, our gracious King, and Noble Prince, the Prince and Princeesse Palatine, with all their issue, the Councell, Magistrates, Ministers, and the whole people of this Land, the afflicted members of Iesus Christ, and this whole Family, with all other our friends, kindred and acquaintance; beseeching thee to vouchsafe vnto vs all, and to euery one of vs in our seuerall places and callings, all things necessarie for our present comfort and future happinesse, euen for Iesus Christ his sake; in whose Name and words we conclude our prayers, saying as he hath taught vs; Our Father, which art in heauen, &c.
and

Another

Another Prayer for the Family in the Morning.

Lord our God, who art in thine owne nature glorious and full of maiesty, infinite in goodnesse, wisedome, power, bounty, truth, and all perfection, most iust in all thy waies, and holy in all thy workes, and our most gracious Father in Iesus Christ, wee thine vnworthy seruants, finding and feeling our selues loaded with the vnsupportable waight of our manifold and grievous sinnes, doe come vnto thee for ease, and being sicke in sinne, euen vnto the death, doe flee vnto thee the alone Physicion of our soules, that wee may be eased and cured, and doe here lay open before thee our miserable estate and condition, that thou mayest magnifie thy mercies in our recovery. Wee confesse our hereditary diseases, and that originall leprosie of our bodies and soules, whereby they were infected and corrupted, euen in our first conception, and so disabled vnto thy seruice, that we cannot of our selues thinke a good thought, nor so much as entertaine into our hearts a desire to come out of the miserable thraldome of sinne and Satan. Our wisedome is enmity against thee, and we are not capable of that knowledge which thy Spirit reuealeth. All the imaginations of the thoughts of our hearts are onely euill, and that continually; our consciences are loaded with dead workes; our wills crooked and rebellious, still resisting all good motions of thy Spirit; our hearts hardened through the deceitfulnesse of sinne; our affections, desires and passions so disordered and poisoned with naturall corruption, that they are become filthy and lothsome sinckes of sinne; and all the members of our bodies, the ready instruments of our defiled soules for the acting of all abominable wickednesse. So that being, through his naturall corruption, a sinfull generation and viprous brood, wee haue iustly deserued, that thou shouldest reiect and pursue vs with thy wrath, though wee were free from all other sinnes, sauing those alone whereof wee were guilty as soone as wee were borne. And yet (alas) we haue not stayed here, but haue added vnto this our originall sinne, innumerable numbers of actuall transgressions, by breaking thy whole Law, and euery Commandement thereof, in thought, word and deede, both in the omission of all duties therein required, and in the commission of the vices and sinnes therein forbidden; whereby wee haue made our selues liable to the fearefull curse thereof, and to all the plagues & punishments of this life, and the life to come. Neither is there any power in vs to helpe our selues out of this misery, being as vnable to renew our nature, as the Blackamore to change his skin, or the Leopard his spots. Yea, when by thy Spirit wee are regenerate, and haue some desires and indeuours to serue and please thee, wee are vtterly vnable to satisfie thy Iustice for the least of our sinnes past, seeing, if thou lookest vpon vs with thy pure eyes, our best righteousnesse will appeare like a polluted cloth, so mingled with our imperfections, and stayned with our corruptions, that it cannot challenge

Hhhh 3

challenge any other reward as its due, but thy displeasure and euerlasting death. O Lord, wee humbly beseech thee, let vs not securely rest and please our selues in this our wofull condition, but hauing a liuely sense and feeling of our sinne and misery, let vs labour about all things to be freed from it. And seeing there is no name in heauen or earth, whereby wee may bee saued, but by Iesus Christ alone, thine onely Sonne and blessed Redeemer, whom thou hast purposely sent into the world to saue sinners; O Lord, let vs renounce our selues and all creatures in heauen and earth, as being vtterly vn sufficient to satisfie thy Iustice, and saue our soules, and let vs rest vpon him alone, hungering and thirsting after his righteousnesse, and desiring about all things that wee may bee found in him. And for his sake we humbly beseech thee to magnifie thy mercies in the free forgiveness of all our sinnes: and as they in their waight and number doe exceedingly abound, so let thy grace abound much more in their forgiveness. Enter not into iudgement with thy seruants; for in thy sight shall no man liuing bee iustified. Wee are not able to answer vnto thy Iustice one of a thousand, but Christ our surety hath payed our debt, and now as our Aduocate pleadeth for vs, that by him thou hast thy due, and that thy Iustice shall sustaine no losse in setting vs free, seeing hee hath made full satisfaction for vs. Heare him then, deare God, thus pleading for vs; Heare vs, holy Father, in his meditation pleading for our selues; forgive vs all our debts, and cancell the hand-writing by which wee were obliged, that it may neuer bee produced in iudgement against vs. Contrariwise, wee beseech thee, write the new couenant of grace, not in tables of stone, but in the fleshy tables of our hearts, and not onely enrole the great Charter of our peace in the volume of the Booke, containing in it the glad tidings of the Gospel, but ingrosse and ingraue it in the booke of our consciences, by the finger of thy Spirit, that wee may with inestimable ioy dayly peruse it, when wee haue it in our owne custody. And not only worke in vs this peace, in our assured freedome from the guilt of all our sinnes, but also inward and outward purity in our soules and bodies, by bathing and washing them in the blood of Christ from all sinfull corruption: And sanctifie vs throughout, that our whole spirit, and soule, and body may bee preserved blamelesse vnto the comming of our Lord Iesus Christ: make vs in him more then conquerours ouer all the enemies of our saluation, and spirituall Kings raigning especially ouer our corruptions, that they may not by their might and malice disturbe our peace. Reuiue vs more and more with the Spirit of Grace and power; that we may walke with cheerefulness in the waies of thy commandments, performing throughout the whole course of our liues, all Christian duties of holiness, righteousness and sobriety. Indue vs plentifully with all sanctifying and sauing graces, and let vs bring forth the fruits of them all in our new obedience, with all sincerity & vprightness of heart. Open our blind eyes, that we may see the wonderful things of thy law; increase our faith, that the gates of hel may not preuaile against it;

it; preferue vs from camall security and hardnesse of heart; and as wee daily renew our sinnes, so let vs daily renew our repentance and forrow for them. Confirm our affiance in the assurance of thy power and loue, strengthen our hope, worke our hearts to thy feare, inflame them with thy loue, and with feruent zeale of thy glory; giue vs humility, patience, and spirituall reioycing in the assurance of thy fauour, euen in our afflictions and tribulations. Make vs zealous of good workes, that wee may approoue our faith by the fruits of it, and let vs neuer bee weary of well doing. Arme vs against all the assaults of our spirituall enemies, against the feare of death and iudgement; to which end let vs keepe alwayes our accounts euen, that we may not be loth to be called to a reckoning. Prepare vs for the dayes of affliction and persecution, that wee may be ready with wisdom, constancy and courage, not only to doe, but also suffer all things for thy sake. Accept, with these our suits and prayers, our praises and thanksgiuing for thy manifold blessings and benefits, both corporall, spirituall and eternall; for thy inestimable loue, and that singular pledge thereof, thy deare and onely Sonne, whom thou hast giuen vnto vs to worke that great worke of our Redemption; for our being, and well-being, all thy graces in this life, and assured hope of glory and happiness in the life to come. For our continuall preferuation in the whole course of our liues, this night past, and this day hitherto; for our quiet rest, and all other comforts of this life. For all which, and all other thy mercies, thy blessed name bee praised and magnified. Wee beseech thee (good Lord) continue thy mercy and loue towards vs in the whole course of our liues; and namely, in the residue of this day watch ouer vs with thy gracious providence, and thereby preferue vs from all sinne and danger, and so rule all our thoughts, words and deeds, that being holy and righteous, they may be acceptable in thy sight. Let vs so spend this day in thy feare, as though it were the last day of our liues; and let vs, with all care and watchfulness, so arme our selues against all the tentations of our spirituall enemies, as that they may not preuaile against vs to make vs slothfull in thy seruice. Finally, giue vnto vs all things necessary for our soules and bodies, and so sanctifie all thy blessings to our vse, that they may be helps and furtherances vnto vs in seeking thy glory, and our own saluation. Vouchsafe these, and all other blessings, not onely vnto vs, but also to thy whole Church, and every member thereof, as if particularly wee had named them, and so ioine vs in the holy communion of grace, as that we may for euer inioy the communion and fellowship of thy blessed Saints and Angels in the Kingdome of glory. Heare vs, and helpe vs, O God of our saluation, in all these our suits, for thy Sonne and our Sauiour Iesus Christ his sake; to whom with thee and thy holy Spirit, one true and euerlasting God, we ascribe the glory and praise of all goodnesse and perfection both now and euermore. Amen.

A Prayer for the Family in the Euening.

Lord our God, most high and holy, most dreadfull and glorious in thy might and Maiesty vnto all creatures, terrible and like a consuming fire vnto all impenitent sinners; but a most gracious and louing Father vnto all those, who are reconciled vnto thee in Iesus Christ. Thou hast commanded vs to call vpon thee in all our necessities, and hast encouraged vs hereunto by thy most gracious and free promise, that where two or three are gathered together in the name of thy Sonne, there thou wilt be present amongst them by thy holy Spirit, to heare their suits, and relieue their wants. In obedience to which Commandement, and in some assurance of thy gracious promise, we thy poore and vnworthy seruants, doe heere, in the mediation of Iesus Christ, humbly prostrate our selues before thy Throne of grace and mercy, acknowledging our selues guilty of innumerable sinnes, and thereby lyable to as many fearefull punishments; but yet in the merits of thy Sonne, and in the truth of thy promises, pleading for pardon and forgiuenesse. We confesse vnto thee, that wee were conceived and borne in sinne, hauing all the faculties and powers of our soules and bodies so wholly defiled with originall corruption, that wee are vtterly disabled for thy seruice, and prone vnto all manner of wickednesse; and haue, in the whole course of our liues, multiplied against thee our actuall transgressions, by breaking thy whole Law, and every Commandement thereof, in thought, word, and deed. Wee are naturally full of ignorance and blindnesse of mind, neither knowing thee, nor thy truth, and after that thou hast caused the light of the Gospell to shine vnto vs for many yeeres, our minds are still full of darknesse. We content our selues with a small measure of knowledge, and continue children in vnderstanding, when we should be of ripe age, not struiuing after more perfection; neither according to the measure of our meanes, are we rich in knowledge, and in the fruits of new obedience. Wee are full of infidelity and doubting, and negligent in the vse of the meanes, whereby our faith should be confirmed and strengthened; and are full also of impenitency, security and hardnesse of heart, and doe both seldome and slightly bewaile our sinnes past, and but weakly and vnconstantly resolute and indouour to amend our liues for the time to come. Wee are ready to trust in the creature, more then in thee the Creator, and cannot, as we ought, rest vpon thy power and promises in the absence of inferiour meanes. Wee are apt to forget thee, when thou most remembrest vs, and the more that wee abound with thy blessings, the lesse mindfull wee are of thee from whom we haue receiued them. Wee haue loued the world and earthly things, more then thee and heavenly excellencies, and haue preferred the pleasures of sinne, before thy loue and fauour, being ready to hazard these, rather then to forgoe them. Wee are full of selfe-loue, and haue been moued hereby to sowe vnto the flesh, of which we can reape nothing but sin and punishment; and haue set our hearts so much vpon carnall vanities, constantly hope and waite for the accomplishment of thy promises, though we haue great experience of thy power, truth and goodnesse towards vs. We are cold or like warme in our zeale, and haue not with any seruency aduanced the meanes of thy glory, nor removed the impediments whereby it is hindered. Our reioycing is more in the flesh then in the Spirit; in worldly things and the pleasures of sinne, more then in thee the Fountaine of all true ioy, in the fruition of thy present fauours, and expectation of heavenly happinesse. Wee are vngratefull vnto thee for thy manifold benefits, and oftentimes when we praise thee, it is with our lips onely, and not with inward ioy and cheerefulnesse of our hearts. Wee doe not approoue our loue and thankfulness vnto thee by our fruits of obedience, but haue been negligent in the duties of holinesse and righteousness, that wee might giue glory to thy holy Name, and all wee doe, is maimed and imperfect, full of wants and weaknesses, and stained with many corruptions. Wee are ready to murmur and repine in our least afflictions, and doe not beare thy fatherly corrections with patience and thankfulness, being more sensible of the smart, then of our sinnes which haue caused it; and looking more to the rod, then vnto thy hand, which thereby chastizeth vs for our amendment. Wee doe not feare to displease thee by our sinnes, nor auoyd thine anger as the greatest euill; or if we doe feare thee at all, it is not so much for thy mercies, as to auoyd thy Iudgements. We haue not adorned our selues with humility and meeknesse, in the sight and sense of our owne vilenesse and unworthinesse; but are full of spirituall pride, arrogating vnto our selues those gifts we haue not, and ouerweening those we haue, for ascribing the praise of them vnto our selues, which is onely due to thee. We are negligent in the duties of thy seruice, and doe not performe them in Spirit and truth, but either neglect them vpon euery slight occasion, or doe them without due preparation, coldly and formally, without any seruency of zeale, respecting thy glory, or our spirituall good. We haue often taken thy holy Name in vaine, and abused thine holy ordinances, and prophaned thy Sabbath, not doing thy will onely on thy holy Day, but speaking our owne words, walking in our owne waies, and seeking our owne carnall delights. We haue also neglected the duties of righteousness, charity and mercy towards our neighbours, and of temperance and sobriety towards our selues. By all which, and many other our sinnes, wee haue made our selues subiect to thy wrath and the curse of the Law, and haue iustly deserved to be deprivied of all testimonies of thy loue, and to bee ouerwhelmed with all thy iudgements and punishments, both in this life, and the life to come. O Lord our God, affect our hearts with sonne-like sorrow, because we haue so much and often displeased thee our gracious Father; and let vs be grieved in our soules, that wee are so little grieved for our sinnes, whereby we haue pierced our Saviour, and grieved thy good Spirit dwelling in vs. And further, wee beseech thee, in the multitude of thy mercies, to remit and forgive all our sinnes, and wash vs cleane from the guilt and punishment of them all, that they may neither deprive vs of thy loue and manifold blessings temporall and eternall, nor expose vs to the wrath and fearfull punishments. And our prayer is, that we may

A Prayer before the Communion.

Christs perfect righteoufnesse and obedience, and to wash away all our corruptions in his most precious Blood. And seeing wee doe now againe intend to performe the holy duties of thy seruice, in hearing thy Word, Prayer, and receiuing of the Sacrament of the Lords Supper: Good Lord, wee earnestly beseech thee, for thy Sonnes sake, to assist vs so with thy grace and holy Spirit, as that wee may performe these actions of thy seruice, in some good and acceptable manner, for the aduancement of thy glory, the comfort of our soules, and the furthering and assuring of our owne saluation. More especially, wee intreate thee to inable vs with thy grace, that wee may bee duely prepared, and come as worthy ghests to thy Table. Giue vs a liuely sight and sense of our finnes and imperfections, wants and weakenesses, and let vs hunger and thirst after Christ and his righteoufnesse; and after the spirituall food of his Body and Blood, for the nourishment of our soules vnto eternall life. Let vs not coldly and formally performe this high and holy dutie, but bend all the powers of our soules to the doing of it, in some such manner as may bee acceptable in thy sight. Inlighten our mindes more and more with the sauing knowledge of thee and thy truth, and especially of the great worke of our Redemption, and thine infinite loue thinning in it, of the Couenant of grace, and Seales annexed vnto it; and let not this knowledge reside onely in our vnderstandings, but let it also descend into our hearts, that it may bee profitable for their sanctification. Inable vs rightly to discerne our Lords Body, and feelingly to vnderstand the relation betweene the Signes and the things signified, applying both vnto our selues in their right vse. To this end indue vs with a true and liuely faith, that wee may not onely receiue the outward Elements, but also may inwardly feed vpon the precious Body and Blood of our Lord and Sauour Iesus Christ, that thereby wee may be enriched with all sauing graces, strengthened vnto all good duties, and nourished vnto euerlasting life. Inable vs also to bring forth the fruits of this faith in vnfained repentance, bewayling our finnes past, hating those corruptions which still hang vpon vs, and resolving to leaue them for the time to come, and to serue thee in holinesse and righteoufnesse all the dayes of our liues. And as wee haue daily renewed our finnes, so giue vs now grace, that wee may renew our faith and repentance, bathing our soules and bodies afresh, euen in the Fountaine of Christs precious Blood, and in the teares of vnfained sorrow, mourning with bitter griefe, because wee haue pierced him with our finnes, and caused the Lord of life to bee put vnto a shamefull death. Inflame our hearts with most seruent loue towards thee and our neighbours, yea, euen our enemies for thy sake, and lincke our hearts together in an holy Communion, as it becommeth the true members of Iesus Christ. Let vs also approoue our loue to bee sound and sincere, by the fruits of it, and especially, by forgiuing and forgetting all our wrongs and iniuries, as heartily as wee desire to bee forgiven of thee, and by performing all workes of mercy and Christian charity, towards all those who neede our helpe; not onely by comforting and refreshing their bodies, but also by performing all Christian duties for the

the eternall saluation of their soules. And being thus prepared, let vs when we come to thy Table, performe that dutie of thy seruice in some good and acceptable manner, with all reuerence, faith and inward seruencie and deuotion. Let vs with the outward signes receiue the things signified, Iesus Christ and all his benefits; that being more and more vnited vnto him, we may receiue from him the Spirituall life of Grace, and those holy vertues of his diuine nature, that we may grow vp in him vnto a perfect man. Let vs bring with vs the hand and mouth of faith; and let it be more and more strengthened in the assurance of all thy gracious promises, by these scales of thy couenant communicated vnto vs. Make vs partakers of Christs merits, by imputation of his nature and essence by coniunction, and of his power and efficacy by thy holy Spirit; and let vs shew his death till he come, gratefully remembring this great worke of our Redemption by his blood, that we may be thankfull, and prayse thee the blessed Trinity in vinity, all the dayes of our liues. Finally, as we doe by these meanes profess our selues thy seruants in taking vpon vs thy liuery and cognizance, so giue vs grace, that we may constantly strue and indeuour to walke worthy this high calling, and to glorifie thee in the duties of holinesse and righteousnesse, whilest we haue any breath or being. Heare vs and helpe vs, O God of our saluation, and answer vs graciously in these our suits and petitions, for Iesus Christ his sake; to whom with thee and thine holy Spirit, be rendred of vs and thy whole Church, all glory and prayse, power and dominion, both now and evermore. Amen.

A thankesgiuing after the receiuing of the Sacrament of the Lords Supper.

 Lord our God, most glorious and most gracious, infinite in bountie and goodnesse vnto all thy children and seruants in Iesus Christ, we doe here offer vnto thee the sacrifice of prayse and thankesgiuing, and doe laud and magnifie thy great and glorious Name, for all thy mercies and fauours vouchsafed vnto vs; especially because thou hast loued vs with an euermourning loue; yea so loued vs, that thou hast, of thy meere grace and free good will, euen when we were strangers and enemies, giuen vnto vs thy Best-beloued and onely Sonne; to worke the great worke of our Redemption; and by his death and precious blood shed to deliuer vs out of the hands of all our spirituall enemies, and to free vs from euermourning death and condemnation, that we might be heires through him of eternall glory and happinesse in thy Kingdom. We prayse thee also for the free couenant of grace and saluation which thou hast made with vs in him; whereby thou hast assured vs of the remission of our sinnes, our reconciliation with thee, and of endlessse happinesse in the life to come; and for confirming this couenant vnto vs, by annexing thereunto the scales thy Sacraments, that thereby our weake faith might be strengthened and increased, and wee more and more freed from doubting and incredulity. We thanke thee (holy Father) for renewing this thy couenant with vs this day, and for confirming our vnion with Iesus Christ our head, and one with another, by giuing vnto vs his precious body and blood, as the Spirituall food of our soules, whereby they are nourished vnto euerlasting life. O Lord our God, it is thy great mercie, that thou nourishest our mortall bodies with food that perisheth, but how wonderfull is this thy bounty and goodnesse, in that thou feedest our soules with this bread of Life that came downe from heauen, and with this food that endureth to life eternall ! If thou shouldest permit vs but to gather vp the crummes that fall from thy Table, we must needs acknowledge, that it were a fauour farre aboue our deserts; O then how should wee admire and magnifie thy mercie and bountie, in vouchsafing such vile and vnworthy wretches, this high and holy priuiledge, to be feasted at thine owne Table, not with ordinary cheare, but with such spirituall and diuine delicacies, euen the precious body and blood of thine onely deare Sonne, whereby he becommeth one with vs, and we with him, euen as thou, holy Father, and he are one, in that holy and happie vnion. O that our narrow hearts were enlarged, that we might in some measure apprehend this thine infinite and incomprehensible goodnesse ! O that being cold in themselves, they were warmed and inflamed with the fire and flame of this diuine loue; that with the liuely sense and feeling of it, wee might be moued to returne loue for loue, and expresse it by our feruent zeale and indeuour in all things, to please and glorifie thee throughout the whole course of our liues and conuersations! Which because it is not in our owne power, O thou the rich fountaine of all grace and goodnesse, inspire and inflame our cold and frozen hearts with the beames of thy loue, shed abroad in them by thine holy Spirit, that we may loue thee with vnfaigned loue, and contemning all things in comparifon of thee, may long and labour after nothing so much, as to enioy thee in this life by grace, and the presence of thy blessed Spirit, and by full and perfect vision and fruition in the life to come. To this end, gracious God, blesse vnto vs thine holy Ordinances and meanes of our saluation, and by the inward assistance of thy good Spirit, make them powerfull and effectuell to the attayning of those ends, for which thou hast giuen, and wee receiued them. Let vs finde hereby our vnion with Christ strengthened and confirmed, by feeling the Spirituall life and sap of grace de-riued vnto vs, and increased in vs, from this roote of righteousness, not onely for our further assurance of our iustification, but also for the perfecting of our sanctification, and the strengthening of vs vnto all Christian duties of a godly life. Let vs by this Spirituall food of our soules, finde our selues nourished and enriched with all sauing graces, especially let vs feele our weake faith confirmed and increased, that wee may, without wauering, be perswaded of all thy gracious promises made vnto vs, and effectually apply vnto our selues Iesus Christ

Christ and all his benefits, seeing thou hast not onely offered them in thy Word and couenant of grace, but also sealed, and thereby fully assured them vnto vs by thy seales the Sacraments. Giue vs grace, that we may approue this faith to be true and liuely; by bringing forth plentifull fruits of it in repentance and newnesse of life; bewayling our sinnes, because they haue pearced our Sauour; and fearing to offend thee for the time to come, seeing thine exact Iustice would not suffer them to goe vnpunished, when thine onely and deare Sonne did beare them vpon his Crosse. Let vs not by sinne, hazard our soules againe to death for the wages of worldly vanities, seeing to redeeme vs from them, our Sauour and surety payd vnto thy Iustice the inestimable price of his precious blood; but being freed from sinne, let vs become his seruants that hath redeemed vs, seruing him in the duties of holinesse and righteousnesse all the dayes of our liues. And as wee haue professed our selues to be of thy Family, by taking vpon vs and wearing thy luerie, so let vs adorne our profession, and glorifie thee our Lord and Master, by hauing the light of our Christian conuersation shining before all men; in all things behauing our selues as it becommeth thy children and seruants. Let vs haue our Lords death in remembrance, vntill he come; not onely that it may stirre vs vp to vnfained thankfulnessse vnto thee, for giuing thy Sonne, and to him, for giuing himselfe vnto vs and for vs, but also that it may be as a shield of prooffe, to arme vs against all our spirituall enemies, thy wrath, the curse of the law, Satan, death, sinne and condemnation, that they may neuer preuaile against vs. Let vs also, as wee haue in this holy communion professed our selues members of the same body, approue our selues to be indeed so, by performing all duties of loue towards one another, both in releeuing those that want, and forgiuing those who haue offended vs. Finally, we beseech thee (deare Father) to enable vs by thy grace and holy Spirit, that we may performe our vöwes and promises which we haue made vnto thee, especially in the time of preparation before wee came to thy Table; and seeing in the sense and feeling of our wants and weakenesses in thy Spirituall graces, required to the worthy receiuing of the Sacrament, as knowledge, faith, repentance and charity, wee were displeased with our selues, and promised that we would indeuour to haue them increased and strengthened for the time to come; good Lord, we beseech thee, giue vs grace to performe what we haue promised, and to labour carefully and conscionably in the vse of all good meanes, for the inriching of our soules with these and all other sauing graces of thy sanctifying Spirit, that so also wee may bring forth the fruits of them in our godly and Christian liues, to the glory of thy blessed Name, and the comfort and saluation of our bodies and soules, through Iesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

A Prayer for the Sicke.

Most glorious and mighty God, who are righteous in all thy wayes, and holy in all thy workes; most iust in all thy Iudgements, and infinitely gracious, and mercifull towards thy children in Iesus Christ, euen in thy chastizements and Fatherly corrections; who art the Author of health and sicknesse, and hast in thy hand the issues of life & death. For as much as thou hast commanded vs to call vpon thee, as at all times, so especially in the time of trouble and affliction, and hast encouraged vs hereunto by thy most gracious promise, that thou wilt heare and helpe vs, that being deliuered, we may glorifie thee. We thy poore humble seruants, in obedience vnto this thy Commandement, and in confidence of this thy promise, doe here in the Name and mediation of Iesus Christ, humbly prostrate our selues before thee, acknowledging and bewayling our manifold and grievous finnes. For we were not onely conceived and borne in sinne, and thereby so defiled in all the powers and parts of our soules and bodies, that wee haue beene disabled vnto all good duties, and made prone to all wickednesse; but wee haue also from this bitter roote of originall corruption, brought forth continually those cursed fruits of actuall transgressions, by breaking all and euery of thy Commandements in thought, word and deede, from the beginning of our liues, vnto this present houre: And that not onely in the dayes of our ignorance, whilest we continued the vassals of Satan, and when as sinne raigned and ruled in vs, and wee performed vnto it voluntarie and cheerefull obedience, as vnto our King and Soueraigne; but euen since thou hast graciously called vs out of the kingdome of darkenesse, and hast wrought in our hearts some desires to serue thee: we haue often rebelled against thee, and for the base hire of worldly trifles, haue beene allured to commit many finnes, not onely through frailty and infirmity, but euen against our knowledge and consciences; contrarie to our generall vow in Baptisme, and many speciall promises which wee haue made vnto thee vpon sundry occasions. And although thou hast giuen vnto vs our Being, and preserved vs in it by thy speciall and good prouidence, and hast redeemed vs by the death of thy deare Sonne, out of the hands of all our spirituall enemies, that wee might worship and serue thee, in holinesse and righteousnesse all the dayes of our liues; yet, Lord, wee humbly confesse, that wee haue beene too too forgetfull of these inestimable mercies, neglected the duties of thy seruice, and spent the greatest part of our liues in pursuing worldly vanities. These, these (deare Father) haue beene for the most part the subject of our thoughts, the object of our desires, and the chiefe markes, at which we haue ayimed in our most earnest indeuours. And so haue wee in our vnderstandings minded earthly things, in our hearts affected them with such longing desires, and with all our strength pursued them in all our workes.

workes and actions, as though we had no better hopes, and had forgotten that we are pilgrims on earth, and Citizens of heaven: As for the duties of thy seruice, we haue often, through this eager pursuit of worldly vanities, forgotten and neglected them; and often haue performed them with much coldnesse and formality, weaknesse and wearinesse, dulnesse and drowzinesse of heart and spirit, whilst our minds and affections haue been distracted and carryed away, and our deuotion and zeale cooled and quenched, by our over-much minding and souling of earthly things. And though thou hast allured vs to performe vnto thee more sincere and cheerfull seruice, by promising to giue vs the rich wages, and free reward of heavenly happinesse; yea for the present hast incouraged vs herunto, by multiplying vpon vs many temporall blessings; as health, strength, peace, plenty, food, apparell, and such like: yet wee haue abused these benefits, by taking occasion thereby to goe on in our sinnes with greater security, and haue been made by them more negligent in thy seruice. And therefore (O Lord) it were iust with thee, if thou shouldest deprive vs of them all, turning our strength into weaknesse, our health into sicknesse, and all our peace and comfort into tortures of body, and troubles of mind. But (deare Father) deale with vs, not according to our deserts, but according to thy wonted mercies in Iesus Christ. And seeing the end of thy chastisements is not destruction, but saluation; not to punish our sinnes, for which thy Sonne hath fully satisfied thy Iustice by his all-sufficient sufferings; but to bring vs to repentance: we most humbly beseech thee, to giue vnto vs a true sight and sense of them, vnfeigned sorrow, and a perfect hatred of them, and a full resolution to leaue and forsake them for the time to come, and to serue thee in the contrary duties of holinesse and righteousness all the dayes of our liues. And thus returning vnto thee by vnfeigned repentance (O Lord) we beseech thee turne vnto vs, and be reconciled vnto vs in Iesus Christ. Forget and forgiue our manifold and grievous sinnes, whether of omission or commission; of frailty and infirmity: or those which wee haue wittingly and willingly false into; and wash them all away in the blood of thy Son, that they may neuer be imputed vnto vs, either in this world, or in the world to come. Seale also our pardon vnto vs in our hearts and consciences, by the gracious testimony of thy holy Spirit, and thereby sanctifie vs thorow-out in our soules and bodies, that being freed from the guilt, punishment, and corruption of all our sinnes, we may be found vnblameable and without spot in the Day of our Lord Iesus Christ. Replenish our empty soules with all sanctifying and sauing graces, and strengthen vs vnto the performance of all Christian and holy duties, with all zeale, cheerfulness and vprightnesse of heart. More especially, we humbly intreat thee to extend thy grace and fauour vnto this thy sicke seruant, and sanctifie this thy fatherly chastisement vnto him, that it may be an effectuell meanes of increasing his sanctification, and furthering his eternall saluation. And seeing by sickness, thou puttest vs in mind of our approaching end, and by death, summonest vs to appeare before thee in Iudgement: O Lord, giue him grace, to prepare himselfe against the day of death, that he may be ready to render vp his accounts, when thou shalt call him to giue vp his reckon-

ning, and so with ioy and cheerfulness may commend his soule and body vnto thee, as into the hands of a faithfull Saviour, who wilt crowne them both with ioy and glory. Let him continually endeavour to suppress the power of death, and to take away the sting of it, by mortifying the flesh, and the lusts thereof. Giue him grace to renew his covenant with thee, by renewing the condition of it, which is, embracing thy promises by a liuely faith, and bringing forth the fruits thereof by vntained repentance. Let him confesse his sinnes, bewaile and forsake them, resolving to amend his life, if thou shalt prolong his dayes. Comfort him with the comforts of thy Spirit, and as his bodily griefes abound, so let thy consolations abound and exceed them. Giue him patience to indure what thou inflictest, and tempt him not aboue his power, but either lessen his griefes, or increase his strength. Moderate and mitigate his bodily paines, with the inward feelings of thy loue, peace of conscience, and ioy in the holy Ghost. If it will stand with thy glory, and his saluation, prolong his dayes, and restore his health, that he may yet againe praise thee, as for all thy mercies, so especially for his recovery; and blesse vnto him all meanes of physick and dyet, which are fit for this purpose. And being raised from his bed of sickness, giue vnto him a right vse both of thy fatherly chastisements, and of thy gracious deliuerance; that by the one, he may be moued to feare thee, and to hate sinne, hauing tasted the bitter fruits of it; and by the other, to loue and glorifie thee, who hast heard his prayer in the day of his tribulation, and by them both, to serue thee with greater zeale, and with more earnest endeavour then euer heeretofore. Heare vs, deare Father, and answer vs graciously in these our suits, euen for Iesus Christ his sake; to whom with thee and the holy Spirit, wee acknowledge to be due, and desire to giue all glory, praise and thanksgiving, both now and for euermore. Amen.

But if the sicke party be a child, and so not capable of the outward and ordinary meanes of saluation, then pray for him after this manner:

More especially, we humbly intreat thee, to extend thy grace and fauour vnto this thy sick seruant; and seeing thou art not onely the God of the faithfull, but also of their seed, and louest and tendrest not onely the sheepe of Christ, but euen the tender lambes; wee earnestly beseech thee, make good thy gracious Covenant with this thy weake and sicke seruant. And because hee is not capable of outward meanes, supply graciously the defect of them by thine holy Spirit. Vnite him thereby vnto Iesus Christ, that becomming a liuely member of his body, he may be made partaker of his righteousness, death and obedience, for his iustification, and so hee may stand righteous in thy sight. Free him from the guilt and punishment of all his sinnes, and sanctifie him in his soule and body, that either he may bee fit to glorifie thee on earth, or to be glorified by thee in heauen. If it bee thy blessed will, restore him to his health and strength againe, that he may liue to be a comfort vnto his friends, and a profitable instrument to set forth thy glory in the Church and Common-wealth; but if thou art purposed to put an end end to his dayes, so fit and prepare him for thy Kingdome, as that he may liue with thee eternally in glory and immortality, through Iesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

If the party be irrecoverably sicke, or ready to depart out of this world, then we may, instead of praying for his restoring to health, make, in his behalfe, these following petitions:

ANd seeing (O Lord) thou hast smitten thy sicke seruant (as wee conceiue) irrecoverably, and doest now purpose to put an end vnto the dayes of his pilgrimage; we most humbly beseech thee, to prepare him for thine owne Kingdome. Weane his mind and affections from the world and earthly vanities, where he is but a stranger, and fix them wholly vpon spirituall and heauenly things, as it becommeth a Citizen of thy Kingdome. Let him earnestly desire to bee dissolued and to be with Christ, seeing that is best of all, and let him long after the vision and fruition of thee, in whose presence is fulnesse of ioy for euermore. To this end (O Lord) reueale thy selfe vnto him more cleerly then euer heretofore, that seeing thy beauty, goodnesse and excellency, his heart may be thorowly inflamed with thy loue. Giue him, euen whilest he liueth, an entrance into thy Kingdome, not onely by the assurance of faith and hope, but also by letting him haue a liuely taste of those heauenly ioyes, which thou hast prepared for him. Moderate his griefes and paines, that they may not hinder his soule from mounting aloft in diuine contemplations; and secretly whisper vnto his heart sweet comforts by thy Spirit, when as he is, through weaknesse, insensible of outward consolations. Inflame his heart with seruent loue towards thee and his brethren; yea euen his enemies for thy sake, that he may bee assured, that his finnes are forgien of thee; because thou giuest him grace to forgive all men. Strengthen him against the tentations of all his spirituall enemies, and manifest thy power in his weaknesse, by giuing vnto him a full and finall victory ouer them. Frustrate the malice of Satan, defeat his policies, and confound his power, that he may not preuaile against him in this last conflict. Arme him against the feare of thy wrath and seuerer iustice, by assuring him that Christ hath appeased the one, and satisfied the other. Comfort him against the feare of death, by perswading him, that Christs death hath swallowed it in victory, pulled out the sting thereof, and made it harmelesse; yea exceeding profitable, as seruing now for a passage to glory and happinesse; and by strengthening him, to apply vnto himselfe these consolations, by a liuely faith. Weane his heart from worldly cares, that they may bee no distractions to hinder him in his heauenly iourney; and let the assurance, and taste of immortall ioyes, take away all lothnesse to leaue earthly comforts. Set a guard of thy blessed Angels about him, and let them serue as thy Messengers and Ministers, to conuey his soule, as soone as it is separated from his body, into thy Kingdome, that it may bee there crowned with glory and immortality. Finally, wee beseech thee, giue vs all heere present, an holy vse of these examples of our mortality, that thereby our hearts being weaned from the world, wee may make it our chiefe businesse to prepare our selues against the day of death and Iudgement, that so wee may with ioy and comfort appeare before thee, when thou shalt bee pleased to call vs to giue vnto thee an account of our Stewardship. Heare vs, we beseech thee, in these our suits and supplications, for thy Sonne, and our Sauour, Iesus Christ his sake; to whom with thee, and thy holy Spirit, be ascribed all glory and praise, power and dominion, both now and for euermore. Amen.

A Prayer for Children.

Almighty God, and my most gracious Father in Iesus Christ, I humbly confesse; that I am a most wretched sinner, and altogether vnworthy to bee in the Couenant of grace and saluation: For I was not onely conceived and borne in sinne and corruption, whereby thy glorious Image was defaced in me; but I haue added thereunto many actuall sinnes, by breaking thy Commandements, in thought, word and deed; whereby I haue deserued thy iust anger in this life, and eternall death in the world to come. But seeing thou hast vouchsafed to receiue me into thy Couenant, of thy free mercy, giuing me the signe thereof, the Sacrament of Baptisme; and hast sent thy Sonne Iesus Christ to dye for, and by his death to redeeme the young as well as the old; I beseech thee, for his sake, to pardon all my sinnes, and to wash them all away in his most precious blood; to receiue me into thy loue and fauour, and to make mee thine owne child by adoption and grace. Giue me thine holy Spirit to sanctifie, rule and gouerne me; that according to my age and small ability, I may labour to serue thee. Make me daily to increase in grace, as I increase in yeeres; enlighten my mind with the knowledge of thee, and my Sauour Christ and his truth. Sow in me the seeds of faith, and let it thew it selfe assoone as I am capable thereof, in repentance and true obedience. Make mee louing, durifull and awfull to my Parents and Gouvernours, and let mee learne by obeying them in my tender youth, to obey thee in my riper age. Giue me grace to hearken to their good admonitions and instructions, and to profit and amend by their reproofes and chastisements. Make me humble, courteous and meeke, modest and sober, diligent to please in all good things, and vertuous in my whole course of life, that so I may increase in fauour with thee and all good men. And as I beg these benefits at thy hands, so I yeeld vnto thee all humble and hearty thanks and praise, for all benefits, both spirituall and temporall vouchsafed vnto me; and namely, for that it hath pleased thee to giue mee quiet rest and sleepe this night past, and hast safely preserved mee from all perils and dangers to which my fraile life is daily subiect. Continue (O Lord) thy loue and fauour towards mee for euer; and especially this day take mee into

A Prayer for Children.

961 into thy fatherly protection; preferue mee from sinne and perill, and grant, that being diligent and industrious in learning such good things as are taught me, I may increase in knowledge, and profit by instruction, in such vertues and good qualities, as are fit for me. O Lord, blesse and preferue my father and mother, my brethren and sisters, with all other my kindred and friends, together with thy whole Church: and grant that we may liue in thy fauour, dye in thy faith, and after death inherit the ioyes of thine euerlasting Kingdome, through Iesus Christ our Lord: to whom with thee and thy holy Spirit, be all honour and glory, both now, and for euermore.

Amen.

FIN IS.

Faults escaped in Printing.

Page 27. line 23. reade, be in the Church. p. 29. l. 12. r. internall booke. p. 30. l. a fin. 8. r. be bath made. p. 33. l. 5. r. The will of God. and l. 7. r. will and most free. p. 28. l. 11. r. and make men. p. 42. l. 12. r. Summe. p. 50. l. 17. r. strong corruptions. p. 52. l. 7. r. all of. p. 57. l. a fin. 11. read end, that we may. p. 62. l. 23. retorne to their. p. 66. l. 30. r. for the scanning. l. 36. r. yet it neuer. l. 39. r. bare act. 41. Theſe. p. 71. l. 3. r. strong wind l. 37. r. freed from. p. 73. l. 4. r. when ceaſing. and l. 38. r. upon vs. p. 74. l. 5. r. carry it quietly. p. 75. l. 35. r. in a ſorme. p. 85. in Margine l. 15. 16. r. boni viri. p. 95. l. 24. r. not deuided, and line 2. r. Chap. 2. Of piety, which is the ſumme of the firſt Table. S. Sect. 1. page 125. line 17. reade, domini on ouer all. p. 125. l. 17. r. one lawfully. and l. 32. r. not men. p. 128. l. 16. r. God and vs. p. 138. in Margine l. 2. r. The manner. p. 140. l. 13. r. dampe it. p. 142. l. 4. r. in our neighbours. p. 156. l. a fin. 9. r. For like offeſſation. p. 179. l. laſt. r. any interciſion. p. 181. l. 7. r. in the face. p. 183. l. a fin. 4. r. ſtopped from him. p. 188. l. 9. r. whole rayes. p. 189. l. 4. r. our ſelues. p. 197. l. 27. 28. r. tentatious. p. 200. l. a fin. 4. r. and ſtales of. p. 204. l. the laſt. r. good guidance. p. 267. l. a fin. 6. r. miſeſeeming. p. 286. l. 2. r. diſſention of. p. 314. l. 21. r. to be preferred. p. 350. l. 35. r. with naming. p. 374. l. 31. r. no more. p. 374. l. a fin. 4. r. yet by this. p. 383. l. 36. r. compounding of conuentions. p. 429. l. 2. r. could not make. p. 433. l. 25. r. furious anger. p. 438. l. 22. r. conſtancie. p. 454. l. 11. r. faith inablet vs. p. 468. l. 10. in Marg. r. leiuare & vigilare. p. 469. l. 21. in Marg. r. Ad ſuriam. p. 493. l. 1. r. ſealed vnto vs. p. 496. l. 14. r. our ſoules. p. 497. l. a fin. 5. r. initiation and. p. 498. l. 22. r. gratiſulneſſe. p. 499. l. 2. r. diſburſe? p. 506. l. 1. r. when as thereby. p. 544. l. 2. r. 10 purge out. p. 544. l. a fin. 4. r. at all times. p. 562. l. a fin. 8. r. alſo profitable. p. 608. l. a fin. 3. 2. r. that is contained. p. 614. l. 32. r. of examination. p. 616. l. 9. r. of examination. p. 642. l. a fin. 3. r. by diſgeſting. p. 644. l. 1. r. For as there. p. 7. 4. l. 7. r. often aſſes, and l. 13. r. acts of finnes, and l. 29. r. faith is offered of. p. 716. l. 31. r. cleaſing. p. 727. l. 40. r. owne proprieties. p. 729. l. 38. 39. &c. reade, vs for them, our for their, and we for they. p. 749. l. 27. r. will ſoone. p. 804. l. 10. r. comfortable uſe. p. 812. l. 4. r. our market. p. 822. l. 1. r. not worthy. p. 841. l. 9. r. their intruſion. p. 848. l. 1. r. moſt deteſted. p. 855. l. 4. r. ſervice, and line m. p. 878. l. 2. r. getting, and l. 25. r. is it not.

A TREATISE OF SECVRTIE:

Diuided into two Bookes.

THE FORMER, INTREATING OF CARNALL SECVRTIE AND HARDNES OF HEART;

Wherein the Nature, Originall and Causes of it are displayed and described, the Kinds of it distinguished, and the Differences betweene them expressed, the Signes whereby it may be knowne, shewed, with the Preseruatiues and Remedies, whereby wemay be kept from falling into this dangerous disease, or recovered if we be already fallen.

THE LATTER, INTREATING OF SPIRITVALL AND CHRISTIAN
SECVRTIE;

Wherein is shewed what it is, the Causes and Effects of it, and the Meanes whereby it may be obtayned and preserued.

Published as an Antidote against the dangerous Securitie of these last Times :

By IOHN DOWNAME, Batchelar in Diuinitie, and Preacher of Gods Word.

ZEPH. I. 12.

And it shall come to passe at that time, that I will search Ierusalem with Candles; and punish the men that are settled on their lees; that say in their heart, The Lord will not doe good, neither will doe euill.

L O N D O N
Printed by WILLIAM STANSBY.
1 6 2 2.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE,

Sir Henrie Mountagu,
KNIGHT;

Baron of KIMBOLTON, Viscount MANDEVILLE,
Lord President of his MAJESTIES most Honorable Privie Counsell;

And to the truely Noble and Vertuous Lady, the Lady
MARGARET his Wife.

J. D. wisheth all temporall happines, with the confluence of all spirituall Graces in this life, and eternall blessednesse in the life to come.

Right Honorable, and my most honored Lord, and Lady,

So long peace and prosperi-
tie, are the common causes of carnal securitie and hardnesse of heart, so these the vsuall forerunners of feare-
full punishments, seeing
in this desperate Disease (which we may fitly call, the stone in the heart)
more gentle Medicines will not effect the cure.
For when mens hearts are come to brassy or flin-ty hardnesse, nothing will melt them (without some extraordinary worke of the Spirit) but the fiery furnace of Affliction, nothing will bruise and breake them, but the heauy hammer of Gods dread.

THE EPISTLE

dreadfull iudgements. And this is manifest in the examples of all Ages, which are left vnto vs in the Scriptures, to giue vs warning. As of the old world, Sodome and her bordering Cities; and of the Israelites, Gods owne best beloued people, all which, as they were lulled asleepe in the Cradle of carnall Security, with the pleasing and bewitching tunes of peace and pleasure, so were they alwayes, when they least suspected it, surprised vpon the suddaine in their lethargie of sinne, with some remarkable plagues and punishments. And therefore considering with my selfe, that our long peace, plenty and prosperity hath infected the most that liue in our land, with deepe security and retchlesse carelesnesse, and caused them to dreame, that this Sun-shine will neuer set: I could not chuse but suspect, and daily expect the neer approaching of the other, and that the darke night of affliction and calamity will ere long surprize vs, vnlesse the loude cries of Gods Ministers doe speedily awaken vs out of our lethargie, and moue vs to meet the Lord and preuent his iudgements, by turning vnto him in vnfeigned repentance. In which regard, being appointed and called by God to bee one of his (though least worthy) watchmen, whose office requireth, that we should not only our selues keep the spirituall watch, but also, as much as in vs lyeth, awaken others: I thought it my duty, by giuing warning of these approaching dangers, to

rowze

DEDICATORIE.

rowze vp as many as I could out of this sleepe, or rather lethargie of securitie. And because my voyce were farre too weake (though I could, as the Lord requireth, lift it vp as a Trumpet) to be heard of all the people of this Land, I haue in-deuoured to conuay the sound thereof (as it were) by these paper Pipes, euen vnto the most remote places; and to those especially, where the liuely voyce of Gods faithfull watchmen, is rarely heard; either because the meanes of their maintenance by sacriledge and Church-robberie, or symoniacall fraud is taken away; or because dumbe, or idle and sleeping watchmen doe hold their places, without any care to performe their duty, as neither keeping the watch themselves, nor being either able or willing to keepe others waking. The which my labours I haue made bold to dedicate vnto your Honors: To you, my Lord, I confesse, not without some presumption, as not being hitherto known vnto you, yet herein not vnexcusable, in that it proceedeth from a desire to shew how much I honor you, for your profession and protection of Gods true and sincere Religion, in that Honourable place vnto which God hath called you; your loue to Learning, and fouour towards the Learned. But to you Noble Ladie, in whose notice and vnderfuered respect, I haue beene more happie, I haue deuoted this poore part and mite of my worthlesse VWorkes, that liuing in these Paper Monuments

THE EPISTLE, &c.

ments, as it were, in my longest lasting posterity, I may, euen after death hath imposed silence, still testifie vnto the world mine humble loue and vnfayned thankfulness, for your manifold and great fauours vouchsafed vnto me; and how much I honor you for those singular vertues and graces, wherewith God hath enriched you, especially your piety towards him and loue of his truth, much approoued, as by many other fruits, so especially by your loue to his Ministers and Ambassadors. The which were ample matter for a larger discourse, to incourage others of your ranke to imitation, did not your modesty and humility attending and adorning all the rest, admonish mee that such praises of you, vnto you, will bee thought vnneccessary, if not vnpleasing and distastfull. The Lord infinitely rich in all goodnesse and perfection, more and more multiply, all Christian Vertues and sauing Graces in you both; in the light and lustre whereof you shall be euer more truly honorable in the sight of God and all those that feare him, then in the highest dignities and noblest aduancements that the world can yeeld vnto you.

Your Honors most obliged in all Christian duetie and humble seruice,

JOHN DOWNAME.

Faults escaped in the Treatise of Securitie.

Pag 6. l. 3. r. his mercies. p. 64. l. 9. r. idle spectator. p. 65. l. 22. r. opinion of our. p. 66. l. 6. r. against them in. p. 68. l. 21. r. by inuring. p. 70. l. 28. r. let vs watch. p. 81. l. 13. r. in the vse. p. 89. l. 16. r. for a spurt. p. 91. l. 8. r. peace and securitie. And l. 20. r. God infinite.

THE CONTENTS OF THE FIRST BOOKE:

Jntreating of Carnall Securitie.

CHAP. I.

Of Securitie in generall, and more especially of Securitie in the state of Innocencie; and of that which is in vs after the fall.

- ¶ 1. Hat God the supreame Goodnesse, turneth all, euen euill it selfe into good. pag. 1.
¶ 2. That it is the nature of sinne and corruption, to turne all into euill. pag. 2.
¶ 3. That fleshly corruption abuseth prosperitie, to the begetting in vs of carnall Securitie. pag. 3.
¶ 4. The motiue inducing to the writing of this Treatise. pag. 3.
¶ 5. That it is necessary to distinguish securitie into seuerall kinds.
pag. 3.
¶ 6. Of Securitie in the state of Innocency. pag. 4.
¶ 7. Of Securitie in the state of corruption, and the originall of it.
pag. 4.

CHAP. II.

Of carnall Securitie, and what it is.

- ¶ 1. OF the generall parts of this Treatise. pag. 6.
¶ 2. Carnall Securitie defined. pag. 6.
¶ 3. Testimonies of Scripture, shewing what it is. pag. 7.
¶ 4. Examples of carnall Securitie. pag. 7.

CHAP. III.

Of the manifold causes of carnall Securitie.

- ¶ 1. THe first cause, ignorance of God, and his sauing Attributes. pag. 8.
¶ 2. The second cause, want of consideration of that we know. pag. 9.
¶ 3. The third cause, Selfe-confidence. pag. 9.
¶ 4. The fourth cause, abuse of worldly prosperitie. pag. 10.
¶ 5. The fift cause, is customable sinning. pag. 11.
A 6. The

The Contents.

- | | | |
|--------|---|----------|
| ¶. 6. | The sixt cause, is the present impunitie of sinners. | pag. 12. |
| ¶. 7. | The seuenth cause, presumption on Gods mercy. | pag. 13. |
| ¶. 8. | The eight cause, the neglect or contempt of the meanes of grace and saluation. | pag. 14. |
| ¶. 9. | The ninth cause, hearing the Word without Faith. | pag. 14. |
| ¶. 10. | The tenth cause, not applying the Word preached. | pag. 15. |
| ¶. 11. | The eleuenth cause, the mis applying of the promises of the Gospel. | pag. 16. |
| ¶. 12. | The twelfth cause, a flattering Ministerie. | pag. 16. |

CHAP. IIII.

Of the diuers kinds of carnall Securitie.

- | | | |
|-------|--|----------|
| ¶. 1. | O F naturall securitie, which is in all men. | pag. 18. |
| ¶. 2. | Of carnall securitie, which is affected and voluntarie. | pag. 19. |
| ¶. 3. | Of carnall securitie, which is in the vnregenerate. | pag. 19. |
| ¶. 4. | Of that which remaineth in the Regenerate, and how it groweth upon them. | pag. 20. |
| ¶. 5. | Of insensible and sensible securitie in the faithfull. | pag. 22. |
| ¶. 6. | Of the causes of carnall securitie in the faithfull; first, prosperitie, worldly or spirituall. | pag. 23. |
| ¶. 7. | The second cause is spirituall pride. | pag. 24. |

CHAP. V.

Of the differences betweene the carnall securitie of the Vnregenerate and Regenerate.

- | | | |
|-------|--|----------|
| ¶. 1. | T hat the carnall securitie of the Vnregenerate and Regenerate are in many things alike. | pag. 25. |
| ¶. 2. | Of the differences betweene the carnall securitie of the Vnregenerate and Regenerate, in the highest degree. | pag. 16. |
| ¶. 3. | Of the differences betweene the carnall securitie, which is ordinarily in the faithfull and wicked, and, first, in respect of their causes. | pag. 27. |
| ¶. 4. | The second difference in their effects. | pag. 28. |
| ¶. 5. | Another difference in their effects. | pag. 30. |
| ¶. 6. | That they differ in respect of the subiect. | pag. 30. |
| ¶. 7. | That they differ in their properties. | pag. 30. |
| ¶. 8. | That they differ in their time of continuance. | pag. 32. |

The Contents.

CHAP. VI.

Of the signes of carnall securitie arising from the causes of it.

- | | | |
|--------|---|----------|
| p. 1. | T hat the causes of carnall securitie doe argue and shew the effect. | pag. 32. |
| p. 2. | The first signe of carnall securitie, is ignorance of God and his Attributes. | pag. 33. |
| p. 3. | The second signe is, when wee are forgetfull of God & his attributes. | pag. 33. |
| p. 4. | The third signe, pride and selfe-confidence. | pag. 34. |
| p. 5. | The fourth signe, abuse of prosperitie. | pag. 34. |
| p. 6. | The fift signe, customeable sinning. | pag. 35. |
| p. 7. | The sixth signe, abuse of Gods patience and impenitency. | pag. 36. |
| p. 8. | The seuenth signe, presumption on Gods mercy. | pag. 36. |
| p. 9. | The eight signe, contempt of the meanes of saluation. | pag. 36. |
| p. 10. | The ninth signe, hearing the Word without Faith. | pag. 38. |
| p. 11. | The tenth signe, not applying of the Word. | pag. 39. |
| p. 12. | The eleuenth signe, mis-applying of the Promises. | pag. 39. |
| p. 13. | The twelfth signe, is to delight in a flattering Ministerie. | pag. 39. |

CHAP. VII.

Of eight other signes of carnall securitie, arising from the effects and other arguments.

- | | | |
|--------|--|----------|
| p. 1. | T he first signe is, not to profit by afflictions on others. | pag. 40. |
| p. 2. | Secondly, such as are inflicted on our selues. | pag. 41. |
| p. 3. | The second signe, is to haue no desire to keepe Gods Commandments. | pag. 43. |
| p. 4. | Secondly, when we yeeld obedience but by fits. | pag. 43. |
| p. 5. | Thirdly, when we doe not yeeld obedience to the whole Law, but some parts onely. | pag. 44. |
| p. 6. | Fourthly, when our obedience ariseth not from spirituall causes, nor is directed to right ends. | pag. 44. |
| p. 7. | The third signe, delaying of Repentance. | pag. 45. |
| p. 8. | The fourth signe, is Hypocrisie. | pag. 46. |
| p. 9. | The fift, is to feare Man more then God. | pag. 46. |
| p. 10. | The sixth signe, immoderate feare in time of danger. | pag. 47. |
| p. 11. | The seuenth signe, is to run from God, and to rest on inferiour meanes in danger and affliction. | pag. 47. |
| p. 12. | The eight signe, is contempt of Gods Ministers. | pag. 48. |

The Contents.

CHAP. VIII.

Of such reasons as may mouue vs to abhor carnall securitie,
and to vse all meanes either to preuent it, or to bee freed from it.

- ¶ 1. That it is necessarie to haue our hearts wrought vnto the hatred of this Vice. pag. 49.
- ¶ 2. That Christ hath giuen vs speciall warning to flee securitie. pag. 50.
- ¶ 3. That the examples of securitie, fearefully punished in others, ought to be warnings vnto vs. pag. 51.
- ¶ 4. That Christs holy Apostles, haue giuen vs many warnings, to take heed of it. pag. 52.
- ¶ 5. That carnall securitie is a most dangerous sicknesse of the soule. pag. 52.
- ¶ 6. That it is a disease hardly cured. pag. 53.
- ¶ 7. That it is the cause of all sinne. pag. 54.
- ¶ 8. That it emptieth the heart of all grace, and prepareth and maketh it fit to receiue Satan and all his tentations. pag. 54.

CHAP. IX.

Whercin is shewed, that carnall securitie is the cause of many tearefull punishments.

- ¶ 1. That carnall securitie deprineth vs of Gods fauour and protection, and dispoyleth vs of spirituall grace. pag. 56.
- ¶ 2. Of some speciall graces whereof it deprineth vs. pag. 57.
- ¶ 3. That Gods Spirit will not dwell in a secure heart. pag. 57.
- ¶ 4. That carnall securitie deprineth vs of eternall happinesse. pag. 58.
- ¶ 5. That it exposeth vs to positive euills, and, first, to all dangers. pag. 58.
- ¶ 6. That it exposeth vs to Gods fearefull Iudgements. pag. 59.
- ¶ 7. The former point illustrated by Examples. pag. 60.
- ¶ 8. That it plungeth men into euerlasting condemnation. pag. 60.
- ¶ 9. That carnall securitie is a fearefull punishment of other sinnes. pag. 61.

CHAP. X.

Of the meanes whereby we may be preferued from carnall securitie. As first, auoyding and taking away
the causes of it.

- ¶ 1. The first remedie is to auoid ignorance, and to labour after knowledge. pag. 63.
- 2. The

The Contents.

- ¶ 2. The second remedie, is to consider and meditate often on Gods Attributes. pag. 63.
 ¶ 3. The third meanes is, to cast off all selfe-confidence. pag. 65.
 ¶ 4. That it is a notable meanes to weaken selfe-confidence, if we consider the strength of our spirituall enemies. pag. 65.
 ¶ 5. The third remedie, is to use well our prosperitie. pag. 67.
 ¶ 6. The fift remedie, is to shun customable sinning. pag. 68.
 ¶ 7. The sixt remedie, is to make precious account of Gods grace and forbearance. pag. 68.
 ¶ 8. The seuenth remedie, is to shun presumption. pag. 69.
 ¶ 9. The eighth remedie, is to use carefully the meanes of salvation. pag. 69.
 ¶ 10. The ninth remedie is, to heare the Word with Faith. pag. 71.
 ¶ 11. The tenth remedie is, to apply the Word unto our selues. pag. 71.
 ¶ 12. The eleuenth remedie is, not to misapply the promises. pag. 71.

CHAP. XI.

Wherein are set downe diuers other remedies, whereby we may be preferued from carnall securitie.

- ¶ 1. THe first remedie is, to withstand securitie in the first degrees of it.* pag. 72.
 ¶ 2. The second remedie is, to nourish in our hearts the true feare of God. pag. 74.
 ¶ 3. The third remedie is, to make great account of a soft and relenting heart. pag. 75.
 ¶ 4. The fourth remedie is, examination of our estate. pag. 76.
 ¶ 5. The fift remedie is, to esteeme much of priuate admonitions. pag. 77.
 ¶ 6. The sixt remedie is, to visit those who are in affliction. pag. 79.
 ¶ 7. The seuenth remedie is, to meditate on the tentations and sufferings of Christ. pag. 80.
 ¶ 8. The eighth remedie is, to consider that securitie in this life is vnreasonable. pag. 81.
 ¶ 9. The ninth remedie is, to meditate often on the last iudgement. pag. 82.
 ¶ 10. The last remedie is, frequent and feruent prayer for Gods blessing upon all the former meanes. pag. 83.

THE CONTENTS OF THE.
SECOND BOOKE:

Intreating of Spirituall and Christian Securitie.

CHAP. I.

Wherein spirituall securitie is defined, and the definition explained.

- Q. 1. That all securitie is not to be condemned, but that it is in some kind commendable; and to be desired. pag. 85.
Q. 2. The description of spirituall Securitie. pag. 86.
Q. 3. That God is the authour of spirituall Securitie. pag. 87.
Q. 4. That the Regenerate onely are the subject of spirituall Securitie. pag. 88.
Q. 5. The grounds of spirituall Securitie, on which it resteth. pag. 88.
Q. 6. Of the continuance and perpetuities of spirituall Securitie. pag. 89.
-

CHAP. II.

Of the Causes and Effects of spirituall Securitie.

- Q. 1. The causes of spirituall Securitie respecting God. pag. 90.
Q. 2. The causes of spirituall Securitie, respecting God. pag. 91.
Q. 3. Of the particular causes of spirituall Securitie, first, saving knowledge. pag. 92.
Q. 4. The second cause, a lively Faith in Christ. pag. 93.
Q. 5. The third cause, Charitie. pag. 93.
Q. 6. The fourth cause, the true feare of God. pag. 94.
Q. 7. The last cause, is new obedience. pag. 94.
Q. 8. Of the effects of spirituall Securitie. pag. 95.
-

CHAP.

The Contents.

CHAP. III.

Of the meanes of spirituall securitie, whereby it may be obtained or preferued and increased.

- ¶ 1. The first meanes is, highly to esteeme it and to seeke it from God and in him. pag. 96.
- ¶ 2. The second meanes is, to labour to be in the number of Christs Disciples and Sheepe of his floc ke. pag. 97.
- ¶ 3. The third meanes is, that we labour to be in the covenant of Grace. pag. 98.
- ¶ 4. The fourth meanes is, to labour to haue the causes of it in vs. As, first, the Spirit of adoption, and the chayne of sauing Graces. pag. 99.
- ¶ 5. The fift meanes is, to labour to be indued with those speciall sauing Graces, which are the causes of it, first, knowledge and remembrance of God and his Attributes. Secondly, Faith: Thirdly, Affiance: fourthly, loue of God: fiftly, the feare of God: sixthly, Christian righteousnesse: seuenthly, new obedience. pag. 100.
- ¶ 6. The sixt meanes, contempt of the World. pag. 101.
- ¶ 7. The seuenth meanes, to keepe our hearts vpright and our consciences pure. pag. 102.
- ¶ 8. The last meanes is, Christian watchfulnesse, and often examination of our estates. pag. 103.

FINIS.

Generall, what it is, lib. 1. chap. 1. §. 6.

Innocency, which was holy and good, chap. 1. §. 6.

1. What it is, and this is illustrated by Testimonies, Examples. } chap. 2.

2. The causes of it, which are twelve in number. chap. 3.

1. Natural, which are either that in the state of lib. 1.

degrees of it, in which respect it is either naturall.

c. 4. §. 1.

affected
and volunta-
rie. §. 2.

3. The diuers kinds of it distinguished by the diuers subjects in which respect it is considered, as it is either in the Vnregenerate. cap. 4. §. 3.

kinds, which are either insensible and not perceined sensible

and discon-
red.

§. 5.

Regenerate where
of the
c. 4.

causes of it, which are two prosperitie. §. 6.

pride. §. 7.

Of corruption which is carnall, in handling whereof is shewed

In speciall and of the seuerall kinds which are

4. how we may know one kind from another, where is shewed that they differ in their Causes and effects. chap. 5. §. 1. and 6.

Subjects and properties. chap. 1. §. 6. 7.

5. The signes of it, which arise from their seuerall

Causes. chap. 6.

Effects and other arguments. chap. 7.

6. The meanes to be freed from it, which are

1. Reasons, to make vs abhor it. chap. 8. 9.

2. Remedies, which are either by taking away the causes of it. chap. 10.
or by using other helps which are ten in number. chap. 11.

Supernaturall, where is shewed lib. 2.

1. What it is. chap. 1.
2. The causes and effects of it. chap. 2.
3. The meanes to obtaine and preserue it, which are eight. chap. 3.

OF CARNALL SECVRITIE.

THE FIRST BOOKE.

CHAP. I.

The Preface. Of Securitie in generall: and more specially of securitie in the state of Innocency; and of that which is in vs after the Fall.

S it is the nature and propertie of the supreme Goodnesse, to make all things like vnto it selfe, and euen out of euill to produce that which is good: so is it the nature of sinne and corruption, so to poyson and taint whatsoeuer it toucheth, that though it bee of an indifferent nature, yea originally good, it maketh it like it selfe euill and sinfull. Of the former wee haue God himselfe, the best example; who being infinite in wisdom, power and goodnesse, doth not onely effect his good ends by good meanes and instruments; but is able to bring light out of darknesse, good out of euill, and to make the worst instruments fit tooles for the perfecting and polishing his best works. And thus he ordinarily vseth the euill of punishment, as crosses, calamities and afflictions of all kinds corporall and spirituall, not onely for the iust punishment of the wicked, but for the triall of his owne Seruants, the purging and purifying of them from their corruptions, the exercise, and by exercise the manifesting and increasing of their spirituall graces, and the furthering and assuring of their saluation. Thus he vseth the wicked for the chastizement of his Children, and the Deuill himselfe and his malicious tentations, for the strengthening of them in Faith, Loue, Patience,

B

¶. I.
That God the supreme goodnesse turneth
all, euen euill
it selfe into good.

Rom. 8.28.

2. Cor. 4.17.

Gen. 45. 5, 7, 8.

2. Sam. 12. 11.

Ch. 16. 10.

Act. 2. 23. Ch. 3. 28.

2. Cor. 12. 7.

Matt. 26. 33, 34.

¶ 2.

That it is the nature of sinne and corruption to turne all into euill.

Ezech. 33. 10, 11.

Esa. 22. 12, 13.

1. Cor. 15. 32.

Christian Warfare,
2. Part.

tience, and all other sauing graces, after they haue had experience of Gods power and goodnesse, assisting and giuing them victorie in these spirituall conflicts. Yea, this chiefe Goodnesse can make euen sinne it selfe in others, to serue as a meanes to execute his wise and iust Counsailes, as the malicious practises of Iosephs brethren, the meanes of his aduancement, and their owne preservation: the sinne of Abolon, Achitophel and Shemei, for his rod to chastize Dauid, and to humble him for his grieuous falls; the sinne of Iudas, the Scribes, Pharises and Deuill himselfe, to set forward the worke of our Redemption by the death of our Sauour. Yea, he can make of sinne in the same partie, an Antidote against sinne, and, as it were, smother it in its owne smoke, and by letting his Seruants slip into lesser sinnes, hee can preserve them from falling, or being fallen, can pull them out of those which are greater. As when by the pricke of other sinnes, he letteth out the wind of pride, which is most hatefull vnto him, and pernicious vnto our selues; and when by leauing vs, he suffereth vs to slip into sinne to make vs cast away selfe-confidence, that wee may more firmly cleaue vnto him, who alone is able to support vs by a liuely Faith.

Of the other wee haue lamentable experience, not onely in Satan, but principally in our owne sinfull corruptions, which make vs apt and readie to abuse all things vnto sinne, and out of the best premises to inferre the worst conclusions. And thus our wicked flesh abuseth Gods sauing attributes vnto sinne, as his infinite mercy which should cause vs to feare him, to moue vs thereby to gee on in our wicked courses, more sinning that grace may more abound. His Patience and long suffering, which should leade vs to repentance, to worke in vs hardnesse of heart, and by deferring our repentance to treasure vp wrath against the day of wrath. His Iustice and righteous Iudgements, which should aboue all things make vs afraid to displease him, because he is a consuming fire, and it is a fearefull thing to fall into the hands of the liuing God, the flesh abuseth to make men to despaire of all grace or future good, and therefore to lay hold of the present delights of sinne, saying with the Epicures, Let vs eate and drinke, for to morrow wee shall die. But especially and most ordinarily our sinfull corruption abuseth Gods temporall benefits vnto euill, which being originally good, are vnto vs in respect of their vse of an indifferent nature; good to those who vse them well; and euill vnto those that abuse them vnto sinne. And of this kind is wordly prosperitie, with all earthly benefits which doe accompany it, as health, wealth, peace, plentie, immunitie from dangers, and such like; the which our sinfull flesh abuseth, for the robbing of our soules of all grace, and the replenishing of them with all vice and sinne, as forgetfulnesse of God, pride, prophanesne, neglect of Religion, and contempt of Gods Ordinances, tyrannie, oppression, crueltie, with innumerable others of this hellish broode, as elswhere I haue more fully shewed.

But especially among and aboue the rest, doth our fleshly corruption tion abuse this worldly prosperitie, as a meanes to begēt in vs carnall securitie, which is the Mother and Nurse of all other wickednesse; whereby mens hearts being emptied of all feare of God, which is the head and beginning of true wisdom, are made capable and fit to receiue all manner of wickednesse, and to run in a head-long course into all kinds of horrible and hellish impieties. Of which we haue too lamentable experience in these our dayes; wherein few make conscience of any sinne, not punishable by humane Lawes, which offereth vnto them either pleasure or profit; as neglect of Religion, and duties of Gods Seruice, bitter Cursing, blasphemous Swearing, profanation of Gods Sabbaths, Crueltie, Oppression, Briberie, Extortion, Whoredome, Drunkennesse, Fraude, Vsurie, deceitfull Dealing, and matchlesse Pride, shewed especially in shamelesse and monstrous fashions of Apparell, whereby Women are transformed into Men, and Men into Women. And what is the cause of all these mischiefs, but carnall securitie? whereby Men blesse themselves in their wicked courses, and put farre from them the Iudgements of God and the euill Day, and together with them their Repentance and amendment of life? And from whence doth this securitie arise and spring, but from our abundance of Gods temporall Blessings, long Prosperitie, Peace and Plentie, abused by our carnall corruption, which maketh Men to forget God, because they find no need of him; to neglect and contemne his fearefull Iudgements, because they haue not felt the smart of them; and because they haue long escaped punishment in their euill courses, they continue still securely in them, promising impunitie vnto themselves, vpon their former experience, for the time to come, and also the continuance of all their worldly prosperitie, concluding, that to morrow will be like this day, and much more abundant, as the Prophet speaketh.

And therefore seeing this carnall securitie is a capitall sinne, and most odious in Gods sight; and a mother Vice which in her fruitfull wombe breedeth and nourisheth all other kinds of wickednesse; and seeing it is the Sinne of the Times and of the Countrie, which hath wholly corrupted and poysoned the greatest number of our Nation, and somewhat tainted the very best; I thought it a fit Subiect to write vpon (For a word spoken in due season how good is it?) and to encounter this mother Sinne with the Sword of the Spirit, and to strike at this Roote of all Vice with the Axe of Gods Word; knowing, that if it be vanquished, all other Vices that depend vpon it will easily bee put to flight; if it bee mortified and killed, the cursed offspring of this hellish Monster, will either bee abortiues in her dead wombe, or die for want of nourishment, if alreadie they bee bred and borne; when as her poysonous breasts can yeeld vnto them no further foode.

But that we may not mistake our Friends for our Enemies, and because they haue some resemblance of the same names and colours, fight against both alike; and so as much endamage our selues by ¶ 3.

That fleshly corruption abuseth prosperitie, to the beggetting in vs carnall securitie.
Psal. 111. 10.
Pro. 1. 7.

Esai. 56. 12.

¶ 4.
The motive which induced me to the writing of this Treatise.

Pro. 15. 23.

¶ 5.
That it is necessary to distinguish securitie into its seuerall kinds.

2. King 10.

wounding those that are of our owne partie, as get aduantage by subduing those that are against vs : It shall not bee amisse in the first place to marshall them in their-seuerall rankes, and by due distinctions to separate the one from the other, as Iehu the Priests of the Lord from the Priests of Baal; that so wee may with more courage and confidence assault our Enemies, and afterwards comfort and cherish our Friends, which will, if they bee rightly and kindly vsed, bee seruiceable vnto vs, and after victorie adde vnto our triumph much ioy and contentment.

¶ 6.
Of securitie
in the state of Innocency.
Aquin. 2. 2.
quest. 1129. art. 7.
in Etymolog.

Securitie, generally taken, is (as Aquinas defineth it) a perfect tranquillitie and freedome of the mind from feare. In which sense it is opposed to feare as the priuation thereof. And from hence it hath it Etymologic and Notation, as Isidore noteth; Securus quasi sine cura; a Man is said to be secure, who is without care or feare. More specially securitie is taken either for that which is naturall, or that which is supernaturall, diuine and holy. Naturall securitie is that which proceedeth from naturall causes, as safetie from all dangers, and assurance of the constant fruition of all the good things which we desire. The which is to be considered. as it was originally in vs by creation, in the state of innocency and perfection, or as it is now in vs in the state of corruption after the fall. Securitie in the state of innocency, was a perfect tranquillitie of the mind without the encounters of any feares, which was wrought in our first Parents by the Lord our Creator, and was a fruit of their full assurance of Gods protection and prouidence continually watching ouer them, whereby they were assured of freedome from all euill, and of the fruition of all good; and of that inward peace of conscience with God, and that outward peace which they had with all the visible Creatures, none of which could hurt them, all of which were vsfull and seruiceable vnto them. The which securitie was lost by the fall of our first Parents, whereby they became guiltie of sinne, obnoxious to Gods wrath, and as out-lawes, cast out from vnder the priuiledge and safe-guard of his protection, which was accompanied with horror and feare, proceeding from a dreadfull expectation of deserued punishment. And this feare was continually increased by the consideration of Gods exact iustice, which will not let sinne escape vnpunished, from our enmitie with God, appearing in the opposition of his goodnesse and puritie, against our wickednesse and corruption; and that inward warre of the conscience, against our passions and carnall concupiscence, and that outward warre betweene vs and all the Creatures. For no sooner became we rebels against our Lord and Creator, and broke the peace betweene vs and him, but they also rebelled against vs, and breaking the peace betweene vs, became our professed Enemies, and readie instruments of executing Gods wrath against vs for our sinnes.

¶ 7.
Of securitie in
the state of Corruption,
and the origi-
nall of it.

Now because being in this case, we could not doe chearfull seruice, vnto Satan, who when wee were cast from vnder Gods protection had taken vs captiue to doe his will, but out of feare and discontent were

were likely to endeaour the bettering of our estate, and to seeke some meanes to free our selues from this dreadfull miserie; therefore this subtle Enemy of our saluation, laboured to make vp this breach, whereby we did lye open to all dangers, and in stead of the firme wall of Gods protection, which like an impregnable Bulwarke secured vs from all euill, hee built about vs a Wall of rubbish and vntempered Morter, or rather of straw and seare wood, which in stead of preserving vs from outward perils, was readie to betray vs to all assaults of Enemies, to be set on fire with Gods wrath and the wild fire of Hell, the tentations of the Deuill, and so to become, in stead of a Wall of defence, fuell for our execution, and meanes of our greater torment. To all which euills wee were more desperately exposed, because by this seeming shelter, and ayerie wall of defence, we were made wholly negligent, as though there were no euill approaching, nor any Enemy able to disturbe our peace. The which weake Fort and vaine Defence, was wholly framed of Satans errors and lies, whereby hee made vs either to apprehend, by a false conceit things that were not, or to misse-apply vnto our selues things that are, as though they were neare and on our side, when as they are farre off from our defence, and rather against, then for vs, so long as we are in the state of impenitencie and vnbeliefe. In the former respect he maketh vs secure by telling vs of our naturall excellencies, our good meanings and intentions, our iustice and loue to God and Men, whereby we fulfill the Law, and merit from God by our good liues his protection and defence; when as there is nothing in vs but ignorance and vnbeliefe, worldlinesse and prophanenesse, sinne and corruption, which so defileth euen those actions which wee thinke most glorious, that they are abominable in Gods sight. And also by telling vs that we haue peace with God, and are highly in his fauour; and peace with all the Creatures, so as nothing will doe vs any harme; when as all things in Heauen and Earth are at enmitie with vs, and (when God doth but giue the signe of battaile) will set vpon vs with all their furie. In the other respect, hee secureth vs, by setting before vs the infinite mercies of God, inferring thereupon, that we may safely goe on in our sinnes, because God is so mercifull, that few or none shall bee condemned, and that though wee deferre our repentance to the last houre, yet euen then wee shall haue pardon, if we haue but leisure to say, Lord haue mercy vpon me; the all-sufficient merits of Christ which are a full price of redemption for the whole World; the gracious and indefinite Promises of the Gospel made vnto all Men without exception; the impunitie of sinners, and namely of themselues, hauing long continued in their sinfull courses; the prosperitie of the wicked who glut themselues with the pleasures of sinne, the afflictions of the faithfull who are precise and strict in all their ways, and diuers other motiues, of which wee shall speake more fully hereafter: from all which hee concludeth, that wee may lay aside all feare, and take libertie to satisfie our carnall lusts, because there is no danger at all, of either present or future punishment.

And thus in stead of that securitie, which we had in our creation, and in the state of innocencie, accompanying the assurance of Gods loue and protection, whereby wee should haue beene made more chearefull and couragious in the duties of Holinesse and Righteousnesse, because wee serued such a gracious and powerfull Lord, as was both able and willing to protect vs from all perils, and to safe-guard vs from all enemies; Satan laboureth to worke in vs this carnall securitie, whereby wee are encouraged to performe seruice vnto himselfe with all confidence and chearefulnesse; perswading vs that we are safe from all danger, though we be daily obnoxious to Gods wrath, liable to his fearefull Iudgements, and in the very jaws of Death and Hell. With which securitie, hee bringeth more to destruction then with all his terrors and feares, whereby hee indeauoureth to plunge men into desperation, yea in truth, then with all other tentations, though neuer so vgly and terrible in their outward appearance. In which regard it behoueth all Christians as they loue their soules, and would either escape Death and Hell, or attaine vnto saluation and euerlasting happinessse, that they keepe a narrow watch ouer themselues; and that being wounded by this viperous Serpent with the sting of sinne, they doe not thereupon fall into this pleasing slumber, or rather dead sleepe of carnall securitie, the which bringeth all, ouer-taken with it, into destruction and condemnation of Body and Soule.

CHAP. II.

Of carnall securitie, and what it is.

§. I.
Of the general
Part of this Freelife.

O which purpose let vs now speake more specially of it. And for our more orderly proceeding, I will first shew what it is, that so knowing, wee may the better auoid it. Secondly, the causes of it and meanes, which Satan and our owne corruption vse to worke it in vs. Thirdly, the diuers sorts and kinds of this Vice. Fourthly, how we may know the one from the other. Fifthly, the signes whereby we may discern, whether and how farre forth we are tainted and infected with this deadly poyson: and lastly, the meanes whereby we may either be preserued from falling into it, or recouered, if we be already ouer-taken.

§. 2
Of the speciall Part of this Freelife.

Concerning the first, wee will make it plaine, not only by a Definition or Description, but also by Testimonies and Examples of it recorded in the holy Scriptures. It may best bee defined, if in all things we oppose it to that Vertue whereof it is the priuation, namely the true feare of God, after this manner. Carnall securitie is a Vice or vicious habit, whereby forgetting or neglecting both the iudgement and power of God in punishing sinne, and also his infinite Loue and Mercy, his Merits and Iudgements, his Promises

goe on in sinne without repentance, promising vnto our selues immunitie from all punishment, and not onely for the present the constant fruition of our carnall delights, but also euerlasting saluation in the World to come. Vnto this description, for the better clearing of the point in hand, we may adde that of Bernards, describing an hard or secure heart: It is that (saith he) which is not rent with compunction, nor softened with pietie, nor moued with prayers, nor yeeldeth to threatnings, and is hardened with stripes. It is vngratefull for benefits, vnfaithfull for counsailes, fierce in respect of iudgements, shamelesse in regard of things filthy and dishonest, vndaunted in dangers, inhumane in humane actions, rash in diuine, forgetfull of things past, neglectfull of things present, improuident for things to come. It is that which remembreth nothing past but injuries, loseth the benefitt of all things present, and fore-casteth and prouideth for nothing to come but reuenge. And that I may in a word comprehend the euills of this horrible Vice; it is that which neither feareth God nor respecteth Man. So that if we would haue a brieue definition of this Securitie, it is nothing else but the absence and priuation of the feare of God; for as securitie generally considered, is the freedome of the mind from all feare; so this speciall kind of it carnall securitie, is that horrible Vice which emptieth the heart wholly of the true feare of God. And thus the wise Man opposeth them the one against the other. Happy is the man (saith he) that feareth alwayes, but he that hardneth his heart shall fall into mischief.

Bernard de Con-
sol. ad Eluegium
lib. 1.

Pro. 28. 14.

And this is that securitie of which Dauid speaketh: The transgression of the wicked saith within my heart, that there is no feare of God before his eyes: For he flattereth himselfe in his owne eyes, untill his iniquitie be found out to be hatefull. And describing the prosperous estate of the wicked, he saith, That continuing in their corruption, and being couered with violence, as with a garment; They speake loftily, and set their mouthes against the Heauens; saying, How doth God know? and is there knowledge in the most High? And Iob discoursing of the same subiect, namely, wicked men flourishing in worldly prosperitie, saith, that their houses are safe from feare, neither is the rod of God upon them. They take the Timbrel and Harpe, and reioyce in the sound of the Organs; they spend their dayes in wealth, and in a moment goe downe to the graue. Therefore they say vnto God, depart from vs, for we desire not the knowledge of thy wayes. What is the Almighty, that wee should serue him? and what profit should we haue if we pray vnto him?

§. 3.
Testimonies of Scripture, shewing what
it is.

Psal. 36. 1, 2.

Psal. 73. 8, 9, 11.

Iob 21. 9.

The examples of this Vice, recorded in the holy Scriptures, are very many. It was one of the first sinnes which tainted our first Parents; who vpon the Deuils word promised vnto themselves, in the transgression of Gods Commandement, not onely impunity for their sinne, but also a great addition to their present happinesse. The old World was drowned in deepe securitie, before it was drowned with the generall Deluge. For though Nath. the Deceiuer of Righ.

§. 4.
Examples of carnall secu-
ritie.